CINCINNATI Oct 24.

Flour—The demand for this staple, on account of the continued low stage of the river, is limited—the prices have improved a shade; at Canal, $5.50.

Whiskey—Sales have been made in the last week at an advance of one cent upon last week's quotations; canal price.

Bacon is extremely dull at 7¼c; canvassed same, 50 cents.

Lard maintains the rate of last week 7a 7 ½ cents.

Pork has fallen to $15 for Mess; Prime, no sale.

Groceries—The stock in market has greatly diminished; demand brisk at increased prices.

LOUISVILLE, Oct 23.

Business continues to improve, and the transactions of the past week were considerably, though prices generally remain the same. The river has risen six inches in Cincinnati; but remains at about the same here.

Flour & Rope—There has been little doing in these articles, owing partly to the low stage of the river. Prices remain the same.

Bacon has been dull and the prices have not materially changed since our last.

Groceries—In consequence of the news of the late destructive storm in Louisiana, Sugar has advanced. Sales at from 6 to 7c. For sugars see held at 8c. Sales of Cuba coffee in large lots at 10¼, 4 mos and in small lots 10½, good demand. Kenawha salt sells steadily at $1.

Flour is worth $5¼ in lots. Transactions trifling. Tobacco remains at last week's quotation. The demand has improved.

Whiskey is in demand. It sold on Saturday at 22½c It comes in slowly.

THE BEE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY Printer of the State, General
the First and Third Mu...

NEW ORLEANS:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 1, 1837

☞ The day being All-Saints' Day, the Bee will not be published to-morrow.

All Saints' Day.

This is the day consecrated by the piety of Catholic communities to the memory of the dead. The pious breath of his darling, the widowed wife, and desolate husband all flock to the cemetery at this period to renew the reminiscences of their affection, and render funereal honors to the departed objects of their love. It is a beautiful and impressive ceremony, and well worthy attention. The company of Canadoes, willing to unite the beneficence of charity to the peaceful sense of religion, have determined to make a collection in favor of the orphans who have lately encountered a further bereavement in the demise of their benefactor and protector, the Rev. Adam Kandelon. We are persuaded, that no laboured sentences will be needed to induce every one contribute his mite for this holy end. It is, we trust, necessary only to mention the benevolent object of the Canadoes, to invoke public assistance to the aid of private charity.

The Editor of the Louisville Journal apologises to his readers for the meagre appearance of his paper, on the plea that the printers in his office have struck for higher wages, which he is determined not to grant.

The Express Mails contain interesting information. The details of the loss of the ship Hope, the capture of Powell, and the audacious piracy upon the pocket ship Susquehanna will all be found in our columns.

☞ A grand festival has been held at Mayence on the Rhine, in honor of Gutenberg, the discoverer of printing. Immense processions were formed, which proceeded to the Place de Gutenburg, where a large Amphitheatre had been erected, and the statue of the founder of printing placed in the midst. Many imposing ceremonies were performed, among others an autho eighteen hundred singers and musicians. The audience consisted of twenty thousand persons.

☞ There is an interesting account of Signora Caradori Allan, the celebrated vocalist, now in New York, to be found in the Sunday Morning News of the 15th inst. Also a synopsis of the principles of animal magnetism, together with extracts from Dupau's refutation of the pretended science. This work is a complete expose of the mysteries of the miracle-mongers.

ARKANSAS.—Judge Yell, the present representative, has been re-elected to Congress. He is an influential member and a sterling democrat.

☞ If ever the elixir of life and philosopher's stone are to be discovered, they will certainly be by the French. One of that ingenious nation has come to rid us of nerves, palate and set of teeth in the same individual, lost by the ravages of a protracted malady. The patient, says the New York Evening Post, had suffered most severely in the respiratory, and digestive organs, and was threatened with a lingering and certain death, when M. Holstein succeeded in affixing an artificial nose in gold, enamelled, which could be adjusted without any internal fastenings, and without causing pain. The excavation of the palatal vault of the mouth was stopped with a sonorous-shaped plate, that allowed the patient to speak, a thing hitherto considered as impracticable. And the teeth were replaced by a new set, worked by internal springs, that injured neither the cheeks nor the remaining portion of the gums.

Humbug.

