An Official Notification by the Republic of Mexico.
FOREIGN AND HOME DEPARTMENT.
His Excellency the President of the Republic has communicated to me the following decree:
Jose Joaquin de Herrera, President of the Republic of Mexico, to the inhabitants thereof Know ye, by these presents, that Congress has approved of the following decree:
Article I. Authority to the Government to contract for a railroad from the port of Vera Cruz to the Capital—thence to some port on the Pacific, with such branches as may seem convenient to the Government.
Art. II. The railroad must be finished within fifteen years, and the work commenced before two, calculating the time from the date of the contract.
2. To contractors the following privileges will be conceded:
First. For the road and its branches an exclusive privilege for fifty years.
Second. The grains, materials, and necessary instruments for its construction, the coal which they may import until that of the republic may be brought into use, to be free of duties, the whole subject to the tariff and the formalities therein prescribed.
Third. Should the railroad pass over any of the public domains, enough land will be granted to the contractors for the construction of the road and its appendages; besides, the preference will be given to them for the establishment of colonies on both coasts, subject to the laws which will be dictated in that effect.
Fourth. Such private property and ground as may be needed for the construction of the road and its stations will be granted, subject to the laws prescribed by part 3d, article 112 of the constitution—The privilege on the right will only be made use of provided the contractors cannot come to an amicable arrangement with the proprietors.
Fifth. Should the contract be entered, after the date of the contract, reach that part of the country beyond Vera Cruz, where the yellow fever does not prevail, the government will grant an extension of two more years on the exclusive privilege, and if it reaches the point indicated before the expiration of the two years, a proportionate time of one year more for each month thus saved.
Sixth. In case the contractors allow twenty per cent of the profits to the public treasury, a further extension of thirty years will be granted on the exclusive privileges. At the expiration of this extension the terms of article five must be complied with.
3. Foreigners engaged in this undertaking must understand that, from the fact alone, their rights as such cease in all parts of the country where this work is carried in.
Art. II. The government is also toward the contract to hire or to show who proposals are the most advantageous and in keeping with the conditions of the preceding article. For this purpose three months will be allowed for the receiving of such proposals, it being optional with the government to prolong the time stated to three months.
Art. III. In order that the preceding articles may go into effect, the government will give orders that this decree be translated and published in three newspapers of the largest circulation in Europe and North America, and the time the packet leaves one to fourth time decree.
Art. IV. Should the contractors for the principal road think proper not to construct the branches which may have been selected, the government will then contract with miners for this object.
Art. V. At the expiration of the exclusive privilege the railroad, trains, and buildings will become national property.
Art. VI. In those places where the railroad follows the public roads the space must be allowed, as per decree of the 24 b September, 1845.
Art. VII. The Government has the power to contract for the railroads they may think proper in any part of the republic, subject to these same conditions, with exception of the time of completion and the length of the privilege, in which they must be governed by the distance and difficulties which they may have to overcome in their construction.
Art. VIII. Should the contractors solicit any concessions, the Executive will, in case he thinks it expedient to grant them, demand authority from Congress to yield them such.
Art. IX. The authority granted by this decree does not interfere whatever with the liberty the constitution grants to the different States for the opening and improvements of their public roads.

THIS is the most valuable medical discovery of importance, general debility, nocturnal emissions, and all diseases occasioned by certain secret habits, and the ill effects of which are so frequently recorded in the same complaints are worthless imitations, which be unrivaled excellence, fame and popularity have brought into the market.
