THE
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED DAILY BY
[illegible]
NEW-ORLEANS.
Thursday, June 16, 1831.

The mail, via Mobile, brought us the New York papers of the 1st. instant, [illegible] and Baltimore of the 2d, Washington of the 3d, and Charleston of the 7th. Save the continuation of extracts, from the late European papers, of a miscellaneous nature, they contain nothing very interesting.

Rumours.—Letters from Washington say that the secretaryship of war has been offered to Col. Drayton; this was believed to be certain.

We learn from the National Intelligencer though presented in a doubtful form, that the portefeuille of the war Department has really been offered, to Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky.

According to the National Journal Mr. Cass, of Michigan should have also been offered to fill the above vacancy.

A paragraph of the Doylestown Democrat, published at Mr. Ingham's place of residence, mentions the offer of the Russian mission, made to that gentleman. He has refused the acceptance.

The Pensylvania Inquirer states positively that the above appointment has been received by Mr. Buchanan. These reports we give with due restrictions: fama est.

We announce with pleasure Gen. Bernard's return by the packet ship Erie, from Havre. We hope to hear soon that he has resumed the duties, which he once so eminently fulfilled in our country.

The London Atlas passes a very handsome, and, at the same time, merited eulogy on the late production: A year in Spain, by a young American (Alexander Slidell U. S. N.) From the partial extracts which we have seen in the northern papers, this work must be one of the best of the kind, which for a long period has fallen under our notice and no doubt justifies the praises of the Atlas. We augur well from such an auspicious beginning: Sicitur ad astra.

TRIBUTE TO POLAND.—The following resolution passed the board of Aldermen, in New-York.

"Whereas the brave defence of their rights, lately exhibited by the citizens of Warsaw and the Polish army, has created in every free and liberal mind, sentiments of the warmest admiration: Be it resolved, that the congratulations of this city be presented to the city of Warsaw and the heroic army which has defended it—assuring them that our wishes for their final success are most warm and sincere; that we have not forgotten that the noble Pulaski lost his life for us in our struggle for liberty, and that the illustrious Kosciusko found among us a temporary asylum from the oppression of Poland.

The surname of Sabalkanski (who passed the Balkan,) was, as every one knows, granted to Field Marshal Diebitsch after the Turkish campaign. It is now, however, said that the Grand Duke Constantine calls him by no other name than Durakoad Wislanski, which, literally translated, means "Fool before the Vistula."

The Grand Duke is always boasting of the success of the Poles. "It is I," he often says, "who formed these brave fellows. I made them what they are."

A Homeless Man.—One Jacob O. Meyers was lately committed for trial at Utica, N. Y. for offering at a bank, in that town, a false note of $1000, with five endorsements. He stated as the reason of his fraudulent presentation, that he did it in the expectancy of detection: that he had lost all his property, and was desirous by some movement hostile to the laws of his country, to secure a steady home in the state prison. His unnatural wish is now gratified, and he is "boarded lodged and done for" at the public expense and is likely to be subject to the patronage of the people in that way for half a dozen years to come. It is thought before his prison noviciate expires, he will prefer liberty under any circumstances, to the loss of care which may be found in incarceration.—Philad. Gaz.

SELECTIONS.

[From the London Times.]

The report of an offer of the Belgic Crown to Prince Leopold is again revived, and seems to have acquired some title to belief. We are now told that a deputation of five persons has set out from Brussels for London, to sound the disposition of his Royal Highness on the subject. No information is given as to the authority from which the deputies derive their commission, or the force which they can give to their recommendation. When the former deputation proceeded to Paris to offer their crown, to the young Duke de Nemours, they had the decree of the National Congress, containing his nomination, in their pocket. They had nothing to do, therefore, but to pop the question to the young Prince—"Will you be a king or not?" The royal minor, of course, had to ask his father's consent and his father refused, so that the choux de Bruxelles, as the Parisians called him, could not be transplanted from the Orleans garden to Belgium. But in the present case Congress has given no such authority, and after the five Commissioners have examined the constitutional principles of the British Prince, wooed him with fair promises of loyalty and fidelity, and obtained his consent to the political match the capricious Congress may refuse it sanction, and put his Royal Highness to the blush for being so easily won. Before, therefore, he discloses his mind, he ought to demand their credentials.

