NEW-ORLEANS BEE

BY BULLITT, MAGNE & CO.

[illegible]

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

HENRY CLAY,

OF KENTUCKY.

Subject to the decision of a National Convention.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 21, 1839.

Some of the loco-foco journals appear to be in ecstacies at ... because the result of the New York elections probably show that the whig majority in the Assembly ... on the democratic ... disposition, that ... consider the whig triumph ... a "Pyrrhic victory." A remark or two will serve to put this matter in its true light.

The overwhelming whig preponderance in the last house of assembly was produced by the vote in ... of the county of New York city, which sends thirteen members. At the late election the political character of the New York delegation was reversed, taking at once thirteen from the whig majority and tacking them on to the loco-focos, thus making a difference against the whigs of twenty-six votes. It is really ... that the whigs should ... out of twenty-six ... have been the same. The city of New York is the most corrupt ... in the Union, and is subject to all those base and pernicious means of vitiating the elective franchise to which cities—from whatever cause, are especially liable. With several thousand ... votes, that are at once surrendered to the highest bidder, the contest is invariably decided. At the late election, the ... of office-holders and retainers of the administration were lavishly supplied with sums of money, with which they went forth and secured the floating votes. This, combined with the villainous ... of loco-foco inspectors ... by which vexatious delays were interposed to prevent the reception of ... votes, threw the city into the hands of the agrarians and reduced the whig majority in the legislature to twenty-six votes. The administration had determined to purchase the city, and succeeded.

But when, from the polluted atmosphere of the city, we escape to the pure air of the country—when from the focus of subordination and bribery, we pass to the honest and incorruptible yeomanry of the country, the untrammelled influence of whig principles begins to be perceived. The country remains unchanged. Corruption in vain attempts to shake the probity of its farmers and planters. The destructive dogmas and abominable principles of city loco-focoism only disgust and alienate the yeomanry. The country continues whig, and ... repudiates the levellers by majorities more emphatic and decisive than before.

The most satisfactory evidence of the staunch and unalterable firmness of New York is to be found in the popular vote; though even this test is in a measure exceptionable, from the fact that the 6th district, which gave 16,000 majority for Seward in 1838, has now most probably polled a comparatively feeble vote, in consequence of the hopelessness of loco-focoism ... tion. We are content, however, to take the popular vote as our standard, even with the disadvantage alluded to, and we will venture the assertion that the Empire State has gone for the whigs by a majority not less than five thousand, and most probably eight or ten thousand.

There is very little doubt that future elections will augment the strength of the whigs. The country will never endure the disorganizing tenets of the city levellers. The country will never sanction the overthrow of chartered corporations, the violation of vested rights, the levelling and agrarian tendency of the doctrines maintained by city locofocos. The moral and religious democrats in the country who have hitherto upheld the administration, are even now startled and estranged from their attachment by the outrageous excesses of the city. The organ of the administration in Dutchess county, admits that the whigs carried that county in consequence of the execrable heresies of the locofoco faction in the city. This influence will extend surely and rapidly, and upright men of all parties will unite with those who are determined to crush the serpent that is darting its poisonous venom upon our institutions. The ranks of the opposition will become fortified by new accessions, and the ... department of the government will continue so in 1840.

The voluntary declarations of a criminal are regarded in courts of justice as the best evidence against him. This rule of law which is founded in reason applies, with equal propriety, to politicians as well as malefactors, and when enforced against the ... leaders, convicts them of the grossest ... deception and duplicity. The writings and speeches of the loco-foco editors and orators, abound in argument and declamation against the sub-treasury. Before the president staked his re-election on this ... the party deluged the land with outpourings against it and augmented the popularity of the executive, by inviting the people to believe that he also was hostile to it. We have occasionally given extracts from the "Globe" and "Enquirer," and from the message of Gen Jackson in opposition to it, and we now lay before our readers one of the effusions of the ... in 1837, upon the subject, then as now the ... piece of ... in the empire state.

