By the ship news from the brig Henry Eckford, just arrived from Barbadues, wa learn that the Antoinette, Captain Hoob, from an emetern Port, was totally lost in the late gale. Several vessels had muched at Antigua, but finding no market, had sailed to leeward While the brig Gen. Pulaski, Chase, of Baltimo ge, was lying at Barbaboes, o the 4th, Septem-der, two of her crew came on board of the Hen ry Eckford, and began so grind and sharpen their knives. Captain Weaver asked them their reason for doing so. They told him they were going to do a day's work. I'bey then went on hoard of their brig, and told Captain Chase he had but a short time to live. A boy elinched him, and the two men assailed him with their knives, and cut him on the face and on the arm, before the people could come to his a sistance. He was rescued, and the men and boy were secured and taken before a British magistrate and examined The American Congul had the boy flogged and sent the two men to this port in the Henry Eck ford, fir trial. Captain Weaver was chartered by the authorithies of Antigna to take a part of re, he was very cordially received, and the port charges were remitted. The men are now the office of the district attorney, undergoing an examination.

Ought France to recommence that gigantic campaign in which the fortunes of Napoleon came a wreck? Has this war which we are railed upon to wage been well reflected upon ! It is a war which will lead us across the windle brendth of the Continent-it is a universal war, S. A. Whittemore, of Leicester, (Mass.) the object of so much delirious ambition, of so many chimerical passions. Can it be proved that this heroic crusade, would save Poland? No, Gentlemen for if once France deviates from her neutrality—that neutrality which has itherto been observed by other Powers will be abandoned, and their armies are only four days march from the capital we wish to defend, while it is 400 leagues from us. (Hear, hear.) In face of these facts, who will venture to call for a war which cannot save Poland, but must be the cause of her downfall, - Hear, hear, from almost every part of the Assembly.]-Our explanations with regard to Belgium shall be no les distinct. How many times have we not had to apprehend, from the question of rayalty in Belgium, a cause for a general rapture through out Europe ! We came into administratio the time when the refusal of the crown for the Duke de Nemours and the exclusion of the Duke do Leuchtenbourg, limited so marrowly the choice of a sovereign destined to give existence and unity to this nascent kingdom. The elecpersonal character of the Prince they chose rendered it desirable.—France received it with anisfaction, for she never feels mistrust without evident cause. ... Besides, previous to her acknowledgment of King Leopold, France stips lated for all the conditions sequired for her safety and honor. The demolition of the furtrem will effice the last vestiges of the events of 1815. The independence and neutrality of the new singulars were equally guaranteed; and both, in case of need, shall be defended. Of this the late measures of the French Cabinet are proofs A French army has received orders to enter Belgium, to repel the unexpected aggression of Holland. This expedition, which was decided upon immediately on the arrival of the first disatch from the King of the Belgians, and was the result of the full understanding between all the Great Powers of Europe, proves that France s powerful, that her armies are ready for action, and that her young soldiers, as well as her vete un generals, are worthy of inheriting that glory which his deposited in their hands. It proves that France is the faithful ally, the natural support of Belgium, and that she knows how to proiecs what she has raised, that treaties are more than vain words, and that the Pewers of Europe who have been painted as plotting war against her, are faithful to their engagements, and resect our independence and power.
