

A

NEW HISTORY
OF Gloucestershire.

COMPRISING THE TOPOGRAPHY,

ANTIQUITIES,
CURIOSITIES,

PRODUCE, TRADE, and MANUFACTURES

OF THAT COUNTY;

The Foundation-Charters and Endowments of Abbies, and other Religious Houses;

The FOUNDATION of the BISHOPRICK, &c. with a short
Biographical Account of the BISHOPS and DEANS;

The Names of the PATRONS and INCUMBENTS, and the Antient and Present Value of all the ECCLESIASTICAL BENEFICES;

CHARTERS of INCORPORATION, and CIVIL GOVERNMENT
Of the several BOROUGHS;

DESCRIPTIONS of the PRINCIPAL SEATS;

DESCENT of the MANORS; GENEALOGIES of FAMILIES,

With their ARMS, MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS, &c.

In the Course of this WORK is given

The History of every Parish, Tithing, and Extraparochial Place in the County.

A L S O T H E

ECCLESIASTICAL, CIVIL, AND MILITARY

HISTORY of the CITY of GLOUCESTER,

From its FIRST FOUNDATION to the PRESENT TIME.

With a Copy of DOMESDAY-BOOK for GLOUCESTERSHIRE, now first printed in the Language, and after the Manner of the Original.

Illustrated with a MAP of the COUNTY, VIEWS of GENTLEMEN'S SEATS, &c. &c.

Par fit Fortuna Labori.

CIRENCESTER: PRINTED BY SAMUEL RUDDER. 1779.

T O T H E

R I G H T H O N O U R A B L E

H E N R Y Earl B A T H U R S T.

M Y L O R D,

IT was your Lordship's Noble Father suggesting the Expediency of Revising Sir ROBERT ATKYNS'S G L O U C E S T E R S H I R E, that gave Being to this Publication; and I beg Leave to present it to Your Lordship, his only surviving Son and Successor.

I am not so vain, My Lord, as to think it worth your Acceptance, but if its Merit were to be estimated by the Greatness of the Subject, and the Time and Labour it has cost me, it might have a better Claim to your Patronage.

Sir ROBERT ATKYNS'S Book was well received by the County, and should the present Publication be considered only as an Improvement upon it, my Ambition will be sufficiently gratified. Your Opinion, My Lord, will fix its Character, and having your Approbation, there will be Nothing to fear from Men of Judgment and Candor.

I have the Honour to be,

With the utmost Deference and Respect,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's very dutiful and obedient humble Servant,

SAMUEL RUDDER.

P R E F A C E.

SIR Robert Atkyns's Ancient and Present State of Gloucestershire was published in the year 1712. The extreme scarcity and great price of it encouraged the editor to offer the present work under the title of A NEW HISTORY OF GLOUCESTERSHIRE: Soon after his proposals were given out, another person republished sir Robert's book, without the least addition or improvement. This is a fact very necessary to be stated, but it wants neither comment nor remark. The editor of the present work pursuing his plan, has at length completed it. How far the title he has assumed can be supported, must be left to the decision of the public: He does not, however, mean to insinuate that he has made no use of sir Robert Atkyns's book; on the contrary, he has adopted that gentleman's method of alphabetical arrangement, and has availed himself of whatever was useful. It is incumbent on him also to acknowledge many obligations to other writings and compilations.

The preliminary and introductory part is drawn from various sources; the monastic history chiefly from Stevens's Supplement to sir William Dugdale's Monasticon, and doctor Burnet's History of the Reformation. The other introductory matters are selected from Camden, Selden, lord Lyttelton, and various writers on the antient state of affairs in Britain.

The History of the county, in the three grand divisions of Cotswold, Vale, and Forest, with the account of its trade, is new; and that part of Domesday which relates to Gloucestershire, and concludes the General History, is now first printed in the language, and after the contracted manner of the original, so far as with common printing types could be effected. For the copy of that record the editor is indebted to Mr. Samuel Dixon, of Norfolk-street, London, who procured and sent it to him; but it was afterwards very carefully collated with lord chief justice Hale's Fac Simile copy, deposited in Lincoln's Inn library; and this, it is presumed, will be thought a curious and valuable acquisition.

The History of the city and diocese of Gloucester, making together 129 pages, is newly drawn up from materials collected by the late reverend Mr. Furney, archdeacon of Surrey, and communicated by Mr. Rogers of Gloucester.

The parochial History follows next in order; and the editor, to be correct, and to note every thing observable, has visited the several parishes, and made diligent enquiries. He has given an account of their antiquities and natural curiosities, and has attempted to give the etymology of the names of places, agreeing with or dissenting from sir Robert Atkyns occasionally.

In this part, it is presumed, he has sometimes succeeded; but to investigate the meaning of names is no very easy province. Great length of time produces changes in circumstances and things which otherwise might give light to the origin and signification of names; and vulgar pronunciation and incorrect writing have so distorted them, that many at present have very little resemblance to their original. The peculiarities of situation, produce, and soil, were proper circumstances from whence to derive the appellation of places; but where nature afforded no such obvious assistance, the name-giver had one grand resource, which was to add some common termination, as don, ton, lege, ley, berg, &c. to the proprietor's name; and as this was very easily done, so was it commonly practiced. There are certain names, however, which bid defiance to explanation; and if the editor has sometimes failed in his conjectures, no wonder, especially in a matter of so much uncertainty.

In the parochial History, he has also given a description of the market-towns, and most remarkable places, wherein sir Robert Atkyns was defective; but to descend to a minute description of every little village would have been ridiculous, as many of them have nothing more than their names, bearings, and distances to distinguish them; and without differentia in the subject, a disgusting sameness in expression will inevitably recur. Let the brightest genius exert his abilities on a few inconsiderable places, and he will feel the truth of this assertion. A description of two or three will indifferently suit almost all the rest, and he that says much of them, resembles one that talks a great deal about trifles.

The descent of the manors generally commences with an abstract from Domesday, faithfully, but as literally as possible, translated from the original. Herein sir Robert Atkyns was exceedingly imperfect. He has taken too great liberty with that record, and instead of translating the whole passages, gives a paraphrase of part only.

He usually takes the quantity of land specified in Domesday to be precisely what the manor was taxed at; but he was greatly mistaken, as the record itself will prove concerning Alveston, Newnham, Guiting, and several other places. Besides these mistakes, there are many instances of his applying the Domesday accounts to places which they have no relation to, and not a few of their being totally omitted: But it is unnecessary to enumerate them here, as they are commonly taken notice of in the accounts of those places where the mistakes have happened.

It was chiefly in the historical accounts of the successive owners of manors and estates that sir Robert Atkyns's book was of service to the editor of this work; for as the short and summary manner in which that part is written would not admit of great variety of expression, he has very commonly used the words of that author, thinking it unnecessary, without particular reason, to affect a different language. Sir Robert derived his accounts from the escheators books, original fines, and other records, to which he had free access; and, excepting a few mistakes which might happen in transcribing, he abstracts them very faithfully. The editor has not only corrected those mistakes, so far as they have occurred to him, but also filled up some chasms from the records, and quoted his authorities in both instances; but where no authority is given, the credibility in general rests on sir Robert Atkyns. The additions in descents since sir Robert's time have been carefully made, and may safely be relied on; and genealogical accounts of families, with their arms, so far as they could be procured, are subjoined to the respective estates of which such families are owners.

The next head principally concerns the clergy. Ecclesiastical benefices are greatly enhanced since sir Robert's time. Here will be found the name of the patron, and the present value of every living, as nearly as could be ascertained, together with all other particulars respecting the church, that are either curious or useful.

Sir Robert had taken notice of a few monuments in the churches for eminent persons, but the editor conceiving it would be more satisfactory to give the memorials at large, has accordingly placed under a distinct head many curious monumental inscriptions, and the arms found with them, so exactly taken, that the particularities, and in some instances the errors, in the original, are designedly preserved in the copy. These exhibit very useful anecdotes of family history and connections, and making the living acquainted with the dead, not only shew us what they were, but often teach us what we ourselves ought to be. Some hold monumental inscriptions in light estimation, but it was the opinion of the author of the Plain Dealer, 'That every stone that we look upon in the repository of past ages is both an entertainment and a monitor.'

Perhaps some inscriptions have found admittance on account of the arms which accompany them, whilst others have little more to recommend them than the particular cast of the writer, or of the times when they were written. In this department there was no rule for selection, and the taste even of men of judgment is so very different, that it is possible the editor may be equally censured for admitting so many, and for not inserting more. The laws of this country take cognizance of moving or defacing a monumental stone in the church, as of an injury done to the family of the deceased, and the placing memorials in a book seems the most effectual security against such injuries. But this part of the work, it is said, is likely to be extended, with a view very different from the present publication, by a gentleman whose employment in the heralds office enables him to answer every expectation. Till that gentleman shall have finished his undertaking, the editor flatters himself that the present collection may prove entertaining, and afterwards serve as an humble attendant upon it.

Next to the monumental inscriptions, follows a list of benefactions to the poor, and other public charities, continued down to the present time, the utility of which is too obvious to need explanation.

Then follows the rate of the public taxes, and the comparative state of population in each parish, between the time when sir Robert Atkyns made his collections, and the present. Under this head the editor has given, in a variety of instances, the true proportion between the annual baptisms and burials, and the whole number of inhabitants, which shews the degrees of healthiness in different situations.

The alarm lately spread of the nation's depopulating, induced the editor to compare the average of births and burials about seventy years ago, with those of the present time, taking the authority of the registers in both instances; but there are a few parishes of which accounts could not be obtained, some of the registers being lost, or imperfectly kept. The result of the comparison is, that the inhabitants of Gloucestershire are very considerably increased during that period, but not uniformly so. In some places their numbers are more than doubled, whilst in others they continue nearly the same. This is owing to different causes: The growth of trade and improvements in agriculture encourage population, whilst the decline of manufactures produces a contrary effect.

During the before-mentioned period, agriculture has been much improved, particularly in the hill country; and in the clothing and manufacturing parts, trade has equally increased: But in the Vale, most of those inclosures that in the former part of this period were corn-fields, have since been laid down to pasture, which very sensibly affected population; and tho' even some of those places where that has happened, are more populous than they were before, yet the alteration has prevented them from increasing so much as they would have done; for dairy and grazing-farms furnish less employment than tillage, and many of the younger people have migrated to the hill-country, or to market-towns.
of

Another impediment to population has crept in during the latter part of this period, which is, the laying of two or three farms into one. The little parish of Aston Subedge is chiefly in tillage, and sir Robert Atkyns reports it to have consisted of 24 houses, and 104 inhabitants. By an exact account taken in 1773, the householders were 20, and the inhabitants only 63; and upon inquiry into the cause of this strange declension, it was given for a reason, that the parish had just then been inclosed, and seven farms, of which it consisted before, being laid into four, the occupiers of three little farms, with their families, had left the place. There are two or three other instances in the county, beside this, of a like decrease of inhabitants.

Here some notice should be taken of a practice prevailing in some places, lest it become more general, and produce a train of evil consequences to the community. It is said, that in some parishes the lords of manors, and the principal landholders, considering it as a piece of refined policy, have pulled down their cottage-houses, or suffered them to fall, on purpose to drive away the poor miserable inhabitants, and to prevent the younger sort from marrying and settling in their own parishes. Miserable indeed! to be deserted and abandoned by those whose lands they have cultivated, and whose granaries they have filled. Miserable! to be expelled from the place of their nativity, as unworthy to breathe the air in common with their lords and masters; who, deaf to the calls of humanity, and inattentive to their own real interest, seem not to be sensible that without the labourer's hand their ample fields would be of no value, and that rents advance from labour and improved cultivation. If the poor are burthensome, they should be relieved, and not extirpated. The industrious part of them are the most profitable members of the community; the idle should be reclaimed; but that will never be effected by penal laws, whilst our towns and villages swarm with alehouses. It is there they spend their time and money; there their morals are corrupted; there the sot, the poacher, the petty thief and highwayman are gradually formed; and to those seminaries of vice we chiefly owe the evils complained of among the lower class of people. Strike at the root of them; put down the alehouse, not the cottage, in your village; so shall you soon find the poor more industrious, more honest, and less burthensome.

