SALES OF COTTON YESTERDAY.
Bales Mississippi 11

REMARKS.

We find business in every branch in an extremely depressed state; there are purchasers in market, but the total state of affairs may in a great measure be attributed to the want of confidence at present existing. That may always be looked for when there is a pause, such appeared to be the case at present, more from any real cause, to that extent which many imagine. There must inevitably be a large business done in some way. It cannot be so advantageous as was expected, and sales only be confined to parcels; but the business still probably continue throughout the summer than usual. We do not think that our whole commercial community is to be destroyed on account of the failure of a few houses.

There no doubt scarcely liquid money, but unfortunately for them. They had no calculation of their misfortunes to, like the Josephs, whose time was like an earthquake to the great city of Lisbon. The innocent perish, whose effects were supposed not off against eight to nine millions liquid. That probably in depressed times New York was, and it is represented that they were engaged in exchanges, as money transactions, not only about the United States, but likewise with various of Europe. Money continues extremely high, and probably never was higher. The discount but little. The no doubt is occasioned, more necessity than a disposition on their parts to afford accommodations.

The rates of exchange are nominal: we hear of no sales. Those who have money can invest it advantageously in good notes at from 2 to 3 per cent month.

The weather during the week has been pleasant, favorable for the transaction of business. Prices of various descriptions is arriving freely, a large portion of which is shipped by vessels now in port; there are but few sales effected, and those in retail amount.

Three-day commercial advices were received this day to the 17th, and from Liverpool to the 13th inst.

The market at both places continue at a stand dull at the declining rates. Every succeeding arrival for some time past brings advices of rates; what adds likewise to unfavorable appearances, that the stock is accumulating in both

MOBILE, March 20.

Cotton—Throughout the week our market has been in an almost unanimous state. Orders have been withdrawn every generally received from the north, and few purchasers thereby who can, are inclined to operate at this moment; and those, only, to a very moderate extent. The sales of every description have been made at much lower prices than the quotations of our last and at such various rates, that it is impossible to say either what has been the actual decline in prices, or at what extent should now be quoted.

Considerable has been shipped on planters account and more would be, but our market presents great difficulties in obtaining advances. Few are prepared to advance while no nominal facilities are so much embarrassed, and few are willing to advance while the foreign markets are so rapidly declining.

As we should not do justice to either buyer or seller by giving quotations this week we are compelled to omit them. The exports this week are 4918 bales; the sales as reported to us are 4110 bales as follows—100 at 14; 39 at 13 3/4; 48 at 13; 48 at 12; 86 at 11; 210 at 13, 21 at 12; 55 at 12; 58 at 11; 35 at 12; 100 at 11 25 at 13; 5 at 13, 5 at 10; 13 at 14; 39 at 13; 45 at 12; 50 at 11; 10 at 13; 15 at 12; 15 at 10; 15, 45 at 12; 6 at 13; 17 at 14; 11 at 13; 6 at 14; 52 at 13; 23 at 13; 16 at 14; 51 at 14; 91 at 13; 14 at 14; 93 at 13; 21 at 13; 10 at 14; 13; 21 at 13; 53 at 13; 31 at 13; 3 at 10; 13 at 14; 26 at 13; 29 at 13, 5 at 14; 100 at 10, 450 at 11; 157 at 11; 44 at 15; 69 at 10; 26 at 13; 93 at 14; 37 at 15; 94 at 14, 62 at 14; 28 at 13; 58 at 14; 19 at 15, 9 at 10; 119 at 13.

The imports since our last amount to 7849 bales and the exports to 4313—leaving a stock on hand and on shipboard not cleared of 54951 bales.

Rice—Nominal at 4 cents.

Coffee—Plenty and transactions in small lots of 23 to 50 bags at 11[illegible] a 12 3/4c.

Flour—In the early part of the week flour was held at 10.50. It has since experienced a slight decline, and is now offered at 10.

Pork—The imports of 245 bales. The article is scarce and on fair demand—Mess a 24c, Prime at 18 cents.

Whisky—Is now plenty, sold rather dull at 34c.

The imports for some week have been large and so continue in consequence of the scarcity and high price in the early part of the season.

Sugar—Small sales of 6,3 4 a 7c cash, as the times will not warrant commission merchant to sell on time any longer and have never heard the price of sugar, and the probable amount now in first hand to about 550 hhds. Molasses is scarce and much sought after, now in first hands about 200 bbls are sold last week 40[illegible] cash. This grocers price is 46 to 50 cents from store.

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1837.

☞ The subscribers to the dinner to be given to Captain L. ROUSSEAU, of the United States Navy are informed that it will take place on Tuesday next, 4th instant, in the hall of the Perfect Union Lodge. The dinner will be on the table at three o'clock precisely.

☞ We deem it alone necessary to remind the public that OLD GRAY takes his annual benefit this evening at the Camp street Theatre.

Another Steam Boat burnt.

The steamer Iowa, captain GREEN, descending the river, caught fire in the afternoon of the 30th March when abreast of the plantation of Mr. A. B. Roman, 60 miles above this city. She had on board at the time 2200 bales of cotton, consigned to various persons, all of which was destroyed. The clerk, barker per, chambermaid, two negro boys and some passengers were lost. The captain, with great courage and presence of mind, saved his wife and youngest child by swimming with them ashore. one of the other children was saved by a passenger, and the third by the steward.—The boat was run ashore, bow on, and, we learn, was burnt to the water's edge.

