INSTITUTION

ST. XAVIER COLLEGE,

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THIS institution, incorporated by the State of Ohio under the same title and style of St. XAVIER COLLEGE, enjoys all the privileges usually granted to Universities. Its location renders it easily accessible from every part of the Union, and every pains have been taken to make it attractive to such as aspire to a finished education.

Belonging to the establishment is an extensive and well selected Library, already numbering upwards of six thousand volumes, and a Museum containing many specimens of Conchology and Mineralogy, besides a suitable provision of chemical and philosophical apparatus.

The college buildings are spacious, airy and commodious, their wholesome and abundant the discipline firm, but affectionate and conciliatory. (Besides this, an invigorating walk, of a mile and a half in a week, to go on foot (when not too warm, otherwise by omnibus) to the Purcell mansion, a large country seat belonging to the institution, between 2 and 3 miles from the city.) And in case of contagious diseases, (and this is of the greatest importance,) if any student would contract the disease, he would be immediately withdrawn from the college and sent to the country seat, and placed in separate apartments, Corporal exercise, as well as mental, receives with due attention to which end there is erected on the premises, a gymnasium, to which, in hours of recreation, the students have confined access.

In the college are employed from fifteen to twenty teachers, all particularly devoted to the instruction of those under their care. The Professors, with a large majority of the students, are of the Roman Catholic Church. Students of all denominations are admitted, with the conviction and understanding, however, of entire conformity to all the exercises of public devotion.

Plan of Instruction.

The course of instruction comprises two departments. In one Classical, the other Mercantile. The Classical is conducted as to admit of the pursuit of the Mercantile.

The Mercantile Department consists of a thorough knowledge of English, including Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, Use of the Globes, History, Political Economy, and Book-keeping.

The Classical Department, besides the branches of English, comprehends the Greek, Latin, French, German and Spanish languages, Ancient and Modern History, Rhetoric, Chemistry, Physics, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy. The French, German and Spanish languages are taught by native teachers, who have experience in the practice of the application of the student, and are taught without extra charge.

In the moral Philosophy, the language employed is exclusively Latin, in the French, German and Spanish classes instruction is carried on in their respective languages, in all other classes, the ordinary language of communication is English.

Regulations Peculiar to Boarders.

They are at all times under the superintendence of one or more prefects. Once a month they are permitted to visit their parents, guardians or relations, residing in the city or vicinity. Unless in particular cases, no other absence from the College is allowed. At the end of each quarter bulletins of health, conduct and progress in studies, are transmitted to the parents and guardians.

REGULAR FALL Principal

THE Principal of this Institution has the honor to inform the public that the establishment from its opening has been crowned with the most flattering success. It is equally unexcelled in the superiority of its course of instruction and attention to the health of the pupils. It has been visited by persons of the first distinction from all parts of the State. Every precaution is taken to prevent the introduction of the cholera or other epidemic diseases. Its proximity to the Lake, and the superior ventilation of the building, are considered by the Principal as the most effectual means of preventing the disease from making its appearance in the College. Parents, guardians and others, who have experienced the inconvenience of the cholera in the city, will be gratified to learn that the Principal has made every effort to prevent the introduction of the cholera into the College, and has succeeded in preventing