This is a matter highly deserving the attention of the magistrate, upon whose conduct, in the execution of his office, the morals of the people, and the well-being of the state so much depend. It is a vulgar error that the drunkard injures nobody but himself: Hundreds are connected with him, and the community suffers more from one character of that sort, than it is benefited by two sober persons. The editor has been led as it were inadvertently into these reflections, and tho' they may not be particularly applicable to Gloucestershire, yet as a general well-wisher to his country, he hopes they are not altogether unseasonable.

But to return from this digression: The Appendix stands after the parochial History, and consists of a variety of charters and papers of considerable length, taken from sir Robert Atkyns's Gloucestershire, and other sources, and are proper to be referred to occasionally. Some of them were originally written in Latin, but are here given in the English language, exactly as they were translated by sir Robert, except one or two of them, particularly the charter 'to the priory of Leonard Stanley, which in sir Robert's book is blended and confused with part of the charter to the priory of Newent. The editor has rectified that mistake, and added from the Monasticon what was omitted.

Next follows a copious and useful Index, to which the reader must have recourse to find the tithings and hamlets, which are not placed in alphabetical order in the body of the work, but inserted in the parishes to which they respectively belong. By the Index also will be found the arms of the gentry, and the principal persons and things treated of in the course of the work. With respect to the arms found upon monuments, they are in general blazoned as they appear there; but sculptors and painters are not always the best heralds, and if they have made mistakes, they should not be imputed to the editor. Besides, Guillim observes, that 'So great is the resemblance of oftentimes of things borne in coat armour, which yet in their existence are much differing, that a man well seen in heraldry may commit an error in blazoning of them.' Add to this, that colours fade in a long course of time, and as in a few instances the editor was to rely solely on the present appearance of them on monuments in the churches, he offers this apology, if he has at any time mistaken one colour for another, as blue for green, or vice versa.

Lastly, there is interspersed through the body of the work, a curious set of prints of the chief seats in the county, for which the editor returns sincere thanks to those gentlemen to whom they are address'd, and at whose expence they were engraven. As they are well executed, they make a valuable part of the work, and together with the correct map of the county, will undoubtedly prove acceptable to the public. He laments, however, the loss of the plates of Stoke Giffard, and King's Weston, by the deaths of lord Bote-tourt, and lord Clifford; and Rendcombe House was designed to have made its appearance in this History; but the person employ'd to take the drawing, could not be prevailed on to finish it in time.

The editor has now passed over in review the different heads of his work, and is far from being of opinion with Mela, an antient Roman geographer, who speaking of his own country, says, De Italia, magis quia Ordo exigit, quam quia monstrari egeat, pauca dicuntur, nota sunt omnia. — If many things generally known by the inhabitants of Gloucestershire be taken notice of in this work, they should not be considered as unnecessary or superfluous, because they are so known; for the book may fall into hands to whom the information may be acceptable. On the other hand, it would be altogether as unreasonable in strangers to take exception against such things as are serviceable chiefly to the inhabitants of this county; because it was for their use they were inserted. In short, what may seem trifling to one class of readers, another may value and esteem; and it was the editor's intention to accommodate himself to all.

Thus much he thought necessary by way of preface. How he has acquitted himself in the compilation, will be determined by the public voice. All he will venture to say further is, that he has endeavoured to investigate Truth, perhaps with various success. If he differ from others in matter of fact, he generally gives his authority; if in opinion, he thought himself at liberty to declare it with temper and moderation.

He affects not a cold indifference to the reception which his labours may meet with, for that would be unnatural, and an indignity to the highest tribunal in matters of Literature. Conscious of his imperfections, he is sensible he may have fallen into error; but he has traduced no character, nor wilfully misrepresented any transaction; and he doubts not but the generous public will extend that indulgence to him, which others in similar cases have experienced.

CIRENCESTER,
December 1, 1778.

SAM. RUDDER.

A D D E N D A E T C O R R I G E N D A.

DURING the Printing of so large a Work, some Alterations in Property have happened by Death and Alienations, which cannot be imputed for Mistakes to the Editor. They principally relate to the following Places, viz.

ABBENHALI. By the death of John Howell, esq; in 1778, this manor passed to his grandson, Edmund Probyn, of Newland in this county, esq; who is the present lord of the manor, and whose arms are emblazoned under the account of monuments in the church of Newland.

ARLINGHAM. Mrs. Yate dying in the year 1776, this manor is vested in lady Mill, Powell Snell, of Guiting-Grange in this county, esq; and Mrs. Eltcourt, of Burton Hill, in the county of Wilts, whose family name was Yate.

BARNSLEY. Mrs. Cassandra Perrot died in June, 1778, and by her will devised this manor and her other estates to James Mulgrave, of the Middle Temple, esq; one of her nearest relations, who now resides at Barnsley-Park. He bears Azure, six annulets, 3, 2, 1, Or.

BATSFORD. The following monumental inscriptions were received too late to be inserted in the account of this parish:

To the Memory
Of The Right Hon^{ble} RICHARD FREEMAN,
Lord High Chancellor of Ireland,
And ELIZABETH His Wife,
Daughter of S^r. ANTHONY KECK:
MARY Wife of WALTER EDWARDS Esq^r.
Their only Child;
ANNA Daughter of RICH^d MARSHALL Esq^r.
Second Wife of the said L^d. Chancellor FREEMAN;
RICHARD FREEMAN Esq^r. their only Son.
And ANNA their Daughter;
MARG^t. ELIZth. FREEMAN,
Wife of the said RICHARD FREEMAN;
And WALTER EDWARDS FREEMAN Esq^r.
Eldest Son of the abovenam'd WALTER EDWARDS, by MARY his Wife.
This Monument is dedicated by THOMAS EDWARDS FREEMAN Esq^r.
Surviving Son of the said WALTER EDWARDS
Ann. Dom. 1756.

The arms on this monument are the same with those given under the short account of this family, p. 266; and they are here accompanied with this well-chosen motto, very proper for a lord chancellor, NEC PRECE NEC PRETIO.

To

To the Memory of the Rev^d. THOMAS BURTON, D. D.
Rector of this Parish,
Prebendary of Durham,
and

Arch-Deacon of St. Davids,
Who dyed July 16, 1767,

In the fifty seventh Year of his Age,
And lies interr'd by his own Direction,
In the adjoining Church-Yard.

The Soundness of his Faith
Was evidenced by the best of Proofs
The exemplariness of his Practice.

The serious, friendly, & affectionate Attention
With which he conscientiously discharged
Every Branch of his Ministerial Function, Engaged the Hearts, & influenced the Manners
Of all his People.

Thankful for the good things of this Life,
Which the Providence of GOD
Had amply bestow'd upon Him,
He employ'd them to Purposes
Of real Usefulness.

He was a Friend, a Father to the Poor,
A generous, indulgent Maister
To a faithful & observant Household,
A Lover of Hospitality,
And a chearful Promoter

Of every social, every liberal Affection.
Justice, Humanity, Benevolence, & Charity
Mark'd the Character

of
This excellent Man.

Whose Life was so uniformly Good,
That Death, tho' sudden, found him not unprepared.

Blessed shall that Servant be,
Whom his Lord when He cometh,
Shall find so Prepared.

BISLEY, PITCHCOMBE, STROUD, LYPIAT.
On the death of John Stephens, esq; in the year 1778,

Near this Place are deposited the Remains of
ALLEN EARL BATHURST, and CATHERINE LADY BATHURST.

In the Legislative & Judicial departments of the great Council of the Nation he served his Country 69 Years, wth honour, ability, & diligence.
Judgment & taste directed his Learning,
Humanity tempered his Wit,
Benevolence guided all his Actions.
He died regretted by most, & praised by all,
The 16th day of September, 1775, aged 91.

Catherine his Consort, by her milder Virtues, added Lustre to his great Qualities;
Her domestic Oeconomy extended his Liberality,
Her judicious Charity his Munificence,
Her prudent government of her family, his hospitality.
She received the reward of her Exemplary life
The 8th day of June 1768, aged 79.

Married July the 6th. 1704.

Beneath the table are the following arms: Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Bathurst; 2d and 3d, Argent, on a cross of St. George gules five escallops Or, for Villiers. A scutcheon of pretence, quarterly, 1st and 4th, Barry of six argent and gules, a canton ermine, for Apsley; 2d and 3d, Gules, a bend between two escallops Or, for Petre.—The crest, supporters, and motto, are set down in the short genealogical account of his lordship's family, p. 355.

It is not improper to observe, that in May 1777, since the account of Cirencester was printed, some workmen, in digging a cellar in Dyer-street, now under the shop and warehouses belonging to Mess. Robert and William Croome, discovered a curious tessellated pavement about eighteen feet square, of which they had destroy'd nearly half before it was taken notice of. The remainder was in good preservation, and being washed, was exposed for a few days to public view. It had a checkered border round it, about fourteen inches broad, composed of blue and white stones of an inch square. Within the border, it consisted also of blue and white stones, and of red bricks, but in much smaller squares, worked into wreaths and other ornaments. It was divided into four compartments by the artful arrangement and disposition of the different coloured stones and bricks into lines of hearts, linked together, and interlaced fretty-wise, which had a very pretty effect. The center of the pavement is still preserved. It consists of an octagon border, inclosing a wreathed figure, with rays pointed to the angles of the octagon. There was also a smaller figure of the same kind in the middle of each compartment; and the pavement together had very much the resemblance of a rich Turkey carpet, the first idea of which I apprehend was suggested by a work of this kind. This pavement lay about six feet below the surface of the ground; and these manors were, by his will, vested in his nephew, Thomas-Baghot Delabere, esq; whose family arms are emblazoned under the account of Southam, in the parish of Cleeve.

BROCKWORTH. The following is the inscription upon the monument mentioned to be in the chancel at Brockworth:

HIC SITUS EST ILLE HONORABILIS CHRISTOPHERUS GUISE IN HOC AGRO GLOCEST. MILES AC BARONET' NEC NON AB UTROQ. PRÆLUSTRIUM PROAVORUM SANGUINE LONGISSIMA SERIE PERINSIGNIS. VIR ERAT NON VULGARITER ERUDITUS, INDOLIS PERACUTÆ, MEMORIÆ TENACIS, INGENII VIVIDI, IUDICII PERQUAM SUBACTI. HINC PROPTER EXIMIAS DOTES FIDEM FORTITUDINEMQ. PROVINCIÆ SUÆ PRO-PRÆFECTUS ALTER A REGIO DIPLOMATE CONSTITUTUS EST UNDE POST-QUAM FIDELIS ILLE PATRIOTA REGI PATRIÆ SIBI SUI SQ. SATIS FECISSET ET INTERIORES PROVINCIÆ SUÆ COMITATUS VRBEM GLOCESTRIÆ CIRCUMIACENTES, AB URBIS SERVITUDINE PERANTIQUA, INIQUISQ. CIVIUM PRIVILEGIIS EMANCIPASSET, IMMUNESQ. POSTERIS PERLIQUISSET, SAL. ÆRA M.DC.LXX. ÆT. 53. HEU NIMIS PROPERANT FATA. PRETIOSÆ CUIUS MEMORIÆ UNICUS FILIUS AC HAERES IOHANNES GUISE MILES AC BARONETUS HOC MONUMENTUM PARENTAVIT.

