PRINTED DAILY, BY B. DELAUP,
St. Peter-Street, between Bourbon & Royal.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1828.

From the Ariel, Natchez, Saturday, August 23.

The Account Current.—In order, that so important a document, as the account current, between Gen. Jackson and A. Burr, published in the Ariel of last week, may go forth to the American people, in such form and manner, and with such evidence in support of its authenticity, as the circumstances which it exposes require, and the nature of the times seen to demand; the Editor of the Ariel requested the committee of which he is a member, to examine the account, and compare it with a letter of Gen. Jackson's, with a view to re-publication in the Ariel of to day, so certified as to the similarity the hand writing of the one, bears to that of the other, no subterfuge could be used, to render its authenticity doubtful.

Whatever may be the violence of party feelings, and the rancour of party strife, yet it will be admitted, by the most prejudiced of their political opponents, that the citizens whose names stand as guarantees for the genuineness of the account, are well known to the public here, and some of them in other sections of the Union, particularly in Louisiana, as citizens of the highest respectability, for intelligence, for moral worth, and for the essential interest they have in the state, and for the many ties which bind them to its fortunes. Whatever results may grow out of the present, and we may say malignant struggle of the two contending parties, whether the contest shall close, by giving to the nation a chief Magistrate, under whose auspices peaceful [illegible] may repose in security, or whether it shall eventuate in civil war, out of which shall arise a consolidated empire, and over which a military despotism shall be established, [illegible] whose names are responsible testimony of their faith, must meet the common fate, —"rise with their country, or with their country fall."

The account is now published as exactly from the original as could be done with types, making use of capitals where used in the original, and lower-case as in the word postage—spelling the same as for instance in the word sundrie.

Adams County, August 20th, 1828.

The undersigned having examined the following account between A. B. and A. J. and compared it with the original, found among the papers of the late Jonathan Thompson, do certify that it is a true and [illegible] copy, and is, they verily [illegible] Account Current between Andrew Jackson and [illegible], upon which the said Andrew Jackson was garnisheed in the suit of H. Blanner-hasset vs. Aaron Burr, as set forth in the transcript from the Records of the Superior Court of Adams County, Mississippi Territory, and published in the Ariel of the 26th July, 1828. Several of the undersigned who have had an opportunity of comparing the account with a letter written by Gen. Jackson to the Hon. Peter Brin Bruin, bearing date 27th December, 1799, do feel [illegible] to believe the account, and the letter were written by the same hand.

Border Difficulties.—It has been stated in some of the Provincial papers and currently circulated in others, that the British government were making arrangements to open a military road and station a body of troops upon the border of the disputed territory. Presuming on the truth of these facts, many have been apprehensive that those difficulties under a little more exaggeration, might terminate in a war between the two countries.—But we are informed by a source entitled to the greatest confidence, that nothing is further from the truth, than the intention to erect a military road to, or to station troops upon the borders of the disputed line. No British troops have been stationed higher up than Fredericton, nor is it contemplated that any shall be. The utmost friendliness of disposition exists in the authorities and subjects generally, of the provinces, for a speedy and pacific termination of the dispute.

FROM COLOMBIA.

Captain Whitaker, of the brig Hiram, arrived at New-York on Wednesday last from Porto-Bello, states, that when he left that place all was quiet, though mercantile affairs were far enough from a settled state. Money continued very scarce and produce high. Any [illegible] produce, in particular commanded a fair price, but long credit was required by purchasers. Bolivar was at Bogota, and it is therefore concluded that his party stands firm, though it was not known to what result the convention had come, or whether it came to any. The navy (if it deserves the name) was disbanded and laid up for the want of funds to refit and man it.

From the Phil. Democratic Press.

