FOR GOVERNOR

HENRY JOHNSON

NEW-ORLEANS:

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 10, 1841.

CONGRESS.

The mail having failed yesterday (we speak of Charleston, the President's message did not arrive.—The Charleston Courier of the 4th instant, learned by a passenger in the Wilmington boat, that both houses of Congress met on the 31st May, and formed quorums. After which they entered into an election for a clerk and speaker of the house, which resulted in the election of the Hon. JOHN WHITE, of Kentucky, the whig candidate, for speaker, on the first ballot, he receiving 128 votes, and Mr. JONES, of Virginia, (V. B.) 84 votes; the rest scattering. MATHEW ST. CLAIR CLARK was elected clerk, against F. O. J. SMITH, the conservative member from Maine. The President's message was not sent to the house on Monday, but was expected to be received next day.

The locofocos appear to be mightily tickled of late. They seem suddenly to have lit upon another mare's nest, and in their joy at the fancied discovery they keep up a deafening din of exultation. They imagine that they have found out that the present cabinet must infallibly be dissolved; that thereupon an irreparable schism between the whigs and conservatives will ensue; that the party will be weakened and broken down, and that the spoilsmen will once more come into power and ride rough shod over the liberty, happiness and prosperity of the country. We marvel not that such anticipations should be fraught with joy unspeakable to the discomfitted and dispirited locos.

If, however, we examine the foundation on which these hopes are based, we will perceive how slender and unstable a prop it is to such high and exciting expectations. The upshot of the matter is, that a single conservative paper in New York—the Star—has intimated that Mr. WEBSTER, the Secretary of State, would be in a sphere better suited to his genius and intellect, if he were appointed minister to England. This ungenerous and uncharitable remark, we asking as it does of a wish to oust Mr. WEBSTER from the commanding station he now fills to the satisfaction of nineteen twentieths of the friends of the administration, was answered by the Express and other papers, and the discontented organ of the conservatives has been rebuked into silence. The Madisonian—the special organ of that party—with frankness and magnanimity worthy of all praise, aided in putting down at once and effectually, all attempts to throw fire brands into the councils of the executive, by exposing the cause of Mr. WEBSTER with ardor and earnestness; by declaring that he had no notion of leaving the cabinet; that if he did, he would not go minister to England; and that the most perfect concord of feeling and opinion existed between the President, the Secretary of State and the other members of the cabinet.

We do not believe, nor is there any evidence to prove the existence of a plot to drive Mr. WEBSTER from his place, and to substitute Mr. RIVES, or some other member of the conservative school. There may be a few reckless and mischievous spirits, who would be desirous of such a consummation, but the mass of the administration party here, or elsewhere, in the extreme South, as well as in Massachusetts and New York, repose the most implicit confidence in DANIEL WEBSTER, and honestly believe that no abler or purer man could have been selected from among the nation to fulfil the important functions entrusted to him.

There is, unfortunately, in all political parties, an infusion of selfishness and lust of office, which it is difficult to eradicate. The eleventh hour hangers on of the whig party who joined it when victory was in its grasp, are doubtless annoyed because official patronage has not been as lavishly bestowed on them, as upon the veterans of the party who clung to it amid disaster and defeat. Of such are the factious murmurers, who are trying to get up a little excitement in their own contracted sphere, and then thunder it in the ears of Mr. WEBSTER as "public opinion." The attempt has already failed, maugre the ill suppressed glee of locofocoism and its insidious attempts to further the views of those petty malcontents. The mass of the people are too honest and open to be affected by the clamor of a handful of scurvy office hunters—The million and a half of freemen who decreed the downfall of Van Burenism, resolved at the same time to give his successor a fair trial, and to stand by him and his cabinet, while they stand by the people.

The seditious spirit of locofocoism must, therefore, sink once more into its appropriate mire. It cannot, even with the help of some indiscreet and unpatriotic whigs, diminish the love and confidence of the nation, or introduce a single theme of discord into the executive council.

☞ A special meeting of the members of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce will take place this evening at half past 7 o'clock, to take into consideration the expediency of memorialising Congress for the establishment of a NATIONAL BANK.

New Orleans, June 10, 1841.

