THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTY AND THE REFORM MOVEMENT.

The names of the Committee of Fifty authorized by the meeting of citizens held at the Mechanics' Institute, for the purpose of setting on foot a movement to check the abuses which have grown up in the administration of city affairs, and initiate a general reform therein, are now before the community, and the committee has been organized for immediate work. There are some excellent names on the list of members, but we cannot say this of all of them. Nevertheless, we shall watch the committee in the performance of the duty assigned to it, under the conviction that a majority of those who compose it will vigorously carry forward the work they have undertaken. The Mayor and his colleagues of the City Council promise to give every facility to the committee in the examination of the books at the City Hall, and otherwise enable them to make a thorough investigation of our municipal affairs. Some of the Administrators have already pointed out where retrenchments might begin. Administrator Lowrey of the Police Department, says he thinks economy or retrenchment might be made in every department—that the number of employés might be reduced, that the purchase of supplies might be made on a cash basis—that a saving of sixty thousand dollars per annum might be effected on the subsistence of prisoners and fifty thousand dollars might be saved by reducing the police force from a hundred to a hundred and fifty men. The opinion of Administrator Lewis is a sufficient answer to the assertions of the Republican of yesterday with regard to the economy and efficiency of the police force, as at present organized. The Administrator of Public Accounts—Mr. Shaw professes not to fear an investigation of the acts of himself and colleagues, and thinks "the verdict of the committee will remove the general charge made against them of extravagance and mismanagement, that is extravagance in the sense of corrupt and predicate expenditures." He also tells us Administrator Lewis does, that a large saving can be effected by the city estab[illegible] a mill of its own and maintaining its own prisoners instead of sending them to the Parish Prison, where the city is charged for each prisoner more than three times what it would cost to keep him at Workhouse.

Mr Shaw thinks that one of the largest leaks is in the purchase of supplies—the city always paying more than their value. This system is fashionable to overcharge the city, and that the city ought to be able to buy at cheaper prices.

The Administrator of Assessments, Mr. J. Bonzano, has also some very good suggestions to make to the committee, not only by his utterances, as published in the press of yesterday. He thinks measures ought to be adopted by which the back taxes might be collected and taxes to become due more promptly collected than at present. Salaries might be reduced, says the Administrator of Assessments, of which asked what plan he would suggest, whereby the city's credit might be restored, the same officer answered that the expenditures of the city should be reduced and the Administrators bonded by a sum not to exceed the sum fixed. He recommends also the establishment of a sinking fund for the redemption of the enormous debt which is eating up all that we can take in from taxes.

THE LATE TRAGEDY IN HAVANA.

In another column will be found a letter from Havana to the New York World, containing the particulars of the tragic event there, which resulted in the execution of eight young men, students of the medical school in the University of Havana, convicted of desecrating the tombs of Gonzalez Castanon and Ricardo Guzman, in the public cemetery of that city. We purposely refrained from commenting upon the occurrence until the details of the trial had reached us. We could not believe that these youths had been made to suffer the penalty of death merely for indulging in an act of mischief, however aggravated, but the facts as set forth by this correspondent leave no room for doubting that they fell victims to the passionate hate of the Spanish officers rather than expiated a crime deserving of capital punishment. At the same time we cannot palliate the offence which these students were guilty. We have always understood that the dead, and desecration of their graves by other marks of insult and hatred must be condemned by all people pretending to civilization. These acts were calculated, and no doubt intended to provoke the Spaniards in Cuba to fighting on the side of the mother country, but they sink into insignificance when compared with the demoniac vengeance taken by the volunteers upon the unoffending students. Of course the trial was resorted to for the latter, before a military court, was a mere form. The sentence appears to have been determined upon in advance, and the crime can be but one opinion in civilized countries with regard to it: the conception of a penalty so disproportionate to the offence must be reprobated by the severest terms of censure. It is impossible to justify it. The [illegible] must be by the government of Spain, which [illegible] a body of soldiers who do not seem to be restrained by the rules and regulations of modern warfare, but are the slaves of their passions. The massacre of the Prussian Communists by Gen. Sheridan on the plains of the West, and the shooting at cannon's mouth of the rebels in the East Indies, by order of the British Government, was less cruel because necessary to be pleased as a justification for those acts, and it might also be urged that the Moors were prevented by making terrible examples. The same plea can be advanced by Spain. The mutilation of these tombs we prefer to think was the prompting of malignant hearts, which has had such an effect on his mind, as to deem it proper to do what we think is the probable cause that has produced such an erroneous impression.

