I is said that the consummate wretch Mina, on receiving his death-warrant from the chief state magistrate, remarked jocovely, that "the governor wrote a good hand." "Re will probably assertain, eredong, that the hangman ties a good knot, when he shall proceed to drop a disagreeable subject."

The opinion of the London Globe, in regard to the probabilities of a war upon the continent, will be found among our extracts of to-day. The London papers generally esem to treat the warlike views of the Paris Constitutional with obstinate incredulity.

The national house of representatives has plunged into the discussion of the tariff question. There seems to be little probability of reconciling the various contradictory opinions that obtain on this subject. The advocates of a high to the increase of importations into the United States, LORDON, April 26. Suppose we try to amend it-We have been untell amuse! by the contents of the Frênch papers of Tuesday and the date of yesterday, and more especially with a most inquart hash, on the and more especially with a most inquant hash, on the part of the Constitutionnel, of all sorts of warlike reports; for the precise truth of which, however, it will that to every one.

not pledge itself. The modest scribel our extremes will always abstract the exect verscity of their similar salies. According to this splendid repast for the Parisian gale mouches, all the leading powers are in the concocion of a grand plot against France. The Austrians are muslering to the extreme of military armament. "At Vienus," says the Constitutionnel, "every thing breaths war"—a fact we are shrewdly informed, "is concealed from the French embassy" which in course is composed of individuals who, in the language of scripture, have syes which see not, and earn which hear not—the character of French diplomacy to

The emperor of Russia, on the contrary, has sworn by his musta hios to stand by Henry V., who is not to be regented by his mother, poor youth! but by Measrs, de Blacas, de Damas, de Villele, de Latour Maubourg, de Montbel, de Peyronner, &c., de, "England, it appears is considered by prince Metternich, to be out of all question of European order," although the "management which Austria owes her, requires delay." How pleasantly romantic some of the Gallic reducteurs are! The trouble of invading France is to devoice on Russia and Frussia, and the king of Holland is to open the ball by an a tempt on Belgium. As respects France itself, marshal Bourmont and the duke of Belluno are to head the royal ats; and prince Talleyrand, with his usual guarded acumen, has been heard to declars that chance will decide the success of the whole affair. O. P. Q. of the London Morning Chronicle in a fi rorite with us. In his letter of the 22d of April, he thus describes the close of the session of the French chamber of deputies:

"The session has closed-no speech from the Throne no alliance of heart and soul between king and peo-ale—no hearty cries of Vive le Roi, or Vive la Liberto -no murgel and affectionate salutations of king, peers, and deputies - no smile of satisfaction at the result of the parliamentary labors of the session-no confidence reposed by the king in the deputice, or hy the deputies in the king. But a dry format legal ordinance was read from the tribune of the deputies, by Barthe, the minister of justice, which closed this memorable ses sion; and then Girod de l'Ain, in the name of the law, required the deputies to disperse. Out of 459 depu ties, 159 were present, [among them was Fafayene] out of the 159 present, about 18 took off their hats and cried "Vive le Roi!"