CIRENCESTER. To the account of the manor and hundred of Cirencester, with the Seven Hundreds, (pp. 354, 355) should be subjoined as follows: Allen earl Bathurst dying in 1775, was succeeded in title and estate by his lordship's only surviving son, Henry earl Bathurst, who is lord of the manor and hundred of Cirencester, and likewise of the Seven Hundreds, by an accommodation between his lordship and the other claimants. There is a monument erected in this parish church for the late earl Bathurst and his lady, with their busts in white marble, and a weeping genius between them. Upon the tablet is the following inscription:

there remained also part of the plastered walls of the house to which it belonged, which appeared to have been painted, but the figures were so decayed by time, that it was impossible to form any idea of the subject. It is very remarkable that one corner of the pavement lay next the street, and about eight or ten yards on the north side of it, the workmen found a road made of lime and gravel; from which circumstances it appears that antiently the streets of the town lay in a different direction from what they do at present. This was undoubtedly a Roman work, and must be referred to the last-mentioned order of Roman pavements, in the short account of them, p. 348.

DIMMOCK. The blank left for Mrs. Cam's arms in the close of the account of this manor, should be filled up thus: Paly of six, argent and azure. And in the account of population, the present number of inhabitants should be 1282.

FLAXLEY. The antient manor house, taken notice of under this head, was burnt down in April, 1777.

FRAMPTON upon Severn. At the close of the note, p. 453, concerning the late Mr. Richard Clutterbuck, read,---He died in 1775, and devised this estate to Mr. Phillips, of Gloucester, and to his wife, who was Mr. Clutterbuck's niece, for their lives; the remainder to Nathaniel Winchcombe, of Stroud, esq; and his heirs.

LITTLETON upon Severn. By a late purchase, this manor is the property of Sir Henry Lippincot, who was created a baronet in the year 1778, since the printing of the account of Stoke Bishop, where that gentleman resides, and under which head his name occurs.

OLEPEN. To the genealogical account of the family of Daunt, in the note to p. 587, add as follows: By the death of Thomas Daunt, son of Thomas and Elizabeth, in the year 1777, his nephew, Thomas Daunt, esq; succeeded to this estate, and is the present lord of the manor of Olepen.

OZLEWORTH. By the death of James Clutterbuck, esq; this estate is vested in Mrs. Clutterbuck, his widow.

WORMINGTON. Nathaniel Jefferys, late of London, esq; purchased this manor, and the advowson of the church, of the late Mr. Partridge, and presented the reverend Mr. Thomas Stedman to the rectory. He also purchased Wormington Grange of lord Aylmer, so that he is proprietor of the greater part of the parish, and resides at the Grange. He gives Ermine, a lion rampant sable, a canton of the second within a double border argent.

Page.	Column.	Line.
6	1	35	for rents houses and, read rents and houses.
6	2	45	for we, read were.
7	1	51	for for, read from.
11	2	16	for diocesess, read dioceses.
13	2		In the explanation of berry, read a camp or fortification.
20	2	43	for Botloc, read Dudston and King's Barton
24	1	45	for every Thursday, read on Thursday.
33	1	84	for a bible, read the bible.
59	2	3	for that pursue, read pursuing.
65	2	37	for writtin, read written.
66	1	17	for soth, read sorts; and in the 2d line of the 2d column of the note, for conjecture, read conjuncture.
67	2	3&5	for prestitt, read p'stitt; and in the 16th line of the same column, for posuit, read posuit; also, in the 2d line, for vill'e, read vill'ni.
82	1	11	for era, read æra.
84	2	6	from the bottom, read 9 E. 1.

P.	C.	L.
92	2	2	of the note, for alured, read allured.
98	1		last line, read 13 E. 1.
103	2	43	for wishfully, read wistfully.
137	2	31	for within, read with.
139	1	6	for legantine, read legatine.
143	2	6	for Linton, read Ministerworth.
161	2	12	for roundels, read roundlets.
165	1	52	for prebends, read prebendaries.
167	2	13	for that inscription, see it more correct under Withington.
171	1	17	for Trinity college, read King's college.
175	2	38	for sve, read svæ.
233	1	30	for Salisbury, read Shrewsbury.
239	1	22	for fable, read azure.
242	1	27	for Somerviles, read following.
264	2	12	for earl of Talbot, read earl Talbot.
271	2	7	after seven hides, read and one virgate. In Eldbertone five hides.
281	2	9	for a chevron, read a fefs.
285	2	7	for a bend wavy, read a bend wavy fable.
351	1	39	for No. 1. read No. 31.
353	1	8	for 1775, read 1774.
354	2	18	for his, read her; and line 28, for earl of Bathurst, read earl Bathurst.
355	2	13	of the note, for earl of Bathurst, read earl Bathurst.
368	1	34	In the account of population, for 3878, read 3988. This mistake was occasioned by the family in the workhouse having been intirely omitted.
374	2	19	for gules, read azure.
387	1	23	for York, read Canterbury.
421	2	4	from the bottom, for Elliot, read Elton.
425	2	13	for quicked, read quickened.
426	1	40	for against, read in favour of; and line 42, for 1 R. 3. read 1 H. 7.
429	2	32	for dures, read duros.
474	2	48	for Newland, read Newnham.
476	2	15	for daughters, read sisters.
495	2	49	read and his sister, Mrs. Wilmot.
528	1	19	for 1776, read 1766.
546	1	44	for Thomas-Edwards Freeman of Batford, read John Freeman, of Hidcote.
548	2	32	for least, read left.
563	2	30	dele it.
634	2	44	for George, read Charles.
643	2	5&6	read Thomas Estcourt, esq; is lord of the manor.
675	2	33	for George, read Gregory.
716	2	49	for Sheldon, read Selden.
775	2	24	for 32 E. 3. read 32 E. 1.
842	1	1	of the note, for paternally, as it is printed in part of the impression, read maternally.

In the charter of the corporation of Tewkesbury, for community, read commonalty, throughout.

P R E L I M I N A R Y

M A T T E R S.

OF RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS, &c.

THERE were six mitred abbies in this county; those of Gloucester, Cirencester, Winchcombe, Tewkesbury, Hayles, and Flaxley. The three first were peeral, the heads of which had seats in parliament till the dissolution. This was more than a proportionable share for the county, since there were only twenty-five abbats and two priors that held by barony in the whole kingdom. Besides these, there were many other religious houses of almost every denomination, which are mentioned in this book, under the names of the several places where they stood. But a short account of the rise, progress, and dissolution of the monastic state in general belongs more properly to this part of the work.

By religious houses I mean cathedral churches, abbeys, priories, colleges, preceptories, &c. Few are ignorant of what is meant by cathedral churches, but the names and distinctions of the rest are not so well understood.

An ABBEY was a society of religious people, over whom an abbat, [from the Syriac abba, father] or abbes, presided as head. In every abbey was a prior immediately under the abbat, who, during the abbat's absence, had the chief care of the house. Under him was the sub-prior, and in great abbeys the third and fourth prior, all removable at the will of the abbat. They had also four great obedientarii, or officers, viz. 1. The sacrista or sexton, who took care of the buildings, the vessels, the books, and vestments of the church. 2. The thesaurarius, or burfar, who received all the rents and revenues of the monastery, and disbursed all expences. 3. The cellarer, who provided food for the house. 4. The camerarius, or chamberlain, who found the clothing. Besides these, there were the almoner, infirmerer, and other inferior officers.

A PRIORY had for its head a prior or prioress, who was as absolute as any abbat in his abbey. These were called conventual priories, because the head was chosen by the convent; but they could not proceed to election without a Conge d'elire from their patron; which is also the reason why the king grants a Conge d'elire, in order to the election of bishops, for the crown is the patron of all bishopricks. In some of these were also a sub-prior, sacrista, &c. as in the abbey. But there was a subordinate kind of priory, being only a cell to some great abbey. In such, the prior was placed and removed at the will of the abbat-sovereign. Alien-priorities, or priorities-alien, had their rise in this manner: when estates were given to any foreign monastery, the monks, that they might have faithful stewards of their lands, built a convenient house upon them, for the reception of a small convent, and then sent over such a number of their own house as they thought fit, constituting a prior over them.

B

such

COLLEGES, or COLLEGIATE CHURCHES, had a certain number of Secular Canons, living under the government of a dean, warden, provost, or master. There belonged to these foundations sometimes chaplains, singing-men, clerks and choristers.

CELLS were of two kinds; some, where an abbat, or prior of a great monastery, had lands lying at a distance from it, on which account they found it convenient to send two or three monks to inspect the revenues of the place, and to perform divine service, allowing them a maintenance at discretion, and removing them at pleasure. Other cells received their revenues, to their own use, of the head of some great monastery, who presented to, and visited them, as their patron.

PRECEPTORIES, or COMMANDERIES, were houses or cells to their principal mansions in London, erected by the Knights Templars, or Hospitallers, on their manors, in which some of their fraternity inhabited, who were under the government of the preceptors or commanders, and were to take care of the lands and rents, belonging to their order, in the neighbouring country.

FRIERIES differed from monasteries, as they were not endowed with any certain revenues. They generally belonged to the Franciscans and Dominicans, of the mendicant orders.

CHANTERIES were small chapels, commonly built adjoining to the sides or ends of churches, to which lands were given for priests to pray for the souls of the donors, their ancestors and heirs; but these chanteries were not incorporate.

HOSPITALS were for the relief and maintenance of the sick and impotent, who were lay-brethren, or sisters.

GUILDS, from the Anglo-Saxon word gild, which signifies a society, were maintained by the yearly contributions of well-disposed persons; but the maintenance of the priest was settled by the first founder.

The monastic orders belonging to these several houses were either religious or military; of the first were all monks and canons. Of the monks the most antient are

The BENEDICTINES, or those that follow the rule of St. Benedict, or Bennet, who was born at Nursi, in Italy, about the year 480. He founded twelve monasteries in his own country, the chief whereof was at Mont Cassin, and gave them a rule, approved by pope Gregory the Great, A. D. 595. They were called the Black Monks, from the colour of their habit, which was a long, black, loose, stuff coat, with a cowl or hood of the same, and a scapular. They wore a white flannel habit under it, and boots on their legs. Of this order were the three abbies of Gloucester, Tewkesbury, and Winchcombe; and the priorities of Stanley St. Leonard, Deerhurst, and Newent, in this county; as were indeed all the cathedral priorities, except Carlisle, or Carlisle, and most of the richest abbies in the kingdom. Odo bishop of Cluny, in Burgundy, thinking some things too remiss in St. Bennet's rule, about A. D. 912, took upon him to reform them, which was the rise of

The CLUNIAN order. Most of our English houses of this order were subordinate to the abbey of Cluny, or some other foreign monastery; and, as alien-priorities, were seized during the wars with France, but were afterwards made indigenæ, and discharged from all subjection to any foreign abbey. Their habit was little different from that of the Benedictines.

The CARTHUSIANS were also a branch of the Benedictines, whose rule, with the addition of many severities, they followed. Bruno, a native of Cologn in Germany, first instituted this order at Chartreuse, in the diocese of Grenoble, about A. D. 1080; whence their monasteries were corruptly called charter-houses. They never eat flesh, always wore a hair shirt next their skin, and none ever stirred out of the monastery, except the prior and procurator. Their habit was all white, except a plaited cloak, which was black.

The CISTERTIAN order was so called, from Cistercium, or Citeaux, in the bishoprick of Chalons, where it was first planted, A. D. 1098, by Robert Harding, an Englishman, abbat of Molisme, in Burgundy. They were sometimes called Bernardines, because St. Bernard was a great propagator of this order; also, White Monks, because their habit was a white cassock, with a narrow scapular; but they sometimes wore a black gown, with long sleeves, when they went abroad, but not to church. The abbies of Hayles, and Flaxley, in this county, were of this order.

These were all the orders of monks that were to be met with in England. The canons were either secular or regular.

The SECULAR CANONS were so called, because, being clergymen, they served the world, [seculum] in performing spiritual offices for the laity, and taking upon them the care of souls, which the regulars were incapable of. They were in no respect different from ordinary priests, except being under the government of some local statutes; and were not so strictly obliged to live under one roof as the monks and regular canons, but generally lived apart, and were severally maintained by distinct prebends, in almost the same manner with the canons and prebendaries of our cathedral and collegiate churches at present. There was a college of these at Westbury, in Gloucestershire.

