Preface

The purpose of this book is to inform you about the True collective history, reality, evolutionary priorities and shaky future of the Human species. Truths that have been kept from the majority of Humankind across the Globe.

Psychological Disclaimer: This book is for everyone from all walks of life, races, creeds, genders, affiliations and classes, but not if you cannot digest truth well, or as the saying goes, “handle the truth”. If you're brainwashed and close-minded to the point where truth is rejected by your mind, as happens to many, then you may need some sort of psychological prepping before embarking on such an enlightening journey.

It is not an easy task for the Human mind to change hardwired belief systems, even if flawed. So, as you read this book it is strongly suggested that you be open minded, spirited and most importantly, logical.

“We learn something every day, and lots of times it's that what we learned the day before was wrong.” Bill Vaughan

“Man's mind, once stretched by a new idea, never regains its original dimensions.” Oliver Wendell Holmes

“Minds are like parachutes, they only function when they are open.”
Thomas Dewar

Note to the Readers of this book: This non-conforming writing style is one in which enlightenment and positive thinking is in the forefront of every sentence and sentiment. Language and writing affects the mind on a subconscious level and so, We should revolutionize Our literature and language as part of the Global, Human Project to affect change, Evolve and Progress.

Therefore, words that you usually find capitalized may not be, to diminish the virtual importance. GOoD (and other words) will be written as such to show the link between the two words (Good and GOD). “GOD will be written in all caps to show utmost importance and praise. The “E” in “rEvolutionary” is capitalized to show a link between “revolutionary” and “evolutionary”.

Especially important is not capitalizing the pronoun “I”, which in the English language we’re told should be capitalized when referring to ourselves/oneself. This is clearly egotistical in thought and fuels individualism, the hallmark of capitalism, while reducing the importance of the Whole, of Us, We and Our, which we’re told to leave in lower case letters. Subconsciously it gives the mind an internal rule that in time becomes ingrained, which impulses a natural propensity to think of oneself as more than others.

It may seem like a miniscule detail but the subconscious mind dissects every action and makes assumptions that become chiseled into Our mindsets and principles. With that in mind, We should not continue to capitalize a word that refers to oneself and not words that refer to more important wholes, as Family, Community, Nation, World, All, etc.

“As a man thinketh, so is he.” – James Allen

True history, knowledge and World perspective are critical variables in any equation and action that seeks to make a substantial, long term, evolutionary impact on Humankind.

The key to a purposeful and progressive Life is how much true and evolutionary-relative information you have received throughout your existence. Also, how your brain has been able to process and cope not only emotionally but psychologically. Righteous actions are all based on how much true-positive information We posses, because if We have negative variables in our thought process due to misinformation and flawed models of thought; We will then naturally be flawed in Our choices and actions and not even know it.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Evolutionary perspective is key to overstanding (not simply understanding) the importance of every action throughout our precious and miraculous lives as Human Lifeforms in this chaotic and indifferent existence.

“You must not for one instant give up the effort to build new lives for yourselves. Creativity means to push open the heavy, groaning doorway to life. This is not an easy struggle. Indeed, it may be the most difficult task in the world, for opening.” Daisaku Ikeda

Intro

Contrary to what We have been led to believe, a “Utopian Society” is possible on Earth.

Looking at the current state of chaos in the World and what Humankind has been going through for millenniums now, although centuries ago the art of Cooperation and Unity had been mastered; We need to ask the question of “Why are We caught in this unending hell despite the existence of such technological advances, inventions, innovations and the unquestionable and undeniable ability to immediately and decisively eradicate World poverty, inequality, suffering and unnecessary deaths?”

Countless technological leaps are made every day and providing for All of Humankind is a simple task that can be achieved with not much resources or labor. We have machines today that do in 1 minute what took 100 workers 1 week to do centuries ago. Machines extract and create more in less time and using less energy. Food and resources is abundant enough to feed more than twice the current World Population; so why are there still People starving all over the planet?

The big culprit and answer is the “capitalist and monetary system,” which only seeks profit and in which there must and will always be inequality, exploitation, lack of Humanity and especially common sense. In capitalism, even if there is an abundance of food and there is starvation and need, it will actually sit there and rot, if the needy cannot pay the price. Capitalism more than anything holds Humankind in a system of inequality, individualism and suffering, instead of allowing Civilization to simply do what is sensible, intelligent and fair for All.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Being a byproduct of egoism, capitalism naturally impulses individualism, consumerism, separatism, xenophobia and violence in the World. Currently, capitalism can be defined as an instrument of the ruling class for solely maintaining economic control and subjugation of the suffering Majority World. The wealth colonization and slave labor created carries on as capital in the fortunes of the descendants of every single person that benefited from the franchise of slavery and exploitation.

Most plantation and slave owners of the past acquired vast areas of land and wealth only by successful treachery and practices and it is all being passed down from generation to generation. With the constantly growing economic divide, Poor People may never be able to get out of poverty. This is outrageous for Humankind to allow and condone.

Just about every current peril on this Earth can be directly linked to capitalism and the most viable solution is World Wide Unity and the sharing of resources. All of the Planet's resources and energies need to be put to the unified well-being of All People and capitalism will never allow Us to accomplish all that needs to be done to save the planet and Humankind.

Only decades away future generations may literally be dying by the millions from an un-kept and neglected planet, due to the constant depletion of Our vital protective ozone layer. Planet Earth will one day very soon, become uninhabitable. Increasing temperatures and the ensuing environmental reactions like melting ice caps are already causing waves of mega-storm after mega-storm. Ozone depletion along with deforestation together combine to create a fast trip to hell on Earth, literally. It would be selfish, cowardly, irresponsible and unintelligent for Us as conscientious People to follow the ole notion of, “We didn't start the fire, it was always burning since the World was turning” - Billy Joel. It is Our obligation to out any social fires that exist, so that Our proceeding generations will have a house (Earth) to live in.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Sadly, for decades now knowledge of these environmental dangers and many more have been known and screamed out by many, but unfortunately for the ruling elites, profit and keeping the exploitative capitalist system going is the only priority. Worrying about public health and environmental safety is not a worry nowadays to “big business” since corporations easily control the decisions and rulings of the governmental institutions that regulate air, water, food, agriculture and drugs, with political influence and what else but bribes. In the U.S.A. it is the FDA (Food & Drug Administration), EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) and USDA (United States Department of Agriculture).

These institutions were set up initially to protect the People's interests and safety but like all things in a capitalist system, the rule that applies is “money talks”. For them and the corrupt politicians and supervisors that take their bribes, wealth and power is more important than Human Lives and safety.

All over the planet, globalization and inequality are easily spreading through the strong-arm tactics of organizations like the IMF (international monetary fund), WTO (world trade organization), NAFTA (north american free trade agreement) and the WB (world bank), among others, which serve as a way for the ruling elites to force and control the politics, laws, resources and economies of just about every single Nation on the Globe. Even the “united nations” and its chapters like UNICEF are only band-aids to Humanity's dilemmas and will never be allowed to affect substantial change because they are all linked to capitalist politics and corrupt profit systems.

The current situation of chaos in which Humankind finds itself in today with so much unnecessary suffering and uncountable deaths, along with possible extinction, should motivate Us All to a constant state of urgency and action towards Positive Change. As a conscious People, Civilization and Species, We must take immediate action to Unite as one World and act with Equality, Love and logic before it is too late and the Human Species becomes extinct. The current state of division amongst the Human species will surely lead to Our demise if We are not able to quickly Unite Our forces and resources in an intelligent, responsible and conscientious manner.

Let's face it, there is no good reason why the basic needs for All of Humankind are not free of charge and readily available. The Problem; We're stuck in an illogical economic system called capitalism. Why does it still remain? Simply because it impulses economic inequality and keeps the rich and their descendants at the top of society's power structure. No other reason exists, and if We really look at the big picture it is easy to see that capitalism, privatization, money, banking and especially taxes, are mass-control-tactics for new-age-enslavement. The new way for the rulers of the 20th and 21st century (1% of world population) to keep the slaves/laborers (99% of world population) in need and in-turn have you/Us do all the labor needed to sustain their reign at the top.

Soup kitchens in the U.S.A. reported that most families who go to food pantries for free food say that they are faced with the economic dilemma of just having enough money to pay rent. Shelter or food? light or gas? water or medicine? These are the decisions that the majority of Humankind (99% of the population) are forced to make every day while the only decision for the sinfully rich is "gold or platinum?" "french or italian?" "the mansion or the condominium?"

As improvements in technology and production increase so should the earnings of the labor force but if trying to maintain control of the workers, the capitalist system and its bosses have to make sure the laborers never gain enough wealth to move themselves out of poverty, need and therefore exploitation. Especially anything that gives them independence and autonomy. So land is privatized to be able to charge the new-age work-slave rent and make them give back their earnings to the ruling/upper class, who own most of the land, real-estate, stores and means of production.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

The solution and best option available to Us is simply a social system that puts Humanity, Equality, Unity and Cooperation in every thought, plan and action. Some say Socialism is the answer, others Communism and some say a balance between Socialism and capitalism. It really does not matter what We call it, the important thing is WE NEED CHANGE NOW! and a system that gives The People, especially the disfranchised, decision making power.

“Problems cannot be solved at the same level that created them.”

Albert Einstein

“As of now, the world financial system is on the brink of collapse, due to its own shortcomings. The comptroller of currency stated in 2003 that the interest on the US national debt will not be affordable in less than 10 years. This theoretically means total bankruptcy for the US economy. And its implications for the world, are immense.

In turn, the fractional reserve based monetary system is reaching its theoretical limits of expansion and the banking failures you are seeing are just the beginning. This is why inflation is skyrocketing, all debt is at record levels and the government and FED are hemorrhaging new money to bail out the corrupt system. For, the only way to keep the banks going is by making more money... the only way to make more money is to create more debt and inflation...”
End Quote. Zeitgeist Movie Addendum, Transcript.

As We can see from the above statement, the financial crisis that the U.S.A. has suffered from in the late 2000s to date, was predicted by many but no one listened. Truth & Knowledge is Power, so Read on, for Humanity needs Your Enlightenment and Help.

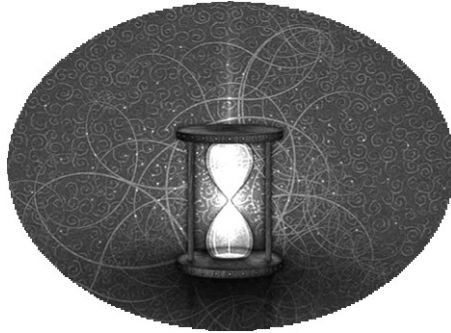

“Real knowledge is to know the extent of one’s ignorance.” Confucius

Chapter 1

Humankind: Where We are - Where We need to be

“My country is the world...and my religion is to do good” – Thomas Paine

Throughout Human history thousands of millions of innocent People have been massacred by primitive-man in his twisted, egotistical conquests for riches and power. In the start of the 21st century hundreds of millions of People still die every year unnecessarily due to classism, racism and inequality.

Look at what We have had to deal with and are still dealing with on this troubled planet with rampant chaos, suffering and violence. We need to wise up and do something about it, in essence, finalize the Struggle for World Liberation from the ignorance in “man” that breeds egoism, inequality, oppression, exploitation and death.

We casually live Life like all is fine in the World and there are no pressing issues, like a livable habitat for future generations and the need for drastic social change, to simply, save Humankind. We relax, party and purposefully waste time while consciously knowing that hundreds of millions of People, Babies, Kids, Pregnant Women, Mothers, Grandmothers, Grandfathers and the Sick, are suffering and dying. Our long-term goals must be to create as much of a Heaven as We can on this Earth, or wherever Our abilities takes Us in the cosmos as intelligent and very capable beings.

What kind of World are We leaving for Our Babies, Our Youth, Our Future? What have We done? If you believe in GOD; What if GOD asks you; "What did you do for your Brothers and Sisters on Earth while there and aware?" "What were you doing against the evils of man that you witnessed?" "How many times were you on the side of GOoD?" "How many times did you rest when you had the ability to help another - to help All?" "How many times did you remain silent and motionless while witnessing evil, sin and injustice?"

Too many People die and suffer every second unnecessarily and the time is now, or more like yester-year or rather yester-century, for GOoD to overpower evil on this forsaken planet. We cannot allow this system of World oppression and annihilation to continue. We have no choice anymore but to do whatever We have to as a People and Species, or We will have no Future. We live in a social hell and must create as much of "Heaven on Earth" as We know is possible and needed. Only Unity, Cooperation and Organization can bring about the profound transformation needed to bring Humanity to Humankind.

Now more than ever Civilization as a Whole needs to Unite and Revolt against the current oppressive state establishments that keeps Us in an evil and chaotic hell. If We allow the capitalist system of inequality to continue across the Globe, We will only sink deeper into the ditch of oppression, slavery, genocide, war and exploitative control of the masses and nothing truly progressive, substantial and Humanitarian will ever be accomplished for Humankind.

We've lost so many lives throughout time and We will continue to lose hundreds of millions of precious lives every year due to the evils that corrupt-man bestows upon its own People, its own kind, Humankind. All for the spoils that come by way of temptation and the weak tendencies in man.

Our individual and Collective Obligations

We need to realize that as a species We no longer need to follow the primitive notion that We live in a World of “dog eats dog” and “survival of the fittest capitalist” for the opposite is true. We must stop this “everyone for themselves” culture that is perpetuated and maintained by the capitalist system and the sinful union between the financial institutions, banks, big business (the bourgeoisie) and the government, or simply face extinction.

The egotistical tendencies and corrupt nature of capitalism and classism causes the ensuing social pillage that results from any system that can be paralleled or linked to “survival of the fittest”. Surely this inherently primitive thought is what has led to the social manifestation of capitalism.

We All form part of a Family, Group and Nation and must stay aware of Our full reality, position and most importantly, Our obligations to the Wholes that We are part of, especially that of Humankind. Being aware of Our past and present in each circle and sub-circle gives Us an illuminated bird’s eye view of Our role and position in each.

Look at decades and centuries of the Evolutionary Progress of Humankind as a Whole, instead of looking at your moment to moment struggle and it will allow you to see the importance of Progress for the Whole of Humankind. The crucial long term battles, per se.

As We stop thinking about ourselves and instead give paramount priority to Humankind as a Whole, We broaden Our mental horizons, cares, concerns and in-turn, We expand Our personal and Group capabilities. A domino effect of Positive transformation is set in motion as each individual becomes aware and consciously involved in Progress for All.

Unity is a vital variable in the equation of progress (personal and Group). Although you may know what the Righteous thing for you to do as a

UTOPIA or DEATH!

GODly act for the GOoD of Humankind, “fear” is the one factor/variable that can cause you to falter in decision. Fear can creep in if your Love for Humanity is not more powerful than the Love for yourself or material possessions, etc.

Humankind has long ago taken the mental leap in evolutionary consciousness in acquiring the Wisdom of knowing the power and worth of Unity, Cooperation and Equality; “So why are we a society of inequality, exploitation, separation, violence, death, war and suffering?” It is not the lack of Human evolutionary thought of Humankind as a Whole but simply the hindrance of social misinformation and misdirection of the Human psyche (by a few) to maintain a system of hierarchy and control of the Majority World.

All Humans are obligated, not only by local Group kinship but most importantly by the evolutionary kinship that We all share as Human Beings, regardless of Our minute differences. The one factor that We All do have in common (Humanity) will always supersede the trivialness of the minor details that make Us uniquely different to each other (color, culture, religion, choices, etc.). The connections that We All share is tremendous and profoundly relevant to Our Collective Existence.

Some have mental barriers that blind their associations with others and connections to other bigger Wholes. Many are not aware of their connections to the other circles they form part of and never realize their obligations to the Whole of the Family over self; Community over Family; Nation over Community; World over Nation and of Future over Present.

“Community organization is that process by which the People...organize themselves to 'take charge' of their situation and thus develop a sense of being a community together. It is a particularly effective tool for the Poor and powerless as they determine for themselves the actions they will take to deal with the essential forces that are destroying their community and consequently causing them to be powerless”.

Reverend Robert Linthicum, World Vision International

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

“Organizing does two central things to seek to rectify the problem of power imbalance - it builds a permanent base of People power so that dominant financial and institutional power can be challenged and held accountable to values of greater social, environmental and economic justice; and, it transforms individuals and communities, making them mutually respectful co-creators of public life rather than passive objects of decisions made by others”.

Mike Miller, Organize Training Center

We must Unite and Organize Globally to take control of Our lives, Our Nations, Our World, Our Species and Our Destiny.

Individualism in the thought process and belief systems of the Human Species is directly influenced by primitive, fear induced and antisocial tendencies in the Human mind. Especially the male of the Human species, who has surely been the main purveyor of society’s historical counter-progressive and self destructive tendencies.

If We look at the Communities and Nations across the World that were able to overthrow their oppressors and colonizers, for however short of a period, it was usually made possible with complete Unity. Only with Unity can anything grand, be accomplished. The old saying, “One for All and All for One” will always stand true. We must All Unite and in this way, We All will benefit, progress and achieve Peace & Utopia.

From Revolutionaries all across the World who offer their bravery, sweat, blood and ultimately their Lives for The GOoD of Humankind, to someone speaking up for jusitce, like a unionizer or activist for simple Human rights of survival and determination; All are budes against this World wide system of senseless violence, suffering and exploitation. We just have to All “budge at the same time” at strategic positions to affect global change.

There are little budes going on all over the World trying to dismantle the one big oppressive giant but what We lack is Unity & strategic synchronization and complementation of Worldwide Revolutionary actions.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

“Human Struggle” must seek to loosen the constricting and unnecessary social treads of capitalism and inequality that holds down the rotten fabric of institutionalized racism, classism, oppression, exploitation and xenophobia.

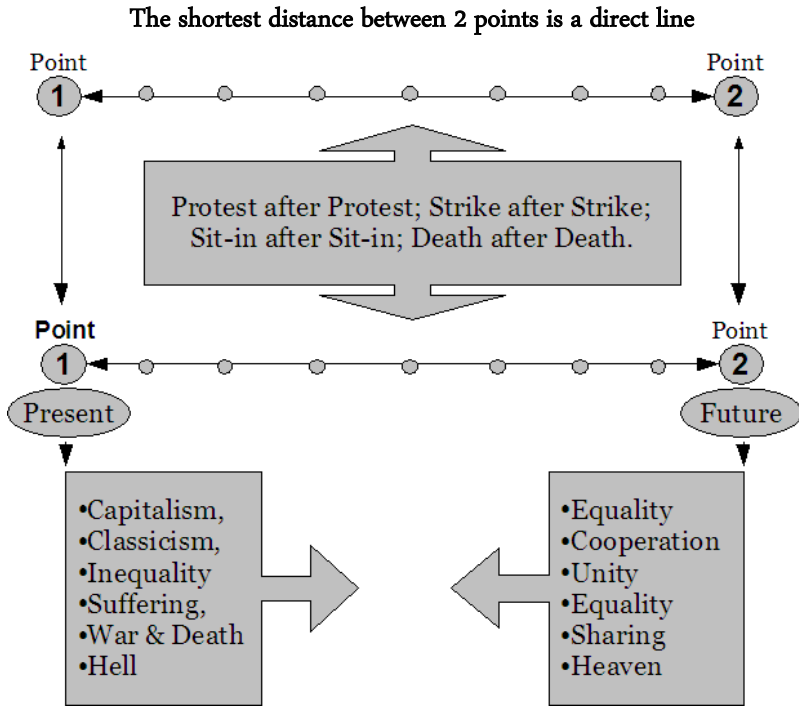

We are All part of a chain and when We forget this, we become selfish or individualistic. In a sense, We disconnect from the chain and become a broken link. Humans cannot continue to be individualistic, for the Whole becomes weak and We All suffer.

We need to do away with the vessel of evil that causes the most hell - the “capitalist system”. We must strike at the root of what puts Us in economic competition and wars of survival and separatism. We must stop using money and just share, which would immediately shut down the systems of social control and inequality.

It would be so simple and efficient if We just Unite and begin Cooperation on a World Wide level and Institute a Cooperative, Communal Resource based system; Where there is no more privatization, rent, bills or fees for anything, especially vital needs like food, energy, water and healthcare. In this Human Struggle, to aim for anything but Utopia, We lose the truly epic battle for Humanity and We jeopardize the future of All Generations to come.

“Everyday I become more convinced, there is no doubt in my mind, as many intellectuals have said, that it is necessary to transcend capitalism. But capitalism can not be transcended through capitalism itself; it must be done through socialism, true socialism, with equality and justice. I’m also convinced that it is possible to do it under democracy, but not in the type of democracy being imposed by Washington.” Hugo Chávez - World Social Forum 2005

“The ultimate end of all revolutionary social change is to establish the sanctity of human life, the dignity of man, the right of every human being to liberty and well-being.” Emma Goldman

The shortest route to Heaven on Earth is also a direct line. This can be applied to the social dilemma in which We find Ourselves as a Whole here on Earth with imperial, capitalist Worldwide oppression, suffering and death. This is especially important to the Struggles that seek to free Humankind from the evils of “man” that causes this massive and unnecessary hell.

So if We are at the Present (Point 1 - Hell) and We wish to be at another point, a better point, in actuality the Future (Point 2 - Heaven), We should in effect just draw a direct line.

The key lies in drawing a direct line which means just going there by simply manifesting the actions and reality of life at point two and We immediately create that seemingly impossible dream/goal of Utopia - Heaven on Earth. This can be achieved only if We collectively realize it.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

The critical question is deciding what point 2 should be. The answer is simply Heaven or Utopia. If We are in Hell, We need to be in Heaven, so that should be Our only goal. Most importantly it should be an immediate goal, not one that will be accomplished one of these days, or more like one of these years or even centuries, if the current strategies of asking for crumbs from “corrupt governments and regimes” still persists.

Protest after Protest; Sit-in after Sit-in; Strike after Strike; Year after Year; Decade after Decade; Death after Death; Famine after Famine; Genocide after Genocide; Yet too many social Movements continue to ask for crumbs instead of demanding and taking the whole loaf that is rightfully Ours. But of course, if there is no Unity amongst “The People” (locally, nationally or internationally) there will surely be lack of a One World vision and goal for the Complete Liberation of Humankind from the grips of capitalism and exploitation.

Drawing a direct line means that We go directly to point two by just living and operating as if We were at point two. The key is doing this without permission or crumbs from Our corrupt civil and public servants (government) and without their bureaucratic red tape which is draped with corruption, greed racism and classism.

We go to (point 2) by simply living as We know We would, how We know We could and most vitally, how We know We should. This will immediately create the necessary conditions for the change We seek. Our best goal is to aim for Heaven on Earth - Right Now! The best way to accomplish this and at the same time sever the tentacles of capitalism is for Us to live as if We had Heaven on Earth to in-turn create it by simply living it.

“There is enough for everyone's need, but not for their greed.”

Mahatma Gandhi.

Human Development Report 2007/2008 (Abridged)

United Nations Development Program (UNDP)

Director and lead author: Kevin Watkins

“Climate change is now a scientifically established fact. The exact impact of greenhouse gas emission is not easy to forecast and there is a lot of uncertainty in the science when it comes to predictive capability. But we now know enough to recognize that there are large risks, potentially catastrophic ones, including the melting of ice-sheets on Greenland and the West Antarctic (which would place many countries under water) and changes in the course of the Gulf Stream that would bring about drastic climatic changes.

Prudence and care about the future of our children and their children requires that we act now. This is a form of insurance against possibly very large losses. The fact that we do not know the probability of such losses or their likely exact timing is not an argument for not taking insurance. We know the danger exists. We know the damage caused by greenhouse gas emissions is irreversible for a long time. We know it is growing with every day of inaction.

Even if we were living in a world where all people had the same standard of living and were impacted by climate change in the same way, we would still have to act. If the world were a single country, with its citizens all enjoying similar income levels and all exposed more or less to the same effects of climate change, the threat of global warming could still lead to substantial damage to human well-being and prosperity by the end of this century.

In reality, the world is a heterogeneous place: people have unequal incomes and wealth and climate change will affect regions very differently. This is, for us, the most compelling reason to act rapidly. Climate change is already starting to affect some of the poorest and most vulnerable communities around the world.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

A worldwide average 3° centigrade increase (compared to preindustrial temperatures) over the coming decades would result in a range of localized increases that could reach twice as high in some locations. The effect that increased droughts, extreme weather events, tropical storms and sea level rises will have on large parts of Africa, on many small island states and coastal zones will be inflicted in our lifetimes. In terms of aggregate world GDP, these short term effects may not be large. But for some of the world's poorest people, the consequences could be apocalyptic.

In the long run climate change is a massive threat to human development and in some places it is already undermining the international community's efforts to reduce extreme poverty. [...]

“Human progress is neither automatic nor inevitable. We are faced now with the fact that tomorrow is today. We are confronted with the fierce urgency of now. In this unfolding conundrum of life and history there is such a thing as being too late... We may cry out desperately for time to pause in her passage, but time is deaf to every plea and rushes on. Over the bleached bones and jumbled residues of numerous civilizations are written the pathetic words: Too late.”

Martin Luther King Jr. ‘Where do we go from here: chaos or community’

Delivered in a sermon on social justice four decades ago, Martin Luther King's words retain a powerful resonance. At the start of the 21st Century, we too are confronted with the “fierce urgency” of a crisis that links today and tomorrow. That crisis is climate change. It is still a preventable crisis—but only just. The world has less than a decade to change course. No issue merits more urgent attention—or more immediate action.

Climate change is the defining human development issue of our generation. All development is ultimately about expanding human potential and enlarging human freedom. It is about people developing the capabilities that empower them to make choices and to lead lives that they value. Climate change threatens to erode human freedoms and limit choice. It calls into question the Enlightenment principle that human progress will make the future look better than the past.

The early warning signs are already visible. Today, we are witnessing at first hand what could be the onset of major human development reversal in our lifetime. Across developing countries, millions of the world's poorest people are already being forced to cope with the impacts of climate change. These impacts do not register as apocalyptic events in the full glare of world media attention. They go unnoticed in financial markets and in the measurement of world gross domestic product (GDP). But increased exposure to drought, to more intense storms, to floods and environmental stress is holding back the efforts of the world's poor to build a better life for themselves and their children. [...]

How the world deals with climate change today will have a direct bearing on the human development prospects of a large section of humanity. Failure will consign the poorest 40 percent of the world's population—some 2.6 billion people—to a future of diminished opportunity. It will exacerbate deep inequalities within countries. And it will undermine efforts to build a more inclusive pattern of globalization, reinforcing the vast disparities between the 'haves' and the 'have nots'.

In today's world, it is the poor who are bearing the brunt of climate change. Tomorrow, it will be humanity as a whole that faces the risks that come with global warming. The rapid build-up of greenhouse gases in the Earth's atmosphere is fundamentally changing the climate forecast for future generations. We are edging towards 'tipping points'. These are unpredictable and non-linear events that could open the door to ecological catastrophes—accelerated collapse of the Earth's great ice sheets being a case in point—that will transform patterns of human settlement and undermine the viability of national economies. Our generation may not live to see the consequences. But our children and their grandchildren will have no alternative but to live with them. Aversion to poverty and inequality today, and to catastrophic risk in the future provides a strong rationale for urgent action.

Some commentators continue to cite uncertainty over future outcomes as grounds for a limited response to climate change. That starting point is flawed. There are indeed many unknowns: climate science deals in probability and risk, not in certainties. However, if we value the well-being of our children and grandchildren, even small risks of catastrophic events merit an insurance-based precautionary approach. And uncertainty cuts both ways: the risks could be greater than we currently understand.

Climate change demands urgent action now to address a threat to two constituencies with a weak political voice: the world's poor and future generations. It raises profoundly important questions about social justice, equity and human rights across countries and generations. In the Human Development Report 2007/2008 we address these questions. Our starting point is that the battle against climate change can—and must—be won. The world lacks neither the financial resources nor the technological capabilities to act. If we fail to prevent climate change it will be because we were unable to foster the political will to cooperate.

Such an outcome would represent not just a failure of political imagination and leadership, but a moral failure on a scale unparalleled in history. During the 20th Century failures of political leadership led to two world wars. Millions of people paid a high price for what were avoidable catastrophes. Dangerous climate change is the avoidable catastrophe of the 21st Century and beyond. Future generations will pass a harsh judgment on a generation that looked at the evidence on climate change, understood the consequences and then continued on a path that consigned millions of the world's most vulnerable people to poverty and exposed future generations to the risk of ecological disaster.

Ecological interdependence

Climate change is different from other problems facing humanity—and it challenges us to think differently at many levels. Above all, it challenges us to think about what it means to live as part of an ecologically interdependent human community.

Ecological interdependence is not an abstract concept. We live today in a world that is divided at many levels. People are separated by vast gulfs in wealth and opportunity. In many regions, rival nationalisms are a source of conflict. All too often, religious, cultural and ethnic identity are treated as a source of division and difference from others. In the face of all these differences, climate change provides a potent reminder of the one thing that we share in common. It is called planet Earth. All nations and all people share the same atmosphere. And we only have one.

Global warming is evidence that we are overloading the carrying capacity of the Earth's atmosphere. Stocks of greenhouse gases that trap heat in the Earth's atmosphere are accumulating at an unprecedented rate. Current concentrations have reached 380 parts per million (ppm) of carbon dioxide equivalent (CO₂e) exceeding the natural range of the last 650,000 years. In the course of the 21st Century, average global temperatures could increase by more than 5°C.

To put that figure in context, it is equivalent to the change in temperature since the last ice age—an era in which much of Europe and North America was under more than one kilometer of ice. The threshold for dangerous climate change is an increase of around 2°C. This threshold broadly defines the point at which rapid reversals in human development and a drift towards irreversible ecological damage would become very difficult to avoid.

Behind the numbers and the measurement is a simple overwhelming fact. We are recklessly mismanaging our ecological interdependence. In effect, our generation is running up an unsustainable ecological debt that future generations will inherit. We are drawing down the stock of environmental capital of our children. Dangerous climate change will represent the adjustment to an unsustainable level of greenhouse gas emissions.

Future generations are not the only constituency that will have to cope with a problem they did not create. The world's poor will suffer the earliest and most damaging impacts. Rich nations and their citizens account for the overwhelming bulk of the greenhouse gases locked in the Earth's atmosphere. But, poor countries and their citizens will pay the highest price for climate change. [...]

While the world's poor walk the Earth with a light carbon footprint they are bearing the brunt of unsustainable management of our ecological interdependence. In rich countries, coping with climate change to date has largely been a matter of adjusting thermostats, dealing with longer, hotter summers, and observing seasonal shifts. Cities like London and Los Angeles may face flooding risks as sea levels rise, but their inhabitants are protected by elaborate flood defense systems. By contrast, when global warming changes weather patterns in the Horn of Africa, it means that crops fail and people go hungry, or that women and young girls spend more hours collecting water. And, whatever the future risks facing cities in the rich world, today the real climate change vulnerabilities linked to storms and floods are to be found in rural communities in the great river deltas of the Ganges, the Mekong and the Nile, and in sprawling urban slums across the developing world.

The emerging risks and vulnerabilities associated with climate change are the outcomes of physical processes. But they are also a consequence of human actions and choices. This is another aspect of ecological interdependence that is sometimes forgotten. When people in an American city turn on the airconditioning or people in Europe drive their cars, their actions have consequences. Those consequences link them to rural communities in Bangladesh, farmers in Ethiopia and slum dwellers in Haiti. With these human connections come moral responsibilities, including a responsibility to reflect upon—and change—energy policies that inflict harm on other people or future generations.

The case for action

If the world acts now it will be possible—just possible—to keep 21st Century global temperature increases within a 2°C threshold above preindustrial levels. Achieving this future will require a high level of leadership and unparalleled international cooperation. Yet climate change is a threat that comes with an opportunity. Above all, it provides an opportunity for the world to come together in forging a collective response to a crisis that threatens to halt progress.

The values that inspired the drafters of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights provide a powerful point of reference. That document was a response to the political failure that gave rise to extreme nationalism, fascism and world war. It established a set of entitlements and rights—civil, political, cultural, social and economic—for “all members of the human family”. The values that inspired the Universal Declaration were seen as a code of conduct for human affairs that would prevent the “disregard and contempt for human rights that have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind”.

