THE UNION—IT MUST BE PRESERVED.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 19, 1834.

Yesterday's mail supplies New York dates of the 4th inst. The Boston Intelligencer has no very interesting character on hand, but particulars of Lafayette's burial, which we transfer to our columns.

A correspondent of the Louisiana charges us with speaking of imaginary phantoms. As the author of that article is a cheerful and profound writer, we did no more make use of the expression than we spoke of liquid water or burning fire. We spoke of the imaginary dangers, conjured up by the necromantic opposition to frighten the people. And we again assert that their attention is not to be diverted from the true perils by such bodiless cheats; minnies and children are not to be alarmed by scarecrows. Did we feel the inclination we could pull down the pretty little dovetailed machinery on which the ingenious writer builds his threats of the fall of states and empires of despotism. But we feel no particular desire of becoming a career against a windmill: we wish the combatant a measurable reward for his laborious task: requiescat in pace, with his ephemeral honors on his head.

Those of our cotemporaries, who have published the inspector's order enjoining on the legion, to turn out, on the celebration of Lafayette's obsequies, are requested to alter the order so as to make it read Saturday instead of Sunday, inasmuch as the ceremonies cannot be performed on the latter day, unless the city council recommend the closing of the counting houses and stores! Else the solemnity would be but an hypocrisy, or a partial commemoration at best.

We understand that in the parish of Ouachita, Judge Dawkins has gained by 21. The returns are now complete, leaving Mr White's majority in the state, 1602 votes.—[Courier.]

LAFAYETTE—THE DYING SCENE.

An apparent amelioration had taken place in the poor invalid's sufferings on Monday but at midnight all the symptoms returned with redoubled vigor. A dreadful fever, oppression of the chest, great difficulty of breathing, with a death-like cough.

"Where to?" a poultich was applied on the chest

"What are you applying there," inquired the patient—"is it another blister?"

"No general, a poultice."

"Enough, enough."

These were the last words of Lafayette. The death rattle soon followed—the dying man breathed more freely for a few moments, and then serenely sunk to death, in the arms of his honorable M. Cloquet.

The numerous and extraordinary scenes with which his noble name is so preeminently connected in the old and new worlds, might have induced the prevailing belief that he was older. But his placid benignity of countenance and disposition, with his natural constitution and temperate habits had taught his friends to hope that his invaluable life might still have been prolonged, perhaps yet to witness the consummation of his benevolent and patriotic wishes.

"Since the fatal day of Dulong's funeral, I have seen him a few times," says our Paris correspondent; and as I frequently and fearfully anticipated in my correspondence with the True Sun, I saw there was no hope.

A few days before his death a British gentleman of my acquaintance visited him in his sick room. They spoke of America, and the veteran's eyes sparkled with their wonted fire; they alluded to France and he mournfully shook his head—

"Beloved but betrayed country," exclaimed he, "I fear that that yet many struggles to undergo ere thy goal of liberty is attained."

During the last illness of the fated Father of the new dynasty, not a single message was sent from the Court to inquire after the illustrious sufferer. But now, alas, the Chateau is like a house of mourning, and the ministerial papers are redolent of grief for the loss of—King Leopold's son!

FUNERAL OF LAFAYETTE—MEETING OF AMERICAN CITIZENS.

By the ship Manchester, Captain Swift, from Havre, we have received our Paris papers of the 24th of May.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

FUNERAL OF LAFAYETTE.

From an early hour on the morning of the 22d of May, the Rue St. Honore, in which the hotel of the late lamented Lafayette is situated, and every street and passage in its vicinity, were crowded with citizens of Paris, hastening to pay the last tribute of respect attachment to the illustrious deceased.

The funeral ceremony, says Galignani's Messenger, from the character of the deceased, both as a member of the Chamber of Deputies and as General, was invested by the Government with all the imposing pomp which the attendance of numerous bodies of military never fails to give to processions of this description, while the attendance of the National Guard, who came forward in immense numbers, to pay this last public office to this parting act of homage to their venerable chief, and the crowded state of the streets leading to the Church of the Assomption, where the funeral ceremony was to be performed, and from thence along the Rue de Rivoli, the entire length of the Boulevards, and every spot from which the procession was to pass, showed the extent of the knowledge, and the affectionate esteem with which the deceased was regarded by every class.

At seven o'clock, the members of the various Deputations who were to take part in the Procession began to arrive at the house, which was handsomely hung with black. Among those were members of staff officers, of the troops of the municipal guards.—Detachments of infantry were placed at the Chamber of Honor in the commencement of the Rue Rivoli, the Place St. Florentin, and other points by which the procession was to pass.

About half an hour after nine the body was brought down and placed in the hearse, which was decorated with twelve trophies, and there at each corner it was surmounted by plumes, and had the letter L. on various parts of the drapery, and was drawn by four black horses. The cordons of the hearse were held by four persons of distinction, friends of the deceased. About a few minutes spent in preliminary arrangements, the funeral march struck up, and the cortege began to move. The procession was preceded by muffled drums, detachments of the various legions of the National Guards of Paris, and of the Cuirassieurs. The 21st Regiment of the Line, and a regiment of Lancers. The Hearse followed, which was immediately succeeded by the Deputations of the Chambers of Deputies and Peers; other deputations followed from various quarters, among whom we perceived members of the particularly Americans and Poles. These were immediately preceded by a battalion of the National Guard, and the remainder was followed by other detachments of the National Guard and troops of the Line, headed by muffled drums, military band, two pieces of cannon, and a detachment of the 1st regiment of Artillery, with a numerous band of music of the National Guards. Four of the Royal carriages, each once of the General, followed by another of Lancers, seven private carriages, and a body of the National Guards brought up the procession.

