We published yesterday an account of a fanther, who amused himself by "keeping shop" a little while in New York, and we were pleased to observe that no evil resulted to any one from his change of business. The love of freedom and the scale for ease is not confined to the Fanther, other animals long caged sick an cutlet, and enjoy "the common air and common use of their own lin bs."

The New York and Enternal road.—We observe that the senate had under consideration on Thu sady, certain amendants to the bill of the last session, incorporating a company ny for the construction of a rail road from this city to Luke Erie. It is to be boped that this magnificent underteking will receive every suitable encouragement from the legislature—as, if carried into effect, it will open new sources of it, which, with the exception of the towns on the river, is in a great measure excluded from the benefits of the Eric canal. We are toid that the bill of the last session was encumbered with provisions which deterred the company from proceeding. It is the object of the present amendments, we presume, to remove those objectionable features, and render the bill acceptable to the company.