The drafters of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights were looking back at a human tragedy, the second world war, that had already happened. Climate change is different. It is a human tragedy in the making. Allowing that tragedy to evolve would be a political failure that merits the description of an “outrage to the conscience of mankind”. It would represent a systematic violation of the human rights of the world’s poor and future generations and a step back from universal values. Conversely, preventing dangerous climate change would hold out the hope for the development of multilateral solutions to the wider problems facing the international community. Climate change confronts us with enormously complex questions that span science, economics and international relations. These questions have to be addressed through practical strategies. Yet it is important not to lose sight of the wider issues that are at stake. The real choice facing political leaders and people today is between universal human values, on the one side, and participating in the widespread and systematic violation of human rights on the other. [...]

Once emitted, carbon dioxide (CO₂) and other greenhouse gases stay in the atmosphere for a long time. There are no rapid rewind buttons for running down stocks. People living at the start of the 22nd Century will live with the consequences of our emissions, just as we are living with the consequences of emissions since the industrial revolution. [...]

The third important dimension of the climate change challenge is its global scale. The Earth's atmosphere does not differentiate greenhouse gases by country of origin. One ton of greenhouse gases from China carries the same weight as one ton of greenhouse gases from the United States—and one country's emissions are another country's climate change problem. It follows that no one country can win the battle against climate change acting alone. Collective action is not an option but an imperative. When Benjamin Franklin signed the American Declaration of Independence in 1776, he is said to have commented: "We must all hang together, or most assuredly, we shall all hang separately." In our unequal world, some people—notably poor people—might hang sooner than others in the event of a failure to develop collective solutions. But ultimately, this is a preventable crisis that threatens all people and all countries. We too have the choice between hanging together and forging collective solutions to a shared problem, or hanging separately. [...]

And our children and their children's grandchildren have the right to hold us to a high standard of accountability when their future—and maybe their survival—is hanging in the balance. They too deserve something more than a generation of political leaders who look at the greatest challenge humankind has ever faced and then sit on their hands. Put bluntly, the world's poor and future generations cannot afford the complacency and prevarication that continues to characterize international negotiations on climate change. Nor can they afford the large gap between what leaders in the developed world say about climate change threats and what they do in their energy policies.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Twenty years ago Chico Mendes, the Brazilian environmentalist, died attempting to defend the Amazon rainforest against destruction. Before his death, he spoke of the ties that bound his local struggle to a global movement for social justice: “At first I thought I was fighting to save rubber trees, then I thought I was fighting to save the Amazon rainforest. Now I realize I am fighting for humanity.”

The battle against dangerous climate change is part of the fight for humanity. Winning that battle will require far-reaching changes at many levels—in consumption, in how we produce and price energy, and in international cooperation. Above all, though, it will require far-reaching changes in how we think about our ecological interdependence, about social justice for the world’s poor, and about the human rights and entitlements of future generations.” End quote.

The previous report, in its entirety, suggests capitalist solutions to save the planet and Humankind from demise, but with the seriousness of the matter and urgency needed, a new system of Human organization is critical to accomplish what is needed without the variables of cost and exclusion. Capitalism will only give out crumbs and will never-ever allow Humankind to accomplish what it needs to for survival. Simply because cost will remain a factor in every decision and project, even knowing that these are projects to save Humankind and Civilization.

We as intelligent Beings cannot sit by and take this casual ride into oblivion now that We know the Truth.

“[The planet] is being destroyed under our own noses by the capitalist model, the destructive engine of development, ... every day there is more hunger, more misery thanks to the neo-liberal, capitalist model.” Hugo Chavez

THE HISTORY OF MONEY

PART 1

Tell someone you are going to a convention of accountants and you might get a few yawns, yet money and how it works is probably one of the most interesting things on earth.

It is fascinating and almost magical how money appeared on our planet. Unlike most developments we enjoy, which can be traced back to a source, civilization or inventor, money appeared in places then unconnected all over the world in a remarkably similar way.

Consider the American Indians using Wampum, West Africans trading in decorative metallic objects called Manillas and the Fijians economy based on whales teeth, some of which are still legal tender; add to that shells, amber, ivory, decorative feathers, cattle including oxen & pigs, a large number of stones including jade and quartz which have all been used for trade across the world, and we get a taste of the variety of accepted currency.

There is something charming and childlike imagining primitive societies, our ancestors, using all these colorful forms of money. As long as everyone concerned can agree on a value, this is a sensible thing for a community to do.

After all, the person who has what you need might not need what you have to trade. Money solves that problem neatly. Real value with each exchange, and everyone gaining from the convenience. The idea is really inspiring which might explain why so many diverse minds came up with it.

BUT ALL IS NOT WELL

"History records that the money changers have used every form of abuse, intrigue, deceit, and violent means possible to maintain their control over governments by controlling money and its issuance." President James Madison

Money, money, money, it's always just been there, right? Wrong. Obviously it's issued by the government to make it easy for us to exchange things. Wrong again! Truth is most people don't realize that the issuing of money is essentially a private business, and that the privilege of issuing money has been a major bone of contention throughout history.

Wars have been fought and depressions have been caused in the battle over who issues the money; however the majority of us are not aware of this, and this is largely due to the fact that the winning side became and increasingly continues to be a vital and respected member of our global society, having an influence over large aspects of our lives including our education, our media and our governments.

While we might feel powerless in trying to stop the manipulation of money for private profit at our expense, it is easy to forget that we collectively give money its value. We have been taught to believe printed pieces of paper have special value, and because we know others believe this too, we are willing to work all our lives to get what we are convinced others will want.

An honest look at history will show us how our innocent trust has been misused. Let's start our exploration of money with:

JESUS FLIPS (many coins) 33 A.D.

Jesus was so upset by the sight of the money changers in the temple, he waded in and started to tip over the tables and drive them out with a whip, this being the one and only time we ever hear of him using force during his entire ministry.

So what caused the ultimate pacifist to become so aggressive? For a long time the Jews had been called upon to pay their temple tax with a special coin called the half shekelshekel. It was a measured half ounce of pure silver with no image of a pagan emperor on it.

It was to them the only coin acceptable to God. But because there was only a limited number of these coins in circulation, the money changers were in a buyers market and like with anything else in short supply, they were able to raise the price to what the market would bear.

They made huge profits with their monopoly on these coins and turned this time of devotion into a mockery for profit. Jesus saw this as stealing from the people and proclaimed the whole setup to be. "A den of thieves".

Once money is accepted as a form of exchange, those who produce, loan out and manipulate the quantity of money are obviously in a very strong position. They are the "Money Changers".

MEDIEVAL ENGLAND (1000 - 1100 A.D.)

Here we find goldsmith's offering to keep other people's gold and silver safe in their vaults, and in return people walking away with a receipt for what they have left there. These paper receipts soon became popular for trade as they were less heavy to carry around than gold and silver coins. After a while, the goldsmith's must have noticed that only a small percentage of their depositor's ever came in to demand their gold at any one time. So cleverly the goldsmith's made out some receipts for gold which didn't even exist, and then they loaned it out to earn interest.

A nod and a wink amongst themselves, they incorporated this practice into the banking system. They even gave it a name to make it seem more acceptable, christening the practice 'Fractional Reserve Banking' which translates to mean, lending out many times more money than you have assets on deposit.

Today banks are allowed to loan out at least ten times the amount they actually are holding, so while you wonder how they get rich charging you 11% interest, it's not 11% a year they make on that amount but actually 110%.

THE TALLY STICKS (1100 - 1854)

King Henry the First produced sticks of polished wood, with notches cut along one edge to signify the denominations. The stick was then split full length so each piece still had a record of the notches.

The King kept one half for proof against counterfeiting, and then sent the other half into the market place where it would continue to circulate as money. Because only Tally Sticks were accepted by Henry for payment of taxes, there was a built in demand for them, which gave people confidence to accept these as money.

He could have used anything really, so long as the people agreed it had value, and his willingness to accept these sticks as legal tender made it easy for the people to agree. Money is only as valuable as people's faith in it, and without that faith even today's money is just paper.

The tally stick system worked really well for 726 years. It was the most successful form of currency in recent history and the British Empire was actually built under the Tally Stick system, but how is it that most of us are not aware of its existence?

Perhaps the fact that in 1694 the Bank of England at its formation attacked the Tally Stick System gives us a clue as to why most of us have never heard of them. They realized it was money outside the power of the money changers, (the very thing King Henry had intended).

What better way to eliminate the vital faith people had in this rival currency than to pretend it simply never existed and not discuss it. That seems to be what happened when the first shareholder's in the Bank of England bought their original shares with notched pieces of wood and retired the system. You heard correctly, they bought shares. The Bank of England was set up as a privately owned bank through investors buying shares. Even the Bank's recent nationalization is not what it at first may appear, as its independent resources unceasingly multiply and dividends continue to be produced for its shareholder's.

These investors, whose names were kept secret, were meant to invest one and a quarter million pounds, but only three quarters of a million was received when it was chartered in 1694. It then began to lend out many times more than it had in reserve, collecting interest on the lot.

This is not something you could just impose on people without preparation. The money changers needed to create the climate to make the formation of this private concern seem acceptable. Here's how they did it.

With King Henry VIII relaxing the Usury Laws in the 1500's, the money changers flooded the market with their gold and silver coins becoming richer by the minute.

The English Revolution of 1642 was financed by the money changers backing Oliver Cromwell's successful attempt to purge the parliament and kill King Charles. What followed was 50 years of costly wars. Costly to those fighting them and profitable to those financing them.

So profitable that it allowed the money changers to take over a square mile of property still known as the City of London, which remains one of the three main financial centers in the world today.

The 50 years of war left England in financial ruin. The government officials went begging for loans from guess who, and the deal proposed resulted in a government sanctioned, privately owned bank which could produce money from nothing, essentially legally counterfeiting a national currency for private gain. Now the politicians had a source from which to borrow all the money they wanted to borrow, and the debt created was secured against public taxes.

You would think someone would have seen through this, and realized they could produce their own money and owe no interest, but instead the Bank of England has been used as a model and now nearly every nation has a Central Bank with fractional reserve banking at its core.

These central banks have the power to take over a nation's economy and become that nation's real governing force. What we have here is a scam of mammoth proportions covering what is actually a hidden tax, being collected by private concerns. The country sells bonds to the bank in return for money it cannot raise in taxes. The bonds are paid for by money produced from thin air. The government pays interest on the money it borrowed by borrowing more money in the same way. There is no way this debt can ever be paid, it has and will continue to increase.

If the government did find a way to pay off the debt, the result would be that there would be no bonds to back the currency, so to pay the debt would be to kill the currency. With its formation the Bank of England soon flooded Britain with money. With no quality control and no insistence on value for money, prices doubled with money being thrown in every direction.

One company was even offering to drain the Red Sea to find Egyptian gold lost when the sea closed in on their pursuit of Moses. By 1698 the national debt expanded from £1,250,000 to £16,000,000 and up went the taxes the debt was secured on.

As hard as it might be to believe, in times of economic upheaval, wealth is rarely destroyed and instead is often only transferred. And who benefits the most when money is scarce? You may have guessed. It's those controlling what everyone else wants, the money changers. When the majority of people are suffering through economic depression, you can be sure that a minority of people are continuing to get rich.

Even today the Bank of England expresses its determination to prevent the ups and downs of booms and depressions, yet there have been nothing but ups and downs since its formation with the British pound rarely being stable.

One thing however has been stable and that is the growing fortune of:

THE ROTHSCHILDS (1743)

A goldsmith named Amshall Moses Bower opened a counting house in Frankfurt Germany in 1743. He placed a Roman eagle on a red shield over the door prompting people to call his shop the Red Shield Firm pronounced in German as "Rothschild".

His son later changed his name to Rothschild when he inherited the business. Loaning money to individuals was all well and good but he soon found it much more profitable loaning money to governments and Kings. It always involved much bigger amounts, always secured from public taxes.

Once he got the hang of things he set his sights on the world by training his five sons in the art of money creation, before sending them out to the major financial centers of the world to create and dominate the central banking systems. J.P. Morgan was thought by many to be the richest man in the world during the second world war, but upon his death it was discovered he was merely a lieutenant within the Rothschild empire owning only 19% of the J.P. Morgan Companies.

"There is but one power in Europe and that is Rothschild." 19th century French commentator

We will explore a little more about the richest family a little later, after we've had a look at:

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION (1764 - 1781)

By the mid 1700's Britain was at its height of power, but was also heavily in debt. Since the creation of the Bank of England, they had suffered four costly wars and the total debt now stood at £140,000,000, (which in those days was a lot of money).

In order to make their interest payments to the bank, the British government set about a program to try to raise revenues from their American colonies, largely through an extensive program of taxation.

There was a shortage of material for minting coins in the colonies, so they began to print their own paper money, which they called Colonial Script. This provided a very successful means of exchange and also gave the colonies a sense of identity. Colonial Script was money provided to help the exchange of goods. It was debt free paper money not backed by gold or silver.

During a visit to Britain in 1763, The Bank of England asked Benjamin Franklin how he would account for the new found prosperity in the colonies. Franklin replied.

"That is simple. In the colonies we issue our own money. It is called Colonial Script. We issue it in proper proportion to the demands of trade and industry to make the products pass easily from the producers to the consumers.

In this manner, creating for ourselves our own paper money, we control its purchasing power, and we have no interest to pay to no one." Benjamin Franklin

America had learned that the people's confidence in the currency was all they needed, and they could be free of borrowing debts. That would mean being free of the Bank of England. In Response the world's most powerful independent bank used its influence on the British parliament to press for the passing of the Currency Act of 1764.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

This act made it illegal for the colonies to print their own money, and forced them to pay all future taxes to Britain in silver or gold. Here is what Franklin said after that.

"In one year, the conditions were so reversed that the era of prosperity ended, and a depression set in, to such an extent that the streets of the Colonies were filled with unemployed." Benjamin Franklin

"The colonies would gladly have borne the little tax on tea and other matters had it not been that England took away from the colonies their money, which created unemployment and dissatisfaction. The inability of the colonists to get power to issue their own money permanently out of the hands of George III and the international bankers was the PRIME reason for the Revolutionary War." Benjamin Franklin's autobiography

By the time the war began on 19th April 1775 much of the gold and silver had been taken by British taxation. They were left with no other choice but to print money to finance the war.

What is interesting here is that Colonial Script was actually working so well, it became a threat to the established economic system of the time.

The idea of issuing money as Franklin put it "in proper proportion to the demands of trade and industry" and not charging any interest was not causing any problems or inflation. This unfortunately was alien to the Bank of England which only issued money for the sake of making a profit for its shareholder's.

THE BANK OF NORTH AMERICA (1781-1785)

If you can't beat them, join them, might well have been his argument when arms dealer, Robert Morris suggested he be allowed to set up a Bank of England style central bank in the USA in 1781. Desperate for money, the $400,000 he proposed to deposit, to allow him to loan out many times that through fractional reserve banking, must have looked really attractive to the impoverished American Government.

Already spending the money they would be loaned, no one made a fuss when Robert Morris couldn't raise the deposit, and instead suggested he might use some gold, which had been loaned to America from France. Once in, he simply used fractional reserve banking, and with the banks growing fortune he loaned to himself, and his friends the money to buy up all the remaining shares. The bank then began to loan out money multiplied by this new amount to eager politicians, who were probably too drunk with the new 'power cash' to notice or care how it was done.

The scam lasted five years until in 1785, with the value of American money dropping like a lead balloon. The banks charter didn't get renewed. The shareholder's walking off with the interest did not go unnoticed by the governor.

"The rich will strive to establish their dominion and enslave the rest. They always did. They always will... They will have the same effect here as elsewhere, if we do not, by (the power of) government, keep them in their proper spheres." Governor Morris

FIRST BANK OF THE UNITED STATES (1791-1811)

It worked once, it will work again. It's been six years. There are a lot of new hungry politicians. Let's give it a try. And so there it was, in 1791, the First Bank of the United States (BUS). Not only deceptively named to sound official, but also to take attention away from the real first bank which had been shut down.

Its initials however gave a clear indication that Americans were once again being taken for a ride. And true to its British model, the name of the investors was never revealed. Having gotten away with it a second time, some of them probably wished Amshall Rothschild had picked a different time to make his pronouncement from his private central bank in Frankfurt.

"Let me issue and control a nation's money and I care not who writes the laws." Mayer Amschel Rothschild, 1790

Not to worry, no one was listening, the American government borrowed 8.2 million dollars from the bank in the first 5 years and prices rose by 72%. This time round the money changers had learned their lesson, they had guaranteed a twenty year charter.

The president, who could see an ever increasing debt, with no chance of ever paying back, had this to say.

"I wish it were possible to obtain a single amendment to our Constitution - taking from the federal government their power of borrowing."
Thomas Jefferson, 1798

While the independent press, who had not been bought off yet, called the scam "a great swindle, a vulture, a viper, and a cobra."

As with the real first bank, the government had been the only depositor to put up any real money, with the remainder being raised from loans the investors made to each other, using the magic of fractional reserve banking. When time came for renewal of the charter, the bankers were warning of bad times ahead if they didn't get what they wanted. The charter was not renewed.

Five months later Britain had attacked America and started the war of 1812. Meanwhile a short time earlier, an independent Rothschild business, the Bank of France, was being looked upon with suspicion by none other than:

NAPOLEON (1803 - 1825)

He didn't trust the bank saying: "When a government is dependent upon bankers for money, they and not the leaders of the government control the situation, since the hand that gives is above the hand that takes... Money has no motherland; financiers are without patriotism and without decency; their sole object is gain." Napoleon Bonaparte, 1815

For both sides of a war to be loaned money from the same privately owned Central Bank is not unusual. Nothing generates debt like war. A Nation will borrow any amount to win. So naturally if the loser is kept going to the last straw in a vain hope of winning, then the more resources will be used up by the winning side before their victory is obtained, more resources used, more loans taken out, more money made by the bankers; and even more amazing, the loans are usually given on condition that the victor pays the debts left by the loser. [Outrageous!]

In 1803, instead of borrowing from the bank, Napoleon sold territory west of the Mississippi to the 3rd President of the United States, Thomas Jefferson for 3 million dollars in gold; a deal known as the Louisiana Purchase.

Three million dollars richer, Napoleon quickly gathered together an army and set about conquering much of Europe. Each place he went to, Napoleon found his opposition being financed by the Bank of England, making huge profits as Prussia, Austria and finally Russia all went heavily into debt trying to stop him.

Four years later, with the main French army in Russia, Nathan Rothschild took charge of a bold plan to smuggle a shipment of gold through France to finance an attack from Spain by the Duke of Wellington. Wellington's attack from the south and other defeats eventually forced Napoleon into exile. However in 1815 he escaped from his banishment in Elba, an Island off the coast of Italy, and returned to Paris.

By March of that year Napoleon had equipped an army with the help of borrowed money from the Eubard Banking House of Paris. With 74,000 French troops led by Napoleon, sizing up to meet 67,000 British and other European Troops 200 miles NE of Paris on June 18th 1815, it was a difficult one to call. Back in London, the real potential winner, Nathan Rothschild, was poised to strike in a bold plan to take control of the British stock market, the bond market, and possibly even the Bank of England.

Nathan, knowing that information is power, stationed his trusted agent named Rothworth near the battle field. As soon as the battle was over Rothworth quickly returned to London, delivering the news to Rothschild 24 hours ahead of Wellington's courier.

A victory by Napoleon would have devastated Britain's financial system. Nathan stationed himself in his usual place next to an ancient pillar in the stock market. This powerful man was not without observers as he hung his head, and began openly to sell huge numbers of British Government Bonds.

Reading this to mean that Napoleon must have won, everyone started to sell their British Bonds as well. The bottom fell out of the market until you couldn't hardly give them away. Meanwhile Rothschild began to secretly buy up all the hugely devalued bonds at a fraction of what they were worth a few hours before. In this way Nathan Rothschild captured more in one afternoon than the combined forces of Napoleon and Wellington had captured in their entire lifetime.

THE HISTORY OF MONEY PART II

The 19th century became known as the age of the Rothschild's when it was estimated they controlled half of the world's wealth. While their wealth continues to increase today, they have managed to blend into the background, giving an impression that their power has waned. They only apply the Rothschild name to a small fraction of the companies they actually control.

Some authors claim that the Rothschild's had not only taken over the Bank of England but they had also in 1816 backed a new privately owned Central Bank in America called The Second Bank of The United States, causing huge problems to the American president.

ANDREW JACKSON (1828 - 1836)

When the American congress voted to renew the charter of The Second Bank of The United States, Jackson responded by using his veto to prevent the renewal bill from passing. His response gives us an interesting insight. "It is not our own citizens only who are to receive the bounty of our government. More than eight million of the stock of this bank are held by foreigners... is there no danger to our liberty and independence in a bank that in its nature has so little to bind it to our country?..."

In 1832 Jackson ordered the withdrawal of government deposits from the Second bank and instead had them put into safe banks. The Second Bank's head, Nicholas Biddle was quite candid about the power and intention of the bank when he openly threatened to cause a depression if the bank was not re-chartered, we quote. "Nothing but widespread suffering will produce any effect on Congress... Our only safety is in pursuing a steady course of firm restriction - and I have no doubt that such a course will ultimately lead to restoration of the currency and the re-charter of the bank." Nicholas Biddle 1836

By calling in existing loans and refusing to issue new loans he did cause a massive depression, but in 1836 when the charter ran out, the Second Bank ceased to function. It was then he made these two famous statements: "The Bank is trying to kill me - but I will kill it!" and later "If the American people only understood the rank injustice of our money and banking system - there would be a revolution before morning..." Andrew Jackson

When asked what he felt was the greatest achievement of his career Andrew Jackson replied without hesitation "I killed the bank!" However we will see this was not the end of private financial influence passing itself off as official when we look at...

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND THE CIVIL WAR (1861 - 1865)

With the Central Bank killed off, fractional reserve banking moved like a virus through numerous state chartered banks instead causing the instability this form of economics thrives on. When people lose their homes someone else wins them for a fraction of their worth. Depression is good news to the lender; but war causes even more debt and dependency than anything else, so if the money changers couldn't have their Central Bank with a license to print money, a war it would have to be. We can see from this quote of the then chancellor of Germany that slavery was not the only cause for the American Civil War.

"The division of the United States into federations of equal force was decided long before the Civil War by the high financial powers of Europe. These bankers were afraid that the US, if they remained as one block, and as one nation, would attain economic and financial independence, which would upset their financial domination over the world." Otto von Bismark chancellor of Germany 1876

On the 12th of April 1861 this economic war began. Predictably Lincoln, needing money to finance his war effort, went with his secretary of the treasury to New York to apply for the necessary loans. The money changers wishing the Union to fail offered loans at 24% to 36%. Lincoln declined the offer. An old friend of Lincoln's, Colonel Dick Taylor of Chicago was put in charge of solving the problem of how to finance the war. His solution is recorded as this. "Just get Congress to pass a bill authorizing the printing of full legal tender treasury notes... and pay your soldiers with them and go ahead and win your war with them also." Colonel Dick Taylor

When Lincoln asked if the people of America would accept the notes Taylor said. "The people or anyone else will not have any choice in the matter, if you make them full legal tender. They will have the full sanction of the government and be just as good as any money; as Congress is given that express right by the Constitution." Colonel Dick Taylor

Lincoln agreed to try this solution and printed 450 million dollars worth of the new bills using green ink on the back to distinguish them from other notes.

"The government should create, issue and circulate all the currency and credit needed to satisfy the spending power of the government and the buying power of consumers..... The privilege of creating and issuing money is not only the supreme prerogative of Government, but it is the Government's greatest creative opportunity. By the adoption of these principles, the long-felt want for a uniform medium will be satisfied. The taxpayers will be saved immense sums of interest, discounts and exchanges. The financing of all public enterprises, the maintenance of stable government and ordered progress, and the conduct of the Treasury will become matters of practical administration. The people can and will be furnished with a currency as safe as their own government. Money will cease to be the master and become the servant of humanity. Democracy will rise superior to the money power." Abraham Lincoln

From this we see that the solution worked so well Lincoln was seriously considering adopting this emergency measure as a permanent policy. This would have been great for everyone except the money changers who quickly realized how dangerous this policy would be for them. They wasted no time in expressing their view in the London Times. Oddly enough, while the article seems to have been designed to discourage this creative financial policy, in its put down we're clearly able to see the policies goodness.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

"If this mischievous financial policy, which has its origin in North America, shall become endured down to a fixture, then that Government will furnish its own money without cost. It will pay off debts and be without debt. It will have all the money necessary to carry on its commerce. It will become prosperous without precedent in the history of the world. The brains and wealth of all countries will go to North America. That country must be destroyed or it will destroy every monarchy on the globe." Hazard Circular - London Times 1865

From this extract its plan to see that it is the advantage provided by the adopting of this policy which poses a threat to those not using it.

1863, nearly there, Lincoln needed just a bit more money to win the war, and seeing him in this vulnerable state, and knowing that the president could not get the congressional authority to issue more greenbacks, the money changers proposed the passing of the National Bank Act. The act went through. From this point on the entire US money supply would be created out of debt by bankers buying US government bonds and issuing them from reserves for bank notes. ... "In numerous years following the war, the Federal Government ran a heavy surplus. It could not (however) pay off its debt, retire its securities, because to do so meant there would be no bonds to back the national bank notes. To pay off the debt was to destroy the money supply." John Kenneth Galbraith

The American economy has been based on government debt since 1864 and it is locked into this system. Talk of paying off the debt without first reforming the banking system is just talk and a complete impossibility. That same year Lincoln had a pleasant surprise. Turns out the Tsar of Russia, Alexander II, was well aware of the money changers scam.

The Tsar was refusing to allow them to set up a central bank in Russia. If Lincoln could limit the power of the money changers and win the war, the bankers would not be able to split America and hand it back to Britain and France as planned. The Tsar knew that this handing back would come at a cost which would eventually need to be paid back by attacking Russia, it being clearly in the money changers sights. The Tsar declared that if France or Britain gave help to the South, Russia would consider this an act of war. Britain and France would instead wait in vain to have the wealth of the colonies returned to them, and while they waited Lincoln won the civil war. With an election coming up the next year, Lincoln himself would wait for renewed public support before reversing the National Bank Act he had been pressured into approving during the war.

Lincoln's opposition to the central banks financial control and a proposed return to the gold standard is well documented. He would certainly have killed off the national banks monopoly had he not been killed himself only 41 days after being re-elected. The money changers were pressing for a gold standard because gold was scarce and easier to have a monopoly over.

Much of this was already waiting in their hands and each gold merchant was well aware that what they really had could be easily made to seem like much much more. Silver would only widen the field and lower the share so they pressed for...

THE RETURN OF THE GOLD STANDARD (1866 - 1881)

"Right after the Civil War there was considerable talk about reviving Lincoln's brief experiment with the Constitutional monetary system. Had not the European money-trust intervened, it would have no doubt become an established institution." W.Cleon Skousen.

Even after his death, the idea that America might print its own debt free money set off warning bells throughout the entire European banking community. On April 12th in 1866, the American congress passed the Contraction Act, allowing the treasury to call in and retire some of Lincoln's greenbacks, With only the banks standing to gain from this, it's not hard to work out the source of this action. To give the American public the false impression that they would be better off under the gold standard, the money changers used the control they had to cause economic instability and panic the people. This was fairly easy to do by calling in existing loans and refusing to issue new ones, a tried and proven method of causing depression. They would then spread the word through the media they largely controlled that the lack of a single gold standard was the cause of the hardship which ensued, while all this time using the Contraction Act to lower the amount of money in circulation.

It went from $1.8 billion in circulation in 1866 allowing $50.46 per person, to $1.3 billion in 1867 allowing $44.00 per person, to $0.6 billion in 1876 making only $14.60 per person and down to $0.4 billion only ten years later leaving only $6.67 per person and a continually growing population.

Most people believe the economists when they tell us that recessions and depressions are part of the natural flow, but in truth the money supply is controlled by a small minority who have always done so and will continue to do so if we let them.

By 1872 the American public was beginning to feel the squeeze, so the Bank of England, scheming in the back rooms, sent Ernest Seyd, with lots of money to bribe congress into demonetizing silver. Ernest drafted the legislation himself, which came into law with the passing of the Coinage Act, effectively stopping the minting of silver that year. Here's what he said about his trip, obviously pleased with himself.

"I went to America in the winter of 1872-73, authorized to secure, if I could, the passage of a bill demonetizing silver. It was in the interest of those I represented - the governors of the Bank of England - to have it done. By 1873, gold coins were the only form of coin money." Ernest Seyd

Or as explained by Senator Daniel of Virginia "In 1872 silver being demonetized in Germany, England, and Holland, a capital of 100,000 pounds ($500,000.00) was raised, Ernest Seyd was sent to this country with this fund as agent for foreign bond holders to effect the same object (demonetization of silver)".

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Within three years, with 30% of the work force unemployed, the American people began to harken back to the days of silver backed money and the greenbacks. The US Silver Commission was set up to study the problem and responded with telling history:

"The disaster of the Dark Ages was caused by decreasing money and falling prices... Without money, civilization could not have had a beginning, and with a diminishing supply, it must languish and unless relieved, finally perish.

At the Christian era the metallic money of the Roman Empire amounted to $1,800,million. By the end of the fifteenth century it had shrunk to less than $200,million. History records no other such disastrous transition as that from the Roman Empire to the Dark Ages..." United States Silver Commission

While they obviously could see the problems being caused by the restricted money supply, this declaration did little to help the problem, and in 1877 riots broke out all over the country. The bank's response was to do nothing except to campaign against the idea that greenbacks should be reissued.

The American Bankers Association secretary James Buel expressed the bankers attitude well in a letter to fellow members of the association.

He wrote: "It is advisable to do all in your power to sustain such prominent daily and weekly newspapers, especially the Agricultural and Religious Press, as will oppose the greenback issue of paper money and that you will also withhold patronage from all applicants who are not willing to oppose the government issue of money. To repeal the Act creating bank notes, or to restore to circulation the government issue of money will be to provide the people with money and will therefore seriously affect our individual profits as bankers and lenders. See your congressman at once and engage him to support our interest that we may control legislation." James Buel American Bankers Association

UTOPIA or DEATH!

What this statement exposes is the difference in mentality between your average person and a banker. With a banker 'less really is more' and every need an opportunity to exploit.

James Garfield became President in 1881 with a firm grasp of where the problem lay. "Whosoever controls the volume of money in any country is absolute master of all industry and commerce... And when you realize that the entire system is very easily controlled, one way or another, by a few powerful men at the top, you will not have to be told how periods of inflation and depression originate." James Garfield 1881

Within weeks of releasing this statement President Garfield was assassinated.

FREE SILVER (1891 - 1912)

Fleecing of the flock is the term the money changers use for the process of booms and depressions which make it possible for them to repossess property at a fraction of its worth. In 1891 a major fleece was being planned. "On Sept 1st, 1894, we will not renew our loans under any consideration. On Sept 1st we will demand our money. We will foreclose and become mortgagees in possession. We can take two-thirds of the farms west of the Mississippi, and thousands of them east of the Mississippi as well, at our own price... Then the farmers will become tenants as in England..." 1891 American Bankers Association as printed in the Congressional Record of April 29, 1913

The continued gold standard made this possible. William Jennings Bryan was the Democratic candidate for president in 1896, campaigning to bring silver back as a money standard. (free Silver) "We will answer their demand for a gold standard by saying to them: You shall not press down upon the brow of labor, this crown of thorns, you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold." William Jennings Bryan

Of course the money changers supported his opposition on the Republican side so long as he wanted the gold standard maintained. The factory bosses were somehow convinced to tell their work force that business would close down if Bryan was elected, and everyone would lose their jobs. The Republicans won by a small margin. Bryan tried again in 1900 and in 1908 but lost both times. He became secretary of state under Wilson in 1912 but became disenchanted and resigned in 1915 under suspicious circumstances connected with the sinking of the Lusitania which drove America into the First World War.

J.P. MORGAN AND THE CRASH OF 1907

If you want to work out the cause of the crash of 1907, checking who benefited is where you might like to look first. With the stock market slump causing most of the over extended banks to falter, in steps J.P. Morgan offering to save the day.