The streets were crowded, and the small space left for the military occasioned considerable confusion previous to arriving at the Church, for want of room the hearse being stopped on one occasion more than a quarter of an hour. The coffin was then taken into the Church, and the funeral ceremony being performed, the procession again proceeded; and, notwithstanding the incalculable crowds assembled, has passed the whole of Paris, and is now (as we are going to press) at the Boulevard, with the most perfect order and regularity.

The Monitors, says the same Gazette, on leaving the Council Tuesday the King on the preceding day at the Tuileries, went in a body to make a visit of condolence to the family of Gen. Lafayette. They were received by M. George W. Lafayette, and conducted by him to view the body. An immense number of persons of all classes called in the course of the day and inscribed their names as participators in the general grief.

At a meeting of the citizens of the United States of America in Paris, held on the 21st at the Hotel of the American Legation, to take into consideration the most appropriate manner of expressing their sorrow for the loss the United States have sustained by the death of the illustrious and good Lafayette—Thomas P. Barton, Esq. Chargé d'Affaires of the United States was called to the Chair, and Jonathan Bradford, Esq. American Consul, was appointed Secretary. The following resolutions were offered and unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we have heard of the death of our illustrious fellow citizen, the virtuous Lafayette, with feelings of the deepest sorrow and regret—

Resolved, That the citizens of the United States, now in Paris, will attend in a body the funeral of Lafayette, in testimony of the high respect they entertain for his exalted character, as the undeviating friend and defender of the liberties of their country, and of those of the human race.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to address a letter of condolence to the family of Gen. Lafayette, expressive of their deep sympathy in the afflicting dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to visit them.

Resolved, That as a further timony of their high admiration for the virtues and perfect consistency of character of Lafayette, through a long life, and under the most arduous circumstances, they will wear crape upon the left arm for three months.

On the motion of Mr. Brooks, seconded by Mr. Adams, it was then

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be communicated by the Secretary of this meeting to the family of the illustrious deceased, and that the proceedings of the meeting be published.

On the motion of Mr. French, seconded by Mr. Blow, it was

Resolved, That the United States, as far as they are represented at this meeting, each furnish a member to constitute the committee to address the letter of condolence to the family of General Lafayette, whereupon, the following gentlemen, representing seventeen States of the Union, were, on the motion of Mr. Hayne, seconded by Alex. Claxton, Esq., U. S. N. named that committee:—

Dr. Wood, of Maine.
N. Niles, Esq. of Vermont.
Charles Brooks, Esq. of Massachusetts.
J. Dennison, Esq of Connecticut.
Mr. Burns and Mr. Brevoort, of New York.
Philip Kearney, Esq. of New Jersey.
Dr. A. B. Tucker, of Pennsylvania.
Alexander Claxton, Esq. U. S. N. of Maryland.
Rev. F. S. Mines, of Virginia.
Arthur P. Hayne, Esq. of South Carolina.
Dr. L. A. Dugas, of Georgia.
W. P. D'Arnaumont, Esq. of Indiana.
Dr. A. P. Elston, of Kentucky.
J. S. Pomer, Esq. of Mississippi, and
D. Urquhart, Esq. of Louisiana.

On the motion of Mr. Townsend, Mr. Barton and Mr. Bradford were ex-officio placed on the Committee. After a short adjournment, the Chairman, in the name of the Committee, reported a letter of condolence to the family of General Lafayette, which, was unanimously adopted. On the motion of Mr. Hayne, seconded by Mr. Brooks, it was resolved. That an eulogy on the illustrious character of the revered Lafayette, be delivered before the American citizens at Paris. On the motion of Mr. Brewster, seconded by Mr. Niles, it was resolved, That five genl men be named by the Chair, to constitute a Committee of Arangements, to provide for the execution of the preceding resolution whereupon, Mr Brewster, Mr. Niles, Mr. Atherton, Mr. Brevoort, and Mr. Brooks, were named that Committee. It was then

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be communicated by its Secretary to the Legation of the United States at Paris, with the request that they may be recorded on the books thereof—and the meeting adjourned.

SAVANNAH, July 10.

Launch of Mr. G. B. Lamar's Iron Steam Boat.—Agreeably to notice given, yesterday morning, at half past nine, Mr. Lamar's Iron Steam Boat was launched from the ship yard of Mr. John Cant, and the first iron steam boat ever built in the United States floated on the bosom of the Savannah. She glided into the water with an easy and graceful motion, amid the cheers of a vast concourse of spectators who had assembled to witness the novelty of an Iron Boat. The plates were cast in England, and imported last winter by Mr. Lamar, and they were put together under the superintendence of Mr. John Cant. She is a beautiful model of a boat, and sat as lightly on the water as a duck. Her draft of water will be very light, and this is the grand desideratum. If this boat succeed, and there is no reason why she will not, the people of Georgia will be indebted to the enterprise and public spirit of Mr. Lamar, for pointing out a new method by which the many streams which intersect their State, which are now useless for ordinary steam boat navigation, will be converted into navigable high-ways. The draft of water of iron boats is so much less than that of wooden ones of the same dimensions, that they will have a great advantage over them during those months when the Rivers are low.

Just as the boat touched the water, with all due ceremonies, it was christened the John Randolph.

The Dublin Chronicle says, that American manufactured cottons, are underselling the English article of the market of the United States. They are now doing the same at Valparaiso; where, from the 1st of January to the 30th of August, 1833, there arrived in that short period at that port 2603 bales, each of 1000 yards per bale. They are of the pure gold the Yankees receive for it, they run across to China, and thus double their profits. All owing, says the editor, to the suicidal policy of the corn laws excluding cheap foreign grain, and forcing other nations to manufacture.