REGULAR CANONS were so called, because they were obliged to a strict observance of the rule of St. Austin, or Augustine, bishop of Hippo, in Africa; who, they say, was their founder, about the year 400; but they were not eminent till the tenth or eleventh century, and came not into England till after the conquest; St. Gregory's, in Canterbury, being the first, which was built by archbishop Lanfranc, A. D. 1084. They were also called Black Canons, because they wore a long black cassock, with a white rochet over it, and over all a black cloak and hood. They also wore beards, whereas the monks were all shaved, and wore a cap upon their heads. The abbey of Cirencester, the priory of St. Oswald in the city of Gloucester, and that of Lanthony, near Gloucester, were of this order.

The PREMONSTRATIENSIAN CANONS were instituted at Premonstratum, in France, by one Norbert, about A. D. 1120. They were also called White Canons, from their wearing a white cassock, with a rochet over it, and a long white cloak.

The SEMPRINGHAM, or GILBERTINE CANONS were instituted by St. Gilbert, at Sempringham, in Lincolnshire, A. D. 1148. Their habit was a black cassock, over which they wore a furred cloak, and a hood lined with lamb-skins. Their rule was composed out of those of St. Austin and St. Bennet, with some special statutes of their own. The monasteries of this order consisted both of men and women, living under the same roof, but separated by a wall.

The CANONS REGULAR OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE were founded in imitation of those regulars instituted in the church of that name at Jerusalem. Their habit was the same as of other Black Canons, with a distinction of a double red cross upon the breast of their cloak, or upper garment. The endeavours of these religious for the regaining of the Holy Land, after the loss of Jerusalem, coming to nothing, their lands, revenues and privileges were transferred to the MATURINES, or friars of the order of the Holy Trinity for the redemption of captives, who were instituted by St. John de Matta, and Felix de Valois, about A. D. 1200; and confirmed by Innocent III, who gave them white robes, with a red and blue cross on their breasts, and appointed that all the possessions which they enjoyed should be equally divided into three parts; one for the entertainment and reception of religious persons, another to relieve the poor, and the third to redeem christians kept captive by the infidels. These canons were also called Trinitarians, and here in England they were said to be of the order of Ingham, because the monastery at Ingham, in Norfolk, was the chief of that rule.

The BONHOMMES, or GOODMEN, were first brought into England A. D. 1283, by Edmund earl of Cornwall, and placed in a rectory or college founded by him at Asserug, or Ashridge, in Bucks. They followed St. Austin's rule. At Edington, in Wiltshire, was another house of this order, these two being all that were in England.

As for the nunneries of the Benedictine, Cluniac, Cistercian, and Carthusian rules, and the Austin, Premonstratensian, and Gilbertine nuns, they were instituted by the same persons as the monks of those orders, and followed the same rules, and wore habits of the same colour with the monks, their heads being always covered with a veil. Besides these, we had in England three other orders of religious females.

1. CLARISSSES, or those of the order of St. Clare, who instituted it about A. D. 1225.

2. BRIGETTAN nuns, founded by St. Bridget, queen of Sweden, about A. D. 1360.

3. Nuns of the order of FONTEVRAULT, wearing a black habit with a white veil; reformed from the Benedictines by Robert de Arbusculo, at Font Ebrald in Poitiers, A. D. 1117.

Of the military orders there is mention made but of two in this book, viz. of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, and the Knights Templars.

The HOSPITALLERS, since called Knights of Rhodes, or Malta, were first taken notice of about A. D. 1090, and were greatly favoured by Godfrey of Bullen, or Bologne, and his successor Baldwin, king of Jerusalem. They followed partly St. Austin's rule, and wore a white cross upon their black habit. There was also in England one house of nuns of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, viz. Buckland, in Somersetshire.

The KNIGHTS TEMPLARS, so called from having their residence in certain rooms adjoining to the temple at Jerusalem, were instituted A. D. 1118. They followed the Cistercian rule, and their duty was to guard pilgrims travelling to the Holy Land. Their habit was white, with a red cross. They were at first so poor, that they had scarce one horse to two knights, therefore their coat of arms was two knights riding upon one horse. The temple at London, now belonging to the societies of the law, was consecrated to their use in the year 1185, in the presence of king Henry the second, queen Elianor, and a great concourse of nobles. They had a preceptory at Quenington, in this county.

The estates belonging to religious houses were valued by the king's commissioners in the 26th year of Henry VIII. Of this valuation we have two very different copies, the one given us by Mr. Burton, or Mr. Speed, which was taken from the very original delivered to king Henry VIII. by the commissioners; the other at the end of the first Tome of the Monasticon, taken by Sir William Dugdale out of an antient copy in the Cottonian library. These two valuations seldom agree, and for that reason, because there is such authority for both, it is thought fit that the revenues, according to both rates, should be inserted.

The original of monks in Britain may be dated from the first planting of christianity here, though it is probable the monastic rules were not introduced till the time of St. Patrick, who, after he

he had converted the Irish to the christian faith, A. D. 433, came over to England; and finding at Glastonbury twelve anchorites, gathered them together, and making himself abbat, taught them to live according to the monastic rules. In the next age, about A. D. 512, the British historians report, that St. Dubricius, archbishop of St. David's, founded twelve monasteries, and taught his monks to live after the manner of the Asiatics and Africans, by the labour of their own hands. And not long after, the abbey of Bangor was instituted, which, according to Bede, consisted of seven classes, each class containing three hundred monks, who all lived on their own labour. About A. D. 596, Austin, a monk of Rome, was sent over by pope Gregory the Great, to convert England to the christian faith; who being courteously entertained by Ethelbert, king of Kent, and made archbishop of Canterbury, founded a monastery there that bore his own name: Soon after which, upon the conversion of the West Saxons and Mercians, monasteries were erected in all parts where christianity had any footing, and liberally endowed by the Saxon kings.

At the end of the eighth century, the Danes made descents upon England, and finding most wealth, and least resistance, in the monasteries, generally plundered them; which forced the monks to quit their seats, and leave them to the secular clergy; so that in king Edgar's time, there was scarce one left in all England. Edgar was a lewd and cruel prince, and Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, with other monks, taking advantage from the horrors of conscience that seized him, persuaded him that the restoring of the monastic state would be matter of great merit; so he converted many of the chapters into monasteries, and it appears by the foundation of the priory of Worcester, that he had then founded forty-seven. By his authority also, all the lands which had been taken away from religious places were restored; and the king, by Dunstan's advice, made the second reformation of our antient English monks, in the council of Winchester, A. D. 965.

The monks being thus settled in their antient rights and privileges, quietly enjoyed their lands till the conquest; at which time monasteries had a deep share in the afflictions of the conquered nation.

It was in the conqueror's time that the third and last regulation of monks was made, by archbishop Lanfranc, in the council held at London, A. D. 1075.

The orders of regular canons of St. Austin, and of Cluniac monks, were brought into England, and six houses of each sort founded in this reign; as also sixteen Benedictine abbies and priories, besides fourteen alien priories. The king himself built and endowed two abbies, one priory, and five alien priories.

William Rufus succeeded. He was heir to the vices, not to the virtues of his father, and miserably oppressed the religious, seized upon the revenues of the vacant abbies, and bishopricks, and would never let them be filled without some simoniacal bargain. If we except about nine alien priories, there were only thirteen religious houses founded in the thirteen years of this reign; viz. seven of the Benedictine, four of the Cluniac, and two of the Austin order, and about nine alien priories; but not one collegiate church in this or the preceding reign. The king himself built only two small priories.

King Henry I. is recorded not only as an encourager of learning, but, according to the ideas of that age, as a very pious, good prince; and his founding of nine or ten monasteries confirms the truth of this character. In the beginning of his reign, the Knights Hospitallers settled in London. A. D. 1128, the Cistercians were first brought into England, and placed at Weverley, in Surrey; and about this time the canons of the Holy Sepulchre came to Warwick. The number of religious houses founded in the reign of king Henry I. were above one hundred; viz. about thirty of the Benedictine monasteries, forty of the Austin order, five of the Cluniac, ten Cistercian houses, four colleges, two preceptories, and thirteen alien priories.

King Stephen was virtuous, religious, and liberal; and after the wars between him and the empress Maud were ended, he became a great builder of religious houses. A. D. 1146, the Premonstratensian order was brought into England, their first monastery being Newhouse, in Lincolnshire. Two years after, the Gilbertine order had its rise, at Sempringham, in that county. In this reign were built fifteen monasteries of the Benedictine order, twenty-five priories of Black Canons, thirty-five Cistercian abbies, six houses of the Premonstratensian, six of the Gilbertine, and four of the Cluniac rule; one college, two preceptories, and three alien priories.

King Henry II. was very obliging to the clergy, especially after the murder of Thomas Becket, archbishop of Canterbury. He founded eight religious houses; and in his reign were built twenty-two Benedictine, thirty Austin, eight Premonstratensian, four Gilbertine, and six Cluniac monasteries; three collegiate churches, six preceptories, (for in the year 1185 the Templars came into England) eight alien priories, and, what is more remarkable, almost twenty Cistercian abbies, notwithstanding it was contrary to a canon made at the general chapter of the Cistercian order, in the year 1152; wherein the erecting of any more abbies of that rule was expressly forbid, because there were above five hundred of them already founded.

In the time of Richard I. the humour of going to recover the Holy Land from the Saracens mightily prevailed in England, as well as in all other parts of Christendom; and the money designed for pious uses being expended in those wars, wars, and for the ransom of the king, there were few monasteries built in this reign, viz. only six of the Benedictine, four of the Austin, one of the Cistercian, four of the Premonstratensian, and two of the Gilbertine order, with one alien priory. The king is said to have mortally hated the Black Monks, the Cistercians, and the Templars; and not only these three sorts, but also all religious men, for we do not find that he built one monastery in all England.

King John, though he was always prejudiced against the ecclesiastics, founded a stately abbey for the Cistercians, at Beaulieu, in Com. Hants, and a nunnery for Benedictines, at Lambley in Northumberland. In this reign were built seven Benedictine abbeys and priories, eleven for regular canons, seven for Cistercian monks, one preceptory, two Premonstratensian abbeys, six of the Gilbertine order, and two alien priories.

In the reign of king Henry III. we find but four Benedictine abbeys and priories built, fifteen of the Austin, nine of the Cistercian, and of the Gilbertine, Cluniac, and Premonstratensian orders each one, as also one alien priory. And the king himself founded only the small Gilbertine cell of Fordham in Cambridgeshire. For during this reign came the Dominican or preaching friars into this kingdom, A. D. 1217; and the Franciscans, or Friars Minors, A. D. 1224; who, for the pretended severity of their lives, and their frequent preaching, were at first greatly admired by the people, to the prejudice of the other regulars and parish priests.

King Edward I. succeeded next, who built the stately abbey of Vale-Royal, in Cheshire.

Now the greatness and riches of the ecclesiastics began to be envied by the nobility and gentry, and the affections of the people were alienated by the sermons, pamphlets, and secret insinuations of the begging friars. In the seventh year of this king's reign, the statute of Mortmain was enacted, by which all religious persons were incapacitated from entering upon any fees, either to buy them, or to receive them of the gift of others, without licence of the chief lords, upon pain of forfeiture. There were several laws made to prevent this, for (as Frederick the abbot of Canterbury told William the Conqueror) the lands, which were for the maintenance of martial men, were converted to pious uses, and bestowed on holy votaries, by which means the military services, necessary for the defence of the kingdom, were withdrawn; and besides, the chief lords lost their escheats, wardships, reliefs, &c. to prevent which, at the creating of a feignory, this clause was often inserted in the deed of feoffment, viz. Quod licitum sit donatori, rem donatam dare vel vendere cui voluerit, exceptis viris religiosis, et Judæis. Lord Coke, 2 Inst. c. 36. has shewn how many ways the religious had to evade this law, of which they complained; and, to supply the loss of new benefactions, procured pensions, privileges from paying tithes, and, what the church finds the inconvenience of to this day, impropriations.—The king seized all the alien priories in the year 1295; the rents and profits, which issued out of them to foreign monasteries, being conceived of advantage to his enemies. In this reign were founded three monasteries of the Benedictine order, two Austin priories, three Cistercian abbeys, one preceptory, nine colleges, and one Gilbertine priory.

