NEW ORLEANS:
MONDAY MORNING, JANUARY 1, 1838.
For the ling New Year's Day, the next number of the Bee will be published on Wednesday next.

We are indebted to the politeness of Captain Rochard, of the ship Agnes and Ann, for files of Jamaica papers to the 16th December.

The last day of the old year left us in splendor, and the first dawn on the late of the new ushered in a morning unsurpassed in the annals of genial weather. While we cordially wish our friends and patrons a happy new year, we may surely be permitted to give a lingering sigh to the departing year, which has been to us so propitious in its dispensations, and so full of experience in its performance as qualified by the place we occupy in the community. The retrospect is painful, but the sorrow we feel for the misfortunes of others is mingled with a sense of the past as the epoch of unparalleled and unmerited success in our humble career. When we retrace the circumstances that have attended the progress of the Bee, from its infancy to the present time, we discover a combination of rare and almost miraculous events, which clustered in such a manner as to form a chain of good fortune, that has enabled us to overcome the most formidable obstacles, and to triumph over the most inveterate opposition. Without any pecuniary capital, and with only the aid of a few friends, who had confidence in the success of the enterprise, we commenced the publication of the Bee, and in the short space of two years we have established a paper which has attained a circulation unprecedented in the annals of the press in this country, and which has been pronounced by the most competent judges to be the best conducted paper in the United States. Our success has been so great as to excite the envy of many, and the jealousy of others, who have attempted to impede our progress by every means in their power. But we have been enabled to overcome all these difficulties, and to maintain our position in the public estimation, by the independent course we have pursued, and by the fearless manner in which we have exposed the corruptions of the press, and the abuses of power. We have been assailed by the most unscrupulous calumny, and have been threatened with the most violent retribution, but we have never been deterred from the performance of what we considered our duty to the public, by the fear of consequences. We have been sustained in our course by the approbation of the people, and we have been rewarded for our labors by a liberal support. We have been enabled to establish a press and a type foundry, which are unsurpassed in the United States, and we have been able to pay off all our debts, and to accumulate a handsome capital. We have also been enabled to establish a branch office in the city of Mexico, and to secure the services of a correspondent in that city, who will furnish us with the most important intelligence from the interior of the republic. We have also been enabled to establish a branch office in Texas, and to secure the services of a correspondent in that country, who will furnish us with the most important intelligence from that republic.