People will do strange things when in a panic, and this might explain why Morgan was authorized to print $200 million from nothing, which he then used to prop things up. Some of the troubled banks with less than 1% in reserve had no choice. It was accept this solution or go under. Even if they had worked out that their problems had been caused by the same people now offering the solution, there is not a lot they could have done about it. J.P.Morgan was hailed a hero. "All this trouble could be averted if we appointed a committee of six or seven men like J.P.Morgan to handle the affairs of our country." Woodrow Wilson

But not everyone was fooled. "Those not favorable to the money trust could be squeezed out of business and the people frightened into demanding changes in the banking and currency laws which the Money Trust would frame."

Rep. Charles A. Lindbergh (R-MN) Apart from making a small number rich at the expense of the many, in this case the instability also served the second purpose of encouraging the public to believe that they would be better off living under a Central Bank and a Gold Standard. Desperate people have little time for logic.

LINCOLN WATCHES

In Washington the statue of Lincoln sitting in his chair is facing a building called the Federal Reserve Headquarters. This institution would not be there if Lincoln's monetary policy had been adopted by the USA. It is not Federal and it has doubtful reserves. The name is an open deception designed to give this private bank the appearance that it is operating in the public's interest, when in fact it is run solely to gain private profit for its select stock holders. It came into being as the result of one of the slickest moves in financial history. On 23rd December 1913 the House of Representatives had past the Federal Reserve Act, but it was still having difficulty getting it out of the senate.

Most members of congress had gone home for the holidays, but unfortunately the senate had not adjourned sene die (without day) so they were technically still in session. There were only three members still present. On a unanimous consent voice vote the 1913 Federal Reserve Act was passed. No objection was made, possibly because there was no one there to object. Charles Lindbergh would have objected. "The financial system has been turned over to... the federal reserve board. That board administers the finance system by authority of... a purely profiteering group. The system is private, conducted for the sole purpose of obtaining the greatest possible profits from the use of other peoples money." Rep Charles A, Lindbergh (R-MN)

Louis T. McFadden would have objected. "We have in this country one of the most corrupt institutions the world has ever known. I refer to the Federal Reserve Board... This evil institution has impoverished... the people of the United States... and has practically bankrupted our Government. It has done this through... the corrupt practice of the moneyed vultures who control it." Rep. Louis T, McFadden (R-PA)

Barry Goldwater would also have objected. "Most Americans have no real understanding of the operation of the international money lenders... The accounts of the Federal Reserve System have never been audited. It operates outside the control of Congress and... manipulates the credit of the United States." Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-AZ)

Most Americans would object if they knew. The Federal Reserve is the largest single creditor of the United States Government, and they are also the people who decide how much the average persons car payments are going to be, what their house payments are going to be, and whether they have a job or not. The three people who passed the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, knew exactly what they were doing when they set up this private bank, modeled on the Bank of England and the fact that THE BANK OF ENGLAND had been operating independently unopposed since 1694 must have given them a great deal of confidence.

WHERE THERE'S WAR THERE'S MONEY

War uses up more materials more quickly than most anything else on earth. In war expensive equipment doesn't wear out slowly, it gets blown up. (It's interesting to note that during the 119 year period from the founding of the Bank of England to Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo, England had been at war for 56 years, while the rest of the time preparing for it. In the process the money changers had been getting rich.) So there it was, the newly formed Federal Reserve poised to produce any money the U.S. Government might need from thin air with each dollar standing to make a healthy interest. Nine days after its formation the Federal Reserve founders were wishing each other a Happy New Year. What good fortune might 1914 bring?

THE HISTORY OF MONEY PART III

WORLD WAR I (1914-1918)

The Germans borrowed money from the German Rothschilds bank, the British from the British Rothschilds bank, and the French from the French Rothschilds.

American super banker J.P. Morgan was amongst other things also a sales agent for war materials. Six months into the war his spending of $10 million a day made him the largest consumer on the planet.

The Rockefeller's and the head of president Willson's War Industries Board, Bernard Baruch each made some 200 million dollars while families contributed their sons to the bloody front lines, but profit was not the only motive for involvement.

Russia had spoiled the money changers plan to split America in two, and remained the last major country not to have its own central bank. However, three years after the start of the war the entire Russian Royal Family was killed and Communism began.

You might find it strange to learn that the Russian Revolution was also fuelled with British money. Capitalist businessmen financing Communism? ...

W. Cleon Skousen wrote in his book 'The Naked Capitalist': "Power from any source tends to create an appetite for additional power... It was almost inevitable that the super-rich would one day aspire to control not only their own wealth, but the wealth of the whole world.

To achieve this, they were perfectly willing to feed the ambitions of the power-hungry political conspirators who were committed to the overthrow of all existing governments and the establishments of a central world-wide dictatorship." W.Cleon Skousen

Extreme revolutionary groups were controlled by being financed when they complied and cut off, with money sometimes being given to their opposition, when they didn't. If you find this hard to believe, listen to what the so called dictator of the new Soviet Union had to say.

"The state does not function as we desired. The car does not obey. A man is at the wheel and seems to lead it, but the car does not drive in the desired direction. It moves as another force wishes." Vladimir Lenin Rep. Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee throughout the 1920-30s explained it this way: "The course of Russian history has, indeed, been greatly affected by the operations of international bankers... The Soviet Government has been given United States Treasury funds by the Federal Reserve Board... acting through the Chase Bank. ...

England has drawn money from us through the Federal Reserve Banks and has re-lent it at high rates of interest to the Soviet Government... The Dnieperstroy Dam was built with funds unlawfully taken from the United States Treasury by the corrupt and dishonest Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks." Rep. Louis T. McFadden (D-PA)

Even when Communism collapsed in the Soviet Union, Boris Yeltsin revealed that most of the foreign aid was ending up, we quote. "straight back into the coffers of western banks in debt service."

WORLD DOMINATION

With Russia down the money changers now had control of every major national economy. Like a steam roller moving and a wolf gathering its pack, there was only one thing left to do and that was to go global. The first attempt was the proposal at the Paris Peace Conference after WWI to set up the League of Nations. Old habits die hard, and even what they called 'the war to end all wars' was not enough to convince nations to dissolve their boundaries. The League died.

If politicians really were being controlled, you would think at least one would break ranks and cry out against it. Many did. One was no less than former New York City Mayor John Haylan:

"These international bankers and Rockefeller-Standard Oil interests control the majority of the newspapers and magazines in this country. They use the columns of these papers to club into submission or drive out of office public officials who refuse to do the bidding of the powerful corrupt cliques which compose the invisible government...."

The warning of Theodore Roosevelt has much timeliness today, for the real menace of our republic is this invisible government which like a giant octopus sprawls its slimy length over City, State, and nation... It seizes in its long and powerful tentacles our executive officers, our legislative bodies, our schools, our courts, our newspapers, and every agency created for the public protection...

To depart from mere generalizations, let me say that at the head of this octopus are the Rockefeller-Standard Oil interest and a small group of powerful banking houses generally referred to as the international bankers. The little coterie of powerful international bankers virtually run the United States government for their own selfish purposes.

They practically control both parties, write political platforms, make cat's-paws of party leaders, use the leading men of private organizations, and resort to every device to place in nomination for high public office only such candidates as will be amenable to the dictates of corrupt big business...

These international bankers and Rockefeller-Standard Oil interests control the majority of newspapers and magazines in this country." John Hylan, Mayor of New York 1927

These warnings fell on deaf ears, drowned out by the music and excitement of the roaring 20's. People don't tend to complain much in times of prosperity, so the money changers used this boom time they had created to defuse any complaints about their growing control.

DEPRESSION IN 1929

Stack in front of you the biographies of all the Wall Street giants, J.P. Morgan, Joe F. Kennedy, J.D Rockefeller, Bernard Baruch, and you'll find they all marvel at how they got out of the stock market and put their assets in gold just before the crash.

Non mention a secret directive, since revealed, sent by the father of the Federal Reserve, Paul Warburg, warning of the coming collapse and depression.

With control of the press and the education system, few Americans are aware that the Fed caused the depression. It is however a well known fact among leading top economists.

"The Federal Reserve definitely caused the Great depression by contracting the amount of currency in circulation by one-third from 1929 to 1933." Milton Friedman, Nobel Prize winning economist

"It was not accidental. It was a carefully contrived occurrence... The international bankers sought to bring about a condition of despair here so that they might emerge as rulers of us all." Rep. Louis T.McFadden (D-PA)

"I think it can hardly be disputed that the statesmen and financiers of Europe are ready to take almost any means to re-acquire rapidly the gold stock which Europe lost to America as the result of World War I." Rep. Louis T. McFadden (D-PA)

40 billion dollars somehow vanished in the crash. It didn't really vanish, it simply shifted into the hands of the money changers. This is how Joe Kennedy went from having 4 million dollars in 1929 to having over 100 million in 1935. During this time the Fed caused a 33% reduction of the money supply, causing deeper depression.

HOW THE FED CREATES MONEY

We've been talking about how the privately owned Federal Reserve can produce money from thin air. Here's how it's done.

1. The purchase of bonds is approved by the Federal Open Market Committee.
2. The Fed buys the bonds which it pays for with electronic credits made to the sellers bank. These credits are based on nothing.
3. The receiving banks then use these credits as reserves from which they can loan out ten times the amount.

To reduce the amount of money in the economy they simply reverse the process.

The Fed sells bonds to the public and money is drawn from the purchaser's bank to pay for them. Each million withdrawn lowers the banks ability to loan by 10 million.

The Federal bank in this way has overall control of the US money supply, as each country's central bank does it the same way. The bankers, through the magic of fractional reserve banking have been delegated the right to create 90% of the money supply. This control makes a mockery of any elected government. It places so called leaders behind a toy steering wheel, like the plastic ones, set up to amuse small children.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Or as Rep. Charles Lindbergh, father of famous aviator Lucky Lindy puts it when commenting on the Federal Reserve Act:

"This act establishes the most gigantic trust on earth. When the President signs this bill, the invisible government by the Monetary Power will be legalized.

The people may not know it immediately, but the day of reckoning is only a few years removed... The worst legislative crime of the ages is perpetrated by this banking bill." Rep. Charles Lindbergh (R-MN)

Or as Woodrow Wilson put it:

"We have come to be one of the worst ruled, one of the most completely controlled governments in the civilized world - no longer a government of free opinion, no longer a government by... a vote of the majority, but a government by the opinion and duress of a small group of dominant men. [bankers]

Some of the biggest men in the United States, in the field of commerce and manufacture, are afraid of something. They know that there is a power somewhere so organized, so subtle, so watchful, so interlocked, so complete, so pervasive, that they had better not speak above their breath when they speak in condemnation of it." Woodrow Wilson

In order to clearly establish that this is not a conspiracy theory, but is actually how things are controlled, we further quote Charles Lindbergh. From the house of representatives, Lindbergh was well placed to see exactly what was happening back then and continues to happen today.

"To cause high prices all the federal reserve board will do will be to lower the re-discount rate..., producing an expansion of credit and a rising stock market; then when... business men are adjusted to these conditions, it can check... prosperity in mid-career by arbitrarily raising the rate of interest.

It can cause the pendulum of a rising and falling market to swing gently back and forth by slight changes in the discount rate, or cause violent fluctuations by greater rate variation, and in either case it will possess inside information as to financial conditions and advance knowledge of the coming change, either up or down. [what a grand scheme]

This is the strangest, most dangerous advantage ever placed in the hands of a special privilege class by any Government that ever existed. The system is private, conducted for the sole purpose of obtaining the greatest possible profits from the use of other people's money. They know in advance when to create panics to their advantage. They also know when to stop panic. Inflation and deflation work equally well for them when they control finance..." Rep. Charles Lindbergh (R-MN)

ADOLF'S BANKERS

Most all will be aware of Hitler's rise to power. What they probably don't know is that he was almost completely financed by money drawn from the privately owned American Federal Reserve.

"After WWI, Germany fell into the hands of the international bankers. Those bankers bought her and they now own her, lock, stock, and barrel. They have purchased her industries, they have mortgages on her soil, they control her production, and they control all her public utilities.

The international German bankers have subsidized the present Government of Germany and they have also supplied every dollar of the money Adolph Hitler has used in his lavish campaign to build up threat to the government of Bruening.

When Bruening fails to obey the orders of the German International Bankers, Hitler is brought forth to scare the Germans into submission...

Through the Federal Reserve Board over $30 billion of American money has been pumped into Germany. You have all heard of the spending that has taken place in Germany...

Modernistic dwellings, her great planetariums, her gymnasiums, her swimming pools, her fine public highways, her perfect factories. All this was done on our money. All this was given to Germany through the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Reserve Board has pumped so many billions of dollars into Germany that they dare not name the total. Congressman Louis T. McFadden (D-PA) who served twelve years as Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

FORT KNOX

In 1933 new President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill forcing all the American people, to hand over all their gold at base rate. With the exception of rare coins. He disowned himself from the bill claiming to not have read it and his secretary of the treasury claimed this was "what the experts wanted".

Bought at bargain basement price with money produced from nothing by the Federal Reserve, the gold was melted down and stacked in the newly built bullion depository called Fort Knox. Once collected in 1935 the price of gold was raised from $20.66 up to $35 per ounce, but only non American gold qualified to be sold. This meant those who had avoided the crash by investing in gold they had shipped to London could now nearly double their money while the rest of America starved.

But that's not all folks. By the end of WWII Fort Knox did hold 70% of the world's gold, but over the years it was sold off to the European money changers while a public audit of Fort Knox reserves was repeatedly denied. Rumors spread about missing gold.

"Allegations of missing gold from our Fort Knox vaults are being widely discussed in European circles. But what is puzzling is that the Administration is not hastening to demonstrate conclusively that there is no cause for concern over our gold treasure - if indeed it is in a position to do so." Edith Roosevelt

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Finally in 1981 President Ronald Reagan was convinced to have a look into Fort Knox with a view to re-introducing the Gold Standard. He appointed a group called The Gold Commission. They found that the US Treasury owned no gold at all. All the Fort Knox gold remaining is now being held as collateral by the Federal Reserve against the national debt. Using credits made from nothing. The Fed had robbed the largest treasure of gold on earth.

WORLD WAR II (1939-1945)

World War II saw the US debt increased by 598%, while Japan's debt went up by 1,348%, with France up by 583% and Canada up by 417%.

When you hear this, what is your first impression? Do you automatically think this is bad or this is good? Most of us feel a well programmed sense of desperation when we hear figures like this, but remember, to the money changers, this is music to their ears.

With the hot war over, the cold war began, the arms race causing more and more borrowing. Now the money changers could really concentrate on global domination. Step one, the European Monetary Union and NAFTA. Step two, centralize the global economy via the World Bank, the IMF and GATT (now the WTO).

THE WORLD CENTRAL BANK (1948 - Present)

In Washington, the headquarters of both the World Bank and the IMF (International Monetary Fund) face each other on the same street. What are these organizations, and who controls them?

To find out we need to look back to just after WWI. At this point the money changers were attempting to consolidate the central banks under the guise of peacemaking. To stop future wars they put forward the formation of a world central bank named the Bank of International Settlements, a world court called the World Court in the Hague, and a world executive for legislation called the League of Nations.

In his 1966 book entitled Tragedy and Hope, president Clinton's mentor Carroll Quigley writes about this.

"The powers of financial capitalism had [a] far-reaching [plan], nothing less than to create a world system of financial control in private hands able to dominate the political system of each country and the economy of the world as a whole. This system was to be controlled in a feudalist fashion by the central banks of the world acting in concert, by secret agreements arrived at in frequent meetings and conferences.

The apex of the system was to be the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, a private bank owned and controlled by the world's central banks which were themselves private corporations.

Each central bank... Sought to dominate its government by its ability to control treasury loans, to manipulate foreign exchanges, to influence the level of economic activity in the country, and to influence cooperative politicians by subsequent economic rewards in the business world." Carroll Quigley, Professor, Georgetown University

They got 2 out of 3. The League of Nations failed largely owing to the suspicions of the people and while opposition concentrated on this, the other two proposals snuck their way through. It would take another war to wear the public resistance down. Wall street invested heavily to rebuild Germany, as the Chase bank had propped up the Russian revolution.

Now the Chase merged with the Warburg's Manhattan Bank to form the Chase Manhattan which would later merge with the Chemical Bank to become the largest bank on Wall Street.

In 1944 the US approved its full participation in the IMF and the World Bank. By 1945 the second League of Nations was approved under the new name "The

UTOPIA or DEATH!

United Nations'. The war had dissolved all opposition. The methods used in the National Banking Act of 1864 and the Federal Reserve Act of 1913 were now simply used on a Global scale.

The Federal Reserve Act allowing the creation of Federal Reserve notes is mirrored by the IMF's authority to produce money called Special Drawing Rights (SDR's). It is estimated the IMF has produced $30 billion dollars worth of SDR's so far. In the United States SDR's are already accepted as legal money, and all other member nations are being pressured to follow suit. With SDR's being partially backed by gold, a world gold standard is sneaking its way in through the back door, which comes with no objection from the money changers who now hold two-thirds of the worlds gold and can use this to structure the worlds economy to their further advantage.

We have gone from the goldsmith's fraud being reproduced on a national scale through the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve, to a Global level with the IMF and the World Bank. Unless we together stop giving these exchange units their power by our collective faith in them, the future will probably see the Intergalactic Bank and the Federation of Planets Reserve set up in much the same way.

This radical transfer of power has taken place with absolutely no mandate from the people.

Nations borrow Special Drawing Right from the International Monetary Fund in order to pay interest on their mounting debts. With these SDR's produced at no cost, the IMF charges more interest. This, contrary to bold claims, does not alleviate poverty or further any development. It just creates a steady flow of wealth from borrowing nations to the money changers who now control the IMF and the World Bank.

The permanent debt of Third World Countries is constantly being increased to provide temporary relief from the poverty being caused by previous borrowing. These repayments already exceed the amount of new loans. By 1992 Africa's debt had reached $290 billion dollars, which is two and a half times greater than it was in 1980. A noble attempt to repay it has caused increased infant mortality and unemployment, plus deteriorating schools, and general health and welfare problems.

As world resources continue to be sucked into this insatiable black hole of greed, if allowed to continue the entire world will face a similar fate.

As one prominent Brazilian politician, Luis Ignacio Silva, put it: "Without being radical or overly bold, I will tell you that the Third World War has already started - a silent war, not for that reason any the less sinister. This war is tearing down Brazil, Latin America and practically all the Third World. Instead of soldiers dying there are children, instead of millions of wounded there are millions of unemployed; instead of destruction of bridges there is the tearing down of factories, schools, hospitals, and entire economies . . . It is a war by the United States against the Latin American continent and the Third World. It is a war over the foreign debt, one which has as its main weapon [as the] interest [rate], a weapon more deadly than the atom bomb, more shattering than a laser beam."

If a group or organization had used its hard earned money to help these developing nations, then we might sympathize that there should be a real effort to repay these loans. But the money used was created from fractional reserve banking. The money loaned to the Third World came from the 90% the banks allow themselves to loan on the 10% they actually held. It didn't exist, it was created from nothing, and now people are suffering and dying in an effort to pay it back.

This has gone beyond clever financing, it's whole sale murder and it's time we stopped it. We can!

End Quote.

Capitalism = Inequality = Protest & Revolution

In the 21st Century on Earth, the widespread inequality epidemics that those in power maintain through the capitalist system is to better keep control of the majority of Humankind. With the immense wealth that the ruling elites of the World possess, it should be clear that it is not about wealth anymore. Current imperialistic World rule and control is clearly not based on the acquisition of riches anymore for most of the filthy rich were born rich with inherited wealth.

The ruling classes have paid “think tanks” that spend every waking moment thinking of nothing but how to keep inequality going and not allow any other system but capitalism. They spread lies like the false belief that all vital World resources are scarce and there is not enough food on the planet to feed everyone. The Truth is there is enough of everything for several times the current World population to live healthy lives and every family being furnished with all that We desire and more.

The ruling-elites surely know this; if not the real facts of the extreme overabundance of present and future resources; at least the undeniable ability of workers and technology to enable and facilitate food production and all needed materials for all of Humanity to be lifted out of the unnecessary poverty and suffering that plagues Our Worldwide society today. However, the sinfully rich don't want to even inch one bit towards equality because it would interfere with the power they enjoy by dominating others.

Power and control is surely the most addictive social drug in Existence.

“When the power of love overcomes the love of power, the world will know peace.” Jimi Hendrix

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

The actions by the ruling class that cause most of the violence, war, death and suffering around the World, is to better control the precious resources that are in the Majority World (3rd World) and thus control the wealth-producing-process.

Most People in Society are Good Righteous People and will not accept theft, war or death in their name so, governments of exploitative nations hide this theft from their Citizens. They lie to the People through propaganda by having control of the media outlets that dish out news that tell half truths which form and confine the mind of the citizenry and support their imperial agendas.

One of the “system’s” greatest weapon is brainwashing of the Citizenry through media control, where news is made into just what they call it, “news stories”. Stories made-up with twists, turns, omissions and straight out lies to keep the masses thinking a certain way and believing things that will only benefit the devils at the top.

Most People are so socially brainwashed, they find it close to impossible to think out of the constrained and controlled social-norms of everyday living. This especially applies to the most brainwashed and immersed in media and capitalist influenced culture. Many Citizens in the imperial nations (like the U.S.A.) are led to believe that they have it good compared with the rest of the World, so they will always feel that they are actually fortunate to be a Citizen of that nation; simply because of the materialistic, individualistic and consumeristic cultural practices that make all the oppression and exploitation seem worth-while.

All across planet Earth there exists rampant oppression and suffering amongst the People and surely Faith is what keeps these Struggling and Suffering People Strong and Hopeful that Liberation will come, someday soon. But where are the Saviors?

There have been and are currently only a scatter of Brave Saviors and that is why most become Liberation Martyrs or Political Prisoners, because until the Masses wake up in unison and create a powerful Citizens Movement, it will always be an unmatched fight against "the system". Throughout Human history, that has been the vital factor in every rEvolutionary action that has attempted to stand up in protest, "numbers".

If a Village, Town or Community is under social control, physical and/or economical (as the Majority World is under) and only a small percentage of People are taking a stand in protest, while the Masses are totally complacent - success will always be hard won. The saddest fact in this whole situation is that when Liberation is attained and every socio-progressive step achieved thereafter, the "brainwashed" and "sell outs" will also reap the social benefits that result after every single rEvolution, regardless of their previous ignorance, complacency and even deadly opposition.

"I don't care if I fall as long as someone else picks up my gun and keeps on shooting." Che Guevara

Idiocracies in a “capitalist system”

- Economic Injustice: It's insane that People can be suffering from hypothermia in an apartment right above a linen store filled with blankets for sale. This is what an unfair and idiotic system like capitalism allows.
- Public Transportation: How can a public bus or train be empty but yet its impoverished Citizens (tax payers) can't get on for free. This is plain ole wrong to a Struggling People and worst to accept as a rightful People. If you try to get on a train or bus in the U.S.A. without paying the fare, you can be incarcerated and/or charged a fine, even if it is empty and you have no money.
- Inventions: Life as We know it would be totally different if We did not have the many inventions from all the inventors throughout time, from all the different cultures, races and creeds. It is immoral and downright wicked to keep an invention that can aid many in the World but instead choose to profit from it. In a sensible Society, after every invention We would hear lines like; “Hey People look what i have here for Us.” Instead, We hear “patent rights and high prices?”

Any invention made by any one person or group should be property of All, no ands, ifs or buts. No person, business, organization or entity should charge anyone for the use of any invention or discovery when it is obvious and logical that each and everyone of Us knows what We know due to the Collective effort of Humankind as a Whole throughout time. The simple things like mathematics, pen and paper that we take for granted was made possible only from the collective effort of Humanity. Inventors are improving and applying what they've learned from everyone else. It's like charging your family and instructors for your new abilities, all made possible by them.

Imagine the level of advanced technological achievements society would have if the labor put into discovering arms of violence had been put instead into Human wellbeing and Progress. We must change this before it is too late.

- “Working-Poor”: What an oxymoron. If you work, especially in the U.S.A., how can it still be possible for you to be Poor? Exploitation, class and economic inequality, that is why.

Wake up People this is clearly not True Democracy

- Taxes: How can the government blatantly steal from the impoverished Citizenry in the form of taxation, fees and fines and then use the same money to exploit them and go to war? All to make a handful of elites richer. This, along with wage-slavery keeps the Poor People of this Nation suffering along with the exploited immigrants who only come here due to hardships in their homeland caused by globalization and war.

- Subliminal Racism: Like “angel food cake” being white and “devil's food cake” being black and so many more other straight out racist social implications. These subtle and sneaky ways of touching the subconscious of the masses is another sad example of mind control. Institutionalized and cultural racism along with stereotypes are easily infused into the frail psyche of the Citizenry through subliminal advertising etc. Such social practices should never be allowed and must be exposed and decomposed as soon as possible.

- Economic and Legal Injustice: How can it be that someone steals some food and is locked up for years while a “white collar criminal” will steal millions from poor people and social programs and not even do one day of jail time. All the money that these white collar crimes drain from already lacking social programs affects the lives of millions and kills quite a few along the way. The rich steal millions of dollars and rarely see a jail cell. The even bigger crime is that they are already rich and do not need one penny for basic survival as opposed to “Criminals of Survival” that get incarcerated with outrageous sentences even if it is clear that they needed the money for basic survival and didn't want to hurt anyone.

- Outdated Laws: We live in society today that follows outdated, classist and racist laws that lack a “Humanistic Variable” that should be assumed and adopted in all laws, past, present and future.

The oppressive and idiotic illegalization of Herbs: How can herbs and anything that can be grown on the Earth that Nature has given Us, be illegal? If these substances affect the body and mind to the point where the individual commits an immoral social act, only then should there be objection and reaction from the affected. Possession of any substance or herbs should not be illegal since it is known that most People will seek ways to escape the grim realities of Our/Their chaotic lives by way of intoxication and emotional elevation. Also with the high cost of pharmaceuticals and the many side effects associated with them, the citizenry is forced to seek out natural/herbal substitutes.

Pharmacies sell the legal drugs that many times cause more ailments and even kills more People than the profit driven violence associated with illicit drugs. Tobacco and alcohol kills and plagues the Human body and mind with many ailments and inflictions that is a profitable situation for the medical industry. With that in mind it is easy to see why the medicinal herb of Cannabis/Marijuana leaf is illegal although it has no toxic effects. The laws of most Nations in the World are written and wielded on The People of the Ghettos where the culture and “coping habits” become a social crime. According to “Universal logic” as long as you are not hurting anyone, no crime has been committed. We cannot and should not impose on anyone’s Life and Peace as long as there is no external victim, per se.

The reason for these ideocracies and all others is the current racist, classist and capitalist system.

Protest & Revolution

Day after day across this troubled Earth there are protests against the widespread injustices and evil that is occurring every minute of every day and year of Our lives. Millions of People who are fed up with the unnecessary suffering are valiantly protesting against exploitation and standing up for positive change towards a Humanistic system of Equality and Fairness. Protests for simple pittances from corrupt politicians that have the laws and so, the lives of the Citizens in their hands and pockets. (It must be noted that the big bankers have the corrupt politicians in their pockets.)

Protests in 2011 have been global - 15October.net

Most are peaceful protests, all asking for Human rights and simple needs of survival from the ruling elites, upper classes and their crony puppet governments that exploit the working poor. Most of these protests are social rebellions filled with determined Citizens who are simply fed up and who are All valiantly fighting against social systems of exploitation, deceit and control.

"Political economy regards the proletarian like a horse, he must receive enough to enable him to work. It does not consider him, during the time when he is not working, as a human being. It leaves this to criminal law, doctors, religion, statistical tables, politics, and the beadle." Karl Marx

Public Protests Around The World by Anup Shah - November 07, 2011

<http://www.globalissues.org/article/45/public-protests-around-the-world>.

Mass protests, throughout history have come at a time when enough of the population has been affected by policies of the rulers and elite. They have often been met with brutal, efficient crackdown by the guardians of the elite, be they local police, militias, national militaries, or even another nation's military forces.

...as large as some of the protests may have been, they were typically met with hostility from the intellectual establishment and mainstream media, typically from the West which was generally benefiting from the corporate-oriented globalization it was controlling and shaping.

As economic growth in industrialized nations continue to suffer while unemployment rises ... mass protests have predictably erupted around the world. There is growing anger at the level of inequality (the so-called 1% who control much of the wealth, for example), corporate greed, lack of jobs, etc.

The 99%

We are the 99% from Wikipedia,

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/We_are_the_99%25

We are the 99% is a slogan originating from the Occupy Wall Street series of demonstrations in 2011. It is a reference to the difference in wealth between the top 1% and all the remaining citizens of the United States. The slogan became popular on the internet in the format of a picture of a person holding a piece of paper with their story on it, ending with "we are the 99%". This format was popularized by a Tumblr Blog www.wearthe99percent.tumblr.com and spread to other websites including Reddit and www.other99percent.org.

The average of which have been described as "testimonials from members of the middle class who took out loans to pay for education, took out mortgages to buy their houses and a piece of the American dream, worked hard at the jobs they could find, and ended up unemployed or radically underemployed and on the precipice of financial and social ruin.

[They] seem largely organized and carried out by the young, who are often amongst the jobless or those struggling, while also representing the views/concerns of all ages. Elderly and middle age protesters are no doubt there, too.

In some countries there are fears that it is getting close to violent as public anger boils... In others, protests have been peaceful in general but police crackdown has created further tensions.

Interestingly, the issues brought up by these protesters are similar to those written about around a decade earlier.

“No one makes a revolution by himself; and there are some revolutions which humanity accomplishes without quite knowing how, because it is everybody who takes them in hand.” George Sand

occupywallst.org

Occupy Wall Street is leaderless resistance movement with people of many colors, genders and political persuasions. The one thing we all have in common is that We Are The 99% that will no longer tolerate the greed and corruption of the 1%. We are using the revolutionary Arab Spring tactic to achieve our ends and encourage the use of nonviolence to maximize the safety of all participants.

This OWS Movement empowers real people to create real change from the bottom up. We want to see a general assembly in every backyard, on every street corner because we don't need Wall Street and we don't need politicians to build a better society. The only solution is WorldRevolution.

Below are posts/stories from the website www.wearethe99percent.tumblr.com

“We are the 99 percent. We are getting kicked out of our homes. We are forced to choose between groceries and rent. We are denied quality medical care. We are suffering from environmental pollution. We are working long hours for little pay and no rights, if we're working at all. We are getting nothing while the other 1 percent is getting everything. We are the 99 percent.”

UTOPIA or DEATH!

“I graduated from one of the country’s top universities with my Master’s and $150,000 in debt. I wanted to work in non-profit and help make the world a better place. Instead, I now work in business, giving advice to billion dollar companies on how to best push their products and deceive consumers into buying them. I do this because I have a 2 year old daughter who needs to be provided for, and a non-profit salary with an $1100 a month (25% of my income) student loan payment won’t cut it. Within weeks of her birth I started saving for her college education because I never want her to have the burden of student loans.

I want her to be able to follow her dreams, like I never got the chance to. However, I will still warn her that when people tell her she can be anything she wants to be, it’s a lie. You can only do what you want in life if you have the money, and none of the debt. I’m sad that I will have to tell her this. I’m sad that her future looks darker than any other generation before. I’m sad the American Dream is dying. I AM THE 99%.”

“I am 20 years old and a General Manager of a pizza chain. I work a minimum of 50 hours a week for my salary. I bust my ass every day. I starve myself to pay my bills, living off Ramen [soup] and the occasional luxury of a McDouble. I am so far in debt that I don’t have the time or money to go back to college.

My family has lived in poverty since I was born. Most of them have died due to lack of health insurance. I fight to break free. I’ve invested four years into my job, working long hours and days. If I don’t get a bonus this month I will lose everything. I’ve done everything I can to help people and live a good life, but I have nothing to show for it. I am the 99%.”

“I am an Illustration major-junior in college. I have Fibromyalgia, Epstein-Barr virus, I get sick constantly, and I’ve had bells palsy for 4 months now (second time!). I have medication for the fibromyalgia, a nice dorm and house, a wonderful family, and I am happy. I am very scared too. I can't find a job, my parents are supporting me. I don't even know how much money in loans I'll owe after I graduate, let alone how I'm going to make enough money to pay them. I'm scared that we're going to run out of money.

... I worry for myself, my family, my friends. But most of all, I worry for the economy, for the country, for every single one of us. I AM THE 99%. GOD BLESS US.”

