

Minnie Leines is a Russianese (Russian-Chinese) Rocket scientist of 35 years. Standing at 4'9" and weighing in at 100lbs, Minnie is a fierce, witty and bright blonde who disproves our typical stereotype. Born into a family of both nationalities, Minnie's prospects for success looked rather dim. However, she excelled above the crowd and graduated high school at age 10 and college at the young age of 15. She was recruited by NASA shortly after graduating and has been working there ever since. She is solely responsible for the rocket that sent Eric Herron to Mars in 2011.
