To the readers of the French side of our paper no formal introduction of Mr. LIMIT is required, as he has been for some time the principal contributor to its columns.

THE WAR.

The more moderate of the Northern papers still persist in the preposterous assertion that the people of that section have taken up arms simply to preserve the Union. Now, in the first place, this is not true, and in the next, it it were true, it would not in the slightest degree diminish the enormity of Mr. LINCOLN's conduct. We say it is not true that this war is waged for the maintenance of the Union. The North knows better than that. We may be cruel, indolent, aggressive and fanatical, but we are observed enough to fathom motives, and sensible enough to understand the impossibility of bringing together the ruptured members of the Confederacy, and of keeping them together if they could be momentarily forced into juxtaposition. The Union is the pretext—the subjection of the South once for all to the supremacy of sectional foes is the real object of the war. Equally true is it that if the North really had at heart the perpetuity of the Union, Mr. LINCOLN's policy has been none the less fatuitous and unjustifiable. Unless he is a fatuitous and unjustifiable. Unless he is a fatuitous idiot, which we do not believe, he must be aware that to send armies to occupy the South, and fleets to blockade her ports: to seize on all provisions and other articles destined for the South, to maltreat all who sympathize with us, and to display envenomed hostility to us by every possible manifestation, is not exactly calculated to increase the cohesive affinities between the South and North. LINCOLN, instead of remitting them, is driving in the wedge of separation with all his force. If he has acted as if his real design had been to perpetuate disunion he could have done no better. The following are some of the many similar incidents which have come to our knowledge:

A young lady teacher in one of the public schools of the city has a brother in the New York Seventh Regiment, now in Annapolis. Yesterday she received a letter from Sir Mr. Tuesday she received a letter from Sir Mr. Tuesday, announcing that two remaining brothers, living residents of that place, had joined the Union. She herself has determined to go to the Southern army. She herself has tendered her services as nurse to the Confederate States Government, and thus the family will be equally divided—two on the side of the Union, and two on that of the Union and the Constitution. God grant that the brethren may never meet in battle."—Buffalo Commercial.

CONCERT TO-MORROW NIGHT.—We understand that a grand vocal and instrumental concert will be given in the Old Fellows' Hall to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, in aid of the Military Fair. Many of the finest amateurs in our city have generously proffered their services on the occasion.

The steamer J. A. Cotton, from Bayou Sara, arrived yesterday morning, having on board the Hunter Guards, from Clinton, La., and the Pelican Rifles, from Baton Rouge. The J. A. C. also brought down a quantity of arms and ammunition.

The Pelican Rifles number 75 men, rank and file, and are commanded by W. F. Tunnard, Captain; J. P. Vellinny, First Lieutenant; J. B. Irwin, Second Lieutenant. The non-commissioned officers not being elected.

The Hunter Guards number 56 men, rank and file, commanded by W. E. Hunter, Captain; G. A. Nesfus, First Lieutenant; E. J. Pullum, Second Lieutenant. The non-commissioned officers elected.

The steamer Grand Duke, which arrived yesterday evening from Shreveport, brought down from that place the Pelican Grays and Shreveport Rangers. They are commanded as follows:

PELICAN GRAYS—Captain, J. M. Williams; First Lieutenant, H. Lacey; Second Lieut., J. Wells; First Sergeant, A. W. Jew; Second Sergeant, W. Jones; Third Sergeant, W. Kinney; First Corporal, L. M. Dunham; and 101 privates. Balance of non-commissioned officers not elected.

SHREVEPORT RANGERS—Captain, J. B. Gilmore; First Lieutenant, W. A. Lacey; Second Lieut., O. J. Wells; First Sergeant, A. W. Jew; Second Sergeant, W. Jones; Third Sergeant, W. Kinney; First Corporal, L. M. Dunham; and 101 privates. Balance of non-commissioned officers not elected.

Dispatches received at Louisville announce that the steamers Mars, Captain James Good, and Queen of the West, Captain Joseph Scott have been detained at Helena, Arkansas, in retaliation for the seizure of arms at Cincinnati destined for the State of Arkansas. Both steamers were bound from New Orleans for Cincinnati, and are commanded by citizens of Covington, Kentucky.

A detachment of 400 troops of the Kentucky Regiment arrived at Nashville on the 26th, and met with a most enthusiastic reception.

The following dispatch was received on the 26th April by the Collector of Customs at Cincinnati:

WASHINGTON, April 25.

Peter Sherlock, Esq.—You will grant no clearances for vessels leaving Cincinnati for any port in Mississippi, Louisiana, or Alabama.

(Signed) S. CHASE,
Secretary of U. S. Treasury.

ALLIANCE WITH THE CONFEDERATE STATES.—Says the Richmond Whig of the 26th:

The Convention yesterday, by an almost unanimous vote, formed a sportsmanal alliance, offensive and defensive, with the Confederate States. Every consideration of sympathy, policy and necessity dictated the measure. We have a common cause and common battles to fight, and it is indispensable to success, that we have united and harmonious councils.

ROMANCE OF THE TIMES.—Out of the excitement and turmoil that is now throbbing throughout the nation, a myriad domestic histories are being woven. The following one are being woven. The following one are being woven. The following one
