FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 8, 1830.

HENRY CLAY.

Subscribers to the Bee will receive a Supplement containing the Speech of Mr. Clay, on the Tariff, delivered in the Senate of the United States, on the 23d of September last.

FT Several subscribers have complained to us, that the Bee does not reach them regularly. We are sorry for it, and have taken every pains to remedy the evil. We have changed our mode of publication, and have now every reason to hope that our subscribers will receive their papers regularly. We have made the change, in consequence of the great number of our subscribers who live in the country, and who, we have reason to believe, have been deprived of the Bee, by the negligence of the Post Masters, and Post Riders, in the country. We have taken every precaution, that we can, to prevent the recurrence of the evil complained of, and we hope that our subscribers will, hereafter, receive their papers regularly. We have, also, made a change in our publication day, which will, we hope, be productive of good to our subscribers, who live in the country. We publish, now, on the morning of the day, on which the Post Riders, leave the City, for the country, and we hope, that our subscribers will, now, receive their papers, in time, to read them, before the Post Rider, leaves the City, with the mail, for the country. We have, also, made a change in our publication day, which will, we hope, be productive of good to our subscribers, who live in the country. We publish, now, on the morning of the day, on which the Post Riders, leave the City, for the country, and we hope, that our subscribers will, hereafter, receive their papers regularly
