WHIG

NOMINATION OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION

FOR PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM H. HARRISON,

OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

JOHN TYLER,

OF VIRGINIA.

NEW-ORLEANS:

FRIDAY MORNING, JANY. 17, 1840.

We thank our cotemporaries of the city press for their flattering congratulations on account of our success as candidates for the state printing, and assure them that their friendly sentiments towards us are all reciprocated.

It is certainly very singular that our neighbor of the Courier never discovered all the atrocious designs which he ascribes to the whigs until he lost the state printing. It is still more singular that he only made the notable discovery of general Harrison's abolitionism, after the same event had taken place. Alas for the frailty of human nature, that an incident of such little moment should have transformed the usually mild and moderate Courier into a most violent and bitter partisan, and have turned his milk of human kindness into very curds!

The Charleston Mercury, Mr. Calhoun's organ in South Carolina, maintains a somewhat suspicious silence in reference to the recent infamous coalition between that gentleman and Martin Van Buren. [illegible]

[illegible]

NEW BOOKS.

We have received from Messrs. Bullitt, Magne & Co. copies of several [illegible] among others, Lady Blessington's last novel, The Governess, which, like all the noble authoress has written, is replete with variety of incident, agreeable narrative, [illegible]

[illegible]

There are 39,513,866 acres of land in the state of Georgia.

[illegible]

ALABAMA [illegible] D. Greene [illegible] George A. McDaniel, of [illegible] county, Arkansas, a few weeks since. [illegible]

INTEREST.—The amount of specie [illegible] of the present session of the legislature at $41,107,399 44. Of this amount the state pays interest on $10,000,000, making the annual interest to be paid equal to $2,637,000. [illegible]

GEN. HARRISON—ABOLITION.

We would call the attention of every southern patriot, to the following extract from a speech of Gen. Harrison, delivered at Vincennes, in 1835, in which his views upon the subject of abolition are distinctly set forth. It covers the whole ground. There is no disguise, non-committalism or ambiguity about it. It marches bolt upon the question, and disposes of it in forcible, plain and perspicuous language. Turn from the sickly and labored verbosity of Van Buren's jesuitical publications, to the open and firm writings of the whig candidate for the presidency, and mark the difference which distinguishes them.

Read it, ye loafers, who have prated with such affected horror of his negrophilism, and blush. And publish it ye administration journals who have crowded your columns with slanders upon his character and political professions. Try him in the crucible, and he is as pure as gold. On all questions, he is sound to the core. He writes to develope, not like Van Buren, to envelope his ideas. Read and be satisfied:

I have now, fellow citizens, a few words more to say on another subject, and which is, in my opinion, of more importance than any other that is now in the course of discussion in any part of the Union. I allude to the societies which have been formed, and the movements of certain individuals in some of the states in relation to a portion of the population in others. The conduct of these persons is the more dangerous because their object is masked under the garb of disinterestedness and benevolence; and their course vindicated by arguments and propositions, which in the abstract no one can deny. But however fascinating may be the dress with which their schemes are presented to their fellow citizens; with whatever purity of intention they may have been formed and sustained, they will be found to carry in their train mischief to the whole union, and horror to a large portion of it, which, it is probable, some of the projectors and many of their supporters have never thought of. The army in the series of evils which are to spring from their source are such as you have read of to have been perpetrated on the fair plains of Italy and Gaul, by the Scythian hordes of Attila and Alaric; and such as most of you apprehended upon that memorable night, when the tomahawks and the war clubs of the followers of Tecumseh were rattling in your suburbs. I regard not the disavowals of any such intention, upon the part of the authors of these schemes, since, upon the examination of the publications which have been made, they will be found to contain the very fact, and every argument which would be used, if such had been their object. I am certain that there is not, in this assembly, one of these deluded men, and that there are few within the bounds of the State. If there are any, I would earnestly entreat them to forbear; to pause in their career, and deliberately consider the consequences of their conduct to the whole union, to states more immediately interested, and to those for whose benefit they profess to act. That the latter will be the victims of the weak, injudicious, presumptuous and unconstitutional efforts to serve them, a thorough examination of the subject must convince them. The struggle (and struggle there must be) may commence with horrors such as I have described, but it will end with more firmly riveting the chains, or in the utter extirpation of those whose cause they advocate.