The germ of the sub-treasury system is found in a report of Alexander Hamilton to congress in 1790. But the collection and disbursement of the revenue in gold and silver ... it was introduced by a whig, and ... its chief supporter is a nullifier. And what are the facts? In 1834, Mr. Gordon, a whig from Virginia, introduced a bill into the house for the collection and disbursement of the revenue, somewhat similar to the present sub-treasury system. The revenue was to be collected in gold and silver only. In advocating this measure, Mr. Gordon, in derision, called upon all "who were in favor of Jackson's Money, to go with him in support of the old fashioned constitutional notion of a hard money government." And what was the response to this appeal? The measure received but one solitary vote of the friends of the administration. It was not a republican measure then; on the contrary it was denounced by the friends of the administration, the professed followers of Jefferson, and by those who are now sworn ... its favor. That it now finds its chief supporter in nullification, will not be denied.

"But why call for this measure? Who are to be benefited by its adoption? THE ENEMIES OF OUR STATE BANKS, by the aid of which we have increased in national wealth and individual prosperity ... the estimates of a well regulated credit system, which has insured a just reward to industry, and enterprise, THE LEVELLER, that if he cannot obtain the station of his most industrious and persevering neighbor, he may at last bring him down to his own;—THE MONEY CHANGER, that he may have no check upon his usurious practices, the RECIPIENT of FIXED SALARIES, ANNUITIES and PERMANENT INCOMES."

The leaders of the locofocos, with marvellous identity of opinion, denounced the sub-treasury, as being ANTI-REPUBLICAN, as hostile to the genius and spirit of our government. He looked upon a revolutionary ... dreadful in tendency and hideous in ... the monster itself. Why do they now endeavor to rivet it upon the people? Is a question which might well be asked by every reflecting mind. Has the sub-treasury changed its character? Has the government been re-organized? or do the administration and their minions regard the people as ripe for despotism. The truth is, the party reckon upon the demoralizing effect which the rapid strides of agrarianism have wrought upon society, to pass this measure, confessedly anti-republican against the genius and spirit of free governments. Mr Secretary Woodbury, in his report to Congress last session, had the boldness to declare that there was not moral honesty enough in the land to aid the government in keeping the public revenue from the rapacious grasp of office holders. One public functionary denounces the people as corrupt, immoral and debauched, whilst the president is urging congress to clothe him with powers of a despotic nature. They think that between them they have reduced the standard of public probity to so low a scale that there is not the moral force left to resist the ambitious aspirings of the Kinderhook juggler. The transition from depravity to servitude is easy enough; and the secretary ... the president is striving to reduce them to the other. The liberties of the people are in danger.

Let those democrats who look upon the columns of whig journals with suspicion and distrust, turn to the files of the most approved locofoco organs of the day and read the opinions expressed therein a few years since, upon this very question. Let them read the democratic speeches of 1834, and be convinced that they are now supporting a measure, which at that period was regarded by their own party as containing the essence of absolute power. We are aware that many honest Van Buren men look upon it as a mere financial measure, innocent in its nature and involving no other principles than those of banking and currency. We commend such to their own commentators, for an exposé of the political power embraced in its provisions. Let them turn from the arguments of the ... to the oracles of "genuine democracy," and they will be persuaded, if reason and truth have not lost all influence upon their understanding, that in the sub-treasury still there is a lurking danger which the patriot may well dread.

NEW YORK ELECTIONS.

In consequence of the failure of the mail we have received no later papers from New York. The following correspondence of the Philadelphia U. S. Gazette, which we extract from a Mobile paper, is confirmatory of the good tidings published yesterday.

New York, Sunday, p. m.

We shall certainly have a whig majority in the approaching legislature on joint ballot of 16. Six in the senate, and ten in the house. It may, by possibility, be one or two less, but it cannot be more. We have not yet procured the official returns from Delaware county, and are therefore still in doubt as to the actual result in the third senate district. Such accounts as we have, however, all go to confirm the belief that general Root, the whig candidate is elected. The triumph of the whig party in this state, in connection with ... other ... circumstances, ... beneficial result on the state of the money market.

☞ The election in ..., for a representative to the legislature ... death of judge Hitchcock, ... contest, in the election of Isaac H. ..., whig, over John A. Campbell, locofoco, by a small majority.