On Tuesday evening the U. S. Marshall went down to the Balize on board the towboat Tiger, for the purpose of bringing to the city, the various individuals who have been arrested, either on board the Independence, or on suspicion of being implicated in acts of piracy.

The ship Berwick arrived yesterday morning from the Balize. She brings no satisfactory intelligence respecting the transaction on board the Charles. The Neptune was spoken on Monday, after having boarded five or six vessels, without learning any thing respecting the supposed pirates. The rakish looking suspicious schooner had not been seen. The revenue cutter Woodbury had been maintaining a sharp and strict scrutiny around the coast, but had made no discoveries. We are as much as ever in the dark concerning the mysterious desertion of the Charles.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS.—The negroes sentenced to be executed on the 9th July, says the St. Louis Republican of the 3d, have made a number of disclosures which will appear in due time. Among the developements was a confession by Madison, of stealing a gentleman's trunk from the National Hotel last fall, containing $300 in money. The trunk was found at Lesh's house. Peter Charleville, her husband, was arrested and fully examined, but dismissed from want of testimony. Lesh made tracks either from a consciousness of guilt, or from fear of consequence. Enis, the chief witness against the negroes in the transaction of the night of the 17th, has left the city.

The whole population of St. Louis is 30,000. The increase in between four and five thousand in a single year.

☞ The British Queen had not arrived at New York up to the evening of the 31st May.

☞ The Natchitoches Herald proposes, on account of the number of shade trees which adorn the town, to change its name from Natchitoches to Chalcis—the latter being the name of a town in Greece, which, according to the erudite editor, was so full of shade trees, as to obscure the houses.

The steam-frigate Missouri is to be furnished with one of Francis' Life-boats of great capacity. The navy Department has directed Life-boats to be furnished to all government vessel on their requisition. It were well that every merchant vessel should be provided with this eminently useful invention. Cunard's line of Liverpool and Boston steamers and the Great Western from Bristol to New York, have these boats for the safety of their passengers and crews.

SINGULAR MISTAKE.—An honest farmer from Somerset county, Pa., was recently subject to no little anxiety and perturbation, from having been arrested and held to bail in $10,000, on suspicion, having no other foundation than his personal appearance, of being the uncaught New-Orleans forger. He visited the fleeced banks, to learn whether he was really farmer CLARK, or financier PARKER. The banks immediately relieved him of his solicitude.

CURIOUS POLITICAL OPPOSITION.—The Hartford Courant speaks of the fact of there being a father and son now in the senate of Connecticut, as a circumstance not before known to the editor. A few years since, a father and son, of the same politics, were in the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, and two brothers of opposite politics. Last year, in one district, a whig son ran as a candidate for the senate, against his locofoco father and best him.—While in another section of the state, a sterling old whig, finding his son, a new fledged loco, was a candidate for representative, allowed the whigs to run him in opposition, and was elected. No other candidate could have defeated his son.

THE MARCH OF INTELLIGENCE.—The Cahawba Democrat has the following:—

INDIANA.—Seven Democrats and six Whigs have been elected from this state.

A NOTED CHARACTER DEAD.—Roswell Sabosnell, well known in New York city by the sobriquet of the Duke Dabo of Bignarole, or "the Mirror of Light," died in the nine-house in that city, on the 30th ult., aged 63 years.

A Newspaper paragraph tells a story of a lady over 100 years of age, who had one million daughter aged 65 years. The daughter died recently, when the mother exclaimed in the fulness of her grief, "O! boo hoo!—I know—I know—should like that child!"

Mr. Gideon Wells, late postmaster at Hartford, has addressed a letter of inordinate length to the postmaster general, benefiting his successor, and asking Mr. Granger for his reasons. Gideon solemnly declares—"I am sin, total ignorance of the reason which have led to my removal." Dear sweet innocent.—N. Y. Commercial.

It is said that young SEMMES, charged with the murder of Professor DAVIS, of the University of Virginia, is fast sinking through consumption, and that it is very doubtful whether he will be brought to trial.

HONEY FUNGUS has been found in large quantities at the Parisian restaurats, where cheap dinners are given.

