NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY NIGHT, April 13, 1843.

Business is far from brisk, but has been transacted with the past week to a fair extent. All the superior rices are rising rapidly, and the Thursday market not only feels the influence of the increased receipts, but the anticipation of much larger estimates, inside to keep pace with the market, in expectation of lower prices.

The weath r continues pleasant and favorable for outdoor business.

☞ 7 P. M. The good demand noticed in our former review continued to prevail yesterday, and the sales amounted to 4,000 bales, of which a considerable part was taken for the Continent, at prices decidedly in favor of sellers. To-day there was less an active inquiry, and the business comprised 3,400 bales, at prices fully to shade those previously current. The stock on sale is now reduced to comparatively low figure—probably some 15 to 20,000 bales, and holders are offering sparingly, which they are also concerned in holding on to operate. We have to-day altered our quotations—