Paper Suspensions.—The Baltimore Chronicle says, as a sign of the times in Indiana, we may mention that the Madison Courier, a locofoco paper, and the best one in the state, too, has been suspended for want of adequate support. The ... since the election, have withheld the supplies, and down it goes!

CAPTURE OF MATAMOROS.

The Texian schooner of war San Antonio, lieut. F. H. Wright, commander, arrived this evening, from Galveston, 12th inst., and ... the Texian brig of war ..., com. H. ..., arrived at the S. W. Pass ... from a cruise off the mouth of the Rio Grande ... which vessel reports the capture of Matamoros, by the Texian troops, under the command of colonel ... Further particulars were not ... the officers of the schooner.

The following is a list of her officers:

Lieutenant commandant, F. B. Wright; 1st lieut. James Shannon; 2d lieutenant, E. A. Harrison; purser, A. R. Derkee; assistant surgeon, F. Lambert; sailing master, W. A. Nicoll. Midshipmen—H. A. Cobb, James L. Mabry, and C. F. Fuller; Captain's clerk, J. P. Clark; boatswain, Wells.

STEAMBOAT ARROW.

The following is a list of the cargo and passengers of the unfortunate steamboat Arrow, Capt. McCord, which sunk on the evening of the 15th instant, about ten miles above Bayou Sara. The boat and cargo will be a total loss.

493 barrels of flour to C. F. Jenkins; 151 sacks of oats to Maliard & Sigerson; 218 sacks of oats, 325 do corn, 56 barrels of pork and 43 head of sheep, to Godfrey, Lawrie & Small; 44 head of cattle to H. Sykes, (on board); 3 boxes of merchandize to A. Brown; and 3 kegs of specie to W. W. Fraker.

HAVANA.

By an arrival from Havana we have received our files of journals to the 13th instant inclusive. We see it stated in the Diario of the 10th, that two rival companies had proposed to undertake the contract for a railroad from Havana to Guines. One of these companies, consists of 20 stockholders, who subscribe each 250,000; the other of 3,000 stockholders, holding as many shares at $100 each; making in either instance a capital of one million.

☞ We are requested to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Native American Association, calling a meeting this evening at the Exchange Hotel, St. Charles street.

Two hundred and six white persons, and thirty-seven blacks, died in Augusta, during the past season, of the epidemic which prevailed in that city.

NEW PAPER.

In another part of our paper will be found the prospectus of Messrs. Carter, Anderson and Deans, for the publication of a new penny paper, to be called the "New-Orleans Sun." The two former of these gentlemen are well known to the community as sprightly and able writers, who have already acquired reputation as the conductors of journals in this city. We trust that the "Sun" will soon begin to disperse its beams.

The Ladies Companion for November may be obtained at Gamel's No. 13, Exchange Place. It is an unusually interesting number. Also, "Brother Jonathan," of the 9th, a mammoth weekly, containing the nineteenth number of Nicholas Nickleby.

We are glad to find that the hard times have not driven the "sisters nine" into exile. Whoever our correspondent may be, we hope the "fair burden" of his song will consider, that no ordinary affection could survive such a pressure as is now upon the money market; it would squeeze the sentimentalist out of any heart that is not passion proof to the most love-killing and anti-matrimonial assaults. Had he concluded his stanzas with a verse to the effect that he "thought of her" when trying to raise the wind to pay a note in bank, she must be an infidel indeed to doubt him longer.

TO M. T. E.

My heart is with thee ever—on the land,
When from the east the glowing sun ascends
Its ring around him, with his magic wand,
The gentle zephyr, which but gently bends
The quivering leaves around the opening rose,
Where charms look brightest when they first unclose.

Or when the moon's pale crescent gems the skies,
And evening winds play with the sleepy leaves;
When stars gaze fondly in each sister's eyes,
And fancy all her fairy tissues weaves;
When memory brings me to thy mind—and when
Hope rules the hour—my heart is with thee then!

'Midst gaudy fashion's crowds; when garish lights
Shine brightly o'er the gay, the young, the fair;
And pleasure spreads around its sweet delights;
Believe me still my heart is with thee there;
Tho' happy he, who at thy side may be,
May woo successfully thy thoughts from me.