In the reign of king Edward II. we find no great stir made about the monks, or their lands; indeed the Knights Templars were seized, and their goods and revenues confiscated, though they were not appropriated to any secular use, but settled upon the Knights Hospitallers, by act of parliament, 17 Edw. 2. We do not meet with any monastery founded by this unhappy prince, nor indeed but two of the Benedictine, and two of the Austin order, by any other persons, during this period.

King Edward III. is characterized by the monks to have been a pious as well as a valiant prince, for though his wars with France would not suffer him to give much to religious houses, and forced him to be severe upon the alien priories; yet there were a great many monasteries founded in his reign, viz. three Benedictine houses, six of the Austin order, one Cistercian, and seventeen colleges. And notwithstanding his own extraordinary charges, he founded, and liberally endowed, the Austin nunnery at Dartford, in Kent, with the two large colleges of St. George at Windsor, and St. Stephen at Westminster.

In the reign of king Richard II. Wickliff's doctrines were eagerly embraced, and the mendicant friars began to lose their reputation. There were only two or three Carthusian monasteries, and ten or eleven colleges founded during this period.

In the sixth year of Henry IV. A. D. 1404, was held the parliamentum indoctum, so called, because none that were learned in the laws of the land were suffered to be chosen members of it. A bill was brought into this parliament to deprive the clergy of all their temporal possessions, for the relief of the king's necessities; but by the mediation of Thomas Arundel, archbishop of Canterbury, it was set aside. This king built the college of Battelfield in com. Salop. which, with two or three colleges more, and a Carthusian priory, were all the foundations during this reign.

In the second year of Henry V. there was another attempt made against the possessions of the church, but archbishop Chicheley, earnestly pressing the young king to recover his right to the crown of France; and for the vigorous carrying on of a war, promising in the name of the clergy such a benevolence as scarce ever had been given by the subject, the king readily embraced the proposal, and the church was once more preserved from sacrilege. But in a parliament held this year at Leicester, all the alien priors were given to the king, with their lands, houses, &c. except such as were conventual, i. e. such as had liberty to choose their own prior. In this king's short reign were founded only six colleges and an Austin priory, besides the Carthusian abbey at Sheen in com. Surr. and the house of the Brigettan order at Syon, in com. Middlef. which were built, and liberally endowed by the king himself.

King Henry VI. a religious but unfortunate prince, succeeded next, who founded Eaton college in Buckinghamshire, and king's college in Cambridge, and endowed them chiefly out of the suppressed alien priories. Besides them there were six other colleges founded in this reign.

During the civil wars between the York and Lancaster families, in the time of Edward IV. we must not expect to meet with any considerable additions to the church. In those troublesome times she was more fortunate than might have been expected, in keeping her own; but there were some few colleges founded in this reign.

Note, the numbers of religious houses built in every king's reign are not complete and exact, for there are almost two hundred and fifty abbeys, priories and colleges, the dates of the foundations of which we are ignorant of.

Our historians are silent concerning monastic affairs in the reigns of Richard III. and Henry VII. so that we conclude there was nothing remarkable in them till the reformation, which began to take place in the next reign. For all monasteries not having 200*l.* per ann. (of which there were above 370) were dissolved, 27 H. 8. and all their lands, rents, and houses, with their stock of cattle, corn, &c. given to the king. In the 31st year of his reign, all the great abbeys, to the number of six hundred and forty-five, met with the same fate. The next year, the houses, lands and goods of the knights of St. John of Jerusalem were seized by, or annexed to, the crown; as were ninety colleges, one hundred and ten hospitals, and 2374 chantries and free chapels, in the thirty-seventh year of that reign; which put a final period to the monastic state in this kingdom.

The first step that was made towards it, was that which cardinal Wolsey took, in the sixteenth and twentieth years of the king's reign. He projected and laid two noble foundations, the one at Oxford, and the other at Ipswich, the place of his birth, both for the encouragement of the learned, and the instruction of youth; and for that end obtained license from the see of Rome to dissolve above thirty small monasteries, which being executed, their lands by law fell to the king, and thereupon the cardinal took out grants of, and endowed his colleges with them. This made way for the ruin of the greater houses.

Another thing was the discovery of an imposture about this time, begun and carried on by one Elizabeth Barton, afterwards called the nun of Kent, and some priests that confederated with her. This woman had been for a while troubled with fits, or else counterfeited them, and spoke such things as made those about her think she was inspired. The parson of the parish, hoping to draw advantages from this, engaged her for his purpose, and taught her so to counterfeit those fits, if they were ever real, that she became very ready at it. The matter was much noised about, and the priest intending to raise the credit of an image of the blessed virgin's that was in this church, that so pilgrimages and offerings might be made to it, also engaged one Bocking, a monk of Canterbury, in the scheme. They taught her to declare in her fits, that the blessed virgin appeared to her, and told her she could not be well till she visited that image. She inveighed against an ill course of life, heresy, and the king's suit of divorce, then depending; and by many distortions of her body, seemed to be inwardly possessed. A day was set for her cure, and before an assembly of two thousand people, she was carried to that image; where, having acted her fits all over, she seemed suddenly to be recovered, which was ascribed to the interposition of the virgin, and the virtue of the image. Upon this she entered into a religious life, and Bocking was her ghostly father. There were violent suspicions of incontinence between them, but the esteem she was in bore them down. Many thought her a prophetess; and archbishop Warham among the rest. A book was written of her revelations, and a letter shewed in characters of gold, said to be sent to her from heaven by Mary Magdalen. She pretended that when the king was last at Calais, she was carried invisibly beyond sea, and brought back again; that an angel gave her the sacrament; and that God revealed to her, that, if the king went on in his divorce, and married another wife, he should fall from his crown, and not live a month longer. Bishop Fisher, and many monks, friars and nuns, gave credit to this, and grew very insolent upon it. Her confederates published her revelations in all parts of the kingdom, whereupon she and nine of her accomplices were apprehended; who, without rack or torture, confessed the whole conspiracy, and were appointed to go to St. Paul's; where, after a sermon preached on that occasion by the bishop of Bangor, they repeated their confession in the hearing of the people, and were sent prisoners to the tower. But it was given out that all was extorted from them by violence, and messages were sent to the nun, desiring her to deny all that she had confessed; which made the king judge it necessary to proceed to further extremities. So she and six of her accomplices were attainted of treason, and on the twentieth of April following, were executed at tyburn; where, freely acknowledging her impostures, and the justice of the sentence, she laid the blame on those that suffered with her; and concluded her life, begging pardon both of God and the king.

If this imposture had fallen out in a darker age, in which the world went mad after visions, the king might have lost his crown by it. This discovery disposed all to look on older stories of the trances of monastical people, as contrivances to serve base purposes, and made way for the destruction of that order of men in England.

About the year 1535, the king, apprehensive of a war from the emperor, intended to fortify his harbours, and to encourage trade and navigation, upon which the ballance of Europe began then to turn; and for that purpose, resolving to make use of the wealth of the monasteries, thought the best way to bring them into his own hands, would be to expose their vices.

Cranmer promoted this much, and a general visitation of all the religious houses in England, was begun in October 1535, and cast into several precincts. Instructions were given to the visitors, directing them what things to inquire after, concerning the revenues of the monasteries, the lives and conversation of the monks, nuns, &c.

With these instructions they went over England, and found in many places monstrous disorders. The sin of Sodom was found in several houses; great factions and barbarous cruelties in others, and in some they found tools for coining. The report contained many abominable things, that are not fit to be mentioned. Some of these were printed, but the greatest part is lost; only a report of one hundred and forty-four houses is yet extant. The abbat of Langden, in Kent, had been found in bed with a whore, who went in the habit of a lay brother; which perhaps disposed him to comply with such terms as were offered him, and he and ten of his monks were the first who signed a resignation of their house to the king. Two other houses in the same county, Folkestone and Dover, followed their example, as did four others in the following year.

In February a parliament met, and an act was passed for the suppression of all monasteries under 200 l. a year, and their revenues were given to the king. The report of the visitors was read in the two houses, and disposed them to great easiness in this matter. The monasteries were much richer than they seemed to be from the rent-rolls of their estates, for it was the practice to let them at their first rates, tho' the value of lands was much enhanced, but instead of raising the rents, they exacted great fines from their tenants, upon the renewal of their leases; so that some houses, rated only at 200 l. a year, were really worth many thousands.

As soon as this act was passed, visitors were sent to examine into, and take inventories of their revenues, and to take their seals into their keeping: They were to try how many of the religious would take capacities, and return to a secular course of life; but those who intended to continue in that state, were to be sent to some of the great monasteries that lay nearest. A pension was also to be assigned to the abbat, or prior, during life; and they were particularly to examine what leases had been made all the last year; for the abbats, hearing what was coming upon them, had been raising all the money they could; and so it was intended to recover what was made away by ill bargains. There were great complaints made of the proceedings of the visitors, of their violences and bribes, and perhaps not without reason. Ten thousand of the religious were set to seek their fortunes, with forty shillings and a gown a man. Their goods and plate were estimated at 100,000 l. and the valued rents of their houses was 32,000 l. but was really worth above ten times as much. The churches and cloisters were in most places pulled down, and the materials sold, lest some accidental change might conduce to their restitution.

This gave a general discontent, and the monks were now as much pitied as they were formerly hated. It was thought strange to see the king devour what his ancestors had dedicated to the honour of God, and his saints. The nobility and gentry, who provided for their younger children and friends, by putting them in those sanctuaries, were sensible of their loss. The people, who had been fed at the abbats tables, and as they travelled over the country, found the abbies to be places of reception for strangers, saw what they were to lose. But the more superstitious, who thought their friends must now still continue in purgatory, without that relief which the masses procured them, were beyond measure offended at these proceedings.

To remove this general discontent, Cromwell advised the king to sell the abbey lands, at very easy rates, to the nobility and gentry, and to oblige them to keep up the wonted hospitality. This would both be grateful to them, and would engage them to assist the crown in the maintenance of the changes that had been made; since their own interests would be interwoven with the rights of the crown; and the common people, whose grudges lay chiefly in their stomachs, would be easily pacified, if hospitality was still kept up. Upon a clause in the act, empowering the king to found a-new such houses as he should think fit, there were fifteen monasteries, and sixteen nunneries, new founded. It seems these had been more regular than the rest, so that for a while, they were reprieved, till the general suppression. They were bound to obey such rules as the king should send them, and to pay him tenths and first fruits.

All this did not pacify the people, for in the beginning of October, 20,000 rose in Lincolnshire, led by a priest, under the disguise of a cobbler; but upon the offer of a general pardon, they were soon dispersed. At the same time there was a more formidable rising in Yorkshire, headed by one Ask, who performed his part with great dexterity. They became 40,000 strong in a few days, and met with no opposition. They forced the archbishop of York, and the lord Darcy, to swear swear to their covenant, and to go along with them. They besieged Skipton, but the earl of Cumberland held it out against them; as Sir Ralph Evers did Scarborough castle; though for twenty days he and his men had no provisions but bread and water. There was also an insurrection in all the other northern counties, against whom the earl of Shrewsbury made head. But at length a proclamation of pardon, without any restrictions, being signed and sent them, they were every where quieted. Ask was invited to court, and well used by the king, with a view to learn from him all the secret correspondences they had in other parts of the kingdom; but withdrawing without leave, he was taken, and hanged at York. This was followed by several little insurrections but they were all quickly dispersed by the vigilance of the duke of Norfolk.