The present century has been designated by various epithets. Some, in reference to the number of its charitable institutions, have denominated it the age of benevolence; others, estimating the catalogue of great men, whose names adorn its annals, have styled it the age of intellect; a third class, contending for the mighty sovereignty of steam, have made the employment of this power the characteristic of the age. Now, with due deference to these opinions, we think none of them singly sufficient, and we can propose another, grand, all-embracing, all-comprehensive term, by the application of which its distinctive features can be clearly and invariably traced. The age of Humbug we believe may be considered the most appropriate expression.—People may prate about the penetration and attainments of the 19th century, but surely never, since the days of Mahomet, was mankind so prone to be gulled; never was the race of Cheristans so rife; never was credulity so completely open-mouth and indiscriminate in swallowing the grossest delusions. Humbug is to be found every where—in public and in private—in politics and morality—in music and metaphysics—in philosophy and passion—in prose and poetry—in every pursuit and every pastime. Another surprising fact is, that repeated experience is productive of very little benefit. We are deceived once, we hug the delusion for a while, then awake, discover it to be mere trickery, call it humbug, and are duped again. For example, first came Chabert, the incombustible, who inverted the order of Nature, eat fire, digested poison, and imposed his slight of hand on us until somebody with a glimmering of common sense, defied him to swallow phosphorus, prepared by the challenger, which the fire king wisely declined. His quackery has been exposed, he abandoned incombustibility, and turned writer in chief of cholera morbus. After him Animal Magnetism became the order of the day. This beautiful system still has its votaries: persons are fond of imagining themselves magnetically disposed, and love to think that by the gentle friction of the magnetiser's palms, they can penetrate stone walls, and peruse closed volumes. Some lend themselves to these fooleries, until, like habitual liers, they actually believe themselves endowed with the supernatural gifts they have so long vaunted; they become, in fine, infected with the madness of implicit credulity, and are thus rendered important auxiliaries in the propagation of miracles.

Of Humbug in poetry we have, Heaven knows, enough. The nine muses are continually desecrated with bastard effusions. We might advert to newspaper doggrel, but tis needless—only look at the sublime sentimentality of the Lake school, with Wordsworth at its head. This entire race, by poetical retribution, should be smothered in the waters whence they have derived their mawkish inspirations.

As for politics, one half is fabricated of humbug—the banks are a humbug—the title of Locofoco, with its associates Agrarians and Radicals, is a very ingenious humbug. Even Calhoun's want of integrity and talent has a very pitiful humbug, and the New Orleans Bulletin's consistent neutrality a most ill-devised and easily detected humbug. The exclusive patriotism, honour, probity, disinterestedness, intellect &c, of the whigs is one stupendous humbug, and so on to the end of the chapter.

In philosophy delusion is equally prevalent—innate ideas—the mind a tabula rasa—the equality of intellect are all very particularly humbugs. Phrenology is, no, not quite a humbug, or if so, we confess ourselves its dupe; but the transcendental philosophy of Kannt is assuredly the most incomprehensible of philosophic humbugs.

We might go on, and establish the dominion of humbug over every department of art and science, but we have said all that our limits permit, and if we extend this article too far, it will be the means of conviction by being left unread.

MOST WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

Some extraordinary escapes which have recently taken place, have brought my memory to a recollection of an incident told me some time ago by a gentleman who was an eye witness to the circumstance. He relates it thus—That while on his passage from London to Rotterdam, he among some other of the passengers, discovered an object at a considerable distance, which, had his sneakership ever been seen in that quarter, might have been taken for the great Nahant Sea Serpent; but on nearing it, it was discovered to be a cask, and much to their astonishment, every now and then they would see the head, or top, fly off and on. This astonished the Captain so much, that he up helm and ran close aboard, when lo and behold, he was hailed from a man in a ship's hencoop cask; but every moment or two, he would draw his safe-guard (the lid) over him, so as to prevent the sea from entering his frail tub. He was ultimately picked up, and stated he was the only survivor from a ship bound from Jamaica to London, and, while she was sinking he resorted to this barrase on cask, in which he placed himself, and soon found he was buffeting with the waves and on an even keel, having 50 pounds of sugar, 2 bottles of rum, and a bottle of Seltzer water by his side. He had been for this and his cover, he must have perished, as numbers of seas passed over him, which no doubt every precaution to guard against by drawing his little top over his head. He was in this situation for 15 hours, when by the will of of Providence, he was thus discovered, and relieved from his perilous situation.—An old Salt.

AUDACIOUS PIRACY.

Packet ship Susquehanna, ...master,
From Philadelphia for Liverpool, captured by pirates off the Capes of the Delaware.

SUNDAY EVENING, 8 o'clock, Lewes, Oct. 22.

Mr. J Cosser—We have just received information by the pilot boat Mary, per Mr Jas M West and Mr. Edward Maul, two good pilots, that the packet ship Susquehanna, which went to sea at two o'clock yesterday, was captured by a piratical schooner, off the Five Fathoms Bank.

The wind being at the north, she bore off to the southward, and, and at dark was off Indian River.—The ship was by the wind at the time of capture.—The wind has been fresh to the southward ever since, and I have employed an express to go to Milford and Dover Castle, to send the news to Norfolk, so as to enable an armed vessel to cut her off.

It cannot be as far as N. E. at once, as with the shift of wind the pirates may shift their course.

The wind is light, at S W, so I would send up a pilot boat to look for them. I have become responsible for an express by land, and sent a communication to the P. M. at Norfolk.

In great haste yours, &c,
H.F. RODNEY.

P. S. The pirate vessel was a long clipper bore top-sail schooner, painted black—full of men.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY—We cut the following from the Morristown Jerseyman, of the 14th inst.

Nickel, or German Silver—We believe this metal, which is rapidly supplanting silver in the manufacture of wares, has not hitherto been found in any quantity in this country. An ingredient of it has recently been discovered on the farm of Colonel Thomas Muir, and near his forge in Pequannock township. A specimen of the ore will have been left at our office for inspection. It has been analyzed in New York, and pronounced the true metal.