Or on the ever heaving billow rocking,
When fresh the breeze, and full the bellied sail,
The white-winged ship, the stormy petrel mocking,
Bends on its flight, and courts the rising gale;
And thou art on thy joyous way towards home—
My heart is with thee on old ocean's foam.

Because I love thee! for each passing hour
Is fill'd with thy sweet image; and my heart
Yields gently to the rapture giving power
Which all thy charms to thy dear mind impart;
For from the present scene, my thoughts will flee;
On sea or land, my heart is still with thee!

(COMMUNICATED.)

To the Editor of the Louisianian.

Sir,—I presume from your remarks of yesterday, upon my last communication, that you had not read it—or if perused—it must have been done in a negligent manner.

I asserted and still assert that you cannot find that any bank has refused under similar circumstances to grant an indulgence to the small debtor that she has accorded to a large one.

I know that many persons perfectly competent to pay a debt of $500 or $1000 have been refused indulgence, because a delay granted to such persons was not called for either by a sense of justice to the individual, to the bank or to the community. Many persons owing small sums to the banks say from $100 to $5000—have, ... the opportunity of general distress to offer real estate (no doubt valuable) to the banks and to ask a delay in order that in the meantime—with the money in their hands—they might go into the market and shave notes. I know many cases of the kind—and the banks have very properly refused to grant indulgence to such parties.

The principle which should guide a bank in extending indulgence to the debtor—must frequently vary according to circumstances—but in no case has it or should it be granted except for the purpose of enabling honest men to struggle through their difficulties—and by degrees to pay their debts.

You state that a gentleman has authorised you to contradict the statements in my last communication—that gentleman puts language in my mouth which I never uttered.

I have no doubt that the banks have refused a delay to debtors who had ample security to offer to pay their debts. People in this condition require no indulgence. Let them sell the property if it be sufficient and pay their debts. But persons who offer security—the value of which can be only equal to their debts by a lapse of one, two, or three years—the interests of the bank requires that an indulgence should be granted.

You assert that I have stated that the banks would be justified in pushing those owing small sums which they were unable to pay. If you read my communication again, you will find that you have misquoted or misunderstood my remarks.

I stated that supposing the banks had pursued the small debtors, and as you alleged, had plunged them into poverty and distress, how much greater the poverty and distress would be if the large debtors were crushed—inasmuch as they were connected with so many others in their various operations.

Large houses evidently those in Canal street have been frequently alluded to by you and many others. Suppose in 1837 at the time of their failure the banks had resolved to pursue them—had seized and sold their property and driven them into court, how much do you imagine the banks would have lost? How many planters, merchants, traders and men of retired fortune whose names were on their paper would have been destroyed and driven into the utmost poverty and distress?

Sir, these are considerations that have had their due weight upon the minds of reflecting men and have controlled the conduct of the banks in the indulgence they have granted these and other debtors. If "pushing" had only resulted in distress to the half dozen of individuals composing these firms, perhaps no other action would have been evinced to have saved them from the consequences of their imprudence. But bank directors saw the hundreds and thousands of individuals, embracing all professions and pursuits who were connected with these few houses, that had engrossed the trade of states—men who were bound in law in various sums from $500 to $50,000—and the banks knew well while they were extending indulgence to one house they were granting relief, and saving from ruin hundreds.

The effect of this indulgence has been felt by the community and the banks, and though it may be necessary for the latter to stop it, still so far they and others have been saved millions by the measure.

I am no apologist for the conduct of the banks in permitting a few individuals to engross all the discounts. I am no friend to the system of banking that has existed for the last eight years in our state—and ... which I ... years since had been adopted by certain banks in dealing more equally their discounts and expediating that extraordinary feature in our monetary affairs of "renewing"—our banks would not be paralyzed.

But, sir, the evil is upon us—and I believe that the course recently pursued by our banks has been as wise and as prudent as could be followed under existing circumstances.

In your concluding paragraph, you refer to a bankrupt president of a bank. I am not aware of the person you allude to—nor have I, or any of my friends, any thing to fear from any exposure you may think proper to make, and which you may consider conducive to the public good. Very respectfully,

A SEEKER AFTER TRUTH.

GERMAN EPISCOPAL CHURCH AND ACADEMY.

