NEW ORLEANS, WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 2, 1859.

THE DAILY BEE.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. FEB. 1. TWO YEARS COMPARED. urs. Decutas & Co., of the New York remains Agents and a second review of the commercial failures in the various tates and in Canada during the year 1868, as ompared with the pasic year 1867. This is compared with the panio year 1857. This is an exceedingly interesting, and, as far as we can judge, an accurately prepared document. We believe it will prove particularly results be to the mercantile community. We find on glancing at the circular that in New York, Pennsylvania, Oilo, Indiana, Iowa and New England generally, there has been a reduction of fallures as compared with 1857—in some instances the decrease is marked; in others less so. In Michigan failures are nearly equal to those of 1857; Illinois, Wisconstin and Minnesota exhibit a large increase, as do likewise both the Canadas. As for the South, the circular deems an extended analysis usnecessary, in consequence of the comparainteruse some the Canadas. As for the South, the circular deems an extended analysis uncoessary, in consequence of the comparative prosperity prevailing there, the general healthy tone of business, and the absence of excessive and wild speculation. The only Southern State from which the accounts are somewhat discouraging is Virginia. The crops of last year fell short, money is scarce, and considerable functal distress prevails. A general survey of the whole country nevertheless proves that a gratifying improvement is manifest in the supect of commercial affairs. Trade is less extensive but safer. One or two good crops are alone needed to place us in as favorable a position, pseuniarily, as we were before the patic, with the additional advantage of a valuable lesson from its indiction.

Appended to the circular is a tabular tatement in which are arranged in a conve-Appended to the circular is a tabular statement in which are arranged in a convenient ferm for consultation the number of failures in each State in 1857 and 1858, average liabilities of each failure, and the total amount of liabilities is both years. Thus, for example, in the city of New York there were in 1857 nice hundred and afteen failures; the average of each was $147,681; the total amount was $135,129,000. For 1858, in the same city, we find 406 failures; average liabilities, $1,773,662, in New Orleans, in 1857, there were 88 failures; average liabilities of each failure, $108,362; total amount of liabilities, $4,485,000; total amount of liabilities, $4,485,000; total amount of failures, $4,685,000; total amount of failures, $1,000; total amount of failures in the United States in 1857 was 4,832, and the United States in 1857 was 4,932, against 4,225 in 1858. The total amount of Jiabilities was $791,750,000, against $35,749,682 in 1859.

It is evident enough from these statistics that while there is visible and great improvement, we are not completely free from the effects of the universal and disastrous panior 1857. These are still manifest in several respects. Many commercial houses which battled manfully against the revulsion, and made enormous sacrifices to preserve their credit, were exhausted by the operation, and have since succumbed. Hence the comparatively large number of failures during the piet year. Had credit completely revived, and confidence been entirely restored, most of these firms would have been enabled to retrieve their losees and maintain their made enormous sacrifices to preserve their credit, were exhausted by the operation, and have since succumbed. Hence the comparatively large number of failures during the past year. Had credit completely revived, and confidence been entirely restored, most of these firms would have been enabled to retrieve their loseers and maintain their solvency; but though the panic passed away, its consequences have not yet disappeared. They are seen in the curtailment of the credit system, and the unavoidable contraction of business. They are palpable in the immense, the almost unfrecedented value of bank deposits lying idle and uninvested. The rate of interest is low, because money is abundant, and the demand for it inactive. The spirit of speculation has been completely checked, and people are wholly indisposed to venture their means in enterprises involving risk and uncertainty, though promising handsome returns. We have little doubt this cautious (seling will endure for a gear or two clauses, and the man believed that Cuba could be purchased, and there never was a period when the foreithe acquisition of the island would be attended with less injury to all parties than the present.

Some months ago Rossini received a visit from Meyerbeer, and the latter perceived in his illusarious friend's room a portrait of Mozart. He looked at it and then said: "it is not at all slike—it is not the right one—we have one at the Mogartmas in Saltzbourg that is the real one, but this is quite inferior:" Bossini looked grieved, and said be really was so. "I had rejoiced in that portrait," he observed, "and used often to look for a long while at the features, and cheat may saif into the portrait, "he observed, "and used often to look for a long while at the features, and cheat may saif into the portrait," he observed, when the property of the wild a promise to seed Rossini a low weeks ago be brought thought some the bis colleague it a politic.
