A New Orleans lawyer told the Times-Democrat this varn: "I had a Chinese client who went home on a visit, leaving his laundry in charge of his brother. When he returned he was promptly ordered off the premises. His brother had coolly appropriated the business and swore he would kill him unless he made himself scarce. The dispossessed gentleman called on me the next day, and, after hearing his story, I advised him to get out a warrant immediately, but he shook his head at the suggestion, and said in pigeon English that he wanted to have his life insured for $10,000. I was astonished. 'What on earth put that into your head?' I asked. 'So they makee alle time some watch,' he replied. After a great deal of cross-questioning I got at his scheme. He had in some manner conceived the idea that insurance companies did everything possible to prolong the lives of their policy holders, and it followed quite naturally that if they had $10,000 at stake they would take particular pains to see that he wasn't hurried into the hereafter by his wicked brother. In other words they would 'makee some watch,' and, being a frugal gentlman, it struck him as a cheap way of securing a body guard. He was greatly disapwhen I explained that the companies let their clients take their own chances, and it evidently impressed him as most unbusinesslike. He went away, and at last accounts the Peagle Was Keep a Lookout After Thuse Gone Before Are Kant Rosy.

New persons probably realize how much business is transacted in connection with those who have ceased to do business and have gone to their final read It would seem the proper thing that Nirvana should come with death, so far as business with the dead person is concerned. But it is not so, and never has been. Yet in these modern times of competition and the evolving of schemes to make money, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, death sets in motion machinery of business that awaits the visit of the pale rider to give it impetus. The records of the probate court are the source of information for the agents of various enterprises. The solicitors of bond companies, ready to become surety for executors, administrators, guardians and trustees, watch those records. Employes of legal advertismediums pour over them to get the names of attorneys, appointees of the court, and seek them to solicit the advertising that must be done under the law. But strangest of all to seek that source of information is the maker of grave stones. Yes, an agent is at work in that direction, and it is related that he gets considerable business. He makes note of the attorney and administrator, the names of the widow or bereaved husband or children, and in due time seeks them and solicits their trade. With his catalogue of his business he shows what can be furnished to perpetuate the memory of the loved one who has paid the debt of nature.

CINDERELLA GONGS.

A New Device for Warning the Young Men That They Are Expected to Go Rome at 10:30.

The Philadelphia matron is responsible for a new fad, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. This is the Cinderella gong. All persons who are calling at the house are supposed to say "Good night" when the Cinderella rings,

If a hostess is giving a party the gong is not rung until midnight, but every one is expected to leave when it sounds. It is not a gentle intimation; it is really a sweet-voiced demand.

Many a maiden has put a very pretty gong at the side of her fireplace in drawing-room or sitting-room, and when the clock points to 10:30 p. m. she playfully steps there and rings it. This Cinderella gong is very new, but it had its counterpart several years ago. The charming mother of a popular young woman arranged a little -clock in a wide velvet stand. The velvet and white and the black lettering showed out strong in its paraphrasing of the well-known lines from "The Mikado:"

From one little maid take the boys away, If a caller didn't notice the lettering when he first came in he would be pretty sure to do so when the alarm went off at ten o'clock.

Shop-Worn Socks. The National Advertiser tells a story of an old bachelor who bought a pair of socks and found attached to one of them a slip of paper with these words: "I am a young lady of 20 and would like to correspond with a bachelor, with a view to matrimony." Name and address were given. The bachelor wrote and in a few days got this letter: "Mamma was married 20 years ago. The merchant you bought these socks from evidently did not advertise or he would have sold them long ago. Mamma handed me your letter and said possibly I might suit you. I am 18 years

Man's Indebtedness to Insects. According to Grant Allen, in the Straud Magazine, beetles and other insects anticipated man in the burial of his dead and manuring of his fields by devouring and burying dead animals where they enrich the soil and promote the growth of vegetation. "There is." be says, "hardly a human trade or a human activity which does not find its counterpart in animal and vegetable

JOYS OF MARRIED LIFE.

One of the Greatest of Them is the Multiplicity of Social Obligations.

"My dear," said a newly-married young woman on the South side to her husband the other evening, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, "I have planned to have mother and father come to supper with us and spend tha evening to-morrow. Mary Johnston said to-day that she and her husband were going to call on us Thursday evening. Friday evening is the dance at the Kenwood club, and you know you promised to take me to see Sol Smith Russell Saturday night."

"But, my dear," protested her husband, "we have got to go over and see the old folks one night this week. And I told Billy Mathew that I would call him up to-morrow and tell him what night before Sunday we would be at home. And then you know I absolutely have to write that speech this week. And where do I get any time to read or rest?"

"Yes. I knew there was something else," put in his wife, disregarding his question. "There is a musicale at Mrs. White's Saturday evening. But we can't go to that, I suppose."

"My dear," declared her husband, solemnly, "it is all right to talk about 'doubling your joys and halving your sorrows' when you get married. It is a great deal more true to say you double your engagements and halve your time."

That Was Why a Chicago Street Car Passenger Did Not Assist

He climbed aboard the car slowly and with evident weakness, and dropped into the only vacant seat, not withstanding the fact that several women who had entered with him were left standing, and that one of them was so heavily loaded with bundles that she couldn't even make use of a strap. This woman planted herself directly in front of the weak-looking man and swayed to and fro grimly before him, glaring angrily down into his emaciated countenance the while. Presently the car lurched suddenly around a corner, and one of her bundles fell to the floor, with a great sound of breaking glass and china. The indignant woman gathered the fragments of her ruined household treasures with hasty, impulsive movements, and, straightening up, fairly sported at the man before her, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"You might at least have put out a hand to save it," she told him, contemptuously. The man colored, hesitated and then spoke quietly:

"I have no hand on that side, ma dam," he said, while all the other passengers listened with sympathetic interest; "I left it at San Juan."