“I am a 19-year old, first generation college student, who comes from a single-parent household. I've had a part-time job since I was 15 years old and am currently putting myself through a 4-year university. My mom works 60+ hours a week. She has a good job and I'm still going to graduate 40K in debt. She never asked for any handouts and NEITHER AM I. I am asking for equality. I'm tired of a system based on luck rather than hard work. And I'm one of the lucky ones. I am the 99%.”

“I know I have friends/family who don't get the 99% movement. I admit I'm not as knowledgeable as I should be. But let me put this in a real-life scenario for you: Congress just passed a law that allows PIZZA to be counted as a VEGETABLE in public school lunches. We are facing an epidemic of childhood obesity. Our children are the first generation to have a lower mortality rate than their parents. AND OUR CORPORATE-RUN “DEMOCRACY” IS KILLING THEM. I am disgusted. I am the 99%.”

“I am here for everybody, or rather the 99% that have been taken advantage of for so many years. Things are so much worse than 20 or even 30 years ago.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Everything goes up except wages and workers are expected to do so much more for less. I am the 99%.”

“I own a home. I have a steady income. I am a Veteran. I was deployed to Iraq twice. My friends died there. Since returning home I wouldn’t call what I have a life it is merely an existence. I had thought when I came home that the war would be over for me but some hells you cannot escape. Since returning home I have attempted suicide three times, been hospitalized six times and then discharged from the Army. Every day is a struggle for me to pay my bills and deal with my PTSD . I have no family, no children. Sometimes I wonder if I I will ever have a normal life or if I am a human being anymore.

The VA tries to help but the system is just overwhelmed. Every day is a struggle but I made it through today. God help me to make it another day. God Help us all! I AM THE 99%.”

“The reason I was motivated to join the Occupy Wall Street movement was to bring the voice of Abya Yala, the Indigenous Nation of the Americas; to let people know and to protest the abuses committed by corporations and governments, who force an exodus, in other words, forced migration, which is inhuman and dangerous. These powerful groups, concentrated in the financial community on Wall Street, go to our countries, backed by free trade agreements, to steal, contaminate the water, and take actions that increase global warming.

They also militarize and criminalize, persecuting or assassinating those who stand up to them to defend their lands. They provoke instability in the economies of “developing countries” and they destroy jobs in the “developed” countries. Our young people have huge debts in student loans and they are cutting all the social welfare programs. And they are the ones who don’t pay taxes! I am one of the 99%! - who pays taxes and has almost nothing.”

“My name is Guillermo. The economic crisis has personally affected me a great deal. Even though I work, I don’t make enough money to survive. The prices of basic goods have gone up, some things are three times as expensive as they used to be.

At my job, they let four people go. They said it was because of the economic crisis but now the five of us who are left are doing all the work for the same pay and in the same amount of time because they pressure us constantly. The rent has gone up as well. The subway is more expensive than it used to be and since I have a son in school, it’s much more difficult to support him.

I want to send very warm regards to everyone participating in Occupy Wall Street because it’s a noble cause. Don’t stop until you see a ray of hope in the midst all the billionaires’ greed. I hope the government makes them pay their fair share. How is it possible that I am one of the 99% and I pay more taxes than a billionaire?”

“I’m 28 years old. I have a good job, health insurance, no debt and my family is doing well. My life is good and I strive to be a good person. But you don’t have to have cancer to want to cure it, do you?

Greed has become cancer on the American dream. It is a cancer of our own creation. I am the 99% and I allowed this to happen, whether by apathy, ignorance or false hope. I accept responsibility. But I will not accept defeat. OCCUPY WALL STREET.”

The last company I worked for the owner used his homes, boats and cars as a tax write off for the company. I never saw them nor were they used for the company. He made us work our Saturdays UNPAID. Some people have been with the company for over 10 years and have not gotten a raise. He made us sign non-compete agreements – meaning we cannot work for another company like his for a year after being laid off, fired or quitting. For many of us it is the only industry we know.

Many are afraid to quit because they will not be able to survive the year until the non-compete agreement expires. The man has sued past employees for not adhering to the non-compete agreement and won. Over 30 people were laid off a week ago. We should not be sued for wanting to survive. We need to end corporate greed. They are the 99%. I am the 99%. I Occupied DC.”

“I am a college student. I will graduate in less than 18 months. Thankfully, I will leave college free of debt, unlike the majority of my peers. I am scared of what comes next. Being broke is part of the college experience. Now it seems to be a part of the American experience. I probably won’t get a job that my degree is supposed to help me get, even though I have a 3.4 GPA and activities and community service I can put on my resume.

Most of my friends who are done with school make less than $10/hr. as baristas, backbacks, waiters, and dog walkers. They are losing hope at the time in their lives when they should be full of hope. They tell me that their dreams started to fade the moment they took off their caps and gowns. I will be joining their ranks after I graduate. My generation is terrified by the thought of what this world is going to look like once our parents’ generation leaves us to pick up the pieces.

I am sick of seeing the youth of America stand by while the Wall Street oligarchs destroy our future! Our dreams are too valuable to waste. They will inspire a true change that we all need. I will be on the streets because I WANT THE FUTURE AMERICA PROMISED ME. I AM THE 99%.”

I feel guilty. It breaks my heart to see so many people without the means to survive. I long for change, for equality. I will camp at Occupy Miami until it's different. I will rage for progress with my human family. I am the 99%."

"I am 38 years old. I have a college degree. I owned a coffee house, but the economy and the state forced me to close my doors. I was 7.5 months pregnant with my first child. I lost everything, except my daughter. My husband works full-time but we can't afford to put our daughter and I on his insurance. It took me 1.5 years to find a part time job with no benefits. Debt has overwhelmed us. We will never be able to buy a home. I am back in school for nursing and praying to find a job when I am done. I have broken teeth and can't see a dentist...I hurt.

I am terrified for my future and my daughter's future. Something has to give! I don't want a handout, I want change! I demand a future for my child! I am the 99%!"

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Sadly to say, there is no legal action that can be taken that will affect profound social change; Simply because the highest court, the (ICC) “International Criminal Court” and the (UN) “United Nations” are virtually useless due to their lack of power and say-so against the ruling elites that control the major workings of this crazy life on Earth.

Years ago, when trying to figure out a way to affect Global politics and make a meaningful change for Humanity, i was contemplating the study of international law that deals with crimes against Humanity. Luckily, i was wise enough to research the power, if any, of the ICC (International Criminal Court). What i found out was that the highest court of the planet is not staffed by conscientious and Righteous People and the red tape and corrupt politics that surround it makes it useless for meaningful change.

No matter the charades that you read or see on tv, please know that this is the Truth! These institutions serve no real purpose but to deceive the People into believing that something is being done, for example, “curbing poverty” and “nuclear arms proliferation”. NATO and all other arms of the UN only serve as bandaids to Humanity's dilemmas and will never be allowed to truly solve any social ills, simply because those who control world politics are actually the direct cause and culprit of most of Humanity's social ills, wars, genocides, etc.

Plus why go to these corrupt bureaucratic courts anyway, with their conveniently crafted laws, procedures and puppet judges? People's Justice has always been the best Justice. Revolutionary People's Justice that seeks to rectify the wrongs and evils against Their Communities and Generations.

“We must confront the privileged elite who have destroyed a large part of the world.” Hugo Chavez

The following is an excerpt from a speech made by Walter Rodney, September 1979, at a street corner in Georgetown, Guyana. He would be assassinated less than a year later by the CIA and become Martyrized for all rEvolutionary eternity. Long live the brave fighting spirit of the Great Walter Rodney.

Our Youth & Our Liberation Struggle

“The note on which I will end is the question of our youth. The tragedy of [All] youth and it is a real tragedy, is that they have been shut out from politics. [...] Our youth have been kept politically uneducated. This is as the time when in the World at large, young people are setting forth new political directions in every nation.

In South Africa for example, you have heard of the Soweto uprising. Do you believe that those were adults alone in Soweto? School children, 14, 15 and 16 years old made the Soweto revolution. ...

So we want our young people to understand that all over the World people are taking political steps. Out of that same Soweto uprising I saw a girl from that same Soweto uprising, a young woman fourteen years of age. She went to fight for Soweto with nothing in her hands except for a handful of stones to throw against the government with all its guns and tanks. She had one leg shot off. When she was introduced by a reporter and she was speaking to him she said, "Yes, my leg has been shot off. But I went there to fight for dignity and for rights and for justice when I had two legs. Now I will go there and I will hop about on one leg and I will continue to fight," That's a fourteen year old sister.

I believe that all young people too would have that capacity. I believe that they're now beginning to be re-politicized, in other words, they're coming back to thinking out things for themselves because so long we were hiding from thinking. Hiding because we have certain fears that somebody else might get in or we might rock the boat and so on. But there is no boat left to rock. Just a sinking ship.

Brothers and sisters, [...] what we are saying to you, we say totally. The regime considers us a mob when we come together in big numbers. They call us a mob. We say, come together to draw strength from the traditions of resistance which have come down from the tradition of slavery and indentureship and anti-colonialism to the present time. And there is no force that has stopped it in any other part of the World. [...] But the change will come and what it will emphasize is people's power. That will continually be our emphasis. All power to the people!" Long Live Walter Rodney Revolution can be seen as a necessary Socio-political menstruation to unlog the pipes of society from the sludge of corruption and oppression.

In the U.S.A. as in all imperialist nations and centers of capital that have military occupations all over the globe, millions of Concerned and Conscious Activists within their "police states" come out frequently in protest against the unjustified actions of their uncontrollable government.

The maniacal U.S. government has made it crystal clear that against the will, want and need of the Citizenry, it will continue in maintaining the criminal course of waging unjust, unwarranted, imperial wars and sanctions on uncountable smaller Nations in the World. Like Palestine, Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya, Iran, Syria, Lebanon, North Korea, Cuba, ... and the list continues.

Corrupt governments of the U.S.A., U.K. and the beast of the Middle East, Israel, are bullying and massacring the Muslim & Arab Indigenous People of those lands. Special mention goes out to Valiant and Holy Palestine. The U.S.A. dishes out millions of dollars to Israel every day to support the historical, illegal, sinful and genocidal warfare against The Palestinian People and Their surrounding Neighbors, along with the outright theft of Their land and resources.

It must be noted that the state departments of the U.S.A. and Israel through “propaganda”, tell their citizens that the Oppressed are the terrorists. When in actuality they themselves are the first terrorists, the first aggressors, so any act thereafter in retaliation cannot be seen as terrorism but a True stand for Human Rights, Self Determination and Dignity. The Struggling Resistance and Liberation Struggles are always falsely painted as “insurgencies” or “terrorism” by the sold out mainstream media outlets (newspapers, television, internet, etc).

The real terrorists are the imperial nations and their neo-imperialistic military occupations across the globe, with their paid mercenaries and paramilitary death squads like Blackwater and Dynacorp along with the CIA and graduates of the “School of the Americas”.

They say one man's Freedom fighter is another's terrorist. Who is the True Freedom fighter then?

Most times one side is being lied to. If you are on the side of true sovereign rights for your People, if you are defending, you are most likely on the side of GOoD, because you are fighting for true-Freedom, in defense of oppressed People. Ofcourse, the U.S.A. military uses reverse psychology on its puppet military and has them believing they are actually fighting for “freedom” when in reality it’s the total opposite.

Know that all wars led by all the empirical rulers (Rome, U.S.A., U.K., Portugal, France, Germany, etc.) throughout time were for riches and power and on the side of colonization, oppression and evil.

Going way back in time from the beginning of World colonization, only a small percentage in the World would stand up against these imperial colonizers. Only a few would teach and spread the Truth, so only a small percentage currently knows The Truth.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

We have to thank The Valiant Martyrs, The Freedom Fighters of the People and Our Militant and Revolutionary Political Prisoners. We must thank and admire the many brave and Revolutionary Women who fought in “The Struggle” with more heart, conviction and guts than most men of the Earth. They fought with insight and strategies that not many men have matched to this day.

Wake up People! Stop letting corrupt governments run Our lives and Nations, cause war and so, create foreign enemies. We must be aware of internal enemies more-so than outers.

The US military and other super-power-allies, are sent to invade and massacre whoever gets in the way of imperialism, profit and power. Even Babies, Children, Women the Elderly and Freedom Fighters, who are only defending Their People and land, without a Holy doubt.

Artist: Marvin Gaye, Song: What's Going On?

The ruling elites along with all corrupt bureaucrats are always afraid of the “Truth”, so at all costs they have and will continue to stifle it. Especially since knowledge of the Truth in the hands of the People would surely (and it better), lead to a once and for all uprising for Humankind's Liberation.

"Rebellion without truth is like spring in a bleak, arid desert."

Kahlil Gibran

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Please Wake Up People!
Because It May Already Be Too Late!

Corruption in a Society's political and governing system does not mean that those are the only ones to blame for the current condition in which the Society finds itself. Everyone down the chain of command is to blame, from presidents, dictators, prime ministers, queens, kings and princes to majors, governors, generals, sergeants and captains in the military and police forces along with bankers, managers, supervisors and all who are in high positions that take part in the schemes of social control, exploitation and inequality.

Partly to blame also, are the complacent wage-slaves of present day corporate slavocracy. Even if you are just a worker of the devil, you become the devil manifest. For example; even an old man, or a mother or father who needs an immoral job to survive, still has the Human obligation to refuse to build a bomb, per se. Also a soldier or police officer who knows he or she is committing acts that are plain ole unjust, has the obligation to self and especially to the "People" to refuse any oppressive and right out sadistic orders by his/ her superior.

There is a serious problem with trying to reform a corrupt system of government that is flawed and has been crafted with inequality and exclusion as a built in variable. This system of government where elected officials are able to make decisions without consulting the "People" is unacceptable. Seeking to reform the system is not the way either. Trying to reform a corrupt and flawed system is the same as trying to change the way a virus affects the body as opposed to just eliminating the virus itself.

As political corruption increases, so do the perils of the People who depend on trustworthy politicians. Poverty, unemployment, crime, suffering and death increases. Without trustworthy leaders and politicians, government only serves the powers and elites that control it.

Lack of “Rites of Passage” in today’s Society

Simple rituals of rites of passage which symbolically took a person from childhood to adulthood and therefore accepted unconditionally by members of their village/community have been lost. It may seem like something simple but compared to many Indigenous societies and the one in which so-called industrialized and civilized society lives, the latter harbors selfishness, insecurities and even self-destructiveness. We can look at the social phenomena of “middle-age-crisis”, where men (mostly in western society) way into the end years of their Lives are still trying to prove that they are worthy. It seems that in so-called civilized society you die proving that you are worthy, all the while working to raise yourself up instead of the Community as a Whole.

In Indigenous Cultures, there were/are perfect models of social hierarchy that balance the intricacies of interaction between each individual and it's extended social Groups and Wholes.

In society today, We have rites of passage that are against and actually the exact opposite of what they should be. Like the twisted culture of joining the armed forces of your nation even if the nation uses its soldiers to oppress and repress. The saddest situation to this whole equation is when Youth from Oppressed Nations many times enter the U.S.A. and either they or their Children actually sign up and serve in the army of the same nation that exploits their homeland and resources - which is a direct cause of them having to immigrate to the the United Snates of America in the first place.

If men are paid to oppress and kill, they are not patriots or much less Freedom Fighters, they are simply puppets and mercenaries, nothing else. But yet most parents love the social status of the military for their children, even if they know it means having to murder, pillage and even die. The Exploited, Suffering, Struggling and Impoverished People from the Majority World are forced to seek out a better Life in the same Nations (U.S.A., U.K., Canada, France, etc.) that have historically exploited Their labor and resources and when They arrive to the Centers of Capital, They become third class citizens and unjustly criminalized.

Our Youth need to be raised with truth and consciousness and knowing that the only army to join is the People's army. Learning about rEvolution and the necessary evolutionary step of World Unity that is urgently needed to push the engines of Humanity onward should be paramount in social life for All Cultures. Simply because it is the right thing to do for the Evolution of the species, so that in the end We can Collectively have Peace on Earth.

The whole capitalist culture of egoism and separatism chisels away at the family structure and so, the strength of the Community, Nation and World. The capitalist system of work and school separates the family from birth to death. Sadly, the Family structure itself is not the true definition of Family anymore and so, the base of each Community (the Family) is unstable and in turn, naturally the Village, Town, Nation and World are also unstable. Only by eradicating the capitalist system will Society be able to take control of its future and wellbeing and begin to live sensibly and intelligently.

"It is no measure of health to be well adjusted to a profoundly sick society"

J. Krishnamurti

Social Misfits, Non-conformists & Criminals of Survival

Social misfits who have non-conforming, rebellious spirits end up labeled as criminals, simply because They refuse to go with the complacent flow of the pacifist masses of their Communities and Society as a Whole.

The system expects the Poor to stay poor and in Our place even in the face of outright injustice in all facets of Our lives, economically and structurally. If a family is starving, procedures are to be followed; like applying for welfare or unemployment or stand in line and wait, wait and wait. This is ridiculous to expect from a Struggling and Exploited People and even worse to accept when the rich is wasting money, resources and food. How dare you expect someone to stand by while their family starves, while others live lavish, wasteful and sinful lives?

Criminals of Survival are Persons that due to the inequality in Their Nations and Communities, commit “equalizing acts” to survive. If there is no equality, the criminal is in essence, equalizing things. This equalizing act is labeled as a crime, a so called immoral act. But who commits the first immoral act? It is not the criminal, it is the person that keeps goods and capital to themselves and/or spends money on unnecessary objects instead of thinking about others first and even neighbor. So the person that has and does not share commits the first act of immorality and any act thereafter in reaction to the act of selfishness, is an equalizing act, not a criminal one.

Criminals who steal when they do not have the need to, are true criminals due to greed and a materialistic-consumeristic culture, for surely it is the materialistic tendencies within capitalist society that has implanted the drive to consume and acquire goods that are not bare necessities.

Freedom Fighters and Revolutionary Thugs; the only way you go wrong is in harming innocent People and especially your own Communities.

"Poverty is the parent of revolution and crime."

Aristotle

The unbiased logic and Love inherent in Children who lack social prejudice and western-fascist-culture shows that GOoDness and Positivity is Our first inclination and instinct as Human Beings. Anything else is ideological, flawed, backward and has been stitched into the social fabric of Our unfortunate media-influenced psyche and cultures. It soaks into all walks of Life throughout the whole system of neo-imperialistic draconian control, manipulation and right out brainwashing of the Citizenry.

Political Prisoners

Due to the many unjust “operations” by the U.S. government against anyone standing for Justice, against racism, classism and capitalism, many GOoD Souls have become either Martyrized or held as Political Prisoners.

Our brave and selfless Political Prisoners have been locked away for too long. How can We allow Our Angels of Freedom to be engaged and deprived of their rightful Freedom while We relax and just live-on while they suffer. The Freedom they lost and sacrificed is the same that they fought to secure for Us All. They are there for caring, for acting on part of justice and it must be noted that if the rest of Us had been awake and fighting along their sides, chances are, They would not be there.

Political Prisoners would/should be the first social wrong that We should right. For now We cannot allow any fascist government to kill anymore Political Prisoners. We must act soon People! We must liberate Our People by force if needed. Just imagine if it were you in there; after all normative avenues like legal appeals have been exhausted, you would say, “well, just come get me out by force People, Please.” And that is exactly what We need to be doing.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Think out of the box of social norms and legal constrictions. Be creative, be innovative, be Righteous!

This message especially goes out to the correctional officers/servants who get to know the true souls of these rEvolutionaries.

Surely those civil servants who have a heart have emotionally connected to these incarcerated Souls and must face so much social and internal strife. For, although they are not the cause of the thwarted social systems that lead to the unjust incarceration of those humble and selfless individuals, they happen to be the end of the social stick of injustice, oppression and repression.

So the civil servant is in the worst of situations. If s(he) is someone with a conscience they surely will find it an emotional task to deal with their job. Their job is to keep innocent People engaged along with with a few guilty.

Political Prisoners surely pain at the slowness of the Struggle, or lack of it, for surely what must go through their minds once in a while is; “was their rEvolutionary Sacrifice worth it?” Surely the answer to this question will always be Yes! Without a “rEvolutionary doubt”. Simply because all resistance, individual or Collective, is a blow against the system. Whether the action is known by many or by none, it still counts as a blow and every blow counts.

In the laws of every land, a Revolutionary should be seen as the utmost civil servant of the People. Free all Political Prisoners, especially Mumia Abu-Jamal.

Suggested Strategies for a Smooth Revolution

"A non-violent revolution is not a program of seizure of power. It is a program of transformation of relationships, ending in a peaceful transfer of power."

Mohandas K. Gandhi, Non-violence in Peace and War (1948)

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

In seeking to find a solution to the chaos in the World, the Global inequality epidemics and the social unrest thereby caused; We should first take control of the “mainstream media outlets” for this is the quickest way to awaken the masses and consequently it is the capitalist “mass media” that has a strong influence and grip on Society by the big lies and stories they wield and fabricate.

Of utmost importance is the People’s need to declare that there will/should be no more rent, no more fees or the use of traditional money. Free universal healthcare is so critical also and is as vital a need as food and shelter. The only way for there to be free healthcare is if the hospitals and doctors do not have to worry about paying for rent, light or water, etc (bare necessities). This is not macro or micro economics, this is common sense.

The best way for this rEvolutionary change to work is for it to be a Global, Unified and synchronized action. Trade and barter will be the best move/strategy, which in time should evolve into just sharing on a Global networked system of Collective, fair, intelligent and Progressive priorities.

All property should be considered as more part of the Whole Community, as opposed to one family or individual, and this should also apply from Community to Community throughout the World. It is the only way to make equality a Human right. Point blank!

Basic Rights and Necessities

As a People’s movement, We can be so much more effective and able if We first fight, at least for “basic Human needs” like housing, food and healthcare. Then the usual economic constraints that keep the majority of People from participating in the Struggle to free Humankind from the grips of ignorance and exploitation will fade. This would also serve as an example of self determination and People Power to show the masses that heaven on Earth is possible if We rule out the root of all evil, profit and capitalism.

money = individualism = corruption = inequality

We need to stop using money World wide and use a fair system of resource allocation and fair trade. We don't need any money to solve Humanities problems, because the use of money is actually Our biggest obstacle (corrupt politicians second) in accomplishing all that needs to be done to better the lives of Humanity (as a Whole). We need to Collectively decide that We will not use money and will simply share. The big bankers and corrupt politicians lose their power if we collective act together and simply ignore and undermine their grand scheme of effective and systematic mind-control.

So much will be accomplished and solved this way. World Wide sharing of resources on a fair balanced and classless system. Making change can and will be so easy when there is simply, Unity and the synchronization of plans, projects, and movements. (True World Unity) (One World Unity). True World Unity will only be possible with the respect of everyone's customs and traditions especially that of Religion. I'm sure GOD is above religion and beyond the shallowness of preferring one cultural practice over another.

A wave of actions for World-equality should come, which must include reparations for All African, Indigenous People and All previously colonized and enslaved Native Aborigines of All lands across planet Earth. Women should also receive reparations for their very unfortunate and oppressive faith that they have been dealt by man in all his faulted and sinful ways.

“Think globally and act locally.” David Brower

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

We must coordinate through Grassroots Community organizations, that network Nationally and Globally to create Worldwide wellbeing, Peace and Progress.

Human Progress and Happiness will naturally increase, because when all of Our waking time and energy is spent on survival, which as a species We've already mastered, We miss out on the miraculous miracle of Life. We miss out on Our existence even if it is to just live and die on Earth in Peace.

The current state of chaos in the World may look hopeless but it is not, simply because We are aware of the Truth. Imagine if information was not as Worldwide as it is, things would be so much more chaotic, with more widespread exploitation, war, disease and starvation, which would disallow any structured and positive analysis of the current Global situation.

What aids us today is the speed of information. Unfortunately this speed of information has also given the “system” a great tool to better oppress and repress the “new age corporate work slave” and “second class citizen”.

Throughout time there have been countless Struggles, protests and rEvolutions that have held colonization, imperialism and globalization at bay for centuries. From the heartless religious crusades and colonization to the slow death of imperialism, rivers of blood have flowed and the Struggle continues. It is harder now and will become harder to continue the Struggle for Equality & Peace due to the variables of technology, invention and innovation and the tight control of the mega media outlets by a sinister few (the richest of the rich – the 1 percenters).

We must stay awake and aware, learn more, listen to Our hearts, Organize, Unite, keep building and joining Progressive GrassRoots movements and organizations, strategize and synchronize. The revolutionary and evolutionary manifestations that are forming and growing fast through the Oppressed Masses must be capitalized on.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Most importantly We Must Unite as a One World Movement and aim for the best goal, the biggest goal and the Whole goal, which is Utopia. A One World Cooperative society that puts Equality and Collective Progress as first priority; The Whole of Humanity, the Whole of the Earth and the Whole of the Universe before any individual or group.

Remember no matter who you are or what you are, affiliations, race, or anything else, from a ceo on wall street to the "Working Poor" of the Ghettos throughout the Planet; We all make up the Whole of Humanity and for that simple fact, You count, We each count.

The mountain is nothing without each little grain of sand. The Earth is nothing without each atom, as We also are nothing without the subatomic building blocks of matter and Life that makes Us what We are and sustain Us. We All can and must contribute to the Struggle for the Progress of Humanity. If you care about the future that is, because that is the key factor in any progressive movement, whether individual or group; Do you care about the all encompassing Future?

"To be a revolutionary you have to be a Human being. You have to care about people who have no power." Jane Fonda

"Those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable." John F. Kennedy (1962)

Clearly, the most effective revolution would be a Worldwide one. Simply one revolution by All races of this one Human Race. The intelligent and logical move for Us as a People is to realize Our kinship as Human Beings on Mother Earth regardless of race, religion or class.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

A big problem in all struggles is lack of Unity amongst all Oppressed People. There exists no Global cooperation, synchronization and complementation of actions and reactions towards one rEvolutionary goal of Equality, Peace and Progress.

The end result is a few brave Souls in each Oppressed Community across this Earth taking a stand against “the system” of fascism, which due to the unequal force is clearly “revolutionary suicide” as the Legendary Huey P. Newton of the Black Panther Party stated decades back.

Unless We Unite, We will forever live in social chaos and face suffering, death and possible extinction. We need to realize Our Collective power and use it. The state of the World at the present moment in time is too critical for Us as so called intelligent Life-forms to continue to ignore.

The sickening thing to look at is that the upper classes and ruling elites are also suffering and dying from the pillage of industrialization. They are allowing the pollution of the Earth on a grand scale that is irreversible while their offspring breathe the same air and eat the same polluted food as the rest, but yet they continue to murder and pillage - all for egoism and power. This one suicidal fact should be all that is needed to convince anyone who still has any doubt whether We as a People and Civilization need do something profound about Our current situation of possible World annihilation.

We must expect violence and opposition from the ignorant and brainwashed. It may be a hard-won battle but if We Unite and fight, the losses from the ensuing battle/resistance will be way less than the long term suffrage if We do not do anything and let this evil system kill Us slowly.

Regardless of what happens, it will go down in history and its lessons will be learned and analyzed by proceeding generations, Anarchists, Militants, Socialists, Communists, Marxists, Activists and Liberation Struggles. It will wake up many and inform them of “The Struggle to save Humanity” - a Struggle that is at a critical and epic point.

Pseudo-Democracy

“When the tyrant has disposed of foreign enemies by conquest or treaty, and there is nothing more to fear from them, then he is always stirring up some war or other, in order that the people may require a leader.” Plato

“No country can be well governed unless its citizens as a body keep religiously before their minds that they are the guardians of the law, and that the law officers are only the machinery for its execution, nothing more.” Mark Twain

Too many People seem to not pay much attention to Our rights as the Citizenry and remember that public and civil servants are called “servants” specifically because they are the servants of the Citizenry. “We the People”, supposedly elect and in a sense, hire them and then they go on as if they rule Us. It is unbelievable that We accept this, but that is because mostly everyone else accepts it; except ofcourse the so-called tree-huggers, Activists, Protesters and Revolutionaries.

“Voters don't decide issues, they decide who will decide issues”. George Will

“Democracy consists of choosing your dictators, after they've told you what it is you want to hear”. Alan Coren

What has happened is that the governing rulers of the World, most of them following the “machiavellian” golden-rule of People control by way of “divide and conquer”, “deceit and propaganda”; have fallen into the flaw in every strategy that involves deceit. In choosing to deceive the Citizenry into believing that they are part of a “democratic” Nation, they always have to keep the show and deceit going. They have had to keep up the lie of democracy and so are faced always with the wrath of an enraged Citizenry that is fighting for what is rightfully theirs.

Soon the People come to realize the lie in the so called democracy and begin to rise-up, as All Oppressed People do when they become aware of the unnecessary suffering, oppression, exploitation and the stench of the rotting dead.

“Two birds disputed about a kernel, when a third swooped down and carried it off.” Afrikan proverb

Divide and conquer is an old strategy used by insane kings and colonizers and especially white “explorers” who fell upon already discovered and inhabited lands. When a land, Nation or People is of economic or strategic importance to any individual or group, the easiest and most strategic way to take control is to simply “divide” the Citizens. Make them fight amongst themselves and make them kill each other as much as possible, so they can be distracted from being robbed of their land, resources and freedom. They then become conquered without even realizing what has happened. Throughout the ages, this has been used by conquerors like boxers use the hook or the jab.

Our brave Revolutionaries have been passing this valuable knowledge down, so We are able to see beyond the “scheme of things” and the social chaos that is driven by division and fueled by lies and deceit. What helps the ruling class and “the system” maintain social control more than anything is twisted truths and lies in the media, which is called “propaganda”.

Why? Why do We allow the idiocracy of bureaucracy?

"When dictatorship is a fact, revolution becomes a right." Victor Hugo

So many maniacal dictators, kings, presidents and politicians have read "makevellie's" social control manuals to gain sinister insight on what forms of government and social control works best after defeating all resistance on a seized Nation. How to govern it well and long term, without uprising from the "Masses" that without question will be exploited and oppressed physically and mentally, along with having their resources confiscated.

In the proceeding excerpt "makevellei" states that you must set up an oligarchy, which is a government that is run by a few:

"Concerning the way to Govern Cities or Principalities which Lived Under their Own Laws before they were Annexed."

"Whenever those states which have been acquired as stated have been accustomed to live under their own laws and in freedom, there are three courses for those who wish to hold them: the first is to ruin them, the next is to reside there in person, the third is to permit them to live under their own laws, drawing a tribute and establishing within it an oligarchy which will keep it friendly to you. Because such a government, being created by the prince, knows that it cannot stand without his friendship and interest and does it utmost to support him; and therefore he who would keep a city accustomed to freedom will hold it more easily by the means of its own citizens than in any other way."

Makevellie

"Anyone that wants the presidency so much that he'll spend two years organizing and campaigning for it is not to be trusted with the office".

David Broder

It is important to note that the People don't choose the candidates either, the candidates are only options that have been imposed on the Citizenry. The problem is that in corrupt Nations, all political voting options become options only by having a lot of money and connections with corrupt and complacent politicians along with the ruling/upper class.

As for the “True Community Leaders” who truly come from the Community and are genuinely trying to make Progressive Change for the Community and not their pockets or some other intrinsic reason; s(he) will find it hard to make it through the bureaucratic red tape that requires wealth and political connections to play the game of government and “People control”.

“Democracy in today’s world is an illusion. It always was. People think they have “choice” in our current system because they can press a button on a voting machine and put some pre-selected person into power. Once that person is in power, the public then has no power. Did you vote for the space program? Did you vote for the cabinet of the new president? Did you vote for the tax cut? Did you vote for where highways or power grids go? Did you vote for the war in Iraq? No, you didn’t. The traditional concept of a “participatory democracy” is a cruel joke. The game has been used to give the public the illusion of control for countless generations, while the distorted monetary powers at the top continue to do whatever they please. There never was a true democracy in any country in history and there never will be as long as the monetary system is in operation and scarcity is perpetuated.”

The Zeitgeist Movement

That's what it boils down to, government's major role in most Nations (except true cooperative democracies of course) is simply to control the People, use Our labor, enslave Us and have Us Struggling while the rich and mostly white elites lay back and live an easy, worry free Life. They create a social climate where the belief is that this is just how it is and this is the best way and only way. But they only accomplish this with deceit through the mass media outlets that they own and control along with the pacifist church.

