Best Practices for using the Rational License Key Center

- Limit the number of people that are authorized to access your account. One license key administrator and one back-up administrator are recommended to manage your company's license key registrations.
- Return the license keys before you request that the license keys be moved from one site to another site or from one program offering to another program offering. If you do not return the license keys, assistance from technical support is required to fix your license file.

Additional Rational License Key Center Feature

- Notify Administrator of Registration: Use this feature to send an email to the administrator of the License Key Center account when a new member joins the account.

To learn more about this feature or to add the feature to your account, contact ratlss@us.ibm.com.

IBM Definition of Terms

IBM Customer Number (ICN)

Your IBM Customer Number (ICN) is a unique number that IBM assigns to your company or site at the time of your initial purchase. This number is unique by country. IBM uses your ICN to identify your company and support contract. Contact your Primary Site Contact (PSC) to obtain the ICN for your organization. If you do not know your PSC, contact the IBM eCustomerCare Team. You must have your ICN to receive IBM Technical Support Services.

An ICN might be six or seven digits in length. The IBM Service Request (SR) tool requires that you enter the ICN as a 7-digit number. When you use the SR tool, prefix a 6-digit ICN with a zero.

IBM Site ID

The IBM Site ID defines a unique physical location within your company. You must have your Site ID to access your account for software downloads and to access to the Rational License Key Center. The Site ID is referred to also as the Site Number, Account ID, or Account Number.

The Site ID is nine digits in length and starts with "003" or "007".

Primary Site Contact

- Usually the individual who orders the software or who is the "sold to" contact in your company.
- The person who receives the Proof of Entitlement Certificate (PoE) for each order.
- The default person authorized to access the IBM Software and Services download site and the Rational License Key Center.
- The only person who can change site contacts, manage access, and assign up to four Secondary Primary Site Contacts to assist with account management. A Primary Site Contact can delegate a Secondary Primary Site Contact to approve user access to the download site.

Site Technical Contact

- The person responsible for the support relationship with IBM. This person ensures that users understand how to work with IBM technical support.
- The default contact in the Rational License Key Center.
- The person who receives the IBM Customer Number (ICN) and who can provide the ICN to users to access IBM technical support.
- The person who authorizes users to access the IBM Service Request \(SR\) site to submit and manage support cases.
- The person who delegates responsibilities to Secondary Site Technical Contacts. You can have a maximum of nine Secondary Site Technical Contacts.

How to Determine who your Site Contacts are:

Send email inquiry to the IBM eCustomer Care Team that supports your geography. Include your IBM Site ID along with your inquiry.

How to Change the Designated Contacts for Your Site:

Your Primary Site Contact ensures that the site contacts and additional members of the account are maintained. The Primary Site Contact can update site contacts by using the Manage Account function for the Passport Advantage Online Account. If the Primary Site Contact is no longer with the company, send an email to the IBM eCustomer Care Team that supports your geography. In the email, state that the Primary Site Contact is no longer with the company and must be replaced. Include the following information in the email:

- Company or Organization Name
- IBM Site ID (if known)
- IBM Customer Number
- Country
- Name of the position that you want to update
- Given name and surname of the new contact for the position
- Email address of the contact
- Phone number of the contact