The deputation has arrived. Their authority is a private but a sure one, and they are enabled to convince Prince Leopold that three-fourths of the members of Congress will hail his acceptance of the Crown of Belgium with delight. It was not necessary, however, for the deputation to advertise all this in the newspapers. If Prince Leopold be not too coy, the Belgian squabble is at an end. He is invited by the Congress, by the wealthy and respectable classes of Belgians, in every part of their territory—by the heads of the Catholic party, as well as the Protestants; and, if he should accept the invitation, he will have the approbation and support of the British and French Cabinets, because the Belgians are willing, as a condition of his accepting the crown, to relinquish the absurd pretensions as to territory, which have offended their real friends in France and in this country.

Duke de Bordeaux.—We learn that the Duc de Bordeaux has been most hospitably and nobly received in all the principal mansions of Edinburgh, where he has become the playmate of most of the juvenile branches of the Scottish nobility. Among others, the Dukes of Hamilton and Buccleugh, the Earl of Wemyss, and Lord Elcho, have distinguished this ill-fated scion of royalty with all the generous deference due to his misfortunes. The Royal Highness the Duchess de Berri is at present at Bath, but it is expected she will visit London in the course of this month.

One of the Paris papers, edited by a well-known gossiping [illegible] upon the French Government [illegible] the further progress of the Austrians in Italy, on the [illegible] ground that they have already stopped the supply of Bologna sausages by entering that town; and, if not stopped, will certainly destroy all the Parmesan cheese now in store!"

A French traveller remarks that the inhabitants of the United States are the most cleanly people in the world, and adds, as a proof of the assertion, "their very capital is named La Ville Blanchissante" (i. e. the Washing-town.)

The Ball at the Academie Royale de Musique, last night, was attended by the King, Queen, Madame Adelaide, and the elder branches of the family. It was crowded to excess, and the decorations and illumination were on the usual extensive scale, so often described. Its proceeds were destined to the relief of distress. The Prince de Joinville, third son of the King, takes his departure in a few days, accompanied by M. Lavaud, Capitaine de Vaisseau, to whom the [illegible] is confided; for the Dido, [illegible] guns, and 450 men, [illegible] cruize, to initiate the [illegible] mysteries of seamanship.

ENGLAND.

[illegible] new members of Parliament [illegible] and [illegible] subject, [illegible] what end [illegible] the anti-reform [illegible] the London Morning Chronicle mentions that a meeting of several of the leading boroughmongers had been held to agree on supplies for the contest, and that a stock purse of a hundred thousand pounds was subscribed without delay, some individuals subscribing as high as twenty thousand pounds.

The London Morning Herald says that the boroughmongers had already (on the 26th) subscribed no less a sum than one million and a half sterling [illegible] purpose of influencing the elections, and that a considerable portion of the sum was to be applied in returning Mr. Ward for the city. The Duke of Northumberland is said to have subscribed the enormous sum of £250,000, and Sir Robert Peel £50,000! The same paper, the Morning Herald, mentions it as among the rumors of the day, that in the event of the boroughmongers succeeding, by bribery and threats, to return a parliament unfriendly to reform, the King will immediately dissolve it, and call a new one, witholding the writs from the rotten broughs. This last measure is probably not within the compass of the constitutional power of the Crown. The London Courier, however, broadly intimates that this course will be pursued in the event of a defeat, a result which, at the same time, it considers next to impossible. The following is the language of that journal:

"Can the anti-reform faction seriously think for a moment that even if they were to be so far successful, with their bribes and with their borough purchases, as again to throw out the bill, (a result, however, which is impossible) the King would place his affectionate and loyal subjects in such a position as to leave no choice between an unconditional surrender of their rights and an appeal to force in defence of their liberties? Would he, a patriotic and enlightened Sovereign, allow the horrors of civil commotion to commence merely to afford a chance,—a poor and desperate chance—of success to a corrupt faction and their dupes? No! William the Fourth would, we are sure, in such case, acting with and for his people, exercise the power which, by some lawyers, he is said to possess, of disfranchising certain boroughs, (an exercise of authority which would, we confess, under different circumstances, be odious and unconstitutional, but which, in a crisis where a choice only could be made between the despotism of a faction, a reform prompted by the power of the Crown, and a revolution pressed to extremities with all the physical energies of the people, would be just and expedient) and then where would be the triumph of the anti-reform faction?"