Many corrupt public and civil servants will waste money and resources on senseless investments and allocations, instead of thinking about the suffering and Struggling People who put them in office and power and who are supposed to be their first and only priority. Yet, all across the World, governments are openly and knowingly corrupt but yet, the People accept it and die suffering in the process; along with setting up Our future generations for an even worst fate.

A soldier or police officer who knows he or she is committing acts that are unjust and oppressive has the Human-moral-obligation to refuse any and all unjust and especially those right out sadistic orders by their superiors against "The People". Their superiors are also civil servants of the Oppressed Citizenry but they are not there to protect or serve All People, they are there to protect the "capital" (property) of the ruling/upper classes.

It must be remembered that they are Our civil servants, because "We The People", (Black, Brown, Red, Yellow and white, Lower and upper classes) hired them and We simply cannot allow our servants to master Us.

"Politics is war without bloodshed, while war is politics with bloodshed".

Mao Tse-tung

Social Hierarchic Pyramids exploitation = wealth = power

Below is a diagram of Our Society's pyramid hierarchic structure

The base of all “Human-representative-figures” have Black pyramids as their feet to symbolize Their roots as Afrikan People, Black People. Even the whites at the top are originally from the cradle of civilization, Afrika (way, way back) as all Humans are, and for that reason have Black bases also. The number seven is a number that represents GOD in many Cultures, so seven Human representatives form the base of the pyramid as the foundation.

People at the bottom of the pyramid are not smiling, while the ones at the top naturally have the biggest smiles. Notice that at the top of the pyramid there are only whites. The one at the top (representing the ruling elites) has both hands down because it represents the upper-class that doesn't do much of any labor/work. It is being supported by the rest at the bottom and so has no one to support. Below are the other whites, the not so rich who have less money and so, less power. They have one arm up supporting the one at the top, but since it is not a heavy weight they have a free arm. They are the top with stolen riches from exploitation and do not have much labor to do.

Both the two top layers represent all filthy-rich of which We know most are white. Their arms have points to them in the shape of a weapon to represent their social position as oppressors. They also possess the red horns of the devil for they do the devil's handiwork without a Holy doubt.

Certain representations are blindfolded to show them being blind to the Truth of their situations and role. Notice that the ones at the top have no blindfolds because they know the Truth of their actions and the game being played with civilization. All the way down at the bottom of the social pyramid, most are open eyed and not blindfolded because the most oppressed are usually more aware and/or concerned with inequality than those more well off.

Please People, you must see through the veil of deceit that is upon your eyes and look past what you've been thought and led to believe by a misguided, corrupt and complacent society and leadership. Many of Our leaders have led Us astray because they were lead astray. That's why We need to do away with single leadership and pyramid hierarchies and instead keep the power with the People, with the Masses and the Universal Progressive General Consensus.

No more unequal and unbalanced exploitative pyramid hierarchies, social or governmental. Equality in every action is the only intelligent and just way for every Community (local and Global) to coexist.

The World is run by the richest group of so called elites, which are a handful of evil white men that have inherited riches and wealth from decades and centuries of Human exploitation and sinful treachery by their ancestors.

Which is what has kept all their generations and their class at the top of the social pyramid. They make up less than 1% of world population.

Due to the historical prevalence of racism in the World, most whites benefit and benefited from slavery, colonization, racial discrimination and exploitation, even if not directly involved and even if morally opposed to the savagery and injustice. As long as economic reparations are not made to All Afrikan and Indigenous People, while Society remains in a capitalist system, a disproportionate number of whites will always be at the top of the economic ladder and pyramid of success.

Economic reparations are vital in a capitalist system to bring a bit of equality to the historically exploited, but to wait for that and continue in such a corrupt system is not the answer either.

This also means that whites may also become the only race to survive on Earth, for most non-whites will perish through the perils of poverty and inequality. This is no “nazi”, “aryan” or “white supremacy” conspiracy-theory influenced by science fiction or fear of a white planet. This is simply Humankind’s Universal Righteous Truth! If capitalism and inequality persists, only the extremely rich (which are all white) will survive this chaos of hell on Earth.

Any Human Being that has not awakened their mind, heart and soul to the grand importance of Love and Unity over fear, hate and egoism has not fully evolved and is stuck in primitive survival mode. A Human being that thinks of themselves more than others has not grasped the evolutionary wisdom of Selflessness and Cooperation for the Progress of All.

The statistics on the disparity between sinfully rich and Poor People is just plain wrong and cannot be allowed to continue. We cannot accept this People! Especially you Young People now growing up in this crazy World.

Our best strategy is to start anew whenever possible. Start over with all new knowledge and methods, with safer and more progressive actions that take the Whole World into consideration in every thought. And of course, remembering that We cannot and must not allow social pyramids of power.

A few statistics to reflect upon:

- Every Year AT LEAST close to a 100 million innocent men, women and children needlessly and ruthlessly perish on this planet from hunger, starvation, disease and malnutrition.

- Each day more than 2 billion people worldwide (1/3 of the planet's current 6 billion inhabitants) live in absolute abject poverty.

- 1.5 billion people in the world today struggle to survive on US$1/day.

- 3 billion people in the world today struggle to survive on US$2/day.

-The top 400 billionaires now enjoy a combined net worth equal to the poorest 2.5 billion people on the planet.

- The seven largest economies of the world- the US, Germany, Japan, Canada, France, Italy and the UK- which make up less than 12 percent of the world's population, consume 43% of the world's fossil fuels and 64% of the world's paper.

- The United States, the largest economy in the world, with less than 5% of the world's population, consumes nearly 1/4th of all fossil fuels, more than 1/3rd of all paper, while creating 50% of the world's solid waste.

- 1.5 billion people worldwide DO NOT have access to clean drinking water.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

- 20 percent of people living in high-income countries consume (and waste) 86% of all the world's goods and services. The poorest 20%, by contrast, consume just 1.3 percent.

- The world's 225 richest individuals have a combined wealth of over US$1 trillion- equal to the annual income of the poorest 50% of the entire population of the planet.

- 60% of people living in poverty worldwide are women.

- The US, the wealthiest nation on earth, now has the widest gap between rich and poor of any industrialized nation.

- the world population's basic need for food, drinking water, education and medical care could be covered by a levy of less than 4% of the accumulated wealth of the 225 richest individuals.

- 3 out of 4 people in the poorest countries on earth are NOT expected to reach their 50th birthday.

- 40% of the Russian population now lives in poverty.

- 2 billion people worldwide have NO access to electrical power.

- The assets controlled by the 200 wealthiest individuals are greater than the GDP of the entire continent of Africa- home of 600 million people.

- In 1976, the wealthiest 1% of americans owned 19% of all private material wealth in the US. Today, they own over 40% of all wealth. Their share now exceeds the wealth owned by the bottom 92% of the US population.

The capitalist system of inequality causes this travesty of sinful inequality and it must be changed, it must be stopped?

Zeitgeist Movie Addendum

“Society today is composed of a series of institutions...from political institutions, legal institutions, religious institutions... to institutions of social class, familial values and occupational specialization. It is obvious the profound influence these traditionalized structures have in shaping our understandings and perspectives...

Yet, of all the social institutions we are born into, directed by and conditioned upon, there seems to be no system as taken for granted and misunderstood...as the monetary system. Taking on nearly religious proportions, the established monetary institution exists as one of the most unquestioned forms of faith there is. How money is created, the policies by which it is governed and how it truly affects society are unregistered interests of the great majority of the population.

In a world where 1% of the population owns 40% of the planet's wealth...in a world where 34,000 children die every single day from poverty and preventable diseases, and where 50% of the world's population lives on less than 2 dollars a day... one thing is clear: Something is very wrong.

And whether we are aware of it or not, the lifeblood of all of our established institutions and thus society itself, is money. Therefore understanding this institution of monetary policy is critical to understanding why our lives are the way they are.

Unfortunately, economics is often viewed with confusion and boredom. Endless streams of financial jargon coupled with intimidating mathematics quickly deter people from attempts at understanding it. However, the fact is, the complexity associated with the financial system is a mere mask, designed to conceal one of the most socially paralyzing structures humanity has ever endured.

"None are more hopelessly enslaved than those who falsely believe they are free."-Johann Wolfgang von Goethe-1749-1832 [...]

UTOPIA or DEATH!

"...slavery is but the owning of labor and carries with it the care of laborers, while the European plan...is that capital shall control labor by controlling wages. This can be done by controlling the money. It will not do to allow the greenback, as we cannot control that."-The Hazard Circular, July, 1862

The fractional reserve policy perpetrated by the Federal Reserve, which has spread in practice to the great majority of banks in the world is, in fact, a system of modern slavery. Think about it... Money is created out of debt. And what do people do when in debt? They submit to employment to pay it off. But, if money can only be created out of loans, how can society ever be debt free? It can't. And that's the point.

And it is the fear of losing assets, coupled with the struggle to keep up with the perpetual debt and inflation inherent in the system, compounded by the inescapable scarcity within the money supply itself created by the interest that can never be repaid... that keeps the wage slave in line... running on the hamster wheel with the millions of others... in effect powering an Empire that truly benefits only the elite at the top of the pyramid... for at the end of day, who are you really working for? The banks. Money is created in a bank and invariably ends up in a bank. They are the true masters along with corporations and governments they support.

Physical slavery requires people to be housed and fed. Economic slavery requires the people to feed and house themselves.

It is one of the most ingenious scams for social manipulation ever created, and at its core, it is an invisible war against the population. Debt is the weapon used to conquer and enslave societies and Interest is its prime ammunition.

And as the majority walks around oblivious to this reality, the banks, in collusion with governments and corporations continue to perfect and expand their tactics of economic warfare...spawning new bases... such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund... while also inventing a new type of soldier... the birth of the economic hit man.

There are two ways to conquer and enslave a nation. One is by the sword. The other is by debt. - John Adams-1735-1826

'John Perkins':

We economic hit men really have been the ones responsible for creating this first truly global empire, and we work many different ways...but perhaps the most common is that we will identify a country that has resources that our corporations covet, like oil, and then arrange a huge loan to that country from the World Bank or one of its sister organizations. But the money never actually goes to the country...instead it goes to our big corporations to build infrastructure projects in that country-power plants, industrial parks, ports-things that benefit a few rich people in that country, in addition to our corporations-but really don't help the majority of the people at all...however those people, the whole country, is left holding a huge debt. It's such a big debt that they can't repay it, and that's part of the plan, that they can't repay it. And so at some point we economic hit men go back to them and say listen, you owe us a lot of money, can't pay your debts, so, sell your oil real cheap to our oil companies...allow us to build a military base in your country...or, send troops in support of ours to someplace in the world, like Iraq...or vote with us on the next U.N. vote...to have their electric utility company privatized, and their water and sewage system privatized, and sold to US corporations or other multinational corporations.

So there was a whole mushrooming thing, and it's so typical of the way that the IMF and the World Bank work: they put a country in debt, in such a big debt it can't pay it, and then you offer to refinance that debt, and pay even more interest, and you demand this quid pro quo which you call a "conditionality" or "good governance" which means basically that they've got to sell off their resources, including many of their social services; their utility companies; their school systems sometimes; their penal systems; their insurance systems, to foreign corporations. So it's a double, triple, quadruple whammy.

The precedent for economic hit men really began in the early fifties, when democratically elected Mossadegh, who was elected in Iran...he was considered to be the hope for democracy in the Middle East and around the world...he was Time Magazine's "Man of the Year"...but, one of the things that he'd run on and began to implement was the idea that foreign oil companies needed to pay the Iranian people a lot more for the oil that they were taking out of Iran, that the Iranian people should benefit from their own oil. Strange policy. We didn't like that of course. But we were afraid to do what we normally were doing, which was to send in the military. Instead we sent in one CIA agent, Kermit Roosevelt, Teddy Roosevelt's relative...and Kermit went in with a few million dollars and was very, very effective and efficient, and in a short amount of time he managed to get Mossadegh overthrown...and brought in the Shah of Iran to replace him, who always was favorable to oil...and it was extremely effective.

(Revolt in Iran)

VOICE:

Mobs overflow Tehran. Army officers shout that Mossadegh has surrendered, and his regime as virtual dictator of Iran is ended. Pictures of the Shah paraded through the streets as sentiment reverses. The Shah is welcomed home.

JOHN:

So back here in the United States in Washington people looked around and said, wow, that was easy. And cheap. So this established a whole new way of manipulating countries, of creating empire. The only problem with Roosevelt was that he was a card carrying CIA agent, and had he been caught, the ramifications could have been pretty serious. So very quickly at that point the decision was made to use private consultants, to channel the money through the World Bank or the IMF or one of the other such agencies, to bring in people like me who work for private companies...so that if we got caught there would be no governmental ramifications.

(Guatemala 1954)

When Arbenz became president of Guatemala, the country was very much under the thumbs of United Fruit Company, the big international corporation, and Arbenz ran on this ticket that says you know, we want to get the land back to the people, and once he took power he was implementing policies that would do exactly that, give land rights back to the people. United Fruit didn't like that very much, and so they hired a public relations firm, launched a huge campaign in the United States to convince the United States people, the citizens of the United States, and the press of the United States, and the congress of the United States that Arbenz was a Soviet puppet, and that if we allowed him to stay in power the Soviets would have a foothold in this hemisphere, and that at that point in time was a huge fear on everybody's mind, the red terror, the communist terror...and so to make a long story short, out of this public relations campaign came a commitment on the part of the CIA and the military to take this man out...and in fact we did. we sent in planes, we sent in soldiers, we sent in jackals, we sent everything in to take him out, and did take him out. And as soon as he was removed from office, the new guy that took over after him basically reinstated everything to the big international corporations, including United Fruit.

(Ecuador 1981)

Ecuador for many, many years had been ruled by pro-US dictators, often relatively brutal. Then it was decided that they were going to have a truly democratic election. Jaime Roldos ran for office, and his main goal he said as president would be to make sure that Ecuador's resources were used to help the people. And he won, overwhelmingly, by more votes than anyone had ever won anything in Ecuador, and he began to implement these policies...to make sure that the profits from oil went to help the people...well, we didn't like that in the United States. I was sat down as one of several economic hit men, to change Roldos, to corrupt him, to bring him around. To let him know, you know, ok, you know, you can get very rich you and your family if you play our game, but if you continue to try to keep these policies you've promised, you're gonna go... he wouldn't listen.

(Ecuadorian leader dies in plane crash)

He was assassinated. As soon as the plane crashed, the whole area was cordoned off. The only people that were allowed in were US military from a nearby base, and some of the Ecuadorian military. When investigation was launched, two of the key witnesses died in car accidents before they had a chance to testify. A lot of very, very strange things that went on around the assassination of Jaime Roldos. I, like most people who've really looked at this case, have absolutely no doubt that it was an assassination, and of course in my position as an economic hit man I was always expecting something to happen to Jaime, whether it be a coup or an assassination I wasn't sure, but that he would be taken down because he was not being corrupted, he would not allow himself to be corrupted the way we wanted to corrupt him.

(Panama 1981)

Omar Torrijos, president of Panama, was one of my favorite people, I really, really liked him, he was very charismatic, he was a guy who really wanted to help his country. When I tried to bribe him or corrupt him he said, look John... he called me Juanito...he said, look Juanito, I don't need the money. What I really need is for my country to be treated fairly. I need for the United States to repay the debts that you owe my people for all the destruction you've done here. I need to be in a position where I can help other Latin American countries win their independence, and be free of this terrible presence from the north that you people are exploiting us so badly. I need to have the Panama canal back in the hands of the Panamanian people. That's what I want. And so leave me alone, don't try to bribe me. It was 1981, and in May Jaime Roldos was assassinated, and Omar was very aware of this. Torrijos got his family together and he said, I'm probably next. But it's ok, because I've done what I came here to do. I've renegotiated the canal, the canal will now be in our hands...he'd just finished negotiating the treaty with Jimmy Carter. In June of that same year, just a couple of months later, he also went down in an airplane crash...which there's no question was executed by CIA sponsored Jackals. Tremendous amount of evidence that one of Torrijos' security guards handed him at the last moment as he was getting on the plane a tape recorder, a small tape recorder, that contained a bomb.

(Venezuela 2002)

It is interesting to me how this system has continued pretty much the same way for years and years and years, except the economic hit men are getting better and better and better. Then we come up with, very recently, what happened in Venezuela. In 1999 Hugo Chavez gets elected president, following a long line of presidents who'd been very corrupt, and basically destroyed the economy of the country...and Chavez was elected amidst all that. Chavez stood up to the United States, and he has done it primarily demanding that Venezuelan oil be used to help the Venezuelan people. Well, we didn't like that in the United States. So, in 2002 the coup was staged, which, there's no question in my mind and most other people's minds that the CIA was behind that coup. The way that that coup was fomented was very reflective of what Kermit Roosevelt had done in Iran, of paying people to go out into the streets to riot, to protest, to say this Chavez is very unpopular. You know, if you can get a few thousand people to do that, television can make it look like it's the whole country, and things start to mushroom. Except in the case of Chavez, he was smart enough and the people were so strongly behind him that they overcame it. Which was a phenomenal moment in the history of Latin America.

Iraq actually is a perfect example of the way the whole system works...so, we economic hit men are the first line of defense, we go in, we try to corrupt governments and get them to accept these huge loans which we then use as leverage to basically own them. If we fail, as I failed in Panama with Omar Torrijos, or in Ecuador with Jaime Roldos, men who refused to be corrupted, then the second line of defense is we send in the jackals. And the jackals either overthrow governments or they assassinate, and once that happens then a new government comes in and boy, it's going to tow the line, because the new president knows what will happen if he doesn't. In the case of Iraq, both of those things failed-economic hit men were not able to get through to Saddam

Hussain, we tried very hard, we tried to get him to accept a deal very similar to what the house of Saud had accepted in Saudi Arabia, but he wouldn't accept it, and so the jackals went in to take him out...they couldn't do it, his security was very good...after all, he at one time worked for the CIA. He'd been hired to assassinate a former president of Iraq, and failed...but he knew the system. So in '91 we send in the troops, and we take out the Iraqi military. So we assume at that point that Saddam Hussain is going to come around. We could have taken him out, of course, at that point in time, but we didn't want to, he's the kind of strong man we like. He controls his people, we thought he could control the Kurds and keep the Iranians within their border, and keep pumping oil for us, and that once we took out his military, now he's going to come around.

So the economic hit men go back in in the '90s, without success. If they'd had success, he'd still be running the country. We'd be selling him all the fighter jets he wants, and everything else he wants... but they couldn't, they didn't have success. The Jackals couldn't take him out again. So we sent the military in once again, and this time we did the complete job and took him out, and in the process created for ourselves some very, very lucrative construction deals...we had to reconstruct a country that we'd essentially destroyed, which is a pretty good deal if you own construction companies, big ones. So, Iraq shows the three stages; the economic hit men, failed there; the jackals, failed there; and as a final measure the military goes in. And in that way we've really created an empire, but we've done it very, very subtly...it's clandestine. All of the empires of the past were built on the military. And everybody knew that they were building them. So that the British knew they were building them....the French, the Germans, the Romans, the Greeks...and they were proud of it, and they always had some excuse like spreading civilization, spreading some religion, something like that, but they knew they were doing it...we don't.

The majority of the people in the United States have no idea that we are living off the benefits of a clandestine empire, that today there's more slavery in the world than ever before. And then you have to ask yourself, well if it's an empire, then who's the emperor? Obviously, our presidents of the United States are not emperors, an emperor is someone who's not elected, doesn't serve a limited term, and doesn't report to anyone, essentially. So you can't classify a president that way. But we do have what I consider to be the equivalent of the emperor, and it's what I call the Corporatocracy. Corporatocracy is this group of individuals who run our biggest corporations and they really act as the emperor in this empire.

They control our media, either through direct ownership or advertising, they control most of our politicians because they finance their campaigns, either through the corporations or through personal contributions that came out of the corporations. They're not elected, they don't serve a limited term, they don't report to anybody, and at the very top of the corporatocracy you really can't tell where the person's working for a private corporation or the government because they're always moving back and forth...so, you know, you've got a guy who one moment is the president of a big construction company, like Haliburton, and the next moment he's vice president of the United States, or the president, who was in the oil business, and this is true whether you've got democrats or republicans in the office, you have them moving back and forth through the revolving door...and in a way, our government isn't visible a lot of the time and its policies are carried out by our corporations on one level or another, and then again, the policies of the government are basically forged by the corporatocracy, and then presented to the government and they become government policy. So it's an incredible cozy relationship. This isn't a conspiracy theory type of thing, these people don't have to get together and plot to do things, they all basically work under one primary assumption, and that is that they must maximize profits, regardless of the social and environmental cost.

This process of manipulation by the corporatocracy through the use of debt, bribery and, political overthrow is called "Globalization". Just as the federal reserve keeps the American public in a position of indentured servitude through Perpetual Debt, Inflation and Interest, the World Bank and IMF serve this role on a global scale.

The basic scam is simple. Put a country in debt either by its own indiscretion or through corrupting the leader of that country, then , impose conditionalities, or Structural Adjustment Policies...often consisting of the following:

1- Currency Devaluation. When the value of a currency drops, so does everything valued in it. This makes indigenous resources available to predator countries, at a fraction of their worth.

2- Large funding cuts for Social Programs, These usually include education and health care. ...compromising the well-being and integrity of the society, leaving the public vulnerable to exploitation.

3 -Privatization of state-owned enterprises... This means that socially important systems, can be purchased and regulated by foreign corporations, for profit. For example, in 1999, the world bank insisted that the Bolivian Government sell the public water system of it third largest city to a subsidiary of the US corporation, Bechtel. As soon as this occurred, water bills for the already impoverish local residents skyrocketed. It wasn't until after a full blown revolt by the people that the Bechtel contract was nullified.

4 Then there is trade liberalization.. or the opening up of the economy through removing any restrictions on foreign trade.

This allows for a number of abusive economic manifestations... such as transnational corporations bringing in their own mass produced products, undercutting the indigenous production and ruining local economies...an example is Jamaica, which, after accepting loans and conditionalities from the world bank, lost its largest cash crop markets due to competition with western imports. Today, countless farmers are out of work, for they are unable to compete with the large corporations.

Another variation is the creation of numerous, seemingly unnoticed, unregulated, inhumane sweatshop factories, which take advantage of the imposed economic hardship. Additionally, due to production deregulation, environmental destruction is perpetual, as a country's resources are often exploited by the indifferent corporations, while outputting large amounts of deliberate pollution.

PERKINS:

The largest environmental lawsuit in the history of the world today is being brought on behalf of 30,000 Ecuadorian Amazonian people, against Texaco, which is now owned by Chevron, so its against Chevron but for activities conducted by Texaco....they estimate it to be more than eighteen times what the Exxon Valde se dumped into the coast of Alaska...in the case of Ecuador it wasn't an accident...the oil companies did it intentionally, they knew they were doing it to save money out there rather than arranging for a proper disposal.

Furthermore, A cursory glance at the performance record of the World Bank reveals that the institution, which publicly claims to help poor countries develop and alleviate poverty, has done nothing but increase poverty and the wealth gap, while corporate profits soar. In 1960 the income gap between the 5th of the world's people in the richest countries, versus the 5th in the poorest countries was 30:1. By 1998, it was 74:1. While global GNP rose 40% between 1970 and 1985, those in poverty actually increased by 17% While from 1985 to 2000, those living on less than 1 dollar a day increased by 18%. Even the Joint Economic Committee of the US Congress admitted that there is a mere 40% success rate of all World Bank projects.

In the late 1960s, The world bank intervened in Ecuador with large loans. During the next 30 yrs, poverty grew from 50% to 70%... unemployment grew from 15% to 70%... public debt increased from 240 million to 16 billion....while the share of resources allocated to the poor went from 20% to 6%.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

In fact, By the year 2000, 50% of Ecuador's national budget had to be allocated for paying its debts.

It is important to understand, The World Bank is, in fact, a US bank, supporting US interests. For the United States holds veto power over decisions, as it is largest provider of capital... and where did it get this money? You guessed it....it made it out of thin air through the fractional reserve banking system.

Of the world's top 100 economies, as based on the annual GDP, 51 are corporations, and 47 of that 51 are US based. Wal-mart, General Motors and Exxon are more economically powerful than Saudi Arabia, Poland, Norway, South Africa, Finland, Indonesia and many others....

... and as protective trade barriers are broken down, currencies tossed together and manipulated in floating markets and state economies overturned in favor of open competition and global capitalism, the empire expands.

The world is being taken over by a handful of business powers, who dominate the natural resources we need to live, while controlling the money that we need to obtain these resources. The end result will be world monopoly, based not on human life, but financial and corporate power.

And as the inequality continues, naturally more and more people are becoming desperate.... so the establishment was forced to come up with a new way to deal with anyone who challenges the system...so they gave birth to the terrorist.. The term terrorist is an empty distinction, designed for any person or group who chooses to challenge the Establishment.

This isn't to be confused with the fictional Al Qaeda, which was actually the name of a computer database for the US supported mujahideen in the 1980s.

("The truth is, there is no Islamic army or terrorist group called Al Qaida. And any informed intelligence officer knows this. But there is a propaganda campaign to make the public believe in the presence of an identified entity...the country behind this propaganda is the US" -Pierre-Henry Bunel, former French military intelligence)

In 2007, the department of defense received 161.8 billion dollars for the so called "global war on terrorism". According to the National Counter terrorism Center, in 2004 roughly 2000 people were killed internationally due to supposed terrorist acts. Of that number, about 70 were American. Using this number as a general average, which is extremely generous, ...it is interesting to note than twice as many people die from peanut allergies a year, than from terrorist acts. Concurrently, the leading cause of death in America is coronary heart disease, killing roughly 450,000 each yr. And, in 2007, the government's allocation of funds for research on this issue was about 3 billion dollars.

This means that the US government in 2007 spent 54 times the amount for preventing terrorism, than it spent for preventing a disease which kills 6600 times more people annually than terrorism does.

Yet, as the name Terrorism and Al-Qaida are arbitrarily stamped on every news report relating to any action taken against US interests, the myth grows wider... in mid 2008, the US attorney general actually proposed that the US congress officially declare war against the fantasy. Not to mention as of July 2008, there are now over 1 million people currently on the "US terrorist watch list"

These so-called counter terrorism measures of course have nothing to do with social protection... and everything to do with preserving the establishment amongst the growing anti-American sentiment both domestically and internationally..., which is legitimately founded on the greed based corporate empire expansion that is exploiting the world.

The true terrorists of our world do not meet at the docks at midnight... or scream allahu akbar before some violent action. The true terrorists of our world wear 5000 dollar suits and work in highest positions of finance, government and business...

So what do we do?... how do we stop a system of greed and corruption that has so much power and momentum. How do we stop this aberrant group behavior which feels no compassion for, say, the million slaughtered in Iraq and Afghanistan so the Corporatocracy can control energy resources and opium production for Wall street profit?

Before 1980, Afghanistan produced 0% of the world's opium; After the US/CIA backed Mujahideen won the Soviet/Afghan war, by 1986 they were producing 40% of the world's heroin supply; By 1999, they were producing 80% of the total market supply; But then something unexpected happened...; The Taliban rose to power, and by 2000 they had destroyed most of the opium fields. Production dropped from 3,000+tons to only 185 tons, a 94% reduction. On Sept. 9th 2001, the full Afghanistan invasion plans were on President bush's desk; Two days later they had their excuse.

Today, opium production in US controlled Afghanistan, which now provides more than 90 percent of the world's heroin, breaks new production records nearly every year.

How do we stop a system of greed and corruption, that condemns poor populations to sweat shop slavery for the benefit of Madison avenue... or that engineers false flag terror attacks for the sake of manipulation....or that generates built in modes of social operation which are inherently exploitative...or that systematically reduces civil liberties, and violates human rights in order to protect itself from its own shortcomings.

How do we deal with the numerous covert institutions such as the council on foreign relations, the trilateral commission and the Bilderburg group and other undemocratically elected groups, which, behind closed doors collude to control the political, financial, social and environmental elements of our lives?"
End Quote.

The good news is that in 2011 there is hope for positive change with the creation of revolutionary alternatives, like ALBA and CELAC, to the corrupt US influenced institutions of the IMF, WB, WTO, NAFTA, etc.

ALBA giving hope and solidarity to Latin America

Monday, November 28, 2011 - By Federico Fuentes & Ruben Pereira in <http://www.greenleft.org.au/node/49622>

ALBA summit, October 2009.

Seven years after being launched by the Venezuelan and Cuban governments, the Bolivarian Alliance for the Peoples of Our Americas (ALBA) has become an important voice on the global stage willing to stand up and denounce capitalism.

ALBA has grown to include eight Latin American and Caribbean countries (Venezuela, Cuba, Bolivia, Ecuador, Nicaragua, Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines).

ALBA has refused to limit itself to an alliance of governments and has created an ALBA social movement's council. This allows them to sit at the table as equals and discuss the way forward in the struggle against imperialism.

... ALBA began in 2004 as a result of a meeting between Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez and [then] Cuban president Fidel Castro. Since then, ALBA has grown to become an instrument at the service of the peoples of Latin America and the Caribbean, and a reference point for the peoples of the world.

ALBA emerged as a direct response to the plan of US imperialism to impose its Free Trade of the Americas Agreement [FTAA, or ALCA in its Spanish abbreviation].

It is important to remember that at the 2001 Summit of the Americas, the US tried to get approval for ALCA, a perverse project based on domination and accumulating capital to benefit a few rich elites at the expense of the majority.

At that summit, Chavez was the sole voice to speak out against ALCA and block consensus.

In response, ALBA emerged as an instrument for a different type of integration, one based on solidarity where the returns on social investment are not measured in monetary terms but rather in improving peoples' wellbeing.

In the face of capitalism's structural crisis, ALBA fights to ensure the culture of life prevails over capitalism's culture of death and war. ALBA is centered around anti-imperialist and anti-capitalist unity, and the promotion of alternative economic and social policies.

Western governments are deepening anti-worker austerity. ALBA, on the other hand, is investing in social and job security, and promoting public policies to benefit the people. This makes Latin America a political, economic, social and moral reference point for the peoples of the world.

ALBA is based on two fundamental tenets: respect for national sovereignty and self-determination, and the creation of relations between countries based on solidarity, equality, justice and integration.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

ALBA has promoted a number of important initiatives aimed at promoting a multi-polar world, building an alternative economic structure, creating new relations between progressive governments and social movements in Latin America, and alleviating the huge levels of poverty in our region.

This includes building an alternative financial architecture at the service of the people. The ALBA bank was created to finance programs to expand social benefits.

Similarly, we have the SUCRE (Unified System for Regional Compensation), a virtual currency that aims to replace the US dollar in the various preferential and special trade agreements among member-nations.

Such trade agreements do not fit within the logic of capitalism, such as Venezuela's provision of cheap oil to countries that cannot afford to meet the needs of their people due to the high prices on the international market.

Another example is the agreement between Venezuela and Cuba to exchange oil for doctors. Within capitalism, such an agreement is impossible. How do you quantify in monetary terms the value of a doctor and the impact of free health care on the lives of ordinary people?

ALBA is establishing relations that are not based on accumulating capital or making profit. ALBA's investment is an investment whose return is based on satisfying the basic needs and wellbeing of the people of ALBA's countries and others.

Another example is ALBA's program dedicated to the needs of the disabled. This program sends armies of doctors and health workers to go door-to-door finding those with disabilities to provide them with needed attention. So far, the program has assisted more than 3 million people in ALBA and non-ALBA countries.

Medical attention is provided to disabled people, along with any instruments they may need to live a dignified life, free of charge.

We are also carrying out campaigns to provide free education, free health care and free literacy programs across Latin America and the Caribbean.

The Latin American School of Medicine in Venezuela is another ALBA initiative. It is training students for free from Palestine, Africa and Latin America to become doctors with a humanist attitude, ready to treat patients, not clients.

ALBA is incorporating social movements and popular organizations into its organizational structure, with voice and vote. Nothing like this has been seen before. There has never existed an international organization in which social movements participate as equals with governments.

Within ALBA, we have the presidential, political, economical and social councils. In an horizontal manner, we have sitting side by side with them the social movements' council.