While so much has been doing in behalf of a German theatre by the friends of the drama, we perceive little or nothing has been said in behalf of the German church and academy, which has been sometime proposed to be built on a lot of ground, already purchased, and very eligibly situated, about the centre of the second municipality, and near to Nayades street rail road and Tivoli circle. Our German friends are not probably aware that subscription books have been opened at the store of the Messrs Wagner, Chartres street, for this purpose. If they are not, we would now beg leave to remind them of it, and earnestly solicit their aid in effecting this important object. It is certainly a matter of the first importance to the German population of this city, ... It must be admitted that the majority of the Germans of this city are poor and illiterate, and that every year numbers are added by emigration and otherwise, and yet they have no place where they can congregate to perform religious worship, or send their children to be educated in their own, or in the English language. The consequence is, the adults spend their sabbath in idleness and dissipation, setting a bad example to their children, who likewise grow up in the same bad habits, and without perhaps ever having been taught even the elements of either their own or the English language. We therefore call upon all those who have any means, to come forward and help the cause of religion and education. Let us first educate the rising generation and teach them to appreciate the eloquent and inspired pages of the best German writers ... an academy, liberally endowed and supplied with able professors, who are competent to teach the languages and the sciences,—can we ever hope to see literature and the arts flourish among us. The friends of religion and education are therefore now publicly solicited to contribute their mite ... [illegible]

A GERMAN.

THE MANIAC AND HIS SON.—Hastening from this heart-rending spectacle, Jack soon reached the grating that divided the men's compartment from that appropriated to the women. Inquiring for Mrs. Sheppard, a matron offered to conduct him to her cell. "You'll find her quiet enough to-day, sir," observed the woman, as they walked along; "but she has been very outrageous lately. Her nurse says she may live something; but she seems to me to be sinking fast." "Heaven help her!" sighed Jack. "I hope not." "Her release would be mercy," pursued the matron. "Oh, sir, if you'd seen her as I have seen her you'd not wish for a continuance of misery." As Jack made no reply, the woman proceeded. "They say her son's taken at last, and is to be hanged. The cause of it, I'm sure, for it is all owing to him the poor mother's here. See what crime does, sir. Those who act wickedly bring misery on all connected with them. And so gentle as the poor creature is, when she's not in her wild fits—I would not a heart of stone to see her. She will cry for days and nights together. If Jack Sheppard could behold his mother in this state, he'd have a lesson he'd never forget—ay, and so were older than even the hangman could read him.—Hardened as he is, that would touch him. But he has never been near her—never." Rambling in this way, the matron at length came to a halt, and taking out a key, pointed to a door and said, "This is Mrs. Sheppard's ward, sir." "Leave us together, my good girl," answered the matron, dropping a curtsey—"There, sir," she added, unlocking the door, "you can go in. Don't be frightened of her. She's not mischievous, and besides she's chained, and can't reach you." So saying, she retired, and Jack entered the cell. Prepared as he was for a dreadful shock, and with his nerves strung to endure it, Jack absolutely recoiled before the appalling object that met his gaze. Cowering in a corner upon a heap of straw sat his unfortunate mother, the complete wreck of what she had been. Her eyes glistened in the darkness—for light was only admitted through a small grated window—like flames, and as she fixed them on him, their glances seemed to penetrate his very soul. A piece of old blanket was fastened across her shoulders, and she had no clothing except a petticoat. Her arms and feet were uncovered, and of skeleton thinness. Her features were meagre, and ghastly white, and had the fixed and horrible stamp of insanity. Her head had been shaved, and around it was swathed a piece of rag, in which a few straws were stuck. Her thin fingers were armed with nails as long as the talons of a bird. A chain riveted to an iron belt encircling her waist, bound her to the wall. The cell in which she was confined was about six feet long and four wide; the walls were scored all over with fantastic designs, short sentences and names—the work of its former occupants, and of its present inmate.

