WebSphere Extended Entitlement Program

IBM plans to protect customers' past investments in IBM integration software, and does not expect current customers to migrate immediately from currently entitled products to the new offerings. To facilitate the extended migration period some customers may require, and to avoid "double payment" during that migration period, IBM is offering customers complimentary "extended entitlement" to the following WebSphere® products under the customers' current product subscriptions until they fully migrate to the respective products (as more precisely detailed in the chart under Entitlement Mappings):

- WebSphere Business Modeler Basic
- WebSphere Business Modeler Advanced
- WebSphere Business Modeler Publishing Server
- WebSphere Business Modeler Publishing Edition
- WebSphere Integration Developer
- WebSphere Process Server

Note that in some cases, customers are entitled to other products in addition to or in replacement of those listed above, as defined in the Entitlement Mappings section below. Therefore the phrase "newly entitled products" will be used in the discussion below instead of each specific product name.

Extended entitlement helps customers get access to and support for both their currently entitled products and the newly entitled products, while continuing to maintain active subscription only to their currently entitled products. At renewal, customers may opt to convert all, some, or none of their entitlements for current products to the new entitlements. For converted entitlements, customers pay maintenance for the newly entitled products.

Importantly, however, extended entitlement will be provided only until one of the following occurs, whichever comes first:

- A customer completes migration to newly entitled products and converts all current entitlements to the new products.
— or —
- A customer reaches the end of support for their currently entitled products. At this point, a customer must renew to the newly entitled products as well as purchase a support extension contract to continue receiving support for their currently entitled products.

Extended entitlement applies equally to all platforms including z/OS®. Details specific to z/OS will be provided when the z/OS product becomes available.

How to Activate Extended Entitlement

Effective September 29, 2005, customers with active subscription to eligible products (see Entitlement Mappings section below) can activate extended entitlement to the newly entitled products.

Customers do not have to activate extended entitlement immediately. The extended entitlement to the newly entitled products will not be revoked until customers' currently entitled products reach their respective "end of support" dates.

The process for customers to activate entitlement is as follows:

1. Have available the company information, the applicable currently entitled eligible WebSphere Products with subscription IDs (see Entitlement Mappings section below), and number of licenses.
2. Go to one of the following Web registration sites to activate extended entitlement:

Once the customer request is reviewed and submitted, the entitlement request will be processed within a week's time. Then the customer will be notified that they are activated under the extended entitlement program and will be able to obtain the product code from their Passport Advantage download web site. Customers who require physical media can order media packs for these newly entitled products starting October 21, 2005.

For any additional questions, contact your regional sales representative. If more information is required, sales representatives should contact the WebSphere Sales Assistance Center on behalf of the customer.

Terms and Conditions to the Extended Entitlement Program:

Usage of this extended entitlement covers the migration of current deployments to the new products. These extended entitlements are not to be used for new deployments or to provide additional capacity for current deployments.

Note 1: WebSphere Business Integration Server customers will receive entitlement to either: 1) WebSphere Process Server and WebSphere Integration Developer; or 2) WebSphere Message Broker. Some WBI Server customers deployed WebSphere Business Integration Message Broker instead of WebSphere InterChange Server or WebSphere MQ Workflow. These customers will continue entitlement to the follow-on release of that product (WebSphere Message Broker V6) with the equivalent extended time period to complete the migration. Those customers who have deployed both WebSphere Message Broker and one or more of WebSphere InterChange Server and WebSphere MQ Workflow should contact their sales representative to understand their extended entitlement options.

Note 2: For WebSphere Business Integration Server Foundation authorizations acquired prior to September 12, 2005, customers are eligible to receive extended entitlement to WebSphere Process Server at no additional charge. For WebSphere Business Integration authorizations acquired on or after September 12, 2005, customers will be required to pay an upgrade fee to obtain extended entitlement to WebSphere Process Server. Customers should contact their IBM Sales Representative to process a special bid for the upgrade fee.

Note 3: April 25, 2006, customers are eligible to receive extended entitlement to WebSphere Process Server for z/OS at no additional charge. For authorizations acquired on or after April 25, 2006, customers will be required to pay an upgrade fee to obtain extended entitlement to WebSphere Process Server for z/OS, and should contact their IBM Sales Representative to process a special bid for the upgrade fee.
