VIRGINIA WATER.

The Favorite Resort of the King.

Virginia Water was planted, and the like executed, under the direction of Hans Sandly, at a time when this part of Windsor Forest was the favourite residence of Duke William of Cumberland. The artificial water is the largest in the Kingdom, with the single exception of Blenheim: the cascade is, perhaps, the striking imitation we have of the great works of nature; and the grounds are arranged in the grandest style of landscape-gardening. The neighbouring scenery is bold and rugged, being the commencement of Bagshot heath; and the variety of surface agreeably relieves the eye, after the monotony of the first 20 miles from town, which fatigues the traveller either upon the Bath or western roads. At the time when the public were allowed to visit Virginia Water, the best point of entrance was at the gate of Bishopsgate; near which very pretty village, or rather green, the Royal Lodge is at present situated. Shelley, who had a true eye for the picturesque, resided for some time at this place, and it would have been difficult for a poet to have found in any of the highly cultivated counties of England a spot so full of the most exquisite variety of hill and dale, of wood and water—so fitted to call forth and cherish the feelings upon which poetry must depend for its peculiar nurture.

Bishopsgate is situated about a mile to the right of the western road from London, after you ascend to hill beyond Fighm. To the left, St. Anne's Hill, the favoured residence of Charles Fox, is a charming object; and upon the ridge which the traveller ascends, is a spot which has given a name to Denham's celebrated poem. "Cooper's Hill" is not shut out from the contemplative searcher after the beauties of nature; and however the prospect here may be exceeded by scenes of wider extent, of more striking grandeur certainly the beauty of the earliest, and perhaps the best descriptive poem of our language is calculated to produce the warmest feelings of admiration both for its actual beauty and univalued associations. From an elevation of several hundred feet, you look down upon a narrow fertile valley through which the Thames winds with surpassing loveliness. Who does not recollect the charming lines with which Denham describes the "silvery river"?

"Oh! could I see like thee, and make thy stream My great example, as it is my theme: Though deep, yet clear; though gentle, yet not dull; Strong without rage, without o'erflowing full."

Immediately at your feet is the plain of Runnemead where the great battle between John and the Barons was fought; and in the centre of the river is the little fishing island where Magna Charta was signed. At the extremity of the valley is Windsor Castle rising up in all the pomp of its massive towers. We recollect the scene internal improvements, and for adaption to the purposes of a modern residence without sacrificing all its character of antiquity; we fear that he has destroyed its picturesque effect in the distant landscape. Its old characteristic feature was that of a series of turrets rising above the general elevation. By raising the intermediate roofs, without giving a proportionate height to the towers, the whole line has become square and unbroken. This was, perhaps, an unavoidable fault but it is a fault.

From Cooper's Hill, the entrance to Virginia Water is a walk of a quarter of an hour. We were accustomed to wander down a long and close plantation of pines, where the rabbit ran across with scarcely a fear of man. A more wild and open country succeeded, and we then followed the path, through many a "bosky bourn," till we arrived at a rustic bridge, which crossed the lake at a narrow neck, where the little stream was gradually lost amongst the underwood. A scene of almost unrivalled beauty here burst upon the view. For nearly a mile a verdant walk led along, amidst the choicest evergreens, by the side of a magnificent breadth of water. The opposite shore was rich with the heather bloom, and plantations of the most graceful trees, the larch, the ash, and the weeping birch (the lady of the woods), broke the line of the wide lake, and carried the imagination on, into belief that some mighty river lay beyond that screaming wood. The cascade was at length reached. Cascades are much upon the same plan, whether natural or artificial; the scale alone makes the difference. This cascade is sufficiently large not to look like a plaything, and if it were met with in Westmoreland or Wales, tourists would dilate much upon its beauties. At this point the water may be easily forded; and after a walk of the most delicious seclusion, we used to reach a bold arch, over which the public road was carried. Here have been erected some of the antique columns, that, a few years ago, were in the court-yard of the British Museum.