When Jack entered the cell, she was talking to herself in the muttering unconnected way peculiar to her distracted condition; but after her eye had rested on him for some time, the fixed expression of her features relaxed, and a smile crossed them.—This smile was more harrowing even than her former rigid look. "You are an angel," she cried, with a look beaming with delight. "Rather a devil," groaned her son, "to have done this." "You are an angel, I say," continued the poor maniac; "and my Jack would have been like you, if he had lived. But he died when he was a child—long ago—long ago." "Would he had done so!" cried Jack. "Old Van told me if he grew up he would be hanged. He showed me a black mark under his ear, where the black noose would be tied. And so I'll tell you what I did"—and she burst into a laugh that froze Jack's blood in his veins. "What did you?" he asked in a broken voice. "I strangled him—ha! ha! ha!—strangled him while he was at my breast—ha! ha!" and then with a sudden and fearful change of look she added—"That's what has driven me mad. I killed my child to save him from the gallows—oh! oh! One man hanged in a family is enough. If I'd not gone mad they would have hanged me." "Poor soul!" ejaculated her son. "I'll tell you of a dream I had last night," continued the unfortunate being. "I was at Tyburn. There was a gallows erected, and a great mob around it—thousands of people, and all with white faces like corpses. In the midst of them there was a cart with a man in it—and that man was Jack—they were going to hang him. And opposite to him, with a book in his hand—but it couldn't be a prayer book—sat Jonathan Wild, in a parson's cassock and band. I knew him in spite of his dress. And when they came to the gallows, Jack leaped out of the cart, and the hangman tied up Jonathan instead—ha! ha! ha! How the mob shouted and huzzaed—and I shouted too—ha! ha!" "Mother!" cried Jack, unable to endure this agonizing scene longer. "Don't you know me mother?" "Ah!" shrieked Mrs. Sheppard, "what's that?—Jack's voice?"—Jack Sheppard.

PROSPECTUS OF THE NEW ORLEANS SUN.

The public are respectfully informed, that a new daily paper, to be entitled the "New Orleans Sun," will be commenced in this city, by the undersigned, on the first day of the ensuing December.

The "Sun" will belong to the class of journals known as the "penny or picaiun press," and is designed to be conducted upon principles which shall tend to no results to the social mass, other than such as shall be regarded as conducive to its prosperity and well being. It will be the study of the undersigned to reject from its columns every thing calculated to shake the principles of moral or political virtue while the right to speak boldly, and in the language of unfettered independence, will in all cases be exercised when demanded by the abuse of political power, or the misdirection of individual influence.

In regard to politics, the "Sun" is intended to occupy no partisan position. Conducted under the banner of neutrality, it will judge the two great antagonistic parties of the country according to their works: while the corrupt practices and indiscretion of men in office will in all cases be animadverted upon, in such terms of condemnation as shall be deemed adequate to the measure of their iniquities, without reference to the political division to which they may happen to belong.

The "Sun" will be conducted, in one respect, upon a plan which differs from any with which we have an acquaintance. It will be published every day in the year, holidays excepted. Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will each behold the diffusion of its rays, with the regularity with which the great luminary of the natural world (its namesake and ancestor,) dispenses his light.

For the rest, it will be a principal object with the undersigned to make the "Sun" a reflection of whatever of accident or incident, of vicissitude or wonderment, is occurring in any part of the old world or the new, or the world below, over which Belzebub presides, and which is said to smell strongly of brimstone and have no bottom.

If a fair maiden is lured from the pathway of peace to the pathway of vice, by a fellow with a pair of huge mustachios, look for it in the Sun.

If a wife combs her husbands head with a three-legged stool, look for it in the Sun.

If a horse gets the blind-staggers and kicks his owner's brains out, look for it in the Sun.

If Queen Victoria gets angry with a maid of honor, and slaps her face, look for it in the Sun.

If a pistol is discharged at Louis Philippe, by an assassin, look for it in the Sun—particularly if the ball hits him.

If an elopement takes place between one man's wife and another wife's husband, look for it in the Sun. You may sometimes look for it if it don't take place.

If a steamboat boiler bursts, and sends a score of fellows howling to the wrong side of Styx, look for it in the Sun.

If a Philadelphia candy merchant gets angry with his daughter for marrying a shoemaker, and blows her brains out, look for it in the Sun.

Every thing, in short, which is worth a passing notice, will be always found recorded in the Sun, with nothing left "unsung."

The terms will be $12 a year, payable half yearly in advance. Advertisements inserted at the usual rates.