From the tenor of the accounts in the papers of the latest dates, there is every reason to believe that the King will not be called upon to exercise so questionable a prerogative. The Courier of the 29th April says, that the accounts from different parts of the country, relative to the elections, are, on the whole, highly favorable to the great cause in which the King and the people are embarked; and that "it is impossible that the Reform Bill, with reasonable modifications in the spirit of liberty, should not pass, as it would be for the anti-reformers to propose, with success, an addition to the extensive and baneful influence which they possess under the present system. There must be an entire change of opinion,—an entire change indeed of human nature—before they can hope to defeat the great measure of reform."

The number of new members of Parliament after a general election has generally been about sixty; but it is thought by some of the leading prints on the reform side, that there will be about two hundred in the next Parliament, "so many anti-reform ex-members have received notice to quit."

Mr. Hunt's recent course in Parliament seems to have rendered him highly unpopular. The Morning Herald says of him—"No popular idol, for a long series of years, has had such a tumble from the high pinnacle of his celebrity as the ex-member for Preston. Wherever he appears he is pelted; wherever he does not appear he is pasquinaded. In one place they break his blacking bottles: in another they burn all his labels; in a third they burn a 'counterfeit resemblance' of the orator's person, as a fitting termination, no doubt, to the career of a counterfeit politician."

Notwithstanding Mr. Hunt's fall from popularity, however, he and Mr. Wood were re-elected to Parliament from Preston without opposition.—Evening Post.

GERMANY.

DRESDEN, April 17.

Notwithstanding the prohibition, the Society called the "Burgher Union," which was considered to have a dangerous political tendency, had repeately assembled. Hereupon strict orders were issued by the Government, and several members were yesterday arrested. This afternoon, however, they have been forcibly delivered from their arrest by their fellow members. Lieut. Gen. Von Gablenz, Governor of the capital, immediately rode to the market-accompanied by an Aide-de-Camp to learn what had happened, but was insulted and pursued. Hereupon the regiment of infantry of the Guard, led by the General, proceeded to the market-place, and the Communal Guard also assembled. The old market and all the streets leading to it are occupied by the military; detachments of Cavalry are posted in different places, and in the new city a reserve of Infantry and Artillery with four cannon, at which the gunners stand with lighted matches. Unfortunately there are many armed citizens among the discontented; however the Communal Guard shows much good will in maintaining tranquillity and order.

The Nurenberg Correspondent contains a letter from Leipsic, which gives the following details on the disturbances at Dresden:—The firing continued on the evening of the 19th inst. The rioters had retreated to the suburb called Wilsruff, and shut themselves up to the number of several thousands, in St. Ann's church, where they had thrown up barricades, and sounded the tocsin. All the troops in the neighbourhood had been called in. The Royal Family was preparing to remove to Konigstein. Several great families have left Dresden. Prince Frederick, co-Regent, has dissolved the Communal Guards. The last accounts state that the firing continued all night. Prince John, and Gen. Gablenz, who went into the midst of the people to exhort them to order, were pelted with stones, and with difficulty escaped unhurt. The number of the killed and wounded could not as yet be ascertained. The greatest consternation prevailed at Leipsic, in consequence of those melancholy events.

GREECE.

The following intelligence from Egina is of the 6th of April—"The insurrection which has broken out at Maina assumes a very serious aspect. An encounter has already taken place between the insurgents and regular troops sent against them. The former were driven to the mountains, but this check only increased their exasperation. Their former Chief, Mavromichali, is still in prison at Napoli di Romania. On being sent before a criminal court, he protested against such a course, upon the ground that, as a Senator, he should be tried by the nation, and that moreover the ordinary tribunals did not afford any guarantee of independance. The island of Hydra has followed the example of Maina, and effected its revolution with much order. In a declaration of the Chiefs of the revolution, which contains a statement of their grievances, it is remarked that the object of their insurrection is to enforce the entire execution of the Constitution, which has not been acted upon hitherto—the liberty of the press, which was shackled in spite of the laws—and the independance of the tribunals, which were under the immediate influence of the Government. Not having been able to stifle the revolution by the employment of force, it has been sought to sow division among the Hydriot Chiefs; but these efforts have proved of no avail. An intimate union still subsists among them. It is even asserted that the island of Spezzia had joined Hydra, which is now the focus of the revolution. A pamphlet treating of the present intrigues of Greece, and opposing the system of the President, was prohibited in Greece, but it has been reprinted in Hydra, where a journal is also published, which it was vainly attempted to establish before. "The party opposed to Count Capo d'Istrias is composed of two very distinct elements. One party, headed by several patriots, wish to remove the Count merely with a view of taking his place. They speak of liberty only in order to conceal their ambitious projects, and to trample liberty under foot. The other party have joined the former because they cannot do any thing by themselves. The Government is seconded by some old Chiefs, among whom is Colocotroni, and by a part of the people.

