LEGISLATURE OF LOUISIANA. Second Session-Fourteenth Legislature. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

HOUSE OF REFERENCE AND MARCH 26, 1840.

Savunday, March 26, 1840.

Evening Sessions—5 o'clock.

The house met agreeably to adjournment.
On motion, the house reconsidered the vote giver its morning on the aeries of resolutions relative to be primiting of the documents and the reports mady the joint committee on banks. The two first re it does not there you have been as a secretary in the law of eighteen hundred and thirty-three was unconstitutional, even if it did contain an infringement of what these persons term their vested rights; for even had that I we contained provisions conflicting with vested rights, it only proves that the legislature was unwise or unjust in its legislation; and this would only amount to an abuse not an assumption of power, and the statute however harm or objectionable in its features, on the score of expediency, night still be constitutional, and is still a binding statute, and susceptible of heing enforced; but your committee are not of opinion that the statute of 1833 contains any provision which militates against the vested rights of the proprietors of these lotteries, for if they were of that opinion, they would a lise its immediate repeal, as in their view vested rights properly so called, and properly understood, possess a sanctity of character scarcely inferior to rights guaranteed by the provisions of the constitution.

By vested rights, your committee understand rights beed by the provisions of the constitution.

By vested rights, your committee understand rights held by a tenure so plain, palpable and indefeasible, that any interference with them would deserve to be stignastized as an act of bad faith. Your committee do not find that the act of 1833, either in its terus, its bieds, or in the effects which are to proceed from its application to these lotteries, contains any injustice or any deserved.

that any interespece with them would uservet to we signatized as an act of 1833, either in its teras, its objects, or in the effects which are to proceed from its application to these letteries, contains any injustice or any departure from that good faith which should never fail to characterize the legislation of an enlightened and virtuous people. The act of 1833 was intended to prevent the most flagrant abuse of privileges, conferred by previous laws, with such intentions in view, it would scartely have been a matter of attoinshment, that the legislature had confined itself to a mere unqualified repeal of the acts which had granted these privileges; but in assistit of forbarance, the act of 1833 specifies a certain term within which these lotteries (which should long before have been terminated.) should long before have been terminated.) should long before have been disposed of, the objects of the legislature in granting them had been totally defeated, and thereby one of the implied conditions of the grant had been violated; that braides, the conductors of the legislature in granting them had been totally defeated, and thereby one of the implied conditions of the grant had been violated; that braides, the conductors of the legislature in granting them had been totally defeated, and thereby one of the implied conditions of the grants and the exceeding the limitation of the ordinal grants—thus violating an expuse condition of the grants. Can it be contended that a law, which was interposed under such circumstances to prevent the turther progress of abuse, and protect the marals of the country, contains a violation of the vested rights of the country, contains a violation of the vested rights of the country, contains a violation of the vested rights of the country, contains a violation of the vested rights of the country, contains a violation of the vested rights of the country, contains to which they have arrived on this subject, from being able to state that the attempt paths of the country of the conditions o mation is one hundred per cent, above its real value. It will appear by the evidence, too, that one of these interies, that managed by Schmidt & Hamilton, have sold tickets, for cash, for near four hundred thousand dollars. New, your committee deem there real estate lotterics as illegal, according to the express conditions of the very grants under and by vietue of which they are conducted; the grants authorize them one to raise $20,000, the other $10,000. Can it for a moment be pretended, that upon the very face of the schemes themselves there is not a proposition to raise summ immensely larger than those prescribed by the law granting the privileges, as it clearly appears that by ese operation itself, to wit: the over estimation of the spectry, the object of one of them is to achieve a profit of one million, and of the other were hundred thousand dellars. Again, is it not an irresistable pre-