As soon as the country was every where quieted, and this threatening storm blown over, the king went on more resolutely in his design of suppressing the monasteries. A new visitation was appointed, to inquire into the conversation of the monks, to examine how they stood affected to the pope, and how they promoted the king's supremacy. The visitors were likewise ordered to examine what impostures might be carried on among them, with regard either to images or relics, by which the superstition of the credulous people was wrought upon. Some few houses of greater value were prevailed with, the former year, to surrender to the king. Many of the houses that had not been dissolved, though they were in the former act, were now suppressed, and many of the greater abbats were persuaded by several motives to surrender. Some had been faulty during the rebellion, and so, to prevent a storm, offered a resignation. Others liked the reformation, and did it on that account. Some were found guilty of great disorders in their lives, and, to prevent a shameful discovery, offered their houses to the king; and others had made such waste, and suffered dilapidations, that having taken care of themselves, they were the less concerned for others. At St. Albans, the rents were fixed so low, that the abbat could not maintain the charge of the abbey. At Battel, the whole furniture of the house and chapel were not worth 100 l. and their plate not above 300 l. In some houses there was scarce any plate or furniture left. Many abbats and monks were glad to accept of a pension for life, which was proportioned to the value of their house, and to their innocence. The abbats of St. Albans and Tewkesbury had each 400 marks a year: but the abbat of St. Edmondsbury was more innocent, and more resolute. The visitors wrote "that they found no scandals in that house," but at last he was prevailed with, for a pension of 500 marks, to resign. The inferior governors had some 30, 20, or 10 l. pensions, and the monks had generally 6 l. or 8 marks each. All that should give good example to others, by a quick and chearful surrender, were made to hope for advancement; so 121 of these houses were this year resigned to the king. In most houses, the visitors made the monks sign a confession of their former vices and disorders, of which there is only one original extant, that escaped a general rasure of all such papers in queen Mary's time; wherein they acknowledged, in a long narrative, their former idleness, gluttony and sensuality.

The common preamble to most surrenders was, "that upon full deliberation, and of their own proper motion, for just and reasonable causes moving their consciences, they did freely give up their houses to the king." Though some surrendered without any preamble, to the visitors, as feoffees in trust for the king. In short, they went on at such a rate, that 159 resignations were obtained before the parliament met, who afterwards declared them good in law.

Such of the abbats as refused to surrender were roughly handled. The abbat of Fountains, in Yorkshire, was charged by the commissioners with theft and sacrilege, for taking into his private hands some jewels belonging to that monastery; for which they pronounced him perjured, and having deposed him, extorted a private resignation. The monks of the Charter-house, in the suburbs of London, were committed to Newgate, where, with hard and barbarous usage, five of them died, and five more lay at the point of death. The two priors of Wooburn and Burlington, with the abbats of Whaley, Jervaux, and Sawley, were suspected of a correspondence with the rebels, and of favouring the pope; so they were all taken, attainted of treason, and executed. The abbats of Glastonbury and Reading had also sent a great deal of their plate to the rebels; the former, to disguise it the better, had made a person break into the house where the plate was kept; so he was convicted both of burglary and treason, and being condemned to death, was drawn from Wells, upon a hurdle, then hanged upon the hill called the Tor, near Glastonbury; his head set upon the abbey-gate, and his quarters exposed at Wells, Bath, Ilchester, and Bridgwater. At his execution, he confessed his crime, and begged both God's and the king's pardon for it. The abbat of Colchester was also attainted and executed, the grounds of which proceeding are not known; for the records of their attainders are lost.

Upon the attainders of these abbats, their abbies were seized, and they were confirmed to the king in the following parliament, in a special proviso made for that purpose.

Great complaints were made of the visitors, as if they had used undue practices to make the abbats and monks surrender. They, on the other hand, published many of the vile practices found in those houses; and no story became so public, as that of the prior of the Crossed Friars in London, who was found in bed with a whore at noon-day: He fell down on his knees, and begged those who

who surpris'd him, not to discover his shame: They made him give them 30*l.* which he protested was all he had, and he promised them as much more; but as he did not keep his word, a suit followed upon it. Yet all these personal blemishes did not work much on the people. It seem'd unreasonable to extinguish noble foundations, for the fault of some individuals; therefore another way was taken, which had a better effect.

They discovered many impostures concerning reliques and wonderful images, to which pilgrimages had been usually made. At Reading was an angel's wing, which brought over the point of the spear that pierced our saviour's side. As many pieces of the cross were found, as joined together would have made a prodigious one. The rood of grace at Boxley, in Kent, had been much esteemed, and had drawn many pilgrims to it. It was observed to bow and rowl its eyes, to look at times well pleased or angry, which the credulous multitude imputed to a divine power; but being brought to St. Paul's cross; and all the springs openly expos'd, that governed its several motions, all was discovered to be a notorious cheat. At Hayles, in Gloucestershire, the blood of Christ was shew'd in a phial, and it was taught, that none could see it that was in mortal sin. But good presents being made, the deluded pilgrims went away well satisfied with the sight of it. This was the blood of a duck, renewed every week, put into a phial, very thick on one side, and thin on the other; and either side turned toward the pilgrim, as the priests were satisfied with their oblations. Several other such like impostures were discovered, which contributed much to the undeceiving of the people.

The richest shrine in England was Thomas Becket's, at Canterbury, whose story is well known. His altar drew far greater oblations than those that were dedicated to Christ, or the Blessed Virgin, as appears by the account of them in two years. In one, 3*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and in another, not a penny was offered at Christ's altar. The same years, 63*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* and 4*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* were offered at the Blessed Virgin's altar. But in these very years there were 832*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.* and 964*l.* 6*l.* 3*d.* offered at St. Thomas's. The shrine grew to be of inestimable value. Two days in the year were observed in honour of this saint; the twenty-ninth of December, called his martyrdom, and the seventh of July, the day of his translation; and every fiftieth year was a jubilee, and an indulgence was granted to all that came and visited his tomb, where 100,000 pilgrims are said to have been at one time. Lewis VII. of France, came over in pilgrimage to visit it, and offered a stone esteemed the richest in Europe. It is hard to say which of the two, a hatred to Becket's seditious practices, or the love of his shrine, operated the strongest on the king to unfaint him. However the shrine was broken, and the gold of it was so heavy, that it filled two chests, which took eight men each to carry them out of the church; and his scull, that had been so much worshipp'd, was proved to be an imposture; for the true scull was found with the rest of his bones in his coffin.

The foundation of all this wealth was the belief of purgatory, and of the virtue that was in masses to redeem souls out of it; so it pass'd among all for a piece of piety to parents, and of care for the souls of themselves and families, to endow religious houses with lands, upon condition that they should have masses said for them, as it was agreed on, more or less frequently, according to the measure of the gift.

Some images were believed to have extraordinary virtue in them, and pilgrimages to these were much extoll'd. There was also great rivalry among the several orders, every one magnifying their own saints, images and reliques. The religious were generally very dissolute, and grossly ignorant. Their privileges were become a public grievance, and their lives were ill examples to the world; which, together with the prospect of vast profit, through that deluge of wealth which was like to be dispers'd through the nation, upon the suppression of monasteries, dispos'd the people the more easily to consent to their dissolution.

A parliament was summoned on the twenty-eight of April, 1539, in which twenty of the abbats sat in person. During this session, an act pass'd for confirming all resignations of religious houses already made, or to be made; and the king's right, founded either on surrenders, forfeitures, or attainders of treason, was thereby declared to be good in law; and though there were so many abbats sitting in the house, none of them protested against it.

Fifty-seven surrenders were made this year, of which there were twelve parliamentary abbies, and twenty nunneries. Commissioners were appointed, by the court of augmentation, to seize on the revenues and goods belonging to those houses; to establish the pensions that were to be given to every one that had been in them; and to pull down the churches, or other parts of the fabric, which they thought superfluous, and to sell the materials of them. The valued rents of the abbey lands, as they were then let, was 132,607*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.*; but this was not one tenth of the true value. The king had now in his hand the greatest advantage that ever king of England had, both for enriching the crown, and making royal foundations. But such was his extravagance, that all this melted away in a few years, and his designs, or pretended designs, were never accomplished. It is said, he intended to have founded eighteen new bishopricks, but these six only, Westminster, Chester, Gloucester, Peterborough, Oxford, and Bristol, were established.

In the year 1540, a bill was brought into parliament, for the suppressing of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. These were at first only established in an hospital, to entertain the pilgrims that went to visit the holy grave, but afterwards became an order of knights; and they and the Knights Templars conducted and guarded the pilgrims. It was thought, for some ages, one of the highest expressions of devotion to Christ, to visit the place where he was crucified, buried, and ascended to heaven; and it was esteemed to be highly meritorious, to fight for the recovery of the Holy Land out of the hands of infidels; so that almost every one that died, either vowed to go to the holy war, or left something to such as should go. If they recovered, they generally obtained a dispensation from their vow, by giving lands for the entertainment of those knights. There were great complaints made against the Templars, but whether it was their wealth that made them a desirable prey, or their guilt that drew ruin on them, is not certain; they were however so universally hated, that a person whose beard resembled the form of theirs, and which he had made a vow to continue, was necessitated to carry about him a certificate, well attested, that he was not of that order; otherwise he must often have run the hazard of being knocked on the head. They were condemned in a council, and the whole order suppressed in 1312, and all of them that could be found were cruelly put to death. The Knights of St. John still continued, but when the Christians quitted Palestine they settled in Rhodes, out of which being expelled by the Turks, after a noble resistance, they fixed themselves in Malta, and still continue in possession of that island. Since they could not be brought to surrender of their own accord here in England, they were suppressed by act of parliament.

When the order of the Templars were suppressed, their lands, which were simple gifts, went to the lords by escheat; but there is a distinction to be made betwixt such, and the lands given to abbies, in as much as these were given in consideration of the masses to be said for the donors and their families; and therefore it was inferred, that when the cheat of redeeming souls out of purgatory was discovered, and these houses were suppressed, the lands were to revert to the heirs of the donors; and upon that account it was thought necessary to exclude them by a special proviso.

When all this was done, the better to satisfy the people, it was represented to them, that by the wealth of these houses, the kingdom should be strengthened with an army of 40,000 men, and that for the future they should never be charged with subsidies, loans, or common aids; and lest they should take up arms upon this great and strange alteration, reports were spread, that cardinal Pool laboured to excite our enemies to send forces against the kingdom, and that an invasion was threatened; which seemed the more credible, because the truce concluded betwixt the emperor and the French was generally known, and neither of them wanted a pretence to break with us. These apprehensions were strengthened by the king's sudden journey to the sea coasts, whither also several of the nobility and great officers went, to visit the ports and places of danger; who represented it to be every where so great, as one would have thought each place had needed a fortification. The navy was immediately got ready, and musters were ordered to be taken all over the kingdom. The expence of all these preparations, made against a danger believed to be so very imminent, was to be defraied out of the revenues of the monasteries, which saved the purses of the people, who therefore became the better affected to the dissolution.

The monastic state being now compleatly subverted, let us turn our eyes for a moment on Cromwell, earl of Essex, lord vice-gerent, and high chancellor of England, visitor-general, and knight of the garter; who having risen by his great parts, to all these honors and high employments, from the low condition of a blacksmith's son, excited the envy and hatred of the nobility; and having been the grand actor in this catastrophe, drew upon him the further odium of the catholics. His numerous enemies did him every ill office with the king, who having no more use for him, and hoping to regain their affections, by casting upon Cromwell all the blame of past proceedings, gave way to their accusations, and made him a sacrifice. He was arrested by the duke of Norfolk at the council table, when he least dreamt of it, and committed to the tower; and by the same parliament that ratified and confirmed what with so much industry he had brought to pass, was himself condemned for heresy and treason, unheard and little pitied; and on the twenty-eighth of July, had his head cut off on Tower-hill.

