NEW-ORLEANS. WEDNESDAY (MORNING,) DECEMBER 29, 1830.

The mail received yesterday afternoon, due course, brought New-York papers of the 9th and Washington papers of the 11th inst. We have also received by the packet ship Ohio, from New-York, the Journal of Commerce of the 11th which announces an arrival from Havre; but the passage was a long one, and no later intelligence was received than by previous arrivals. The papers are unusually destitute of interest. The little Congressional news we have shall be furnished in our next.

We have been called upon by a correspond ent of the Mercantile Advertiser, to say explicitly whether we entertain the sentiments contained in a paragraph which, a few days since, we copred from the National Gazette. We do not precisely understand the object which has prompted this inquiry. Would the gentleman flatter us with the idea that our opinion in the premises is of very great consequence? Or did he think by seizing upon a delicate question, and adroitly by steam boats, drawing three feet water, which fishing us out, to involve us in a form dable snare! Various queries have arisen in our mind. But why should we suspect any sinister motive, where none is apparent? We will not harbour such a spicion. An appeal has been made to our can-For, and whenever this is done in good faith, it shall meet with a prompt response from us. It is no part of our character to conceal our opinions on any subject-little as they may be worth: nor will we ever shrink from the responsibility ment can be effected there is not a doubt. Every of maintaining them. We read the entire article in question, and gave it a place in our paper because of some very apposite remarks which it contains in relation to the much abused power of removal and appointment, as exerted by the present administration of the general government.-The paragraph noted by the correspondent of the Advertiser, might well have been left out as prelevant to our purpose. We thought indeed to strike it out, but carelessly neglected it. We do not however, on a review of it, find any thing to the effect that might be produced by the conparticularly exceptionable in the sentiments expressed, though it must be confessed that the terms are far from being very delicate.

The simple question is, whether of two canidates for any office, (the Presidency excepted we presume,) the one a native citizen of the general rule, we have no hesitation in saying we presumed to be a more thoroughly practical republican, than one who has been born and bred to under a monarchy. The rule is however is able to many exceptions; as for example, when an hour. If therefore, posterity will only improve a man has resided in the country for a long seties of years, and from intimate acquaintance, we know him to be a sound republican, in practhee as well as theory. A large portion of the concilation of this state should be excepted also, if he can contrive to bridge the ocean, he may · lices) viz, because the whole population being around the earth every 24 hours. composed of foreigners at the time when Louian was admitted into the Union, and the side being received as one of the original parother states, who were living at the time when the federal constitution was adopted.

The Next Presidency .- Congress, during the full exercise of all the volition which was ever rick Mallery, Esq. of Luzerne, Richard Rush, allowed to him. He will hold his barren sceptie' till the end of his term; but who shall, in question? By re-electing the present Viceroy to the office of Printer to the House and Senate, the policy of the Government will be rendered steadand consistent. But if Gen. Green should decline a re-election, sell out, or be defeated, the country will be thrown into a state of irretrievable anarchy and confusion .- Com.

Every sensible man, no matter to what party he may belong, must have either his risibility in the religious newspapers, extensively circuor contempt excited by the course pursued towards Mr. CLAT in many of the Jackson papers. he had better withdraw at once and save his credcouse him? why exhort their friends to be united lic necessity."

We recommend to the members of Congress to put him down! why form Committees, Caucuses and Conventions, to counteract the pro-ceedings of the friends of Ma. Clay? Do not these facts, daily before our eyes, totally belie meir professions?

The truth is, they know and fear the flattering prospects of Mr. Clay. Almost every election emonstrates to them that the Jackson Dynasty is falling to pieces, and that Mr. Clay is rapidly rising upon its, ruins. They perceive that the people are disgysted and disappointed with the extravagance, weakness, and anti-American pohey of the present Cabinet, and that they are determined for a change. All the offices which noisy and unwarthy partisans have received as rewards, are about falling from their grasp. A deafening clamor is therefore raised and kept up (by those personally interested) against Mr. Clay; and by representing his prospects of succase as hoppiess, they expect to operae upon the timid, the willing and the ignorant. This is their policy, but lowgat answer. Mr. Clay is strong, very strong, in the affections of the peoor six Naw England States, as also Delaware, Maryland, Louisiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kenucky, Indiana, Nhio, and will probably very great subjects of contest, during the present session Congress, will be the Turiff and the Indian Question. Judge Peck's trial-will probably occupy much time. That paper predicts that the of the Island of Nantucket, and thence to Haliville Advertiser, noticing some observations, which we lately re-published, respecting the improvement of the navigation of the Ohio river, says:—Twenty thousand dollars, the sum named in the opinion alluded to, would not be more Delaware. than sufficient to make the necessary preparations for the commencement of the undertaking. In the event of its being authorized by the government and executed in the shortest possible time, the labor and other contingent expenses to continue the improvement from Louisville to Pittsburg, would probably cost 200,000 dollars .-Even that sum would be triffing when compared with the immense advantages to be derived from the expenditure. To open a communication verages about five months in each year, would be of nearly equal importance to the opening of a canal the same distance through the most fertile regions of the United States. A canal of what follows by a letter which I received on the that length would not cost less than 5,000,000 16th inst. of dollars. The extent of the cost of improveing the navigation of the Ohio river from Louisville to Pittsburg, in such a manner as to be permanent and afford a safe navigation for steam boats of three feet draught of water, will not exceed 250,000 dollars. That such an improveman who is acquainted with the character of the river must admit that there is a sufficient quantity of water at its lowest stage to give three its spreading over the flat bars. This may be accomplished by constructing dams at certain points on the bars, which, in many places, may be formed by the heavy timber and rocks that now lie in the channel, and require to be removed, to make the navigation safe in the present of this State, and during the interval, not the situation of the river. I may be in an error as struction of such dams; at the same time I may venture to assert, that the project is so plausible that it must be admitted to be worthy of a trial. Phil. Chron.

What are we coming to !- It is stated in a London paper, that Mr. Stephenson, proprietor United-States, and the other a denizen, we of the Rocket Engine, traversed the whole length would prefer the former to the latter.
