THE SOLDIER'S SAFEGUARD.—This is the title bestowed upon HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS by an officer of the United States Army, writing from the Valley of Virginia. He says it is used in the regular hospitals, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith "In every instance where your Bitters have been taken regularly and systematically, as a preventive against the bilious epidemics of this section, they have proved so effective here, they have answered the desired end, and you may therefore claim for your celebrated Tonic and Preventive the designation of the 'Soldier's Safeguard.'" Wherever it has been tried in the army, its merits have been appreciated. The soldiers themselves are clamorous to have it substituted for the pernicious liquors now used as stimulants in the military hospitals. Its well known beneficial effects in the first stages of, and incipient, to the outbreak of cholera, that can be produced from any substance of any process, and the matchless invigorant is moulded with a combination of the finest tonic, anti-bilious and corrective herbs, barks, gums, roots, &c., known to modern pharmacy. Hence HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS—the best and only preventive in malarious diseases and the most powerful shield against the shafts of debility and upper physical prostration—should be in every army hospital and convalescent camp, and stand a formal portion of the medicine stores of every officer and soldier's knapsack. Given promptly in the first stages, it would save the lives of thousands who must otherwise die of exhaustion on the battle field.