ITALY.

Charles Felix, King of Sardinia, departed this life, at Turin, on the 10th inst. On the previous evening ten superior officers were arrested, by order of a plot to place the Duke of Modena on the throne.

COMMERCIAL.

HAVRE, April 30.

COTTON.—The demand during the last fortnight has been more steady and extensive than for a long time past; the transactions have been chiefly in U. S. short staple, upon which there is an improvement of 1 a 2 centimes per k. No this advance has been particularly obtained on middling to good fair descriptions of New-Orleans.—upon the whole however prices have returned precisely to the point from which they had receded six weeks or two months ago. Sea Islands have for a long time been almost forgotten, and the few small sales occasionally reported are made generally at a price not known.

The sales from 15th to 29th April inclusive reach 8566 bales—namely 3731 New Orleans at 80 a 100. 4113 Uplands Mobile and Tennessee at 75 a 95—balance foreign sorts. The imports have been 2031 bales, of which 1844 were from the U. S.—Stock this day 27776 bales of which 24013 are U. S.

FLOUR—The Market is very flat—nothing has been done in American except 200 brls N. Orleans at 38f 50 duty pd. Stock on hand 900 barrels—same period last year 6200.

Review of the New-York Market, June 1.

COTTON.—The transaction, since our last report, have been limited, amounting only to about 500 bales—comprising about 200 Uplands at 8½ a 9 cents; 186 Tennessee 9¼, and 130 New-Orleans, for home use, at 12 cents. Prices remain without essential change, but the stock on hand is large and fast increasing. We have accounts from Liverpool, by the ship Florida, to 2d May. That market was dull, and inferior qualities rather lower.

Import since our list—from

New-Orleans	1546
Georgia	2104
South Carolina	1052
North Carolina	1830
Total,	6532 bales.

Total import, since 1st inst. ....31211 bales.
Export from 1st. to 12th inst. ...5,425 bales.

LEAD.—Further sales of 8 a 900 pigs New-Orleans were made at 4¼ cents, 6 mos, and yesterday a lot of between 4 and 5000 pigs at 4¼ cents, equal to 4 mos. We believe there is none now remaining in first hands.

MOLASSES.—Small sales of good New-Orleans continue to be made at 26 cents.

SUGARS.—The transaction, since our last, have been less extensive. We note sales by auction of 266 hhds. New-Orleans at $4,75 a $6,50 per 100 lbs. 3 and 4 months, and a private sale about 200 boxes brown. The arrivals have been considerable of almost all descriptions.

FREIGHTS—No material variation since our last.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.

The market.—The Flour market continues dull, and the principal transactions, which in amount are small, are to be governed in prices by future sales; it is now freely offered at $5,50 for choice brands, and $5,37½ for Susquehanna, but there are no buyers and lower prices would be accepted if offered. Corn Meal in hhds. and barrels is steady at former prices. The receipts of Grain have been small, but there is no demand. Corn has sold at lower prices. In Wheat nothing done. Whiskey continues scarce and has sold at 35 a 36 cents in barrels from store. In Linseed Oil the prices of last week have been maintained.

Custom House, Philadelphia,
Collector's Office, 26th May 1831.

In conformity with instructions from the Treasury Department, received this day, notice is hereby given to those concerned, that in all cases in which invoices accompanying merchandize imported, are made out in currency, the value of which is not fixed by the laws of the United States, there will be required from the United States' Consul, if there be one, at the place of exportation, of the true value of such currency in Spanish or United States silver dollars.

J. N. BARKER, Collector.

MOBILE, June 13.

COTTON.—We make no change in our quotations since last week, but the market is dull and the rates are not realised.

Freights—Freights to Liverpool are still held at something over a penny, and we believe 1 1-16d has been paid in one instance.

To New-York they continue firm at 1¼ cts.
