NEW-ORLEANS:
SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 6, 1839.

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

HENRY CLAY,

OF KENTUCKY.

Subject to the decision of a National Convention.

THE PRESIDENCY OF ROANOKE.

A paragraph under the above signature of the public journals, taken from a late address by Bishop Storrs to Robert R. Gilliam, which asserts that from thirty to forty thousand votes have been actually purchased in Kentucky, at the last three years, calling a single exception to the contrary, during all that time, and which we conceive, without a conviction for perjury, is a most unfounded and unjustifiable calumny on the people of Kentucky, which we hope will be rebuked by the indignant public opinion of the country. The bishop asserts that the direct proof of conviction for perjury against the offenders, and in consequence of the exposure of the fact, the number of persons who thus participated, a large portion are wealthy. Many, perhaps the richest of families, will satisfy the falling generation can profit little from a habit, indulged usually to anticipate from the female parent every allurement of condition, or modesty and purity of feeling. To the virtuous parent, received at the mother's hand, the youth of Kentucky is a great degree, for the exercise of the virtue which is the pride of the female heart, making it a sacred duty to carry out parental precepts; in subject like political measures, the duty is equally sacred, and the duty of the parent, in the exercise of the elective franchise, is a matter of high moral obligation, and the violation of it, which we regard as the most flagrant, is the sin and blot of the political system. It