SUCCESSION TO THE VICE-PRESIDENCY.—The Hon. George Poindexter has addressed a letter to the Hon. Samuel Southard, President pro tem. of the American Senate, in which he asserts and elaborately contends contrary to the general opinion, that Mr. Southard has succeeded under the Constitution to the vacant office of Vice-President of the Union—arguing chiefly ob inconvenienti and on the necessity of preventing an interregnum.

The Newark (N. J.) Daily Advertiser says—"We do not understand that Mr. B. concurs in the reasonings and conclusions of the writer; but the questions discussed ought to be speedily settled."

Extraordinary Hail Storm in Illinois.—The following account, says the Peoria Register, of one of Nature's most romantic freaks is so remarkable, that were it not communicated by our excellent friend and attentive correspondent, D. M'Neil, Esq. (Postmaster at Monmouth), we should be disposed to question its genuineness.—On the 4th of May, at about 3 o'clk, p. m., a cloud, accompanied with wind and hail, passed from west to east over Monmouth. The hail was large, and broke on the west side of the houses, more than fifty panes of glass in every sixty. The storm had but just passed east, not exceeding five minutes, when it returned from east to west, doing nearly as much damage to the east side of the houses as had just been done to the west side. The storm subsided for a few minutes, when it came again from the south, breaking glass on that side of the houses which had in the same proportion as on the west and east. The damage done to the young orchards and gardens is perhaps incalculable. The peach trees were not in bloom, neither were the apple nor pear, but every vestige of bud of leaf has been stripped off, leaving cherry and plum trees as bare of leaves and buds as in January; and every thing which was up in the gardens was completely destroyed. The storm lasted about three quarters of an hour, and the hail lay upon the ground from one to two inches deep, and in many places in heaps which remained till the evening of the 5th inst., (48 hours) It seems it did not extend more than three of four miles south, and but little more than that distance north. How far it extended west and east we have not yet learned. There was not half glass enough in the stores to fill the shattered windows, and the inhabitants had to send to Knoxville and Burlington for supplies, some thousands of lights being broken.

From the National Intelligencer.

THE CURRENCY.

It is astonishing that an intelligent people, like those of the United States, should be gravely discussing the question whether Congress have the constitutional power to establish a national bank. This and many other subjects may present a question of expediency, but as to the right, the constitutional power to establish such institution, the discussion of the question comes, to my mind, as near the ridiculous as any thing that can well be imagined. To see men—men of sense and dignity would be wounded by supposing themselves engaged in any thing farcical—to see them gravely, even solemnly discussing the proposition that "two and two make four," is truly enough to make dead statues leer and nod, and say "yes—very profound—very conclusive."

The Constitution! What is it? A mass of hieroglyphics dug up in Herculaneum? Not but a set of rules of action laid down by a few plain men, such as GEORGE WASHINGTON and JAMES MADISON, and which are, really, as easily understood as a contract about an acre of land or a yoke of oxen.

I have not read much on the subject of the currency, nor do I wish to. The Constitution on the subject is very short and very plain. It says Congress shall have power, 1st, to "regulate commerce among the different states; and, 2d, to "provide for the general welfare.

Now suppose even that the idea of a national bank never did enter into the minds of the framers of the Constitution. Suppose such an institution as a bank had never been heard of. And suppose, further, that, a hundred years after all the framers of the Constitution were dead, a state of things should arise in the commerce and fiscal concerns of the nation as to render it for the general welfare to establish such an agency as a national bank—I ask if it would not be the right and duty of Congress to establish such bank? Is not such bank, with proper and safe regulations, absolutely necessary to, 1st, "regulate commerce among the several States," and, 2d, "for the general welfare"?

The constitutional power to do this cannot be questioned. General Washington was one of the framers of the Constitution, and we all know, was a man of great caution and judgment; and he signed the first charter for a national bank, making it a law of the land. The only question is a question of expediency—and it is quite too late to discuss this. The wheels of the finances of the country are prostrate. Nothing can revive them but a national bank—nothing—nothing. Trade must have a regulator—a centripetal point and power—and the paper currency of the country must have something of a universal standard of value in the country—and the issues of the banks something of a corrective. Nothing can furnish all these but a national bank, having the CONFIDENCE of the Government and the nation. The LIBERTIES of the nation demand this as a place of deposite and disbursement. The executive has the sword—and that is enough for any one man.