At the ninth ALBA summit in Caracas in April last year, the social movement council was proposed as a space to propose social and economic policies for ALBA, rather than to simply raise sectorial concerns.

We saw this in practice at the 10th ALBA summit held in Ecuador in June last year. The heads of states of ALBA member-nations met with indigenous and afro-descendent groups from across the region to draft policies to benefit those that historically have been the most excluded sectors of society.

A number of social movements from non-ALBA countries are taking part in building a social movements' platform in support of ALBA. This means that social movements anywhere in the world, including Australia, could integrate into this platform of social movements.

The proposal is being pushed by many social movements, in particular Brazil's Movement of Landless Peasants (MST), to consolidate, strengthen and build solidarity with the pro-people policies of Latin American progressive governments. ...

We know that our peoples are united in the struggle for a better world, one in which, as [Bolivian President] Evo Morales says, we must guarantee the rights of Mother Earth, because without Mother Earth there is no future for humanity.

Karl Marx wrote that in the 19th century that the spectre of communism was haunting Europe. In the 21st century, the spirit of The Indignants is haunting the world, a global indignation that requires organization and politicization to truly change the world.

Venezuela and ALBA will continue to do all it can to make this a reality.

CELAC (Community of Latin American and Caribbean States)

The guiding principles of the summit of the (Celac) [Caracas, Dec. 2011] was to “consolidate the independence of our countries, respect the sovereignty and right to self-determination of our peoples, and declare our region a great zone of peace and integral development”, according to Venezuelan Foreign Minister Nicolas Maduro.

Celac's Historical Moment

Celac was born during the aftermath of the US-backed military coup d'état in Honduras, which deposed President Manuel Zelaya, a proponent of regional integration and of alternatives to the US-imposed neoliberal economic model, and later installed a pro-US president through elections ridden with human rights violations and repression of popular protests.

Celac intentionally excludes the United States and poses an alternative to the US-dominated Organization of American States, which condoned US interventions in Latin America during the 20th Century.

When asked if the US will attempt to sabotage the formation of Celac, Maduro stated, “Historically it has been so... there are no reasons to think otherwise”. However, the minister said current conditions permit the countries in the region to effectively resist US domination.

“Today there are certain very favorable circumstances, which are the great political will of the governments in the region and the great political consciousness of our peoples”, Maduro said. “Celac’s moment is now because the conditions have matured. We have a continent that is more awake, more independent, that acts with greater liberty”, he said.

The Bolivarian Project

Many Venezuelan government officials have referred to CELAC as the continuance of the regional integration efforts heralded by independence hero Simon Bolivar in the early 19th Century.

Bolivar organized the Panama Congress in 1826 with the goal of pulling together nascent independent Latin American republics into a single bloc, but the conference was weakened by the absence of several delegations. In the ensuing years, local elites struggled amongst each other for power and the region remained divided in separate nations.

Meanwhile, the US developed its Monroe Doctrine, which painted Latin America as a zone of US hegemony, laying the basis for dozens of interventions and outright overthrows of popular governments across the region. This policy “impeded our people from re-taking the path of independence, of prosperity, of peaceful and electoral political construction”, according to Maduro.

Resources and Well-being for All

THE FUTURE AND BEYOND

By Jacque Fresco

BEYOND UTOPIA

“[...] We believe it is now possible to achieve a society where people would be able to live longer, healthier, and more meaningful productive lives. In such a society, the measure of success would be based upon the fulfillment of one’s individual pursuits rather than the acquisition of wealth, property, and power. Although many of the concepts presented here may appear as unattainable goals, all of the ideas are based upon known scientific principles. It is not my purpose to write an article that would be acceptable to people this is not the concern of science.

The social direction being proposed here has no parallel in history with any other previous political ideology or economic strategy. Establishing the parameters of this new civilization will require transcending many of the traditions, values, and methods of the past. The future will evolve its own new paradigms, appropriate to each successive phase of human and technological development. [...]

The answers do not lie in debate or philosophical discussion of values, but rather in methodology. Thus what is needed is an operational definition of a better world, which is as follows: To constantly maximize existing and future technologies with the sole purpose of enhancing all human life and protecting the environment.

Today we have developed the necessary technology to surpass the fondest hopes and dreams of any social innovators of the past. The fact that previous attempts at social change have failed is no justification for us to stop trying. The real danger lies in complacency. The only limitations to the future of humankind are those that we impose upon ourselves. It is now possible to relieve humanity of many of its unresolved problems through the humane application of technology.

Many years ago an attempt was made in the U. S. to understand a social and economic system different from our own. A film called "The March of Time" had this to say about Soviet Communism: "We believe that the American free-enterprise system will function better than the collective system. However, we wish you the best of luck on your new and unusual social experiment." The failure of communism to provide for human needs and to enrich the lives of its citizens is not unlike our own failures. Both failure and success are inherent in the on-going experiment that is social evolution. In all established social systems it is necessary to devise different approaches to improve the workings of the system. [...]

The future does not depend on our present-day beliefs or social customs, but will continue to evolve a set of values unique to its own time. [...] The paths that we choose will ultimately determine whether or not there is intelligent life on earth.

NEW FRONTIERS OF SOCIAL CHANGE

It has often been observed that common crises create common bonds. While people seek advantage during the times of prosperity, shared suffering tends to draw people closer together. We have seen this behavior repeated time and time again throughout the centuries, during times of flood, famine, fire, or other natural disasters. Once the threat is resolved, however, scarcity patterns once again begin to steer people back to their behaviors of seeking individual advantage. Sensationalist motion pictures such as Independence Day depict a world united for the purpose of repelling an invasion by a hostile alien culture. Indeed, it seems that the only force that would mobilize the world in a unified direction would be one that poses a common threat, such as a colossal meteor hurling towards the earth, or some other major catastrophic event. If such an event were to occur, all border disputes would become irrelevant in the face of impending disaster. While many would call upon divine intervention for salvation, all nations would surely combine their efforts and call upon science and technology to deal with this common threat. Bankers, lawyers, businessmen, and politicians would all be bypassed. Every resource would be harnessed and mobilized, without any concern for monetary cost or profit. Under this kind of threatening condition, most people realize where the key to their survival lies. For example, during the Second World War, it was the collective mobilization of both human and material resources that led to a successful resolution for the U.S. and its allies.

As the amount of scientific information grows, nations and people are coming to realize that even in today's divided world there are, in fact, many common threats that transcend national boundaries. These include overpopulation, energy shortages, pollution, water shortages, economic catastrophe, the spread of uncontrollable disease and so forth. However, faced even with threats of this magnitude, which are common to all nations, the direction of human action will not be altered so long as powerful nations are able to maintain control of the limited resources available.

Although many people, publications, and multi-media presentations portray various aspects of the future and paint spectacular pictures of the developments to come in such areas as transportation, housing, and medicine, they ignore the fact that in a monetary-based economy the full benefits of these developments continue to be available to a relative few. What is not touched upon is how these new technologies of the future can be used to organize societies and economies efficiently and equitably, without the necessity of uniformity, so that everyone would benefit from them. The few think tanks devoted to brainstorming newer approaches to bring social organization up to speed with today's technological capabilities do not deal with social change as a global systems plan.

Neither are there any overall social plans in government or industry to totally eliminate the negative effects of the displacement of people by machines, nor does there seem to be any genuine concern to do so. Many people believe that in the event of any social breakdown the government will bring about the necessary changes for their survival. This is highly improbable. In the event of such a breakdown the existing government would most likely declare a state of emergency in an attempt to prevent total chaos. It would then institute measures that may address immediate problems, at the same time attempting to preserve existing institutions and power structures, even though these may be chief contributing factors to the problems.

Many people throughout history have taken politicians to task for actions that have not been entirely in society's best interest. The reasons for this become clearer when one realizes that even in modern democracies, these leaders do not benefit the lives of the average person. Rather, they maintain the preferential positions of much of the established order. There are growing indications of awareness on the part of people in many areas of the world that events have gone beyond the control of their political leaders. Everywhere we see political figures and parties come and go, political strategies adopted and discarded for their inability to satisfy the demands of one faction or another.

The reason that we do not suggest writing your congressman, or any number of governmental agencies, is that they lack the necessary knowledge to deal with our problems. Their focus is to preserve existing systems, not to change them. It appears that there are few within present-day society who want to phase themselves out. In modern industrial societies the cause of inaction lies within the cumbersome political process itself, an anachronism in an era when most decisions can be made on any important issue in a split second by the objective entry of relevant data into computers.

The prime conditions that would really effect social change will come about when conditions have deteriorated to such an extent that governments, politicians, and social institutions no longer have the support and confidence of the people. What once worked is acknowledged to be no longer relevant. If the public were better informed, only then would it be possible to introduce a new and improved social arrangement.

Unfortunately, today the majority of people respond to simplistic answers, which tend to repeat the cycle of events. When faced with intolerable social conditions, many of the older patterns will emerge again as people attempt to find someone or something to blame for the conditions, e.g. minorities, immigrants, negligence in adhering to religious principles or family values, and the influences of some inexplicable supernatural forces.

True social change is not brought about by men and women of reason and good will on a personal level. The notion that one can sit and talk to individuals and alter their values is highly improbable. If the person one is talking to does not have the fundamental knowledge of the operation of scientific principles and the processes of natural laws, it is difficult for them to understand how the pieces fit together on a holistic level.

The solutions to our problems will not come about through the application of reason or logic. Unfortunately, at present we do not live in a reasonable or logical world. There appears to be no historical record of any established society's leader who deliberately and comprehensively redesigned a culture to fit the changing times. While there is no question that political leaders, to a limited extent, modify some modes of behavior, the real factors responsible for social change are brought about by bio-social pressures, which are inherent in all social systems. Change is brought about by natural or economic occurrences that adversely affect the immediate circumstances of large numbers of people.

Some bio-social pressures responsible for social change are limited resources, war, overpopulation, epidemics, natural disasters, economic recession, downsizing on a mass scale, technological displacement of people by machines, and the failure of elected officials to overcome such problems. The introduction of the medium of money to the exchange process brought about a significant change in society, as did the introduction of mechanized agriculture and the Industrial Revolution.

Unfortunately, the world's outmoded social, political, and international order is no longer appropriate to these times. These obsolete social institutions are unable to grasp the significance of innovative technology to achieve the greatest good for all people, and to overcome the inequities forced upon so many. Competition and scarcity have caused an atmosphere of jealousy and mistrust to develop between individuals and nations. The concepts of proprietary rights, intellectual property, copyrights, and patents manifested in corporate entities and in the sovereignty of nations, preclude the free exchange of information that is necessary to meet global challenges. The European Union represents an attempt to bridge the present with the future, but it falls far short in that it relies on the crutch of the monetary system.

However, it is not enough to point out the limiting factors that may threaten the survivability of all nations. The challenge that all cultures will encounter in this technological age - some more than others - is that of providing a smoother transition, which would introduce a more appropriate way of thinking about ourselves, the environment and the management of human affairs.

The ultimate survival of the human species depends upon planning on a global scale and to cooperatively seek out new alternatives with a relative orientation for improved social arrangements. If humankind is to achieve mutual prosperity, universal access to resources is essential.

Along with the introduction of new paradigms towards human and environmental concern, there must be a methodology for making this a reality. If these ends are to be achieved, the monetary system must eventually be surpassed by a world resource-based economy. In order to effectively and economically utilize resources, the necessary cybernated and computerized technology could eventually be applied to ensure a higher standard of living for everyone. With the intelligent and humane application of science and technology, the nations of the world could guide and shape the future for the preservation of the environment and humankind. [...]

There is no doubt that many of the professions that are familiar to us today will eventually be phased out. With the rate of change now taking place, a vast array of obsolete occupations will disappear more rapidly and more extensively than at any other time in history. In a society that applies a systems approach, these professions will be replaced by interdisciplinary teams – the systems analysts, computer programmers, operation researchers, and those who link the world together in vast communications networks that are assisted by high-speed digital computers. They will eventually lead us to large-scale computer-based methods of social operation. Social operations are far too complex today for any elected politicians to handle. [...]

All the limitations imposed upon us by our present-day monetary system could be surpassed by adopting a global consensus for a worldwide resource-based economy, in which all the planetary resources are viewed and treated as the common heritage of all the earth's inhabitants. In this manner, the earth and our technological procedures could provide us with a limitless supply of material goods and services without the creation of debt or taxation whatsoever.

THE OBSOLETE MONETARY SYSTEM

Although skillful advertisers lead us to believe otherwise, in today's monetary-based economies, whenever new technology is introduced, the human consequences are of little concern to those introducing the technology - except, of course, as customers. In a monetary-based system, the major concerns of industry are profit, maintaining a competitive edge, and watching the bottom line, rather than the wellbeing of humanity. The social problems that arise from mass unemployment of people, who are rendered obsolete by the infusion of automation, are considered irrelevant, if they are considered at all. Any need that may be met is secondary to acquiring a profit for the business. If the profit is insufficient, the service will be withdrawn. What industry seeks to do is improve the competitive edge to increase the profit margin for their shareholders. It does not serve the interest of a monetary based society to engage in the production of goods and services to enhance the lives of people as a goal. With rising public concern regarding the greenhouse effect, acid rain, polluted air and water, etc. some companies are also beginning to realize that for sustained market presence it is in their best interest to heed social and environmental concerns. While such trends are commendable, they are insufficient as a method of solving the overall problems of waste, environmental degradation and unnecessary human suffering.

The monetary system has been a useful, but interim tool, it came into being as a means of placing a value on scarce objects and labor. The monetary system of course replaced the barter system, which involved direct trading of objects and labor. However, just as there was no universal-bartering standard in the past, there is no global monetary system today. Individuals and groups, now as in the past, however, still need to exchange objects and labor for today's goods and services. The unequal distribution of skills, resources and materials throughout the world necessitates global trade.

Until the last few decades, the monetary system functioned to a degree. The global population of three billion was not over consuming world resources and energy, global warming was not evident, and air and water pollution were only recognized by a relative few. The start of the 21st century however finds global population at an exponentially rising six billion, with resources and energy supplies dwindling, global warming a reality, and pollution evident worldwide. Planet earth is in crises and the majority of world population cannot meet their basic needs because people do not have the means to purchase increasingly expensive resources. Money is now the determinant of people's standard of living rather than the availability of resources.

In a monetary system purchasing power is not related to our capacity to produce goods and services. For example, in a recession there are CD's in store windows and automobiles in car lots, but many people do not have the purchasing power to buy them. The earth is still the same place; it is just the rules of the game that are obsolete and create strife, deprivation, and unnecessary human suffering.

In today's culture of profit, we do not produce goods based on human need. We do not build houses based on population needs. We do not grow food to feed people. Industry's major motivation is profit.

The monetary system is now an impediment to survival rather than a means of facilitating individual existence and growth. This imaginary tool has outlived its usefulness. The limitations on earth's population now caused by the monetary construct can be phased out. It is not money that people need but the access to goods and services. Since humanity requires resources to exist, the replacement system should provide those resources directly to people without the impediment of financial and political interest for their private gain at the expense of the lives and livelihood of the populous. The replacement system is therefore logically a resource-based economy. This global resource based economy would be gradually phased in while the monetary system is phased out. [...]

As long as a social system uses money or barter, people and nations will seek to maintain positions of differential advantage. If they cannot do so by means of commerce they will resort to military intervention. [...]

In this world of constant change it is no longer a question of whether we choose to make the necessary changes; it is now mandatory that we take on this challenge and adopt these new requirements or face the inevitable decay of our present social and economic institution. [...]

RESOURCE-BASED ECONOMY

“Presented here is a straightforward approach to the redesign of a culture, in which the age-old inadequacies of war, poverty, hunger, debt, and unnecessary human suffering are viewed not only as avoidable, but totally unacceptable. This new social design works towards eliminating the underlying causes that are responsible for many of our problems. But, as stated previously, they cannot be eliminated within the framework of the present monetary and political establishment. Human behavior is subject to the same laws that govern all other physical phenomena. Our customs, behaviors, and values are byproducts of our culture. No one is born with greed, prejudice, bigotry and hatred - they are learned. If the environment is unaltered similar problems will reoccur.

These aspirations cannot be accomplished in a monetary based society of waste and human exploitation. With its planned obsolescence, neglect of the environment, outrageous military expenditures and the outworn methods of attempting to solve problems through the enactment of laws, these methods are bound to fail. Furthermore the belief that advanced technologies would lead to an improvement in the quality of life for most people is not the case in a monetary system. More and more companies are adopting the tremendous benefits of automation, resulting in increased production with fewer employees. Corporations' short-term concern with profit will ultimately result in the demise of the world monetary based economies. If the monetary system continues to operate, we will be faced with the condition of more technological unemployment, today referred to as downsizing. From 1990 to 1995, companies dismissed a staggering 17.1 million employees, many of these due to automation. Automation will continue to replace people well into the foreseeable future, resulting in the lack of purchasing power for these displaced workers. Despite expanding global markets, the human cost in terms of displaced workers and a disenfranchised populous, will inevitably bring about massive and unmanageable social problems.

During the 1930's, at the height of the Great Depression, the Roosevelt administration enacted new social legislation designed to minimize revolutionary tendencies and to address the problems of unemployment. Jobs were provided through the Works Progress Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps, National Recovery Act, transient camps, and Federal Arts projects. Ultimately, however, World War II pulled the U.S. out of that worldwide depression. If we permit current conditions to take their natural course, we will soon be faced with another international recession of potentially greater magnitude. At the time of this depression the US had only 600 first class fighting aircraft at the beginning of World War II, we rapidly increased production to 90,000 planes per year. Did we have enough money to pay for the required implements of war? The answer is no. Neither did we have enough gold. But, we did have more than enough resources. It was the available resources and personnel that enabled the U. S. to achieve the production and efficiency required to win the war. Unfortunately, such an all-out effort is only considered in times of war or disaster.

We live in a culture that seems to work collectively only in response to a crisis. Only in times of war do we call upon and assemble interdisciplinary teams to meet a threat from human aggression. Only in times of national emergency do we do the same to resolve a natural or man-made threat. Rarely, if ever, do we employ a concerted effort to help find workable solutions to social problems. If we apply the same efforts of scientific mobilization toward social betterment as we do during a war or disaster, large-scale results could be achieved in a relatively short time.

The Earth is still abundant with resources. Today our practice of rationing resources through monetary methods is irrelevant and counter-productive to the well-being of people. Today's society has access to highly advanced technologies and can easily provide more than enough for a very high standard of living for all the earth's people. This is possible through the implementation of a resource-based economy.

Simply stated, a resource-based economy utilizes existing resources rather than money, and provides an equitable method of distribution in the most humane and efficient manner for the entire population. It is a system in which all natural, man-made, machine-made, and synthetic resources would be available without the use of money, credits, barter, or any other form of symbolic exchange. A resource-based economy would utilize existing resources from the land and sea, and the means of production, such as physical equipment and industrial plants, to enhance the lives of the total population. In an economy based on resources rather than money, we could easily produce all of the necessities of life and provide a high standard of living for all.

To further clarify the concept of a resource based economy consider this example: A group of people is stranded on an island with enormous purchasing power including gold, silver and diamonds. All this wealth would be irrelevant to their survival if the island had few resources such as food, clean air, and water. Only when population exceeds the productive capacity of the land do problems such as greed, crime, and violence emerge. On the other hand, if people were stranded on an island that was abundant with natural resources producing more than the necessities for survival, then a monetary system would be irrelevant. It is only when resources are scarce that money can be used to control their distribution. One could not, for example, sell the air we breathe, the sand on the beach, or the salt water in the ocean to someone else on the island who has equal access to all these things. In a resource-based economy all of the world's resources would be held as the common heritage of all of the earth's people, thus eventually outgrowing the need for the artificial boundaries that separate people – this is the unifying imperative.

We must emphasize here that this approach to global governance has nothing whatever in common with the present aims of a corporate elite to form a world government with themselves and large corporations in control, and the vast majority of the world's population subservient to them. Globalization in a resource-based economy empowers each and every person on the planet to be the very best they can be, not to live in abject subjugation to a corporate governing body.

All social systems, regardless of political philosophy, religious beliefs, or social customs, ultimately depend upon natural resources, e.g. clean air and water, arable land, and the necessary technology and personnel to maintain a high standard of living. This can be accomplished through the intelligent and humane application of science and technology. The real wealth of any nation lies in its developed and potential resources and the people who are working toward the elimination of scarcity and the development of a more humane way of life. A resource-based economy would use technology to overcome scarce resources by utilizing renewable sources of energy; computerizing and automating manufacturing, inventory and distribution; designing safe, energy-efficient cities; providing universal health care and relevant education; and most of all, by generating a new incentive system based on human and environmental concern.

Unfortunately, today science and technology have been diverted from these ends for reasons of self-interest and monetary gain through the conscious withdrawal of efficiency, or through planned obsolescence. For example, it is an ironic state of affairs when the U. S. Department of Agriculture, whose function is to conduct research into ways of achieving higher crop yields per acre, pays farmers not to produce at full capacity while many people go hungry. Another example is the choice of some companies to illegally dump solid waste into oceans and rivers to save money, when more ecologically sound disposal methods are available. A third example is the failure of some industries to install electrostatic precipitators in their factories' smokestacks to prevent particulate matter from being released into the atmosphere, even though the technology has been available for over 75 years. The monetary system does not always apply known methods that would best serve people and the environment. [...]

A resource-based economy calls for the redesign of our cities, transportation systems, and industrial plants so that they are energy efficient, clean, and conveniently provide the needs of all people both materially and spiritually. These new cybernated cities would have their electrical sensors' autonomic nervous system extended into all areas of the social complex. Their function would be to coordinate a balance between production and distribution and to operate a balance-load economy. Decisions would be arrived at on the basis of feedback from the environment. Despite today's mania for national security, and subsequent intrusions into everyone's personal affairs, in a world-wide resource-based economy where no one need take from another, it will be considered socially offensive and counterproductive for machines to monitor the activities of individuals. In fact, such intrusion would serve no useful purpose.

To further understand the operation of cybernation in the city system, for example, in the agricultural belt the electronic probes imbedded in the soil would automatically keep a constant inventory of the water table, soil conditions, nutrients, etc. and act appropriately without the need for human intervention. This method of industrial electronic feedback could be applied to the entire management of a global economy.

All raw materials used to manufacture products can be transported directly to the manufacturing facilities by automated transportation "sequences" such as ships, monorails, trains, pipelines, and pneumatic tubes, and the like. All transportation systems are fully utilized in both directions. There would be no empty trucks, trains, or transport units on return trips. There would be no freight trains stored in yards, awaiting a business cycle for their use. An automated inventory system would be connected to both the distribution centers and the manufacturing facilities, thus coordinating production to meet demand and providing a constant evaluation of preferences and consumption statistics. In this way a balanced-load economy can be assured and shortages, over-runs, and waste could be eliminated.

The method for the distribution of goods and services in a resource-based economy without the use of money or tokens could be accomplished through the establishment of distribution centers. These distribution centers would be similar to a public library or an exposition, where the advantages of new products can be explained and demonstrated. [...]

With the infusion of a resource-based, world economy and an all-out effort to develop new, clean, renewable sources of energy, (such as geothermal, controlled fusion, solar heat concentrators, photovoltaics, wind, wave, tidal power, and fuel from the oceans), we will eventually be able to have energy in unlimited quantity that could serve civilization for thousands of years.

To better understand the meaning of a resource-based economy consider this: If all the money in the world were to suddenly disappear, as long as topsoil, factories, and other resources were left intact, we could build anything we chose to build and fulfill any human need. It is not money that people need, but rather it is freedom of access to most of their necessities without ever having to appeal to a government bureaucracy or any other agency. In a resource-based economy money would become irrelevant. All that would be required are the resources, manufacturing, and distribution of the products. [...]

This same process would be carried out for all other products. All industrial devices would be designed for recycling. However, the life span of products would be significantly increased through intelligent and efficient design, thereby reducing waste. There would be no "planned obsolescence," where products are deliberately designed to wear out or break down. In a resource-based economy technology intelligently and efficiently applied will conserve energy, reduce waste, and provide more leisure time. During the transition, the workweek could be staggered thus eliminating traffic jams or crowding in all areas of human activity, including beaches and recreation areas.

Most packaging systems would be standardized, requiring less storage space and facilitating easy handling. To eliminate waste such as newsprint, books, and other publications, these could be replaced, for example, by an electronic process in which a light-sensitive film is placed over a monitor or TV, producing a temporary printout. This material would be capable of storing the information until it is deleted. This would conserve our forests and millions of pounds of paper, which is a major part of the recycling process. Eventually, most paperwork would no longer be required, i.e. advertising, money, mail, newspaper, phonebook.

As we outgrow the need for professions that are based on the monetary system, such as lawyers, accountants, bankers, insurance companies, advertising, sales personnel, and stockbrokers, a considerable amount of waste and non productive personnel could be eliminated. Enormous amounts of time and energy would also be saved by eliminating the duplication of competing products. Instead of having hundreds of different manufacturing plants and all the paperwork and personnel that are required to turn out similar products, only very few of the highest quality would be needed to serve the entire population. In a resource-base economy planned obsolescence would not exist.”

Socialist Utopia - Why? How?

Socialism: a political and economic social theory and “way of life” which advocates the community as a whole should own and control the means of production, distribution and exchange. A system of government that puts the people's needs first. No class systems or inequality. Simply said, heaven compared to the hell of capitalism and so-called democracy that most of Humankind currently lives under.

Socialist Utopia: Heaven on Earth (as much as we can achieve at the moment).

For the record, Socialist systems, and Communism especially, have never really had a fair chance to develop and flourish into what is possible with Community Cooperation and the eradication of private industry - if outer forces don't interfere, as We know has historically happened; and the best example is of course, Cuba and Russia.

The following article (and many others) can be found on the web at:
<http://www.worldsocialism.org>

It's a nice idea but could it work?

"It's a nice idea but it will never happen" is one of the most common responses to the suggestion that it is in our interests to work towards building a socialist society. The assumption is that socialism will rely upon everybody being altruistic, sacrificing their own interests for those of others. But socialism would actually involve the majority of people recognizing their common interests.

People are too greedy.

This is a common objection to socialism and suggests that, in socialism, some people would take more than their share of goods. Images are conjured up of people walking out of supermarkets carrying stockpiles of food - after all, isn't that what everyone would do if all goods were freely available?

It may be what people would do in today's capitalist society, where what we need appears to be scarce because it is rationed by the payment of the wage. But if food were given away free in socialism, there would be no need to take more than you need. Because food will have been produced to satisfy society's needs, not for profit, it will be available on that basis. The current World food supply (let alone the potential supply) is enough to feed the global population. Indeed, there is the potential to meet the broader range of Human needs, in an environmentally sustainable way, if socialism were established. Once the insecurity of our current society is left behind, it would simply become pointless to take more than you needed.

Besides, we argue that people are not greedy enough! If people were as "greedy" as people claim, why do they give away all their wealth and power to the capitalist class in the first place?

This is a common objection to the proposal that all work be contributed on a voluntary basis. Some people point to certain kinds of work that people might seek to avoid - such as cleaning out sewers, or mining. A more extreme form of the argument suggests that everyone would spend the whole day in bed if they were not forced to work.

Humans throughout history have sought fulfillment through their work. If they have not enjoyed their work, it has not been through dislike of work in general but due to the particular purpose and conditions of the work that they have been forced to undertake. Work under socialism has the potential to be entirely different to capitalist employment. The most important reason for this is that unpleasant work could be organized far more efficiently than under capitalism and that all work would be organized so as to be as pleasant as possible.

The purpose of work would be entirely different. Under capitalism, much of the work done is the work required by capitalism in order to perpetuate its own existence. In socialism, the only work needs to be done would be for directly meeting Human needs. Indeed, interesting and pleasant work is itself a Human need. And work that isn't in itself interesting and pleasant must be minimized or abolished.

If a household gets a washing machine, you never hear the family members who used to do the laundry by hand complain that this "puts them out of work". But strangely enough, if a similar development occurs on a broader social scale it is seen as a serious problem - "unemployment" - which can only be solved by inventing more jobs for people to do. The fact is that most jobs under capitalism are either completely or partially unnecessary. Many of those that are necessary are performed by stressed people working long hours while others suffer poverty.

In a sane society, the elimination of all these absurd jobs (not only those that produce or market ridiculous and unnecessary commodities, but the far larger number directly or indirectly involved in promoting and protecting the whole capitalist system) would reduce necessary tasks to such a trivial level that they could easily be taken care of voluntarily and cooperatively, eliminating the need for the whole apparatus of economic incentives and state enforcement. That economists now believe that in 20 years time, total World demand for all commodities could be met by 2% of the global population - and this in capitalist society! - suggests necessary work in socialist society could be so organized as to enable individuals to contribute no more than a few hours a week to the good of society.

Are you serious?

Is the revolution we are talking about at all likely? Appearances would suggest not. The odds seem to be stacked against it. Indeed, when we put forward the idea, most people can scarcely believe we are serious.

But most revolutions have been preceded by periods when most people were scoffing at the idea that things could ever change. There was a time when the idea of a capitalist society would have been dismissed as a hopeless utopian dream. To a peasant living in feudal society, the idea of radical change would appear as hopeless as it may appear to you now. To them, feudalism would have appeared as eternal and unchanging and unchangeable as capitalism appears to us now. In Europe, when capitalism was relatively young, the idea of workers working an eight hour day with a weekend would have appeared hopelessly utopian. In the past, countries where everybody now has a vote, there was a time when the idea was scorned and violently opposed.

So we're not too surprised that people find it difficult to take our ideas on board. We found it difficult ourselves, of course. Yet, despite the many discouraging trends in the World, there are some encouraging signs, not least of which is the widespread disillusionment with previous false alternatives. Fewer and fewer people are bothering to vote in elections, correctly realizing that it will have little effect on their everyday lives.

Does that mean we have to sit around and wait for a revolution?

No, of course not. We argue that the working class should organize for socialism, but that doesn't mean that nothing can be done this side of the revolution. Earlier we mentioned the welfare state as a failed example of reformism. But on the other hand, such things as basic health care came into being because the working class fought for them (even though politicians have since claimed the credit). Without the threat of action we would never have won such things. Strikes, or the threat of them, help to improve wages and working conditions.

We have the ability to change things if we act together. The power to transform society lies in the hands of those who create everything - the working class. This is the source of our power, should we eventually use it. The power not to make a few reforms, but to change the whole system, to make a social revolution.

As was written in The Observer newspaper in London, if 100 jumbo jets crashed tomorrow killing all on board, the world would be united in mourning, but every day, a similar number of people die of hunger-related diseases, almost without mention.

Such statistics are widely available. Many see them as evidence that the planet is overpopulated. The sheer, undiminishing size of these statistics leaves them as something that is 'accepted' as part of life in the modern world. It seems that the problem is simply too huge for us to do anything about it and reflection on the subject often ends here.

Yet there are other, undeniably significant statistics to suggest that malnutrition and starvation are far from inevitable, given the resources and productive capacity we have available. These are the statistics which are slightly less widely disseminated:

It is a fact that enough food to feed the world is currently produced. [...] It is the poverty of millions of people who cannot afford to buy food that causes starvation. [...] It has been recognized by a wide range of other commentators: food is not fairly shared; it goes to those who can afford it or have the means to grow it. Famine exists largely because the hungry cannot afford to buy food, not because there is insufficient food produced.

In none of the twentieth century famines has there been an absolute shortage of food; the problem has been unequal access due to poverty, a problem that resort to food aid has not solved. In Bengal in 1943–1944 about three million people died after rice prices quadrupled in two years. Worst affected were the rural areas, where wages had not kept pace with wartime inflation, and some towns where workers were unemployed because of the dislocation caused by the war. People without money were unable to buy food and the British imperial authorities took little action (apart from moving food to Calcutta because they feared mass civil unrest). One of the worst famines of modern times therefore took place when the amount of food per head in Bengal was actually 7% higher than in 1941 and food stocks were at record levels.

In Ethiopia, in 1972–1974, about 200,000 people died in the provinces of Wollo and Tigre even though the country's food production only fell by just over 5%—during this period food was still being exported from the affected provinces and from the country as a whole. In Bangladesh in 1974 when rice prices doubled in three months after severe flooding, those who were out of work because of the disruption caused by the floods could not afford to buy food. As a result one and a half million people died of starvation. But there was no absolute shortage of food—production of rice in Bangladesh, both in total and per head terms, was the highest ever in 1974—once again it was a problem of who had the resources to buy food at higher prices.