The difficulty of raising money seems to be now pressing in the State of Mississippi, even than in New York. A writer in the Mississippian, a paper published at Jackson, the seat of government, declared that twenty three millions are to be recovered in the three counties of Hinds, Madison and Yazoo, and proportionally in the other counties of the State, by the approaching terms of their respective courts." The writer continues—"if the present unparalleled dearth of money continue, whence and by what means is such an amount to be drawn? There can be but one answer: it can be raised, if raised at all, only by a sacrifice of property, sacred of in the shape of calamity. We have no means of ascertaining the probable amount of money in these counties: but we all know it to be a sum vastly disproportioned to the intrinsic value of the property which must be brought under the hammer of the sheriff. Who then then are to be the purchasers?—There may be a few men, who, too timid for enterprize, and too heartless to have friends, have contracted no engagements for themselves or others; and these men may avail themselves of the chance, coming forth their hoard treasure, and buy up for a trifle, the property for which their enterprising neighbors had struggled through long years" &c. &c.

Here we see the winding up of those extravagant and enormous speculations in lands which have been proceeding undisturbed during the last three years.—Three millions of dollars to be recovered from the population of three counties where scarcely any other occupation than agriculture is pursued, at one session of the court, is an almost incredible sum, and argues a most wilful absence of prudence in the inhabitants. These three counties, too, though they comprehend some of the richest lands in the State—lands equal in fertility to those at any country on the globe, are comparatively new settlements and thinly inhabited. but they contain a large portion of public land which has been sold out during a few years past—which land was at a great part of it bought on speculation, and has probably changed owners several times, the price being enhanced at every new sale. The first, second, perhaps the third purchasers doubtless realized immense profits by the operation—but the present holders—those who paid the highest price, many of whom purchased with a view to settle them and make them the residence of themselves and families—these are the innocent victims upon whom will fall the calamity of blasted hopes and broken fortune.

Those are the men whose fate is worthy of commiseration. The traders in lands have with by secret understanding among themselves, private combinations and other tricks (and there are as many tricks in the trade of land-selling as in any other) enhanced the price far above the intrinsic value—these are the men chiefly who bring the sun to expel the honest and industrious planter from his home, and who will, in many instances, re-purchase the property with all the improvements and embellishments which have been added to it for less than they sold it. And here we have another and most melancholy instance of the disasters which may be brought upon a community by exorbitant hauses of bank paper. It was the flood of paper money with which the whole country was covered, which augmented the price of lands, as of every other saleable article, far above its real value—it was the same time the unrestrited issues bestowed by the banks upon these designing speculators, which enabled them to buy whole townships at one knock of the hammer.

Now, then, we ask, had the Treasury Circular, which requires all public lands to be paid for in specie, with certain exceptions favorable to the actual settler,—if that circular had been issued and enforced four years ago, would not the condition of those unfortunate planters in Hinds, Madison and Yazoo counties, be comparatively happy? We ask every considerate man, let smitter what his political opinions may be, whether that circular if it had been issued four years ago, would not in a great measure have averted the calamities with which many of the planters in Mississippi are threatened? And in thus averting these calamities, would it not have proved a blessing to the people? If General Jackson is culpable for his conduct in relation to this much abused circular, it is only because he did not issue it four years ago.

The pecuniary embarrassments of the people of Mississippi must be awfully searching, if we may form a judgment from the language of the writer to whom we have alluded. At the conclusion of his article he says—"Extensive liabilities exist; now increased, to be met by payment, or by the most disastrous sacrifice of property before the approaching terms of the courts. The payments cannot be made—the sacrifice than must be consummated, and when it is, the heart sickens at the prospect; a scene of ruin and distress will be witnessed, such as eye hath not seen nor ear heard," &c, &c. And again he says—"If no relief be interposed, Mississippi will stand a monument of devastation—a devastation the most causeless, the most undeserved, and the most appalling, that ever blasted the hopes of man."

This is indeed a frightful picture, and we suspect somewhat overcharged. And yet we are far from concurring in the writer's opinion of the remedy to be applied to the present evil as I to prevent its recurrence. A temporary suspension of legal process or a resolution by law, or a law preventing the disastrous sacrifice of property by peck hising its sale under two thirds or three fourths of its appraised value," are the measures which he suggests to relieve the people from the calamities which threaten them. But any one of these would aggravate the evil and by delaying the restoration of confidence and the usual routine of business, would retard for an indefinite length of time the

LOUISVILLE, March 21

GENERAL JACKSON.

This venerable patriot arrived in this city yesterday, on his way to Nashville, in Tennessee. At 10 o'clock on Sunday morning an immense concourse of his fellow citizens assembled at the wharf to welcome him to the city; but they were disappointed. The Ex President did not arrive. It was thus supposed he might be expected at 10 o'clock yesterday morning were again disappointed. He arrived at 7 o'clock, A. M. or about two hours and a half before he was expected. He was however, handsomely received. A national salute was fired from a field piece, and was repeated on landing by about 1500 of his fellow citizens. From the wharf he was conducted by a committee to the Louisville Hotel, where apartments were provided for him, and where he was visited by about 5000 persons; and no where with pleasure that many of them were heretofore his political opponents; men who struggled zealously against him when in power, but who felt, when they saw him, above the influence of party, and resolved to join in honoring him for his vast services, and unbounded devotion to his country and his country's honor.

At the Hotel, a deputation of thirty friends dined with General Jackson, and the gentleman and ladies travelling with him—Mr. Speaker Polk and Lady, Alexander, jr. and Lady, Dr. Lawson and Col. Earl; and at 5 o'clock the General, repeated, was met by nearly a thousand persons, who fell-wed to the wharf to see him, perhaps for the last time, and to renew at their pleasure.
