

THE DAILY BEE

Our Northern friends, manage their property to possess, and their professed abhorrence of Southern institutions, cannot respect the American nation of Jefferson's aggressions. We would have been glad to see the project of the acquisition of Cuba, the arguments advanced for the whole country, there is important commercial advantage, and of which the North would reap a heavy share, in the event that Cuba should become the property of the United States. We perceive that other Northern papers have examined the subject and arrived at similar conclusions.

The acquisition of Cuba is a national interest, and the American people should be made aware of the advantages which will accrue to the United States in the event of its acquisition.
