SILK.

We seize at the moment that our humble exertions [illegible] the imported benefits [illegible] individuals may derive from the [illegible] which individuals who have [illegible] the work to any proper extent. In [illegible] years, the desire to engage [illegible] has become a kind of fever [illegible] the people engaged in [illegible] are rarely seen [illegible] the growth of the [illegible] in our country indeed, and some of the [illegible] New England, reeling and weaving [illegible] and a time was—but of late so [illegible] the disposed to engage in [illegible] that every village [illegible] which produces has been [illegible] a new village [illegible] in all parts [illegible] the difficulty which he could not surmount. Mulberry trees are planting by days, in all directions; and the planting will be continued so long as the expected is profitable. It would be vain and foolish to undertake to arrest the planting process—it will regulate itself, and when a profit can no longer be realized from raising the plants, then the people will turn to the raising of cocoons and not before. Now the sale of cocoons is no longer found to be profitable, men they will commence the preparation of their silk for exportation, and for the purposes of home manufacture. This is the natural course of things, and unless an attempt be made to regulate it by the course of unwise and untimely laws, or the [illegible] operations of monopolizing companies, [illegible] course of things must be successful, for in a very few years [illegible] and roads right. Mr Dupuy says [illegible] exportation. The American people are [illegible] hands to do every thing at once. Goodness [illegible] and they are not deterred by obstacles. Nothing to them appears impossible; they plunge [illegible] in a sea of difficulties, and pursue it until they be all in successful.

CANADA.

The elements of civil strife in Canada have not been so completely quelled by the energetic conduct of the British chieftain but that they may once again [illegible] and occasion convulsions more extended in [illegible] and productive of radical changes in the condition of the dependencies. A northern journal of the Sun which has been conspicuous for the accuracy of its information and the soundness of its views [illegible] the Canadian disturbances, observes that there are strong indications that the country will [illegible] be a theatre of news from Canada as [illegible] the last. The resignation of Lord Durham [illegible] was expected from the [illegible] at a critical moment. A reinforcement of patriots is in progress; the disaffected are numerous, and the experience of the past year will instruct them better how to accomplish those military operations which are necessary to secure success. A country divided between loyalists and patriots, in which [illegible] from force of demonstrations, can be expected to no other light than as the direct advocates [illegible] independence, requires for its administration a wise and firm mind, and a firm and skilful hand. The reputation of Lord Durham deprives the [illegible] of such a ruler, at the very moment when the whole force of his faculties is most imperatively needed. It is a matter of doubt whether he will be [illegible] capable of exercising that office at [illegible] provinces which have become more [illegible] than ever. It is yet more problematical [illegible] Sir Colin Campbell will be appointed in time to check [illegible] in progress. The friends of separation will not be slow to date the commencement of [illegible] from the departure of Lord Durham's departure, and he [illegible] probably be matured and ready for [illegible] of authority can [illegible] progress. What the prospects [illegible] we cannot well determine [illegible] that the result [illegible] will be [illegible] depends on the result more decisive [illegible]

PHRENOLOGY

Mr Gilbert Combe, one of the most prominent and [illegible] of Phrenology, and a man of splendid [illegible] and extensive attainments, has recently arrived in this city. Mr Combe was [illegible] a course of lectures on phrenology in [illegible] in Boston. From thence we learn that he has [illegible] to travel over various parts of the United States for the purpose of [illegible] and explain [illegible] the favorite science. That his success will be commensurate with his exertions, we [illegible] no small doubt. No man has investigated [illegible] more conscientiously and patient research [illegible] and [illegible] philosophy. FLOWER SEEDS.

We recommend Mr. Dunn's garden to the lover of flowers, and to the ladies in particular. His advertisement will be seen in to-day's paper. We have examined Mr. Dunn's collections, and have rarely seen a richer or choicer collection of plant's and flowers of every description. The dahlias are unquestionably the the most beautiful we have ever beheld in this country. Mr. Dunn has likewise an assortment of various seeds, which he offers for sale at moderate prices. His garden is situated opposite the hospital, and his store no. 17 Common street.

MOBILE INSTITUTE

THE next term of this institute will commence on Monday the 15th instant

This Seminary has now been two years in operation, and during that time has fulfilled the highest expectations of its founders, in the entire healthiness of its location, and in the successful application of the principles on which it was established. It is designed to unite the advantages of a complete collegiate education with the moral safety and good order of a private family.—It offers a course of study, in all departments, as thorough and liberal as the undergraduate course in any college or university in this country, with especial advantages in modern languages, particularly the French, and in the correct and skilful writing of the English, while at the same time, the habits and morals of the pupils are carefully watched over at all hours, as in a well regulated private family

A statement of the objects and advantages of the institution more particular than a simple advertisement admits, will be sent to the address of parents, and all persons interested in education, are invited to acquaint themselves with it

TERMS For board, washing, and tuition in all the branches, three hundred dollars a year, payable semi annually in advance.

NORMAN PINNEY, Principal, Mobile.
