CITY COUNCIL.

Conclusion of the sitting of April 19, 1828.
The Mayor transmitted to the Council the order of Judge Lewis, concerning the election of Mr. Harper as Alderman of the 8th district. The Council was threatened with a peremptory mandamus, if they did not admit Mr. Harper as a member of their body.
Mr. Gordon moved that Mr. Harper should be admitted.
Mr. Rodriguez was of a contrary opinion, and offered a resolution in which the Council declared that they do not recognize the authority of the district court concerning elections.

The admission of Mr. Harper was put to the vote and was lost, the names being called, Messrs. Canonge, Lemoine, Rodriguez, Cucullu and Flaytan were in the negative, and Messrs. Gordon, Preston, White, and Leverty, in the affirmative.
The Council afterwards discussed the resolution of Mr. Rodriguez. Mr. Canonge offered an amendment by which the Council will maintain that when a law gives a corporation the right to decide on the election of its members, that no court of justice has the right to interfere in said election.
Mr. Rodriguez insisted that the declaration of the Council be a direct answer to the district court which has made an attack on their privileges.

Mr. Canonge supported his amendment and declared that he was ready to be conducted to prison rather than yield to the abuse of an authority inimical at once to the honour, the privileges, and the independence of the Council.
Mr. Preston supposed the resolution would be premature. That Judge Lewis had not yet given a decisive opinion on the question in dispute.
He proposed that Mr. Moreau Lislet, attorney for the council should be sent to Judge Lewis, and show to him the article of the Civil Code concerning the privileges of corporations, that said article is decisive and in all probability the Judge would be convinced.
Notwithstanding the opposition of Mr. Rodriguez, the motion of Mr. Preston was adopted.

The London Observer says, "Our Sovereign has, within this twelve month, been made to feel most bitterly, that there is little or no public opinion to which he can appeal, and that the Aristocracy can compel him to employ any servant, and to pursue any policy they choose to dictate. In France, an able Minister is ignominiously driven from power by the whole nation, on account of his liberal principles—In England an Administration is dissolved on the ground of its liberal policy. In France the King cannot form a Cabinet without making it more liberal than the preceding; in England, the King finds he cannot form a Cabinet without an almost total exclusion of liberal men. In France, under an almost absolute Government, the new Cabinet is comprised of plebeians who have raised themselves by their talents; in England under a free Government, the Cabinet does not contain a single Minister, except Mr. Huskisson, whose talents have exclusively raised him from poverty to eminence; of course we except the law; the servile drudgery of its study always implies that its chief officers must be selected from the industrious and taken poor."

PARISIAN WONDERS.

Extract of a letter dated Paris, Feb. 8
"The people of this country are at present agitated by two points of peculiar and strong interest. The first is an impeachment of the legitimacy of the Duke of Orleans, and a claim to his possessions and dignities by an English Countess. The allegations of the lady, who is said to have been born in Italy, are, that the former Duke and Duchess of Orleans, the supposed parents of the present Duke, were travelling incognito in that country, and were resting at Verona, when her own and the birth of the present Duke took place; that for certain family reasons, it was important that the heir of Orleans should prove a son, but that it was a daughter—namely, herself; and that a male child of an artisan of Verona being born simultaneously, they were secretly exchanged, by which the young Veronese plebeian was made a French Prince, and the French Princess turned into a young child of Verona. Subsequent events acquainted her with the fact in question, and after collecting all the evidence she has been able to discover, she has come forward to demand her rights. The affair is so strange, and the means of proof are so difficult, that I doubt whether she will prevail.
The second occurrence referred to, is a wonderful phenomenon exhibited in the person of a little girl, thirty-two months old. It is said that the whites of each eye exhibit, in distinct letters, which grow in size as she advances in age, the words "NAPOLEON BARBAREUR," in capitals. The word Napoleon is above, and the word Empereur below the sight of the eye, which is a lively blue. She has been visited by the most eminent anatomists, who are unable to detect any deception in the appearance. The fact seems to be strongly attested, and is, of course, wholly unaccounted for. The people seem to look upon it as a sort of miracle; while the more reflecting regard it as one of those sports of nature, which are so fantastic and at times so amazing.

Battle of Navarino.—The London Literary Gazette reminds us that a curious coincidence occurs as to the scene of this battle. In the story of the captive in Don Quixotte, Cervantes is supposed to relate many parts of his own history. After describing the battle of Lepanto, at which he lost an arm and was made prisoner, the reader of the present day is surprised to find the story proceed with the following passage—
"The second year of my captivity I was a slave in the Capitana galley, at Navarino; and I took notice of the Christians' fault in letting slip the opportunity they had of taking the whole Turkish fleet in that port; and all the Janizaries and Algerine pirates did so expect to be attacked, that they made all in readiness to escape on shore without fighting—so that great was the terror they had of our fleet; but it pleased God to order it otherwise; not by any fault of the Christian General, but for the sins of Christendom; and because it is his will we should always have some enemies to chastise us."
Don Quixotte, vol. ii.

