

Multivendor printer support—maximizing printer availability.

Distributed Printer Maintenance Services

Many organizations use a variety of printing equipment of various technologies and speeds, often attached to individual workstations, for specific applications or for general office use. The relatively low initial cost of purchasing these printers made them attractive to departments working within a limited budget.

If you're in this situation, you probably employ a number of service vendors to support your various printers. As a result, you may experience conflicting hours of coverage and levels of support. This can make the management of distributed printers complex and difficult. Moreover, with many service vendors involved, it is often difficult to determine the true cost of supporting your printers.

The best solution is a single, specialized, proven service provider who delivers a customized, consistent level of service to your network, departmental and distributed printers. Whether your printer is manufactured by IBM® or another vendor, you get the best overall printer service from IBM.

IBM Service Commitment

We are committed to providing you with superior customer service. Now you can benefit from that same IBM commitment even if you own non-IBM printers. We maintain all printers to the high standard that we set for our own products.

Single Point of Contact

When you use IBM service, you make a single call with a single phone number. It couldn't be easier. And the best news is that you retain the personal service from your local IBM Printing Systems Company Customer Engineer.

Service Management

Our number one goal is customer satisfaction. We pride ourselves on service backed by a world-class organization, delivered through proven service management processes. Let us bring the benefits of this capability to your multivendor environment.
