N. Y. American Advocate. DOMESTICATING FOREIGN PRODUCTIONS .-The Gazette of the 18th ult. contains an interesting letter from Dr. Perrine, U. S. Consul at Campeachy, in favor of introducing into the United States for cultivation, Sisal Hemp (which he Neuve des Petits Champs, and, from traces dis-States for cultivation, Sisai riemp (which in considers the same as that called Manilla Henip.)
It is from a species of the Agave, which, in all room adjoining the cabinet in which the medals its varieties, is a most interesting plant, and perhaps all its varieties could be grown here. Of five packets of small wax-candles, a lanthorn, a some, the fibres are as stout as hemp, and of others as flax. So that from different sorts are made thread and cordage, cambric and canobjects of art as were not taken away were seat-period, the majorities in both houses of the National Legislature, have uniformly assumed the right of laying duties upon foreign merchandise for the protection of the manufactures of our own country, as a Constitutional exercise of power; and it will be remembered that the exercise of this power has frequently been recognized by those very persons who assisted, in Convention, to frame the present Constitution. But, it has been very correctly observed, that this is no longer a mere abstract question of Constitutiona power-it has resolved itself into the question. whether, at this time, the people of the United States will abandon a system which has been in existence for more than forty years; under the influence of which we have become rich, powerful and happy, and under whose fostering care, it is estimated that upwards of two hundred and fifty millions of dollars have been brought into active exercise, and vested in manufacturing estiblishments; whether they will abandon the tariff, and by this means destroy this capital. The people have answered the question in the negative. There is no portion of the people of the Union, more deeply interested in the success of manufacturing establishments, than the people of this State, who have an immense capital thus inthis State, who have an immense capital thus in-

Extract of a letter from Cagliari, (Sardinia) "Near Alghero, on Cape della Caccia, 600 fee above the surface of the sea to the cast, a grotto has lately been discovered, similar to that called Neptune's Groto,' which is visited on the opposite side by all travellers. At the entrance are seen eleven very high pillars of stalectites of different colours, which seem to have been placed there to support the majestic vault. 'I he various colours on these patters are produced by the immediate action of the light, which only penetrates by that opening, and diminishes as it extends towards the innermost part of the cavern. The bottom of this grotto forms a small It is presumed that it was once the habi tation of a hermit, as there are still vestiges of an ancient wall, and the fragments of an orato Le Tomps.
