It is a pity that nature and fortune have not been more it is a pity that nature and to tune nave not been more to buttiful to you—the former in endowing you with cupacity equal to your ambition, and the latter in affording you means of acquiring knowledge; but for this omission, you would no doubt have been, era this, a suighty man. I stanpathize with you sincerely, which is proven by the interest I take in advising you.

I will conclude these observations by reiterating the advice that you must after your course, or you certainly never can become an Alderman.

FROM FORTUGAL. We learn from captain Baker, of the brig Nestor, that when he left St. Ubes, July 20th, it was still in possession of the Miguelites. Of course the report brought to London, July 31st, by the steam boat African, that Villa Flor had landed a body of troops, who had immediately taken possession of the town, is without foundation. The African is stated to have set this information from the Pedroite can is stated to have got this info mation from the Pedroite not all the series acquained than we are. Then you may see on which side you are, and to whom the heap of ridicule, of constampt, and grossness belong.

As to the sillinger with which you reproach us, it is for the public to judge which of us is the most liable to the charge. This can be easily enough ascertained, by public to judge which of us is the most liable to the charge. This can be easily enough ascertained, by public to make the charge of the series o lishing each one the list of his subscribers.

When you have the courage of which we have spoken to you, and whon you shall have manifested it, the public may with the assistance of something else which can be submitted to them—decide which of wa two is most worthy of the "pity," and "contempt" of which you are so lavish, and which you seem to forget you stand so much in need of yourself. So far believe our advice—purge yourself, for was it then known there that the whole the province of Algarve only by the names of the vessels as they approached, and as the shrewd Yankee pretended to know every ship the moment he saw her broadeside, they crowded round him overment in his favor. P. S. From further conversation with captain Baker, we learn that the Pedroite first was under way at the time he saw it, July $1st, morning, two miles from the mouth of the Tagus, bound in. This leads us to suspect that there my have been a mistake in the date when it was spoken by the stream boat African, and that it was the 24th instead of the 22d.