Horrid Outrage.—Yesterday morning about 8 o'clock, a respectable inhabitant of Southwark, was wounded by the discharge of a pistol. He and two more persons were watching the grave of a relative, whose death had been sudden. They were suspicious that the deceased would be disinterred. About the time fixed, they saw the flash and heard the report of a pistol. It proceeded from outside the grave yard of the new burial ground, belong to St. Mary's Church. It appears, a part of these robbers of the dead were inside, engaged in disinterring a young woman, who had been buried on Sunday last, in which undertaking they succeeded. The remainder were watching on the outside—and immediately on perceiving those who were watching the grave of their relative, they discharged several pistols which severely wounded the person engaged in watching his relative's grave.

I have just returned from the wounded persons house, who is a man of a large family. He is in great pain. The shot entered both his legs. Twenty grains of large shot have been taken out of the calf of one leg, and there remains, it is believed, about thirty grains, which, it is said, cannot be taken out. Some of the shot taken out, having come against the shin bone, were quite flat. I give the facts without remark. J. P.

There is not a stone to mark where lie the remains of Washington's mother. A writer in the Richmond Visitor, and Telegraph says "her grave is in a dreary, deserted, solitary field; the mound of earth that was originally raised over her sacred remains, is now rapidly wasting away."

It is proposed that a monument should be erected over the grave of Mrs. Washington, by the ladies of Virginia.—Savan. Republican.

We learn, with regret, that the wheat crop in the neighboring counties of N. Carolina, has in many cases, totally failed, and that there has been very little [illegible] pay stand for market.—Norfolk Her.

The ship Universe, arrived at Sydney, Cape Breton, 20th June, from Sligo, with [illegible] passengers. Two other vessels [illegible] Scotland, with passengers for the Bras d'or Lake, shortly after the Universe. Sickness and the crowded state of those in the latter, that six families were obliged to live in long boat during the whole passage.

Horrible Crime.—Extract of a letter from Madrid dated May 8th—The following horrible crime, committed [illegible] of the Royal residences, not more than three leagues from the capital, affords a singular idea of the police of this country, and would seem to prove that there is no security for life or property even in the habitation of the first personage in the country. On the 25th of January last, a number of individuals came, about nine o'clock in the evening, to the Royal Castle of San Fernando, and were admitted by the [illegible] named Sebastian Alzado. They [illegible] of the steward or Intendant, Don [illegible] Garrido, to allow them to dress a [illegible] of a young buck, which they had killed. [illegible] refused, but was persuaded on to consent by Sebastian Alzado, who told him that they were his friends. When the venison was served up Don Jose Garrido was invited to partake of it, and, being a man of a free and jovial disposition, he sat down to supper with the intruders. After some time Don Jose Carrido called for the bill of wine, and while he had it to his mouth, and was in the act of drinking one of the ruffians next to him stabbed him to the heart with a poniard. The others rushed upon two male servants and female, who were in the room, to secure them; but the woman persisting in struggling and crying out, they dragged her to the kitchen, tied a rope round her body, and put her up the kitchen chimney, where she expired in the midst of the flames. One of the male servants contrived to escape by jumping out of a window, and ran to inform the nearest Alcade; but when this magistrate arrived with an armed force the brigands had quitted the house, carrying away, with them every thing portable. Sebastian Alzado, the servant who had let them in, had also disappeared. A description of the man's person being made public, he was some time after arrested, and in his examinations avowed his being in league with this band of robbers and assassins, and gave their names and a description of their persons. However, up to this moment not one of them has been arrested. Sebastian Alzado has been condemned to death, but his execution is deferred until some at least of his accomplices shall be discovered.

A pretty girl was lately complaining to a friend that she had a cold, and was sadly plagued in her lips by chaps. "Friend," said Obadiah, "thee should never [illegible] chaps when near thy lips."

Goldsmith rather waggishly says, in his History of England that the people of England are more inclined to examine the commands of their superiors than to obey them he might have added, so was the Irishman, who fell from a ladder and alighted on the ground unhurt." A priest having observed Paddy's narrow escape, made him drop on his knees, and give God thanks. What for, said Paddy, "because I nearly broke my neck?"
