The Election Tuesday.

[illegible] New Orleans are called upon [illegible] Municipal officers for the [illegible] year. The interests, energetic and capable [illegible] affairs of a great [illegible] city is not an easy or a trivial task; and the [illegible] must be confided by the constituency [illegible] New Orleans to agents, should not be [illegible] to other than competent and experienced men. Upon the fulfilment [illegible] the present and prosperity of the [illegible] rapid and constant development [illegible] resources, and the enhancement of [illegible] influence and its population. The [illegible] commercial importance of [illegible] are but the necessaries of indus[illegible], and that in the hands of honest, [illegible] and efficient conduct of men [illegible] entrusted the management of public [illegible]. In this free country, where the interests [illegible] is exempt from the confidence [illegible] by the citizens, the intelligent [illegible] responsibility that is assumed [illegible] General, speaking, an [illegible] In the suffrages [illegible] Tuesday, we trust that [illegible] Secretary, and the President [illegible] a unanimous endorsement. After [illegible] such a resolution was adopted by the [illegible] Executive Council, calling for the [illegible] Mr. Sidell. "The Executive regrets [illegible] did not number a quorum for [illegible] than two hours. It was much doubted [illegible] by the friends of this distinguished Statesman [illegible] and Orator, before he opened, whether he [illegible] would be able to sustain his reputation, for he [illegible] has been bowed down by an accumulation of [illegible] afflictions. His state of health, for some months [illegible] past, has been seriously deranged—so much so, [illegible] indeed, as to unfit him almost entirely for the [illegible] discharge of public duties. The loss of his son [illegible] in Mexico was a severe blow to one so devotedly [illegible] attached to his children as he is. And upon [illegible] all these sorrows, a few hours before the meeting [illegible] of the Senate, he was apprised, by a telegraphic [illegible] communication from Boston, of the dying [illegible] condition of his daughter, (Mrs. Appleton, [illegible] who has been lingering in consumption for a [illegible] time past. But his energies seemed to rise [illegible] with the occasion and the subject, and those who [illegible] have heard all his most splendid oratorical [illegible] achievements, concede that there were passages [illegible] in this which equalled his proudest triumph. The war, the acquisition of territory, [illegible] the treaty, the ten regiment bill, and the character and population of the Northern States of [illegible] Mexico, furnished him with the theme of his [illegible] speech. With such ample materials as these, [illegible] the effect produced, under the severest and acerbity of a manner most like his, may well be imagined.

Upon the close of this speech, the Senate adjourned into Executive session, for the purpose [illegible] of ordering an investigation into the publication [illegible] of the treaty, the instructions of Mr. Slidell, &c., which have secretly appeared in the New York Herald. A committee consisting of three Senators, Mr. Calhoun, of Maine, Mr. Badger, of North Carolina, and Mr. Westcott, of Florida, was appointed to make the necessary examination, with full power to send for persons and papers.

The House of this Committee need not be confined the length of a single day, for Mr. [illegible] of Mississippi, has now in his possession [illegible] from Mr. Nayent, the correspondent of the Herald, admitting that he received the documents from Mr. Buchanan, Secretary of State. [illegible] fact has been well understood in all the [illegible] circles of the metropolis, for several days past, and it has long been notorious, that the Herald was supplied with information touching [illegible] affairs from the department of [illegible] Secretary of State. The support and fa[illegible] by which it has belonged Mr. Buchanan [illegible] in the purchasing the influence of that [illegible] money, he furnished it with Slidell's [illegible] the ringer planned to secure [illegible] Mexico, [illegible] Slidell's [illegible] Mexico, [illegible] Slidell's [illegible] Mexico, [illegible] Slidell's
