NEW-ORLEANS:
WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 26, 1839.

FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
HENRY CLAY,
OF KENTUCKY.

Subject to the decision of a National Convention.

THE SUB-TREASURY AND THE ADMINISTRATION.

The great lobby house of the present administration, was in the above recited speech of Gen. Jackson, declared to be a place for the purpose of transacting the business of the government, but exclusively. The executive family and lobby should not participate, and be one. To have one of the organs of the executive, and the lobby, and the concerns of the financial fiddler of a blundering administration, one would imagine that it was inevitably the most wonderful piece of knavish and bad policy ever contrived by the wit of man. But, unfortunately for our confidence either in the good faith of the administration or the excellence of its schemes, it so happens that this very measure, which was proposed in 1834 by Gen. Jackson, and has been recommended with undue anxiety and earnestness from the executive chair ever since, is now denounced by the whole of the lobby of Washington, and by every member of the house of representatives in congress who is a mere creature or partizan of the administration.

In looking over the list of the yeas and nays on Gen'l Jackson's schemes, it is amazing to find, that the latter, the lobby, and the whole swarm of the executive creatures, should be found voting with a unanimity which was not to be misunderstood by all the southern and southwestern states. The great plan was to make the sub-treasury a part of the executive machine, and to put it under the control of the lobby. The great plan was to make the sub-treasury a part of the executive machine, and to put it under the control of the lobby. The great plan was to make the sub-treasury a part of the executive machine, and to put it under the control of the lobby.

Never superficial men seem to be tickled by the British provinces as to further ecclesiastical intelligence. Of the old Free and Accepted Masons of Upper Canada, and there is not a word in the whole paragraph.

Mr. Clay.

At Friday's 4th instant, the Rhode Island whigs elected a governor by a majority of 1,500 votes. The democratic convention, via Nathaniel Ruggles, James F. Simmons, Wilkins Anthony and Byrp Potter. All good and true friends of Henry Clay, but the whigs have elected their governor by a majority of 1,500 votes.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT MOBILE.

The following is the account of the late fire at Mobile:

"On Saturday morning last, between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, a fire was discovered in the store of Messrs. Chas. Hilder & Brothers, on Water street, which, before it could be arrested, destroyed the whole of the block, from the corner of Water and Commerce streets to the corner of Water and St. Joseph streets, including the store of Messrs. Hilder & Brothers, Messrs. Hall & Hodges, Messrs. Hall & Hodges, Messrs. Hall & Hodges
