EIN DEUTSCHER

☞ TO THE POLLS. ☜

This should be the watchword of every patriot. To the Polls, at once without delay, vote you experience difficulty in receiving your suffrages. Let every voter attend the polls at an early period and deposite his vote in the ballot box, and then he may withdraw with the consciousness of having done his duty.

☞ We trust that no one can have the unestimable privilege of a vote will suffer the elections to close without employing it. Remember, apathy and lukewarmness are wholly inexcusable—a contest most important and decisive of the fate of Louisiana for years to come is going forward. That men unwisely, without apology who refuse to avail himself on the present occasion of the prerogative guaranteed to him by the constitution. Freedom—Roman, of Slidell, of Hoa, hasten to the ballot box! A single vote may prove decisive in the fierce and equal struggle that has now commenced.

To the Voters of Orleans.

You are called upon this day to perform a most interesting and important duty—that of appointing your rulers and representatives. The right of suffrage is the proudest and noblest prerogative of a republican government—by it the people themselves create the powers to which they submit—by it they elevate the worthy to the highest offices in the State—by it, they level the unworthy to the obscurity they merited. It is the great conservative principle of free institutions, and it is about to be exemplified during the succeeding three days, in the choice of a Governor of Louisiana, Members in Congress, State Senators, and Representatives to the State Legislature.

Like every prominent privilege at a liberal government, the right of suffrage should not be hastily or incorrectly exercised. In soliciting those who have the attachment to your local affairs and to represent you in the councils of the state, several names are presented, you should in particular by your personal predilections thrown by you preference for no many and whose some principles You seek for instance a Governor. The first question to be asked should be, not whether the candidates for the most honorable dignity are ultra political partisans, not whether they are the slaves of a faction, but whether they are honest and capable. You should not interrogate them upon Whiggery or Democracy, but upon [illegible]ty, capacity and experience The Chief Magistrate of a State can have but one single object—the promotion of the [illegible] our wealth, dignity and general prosperity of the State over which he is called to preside. To single subjects of general policy with these views is to test upon those matters which are alt gether extraneous and irrelevant. You will all admit, that you require a Governor, not of a party, but of Louisiana—a Chief Magistrate who will honored for his political predilections than for his ability and probity. Between the two then there is [illegible]—between A B ROMAN, who comes forward for your suffrages, is the candidate of all parties, as the honest, dignified, talented citizen, as the functionary [illegible] since already held the reins of government, and conducted its career with signal and most gratifying success, and DENIS PRIEUR, who is presented to you as a regular nominee of a convention, whose services, whatever merit they may possess, have been limited solely to the city of New Orleans; who though not lacking honesty and not deficient in capacity, is not the first equalled, and in the second far surpassed by Mr. Roman. Choose then between the two. Between Mr Roman, whose virtues are all of an active and positive character, and Mr. Prieur, whose sole public quality is heavy opposition, and whose [illegible] appears consist in the absence of gross vices. We have so often instituted a parallel between the two candidates, that you are all familiar with their private and public characteristics. We leave then the decision to your judgment and discrimination, with the confident belief that we will not be deceived in our estimate of the intelligence and patriotism of the people

The two candidates for the State Senate are ALBERT HOA and D F BURTHE. Voters of Orleans! you must have remarked the quiet as and most iniquitous persecution which Albert Hoa has suffered from his quondam friends, because true to the cause of an [illegible] and immutable justice he refused to immolate every sentiment of honor at the [illegible] at behest of his party—because he refused to sacrifice the interests of his constituents at the dictates of will of a despotic [illegible] leader. Nobly and honestly, he penetrated into the mysterious intrigues and monopoly that had dug out those temples of Mammon, the Banks and had placed them, in defiance of the objects of their formation, at the disposal of a few panpered and bloated speculators. You will remember that ALBERT HOA instituted an inquisitorial [illegible] into the conduct of these institutions and proposed healthy and needful reforms. For this he is visited by the virulent and inexcusable anger of the clique whose resentment he despised, and who have succeeded in inducing the party of which for years he has been a steady and consistent member to discard and desert him. You cannot forget, too, that D F Burthe, his opponent, is a contemptible [illegible]ian, a subject of the King of France in heart, though an American by affiliation, that he has forfeited all claims to your suffrages by the voluntary expatriation of his children, whose birthright he sold, Esau-like, for a mess of pottage. He is the Free dent of a Bank, and of course, the devoted organ of the party that sustains these institutions all gangrened and corrupted as they are with abuses. He will, if elected, be their third, their unreasoning instrument. Judge thereafter between the aristocratic and unprincipled Burthe, and his adversary, the noble the fearless, the honest, the patriotic, the republican Hoa.