The temporal advantages resulting to the people from these surprizing changes, were not equal to their expectations, for by the histories of those times it appears, that subsidies from the clergy, and fifteenths of laymen's goods, were soon after exacted; and that in the next reign, a new tax was levied on the subject for three years, which grew so exceeding heavy, that the commons applied to the king for a mitigation of it.

In this and the succeeding reigns, Mary's excepted, the abbey lands were granted away, chiefly to the courtiers, and favorites of the crown, on very easy terms, and hospitality enjoined the purchasers, to compensate for the loss of that relief which the poor found in the monasteries; but the measure of it being discretionary, it fell so far short of the intention, that in 39 Eliz. there were no less than eleven bills brought into the house of commons for their relief, which were the first rudiments of the laws relating to the poor now in force.

In consequence of this great revolution, large estates in Gloucestershire, as well as other counties, that belonged to the church, became the property of lay persons; and some of them still continue in the families to whom they were originally granted.

Here

Here it is proper to observe, that the demean lands that belonged to the Cistercians, Premonstratenses, Hospitallers, and Templars, whose houses were founded before the council of Lateran, 1215, were discharged from the payment of tythes; as were all those that belonged to the other houses of the two first mentioned orders, though of a later foundation, which being above the value of 200 l. per. ann. were not dissolved by the statute of 27 H. 8. This accounts for many exemptions from tythes.

Of Advowsons, Patronage, Presentation, &c.

The parochial clergy were formerly well provided for, till the patrons of churches found out a method of purchasing masses and obits of the monasteries at no expence, by giving, instead of lands, the advowsons of churches. The monasteries sent their vicar to officiate at the parish church, for the small tythes and offerings, reserving the great ones, or the greater part of them, to themselves. At the dissolution, some of these were disposed of to the best bidders, or greatest favorites, and so became lay property, and are what we now call impropriations: others of them were appointed to the erecting or augmenting of some bishoprick, deanery, or religious foundation; and are called appropriations; these terms are often used indiscriminately, but not by persons of judgment.

Parsons have not the fee simple of their livings, but impropriations and appropriations are perpetuities; and because those who have them are owners of the fee, they are called propriarii.

At the Norman conquest, when the nation was divided into 60,215 knights fees, 28,000 belonged to the clergy, besides tythes, offerings, and other perquisites; but there were then 45,000 churches, and 52,000 chapels in the kingdom; whereas the present number of both is about 10,000, whereof 3,845 are impropriations. There are 290 parish churches in Gloucestershire, of which 140 are impropriations; which is the reason that some of the parochial clergy have so scanty a pittance, under the misapplied denomination of livings.

The learned historian, whose sentiments and expressions I have so often adopted and used in the course of this work, thinks it reasonable that the clergy should have an income to enable them to live independently, and in proportion to the orders of the other learned professions. It should be certain, and keep pace with the price of provisions. All these and many other good purposes, might be answered, by appointing a quantity of land in every parish to the minister, instead of tythes; concerning which there are so many disputes betwixt them and their parishioners. And it is with pleasure, that I find this method pursued, where new inclosures are made by act of parliament. It is usual to allow the minister about one seventh, or one eighth of the land, for his portion.

When the christian religion was first established in England, kings began to build cathedral churches, and to make bishops; and afterwards in imitation of them, several lords of manors founded particular churches, on some part of their own lands, and endowed them with glebe, reserving to themselves and their heirs a right to present a fit person to the bishop, when the church should become void. This right is called an advowson, and he that hath it is called the patron. By the common law therefore, the right of patronage is a real right, and descends to the heirs and successors, in some measure like lands and tenements. 1 Nels. Abr. 184. Originally, the right of nomination of fit persons to officiate through the dioceses, was in the bishops, but for the encouragement of pious undertakings, such as building churches and endowing them, they permitted the benefactors to nominate, reserving to themselves an intire right to judge of the fitness of the persons so nominated. And what was the practice, became, in process of time, to be the law of the church. Gibbs. Codex, 2d. edit. 756.

If a presentation be made to a chapel of ease as to a church, by the name of ecclesia, it will change the nature of it, and make it a church. Nat. Brev. 32. Also when the question was, whether it were ecclesia, aut capella, pertinens ad matricem ecclesiam? the issue was, whether it had baptysterium et sepulturam? for if it had the administration of the sacraments and sepulture, it was in law judged a church. 2 Inst. fol. 363.

A RECTORY is an intire parish church, with all its rights, glebes, tythes, and other profits whatsoever. Spelman. But the word rectoria is often used for the rector's manse, or parsonage house. Paroch. Ant. 179.

PARSON, persona, signifies the rector of a church; so called because he is bound, by virtue of his office, in propria persona servire Deo.

VICAR, vicarius, quasi vice fungens rectoris. At first a vicar was a mere curate to the impropiator of the church, removable at pleasure, as priests in antient times, when there were no particular parishes, were only curates to the bishops; but by degrees the vicars got a settled maintenance of the glebe, and some kinds of tythes, and now claim their dues, either by endowment, or by prescription. Where any church is a vicarage, it may be presumed that it formerly belonged to some monastery. There were no vicarages earlier than king John.

A DONATIVE is a spiritual presentment, be it church, chapel or vicarage, which is in the free gift, or collation of the patron, without making any presentation to, or having admission, institution, or induction, by or from the bishop. And it is exempt from all ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

A PECULIAR signifies a particular parish, or church, that hath jurisdiction within itself for probate of wills, &c. exempt from the ordinary, and the bishop's courts. It is an antient privilege of the see of Canterbury, that all manors, or advowsons belonging to it are exempt from the ordinary, and are reputed peculiars, of which there are fifty-seven in the province.

CHURCH-WARDENS are officers yearly chosen by the parishioners, or by the minister and parishioners, according to the custom of the place, to look to the church and church-yard, and to suppress prophaneness and immorality, &c. They are a corporation, and may sue for any thing belonging to their church, or the poor of their parish. In the antient episcopal synods, the bishops summoned credible persons out of every parish, to give information of the disorders of clergy and people. These were called testes synodales, and were in after times a kind of impannelled jury, who were upon oath to present all heretics, and other irregular persons. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 649. And these in process of time became standing officers, especially in great cities, and from hence were called synodsmen, and by corruption sidefmen. They are also sometimes called questmen, from the nature of their office, in making inquiry concerning offences. But for the most part this office is now devolved upon the churchwardens. Dr. Burn's Eccles. Law.

Parish registers were instituted by lord Cromwell, in September, anno 1538, while he was vicar-general to king H. 8.

TYTHES, tenths, dismes, decimæ, all signify the tenth part of the fruits of the earth, of beasts, &c. They are given to the clergy in recompence of their attending their office. Mr. Selden has shewn that tythes were not introduced here in England till towards the end of the eighth century, about 786, when parishes and ecclesiastical benefices came to be settled. In the early ages of the Christian church, the people disposed of their offerings, in the room of which tythes are now legally substituted, in various manners; now to priests, now to abbats, now to the poor; and when they were offered to baptismal or episcopal churches, they were received as indefinite offerings, the quantity whereof was wholly arbitrary, in respect of any constitution or general law in use; but some kind of offering was necessary to be made, on pain of excommunication. And it seems, the disposition of the offerings was so in the patron's power, by the practice of some places, that he might assign a certain portion of them to the minister of the church, and employ the rest at his pleasure. About the year 780 or 800, laws were made by Charles king of France, Italy, and Lombardy, and afterwards emperor, for the payment of tythes. Pope Innocent III. about the year 1200, decreed the tythes to be paid to the parish priest; and though subjects of this nation were not bound by his decree, yet as it was judged reasonable, it became customary here, and the custom in time grew into a law. Religious persons antiently paid no tithes of lands in their own possession, but this privilege was restrained by pope Adrian.

GLEBE is a portion of land, meadow or pasture, belonging to the parsonage or vicarage, over and above the tythes.

COMPOSITION, an agreement or contract between a parson, patron and ordinary, &c. for money, or other things, in lieu of tythes, called real composition. An agreement between the parson and the parishioners, to pay so much instead of tythes, is called a personal contract; and though confirmed by the ordinary, yet that doth not make it a real composition, because he ought to be a party to the deed. March's Rep. 87. And by 13 Eliz. c. 10. shall not bind the successor, unless made for twenty-one years, or three lives. Compositions were made at first for a valuable consideration, so that though in process of time, upon the increase of the value of lands, they do not amount to the value of the tythes, yet custom prevails, and from hence arises a modus decimandi.

PROCURATIONS are sums of money which parish priests pay to the bishop, or archdeacon, ratione visitationis. They were antiently paid in necessary victuals, for the visitor and his attendants, but turned into money, on account of the many abuses of the visitors. Complaint was made to pope Clement IV. that the archdeacon of Richmond, visiting the diocese, travelled with 103 horses, twenty-one dogs, and three hawks, which vast equipage was so oppressive to the religious houses as to occasion the spending in an hour as much as would have maintained the monks a long time. Mon. Angl. 2 tom. p. 165.

FIRST-FRUITS, annates, primitiæ, are the profits of every spiritual living for one year, given in ancient time to the pope, through all Christendom; but translated to the king, here in England, by statute 26 H. 8. c. 3. But what pope first imposed first-fruits, historians do not agree. 4 Inst. 120. Sir Robert Atkyns says it was done in the year 1316.

MORTUARY is a gift left by a man at his death to his parish church, in recompence of his personal tythes and offerings, not duly paid in his life-time. It was antiently called saulesceat, which signifies symbolum animæ. Formerly, and until 21 H. 8. cap. 6. statute-mortuaries were paid in cattle, the best to the lord for a heriot, the second for a mortuary. At the conquest it was called a cors-present, because the beast was presented with the body at the funeral. And sometimes a principal, of which see a learned discourse in the Antiquities of Warwickshire, fol. 679. And Selden's Hist. of Tythes, 287. There is no mortuary due by law, but by custom. 2 Inst. 491.

SYNODAL is a tribute in money paid to the bishop, or archdeacon, by the inferior clergy, at Easter visitation; and it is called Synodale, because it was paid yearly at the Easter synod. These were the assemblies of the clergy, wherein they presented their grievances for redress, which are now discontinued.

PENTECOSTALS, denarii de caritate, Whitfarthings, the customary oblations made to the cathedral

thedral church about the time of Pentecost, when the parish priests, and many of the people, went in procession to visit the mother church. This contribution, though at first but a voluntary gift, to help to maintain and adorn the bishop's see, or cathedral church, was afterwards charged as a settled due upon the parish priest.

SANCTUARIES were places privileged by the prince for the safe-guard of offenders. The Jews had cities of refuge; the Athenians and Romans had their sanctuaries; but our antient kings of England had them in greater reverence than any others in their time; for such as had committed even felonies and treasons, were permitted to take shelter in them, provided they acknowledged their crimes within forty days, and submitted themselves to banishment; mean while, if any layman expelled them, he was excommunicated; if any clerk, he was made irregular; but afterwards, no man might relieve them. Staunf. Pl. Cor.—Sanctuaries were taken away by stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 2. f. 7.

The coifs, which the judges wear on the crown of their heads, are said to have come into use in the following manner. In early ages the clergy filled most of the places of great profit, trust and power, in the gift of the crown, as indeed there were few in those days who had learning enough to acquit themselves properly beside them. King Rich. I. having constituted Hubert Walter, (archbishop of Canterbury) the chief justiciary of England, pope Innocent, by his brief, in the year 1198, required the king to remove the archbishop from that office, alledging that it did not become bishops to be employed in secular affairs, and threatened the king with an interdict in case of refusal. The king forthwith obeyed, and made Jeofry, the son of Peter, chief justiciary in his place. However the clergy continued long after in civil employments belonging to justice; but, to save appearances, they changed their habit; and to cover their shaved heads, introduced the use of coifs, which the judges and serjeants at law have continued to wear ever since.

Many of the officers in chancery were antiently of the ecclesiastical order, and the lord chancellor himself was called archicapellanus. The six clerks, who are considerable officers in that court, still bear their primitive names: and the original occasion why so many presentations to churches were annexed to the great office of lord chancellor, was, that he might thereby be enabled to reward the officers of his court.

