The northern mail which was due on Sunday, as well as that of yesterday, came to hand at an early hour. The New York papers are of the evening of the th instant; Philadeliphia of the 9th; Bultimore and Washington of the itti; and Charleston of the 13th.

The parket slop Albany had arrived at New York, from Stavre, with paris papers of the 31st of August, and Havre and the country was saced—he stands a most alone of the 1st of September. The packet ship Haunibal, from now, and the country will be saved again by the co-London, had slep arrived at New York, bringing papers of the 3rd of September: The dates are not so late as the received he e direct from Liverpool, by the Sanah and

The Argus says "the Jackson men are forced to agree that the Clay meeting of Saturday was a great one." We agree to no such thing; it was a more drop in the bucket, compared with the Jackson meeting of the 6th instant. It is estimated by several persons who were present, at acout 150, all told; of these about 80 were Jacksonists; about the same number were not voters; and about 50 were longs of 18 to 20 years of age. The substantial Clay force amounted to about 250.

Take a fact: "the number of Jacksonists who were need ent, was estimated by Jackson men who begon it, at 30; and the bet was gained by three." So says the Argus. It the meeting were really ""great one," it would not be so easy agmatter to ascertain the bet. You might as well for a needle in a hoy stack," as to have hunted for thirty Clayists among the sea of lieads that crowded the same hall, only a fortnight previous. As to the trespectability" of the meeting; we happen to know that the workmen at the upper cotton press were released from their hods and wheelbarrows seasonably to be washed and shaved, so as to look respectable on the occasion-that's all.

The bet offered in the Aigus, of one HUNDRED DOL LARS, that a majority of the votes of the parish of Jefferson wal be given to the Clay electoral ticket, has been taken. Will no body bet with our YANKEE?

The returns of the Pennsylvania election are still cheer. ing, beyond even the most sanguine expectation of the friends of the cause of democracy. No more "glorious triumpin"-no more "reactions"-no more "splendid victories" decorate the columns of Poulson, or the old tory United States Gazette. The National Gazette too, which, whilom "considered antimasonry as, at least, harmless, "and was, therefore, disposed to a co-operation with antimasons," is silent as to the result of its laudable attempt so set lectures, in which one must assume the office of indectrinating like theologians. So said Mr. Meazureau, at the Clay meeting, and citizen of this country or not? What benefit his he con-ferred upon the state? What was his conduct during ion of the city than Stephen Mazeurcau! What indi Vidual had less patriotic feeling; at that awful period han he? Is it surprising—is it not perfectly natural that such a man should hate and revile general Jackson, and above all things strive to prevent him from being relacted? FOR THE NEW ORLEANS BEE OUR PLIGHT AND OUR PROSPECT.

NEW ORLEANS, 18th October, 1832. To my right trusty friend, Mr. President Biddle. LETTER 15.

"The tempter or the tempted, who sins most?" I have taken a bird's eye view of fictions believed agains us; and think it practicable to turn this believing propensi-by indirectly in our favour. It is not our fault that fiction is in fashion, and that the vulgar ascribe ment to blind assent. The few, only, are qualified to inquire the many to believe. We did not make those things, but may profit by them. A new order of policy—perhaps of religion, is coming; for which we must prepare. We are the "tempted," and therefore innocent. The world resembles a bank; in which-parsons and lawyers are large stock holders; but, why should they have all the dividends? If you listen to me, we'll come in for a share;—for, there are human in firmities that need the banker as well as those two puissant orders. Let us make instruments of the one, and allies of

"A continual circulation of lies, (says Paine,) among those who are not much in the way of hearing them contradicted, will in time pass for truth; and the erigin lies not in the believer but the inventor." I would not countenance "lies," but disseminate morae tales for useful ends. As none attempt to contradict the clergy, let us engage, equip, and give merch orders in such methodists, moravians, independents &c. as we can receive. The former, with a few transpositions, to call some of the eleverest for particular districts, may continue in the rold circuits. In playing a great game it is well to shuffle the pack.

It will not be advisable to commission any quakers, as general Jackson perhaps has a cogtempt for men who will never be soldiers. You will decide prudently, I am sure.