In South Africa around 50,000 black children starve to death each year—136 every day. Yet South Africa is a net exporter of agricultural products.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

There are many more examples. In 1983, the value of food exported by countries in the Horn of Africa (Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan, Tanzania and Uganda) exceeded their imports by $1 billion. Yet hunger in these countries increased.

Much food is currently stored or destroyed when 'too much' food is produced. This means too much for the market as it is only the demands of those with purchasing power that counts. Restricting the food supply in this way keeps prices high enough for producers to maximize their profits: in one season, French peasant co-ops were paid to destroy fruit and vegetables the weight of 17 Arcs de Triomph. [...] The earth could, in theory, feed very many more people than now inhabit the globe. [...]

Socialism would allow us to develop and implement methods of food production with two simple questions in mind: Which methods will best meet our needs? The question of 'how can we maximize profits?' currently gets priority. Food will only be produced if there is a market for it—i.e. people with the money to buy it. The needs of those without money do not count. End quote.

“Unlike Karl Marx, when he first issued the call for socialism in the 19th century, We do not have much time left. The 21st century has now come, ‘when the dilemma must be finally resolved.’ Time is short. If We do not change the World now, there may be no 22nd century for Humanity. Capitalism has destroyed the ecological equilibrium of the earth. It is now or never!” Hugo Chávez, President of Republica Bolivariana De Venezuela

Religion, GOoD, evil and Sacrifice

All Praises to Our one Creator with different cultural names.

All People on Earth are Humans; Different shades, colors, beliefs and customs but yet still Human. We are All one People, one Civilization, one Creation with one Destiny. Regardless, no matter what We choose to call or name GOD, it is the same GOD even if We use different names and have different beliefs. If there is a GOD, s(he) would not want Us to hate or kill each other just because one of Us has a different name or beliefs for Our Creator.

“God has no religion” Mahatma Gandhi

For those who are very egotistically attached to their religion; Please get that through your heads and most importantly, get it through your Hearts & Souls.

We must be realistic and aware of Our assimilative nature as Humans and accept that some or most of what We have been told and believe may be wrong in perspective and especially GODlyness. No matter how much We have invested in Our beliefs and “Ways of Life” which have shaped Our every moment and goals; We must seek the strength and guidance of Our Inner Souls to sift through ideology and folklore and just “do the right thing”, the Righteous thing.

“Religion is to do right. It is to love, it is to serve, it is to think, it is to be humble.” Ralph Waldo

The “Holy Bible”

It is a proven historical fact that the Christian and Catholic Bible throughout the ages has gone through the hands of many corrupt and (if i may?) evil men that were wrongly entrusted with the duty of translating and passing on the sacred texts and wisdom. The bible was passed down from century to century, from one bureaucrat to the next. We know this caused and allowed for many misinterpretations throughout the ages due to changes in language, dialect and the academic abilities of the scripters. The majority of the aristocrats in charge of the bible were politically involved and tailored many of the teachings and messages in the bible to suit their demented political motives. This included acceptance of slavery, classism, genderism, and more.

The plan was real simple, put rules in a religion and get as many People as possible to join the religion and if you're at the top of the social-pyramid you will have control and power. These twisted men carefully and sinisterly crafted the bible to their beliefs, their class ideology, their race ideology and even their gender ideology. That's why today in the bible there exists a barrage of mixed messages.

The “ten commandments” itself is suspect to originality; For one, the commandment of GOD stating that you must praise no other GOD. This is egotistical and lacks the spiritual enlightenment that We All know GOD would posses. Egoism and personal insecurity is a character flaw only present in many “unevolved beings” yet is prevalent in many of the so-called prophesies and stories of the Bible. In this case, the reason for someone surely Human, in seeking to place such a rule on their followers is because of the fact that there were other religions in the olden times with different beliefs and so, different names for GOD. Someone felt it a necessary commandment to keep People devout Christians/Catholics. “Praise no other GOD”.

But if you have Overstanding, Enlightenment and True Spirituality you know 110% that GOD would obviously know with utmost confidence that there is only 1 GOD, especially on Earth, so feeling insecure or threatened by simple differences in names and sounds that the different cultures of Humankind uses, is simply not a GODly quality.

Within the story of Adam & Eve and that of Creation, Woman’s image is blemished, which was due to it being written by who else, but shallow men. Let Us reflect for a moment. Why would GOD not want Us to have knowledge? The story says that after eating the apple, Adam and Eve received enlightenment and so, they became shameful due to this knowledge and ran to cover up their naked bodies.

This tale lacks Spiritual Insight, because they clearly did not receive “knowledge” of true self, that teaches Love of self and All, even if you’re naked, which is natural. Was this just another way to socially and historically demonize and demoralize the Afrikan and Indigenous Cultures, that walked around freely and confidently without garbs? Surely.

Europeans were/are white due to living in the cold climates of Europe for millenniums and had developed the social habit and culture of wearing much clothing to keep warm. Their egotistical and xenophobic tendencies of judging other cultures that they had encountered (during colonization) lead to the creation of such a story in the bible and used to demonize cultures that were wearing less garments due to hot climate.

We can clearly see that the Holy Bible was crafted throughout the ages by shallow politicians to better control the beliefs and so, the actions and reactions of its followers. If the Bible was rewritten today without the many subliminal messages of hate, classism, sexism and egoism, it would be a more effective “life-manual”.

The religious/spiritual beliefs and customs of a People shape their view and perception about All in Life. Spiritual ways of Life and religions give direction (whether Good or bad) to each individual and Group/Community; and so, unwise religions have for centuries led Humanity on egotistical and ideological paths of separatism and have caused the loss of a significant number of the Human species. So many and so much has been destroyed in the name of GOD, in essence a big part of Our Collective Evolutionary Progress.

“Religion is an insult to human dignity. With or without it, you'd have good people doing good things and evil people doing bad things, but for good people to do bad things, it takes religion.” Steven Weinberg

All religions that are not about PEACE and LOVE of ALL, have led the People astray on a path of ignorance and egoism. The greatest influence on Humankind has been religion and the most Globally, violently-imposed religious text on the Human species' psyche is without a doubt the “Holy bible”. Filled with sexist and xenophobic ideologies that have plagued Civilization at large since the dawn of civilization.

Its spreading across the World was not by chance and by way of it being a Good book. It spread as it did and is prevalent today simply because it was a strategic move by the ruling elites with evil long term intentions of World Wide order and psychological control of The Global Population; All for the evils of greed and power that control gives and most importantly for the power that inequality and oppression allows.

Religion, especially the “Catholic Church” has played a maniacal and egotistical role in the worst evils that have been bestowed upon Humankind. Countless millions of Human Beings from Young to Old, were massacred by the ill conceived “inquisition” and “religious crusades” of the past. How many evils have been performed and are being committed in the name of GOD?

Look at the uncountable millions of Lives that were massacred all in the name of “the church”. The villain of columbus was the worst purveyor of senseless violence, massacre and genocide in the name of the Church. Ofcourse it must be noted that this was due to the Church being in cahoots with the Spanish state and being more interested in gaining treasure (gold) on earth than in heaven.

“The church is always trying to get other people to reform; it might not be a bad idea to reform itself a little, by way of example.” Mark Twain

“The power of the Catholic Church is seen from the very beginnings of the 'New World'. Columbus set forth believing himself to be ordained by God in his purpose. The Catholic Church had begun issuing papal bulls in 1452 which granted rights and privileges in order to promote missionary activity. In their minds the American continent was 'bestowed' by God (through the Pope) upon the Spanish and Portuguese.

The Church had ruled that enslavement and war could only be made on groups that had rejected the Gospel. When encountering Natives the Requerimiento was to be read to them. Afterwards, if they still chose not to submit to God's will, violence was permissible. This was regardless of whether the people actually understood."

http://historyteacher.net/GlobalStudies/LatinAmerica_Colonialism.htm

There exists a barrage of contradictions and mixed messages within the Holy Bible and the Catholic Church. Even to this day the Vatican and its Popes are on the side of murder and conquest. Although the Holy Bible states that "thou shall not kill" the modern Catechism of the Catholic Church as developed and published in the 1990s under John Paul II, asserts the following: "Life is portrayed as sacred, and no one can claim the right to destroy an innocent human being. The sin of shedding of innocent blood cries out to heaven for vengeance."

This is wonderful and very noble but then in the same text it states the following:

" Assuming that the guilty party's identity and responsibility have been fully determined, the traditional teaching of the Church does not exclude recourse to the death penalty, if this is the only possible way of effectively defending human lives against the unjust aggressor. - Catechism of the Catholic Church
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/You_shall_not_murder

What outright hypocrisy! The reason for the above is clearly to give the "state apparatus" religious and moral permission to go to war and kill for the sake of supposedly protecting lives.

"If anyone says, 'I love God,' yet hates his brother, he is a liar. For anyone who does not love his brother, whom he has seen, cannot love God, whom he has not seen." John 4:20

The inner Struggle of Temptation that impedes Personal Sacrifice and Progress

Sacrifice combats the temptation of individualism and selfishness. Sacrifice is the act of choosing Progress, Community and the Whole instead of individualism and selfishness. Every decision we make in Life, when We choose GOoD over bad, (GOD over the devil) We choose to sacrifice or give up the sinful spoils that awaits Us if We are selfish. Sacrifice can be automatic in a Righteous person's thought process and actions, so "temptation" is possible only when We are indecisive about Our goals, actions and morals. Temptation clearly is indecisiveness between GOoD or evil, individualism or All, yes or no, sacrifice or greed. Temptation is simply the indecision and thought of choosing that negative, individualistic act as opposed to the positive act that will always be for progress of the Whole, of All.

For God did not give us a spirit of timidity, but a spirit of power, of love and of self-discipline. Timothy 1:7

What impedes you/Us from sacrificing the spoils of egoism for progress of All is simply the inner battles of GOoD and evil. Know that evil is not an entity of any sort, it is simply a description of actions that are against the Whole; negatives, per se. The best way to decide in every decision is to think of the Whole first and then work down to yourself and see how the current decision that you are about to make is going to affect the Whole. What may impede Progress of the Whole? Am i being selfish? Am i thinking of myself instead of All, instead of my Family, Community, Nation or Humankind?

In the presence of evil, oppression and the likes, a Righteous person should always stand up against it. Stomp it out by all means necessary. If not, you risk it spreading like the virus it is. An analogy to aid in OverStanding is this: If there are 3 People and one wants to kill another out of pure evil and malice, the third person has the obligation stop it. The third person cannot believe that they are neutral, because to accept evil in your realm/environment and not do anything to combat it, is evil in itself. Inaction in the presence of evil means you have also been conquered by evil.

The three individuals in this imaginary example can be paralleled with Social Life where one person represents the oppressor, the victimizer, imperialism, the ruling class, the rich, corrupt government, etc.; the second person represents all oppressed victims, the poor and working class, etc.; the third person represents anyone from rich to poor, black or white, young and especially old, that could have done something to stop the oppressor/oppression but didn't/doesn't.

Now there are surely degrees of selfishness/evilness, for if a poor person asks another poor person and a rich person for help; the degree of selfishness is based on how much each had at that moment that they could have given but did not. Statistics show that Poor People will actually give their last dollar to charity, while a rich person will only give a measly few cents. Even if the rich person gave the poor person one hundred dollars, it still would not equate to the poor person giving their last dollar.

“And He sat down opposite the treasury, and began observing how the people were putting money into the treasury; and many rich people were putting in large sums. A poor widow came and put in two small copper coins, which amount to a cent. Calling His disciples to Him, He said to them, Truly I say to you, this poor widow put in more than all the contributors to the treasury; for they all put in out of their surplus, but she, out of her poverty, put in all she owned, all she had to live on.” Mark 12:41-44

“The Lord has declared to the Hindu in His incarnation as Krishna. I am in every religion as the thread through a string of pearls. Wherever thou seest extraordinary holiness and extraordinary power raising and purifying humanity, know thou that I am there.” Swami Vivekananda (Hinduism)

Galatians 5:14

“Live a life of love, just as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us as a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God.” Ephesians 5:2

“Throughout history, it has been the inaction of those who could have acted; the indifference of those who should have known better; the silence of the voice of justice when it mattered most; that has made it possible for evil to triumph.”

“We must become members of a new race, overcoming petty prejudice, owing our ultimate allegiance not to nations, but to our fellow men within the human community.” Haile Selassie

“No one has ever seen God; but if we love one another, God lives in us and his love is made complete in us.” John 4:12

Matthew 25: The Sheep and the Goats

34" Then the King will say to those on his right, 'Come, you who are blessed by my Father; take your inheritance, the kingdom prepared for you since the creation of the World.

37" Then the Righteous will answer him, 'Lord, when did We see you hungry and feed you, or thirsty and give you something to drink?

40" The King will reply, 'I tell you the Truth, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers of mine, you did for me.'

42" For I was hungry and you gave me nothing to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me nothing to drink.

43" I was a stranger and you did not invite me in, I needed clothes and you did not clothe me, I was sick and in prison and you did not look after me.'

46" Then they will go away to eternal punishment, but the Righteous to eternal Life."
End Quote.

Vegetarianism = Spiritual Evolution

"Every living creature is the son of the supreme Lord, and He does not tolerate even ants being killed. Indulgence in animal killing for the taste of the tongue is the grossest kind of ignorance."

Bhakitvedanta S. Prabhupada - Bhagavad Gita As It Is 14.16 (Hinduism)

Isn't it clear that if GOD created Us and the Animal Kingdom, it would simply be wrong and a negative/evil action to hurt any Life? For clearly an action against GOD's creations is an act against GOD. Many argue that since GOD placed Animals on Earth with Us, that it was meant to feed Us. This is ignorance and a clear lack of wisdom with primitive and animalistic tendencies. Humans can survive on Fruits, Vegetables and Grains without a doubt and is a much healthier diet.

Animals being on Earth may surely be a spiritual test by GOD and maybe those that are Enlightened and make the Spiritual and Holy step of becoming a Vegetarian might make it to heaven quicker or simply make it there. You decide.

"When one's food is pure, one's being becomes pure"

Hinduism - Chāndogya Upaniṣad 7.26.2

Chapter 9

Assimilation + Complacency = Fear + Inaction

“Fears are educated into us, and can, if we wish, be educated out.” Karl Augustus Menninger

Titus Livius

As Human Beings, We are adaptive by nature and therefore accept any way of Life that is bestowed upon Us, even if it goes against evolutionary instinct.

Our unrighteous assimilation and complacency comes from lack of Wisdom, Knowledge and Overstanding. We are Social beings and We learn, act and react based on what We see and experience. Within this, is the variable of “Collective social action” or “Collective Consensus.” What everyone else We associate with or relate to, thinks or does, we will surely think and accept the same. It becomes the “norm” regardless of any anti-social or self destructive tendencies within.

Assimilation can be a GOoD thing only if Positive, Progressive actions and habits are being assimilated to. What All in a Group are doing will be followed by all blind patriots, due to the Universal tendency of “assimilation”. If everyone is accepting inequality, corruption, exploitation, oppression, institutionalized injustice and cultural idiocracies, most complacent Citizens will assimilate to the same and accept it also. And in so doing, actually accept their exploitation and enslavement, however subtle or masked.

Be strong and of good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord your God is with you; He will not fail you, nor forsake you.
Deuteronomy 31:16

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

“Fear; if allowed free rein, would reduce all of us to trembling shadows of men, for whom only death could bring release.” John M. Wilson

Fear plays a pivotal role in all decisions We make, because We decide whether to be strong and Righteous or to flee and even join the enemy for safety, all based on how We handle the battle and emotion of fear.

Following is an analogy to help Us Overstand the current Human condition of pacifism and fear: It is like finding yourself in the pits of hell that is thousands of miles beneath the heavens and you keep fighting and struggling and you finally make it up a few feet from the bottom of hell. In looking at your better position, although so far from your only goal and option, the heavens, you soon stop struggling as much as before, because you keep looking back at the pit from where you came. Instead of this giving you strength to carry on, you decide to stop and rest because you feel things could be worse.

That is where society finds itself today, climbing out of the pits of a social hell. The majority of People are resting right above hell and know it but they figure they are not in hell, so why bother. But until Heaven is reached in every individual and collective sense, We must keep climbing, keep struggling, keep going. Utopia or Death!

So ask yourself, now and in each and every decision that you make from here on; Are you climbing up to heaven and helping as many as you can on the way up? Most importantly, are you even climbing up? If you're not, surely it is because you are comfortable in this hell.

How can We as conscientious and intelligent Beings allow this social chaos of evil and destruction? We cannot blame our elders because most of them were born into a culture that was very passive, well more like submissive. Isn't that what it really is? If they knew their situations and accepted the injustices and wrongness of the unjust laws and rules that they witnessed and yet did not choose to fight at all, then they were submissive without a doubt.

Can We lay blame for Their fear? Because that's what it boils down to, Fear. Fear of the wrath of corrupted-man that awaits any and all on this chaotic Earth, if anyone stands on the side of fairness, justice and equality. We must realize Our institutionalized and deep laden submissive tendencies that are against Our Evolutionary Nature and need.

The other thing to look out for is the enemy's greatest weapon, "deceit". Most accept this hell simply because of propaganda - the "twisted truths" in the media, the tv, the newspapers and radio. A deceived Citizenry will always look at the mass media for the "general consensus" of what the People should be upset at, happy with, sad about or revolting about. Even a person who is strong and Righteous at heart can be tricked into doing evil by deceit, lies, and trickery.

The ruling class profits and causes most of the social chaos that affects Society as a Whole. They also unfortunately own the media outlets as a strategic move, since most People look for the "public opinion" in the news instead of Their Communities. Once again there is no Unity in the Community structure, so the Citizenry will stay deceived and brainwashed until separatism is overcome.

Seek out Truth and do not accept at face value everything you see and hear. The Truth shall set Us Free because clearly, only the opposite of Truth, can incarcerate Us.

"A man who fears suffering is already suffering from what he fears." Michel De Montaigne

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

At first I was vexed with the Elders that were not rebellious against oppression and inequality. I resented that most allowed the Young to be as submissive and passive and accepting of the evil and injustice around. That is why the Martyrs, Political Prisoners and all persecuted Revolutionaries of Humanity who have stood against evil for the liberation of Humankind are to be praised and honored for all eternity.

Adore and appreciate the Righteousness in All that stand for Justice and Equality. These are Our Heroes and Saviors who have taken up their posts instinctively, with the most official appointment of all, that of evolutionary commands in the subconscious manual of Our evolutionary genes. Overcome We Must!

We must realize Our situation as one People fighting one big battle as one Global Family. The next step is synchronizing our moves and actions. Many kept up the fight despite the grueling hardships, suffering and loss of life; without those resilient fighters that kept the struggle alive, life at the present moment for the majority of Humankind would be closer to hell than we are right now.

Those Righteous Souls that are intelligent and brave will always conclude that it is ironically logical to sacrifice oneself for the survival of All. If you are filled with fears you will conclude after internal debate that it is safer not to oppose the threatening force although you know that it will kill you in the end, kill your Young, kill your Whole Community and Nation if it can.

When you are able to overcome those fears and you fully understand that the biggest Sacrifice anyone can give is their Lifework/Life, as The Lord Jesus Christ did, you realize that it would be more intelligent and progressive to do something, anything, to affect positive change for All, even that means losing your Life.

Pseudo-Power + Fear = Inaction

Barack Obama, Colin Powell and Condoleezza Rice's positions of power in the U.S. government is seen by many as a big step for Blacks. Unfortunately their positions of power can be labeled as "pseudo-power" because the only win for Black People in these cases is that of a Black face in a position of Power, that's it. The U.S. government hired them, specifically because they were Black but not "Black at heart" and so, did/do only what the ruling class of white-america expects them to do. It would be surprising if any international or much less national policy, law, agenda or any kind of Positive and Progressive voice will be put forth to the benefit of Black People by these Black People. They are lost in a role that they have chosen in Life to follow due to lack of Righteousness in their characters and most importantly, fear.

The U.S. government is not in even minimal control of the president but instead in the hands of the ruling elites which influence and dictate what actions will be followed and what the president's advisers will advise. He must and will follow the "agenda" that he knows he must if he wishes to not only keep his prestigious position of "superficial-power" but most vitally, to keep his life. If a white man like J.F.K. was "taken out" for not following the "imperial agenda"; imagine a Black man like Obama in such a historically racist Nation.

Some are so brainwashed, it is not even a case of their superiors having to tell them what to do and say; they think and act in accordance with what is expected of them. They are playing a "safe role" but it is a "sell out" role. They just have to be themselves and they will be doing all the right moves to further the imperial agenda of the ruling elites and even white supremacy.

Many don't look at the big picture and don't see the whole playing field of Life and from the right perspective. They are scared to be Righteous and if you are scared, you cannot think clearly and you end up just looking straight in front of you at what is there. In essence, the first threat. This prevents the individual from being able to take time to look over the obstacles right ahead of them and see the whole field and so, the whole picture.

Also when looking ahead, it's best to remember to look back to see where you came from. A parallel can be made within social Life whereby, if someone is overwhelmed by daily struggles, They will surely find it hard to look ahead to the future, for the future seems uncertain and even unimportant when going through rough times. "Day to day", is the Struggling People's phrase.

Many other variables can enter the equation of thought and decision making, especially when the mind and emotions are in chaos. Some of these variables are loss of self, which equates to loss of origin and loss of evolutionary priorities. If Humans would think about All before themselves, We would have Heaven on Earth. If We envision the big picture, We are able to think ahead and look at Our actions as not insignificant, but as part of a bigger action; that of Human Evolutionary Progress.

If you think of yourself or give into fear, you add negative variables, negative vibrations, and those are the variables of evil. You must substitute these variables with thoughts about the Whole, instead of the self. Know that this is a fight for the destiny of All that you are part of, All that Our People have fought for since the beginning of time.

"The import thing is this: to be able at any moment to sacrifice what we are for what we could become." Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

"We are not human beings having a spiritual experience, we are spiritual beings having a human experience." Pierre Teilhard de Chardin

As Struggling People, We seem to have the flaw and tendency of forgetting Our big battles and important issues when We're accomplishing overwhelming battles. It can be paralleled with trying to catch or kill an army of snakes or coyotes on your land but there are so many of them and it's been so difficult a task that you begin to tire and falter. It has taken so long, that when you finally catch one, you feel like the battle is over and you forget the original big battle which ofcourse was getting rid of them all. It seems that as the battle for the liberation and salvation of Humankind prolongs, We end up reducing the goals of Our Struggle little by little.

It is the same as there being holes in Our house put there by bullets being shot at the house and it starts to rain. You get so lost in worrying about the water coming in and trying to patch the holes that you soon forget that bullets are flying and how the holes are getting there in the first place.

As long as Humankind's energy and focus is placed on just patching holes and not on the causes of the holes in the House of Humanity, the Struggling, Suffering and Dying will never cease. They (the ruling class/bourgeoisie and its vices) will keep shooting holes in the fabric of Society until We stop them for good.

If things continue as is, We will All surely perish in time, but then again maybe not All of Us. These people are so twisted and cunning, they surely have already planned ahead in the case that planet Earth becomes too chaotic from uprisings by the Oppressed Masses or from a poisoned, exploited and uninhabitable Planet; (Yes, Space Migration).

Where is the love People? Where is the Sacrifice? Where is the Human duty in Our Hearts and Souls? Where is Our evolutionary and rEvolutionary obligation, not only as aware Lifeforms but also damn sure capable ones? No matter who you are, what abilities or disabilities; You are capable of so many things towards helping out someone in need and contributing towards the Progress of not only self but especially the outer circles that you are part of, from Family to Community, to Nation & ultimately the World.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

As a Struggling People We must remember and never forget the past. As We go forward, We must always remember from where We came, to better overstand where We need to go and most importantly what Our goals should be.

We must assume the unknown in all equations and theories. Perception is a key variable in every Existential equation. How We look at things (perception) and most importantly with what filters of Knowledge & Overstanding that Our minds are equipped with to help analyze each situation is one of the most crucial tools in the Human mind.

Transcend the mental chains of subordination and oppression. The key to breaking these chains is simply in just knowing that the chains are there in the first place. “Spread The Word!”

As the level of overall Human “psychic entropy” decreases and Human oneness increases, the Social flaw of spending so much precious time seeking entertainment in mundane and useless activities, while Our help is needed, will surely begin to wade in the new Utopic Movement to come. Bottom line is simply that instead of the “social norm” being pacifism, fear, complacency and inaction, such selfish and disconnected behavior will become abnormal, and doing the right conscientious thing will actually become the Socially accepted (and more importantly) expected norm.

“Fear is never a good counselor and victory over fear is the first spiritual duty of [Wo]man.”

The Spiritual Revolution: Bring Meaning to Life

by Robert Tolz

I am convinced that the best hope for a transformation in human society and a future of peace, equality and justice lies not in the hands of governments but in the minds and hearts of individuals who will devote themselves to individual spiritual transformation.

Institutions are merely a reflection of the predominant state of consciousness of the population they serve. History shows that purportedly utopian models of society cannot work when imposed on individuals from the top—note well the results of Marxism/Communism. When the predominant state of consciousness of a people changes, the government will follow, and a predominant state of consciousness expands only as individuals transform themselves and create a critical mass for a wider-based change.

A broad-based sea change in consciousness can occur as a result of external circumstances. For instance, the Industrial Revolution changed the world from an agrarian society to one which became dependent upon machines. Machines (and I use the term in the broadest possible sense) provided huge leverage, multiplying human powers in theretofore unimaginable ways and irrevocably changing the relationship of all people to life, to the environment, to others and to themselves.

Similarly, when people started having to wait in lines to buy gasoline, and beaches began to close because they were fouled by waste, a consciousness dawned that there was such a thing as “The Environment.” After a long history of ignoring our impact, we were hit smack in the face by a brick wall. Because we discovered how unpleasant and inconvenient life can become by remaining ignorant, we learned that the Earth needs to be treated with care, not as something that can be endlessly plundered.

These two examples demonstrate how some aspects of society's consciousness can sometimes change in response to our surroundings. Interestingly, what characterizes both is that the transformations were involuntary reactions, not conscious choices. The changes in the predominant state of consciousness were... um... unconscious.

What would happen if, instead of merely reacting to circumstances, we responded by voluntary choice? What if we took responsibility for the direction of our evolution instead of being passively carried on a directionless conveyor belt? One of the fundamental aspects of the Spiritual Revolution is the realization that much, if not most, of the sorrow in the world is generated by a predominant state of consciousness in which we each act as if we are the center of the universe. That we act in this manner is not surprising, given that we each exist within a separate physical body, with private thoughts and private sensations that nobody else can hear or feel.

This state of being is the root of indifference to the needs and feelings of others. The others are "not me," so what do I care if they feel pain when I hurt them, if I try to get ahead of them, or if I steal from them? On the other hand, if I were able to transcend my separativity, I would empathically feel that the other person is part of me, his or her pain could be experienced as my own, and I would hesitate to cause any hurt. I would be more inclined to love them.

If we remain in this separate shell without recognizing the connection we have with what lies beyond it, we are in a prison. We suffer an existence whose underlying characteristics are loneliness and alienation, and we may feel incomplete, unsettled and unfulfilled, with a driving need to fill an existential hole in our lives. This need may produce feelings of sadness or insecurity, or we may desire to fill that hole with whatever will put an end to the ache.

Some will try to silence the ache with whatever numbing agent is close at hand—alcohol or drugs, non-stop work, or, very typically, a pattern of possessive behavior.

This possessive attitude is marked by a succession of experiences in which we (1) identify the object that we think we need to make us happy, (2) establish our plan to succeed in obtaining that object, (3) obtain the object (perhaps), (4) enjoy the gratification that the object produces or simply enjoy the exhilaration of our success, (5) after a period of time realize that the emptiness of being in a state of separativity still remains.

The object of our desires can vary widely. It can be as mundane as a pair of shoes or a super high-fidelity stereo system. But it can also consist of things which we do not often think of as objects to possess, such as a new friend, a spouse, an academic degree, a more interesting job, or even spiritual wisdom.

When we arrive at step 5 and realize we haven't really fixed anything permanently, the next step is frequently to go right back to step 1 and identify yet another object to obtain. Rarely if ever does it occur to us that the entire method of acquiring something to make us feel whole doesn't begin to fix the problem. Instead, we are more likely to say to ourselves, "Well, it looks like I misidentified what would truly make me happy. Let me figure out what I really need to go after."

We may think that we're going forward in a straight line, but a bird's eye view would reveal that we are merely traveling in circles, repeating the same experience over and over again. This too is a prison. We shy away from asking ourselves what the purpose of our lives is, because if this is all we see, it's not a pretty picture. Rather than remedying the essential problem of being separate, this pattern of gratifying desires tends to accentuate our separativity by focusing us in on ourselves as the center of the universe.

The soul who responds to the dull ache from a spiritual point of view seeks not to dull the ache but to resolve it permanently by an inner transformation that shifts away from a self-centered prison towards an expansive inner freedom. Desire is transmuted into a yearning, and the soul acts to integrate his or her life to attain the aspirations which are generated by that yearning.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

It is immensely difficult to stand apart and look back to see oneself clearly. Self-observation is inherently subjective, because of the underlying obstacle that the self is trying to look at the self. This reflexive action is akin to a knife trying to cut itself. But if we are ever to see the patterns of our lives and to achieve true inner freedom, it is absolutely essential that we look at ourselves as clearly as possible, without fear and without deception. Then we can have a better sense of the raw material that we're starting with. ...

It is not necessary to dispense with our own unique individuality and personality. What is possible is to develop a practice, an attitude and a consciousness in which we make our shell more permeable, so that the essence of what appears to be beyond us is allowed to enter into the heart of our being. When we are able to do this more and more, we are truly not alone. The sadness and insecurity wane. The feeling that we need to acquire something to fill up some hole in our lives tends to lessen, because, after all, we already have everything. A sense of sufficiency, plenitude and peace follows.

This change in consciousness is not likely to occur without some degree of effort and intention. The first step is to come to the realization that this is something worthy to engage in, to feel a calling. The next step is to take responsibility and make a commitment to follow the path of that calling. ... Found the web at: http://seedsofunfolding.org/issues/12_05/features_1.htm

The evil Behind the Curtain of Social Control

Zeitgeist, Movie Transcript

Part Three: Don't Mind the Men behind the Curtain

“There is something behind the throne greater than the king himself”

-Sir William Pitt, House of Lords, 1770-

-Benjamin Disraeli, English Statesman, 1844-

“The real truth of the matter is that a financial element in the large centers has owned the government since the days of Andrew Jackson”

-Franklin D. Roosevelt, US President, 1933-

1775. The American revolutionary war began as the American colonies sought to detach from England and its oppressive monarchy. Though many reasons are cited for the revolution, one in particular sticks out as the prime cause, that

King George III of England outlawed the interest-free independent currency the colonies were producing and using for themselves. In turn forcing them to borrow money from the Central Bank of England, at interest, he immediately put the colonies in debt. And as Benjamin Franklin later wrote:

“The refusal of King George III to allow the colonies to operate an honest money system, which freed the ordinary man from clutches of the money manipulators was probably the prime cause of the revolution”
-Benjamin Franklin, Founding Father

In 1783 America won its independence from England. However, its battle against the Central Bank concept and the corrupt, greed filled men associated with it had just begun.

So what is a central bank? A central bank is an institution that produces the currency of an entire nation. Based on historical precedent, two specific powers are inherent in central banking practice: the control of interest rates and the control of the money supply, or inflation. The central bank does not simply supply a government's economy with money, it loans it to them at interest. Then through the use of increasing and decreasing the supply of money the central bank regulates the value of the currency being issued. It is critical to understand that the entire structure of this system can only produce one thing in the long run: DEBT.

It doesn't take a lot of ingenuity to figure this scam out. For, every single dollar produced by the central bank is loaned at interest. That means every single dollar produced is actually the dollar plus a certain percent of debt based on that dollar. And since the central bank has the monopoly of the production of the currency for the entire country and they loan each dollar out with immediate debt attached to it, where does the money to pay for the debt come from? It can only come from the central bank again. Which means the central bank has to perpetually increase its money supply to temporarily cover the outstanding debt created which in turn, since that new money is loaned out at interest as well, creates even more debt? The end result of this system without fail is slavery for it is impossible for the government, and thus the public, to ever come out of the self-generating debt. The founding fathers of this country were well aware of this.