BRIDGING BEHRING SEA.

Results of the Deposit of Immed Quantities of Debris by the Mighty Yukon River.

Prof. W. J. McGee, of Washington, declares that two slow but interesting changes are taking place in Behring sea. The immense quantity of debris that is borne down the Yukon from ita sources and sides is being deposited in the sea beyond the mouth of that mighty stream, and its weight causes The Western Union's Way of the bed of the sea to subside. A corresponding rise in the earth's crust is produced along the chain of the Aleutian islands. Now, not only are the islands themselves increasing in size in consequence of being lifted up out of the water, but new islands are being formed in the gaps between the others. In some instances the new islands are the result of the rise, and in others they are the result of volcanic action. Most of the Aleutians are of volcanio origin, and they mark the position of a fold in the earth's crust that is predisposed to eruption. In time, Prof. McGee says, there is likely to be a natural bridge from America to Asia along this route, but he admits that nobody now living is going to see it.

The South Pole: L'Eclair, of Paris, recently published an elaborate article, "tres documente." signed Dagoubert, and concerning itself with the discovery of the south pole. According to Dagoubert the region about the pole is inhabited and organized as a kingdom, having the name "L'Etat d'Adelie." It is said to contain 100,000 inhabitants, of whom 600,000 are French and 40,000 Papuans. A traveler who, Dagoubert says, happened to reach this country of the south pole has lately arrived in Paris. He is about to apply to the ministry and proposes protectorate of the country and a subsidy for it of 40,000,000 francs a year. There is said to be much gold in the country, which is jealously guarded by the inhabitants. Some notice is being paid M. Dagoubert, by scientific men. and he is likely, it is said, to attract as much attention in Paris as Louis de Rougement and his Austrilian tales did-

The Sun's Size. In view of this enormous distance it will be easily surmised that the little disc seen with the smoked glass is of colossal dimensions. In bald figures its diameter is 866,500 miles, but this is meaningless without some helpful simile. It is easier to comprehend the moon's distance from the earth, say 240,000 miles; let us suppose our planet placed at the very center of the sum (first "hollowed out" for the express purpose), and the moon revolving about it in its everyday orbit-not only untrammeled by the "shell" of the sun, but actually leaving room enough for the revolution of another moon in an orbit more than 190,000 miles further away, without fracturing the shell! In other words, the sun is 1,300,000 times

CAME OFF HIS PERCH

Recater Dodged Missiles, But a Woman with a Broom Brought Him Down.

A rooster belonging to a College street man got out the other evening and flew about the yard, dexterously eluding every attempt to catch him till the owner gave it up, and left him to his fate. Next morning the rooster. was perched high in a tree, apparently stiff and stark. The owner was conscience-stricken. "I ought to have gone out after dark and got him. He froze to death last night and I am to blame. I have got to get a pole and knock him out of that tree. I shall be arrested for cruelty," he said to his wife. So he went out, armed with a couple of sticks of wood, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

These he threw at the frozen rooster for an hour without success, and a good-sized crowd of neighbors stood about, suggesting ways to get the bird down. One went and got a revolver and shot away at it for some time, but the bird still sat there, immovable, its head canted a little, and its eyes looking bleary. "You infernal copper! Do you expect to knock a frozen bird out of a tree with a revolver? The bullets would go right through it, and not budge it."

After half an hour of these vain attempts the wife of one of the neighbors came out with a long-handled broom, and, waving it, said "Sh-sh-shsh-sh." Up flew the rooster, crowing loudly, and lit upon the ell of the house, and finally, after a victorious crow, settled down into the barn door, and ran in among the hens.

TOWN THAT CURES BALDNESS.

Those Who Go Away and Loss That Hair Beturn and Get It Back.

"If I had money," said a Norristown man, according to the Philadelphia Record, "I'd exploit the little village of Waretown, on Barnegat bay. Waretown is not wonderful on account of its excellent fishing and gunning, but on account of its power of curing baldness. Call me, if you will, a liar, but the fact remains that not a bald-headed man is to be found within five miles of Waretown, and any bald stranger who goes there to live and just gets out bareheaded as often as possible, on the bay and in the black grass meadows, begins to thatch up right away, and in a year has a crop that isn't a thing but smooth! When I was down last, in '95, I met a man named Henry Camburn-you know they're all Camburns pretty much down there. Well, Henry, though an old man, had a head of thick, soft brown hair like a boy's, and he said it was his third crop. "Twice had he lived away from Waretown and got bald, but he came back each time, and so did his hair. I believe that the pure, strong winds, that smell of pines and the sea cause this thing, and if I had money I would get together a colony of bald-heads, take them down to Waretown, keep them out all day, and every day fishing in the summer, ducking in the winter, without any hats, and in a year I would discharge them cured. I could easily charge them $1,000 a head. Amy man, if he had it, would pay that."

The requirement that the applicant shall appear in person each time is an ingenious means of weeding out those pplicants that lack the perseverance. which, other things being equal, is likely to make a girl more useful to the company than a girl with less of that