As soon as the necessary arrangements are completed, a "Weekly Sun" will be issued from the office of the daily, the subscription price of which will be $5 per annum. It will be an aggregate of the seven dailies, and consequently THE LARGEST WEEKLY PAPER published in the southern country. Office, corner of Camp and Gravier streets.

TEN THOUSAND CASES OF FEVER AND AGUE annually cured, by the original and genuine "ROWAND'S TONIC MIXTURE," or Vegetable Febrifuge.
The wonderful success which has attended the career of this medicine, has induced the proprietor to prepare it in another form, in order to make its usefulness more universally extensive. They, therefore, with much confidence offer for public approval, ROWAND'S TONIC MIXTURE PILLS, which are essentially the same as the liquid, but possessing the advantage of portability and safety from breaking and freezing, complaints of which have been frequently made by consumers of the tonic mixture. We have more than 40,000 certificates to prove the infallibility of this medicine when properly used, including many members of Congress, and other distinguished persons throughout the United States, who have expressed their gratitude for their restoration to health by its employment.

"MURDER
Cannot be hid long, as man's son may! but in the end, truth will out."—Shakspeare.

SO it is with CALDWELL'S REAL ESTATE LOTTERY, the advantages offered to the public by this splendid scheme "cannot be hid long;" for "truth will out"—and the first class of this grand lottery will be drawn next new year's eve. Those who know it are drawing tickets daily from the Paul Pry office, and those who don't know it, must know it when they are told of it. Therefore, after reading this, if you fail to provide yourself with a share, you can have no possible chance of the fortunes held out to those who choose tickets at the Paul Pry lottery office, St. Charles Theatre Arcade. So just do it, and say with Shakspeare,
"Let me choose;
For as I am, I live upon the rack,"
"So let me to my fortune, and the tickets." n20

NEW DISCOVERY IN THE SCIENCE OF MEDICINE—The celebrated Compound Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla and Pills—Whoever advances a new theory, or makes an important discovery in medicine, arts or science, must expect much opposition, and especially if that theory or discovery is likely to expose the ignorance or imposition of any class of men, practiced upon the credulity of mankind. In offering this new doctrine, and these pills to the public, I appeal to their intelligence, not to their prejudices, but to their common sense. My doctrine brings the science of medicine out of darkness and mystery into day-light—into the open day light of the world; and every man may judge for himself of the truth of my theory, if the evidence I produce is full, ample, sufficient, then you ought to believe it.

That I have made an important discovery in the science of medicine and the physiology of the human system, of more importance to the well being and health of the great human family, than all that has heretofore been known, cannot be doubted by the most sceptical.

I shall now proceed to state in what my theory and important discovery consists, and I flatter myself that I shall be able to make it clear that this new doctrine is true, the theory based on physiological principles, and in perfect accordance with nature's laws. Before, however, doing this, I wish to explain one word which I shall have occasion to make frequent use of, viz. secretion.

By secretion, I mean that part of the animal economy which separates the fluids of the body, as for example—the bile or gall is a fluid, and is a secretion of the liver.

Now, the doctrine I hold, and am able to defend, as the only true one, is this—that all diseases have their origin in a suppressed, imperfect or depraved secretion of various organs, for example—a person from exposure to cold, or any other cause, has the secretion of the skin, or perspiration, which is the same thing, checked, does it not produce fever, pains in the head, limbs, &c. Now if this natural secretion or perspiration is restored, does it not give immediate relief to the patient? Every body answers yes. Again, take for instance—a case of cholera, do we not find a total absence of bile in what passes the bowels and in what is thrown up? The moment the liver can be made to secrete bile, and it passes into the stomach and bowels, the vomiting and purging ceases, and the patient is safe. Take a case of yellow fever, is not the black vomit a depraved secretion, and unless that secretion is checked and changed, the patient dies within a few hours; but if that secretion is changed to a healthy one, a recovery is certain.

What do we observe in croup? Is there not a formation of a membrane in the wind pipe, produced by an unnatural secretion, which threatens the little sufferer with instant death, unless this secretion and formation be immediately checked? Most certainly.