It is said that a German newspaper which he keeps about him wherein it is stated that the Masonic Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, had retained Mr. Castellanos to prosecute the case.

From that time his mind has no doubt constantly dwelt upon his fancied injury, and the burning of some building in the building of Mr. Frank Bradford, No. 95 Chestnut, which had been accidentally set on fire by a child that was entrusted with a lamp to fix.

Eighth District Court.—Where is the defect that puts [illegible] upon the public and the owner of real estate in this parish. He [illegible] mortgage it, and asks the Recorder of Mortgages to give him a certificate that it is free of incumbrance. There happens to be one record in the office a judgment rendered by the District Court, in the parish of Caddo, against a mercantile firm in New Orleans, for $30,000, of which one was [illegible] another Mr. John Williamson is a member. The Recorder of Mortgages refuses to give any certificate clear of this, in which it is stated that said judgment is of record and Mr. Williamson, who owns the property, appears debts of another. Of course no property has attorney, R. Howard McCalel, Esq., and constrained to go before the Eighth District, and took a mandamus, to compel the Recorder of Mortgages to issue such a certificate as the relator wants, and he issued it accordingly. But why should a citizen be at expense to cure the result of defective laws, or a defective administration of the laws?

Albert R. Whitney, owner of one half interest in the North Louisiana Journal, published at Shreveport, in the parish of Caddo, and formerly known as the Texas Gazette, informs the Eighth District Court that the paper has a contract for publishing the laws of the State, and his complains that parties owning the other half of the paper, who are not named in his petition, have entered into a secret agreement to annul his contract, without accounting to him for any of the money, wherefore he prays for a writ to enjoin the State Auditor from issuing warrants to any of the owners of the paper until their respective interests in the concern and in the drafts upon the Treasury issued to pay for the work are determined.

First District Court.—Saturday, Dec. 9.—Several weeks ago a young man named D. F. Leschinsky, who had been on the police force while on it arrested a sailor named Charles Hauser, for being intoxicated, and beat him so badly on the way to the lock-up that he expired immediately after. Subsequently he was tried for the homicide and convicted of murder without capital punishment.

At the trial he had have no counsel and defended himself. Since pending, Mr. Foley, an attorney, took the case in charge and moved for a new trial for the prisoner on the ground of insanity, prima facie case of mental disorder being made out. Judge Abell appointed a medical commission consisting of Drs. E. D. Beech, W. H. Berthelot and James R. Cooper, to examine the prisoner's mental condition and report accordingly. The following is the material part of the report.

That we visited the said Leschinsky individually, without making known to him ourselves or our business. We found the said Leschinsky perfectly sane, except on one subject, viz: Masonry. Upon this subject he is a monomaniac. He considers his trial and conviction, to use his own language, nothing but a farce, a malicious prosecution; that he has no chance of justice should there be Masons on the jury, and he is satisfied that the Masons as a body have conspired against him. He says he knows Judge Abell is a Mason, and that all his rulings were against him.

Although it may not be necessary to enter into a dissertation as to the cause which has had such an effect on his mind, we deem it proper to state what we think is the probable cause that has produced such an erroneous impression.

It is stated in a German newspaper which he keeps about him wherein it is stated that the Masonic Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, had retained Mr. Castellanos to prosecute the case.

From that time his mind has no doubt constantly dwelt upon his fancied injury, and the burning of some building in the building of Mr. Frank Bradford, No. 95 Chestnut, which had been accidentally set on fire by a child that was entrusted with a lamp to fix.

New York, Dec. 9.—The Committee of International, who made application for permission to parade to-morrow, received the following from Governor Hoffman's Private Secretary: "I am directed by the Governor to say that the law places the whole matter of parades on Sunday in the hands of the police authorities." The committee met to-day, and denunciatory addresses were delivered and a committee appointed to forward a protest to the people, which reported, and the meeting adopted the following:

"We, citizens of the United States and members of the International Workingmen's Association, intending to commemorate in a quatral procession both our brother members executed lately in France, and having applied to the police for a escort, have been refused and prevented from parading. The Committee of Arrangements, protest against the action of the police, but being in favor of peal to the people will submit, but appeal to the people, whom we, the working people, expect justice, and hereby announce a parade on a week day, and have selected Sunday, following, no more solemn occasion than a funeral procession for our brother members—victims in the cause of humanity. Further we do see nothing in the city charter, the constitution, or the usages of the city of New York, or the United States, that forbids our procession, and we believe the act of the police authorities to be despotic, tyrannical, arbitrary and unnecessary, making the police instruments of oppression rather than protection."