“I believe that banking institutions are more dangerous than standing armies... If the American people ever allow private banks to control the issue of currency... the banks and corporations that will grow up around them will deprive the people of their property until their children wake up homeless on the continent their fathers conquered” -Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826)

“If you want to remain slaves of the bankers and pay for the costs of your own slavery, let them continue to create money and control the nation’s credit” -Sir Josiah Stamp (1880-1941)

By the early 20th century the US had already implemented and removed a few central banking systems, which were swindled into place by ruthless banking interests. At this time, the dominate families in the banking and business world were: the Rockefellers, the Morgans, the Warburgs, the Rothschilds. And in [the] early 1900's they sought to push once again legislation to create another central bank. However, they knew the Government and public were very wary of such an institution. So they needed to create an incident to affect public opinion. So J.P. Morgan, publicly considered a financial luminary at the time, exploited his mass influence by publishing rumors that a prominent bank in New York wasn't solvent or bankrupt. Morgan knew this would cause mass hysteria which would affect other banks as well. And it did. The public in fear of losing their deposits immediately began mass withdrawals. Consequently, the banks were forced to call in their loans causing their recipients to sell their property and thus the spiral of bankruptcies, repossessions and turmoil emerged. Putting the pieces together a few years later, Fredrik Allen of Life Magazine wrote:

“The Morgan interests took advantage... to precipitate the panic [of 1907] guiding it shrewdly as it progressed” -Frederik Allen, Life Magazine

Unaware of the fraud, the panic of 1907 led to the Congressional investigation headed by Senator Nelson Aldrich, who had intimate ties to the banking cartels and later became part of the Rockefeller family through marriage. The commission led by Aldrich recommended a central bank should be implemented so a panic like 1907 could never happen again. This was the spark the international bankers needed to initiate their plan.

In 1910 a secret meeting was held at a J.P.Morgan estate on Jekyll Island off the coast of Georgia. It was there that the central banking bill called the Federal Reserve Act was written. This legislation was written by bankers, not law makers. This meeting was so secretive, so concealed from Government and public knowledge that the 10 or so figures who attended disguised their names when in route to the island. After this bill was constructed, it was then handed over to their political front man, Senator Nelson Aldrich, to push through Congress. And in 1913, with heavy political sponsorship by the bankers, Woodrow Wilson became president, having already agreed to sign the Federal Reserve Act in exchange for campaign support. And two days before Christmas, when most of Congress was at home with their families, the Federal Reserve Act was voted in and Wilson in turn made it law. Years later Woodrow Wilson wrote, in regret:

“[Our] Great Industrial nation is controlled by its system of credit. Our system of credit is privately concentrated. The growth of the nation, therefore, and all our activities are in the hands of a few men.. who necessarily, by very reason of their own limitations, chill and check and destroy genuine economic freedom.”

“We have come to be one of the worst ruled, one of the most completely controlled and dominated governments in the civilized world –no government by free opinion, no longer a government by conviction and the vote of the majority, but a government by the opinion and the duress of small groups of dominant men. -Woodrow Wilson

Congressman Louis McFadden also expressed the truth after the passage of the bill: “A world banking system was being set up here... a superstate controlled by international bankers... acting together to enslave the world for their own pleasure. The FED has usurped the government.”

Now, the public was told that the Federal Reserve System was an economic stabilizer and inflation and economic crises were a thing of the past. Well, as history has shown, nothing is further from the truth. The fact is, the international bankers now had a streamline machine to expand their personal ambitions.

For example, from 1914 to 1919 the Fed increased the money supply by nearly 100% resulting in extensive loans to small banks and the public. Then, in 1920 the Fed called in mass percentages of the outstanding money supply. Thus resulting in the supporting banks having to call in huge numbers of loans and just like 1907, bank runs, bankruptcy and collapse occurred. Over 5,400 competitive banks outside of the Federal Reserve System collapsed further consolidating the monopoly of the small group of international bankers. Privy to this crime, Congressman Lindbergh stepped up and said in 1921:

“Under the Federal Reserve Act, panics are scientifically created. The present panic is the first scientifically created one, worked out as we figure a mathematical equation.” - Charles Lindbergh

However, the panic of 1920 was just a warm-up. From 1921 to 1929 the Fed again increased the money supply resulting once again in extensive loans to the public and banks. There was also a fairly new type of loan called margin loan in the stock market. Very simply, the margin loan allowed an investor to put down only 10% of the stock's price with the other 90% being loaned through the broker. In other words, a person could own a $1000 worth of stock, with only a $100 down. This method was very popular in the roaring 1920's as everyone seemed to be making money in the market. However, there was a catch to this loan. It could be called in at any time and had to be paid within 24 hours. This is termed "a margin call", and a typical result of a margin call was the selling of the stock purchased with the loan.

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

So, a few months before October in 1929, J.D.Rockefeller, Bernard Baruch and other insiders quietly exited the market. And on October 24th, 1929 the New York financiers who furnished the margin loans started calling them in, in mass. This sparked an instantaneous massive sell off in the market for everyone had to cover the margin loans. It then triggered a mass bank runs for the same reason, in turn collapsing over 16.000 banks enabling the conspiring international bankers to not only buy up rival banks at a discount but to also buy up whole corporations at pennies on the dollar. It was the greatest robbery in American history.

But that didn't stop there. Rather than expanding the money supply which were recovered from this economic collapse the Fed actually contracted it, fuelling one of the largest depressions in history. Once again outraged, Congressman Louis McFadden, a long time opponent of the banking cartels began bringing impeachment proceedings against the Federal Reserve Board. Saying of the crash and depression:

“It was a carefully contrived occurrence, international bankers sought to bring about a condition of despair, so that they might emerge the rulers of us all.” - Louis McFadden

Not surprisingly, and after two previous assassination attempts, McFadden was poisoned at a banquet before he could push for the impeachment.

Now, having reduced the society of the squaller the Federal Reserve bankers decided that the gold standard should be removed. In order to do this, they needed to acquire the remaining gold in the system. So, under the pretense of "helping to end the depression", came the 1933 gold seizure. Under the threat of imprisonment for 10 years everyone in America was required to turn in all gold bullion to the Treasury, essentially robbing the public of what little wealth they had left. And at the end of 1933 the gold standard was abolished. If you look at a dollar bill from before 1933 it says it is redeemable in gold. You look at the dollar bill today, it says it is legal tender which means it is backed by absolutely nothing. It is worthless paper. The only thing that gives our money value is how much of it is in circulation. Therefore, the power to regulate the money supply is also the power to regulate its value which is also the power to bring entire economies and societies to its knees.

“Give me control of a nation’s money supply, and I care not who makes its laws” -Mayer Amschel Rothschild, Founder of Rothschild Banking Dynasty

It's important to clearly understand, the Federal Reserve is a private corporation. It is about as "federal" as Federal Express. It makes its own policies and is under virtually no regulation by the US Government. It is a private bank that loans all the currency at interest to the Government, completely consistent with the fraudulent central banking model that the country sought to escape from when it declared independence in the American revolutionary war. Now, going back to 1913 the Federal Reserve Act was not the only unconstitutional bill pushed through Congress. They also pushed the Federal Income Tax. It's worthwhile to point out that the American public's ignorance towards the Federal Income Tax is a testament to how dumbed down and oblivious the American population really is.

First of all the Federal Income Tax is completely unconstitutional as it is a direct unapportioned tax. All direct taxes have to be apportioned to be legal, based on the Constitution. Secondly, the required number of states in order to ratify the amendment to allow the Income Tax was never met. And this has even been sided in modern court cases.

“If you... examined [the 16th amendment] carefully, you would find that a sufficient number of states never ratified that amendment.”

-U.S. District Court Judge, James C. Fox, 2003”

Third, at the present day roughly 35% of the average worker's income is taken from them via this tax. That means you work 4 months out of the year to refill this tax obligation. And guess where that money goes? It goes to pay the interest on the currency being produced by the fraudulent Federal Reserve Bank, a system that does not have to exist at all. The money you make working

4 months out of the year goes almost literally into the pockets of the international bankers who own the private Federal Reserve Bank. And forth, even with the fraudulent Government claim as to the legality of the Income Tax there is literally no statute, no law in existence that requires you to pay this tax. Period.

“I really expected that, of course there is a law that you can point to in the law book, a code that requires you to file a tax return. Of course there is! I was at that point where I couldn't find the statute that clearly made me personally liable, at least not me and most people I know and I had no choice in my mind except to resign.” –Joe Turner, Former IRS Agent

“Based on the research that I did throughout the year 2000 and that I'm still doing I have not found that law. I've asked Congress, we've asked a lot of people, in the IRS, IRS Commissioner's helpers, they can't answer because if they answer the American people are gonna know that this whole thing is a fraud.” –Sherry Jackson, Former IRS Agent

“The income tax is nothing less than the enslavement of the entire country. Now, the control of the economy and the perpetual robbery of wealth is only one side of the Rubik's cube that bankers hold in their hands. The next tool for profit and control is war.

Since the inception of the Federal Reserve in 1913 a number of large and small wars have commenced. With the three most pronounced - were World War I, World War II and Vietnam.

World War I: In 1914 European war broke out centered around England and Germany. The American public wanted nothing to do with the war. In turn President Woodrow Wilson publicly declared neutrality. However, under the surface the US administration was looking for any excuse it could find to enter. In a noted observation by the Secretary of State, William Jennings:

“The large banking interests were deeply interested in the world war because of the wide opportunities for large profits.” –William Jennings Bryan

It's important to understand that the most lucrative thing that can happen for the international bankers is war. For, it forces the country to borrow even more money from the Federal Reserve Bank at interest. Woodrow Wilson's top adviser and mentor was Colonel Edward House, the man with the intimate connections with the international bankers who wanted in the war. In a documented conversation between Colonel House, Wilson's adviser and Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary of England regarding how to get America into the war, Grey inquired: “What will Americans do if Germans sink an ocean liner with American passengers on board?”

House responded: “I believe that a flame of indignation would sweep the United States and that by itself would be sufficient to carry us into war.”

So, on May 7th 1915 on essentially the suggestion of Sir Edward Grey, a ship called the Lusitania was deliberately sent into German controlled waters where German military vessels were known to be. And as expected, German U-boats torpedoed the ship, exploding stored ammunition, killing 1.200 people.

To further understand the deliberate nature of this set up: the German embassy actually put advertisements in the New York Times telling people that if they boarded the Lusitania they did so at their own risk as such a ship sailing from America to England through the war zone would be liable to destruction. In turn, and as anticipated, the sinking of the Lusitania caused a wave of anger among the American population. And America entered the war a short time after. The First World War cost 323.000 American deaths. J.D. Rockefeller made 200 million dollars off of it. That's about 1.9 trillion by today's standards. Not to mention the war cost about 30 billion dollars for America. Most of which was borrowed from the Federal Reserve Bank at interest furthering the profits of the international bankers.

World War II: On December 7th, 1941 Japan attacked the American fleet at Pearl Harbor triggering our entry into that war. President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared the attack was "a day that will live in infamy". A day of infamy indeed, but not because of the alleged surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

After 60 years of surfacing information it is clear that not only was the attack on Pearl Harbor known weeks in advance, it was outright wanted and provoked. Roosevelt, whose family had been New York bankers since the 18th century, whose uncle Frederick was on the original Federal Reserve Board was very sympathetic to the interest of the international bankers, and the interest was to enter the war because as we've seen - nothing is more profitable for the international bankers than war. In a journal entry by Roosevelt's Secretary of War Henry Stimson dated November 25, 1941 he documented a conversation he had with Roosevelt.

“The question was how should we maneuver them into firing the first shot... It was desirable to make sure the Japanese be the ones to do this so that there should remain no doubt as to who were the aggressors.” –Henry Stimson, Secretary of War

In the months leading up to the attack on Pearl Harbor, Roosevelt had done almost everything in his power to anger the Japanese showing a posture of aggression: he halted all of Japan's imports with American petroleum, he froze all of Japanese assets in the United States, He made public loans to Nationalist China and supplied military aid to the British, both enemies of Japan in the war, which by the way is completely in violation of international war rules. And on December 4th, three days before the attack, Australian intelligence told Roosevelt about a Japanese task force moving towards Pearl Harbor. Roosevelt ignored it. So as hoped and allowed, on December 7th, 1941 Japan attacked Pearl Harbor killing 2,400 soldiers. Before Pearl Harbor 83% of the American public wanted nothing to do with the war. After Pearl Harbor - one million men volunteered for the war.

It is important to know, Nazi Germany's war effort was largely supported by two organizations: one of which was called I.G. Farben. I.G. Farben produced 84% of Germany's explosives and even the Zyklon B used in concentration camps to kill millions. One of the unspoken partners of I.G. Farben was J.D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil Company in America. In fact, the German Air Force could not operate without a special additive patented by Rockefeller's Standard Oil. The drastic bombing of London by Nazi Germany, for example, was made possible by a $20 million sale of fuel to I.G. Farben by the Rockefeller's Standard Oil Company. This is just one small point of the topic how American business funded both sides of World War II.

One other treasonous organization worth mentioning is the Union Banking Corporation of New York City. Not only did it finance numerous aspects of Hitler's rise to power along with actual materials during the war, it was also a Nazi money-laundering bank which was eventually exposed for having millions of dollars of Nazi money in its vaults.

The Union Banking Corporation of New York was eventually seized for violations of the Trading with the enemy Act. Guess who the director and vice president of the Union Bank was? Prescott bush, our current president's grandfather and of course our former president's father. Keep that in mind when considering the moral and political dispositions of the bush family.

Vietnam War: The United States official declaration of war with Vietnam in 1964 came after an alleged incident involving two US destroyers being attacked by North Vietnamese PT boats in the Gulf of Tonkin. This was known as the Gulf of Tonkin Incident. This single situation was the catalytic pretext for massive troop deployment and full-fledged warfare. One problem, however. The attack on the US destroyers by Vietnamese PT boats never happened. It was a completely staged event to have an excuse to enter the war. Former Secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara stated years later that the Gulf of Tonkin Incident was a mistake, while many other insiders and officers have come forward relaying that it was a contrived farce, a complete lie.

Once in the war, it was business as usual. In October 1966 President Lyndon Johnson lifted trade restrictions on the Soviet block knowing full well that the Soviets were providing upwards of 80% of North Vietnam war supplies. Consequently, Rockefeller interests financed factories in the Soviet Union which the Soviets used to manufacture military equipment and send it to North Vietnam.

However, the funding of both sides of this conflict was only one side of the coin. In 1985 Vietnam's Rules of Engagement were declassified. This detailed what American troops were and were not allowed to do in the war. It included absurdities like:

- * North Vietnamese anti-aircraft missile systems could not be bombed until they were known to be fully operational.
- * No enemy could be pursued once they crossed the border of Laos or Cambodia. And most revealing of all.
- * The most critical strategic targets were not allowed to be attacked unless initiated via high military officials.

Apart from these imposed ludicrous limitations North Vietnam was informed of these restrictions and therefore could base entire strategies around the limitations of the American forces. This is why the war went on so long. And the bottom line is this: the Vietnam War was never meant to be won. Just sustained. This war for profit resulted in 58,000 American deaths and 3 million dead Vietnamese.

So, where are we now?

September 11th : September 11th was the jump start for what is now an accelerated agenda by the ruthless elite. It was a staged war pretext, no different than the sinking of the Lusitania, the provoking of Pearl Harbor and the Gulf of Tonkin lie. In fact, if 9/11 wasn't a planned war pretext, it would be an exception to the rule. It has been used to launch two unprovoked illegal wars, one against Iraq and one against Afghanistan. However, 9/11 was a pretext for another war as well. The war against you [US Citizens]. The Patriot Act, Homeland Security, the Military Tribunals Act and other legislations are all completely and entirely designed to destroy your civil liberties and limit your ability to fight back against what is coming.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Currently in the United States, unannounced to most brain-washed Americans, your home can be searched, without a warrant, without you being home, you can in turn be arrested with no charges revealed to you, detained indefinitely with no access to a lawyer and legally tortured, all under the suspicion that you might be a terrorist.

If you need a painted picture of what is happening in this country, let's recognize how history repeats itself. In February 1933, Hitler staged a false flag attack burning down his own German Parliament building, the Reichstag and blamed it on communist terrorists. Within the next few weeks he passed the Enabling Act which completely eradicated the German Constitution, destroying people's liberties. He then led a series of pre-emptive wars all justified to German people as necessary to maintaining "homeland security".

“An evil exists that threatens every man, woman and child of this great nation, we must take steps to ensure our domestic security and protect our homeland.”
-adolf hitler, when announcing the Gestapo to the people.

“Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists and every government that supports them.” - george w. bush

It's time to wake up. The people in power go out of their way to make sure that you are perpetually misled and manipulated. The majority's perception of reality, especially in the political arena, is not their own. It's shrewdly imposed upon them without them even knowing it. For example, the public at large actually believes the invasion of Iraq is going badly as sectarian violence doesn't seem to stop. What the public fails to see is that the destabilization of Iraq is exactly what the people behind the government want. This war is to be sustained so the region can be divided up, domination of the oil maintained, continual profits reaped for the defense contractors and most importantly, permanent military bases established to be used as a launching pad against other oil-bearing nonconforming countries such as Iran and Syria. For further implication that the civil war and destabilization is purely intentional, in 2005 two elite British SAS officers were arrested by Iraqi police after being caught driving around in their car, shooting at civilians while dressed up as Arabs. After being arrested and taken to a jail in Basra, the British Army immediately requested the release of these men. When the Basra Government refused, British tanks came in and physically broke out the men from the Basra prison.

“If you wish to destroy an area, how do you do it? Well there are two ways: you can go in there and bomb it and so forth, but that is not very efficient. What you do is you try to get the people in that area to kill each other and to destroy their own territory, their own farms, and that's what's been done in that area. So, the way in which you destroy the bond is get him to destroy himself by dividing his ranks against one another.”

“And then you feed both sides, you have agents feeding both sides - inflaming both sides, and they kill each other off. And it's time that some of us woke up to this reality, to understand that will people try to maintain empires and create empires. They do it by manipulating the people they are trying to conquer.”

You might want to ask yourself why the entire culture is utterly saturated with mass media entertainment from all sides, while the educational system in America continues its stupefying downwards slide since the US Government decided to take over and subsidize the public school system.

“What your government pays for, it gets. When we understand that, then we look at government financed institutions of education and see the kind of students and the kind of education that's been turned out by these government financed schools. Logic will tell you that if what has been turned out in those schools was not in accord with what the state and the federal government wanted then it would change it.”

“The bottom line is that the government is getting what they have ordered. They do not want your children to be educated. They do not want you to think too much. That is why our country and our world has become so proliferated with entertainments, mass media, television shows, amusement parks, drugs, alcohol and every kind of entertainment that keep the human mind entertained. So that you don't get in the way of important people by doing too much thinking. You had better wake up and understand that there are people who are guiding your life and you don't even know it.”

Network,[TV] 1976 : “We're in a lot of trouble! Because you people, and 62 million other Americans are listening to me right now. Because less than 3% of you people read books. Because less than 15% of you read newspapers. Because the only truth you know is what you get over this tube. Right now, there is a whole and entire generation that never knew anything that didn't come out of this tube! This tube is the Gospel. The ultimate revelation. This tube can make or break presidents, popes, prime ministers. This tube is the most awesome goddamn force in the whole godless world and woe is us if it ever falls into the hands of the wrong people!”

“And when the largest company in the world controls the most awesome, goddamn propaganda force in the whole godless world who knows what shit will be peddled for truth on this network! So you listen to me. Listen to me! Television is not the truth. Television's a goddamned amusement park! Television is a circus, a carnival, a travelling troop of acrobats, storytellers, dancers, singers, jugglers, sideshow freaks, lion tamers and football players. We're in the boredom-killing business.”

“But you people sit there, day after day, night after night, all ages, colors, creeds. We're all you know. You're beginning to believe the illusions we're spinning here. You're beginning to think that the tube is reality and that your own lives are unreal. You do whatever the tube tells you! You dress like the tube, you eat like the tube, you raise your children like the tube, you even think like the tube. This is mass madness, you maniacs! In God's name, you people are the real thing! We are the illusion!”

The last thing the men behind the curtain want is a conscious, informed public capable of critical thinking. Which is why a continually fraudulent zeitgeist is output via religion, the mass media and the educational system. They seek to keep you a distracted, naive bubble. And they are doing a damn good job of it.

In 2005 an arrangement between Canada, Mexico and the United States was made. This arrangement, unannounced to the public, unregulated by Congress, merges the United States, Mexico and Canada into one entity, erasing all borders. It's called the North American Union. You might wanna ask yourself why you have never heard of this. In fact, there is only one mainstream reporter who's actually heard of and has had the courage to cover this issue.

“The bush Administration's open border policy and its decision to ignore the enforcement of this country's immigration laws is part of a broader agenda. President bush signed a formal agreement that will end the United States as we know it. And he took this step without approval from either the US Congress or the people of the United States.” –CNN

“It's a deal that few have even heard of.” “It's being done again by very few people at the very top, on behalf of the investment class. But the working class of people, the political officials from cross our country, from communities, from cities and so forth, they don't know anything about this.” –CNN

This isn't some trade agreement. It is a total removal of sovereignty from these countries which will also result in a completely new currency called the Amero.

“...apart from that I think one thing, people who are dollar based need to focus on is the Amero. That's the one thing that nobody is talking about, but I think it's gonna have a big impact on everybody's life in Canada, the US and Mexico. The Amero is the proposal of currency for the North American community which is being developed right now between Canada, the US and Mexico to make a borderless community much like the EU and the dollar, Canadian Dollar, US Dollar, and the Mexican Peso replaced by the Amero. –Steve Previs

By default of this agreement, the American Constitution will eventually be obsolete. You would think that a situation like this would be on the cover of every major newspaper. That is until you realize the people who are behind this movement are the same people who are behind the mainstream media and you are not told what you're not supposed to know. The North American Union is the same concept as the European Union, the African Union and the soon-to-be Asian Union. And the same people are behind all of them. And when the time is right the North American Union, the European Union the African Union and the Asian Union will be merged together forming the final stages of the plan these men have been working on for over 60 years – a One World Government.

“We shall have world government whether or not we like it. The only question is whether world government will be achieved by conquest or consent.”

Paul Warburg, / Architect of The Federal Reserve System.

“We are grateful to the Washington Post, The New York Times, Time Magazine, and other great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected their promises of discretion for almost 40 years. It would have been impossible for us to develop our plan for the world if we had been subjected to the lights of publicity during those years.” - david rockefeller, Council of Foreign Relations

Take a breather People, for it is not easy to accept the grim reality of this crazy, concocted hell We find Ourselves in. Reflect and only focus on the positives of the yet hopeful situation, which is, We are aware and have a fighting chance. Now let Us Unite and act... but We must act soon and swiftly because things will get real bad, real soon, without a doubt. There are many “sick headed” individuals out there that will kill Us All before stepping down from the top of the pyramid of power or ending the game of social control. We must stand Together for Change and Progress before it is too late.

We shouldn't be surprised since one of the most cunning moves in warfare is deceit. In every Quantum-Physical action in Life and existence, the best strategy for an attacker (atom or Human) is deceit. For the enemy stands a better chance at doing its evil, its negative act, by deceiving the victim(s) instead of just all-out, truthful, honorable, dignified, fair and upfront fighting.

Just as the best move atomically for micro-organisms to infect something or someone is to deceive and cloak itself to not be located by antibodies or the like, until it is just too late and the infection has already started; Our interaction in society, is exactly the same as those at the microscopic level. Where the virus is the ruling class, aristocrats, politicians, etc. and the victim or host is World Civilization.

“For tomorrow belongs to the people who prepare for it today”

“The lion does not turn around when a small dog barks”

"The first lesson a revolutionary must learn is that he is a doomed man. Unless he understands this, he does not grasp the essential meaning of his life."
Long Live Huey P. Newton, Revolutionary Suicide (1973)

Every rEvolutionary action can be seen as suicide when taking into account the unpredictability of life. It depends on what your main goal is, where you see yourself in the scheme of things, what part you are willing to play and how much of yourself you are willing to sacrifice.

I'm sure all true Revolutionaries have felt and feel the same in regards to being willing to commit Revolutionary suicide, because of the Love of Life and Love of All. To live in Peace is what i wish for All People present and especially those to come after Us. Since i have bravery in my Heart, i see it as my obligation to All, to do my utmost to change “the system” even if it means losing my priceless Life...and you should also.

To achieve Peace, sometimes We have to go to war. To defeat evil, sometimes We have to do evil. If We Love Life, sometimes We have to take life and give up Life, to simply preserve Life.

"At last I perceive that in revolutions the supreme power rests with the most abandoned." Georges Jacques Danton

"This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or exercise their revolutionary right to overthrow it." Abraham Lincoln

Very soon World Revolution will become a reality and Humankind will Evolve into a Humane Society.

As soon as each Nation and groups of Nations are fully liberated from the insane capitalists and their corrupt politics, immediate collective steps should be taken to then help liberate other Oppressed Nations and People by a collective effort.

When this happens the Indigenous and Afro-Descendants of all Liberated Lands should always be placed at the forefront of reparations. Being the first to be raped of Their Peace, Socio-Cultural Identities, History and land.

Better to destroy (capitalism) start over and rebuild anew with Love, Equality, Justice and the Progress of Humankind in mind. A new start, a new page, a new Life for All of Humankind, which is going to be extinct soon, due to lack of Our most vital element in existence, “Humanity”.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Those of Us who are informed and awake, need to make sure everyone else across Our realm of existence is also informed about the current condition that We as Human Beings find ourselves in (and under).

Across the World many Struggling People know about this corrupt, racist, heartless and senseless system, but don't know that there exists organized Human Struggle, that there is hope or even that anything can be done.

We now have the knowledge of Our current reality and also Our rEvolutionary obligation to act for the Progress and Salvation of Humankind. We must realize Our collective situation as a species and Our ability to overcome this life of unnecessary suffering and death with ease and decisiveness.

Let Us create a trend and mandate for All informed People to preach and reach All about changing things through World Unity, Cooperation and sharing of resources (without capitalism). Let Us finalize the Struggle for Humankind's Liberation and never, never give up, for We give up the Lives and well being of Our immediate Family and Future Generations along with the Whole of Humankind.

We have to take the initiative and simply do what is the most intelligent thing to do, to change this hell we call Life. Let Us take control of Our Lives, Our Planet and Our Destiny.

"The most heroic word in all languages is revolution." Eugene Debs

Militants, Rebels, Gangs, Outlaws, Revolutionaries and Loners, etc.: Unite and only fight "the system" and never each other.

All People, Activists, Anarchists, Communists, Socialists, Vanguard, Unions, Churches, etc.: It's time to start finalizing this epic Struggle for Humanity. Righteous People in the police and armed forces, all civil servants of The People, the Elderly, Children and the Physically Challenged;

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity

Please UNITE! Get out into the streets and demand change Together. It's the only way to achieve what We need without bloodshed.

Please wake up complacent civil and public servants, government and especially all police and military. Stop doing everything you're told if it involves exploitation and injustice. Stop believing everything you hear, analyze first. If not, you end up with a corrupt belief system and thwarted morals that are against Humanity and evolutionary progress. Please Unite and stand with "the People" before it is too late. Don't put a "paycheck" before morality and what is simply just.

As a species, We have evolved, achieved and progressed to the level of Social order where We are more than capable of providing for All Human-Beings. Yet a small percentage of humans are lost in primitive, individualistic thought and counter progressive/evolutionary acts which only serve to keep them at the top of the social hierarchic pyramid of power and control. This has been going on for too long now and if that is not enough, Our Planet is going to become uninhabitable soon, unless We stop fighting each other and simply Unite. In just a few decades, future generations will find it very difficult to survive and will live lives filled with grueling physical and mental strife.

Please think of Our Children and great Grandkids who will surely suffer from case after case of physical inflections like severe cancer and asthma due to out of control pollution and a neglected planet/habitat. With the variables of high healthcare cost and crumbling economies worldwide, only the filthy rich will survive. The rest will simply suffer and die. I'm sure We may All hear Their harrowing cries as We lay in Our graves – some of you/Us with undying guilt of inaction and selfishness.

A reminder to All Young People and rookie rEvolutionaries: Although We must innovate and come up with new methods, We must not forget the many steps taken before by Our Righteous Ancestors and Political Prisoners that have enabled Our grand leaps.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Please raise Our Children to be Conscientious Humanitarians.

What better battle to fight but for the progress of the Human Species as a Whole. In essence, the most epic Evolutionary battle: “Spiritual rEvolution”.

The embers in The Hearts of The Righteous and awareness amongst civilization must always keep on burning with a fury that emits nothing but progressive sparks in every tendency and action. The fire from within the Soul of each Righteous Being is the hottest because it is the heat of Life Struggle that Our Ancestors have passed on to guide Us to the necessary steps that are needed to Evolve, Survive and Progress as a People.

If We do not stand up now, Our Babies and Youth may not be able to stand up later against the evil, ignorance and oppression that is spreading throughout Our Worldwide Society at an alarming rate.

Nathaniel Hawthorne

Only The Knowledge of Our Collective Truth Shall Set Us Free

My People! Please know that only with Struggle, Determination, Unity and Organization can Humankind climb out of the depths of hell in which it finds itself. Spread the word, those of you who have already evolved Conscientiously and have already Awakened to the Wisdom of “Love of All.”

We have an obligation to All that came before Us and especially to All that will come after, who depend on Our sacrifices and bravery of today to have a chance at simply, a Future in Peace, without suffrage and grief. Humankind must visualize its ultimate goal and the possibilities, just as an athlete visualizes before each move and shot. Civilization must see this collective move as an evolutionary one that will push the engines of Human Progress and aid Humankind in securing a Future.

UTOPIA or DEATH!

Preparation should be taken and violent opposition expected from those in power and those lost in ignorance and egoism. We cannot out fire with fire (every time) so creativity should be utilized. Ofcourse this is not to imply that counter violence is forbidden for this is a fight for Humankind, for Life and truly a matter of species survival.

May the “Love of Life” and “All” bring forth a rEvolutionary wave that will manifest itself through All Righteous People and “rise-up” to the occasion.

A New Beginning awaits Us...

Note to All Spiritual People: “Let Us Unite every Hour and pray/meditate in unison to create a constant wave of Spiritual energy and Positive vibrations across the planet to aid Humanity in its battle to evolve Spiritually.

Note to Conscientious Writers: Start changing the idiocracies and inequalities that Our egotistically influenced writing rules subliminally perpetrate. Through creative writing, psychological reparations and reorientation towards a Humanistic outlook and perspective of Life and living can be achieved.

Always “big-up” the formerly Oppressed and Exploited by capitalizing words that relate to Human Struggle, Positivity, GOD, Progress, Liberation, etc. Also words that refer to the whole of Humanity which gives importance to the collective and in-turn promotes Cooperation and Unity.

When referring to Humankind do not simply use “mankind”, for it implicates only man and not mentioning the most important part of Humankind - “Woman”.

We must diminish, demoralize and lower the case and so the literary and virtual importance of all that is and relates to negativity, classism, racism, sexism, xenophobia, separatism, oppression, individualism, etc. All that is negative should be literally diminished by simply using lowercase letters (even names) for the formerly inflated, like pseudo-heroes, maniacal presidents, dictators, etc.

Utopia or Bust!

A Spiritual Guide to Save Humanity and aid in its Evolution & Revolution.

Contrary to what We/you have been led to believe, a "Utopian Society" is possible on Earth. Looking at the current state of chaos in the World and what Humankind has been going through for millenniums now, although centuries ago the art of Cooperation and Unity had been mastered; We need to ask the question of "Why are We caught in this unending hell despite the existence of such technological advances, inventions, innovations and the unquestionable and undeniable ability to immediately and decisively eradicate World poverty, inequality, suffering and unnecessary deaths?".

Countless technological leaps are made every day and providing for All of Humankind is a simple task that can be achieved with not much resources or labor. Machines extract and create more in less time and using less energy. Food and resources is abundant enough to feed more than twice the current World Population; so why are there still People starving all over the planet?

For the Answers to these questions and many more, simply read this book.