Am I wrong, fellow-citizens, in applying the terms weak, presumptuous and unconstitutional to the measures of the emancipators? A slight examination will I think, show that I am not. In a vindication of the objects of a convention which was lately held in one of the towns of Ohio, which I saw in a newspaper it was said that nothing more was intended than to produce a state of public feeling which would lead to an amendment of the constitution authorizing the abolition of slavery in the United States. Now can an amendment of the constitution be effected without the consent of the southern states? What then is the proposition to be submitted to them? It is this:—"The present provisions of the constitution secure to you the right (a right which you held before it was made which you have never given up,) to manage your domestic concerns in your own way; but as we are convinced that you do not manage them properly, we want you to put in the hands of the general government, in the councils of which we have the majority, the control over these matters, the effect of which will be virtually to transfer the power from yours into our hands." Again: in some of the states, and in sections of others, the black population far exceeds that of the white.—Some of the emancipators propose an immediate abolition. What is the proposition then, as it regards the states and parts of states, but the alternative of amalgamation with the blacks, or an exchange of situations with them? Is there any man of common sense who does not believe that the emancipated blacks, being a majority, will insist upon a full participation of political rights with the whites; and when possessed of these, they will not contend for a full share of social rights also? What but the extremity of weakness and folly could induce any one to think, that such propositions as these could be listened to by a people so intelligent as the southern states? Further. The emancipators generally declare that it is their intention to effect their object (although their acts contradict the assertion,) by no other means than by convincing the slave holders that the immediate emancipation of the slaves is called for, both by moral obligation and sound policy.—An undisguised youth, at the moment of his leaving [illegible] many indulgent [illegible] he has left his [illegible] the countrymen of Wythe, Tucker, Pendleton and Lowndes, and lessons of political wisdom [illegible] have so recently been directed. [illegible] Madison, Macon and Crawford—Is it possible, that instances of greater vanity and presumption could be exhibited? But the course proposed by the emancipators is unconstitutional. [illegible]

[illegible]

I insist that if the [illegible]

[illegible]

THE EXERCISE OF WHICH NONE BUT THEMSELVES HAVE ANY CONCERN. [illegible] If slavery is an evil, the evil is theirs. Where is guilt is it, the guilt is theirs, [illegible] THE STATES WHERE IT DOES NOT EXIST, NOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES CAN, WITHOUT USURPATION OF POWER, AND THE VIOLATION OF A SOLEMN COMPACT, DO ANY THING TO REMOVE IT WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THOSE WHO ARE IMMEDIATELY INTERESTED. [illegible]

[illegible] the abolitionists in the north [illegible] viewed by our southern brethren [illegible] their rights, and which, if persisted in, [illegible] eradicate those feelings of attachment and affection between the citizens of all the states which was produced by a community of interests and dangers in the war of the revolution, which was the foundation of our happy union, and by a continuance of which it can alone be preserved. I entreat you, then, to frown upon the measures which are to produce results so much to be deprecated.

The opinions which I have now given, I have embraced the opportunity for the last two years to lay before the people of my own state. I have taken the liberty to [illegible] them here, knowing that even if they should not [illegible] they would be kindly received.

LEGISLATURE OF LOUISIANA.

SENATE.

Sitting of Thursday, January 16.

The following members were: Messrs. [illegible] Crow, Debigny, Ducros, Garcia, [illegible] of Baton Rouge, [illegible] and Winn—12.

[illegible]

[illegible] houses be equalized [illegible]

The amendment was adopted.

[illegible] moved to amend the resolution, [illegible] committee to inquire into the causes that led to the long [illegible] of specie payments for the period the banks [illegible]

Mr. BERIART introduced a new amendment to [illegible] the committee to lay their report by the [illegible] of each banks by which the state holds stock [illegible] Citizens Bank, then the Union Bank [illegible]

Mr. HOA was opposed to this amendment, on the ground that such a provision would perhaps throw impediments in the regular course to be pursued by the committee. He thought it was more advisable to [illegible] plan as that of which was adopted under like circumstances in 1837, the object of which is to systematize the work to be performed in such a manner that the several statements of the banks should be signed and delivered on the same day.

The amendment was rejected; and the sense of the senate being taken on the resolution, as amended, it was adopted.

On motion of Mr. DUCROS, the rule being dispensed with, said resolution was read for the third time by its title and passed.