Such an institution is a matter of NECESSITY. It is of no use to war with NECESSITY. It will wear out the public industry and prosperity—and, finally, the public virtue and the liberties of the country. The force of circumstances is not to be resisted—especially when they are every day increasing with the hugely increasing growth of the country.

Messrs. Editors, you know me well, and you know that I am a plain, retired, and humble man, never having had any thing to do with banks or bank men, and never expecting to. I write these thoughts, feeling much concern for the prostrate condition of the country.

PHILOCLES.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Mr. BADGER is winning golden opinions from all who have had an opportunity of testing his merits, since his appointment to the Navy Department. A distinguished officer of the Navy, a short time since told us that he was the first Secretary of the Navy we ever had. He blends with a fine genius, hard practical sense, which enables him to adapt the best means to the accomplishment of his ends. He has no visionary theories, in the pursuit of which he sacrifices substantial good.

This good opinion is confirmed by a writer in the U. S. Gazette. We hope and believe it will be still farther confirmed by his glorious and successful administration of the department—purging it of its abuses and infusing new energy into its every member—that he will make the Navy what it deserves to be—the pride of the Republic.—Richmond Whig.

From the Philadelphia U. S. Gazette.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Until proposed for the post he now fills, Mr. Badger, the Secretary of the Navy, was scarcely known beyond the limits of his native state, North Carolina. The inquiry was then almost universal, which the American people will never have occasion again to make—who is Mr. Badger? Why this gentleman had remained so long unknown to the nation, why his brilliant mind had not found its way into the legislative halls of the nation, where he would doubtless have been seen and appreciated by citizens of all parts of the Union, the writer cannot pretend to say. But the Secretary is now placed on a field of vision and in a scene of action where he must soon become known to, an appreciated by all.

Mr. Badger is in the very prime of life, being in his forty-seventh year. Educated at one of the first colleges in the Union, he has been trained in a profession acknowledged to be the school of the statesman—the law. As a lawyer, and as an advocate, he stands, beyond all question, at the head of the bar of his own State—a State which has produced, and can now boast of some of the most eminent jurists in the nation.

Among the qualities possessed by Mr. B which peculiarly fit him to administer the department over which he presides, are dignity blended with great frankness and urbanity of manner; a mind which seems to comprehend the most involved and difficult subjects with the rapidity of intuition; a promptness of decision and a despatch which leaves nothing to be done to-morrow that can be completed to-day; broad and comprehensive views, looking at things as they are to effect the nation, not merely to-day but in all time hereafter, and a strong love and pride of country—that love and pride which in the adoption of measures looks to the promotion of her honor and glory. I may also add that the prosperity of our gallant navy is an object dear to his heart, as every one must be convinced who has observed the energetic measures he has taken to ferret out and correct abuses that have heretofore been suffered to go on accumulating, and the means adopted to infuse into its officers an esprit du corps, without which the navy can never maintain its hold upon the affections of the nation.

The department already feels that a new hand has taken the helm, one who can hold it with a firm and steady grasp, one who can command and will be obeyed; one who is and will be the Secretary of the Navy, which is what we have long wanted.

In private life, Mr. B. is sans reproche; full of vivacity and playfulness, he can let loose the reins of wit and mirth without descending to the level of virginity; and at any moment assume the armor of dignity as a protection against the familiarity of fools, whose pleasantry is too often allied to impertinence.

Such, briefly is the man to whose custody has been consigned, that which was once if it is not now, the pride of the nation—the Navy; and while its character—its honor—is in his keeping, let no one fear lest the rust which has been suffered to gather upon its escutcheon, will not be rubbed off, and her stars and stripes again wave in all their former brilliancy over our gallant tars.

"Whose march is over the mountain wave,
"Whose home is on the deep."

TRUSTON.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD will be paid for the apprehension of the mulatto woman JENNY. She is likewise called VIRGINIA. She is about 20 years old, small chain and very light complexion for a mulatto very fairly hair, a very large mouth, and thick lips; a scar on her right arm arising from an old burn. She speaks English and French, and has been long hired in the city as a nurse. She ran away on the 22d March.
