The Chinese Wikimedia Conference Experience

The Chinese Wikimedia Conference clients wish to have a unique experience, one that merges concrete factors such as a technology with other more intangible aspects such as a friendly atmosphere and cultural expanses. It is these elements combined that distinguish the Conference, and subsequently the Chinese Wikimedia Conference experience, from other events.

The following key principles underpin the Chinese Wikimedia Conference Experience vision and philosophy:

- It is necessary for every party contributing to the Conference's bid and organization to share common vision, mission and values.
- All elements of the Chinese Wikimedia Conference, from venues to city activities, must be developed in a coherent and integrated manner, with a consistent management and delivery approach among all parties: the Wikimedia, the clients and the organizers. The organizers must have integrated management mechanisms linking the all the parties.
- It is essential for organizers to adopt a client-driven culture; it is this culture that enables differentiation between technically successful Conference and an all-encompassing successful Conference experience.

The central focus is a Wikimedia product, a combination of city atmosphere and activities, meetings, seminars, culture, ceremonies. This is represented in the inner circle.

The organization and management circle includes the shared vision and objectives, the services, facilities and operation delivered by the exists over the lifecycle of the Conference organization.
