CARSTARIAN SYSTEM OF WRITING.

M. DOLBEAR.

PROFESSOR OF PENMANSHIP.

EARNS THE attention of the public to this highly refined system of Writing, the intimate merits of which can only be appreciated by an examination of its principles, to its unanimous recommendation by a meeting of the most eminent citizens in London, adopted by the Royal University of Finsland, and universally patronized by Teachers, Merchants, Ladies and Gentlemen, and Literary Institutions of the first responsibility wherever it has been introduced.

This system was never taught in the United States, until 1830—since which time, it has been taught in New York with unparalleled success.

Mr. D. first had the pleasure of introducing it into Kentucky, last winter, and has since communicated its principles to many Ladies and Gentlemen, as well as various Literary Institutions in different parts of the S. B.—Ladies are instructed in a new, rapid and truly fashionable style of writing—by method so simple and novel, as renders the practice of it highly interesting.

Gentlemen are instructed in a manner calculated to give them a perfect command of hand, as well as an elegant and rapid business style of writing. By this system, all cramping or pinching of the hand is entirely removed, so that the most illegible script may be exchanged in a few easy lessons, for a style free and elegant.

To justify what is above stated, and to remove all prejudice caused, by preceding teachers of this art,

Mr. D. annually invites the Ladies and Gentlemen of New Orleans, and the neighboring Cities and Towns, to call and examine his plan of instruction, and also, specimens of the rapid improvement of Ladies and Gentlemen (from the age of 8 to 45 years), who have received his instruction.

Classes will be arranged, through the day, and at night, to accommodate students, professional Gentlemen, and men of business. Ladies and Gentlemen will be permitted to form classes at their residence, or attend at his writing establishment.

Persons deficient in pennaking, can be taught that art in one lesson. It is desired, that all wishing instruction, should make immediate application. Public Institutions, will be attended on liberal terms. Terms made known, specimens exhibited, and the plan of instruction explained at his Academy, corner of Chartres and Coni streets, over the fancy store.

CERTIFICATES.

FROM THE HON. RICHARD M. JOHNSON.

OAKLAND, 24th October, 1831.

Messrs. Thomas and Rufus Dolbear, visit the City of New Orleans, and the South, for the purpose of seeing the countries, and giving lessons upon a new mode of manuscript writing, by which our community has received great benefit. It has given us very great pleasure to become acquainted with these respectable, agreeable, interesting and intelligent gentlemen, and feel great pleasure in the opportunity to recommend them earnestly to the patronage and confidence of all respectable families and honorable men.

RH. M. JOHNSON.

LOUISVILLE, December 17th, 1831.

On invitation, we whose names are subscribed, met, for the purpose of giving our opinions on the merits of a System of Penmanship, which we consider highly meritorious, and which has been, for some time, instructing the improvement of the specimens shown.

From an examination of the specimens shown, and on explanation of the system, we have no hesitation in declaring it the best of any hitherto offered to the public—and most likely to produce with a certain degree of facility, a style of writing.

Amongst the number of specimens shown, were several persons of different ages, from 8 to 45 years, and we were much pleased to find the effect of the system in removing, even with persons so advanced in life, a bold and cramped manner of writing, while a freedom of style was acquired equally applicable to the various purposes of the counting room and parlor.
