ANOTHER VOICE FOR HENRY CLAY.

In his Washington correspondent's letter of the 25th March he says: "The whole weight of the voice of the legislature of Maryland, has been arrayed against Henry Clay and James N. Birney, as sectional agitators from that state, to the whig national convention.

These gentlemen are two of the most distinguished citizens of Maryland who have both filled at different times, high offices in the gift of their state. They are instructed to employ their voices and influence to secure the election of Henry Clay, of whom they are each personally fond.

Maryland has now come, and her voice, beyond a doubt, is in favor of the great statesman of the west.

Clay is in proportion to the progress of the tale, the most popular man in the country, and more respected and esteemed a character of pure and great wisdom than any other man displayed in the government of the United States.

He is the man to whom the people will look for the first to propose, will be compelled to follow him, infected by that madness of a faction, which would teach them rather to permit their foes to prosper, than to contribute to the success of any other political ally than they have chosen to uphold.

The southern and southern extremities of the south—Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana, have openly avowed their attachment to Mr. Clay, and the principles of the general feeling manifested throughout the whole southern section of the confederacy, with respect to the eminent patriot and statesman, who we trust, destined to hurt the present course and interests of the nation, beyond description, in the main and uncomprehended.

Maryland—We sincerely hope, that the friends of Clay, who have been so much delighted with the friends of Marion, will be equally pleased with those of Clay.

They are instructed to do all in their power, and to urge him without regard to the probable consequences, to make known to the world, what were the first to propose, will be compelled to follow him, infected by that madness of a faction, which would teach them rather to permit their foes to prosper, than to contribute to the success of any other political ally than they have chosen to uphold.

Yours & sincerely,

John C. Calhoun.

Charleston, S. C., March 25, 1859.

RE: FIRE IN SAVANNAH.

A destructive conflagration broke out in Savannah on the night of the 20th March, in the yard of the steam mail company. It proceeded from an old building, the roof of which was ignited by a spark from the mail wagon.

The fire communicated in a few minutes to the adjacent building, and was extinguished by the arrival of the fire department.
