NEW-ORLEANS, FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 10, 1832.

03- No daily mail reached us yesterday

To a Correspondent .- We have received a ru mad, turgid, incoherent, anti-orthographical rhapsody, from a dreaming correspondent, on the glorio destinies of New Orleans. The best feelings of our heart are closely woven with the prosperity of this, our native city; and its praise is ever sweet to our ear. But we had rather listen to its detraction, sich see it praised, in violation of all that the rules of orthography and syntax have senctioned. Your piece " is no go, Peter my Pipkin:" can't go in: Non concessere columnoe one columns will not admit your infliction. As commencation for your trouble. if you will but seve us your address, we shall make it a special duty to transmit to you the latest edition of ve ester's spelling-book-boping, and so forth.

Murder Out.-Three individuals, suspected of having been accomplices in the murder of a man. who was killed on the 17th ultimo, on the Bayou road, by the infliction of thirty-three wounds, were arrested yesterday through the exertions of the captain of the city guard. There is a story abroad that they were all malfactors; but that the deceased wish ng to mend his ways, excited the suspicion of his associates, was trepanned, & thus horribly murdered. Heavy presumptions seem to weigh upon the individuals, who have been arrested.

Greek Newspapers. - Our correspondent of the New York Commercial has received by the late arrival from Smyrna, numbers of a newspaper, printed in the Romaic language. He facidiously remarks that, henceforth, in order to master their contents, Editors shall have to apply themselves to the study of the modern Greek. If he will send us the papers, we engage to send back translations of the most in teresting articles, in due course of the return mail, through the medium of the BEE.

EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

The ship Carroll of Carrollton, from Liverpool whence she sailed on the 16th of Dec. brings Liverpool dates of the 16th, and London of the 15th, inclusive. By that channel we have referred our files of English papers up to the 15th of December.

The general texture of the news is not of say engrossing interest. The cholera still retains its hold in England; several cases have broken out in New-

The Ministry are still firm. Lord John Russell. on the 12th of December, obtained leave to introduce the reform bill, with several amendments, among which, going to allow each town of the class of Brighton, for instance, an additional member, in lieu of one only, contemplated by the former bill .-The discussion of the bill opened with the question of the disfrancisement of the boroughs—the very identical subject agitated at the former attings of the last parliament. They have been arranged in schedules, in the same manner as formerly, & their examination is to progress in order of classification.

The riots at Lyons are entirely quelled; the Duke of Orleans, and Marshal Soult have both returned to

The Morning Herald of the 13th contains a piece of intelligence, conveyed by a private gentleman, and purporting that Ferdinand the VII had been dethroned, in an insurrectionary movement, and subsequently poisoned. The information is said to have been brought by an individual, who travelled in five days from Madrid to Paris, a journey which we take to be most improbable; and what is still more improbable is, that a privated individual should have outstripped the agents of government, and anticipated news, which might undoubtedly have been more rapidly t ansmitted by the means of expresses or telegraphs. There would have been racing with a vengeance, and, not one, but twenty estatettes would have been despatched to announce existence of the fact, and asserts that no warranta- part of their tithes, five per cent. on the fixed ble information has been received on the subject. We supply the most interesting extracts from the pels.—French paper.

Lonner, Dec. 15.

Several of the leading men in the House of Commons, who opposed the late bill, appear to be convinced left the necessity of reform, and dispused to think much more favorably of the present bill than the last; the majority for the Ministers will, therefore, we apprehend, be considerably increased. Sir R. Peel, Mr. Croker, and Sir C. Wetherell, are not, however, to be shaken from their purpose; they will continue to oppose the bill, both in principle and detail, because they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people and cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think it will give to the people a new cause they think there is the date of these extentents the date of these extentents the date of these of the sale of inst week having been and must violent of the secret and must violent of the secret and must violent of the Miguelte faction, named as the sale of inst week having been and must violent of the secret they secret they will ask place in the miguelt faction, named as the sale of these sale of inst week having been and must violent of the secret they sale they will ask place they sale of the secret they will sale they will sale to defend the sale of these ale of inst week having been and must violent of the secret they sale place they will sale by patronage and corruption worked well enough for those who were at the head and tail of it. Sir-Robert Peel plumes himself on the services he has rendered his country in opposition. We will not examine the value of those services, but we can assure him that his country is quite sensible of the advantages of having and keeping him in that situation, which we trust he will ful him in that situation, which we trust he will ful enable them to save their cash and valuables; for many a long year, to the mutual gratification but the large property invested in wines, &c. of himself, the people, and indeed to the gratification of all parties. (Globe.) It appears, according to accounts from Berlin. that the King of Prussia is going to conclude a treaty with King Leopold, by which it is supposed that the Prussian cabinet will league with those of France and England.—London Globe, Dec. 9.

From the Messager des Chambres Paris, Dec. 11.-We have already noticed he concurrence of political views between the callets of Paris and London, which is the re-sulf of the speech from the throne of England and of the tone of the King of the French and the Ministry. This unanimity, altogether new in the history of Europe, is worthy of the attenin the autory of Europe, is worthy of the attention of publicists; as, by its continuation, so much to be wished, it may probably dissolve those prejudices, whether English or French too long admitted a principle, to the detriment of both nations, that the prosperity of one depended upon the ruin of the other.

The business was managed with so much addees, what very few knew of the movement. The Lord Blaney lay off Woodside, where she took in soal, and a little before two she dropped down opposite the Clarence Dock, from which a small steamer crowded with people, soon issued, and having got alongside, the passengem quickly passad into the vessel destined to take them to the coast of France, or, as some think, to the Western Islands, where the sovereignty of Donna Maria is already acknown ledged. In addition to the small steamer, several boats were employed in conveying the volunteers to the packet insteady got under way.