Lastly, you have to select a representative to our National Legislature. The candidates on this important office are E D WHITE and JOHN SLIDELL. The first, our present Governor, the second a member of the local legislature. Men should be judged by their acts E D White was for six years a senator in the United States Senate. He represented southern interests, those of a great commercial country, of a great mercantile emporium,—a man of sterling intellect would have framed a hundred schemes for the improvement and advancement of the commerce of Louisiana. What did Gov White do? Heaven cannot point to a single act that reflects the slightest credit on his intelligence or his zeal in the behalf of Louisiana. He sent like a soulless automaton or a mute, and confined his gigantic exertions within the narrow limits of a miserly party vote. Who beg his pardon—he did a weak once. Ay, he made a speech on the sugar question. It is a monument of imbecility, pedantry and ignorance—spring from beneath the hands of office fected constitution. Gov White's fous could not wish a stronger weapon of attack than is afforded in this shameless speech which has been so much the regret of his friends and the laughing stock of his enemies, that it has been carefully destroyed, and the utmost industry could not possibly secure a copy. If the sugar bill called forth his ignorance, the bank bill elicited his inconsistency. But we have spoken upon this subject so often that it is unnecessary to revert to it again. His Veto stands on record as a memorable instance of the most wretched repudiation of common sense and common consistency to the insane aspirations of hopeless ambition. The opponent of E. D White is JOHN SLIDELL, the democratic candidate; John Slidell, whom the whigs and the banks denounce, because he is eminently opposed to their selfish principles; John Slidell, the advocate of the right of suffrage, of that sacred and inalienable privilege, by which our freedom is perpetuated, and to which the whigs are irreconcilable. My humble, because it is at war with their aristocratical and mediæval views. John Slidell will wrench the monopolies of the abolitionists with byzantyne vigilance, and will contribute to defeat their unholy union with northern federalism, and present an alliance which would erect a National Bank for the ruin of slavery. Voters of Orleans, can you then hesitate to come forward in your strength, and with the names of ROMAN, HOA, SLIDELL! inscribed upon your tickets. Go to the POLLS, and victory is yours.

☞ The Herald talks about John Slidell's antecedents punishment. Gov White never were any things to clean, homely though they be.

ELECTIONEERING TRICKS.

[illegible] their guard against the machinations of [illegible] In order to deceive the Plebeians of [illegible] have published a ticket in the name of G G Rouen, [illegible] put down tickets.

[illegible] voter (who cannot) [illegible] to inspect his ticket attentively, and see whether it bears the correct title of Mr Roman's name.

FOR GOVERNOR,
A. B. ROMAN.

Albert Hoa and John Slidell,

We would perhaps abstain from alluding still further to the claims of these gentlemen to the suffrages of the people, were we not induced to rectify the erroneous impressions which the slanders of their enemies may create. However positive the assurances of their success may be, it is nevertheless indispensable to watch carefully the manœuvres of our political foes, and unmask and destroy their unhallowed attempts to throw discredit upon the private dealings of our candidates. The assertions that Messrs. Hoa and Slidell have ever sought to destroy the banking & currency laws of Louisiana has been a characteristic, and towards the close of the session of the late legislature, and up to the last important act was one that will consign him forever to the unsparing mockery of his foes and the secret derision of those, political friends for whose gratification he abandoned all that is dear and able position he ever assumed! Louisiana is worthy of [illegible] Faithful to common sense and common honesty!

☞ We hope that the Democrats will come out in all their force for [illegible] Let every man vote—let it be known that the Whigs will not give him a single vote—Thy feat and disgrace too much. He is too uncompromising for them, "taking pull, a strong pull and a pull together" for the Democratic Candidates for Governor will be needed to ensure his election.

ROMANISTS, beat your posts to-day. Poll your votes early, and do not suffer your adversaries either cajoled or bullied out of them, with a little exertion you will yet carry the day.

Mr. Burthe.

It is late or yet too late, this gentleman should certainly save his credit by a timely withdrawal. Otherwise he will be left in a minority to [illegible] his fate and notice. Albert Hoa is one of those [illegible] characters who have the happy faculty of commanding not only his political friends, but even many of his foes. He will obtain a larger vote than any of the candidates on the list. Withdraw then, Mr Burthe, and do not utterly destroy your reputation by an unequal a contest.

(COMMUNICATED)

John Slidell.

Our opponents finding it entirely impossible to controvert the facts and reasons we have adduced in favor of JOHN SLIDELL, have at last taken the ground of saying that we are to be quiet a DEAD in the way. We accept the assurance because we like it, and the opinion of the [illegible] of Hamilton in the days of '82 has nothing to do with our sentiments or with those in 1838. The plagiarisms of the Herald calls our plain, outspoken articles unmanly, and ourselves those [illegible] Heaven save us from such schoolmasters. With what is pompously and ternary reproach comes from the Herald, that our glorious and [illegible] of theirs—by its [illegible] of grammar and good sense.

Fellow citizens, we vote for JOHN SLIDELL because he is the advocate of the doctrines of those who fought in the revolution, of that party who in the [illegible] term—Visionary Enthusiasts and ignorant fighting men" of the party of Washington, and Putnam, Montgomery and Marion; we vote for him because he belongs to a party that is opposed to a system of government based upon and sustained by a [illegible] aristocracy.

We oppose Edward D White for his unpardonable [illegible] in the recent Bank question. He changed his opinions radically within the short space of three months and vetoed his own suggestions which were embodied in the proceedings of our Legislature.

Previous to this dereliction of principle, he had been called by [illegible] to the Senate, a subject of the King of France in heart, though an American by affiliation, that he has forfeited all claims to your suffrages by the voluntary expatriation of his children, whose birthright he sold, Esau-like, for a mess of pottage. He is the Free dent of a Bank, and of course, the devoted organ of the party that sustains these institutions all gangrened and corrupted as they are with abuses.