From this arch a variety of walks, of the most delightful retirement, present themselves. They are principally bounded with various trees of the pine tribe, intermingled with laurel and acacia. The road gradually ascends to a considerable elevation, where there is a handsome building, called the belvedere. The road from this spot is very charming. We descend from this height, through a wild path, by the side of trees of much more ancient growth than the mass around; and, crossing the high road, again reach the lake, at a point where its dimensions are ample and magnificent. About this part a splendid fishing-temple has lately been erected. Our taste we can say nothing.

The common road from Blacknest (the name of this district of Windsor Forest) to the Royal Lodge is strikingly beautiful. Virginia Water is crossed by a very elegant bridge, built by Sandly; on one side of it the view terminates in a toy of the last age—a Chinese temple; on the other it ranges over a broad expanse of water. The road sometimes reminds one of the wildness of mountain scenery, and at another turn displays all the fertility of a peaceful agricultural district. We at length pass the secluded domain of the Royal Lodge; and when we reach the edge of the edge of the hill, we look upon a vista of the most magnificent elms, and over an expanse of the most striking forest scenery, with the splendid Castle terminating the prospect—a monument of past glories, which those who have a feeling for their country's honor may well uphold and cherish.—London Magazine.

A woman never appears so truly amiable as in retirement; her virtues shine with double lustre.

Do not idly imagine that, by running to public places you will have a better chance of marrying: if a woman is ever so beautiful, being seen too often makes her cheap in the eyes of men. She who is but rarely seen, men covet most to see, and her chance of being happily married is much greater.

Political Arithmetic.—If there had been no deaths in the world, there would be at this day on the earth, 172,000,000,000,000 (172 milliards) As the continent contains at least 1,387 billions of square feet, each person could have 9,100 feet. On the other hand, as the number of deaths is to that of births, as ten to twelve, there are born every year thirty-six millions of men; each day ninety-eight thousand four hundred; each hour, four thousand and eighty; each minute seventy-two; and each second, one and a tenth, and the deaths are one every second. Thus, poor mortals, you sneeze and some one dies, you make a step and another dies; I shake my pen and a death happens; how many deaths have happened whilst I have been making these few remarks! But, reader, whilst you have been running over this paragraph, how many have been born? Journal du Haere.

MOTION OF ANIMALS.

Animal motion is wonderful, though from its perpetually meeting the eye, we take little account of it. The Pholis (a shell fish) has the power of perforating the hardest marble by means of a fleshy substance, apparently no way suited to so laborious an employment. It increases its cell as it increases in size; and constitutes a perfect example of the first rudiments of animal motion. The only impulse an oyster possesses, arises out of its power of opening and shutting its shell. The muscle moves by means of a muscular substance, resembling a tongue. The crab moves sideways, and the water-fly swims upon its back. The serpent undulates, and the lion and moves backwards; it has no power to make the smallest inclination forwards. Marine birds can walk, run, fly, and swim. Some animals can only walk, others only run, and others only gallop; the horse performs all these motions; the tiger and the crocodile dart; the rein-deer runs, but never gallops; the armadillo walks swiftly, but can neither run nor leap; while the great water-cater climbs much better than it can walk. The sloth is a large animal, and yet can travel only fifty paces in a day; and elk will run a mile and a half in seven minutes; an antelope a mile in a minute; the wild mule of Tartary has a speed even greater than that. An eagle can fly 18 leagues in an hour; and a canary falcon can even reach 250 leagues in the short space of 16 hours. Man has the power of imitating almost every motion, but that of flight. To effect these, he is, as in maturity and health 60 bones in his legs and thighs 62 in his arms and hands, 60 in his head, and 67 in his trunk. He has also 334 muscles in his structure of his body, and his heart has 3,830 pulsations in the space of a hour!—Buck's Harmonies of Nature.
