the following it will be seen, that Mr. Nicholas, the nator from St. James edeclares his intention to comply with the wishes of his constituents, and to vote for the bill plaining the faith of the state to the charter of the Citizens Menk. If Mr. N. has done wrong in veting as he did i the first instance, the disposition he evinces to retrace his stips should be retrectly satisfactory. It is to be hoped that Mr. Burthe will imitate the good example here set, and that he will likewise how in abedience to the popular will --Resistance that will only place him in more awkward cirsengetances, and may possibly be the means to produce a state of things which it his duty as well so his interest to avoid We have to unfriendly slellings towards Mr. B., and we trust that he will listen to the sell small voice of prudence, and wield his judgment to that of his constituents. He should fael emilions of sharing the credit which the course adopted by Mr. Nicholas promises:

Bank, it is not only a respect due to my constituents, but proper in regard to myself, to submit a brief statement of my opinions on the question involved. Having been uniformly apposed to pledging the faith of the state, for the purpose of releing battking capital, as is manifested in all my votes on the Union Bank. The same view governed my vote, on the question of pledging the faith of the state in favor of the Citi zene' Bank. My comion, having really undergone no change, the relation which I stood to the Citizen's Bank, as a large subscriber, placed an additional restraint on my course. representative. I feel bound to obey your instructions. This is a principle that I have always recognized and considered as laying at the foundation of representative povernment. Having been brought up in the old democratic school, I never can hemitate, on the right to instruct, and the consequent obligation. The obligation in my opinion is either to obey or resign. In the present instance a resigns tion would involve the same consumence as dischediance and I can have no difficulty in following your instructions. ROBERT CARTER NICHOLAS