GEOLOGY.—Footsteps before the Flood.
A very curious paper, by Mr. Gricerson, was read before the general meeting of the Literary and Antiquarian Society of Perth on the 22d of November last; the subject of which was some footsteps of quadrupeds discovered in a red sandstone, quarry, about two miles to the north of the town of Lochmaben, in the county of Dumfries. Professor Buckland, having received casts of some of the most distinct impressions together with a fragment of the sandstone itself, expressed his full conviction (although the fact was at variance with his general opinions respecting the geological formation,) that the rock, while in a soft state, had been traversed by living quadrupeds. The dip of the strata in the quarry is towards the west, and at an angle of about 35 degrees. On the eastern side, therefore, it is the upper surface on the strata that presents itself, and of this there is a great lateral extent. The upper edge of the strata, the face of which is there exposed, reaches within about fifteen feet of the surface of the ground. From this upper boundary down to the line where they disappear under the rubbish, which (since the working has been carried on chiefly on the opposite side of the quarry) has accumulated at their base; there are fully fifteen feet of their surface distinctly exhibited, and that for a range of not less than between forty and fifty yards. On the range of this acclivity, no less than four separate tracks were found of as many different kinds of animals. Three of these tracks were towards the south extremity of the range on the surface of the same identical layer, and two of them within two or three yards of each other. The fourth one was towards the north extremity and probably on the same layer as the others; but owing to a quantity of earth which had rolled down, this was not fully ascertained. The simple inspection of the tracks, however, made it impossible to doubt in what manner they had been produced. The great number of the impressions in uninterrupted continuity, the regular alterations of the right and left footsteps, their equi distance from each other, the outward direction of the toes, the grazing of the foot along the surface before it was firmly planted, the deeper impression made by the toe than by the heel, and, in one instance, the sharp and well defined marks of the three claws of the animal's foot,—are circumstances which immediately arrest the attention of the observer, and force him to acknowledge, that they admit of only one explanation. The impressions of one of these tracks, Dr. Burckland thinks have been produced by the feet of a tortoise or crocodile. It will be obvious from the preceding description of the stratum containing these animal impressions, that though now lying bare and superficial as at the time when the impressions were made, it is really the one on which all the other strata of the quarry had been superimposed. One of the deepest and most distinct impressions was found at the base of the stratum in the lower part of the quarry, perhaps sixty or seventy feet beneath the surface of the earth. In what manner the facts and phenomena described may affect some interesting questions in geology, Mr. Gricerson says he shall not presume to enquire; "but," adds that gentleman, "I think I may be permitted to remark in conclusion, that we have now specimens of the new red sandstone, containing impressions of quadrupeds,—impressions, which, to say the least, may be denominated, Footsteps before the Flood."

Height of Waves.—So awful is the spectacle of a storm at sea, that it is generally viewed through a medium which biases the judgment, and, lofty as waves really are, imagination pictures them loftier still. Now, no wave rises more than ten feet above the ordinary sea-level, which, with the ten feet that its surface afterwards descends below this, give twenty feet for the whole height, from the bottom of any water valley to an adjoining summit. The spray of the sea, driven along by the violence of the wind, is, of course much higher than the summit of the liquid wave; and a wave coming against an obstacle may dash to a great elevation above it. At the Eddystone Lighthouse, when a surge breaks, which has been growing under a storm all the way across the Atlantic, it dashes even over the lantern at the summit.

Resurrection Men.—Three violators of the grave have been apprehended at Chateaugay, N. Y.—They had taken the body of a Mr. Andrew Foster, but being pursued they threw it into the river.—The people who caught them forced them to carry the body back and re-inter it, and then they were handed over to the civil authorities.

In Raleigh, N. C. on the 15th inst. the body of an Englishman named Davis, a stranger, who had died from intoxication and exposure to the weather, was taken up by a Dentist for the purpose of procuring his teeth which were remarkably fine. The attendant of the city being informed of it, sent an officer to apprehend him. The Dentist fled, but a negro man who acted as grave digger, was committed to prison and a person who was a mere looker on, was bound over to make his appearance at the next Court.

We are authorized to state that Mr. E. WHITE is a candidate for the House of Representatives, in Congress, at the election in July next.
