THE PROSPECT AT WASHINOTON.

It has not been often, in late days, that the telegraph has brought us signs of cheer in the direction of Washington. That electric Mercary has seemed as if bound tight and fast in Radical service, and for some time has been anything but a messenger of good tidings or a prophecier of smooth things. But for a few days his messages have been less sinister. The gloom that deepened over the future at the assembling of Congress is somewhat mitigated, the clouds break here and there, and though by no means dispersed, though still heavy and wrathful, there are rifts through which filter flecks of annahine and what, let us trust, are the educes of the "silver lining."

The open issue made in the House by Mr. Raymond with Mr. Stevens is, if we mistake not, full of fovorable significance. Mr. Raymond is a chrewd, cautious, vigilant politican: a Republican, but not fauntical is party lander and manager, but not blindly devoted to the principles of his party, or to the justify itself when the popular tide may set ugainst and his political interests may must be cord with devotion to it. No one need be told what Mr. Stevens is. He is the personification of the mose vindeative and removedees phase of Kalicalism. He is for territorudizing the Southern States, for perpetuating disruption of the mose vindeative and removedees phase of Kalicalism. THE PROSPECT AT WASHINGTON.

One evening last work and Irish gentlemign. Carrying on business in Liverpool, and well-knows on the Exchange, previous to going home to his residence at Edgehill, had occasion to call at the bar-room of a highly respectable one-to-hotel in Dale street, which at the time was considerably crowded by gentlemen in his own position in society—a very respectable one. The gentlemen referred to was carrying a doubte-barrelied fowling-piece, which had been undergoing some repairs. Among those present in the room was a tall, sallow individual, of unmistikable "Yankee" aspect, but of gentlemanite person and attre. Un observing the gentleman who carried the fowling-piece, he addressed him and said, if suppose you are a fandatal. The other replied that he was not, and the street of the other replied that he was not, and the street of the other replied that he was not, and the street of the other replied that he was not, and the street of the other replied that he was not, and the street of the other, at the same time exclaim in the face of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, at the same time exclaim the street of the other, and the street of Mayo discount time I treat any one who will declare himself and active of Mayo discount the street of the other, and we was been in New York, and thus I treat any one who will declare himself and active of Mayo discount the street of the other, and we was been in New York, and thus I treat any one who will declare himself and active of any of the world by a bloom one, accompanying the the street of the other of the ot
