The following original love-letter was sent by Edward Wilson, a country schoolmaster in the Orkney Islands, to Miss Shillilli Trail, a native of the same country. "Dearest Shillilli I love thee with an extravagant love; and the much of my affection waters with the love of thee. Dearest Shillilli. I am thy slave and thy slave's slave, and the slave of a sea that lies under thy pillow. O that I were but metamorphosed into an ass's tail that might carry thy lovely body up and down the world."

Out of.—A writer in the N. Haven Chronicle says the words out of, are the worst in the language, when one is out of patience and out of money. He says his wife tells him, she is out of sugar one day; out of coffee the next; out of tea the next; out of flour the next; and finally out of spirits. The words, we think, are very good words, and decidedly the best in the language...

A new thing.—A clergyman in Wells, Me. has published what he calls a new thing. He attended a wedding in that town a few days since, and found to his surprise and satisfaction that a number of guests, heretofore considered indispensable, had not been invited. Madame Charcot even was not there with her rosy face, although she can trace her pedigree as far back as the days of Noah. He adds, "may the time soon come when people can be born, married, die, and even decently interred without the help of rum, or any of its allies."
