Bo year interegations, Gentlemen, I answages the state evasion.

I do approve of the entire scope of the administ ration of General Jackson and wish to see all the imp or tent measures of it carried out by his enecessor. I know of no man in the nation so likely to do it as Mr. Van Baren.

I am still and ever will be the encompremising e nemay of the U States bank, and if the people of my distinct should again return me to the senats I will not only oppose the location of a branch in the state, but I will carry on a war against tith every shape. I know should gain return much industry to secure our state banking establishments, and I never will bring jato, the state, but I will carry on a war against tith every shape. I know should be power that can destroy them, or impair their usefulness. The article may not have presented itself to your eves, gentlemen, but I have observed one amost the receipt of your letter in a leading morn any paper which save that the "agency of the Ponney, wans I States bank in this city has discounted as any 3,000,000 since the charter of that bank." I have now, gentlemen, answered all your enquiries with the fraukness which belongs to my character—but there is a subject on which I have not been interest that the rest season of the legislature we will have to short a United States Sensor. One of you (Col Halle) will recollect the intrigues that were practiced at the last seasion of the legislature in electing a senator. Men without pretensions preferred their claims; others who were good democrats from the teeth out, were rotten at the cora. Should my fellow citizens reason me to the secure, it will be my dutylto self my face against such hollow pretensions. There are some men who say they are friends to Mr Van Buren but will vote for White because they cannot stomstch Col Johnson on account of his offspring, and yet to my knewledge some of these very pretenders, practiced the vices they charge Col Johnson, without prefisesing east of his many virtues. VENICE.

I left Passis this morning for the floring city—ou. route lay along the canal which runs from the given Bresis at Passa and falls into the Adriatic south of Porosina. Nothing can surpase the laxurious elegance and classic tase of the palaces, villas, churches, convente and boautiful and extensive gardens, which embellish and ornerment this designiful drive. The Pallazzo Reals the sumer residence of the Viceroy of Venice, about 8 miles from Fadus, built according to the designs of the celebrated Palladio, is a superb said elegant structure; and its surrounding gardens, parts, promenades and parterres of flowers, together with the snowy white marble statues which meet the eye in every direction, compiler to render it one of the most deligatful and enchanning residences in northern Italy—a line view of the Rhettin Airs on the storth, Sint of the Euganean hills on the south side o: our road, with the adriatic in front, on whose sweet and psecul home the floring city reposed, made the latter part of loar drive particularly interesting. Venice, or the size, has not unaptly been called the Queen of the Advistic o, seen from the continent looks as if partially submerge d in the swa; and recals to mind the words of Byress.

—La Pinxxa di San Marco (place St. Mark) may indeed be called anique: there the east and the west per each other face to face. On one side the ducal pa' act with its dentellated architecture, its balconies, gt. lite tipes and arabic monuments, whose front and dot not seemed with lead, bear a striking resemblance to a manque of Constantisople or Grand Chirc; on other regular ar ad-a sand edgant boutiques, somewhold the other regular ar ad-a sand edgant boutiques, somewhold and ornamented with the most sumptions decoration. Here reclining on cushions of crimon velvel, at a sale-poet, and sending forth huge clouds of smoke from their long pipes of rosewood and amber: there travers ing the equare in every direction are parties of English Prench and Americans, whose propose constanting describes the pleasure which they have experienced it the light gondols, or brighten with the anticipation of a recursion on the Lido.

The church of St. Mark begun in the year 907 and faished in 1071, contains the relicks of the evangelit where the pleasure which they have experienced it is the same it bears, they having been transferred to disa spot from Alexandria. The descriptions of the measure of the venetian school show whith the control of commerce and the decay of accience to plainly tell of her rebuigation to a forsign typic; and seem to render prophetic the words of the English bard.

Wassesston, May 29th, 1836.

The House exhibited another acone of disorder and confusion yesterday, that was accreely inferior to thee size of the day before, of which I have spoken. It is painful to winness it, breause it is disgraceful to the character of the nation. Nor can I for my life, see the occasion of so much, excitement. The proproposition which has prodiped the warrath and fury that have been manifested, as a plain and simple one; and yet it does not see, as to please either party. It is that Congress origin not to interfere with sharper in this district. That would appear to be simple and unexisting annuals to aware one; but that is the point implants. in a southern gentlemen assert that it is constitutional to interfere with a latt and the northern gentlemen assert that it is constitutional to interfere with slavery in this district; or rather—conteary to the constitution to passe a resolution declaring that Congress has no right to interfere with it here. And thus some as both adea reluse to tous when called upon to do so; and the confusion and disorder of the House are mainly produced by this conflicting view of the questions, and from the heat which it engenders. I apprehend that it will not terminate with the action of the House upon this subject. Another will come up ere long that will be pertuporable to the recognition of the independence of Texas.

This will be pressed this sedion or the next, and however friendly the northern gases may be to the formation of republics, they will oppose the recognition of the independence of Texas.

This will be pressed the sedion or the next, and however friendly the northern gases may be to the formation of republics, they will oppose the recognition of the independence. When that shall be occomplished, the act, and the northern gentlement of the content will oppose it from policy. To the former this new territory will serve as a seretaction against the Mexican and Indiana, and give a propondersage to the slaveholding states in Congress, which the stort, for the very roses, which they are any thorter the northern people bink would and nothing to the hoppinases or prosperity of the nation; and it is believed here by men of reflection, that it may finally, and at no distant day, lead to A separation or disconting the country.

General Scott seems to he very much dissentified with the Floridian war, the speedy termination of the leading of patrioties volunesered his services in the defence of Florida.
