G. BOYERN'S

CLASSICAL AND COMMERCIAL INSTITUTION
No. 148 Conti Street, between Dauphine and Burgundy streets.

THIS Institution, the oldest scholastic establishment in New Orleans, is well known and highly distinguished for the success which has accompanied it ever since its foundation, a considerable number of pupils who have quitted it to enter on the great scene of life, having already acquired some distinction in the various avocations to which they have devoted themselves.
BOYER'S Institution is conducted in one of the largest Mansions of the city, occupying a fine central position, being well ventilated and in other respects perfectly salubrious.
The range of studies which engage the attention of the pupils extends over all the branches of Learning which are necessary to a useful, polite and finished education from primary instruction to the more abstruse subjects which are specially the province of a collegiate course. Discipline so necessary to quicken in the youthful mind a due perception of the duties incumbent on it in its future relations with society, is a conspicuous feature of the Establishment, being at the same time severe and considerate, whilst the solicitude of the Principal regarding the moral training of the youths committed to his charge is, though strict, yet paternal.
The English language, daily becoming more and more evident, and the greatest possible importance built on in this community, in Boyer's Institution, attended to with more than ordinary care, the Professors engaged in the branch being gentlemen of undoubted attainments and long accustomed to tuition.

MANDEVILLE COLLEGE.

THE labors of the Directors of this Institution have been already rewarded by the confidence of the public. The number of students in its halls is more considerable, than could have been anticipated for the short time it has been under the present direction. Its patronage rank among the most intelligent and influential citizens of Louisiana.
The success of the College may, in part, be attributed to its various local advantages. The buildings are of vast extent, and admirably adapted to the purpose for which they are used. A steamboat plies regularly between the College and the city of New Orleans, facilitating the communication between the students and their parents. The health and recreation of the students are promoted considerably by bathing in the Lake, in the proper season, and by walking under the shade of the surrounding forest.
But it is not to its favorable situation alone that the College is indebted for its success. The result of the latest examination has shown that the Directors have been fortunate in their choice of Professors, and that the public confidence has been justly bestowed. In consequence of the increase in the number of students, the Directors have engaged the valuable services of Professor Roe, a gentleman favorably known to the public, still retaining all the Professors already attached to the College.
The care of the student's clothes will be confided to a competent person, under the superintendence of Mrs. McManus. The students, for the future, will receive, from Mrs. McManus, that maternal care so necessary, particularly for young children, when absent from their homes.