During the meeting there was much discussion about changing the day for parade from Sunday, as the specific objection of the Police Commissioners was on account of the day. A resolution was carried to have the parade on Christ mas day. Subsequently it was decided to refer the matter to the Federal Council for approval.

AMUSEMENTS.

The week just closed has been one of the most remarkable weeks remembered, in this city, for the excellence of the companies playing at every one of the theatres where the English is the language of the dramas.

The entertainments at the Varieties have been brilliant, the plays presented being "The Coquettes," "Money" and "Camille." The latter, as rendered by Miss Dargan, is a much less offensive character than it is as impersonated by less refined but more sensational artists. Since Ellen Tree was in her prime treading the boards, there has been no superior here to Miss Dargan, in womanly parts, and rarely an equal. While saying this much of that very capable and accomplished lady, it is due to every member of the company, with scarcely an exception, to add that it could be only a hypercritical taste that would ask a change. To-morrow night the renowned John Owen will be behind the footlights, at this house, giving his incomparable rendition of "Solon Shingle."

The patrons of the Academy of Music have had Mrs. Bowers in tragedy and other serious dramas, during the week, and, notwithstanding the extraordinary attractions to amusement seekers elsewhere, the admirers of her peculiarly forcible style and her singular faculty for emotional expression have not allowed themselves to be drawn from their allegiance to her. They have nightly attended to witness her impressive impersonations as Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, Lady Audley and other characters to which her style is adapted. To-night she plays Lucretia Borgia and the evening's entertainment closes with Garrick's arrangement of "Taming of the Shrew," a very attractive bill it must be admitted. On Monday night Mrs. B. will give something which, if we mistake not, is a novelty here, "Amy Robsart," a dramatization of Scott's great noval, "Kenilworth."

Certes no one can justly blame Mr. De Bar, in his direction of the St. Charles, for failing in endeavors to elevate the public taste, which, in the drama, at least, has for some time past manifested vicious tendencies. Succeeding the great treat afforded by the engagement of Mr. Forrest, the frequenters of the house have had an opportunity during the last fortnight of witnessing the classic performances of Miss Coombe's company of Comedians, than which we have never had any combination more admirable for those qualities that attract intellectual people to the play-house. It must be regretted that Mr. DeBar's enterprise has not been better rewarded pecuniarily than it has been, during the engagement of these ladies and gentlemen, which closed last night. To-night Mr. Gleason, the very popular Treasurer of the theatre, takes a benefit, when the versatile Collins sisters, Mr. John Collins and Mr. DeBar himself will appear, the bill for the occasion being "Check Mate," "His Last Legs" and "Toodles," a feast most indubitably.

THE HAVANA MASSACRE.

Further Particulars of the Execution of the Medical Students—A Terribly sad Scene—Tragic Incidents—The Feeling in Havana.

Mail advices from Havana bring full particulars of the recent troubles in that city. Another tragedy of blood, even more shocking and revolting than past scenes enacted by the Spanish volunteers—the power behind the throne in the badly governed capital of Cuba—has been performed with all the hideous features indicated by the telegraph. The students of the medical department of the Havana University are, it seems, in the habit of assembling at the dead-house of the Havana Cemetery at stated times for the purpose of witnessing the dissection of dead bodies brought there for the most part from the government or charity hospital, which lies near the cemetery. Thursday afternoon of November 29 was one of these stated times, and consequently the senior class of the medical department of the university, consisting of over fifty young Cubans, members of the best and wealthiest families of the island, and not one over 20 years of age, repaired to the dead-house in question as it was the turn of the class to attend. Owing to the sickness of a professor there was, however, no dissection and lecture, so the class was dismissed as soon as it presented itself; but the students, instead of returning to their homes, remained over the cemetery, and finally assembled, almost in mass, before the tomb which contained the remains of the Havana Spaniard who was killed in Key West in January, 1869, by some Cuban refugees. Don Gonzalo Castanon. The gentleman, editor of the Havana Voz de Cuba, it will be remembered, had gone to the place where he met his death for the purpose of fighting a duel with the editor of the small Cuban paper published there, but failed of getting accommodated, his cowardly quarrelling with those of the "fighting class" drove on the writhen's stand to-day. The doctors seem to agree that Gen. Ketchum did not die from a natural cause.