Take a case of fever, what do we observe? do we not find the skin dry and hot, also the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet? Most certainly. The fever is not the cause of this heat, but because the secretion of the skin is checked, the fever is the consequence. Nobody ever knew the skin to be hot when it was moist, or when the secretion was perfect. In fever we find the mouth and tongue dry, and great thirst. What is the cause of this? According to my theory, I say that the small glands in the mouth and throat do not perform their natural secretion, and that is the reason of so much thirst and dryness of the mouth. In fever, there is often constipation, and the passages are black, green, or otherwise; does not this show that the secretion of the liver and other organs is imperfect or deficient? My syrup and pills will remove the heat of the skin, by opening its secretions. They will remove the thirst and dryness of the mouth, by restoring the secretion of the glands, and, in the same manner with all the other functions.

We think the cases we have taken to illustrate this doctrine fully prove it true. We might go on with every disease in the catalogue of human infirmities, and the proof of our doctrine would be equally clear, but we think it unnecessary to do so, especially as our limits are confined to a small wrapper round the box and bottle.

Being convinced, by the most profound research, study, and experience, that all diseases have their origin in a suppressed or depraved secretion, the next thing was to discover a combination of remedial agents that would act upon any one or all of the secretions, and restore the various organs to their healthy action.

Believing the doctrine or theory, illustrated above to be the doctrine of nature, and in the most perfect harmony with nature's laws, I felt confident that the Great Giver of all good had created the necessary remedies; but whether I was to be the humble instrument to discover them I knew not. I was resolved to make use of the reason God had given me to accomplish this great object. That I have succeeded, there is not the least doubt, and the syrup and pills I now offer to this intelligent community, possesses intrinsic merit, and have the strongest claims upon your confidence, because they are founded upon true principles; and a correct knowledge of the causes of disease.

They cure disease by regulating the secretions, and promoting a healthy action at the same time, in every part of the human system.

They are mild but effectual in their operation, and may be taken at all times and under all circumstances, and at all ages. If taken in health, they keep us healthy; and if taken when sick, they restore to health; this is their nature, their effect, and operation.

TO THE PUBLIC OF NEW-ORLEANS, and especially to Invalids.—The present season—How to insure Health.—There is not a man, woman or child, but should take medicine in this season of the year, but more especially at this present time; for there probably were never so many sources existing at one period, as there are now, so likely to produce a state of sickness. The repeated changes in the atmosphere, by acting as they do upon the consistence and quality of the blood itself, give occasion for the most fatal and malignant disorders. Thus the blood becomes (and after without any warning) in a most unhealthy condition from these repeated changes, and if the stomach and bowels have been neglected previously, the first symptoms require immediate attention.

The thermometer fell, a few days ago, 33 degrees in twenty-four hours, then in a day or two afterwards rose 24 degrees in 24 hours; and in the next again, fell to 50 from 85. Only consider the effect upon the human system. One day the perspiration streaming from every pore—the next all closed. The perspiration being so suddenly thrown inwardly, necessarily produces derangement of the stomach and bowels. It is thus that dysentery is so prevalent—that ... aches of the stomach arise—that people to all appearance in robust health when they go to bed, are awoke with the most miserable griping pains—the doctor is sent for, and if the proper remedy is not at hand, ... the M. D.'s desire to exhibit his great skill, the patient dies before the next night. These accidents can always be prevented.

The cause of the disease being thus removed, ... will soon, with the assistance of a few doses of Syrup and Pills, be perfectly restored.

How easy and certain all this is, and whoever knows any thing of the medicine, knows this result will take place. ... the universal applicability of purging in all diseases ... pain, all pain is produced by humors contrary to the nature of the body. Purging with Sarsaparilla Pills and Syrup, or any other equally innocent but equally powerful purgative, will remove these humors by the stomach and bowels. It is true this is an important fact, and it is one which has been proved to be so by tens of thousands of thousands in the United States.

The great secret is to have the medicine by you when you are first attacked with sickness, one dose then will have more good effect than twenty, if put off until disease has subsided the bodily powers. Let me, then, recommend every individual who considers health a blessing, to keep a bottle and box of them where he can lay his hand on them when wanted.—The price cannot possibly be better disposed of. A valuable life may be saved—or a long ill of sickness prevented.