Of the Names of Places, and Persons; of Titles, Dignities, &c.

MOST of the names of places and persons are significant; the former being generally expressive of the situation, the latter of the various sentiments or conditions of those that gave them: yet it is often difficult to trace them to their origin.

The Britons were the antient inhabitants of this island, the Romans subdued it, to them succeeded the Saxons, after them the Danes got footing here, and last of all it submitted to the Normans. It is probable that some persons of each nation, gave names to places where they had authority. This being the case, how difficult, how uncertain must the etymology of names be, in many instances. Some appear to be of British, others of Saxon original; and there are still others, probably so mutilated and corrupted in common use, or given for reasons so remote and obscure, that I have not ventured to say any thing about them.

The explanation of the following words, which enter into the composition of the names of places, will direct to the etymology:

Ab, in the beginning of the names of places is oftentimes a contraction of Abbot, and implies either that a monastery was there, or that the place belonged to some monastery.

E

Ac, from ac, Saxon, an oak.

Ar, (British) upon.

Bac, (French) a ferry.

Bach, bec, beke; a river, a stream. Munster.

Bearne, a wood. Bede.

Beorb, beoph, (Saxon) acervus, a heap.

Bere, a court, the lord's court; or from bepe, A. S. barley.

Berie, a flat situation.

Berry, a hill, from the Dutch word berg.

Berton, barton; from bepe, A. S. barley; and tun, a vill, a town.

Beys, little rills or brooks.

Bod, (British) a mansion.

Bois, (French) wood.

Bolde, bolb; A. S. a village.

Borne, bourn, burne; burn, A. S. a river or brook.

Borow, borough, denote an antient town.

By at the end of the names of places signifies village, or dwelling-place. It is of Danish extraction, whence we have the term by-laws in England, i. e. such laws as are peculiar to each town or village.

Câr,

Câr, Câer, (British) a fortified city. Also Car is sometimes put for a low watry place, or pool where alders grow.

Carnes, a heap of stones.

Ced, the brow or descent of a place.

Cene, A. S. bold, valiant.

Charlton, the grange, the carle's or husbandman's town.

Combe, (Cwmm, Br.) a valley between two hills.

Cope, the head, the top of a high hill.

Covert, (French) a shadowed place, or shade.

Cro, croy; marshy lands.

Croft, A. S. a little close. Our ancestors used to say proverbially of a very poor man, "He had ne toft, ne croft."

Dale, dole; (British) a plain near the sea, or great river.

Delle, a dike.

Den, ðen, (Saxon) vallis, locus sylvestris; a valley, or a place near woods.

Der. Names of this beginning signify places where wild beasts herd together, from the Saxon deop, fera, a wild beast; or a watry situation, from dwr, C. Br. water.

Dod, the sedge on the bank of a river.

Don, doun, dun; a down, a high hill or mount. Also don is sometimes put for ton, which see.

Droffen, dru, druff, druffen; a thicket, or wood in a valley.

Ea, or ey, eia; from A. S. Ea, water. Names of these terminations denote that the places are in a watry situation.

Ell, watry, or bottom.

Er. This syllable in the middle of words is contracted from the Saxon papa, which signifies inhabitants; e. g. Canterbury, antiently written Cantwaraburgh.

Fell, (Saxon) craigs, barren and stony rocks.

Ferth and Fortb (common terminations, says the editor of Camden) are the same as an army, in English, coming from the Saxon word fyrð.

Flet, from flod, A. S. a river.

Ford, where there was a noted one.

Fritb, a wood, a plain amidst woods; also peace, the sea, or a place which the tide overfloweth.

Ger, from ger, A. S. mud.

Gers, from gynar, zeyer, A. S. fens.

Gill, a small water. Camden.

Glade, from klados, Gr. a bough, a shady place.

Glyn, (British) a narrow vale thickly set with woods.

Gorse, furz, a prickly shrub.

Grange, a farm, or house, generally at a considerable distance from the town.

Ham, often abridged into am; a house, a village, a town, a farm, a meadow.

Haugh, bough; a green plot, in a valley, as used in the North.

Hay, (French) a hedge. Hay-boot, wood to repair hedges.

Heal, from hæl, A. S. whole, health.

Hen, (British) old.

Here, ber; from hepe, A. S. army.

Herne, burne, or horn; a house, a corner.

Alfricus.

Hirft, burft, berft; a little wood. Domesday.

Holt, a wood. Alfricus.

Hore, from hoph, (Saxon) filth.

Holm, an island, a place furrounded with water; and sometimes meadow ground on the water side.

Hope, the side of an hill; but in the North a low ground amidst the tops of hills. Camden.

How, bou, or boo; a hill, rising ground, high.

Ing, inġ, (Saxon) a meadow or low ground, or watry place.

Kemp; from cempa, A. S. a soldier.

Knoll, the top of a hill.

Lade, lod, from ladian, A. S. to empty; a passage of waters, the mouth of a river.

Laith (British) moist.

Leag, leg, from lez, A. S. a pasture.

Lle, (British) a place; leag, leigh, lee; A. S. a field; also the last in Old Eng. signifies a shelter.

Ley; from ley, A. S. upland pasture, untilled ground, still called the leys.

Ling, fern.

Llys, (British) a palace, a court.

Lowe, an artificial mount or hill.

Llydan, (British) broad.

Lyd, from lida, (Saxon) the shore.

Maes, (Br.) a field; but in the name of a place, signifies sometimes that a battle has been fought there.

Mâr, mâr, and môr, signified antiently water as well as sea. Lluyd in Baxter.

Mer, mere; a fen, marsh, pool:—also mere, a fence or boundary.

March, mearc, (Sax.) a limit or confine.

Marsh, from meþc, S. a fenny place.

Mees, meadows.

Mesnil, or menil; in Norman-French a mansion-house.

Minster, contracted from monastery, a church.

Mod, fr. mod, Sax. valour; also proud or lofty.

Mouth, where a river falls into the sea, or into another water.

Næse, or nefs; nære, (Saxon) a promontory, because it runs into the sea like a nose.

Nore, north.

Oc, aac, (Saxon) oak.

Over. Words beginning or ending thus, are names of places situated near the bank of some river, from oppe, Saxon, ripa, super; a bank, over.

Pen, ben, fen; (British) the head; the top of a hill, mountain, or any other thing.

Plat, (French) plain ground.

Pré, prey; (French) a meadow.

Prindle, the same as Croft.

Rad, rod; from paðe, A. S. counsel.

Rein, (Teut.) pure.

Ric, (Saxon) a kingdom, rich; Teut. a government.

Rill, a small brook.

Ritby, from rbyd, (British) a ford.

Rbós; (British) a mountain-meadow, a moist large plain; also a heath.

Row, from rue, (French) a street.

Ry, from rive, (French) a shore, coast or bank.

Sale (Fr.) a hall, an entrance; whence, Saloon, or Salo, which in High Dutch signifies a king's court.

Scarr, a craggy, stony hill.

Secce, A. S. a fight.

Sel, good, convenient.

Sett, habitation, or feat.

Sbaw, many trees near together, or shadow of trees.

Sige, victory.

Slade, from pled, (Saxon) a long, flat slip of ground, a valley.

Snotb, or sneath; a lot or portion.

Socne, A. S. libertas, freedom.

Stan, a stone.

Sted, from stadt, Dutch; a standing place, a station.

Stoke, } a place. Alfricus.

Stow,

Strand, a bank of a river.

Stroad, } some think the same as strand.

Stroud,

Sutton, south town.

Tam, } a great number of our larger rivers begin with these words; hence Thame, or Tim, } Thames; Tav, Taiy.—This tam is probably the same with the Greek tamos in Tiv, } Potamos, Po in Greek being an old prepositive. Lluyd in Baxter.

Tein, an inclosure.

Tern, or dern; a standing pool, a word usual in the North.

Thet Thed, from Deod, A. S. the people.

Thorp, threp, throp; (Saxon) a street, village.

Thurn, a tower. Ortelius.

Tin, Br. narrow.

Toft, a piece of ground where there hath been a house.

Tor, a high place, or tower; also a hill in the West.

Ton, } a town, village, fence, inclosure, farm,

Tun, } dwelling.

Tref, Tre, (British) a town, house or home.

Treau, treaw; a tree.

Trey, from tref, (British) a town.

Wad, A. S. a ford.

Wald;

Wcald;

Wild;

Wara, (Saxon) vid. Er.

Wark, or werk; a work or building.

Wartb; a customary payment for castle-guard.

Wath; a ford.

Wic, wich, wick; [i short] the curviture or reach of a river, or of the sea; Junius Rhenanus.—But Alfricus and Tillius make it a castle or little port, others a dairy farm.—Wica, in old English, vicus; a street, or passage between rows of houses.

Wich; [i long] a salt spring.

Wia; (Saxon) via, a way.

Wig, a wood, forest, grove.

Win, (Saxon) prælium, a battle. At the beginning and end of the names of places, it denotes that some great battle was fought there.

Windafs, wandafs, and wanlafs; a term in hunting, as to drive the windafs. It signifies the chasing a deer to a stand, where a person is ready with a bow or gun to shoot.

Wire, A. S. a forest.

Worth, from popð, Sax. a village, street, croft. It was antiently written werth, weorthid. Alfricus makes it prædium, a possession or farm. Abbo translates it a court or place; Killianus a fort, and an isle; a fortified place.

Well, watry, or bottom.

Would, a down.

Wye, ey; water: also wy, gwy, Br. wandering.

Some persons have objected, that there is a great impropriety in supposing a word to be compounded of parts drawn from different languages; but Quintilian shews the contrary, and produceth for instances, Epirbedium, Anti-cato, Biclinium, Epitogium; being compounded of Greek, Latin and other languages. Camden's Br. col. cclx.

Names were given to men for distinction of persons; but they were chosen upon occasions too numerous to specify. In early ages they were often given upon future good hope conceived by parents of their children. Among the Roman names we find Victor, a conqueror; Probus, honest, good; Castus, chaste; Fauftus, fortunate; &c. which Cicero calls bona nomina; for many wise men were of opinion that names were ominous. Claudius Rutillius hints at this notion in the following lines,

Nominibus certis credam decurrere mores?

Moribus, aut potius, nomina certa dari?

Antiently people had but one proper name, as David, Ulysses, Romulus, Caradoc, Hengist, Edmund, &c. The Romans were the first that took surnames, in confirmation of their league with the Sabines, whose names they used before their own; as the Sabines, in like manner, did the Roman.

Surnames obtained in France about the year 1000, and at the conquest, or a little before, were brought into England, from which time, by degrees, the better sort took them; but they were not fully settled among the common people, till about the time of Ed. II. The cognomen was used by the Anglo-Saxons before this time, but that differed from the surname, because it did not descend from the father to the son, but was a sort of nickname. Some persons have been of opinion, that surnames were so called from the Latin super, or the French sur, over; because in early ages it was usual to write the titles of persons over their names, as ^{Earl} William, but the title was not the surnames.

name. Others have thought them so called, as being the name of the fire, or father; but the better reason seems to be, because they are superadded to Christian names. Domesday book is perhaps the earliest record in which they are to be found: most of them were names of places, where those that assumed them had resided, or of which they were lords; as Roger de Laci, Roger de Belmont, Roger de Luri, Roger de Berchelai, &c. Others are distinguished with filius, as Willielmus filius Norman, Drogo filius Ponz, &c. others again with the name of their office, as Robertus Dispensator, Walterius Balistarius, Humfridus Camerarius, &c. but there are some single names in that book, placed at the end of every shire, as men of least account; for it soon became a disgrace to have but one name, as bastards had. Robert of Gloucester says, when king H. 1. would have married the great heiress of Fitz-Haimon, lord of Gloucester, to his bastard son Robert, she first refusing, answered,

So vair eritage as ich habbe, it were me grete shame

Vor to abbe an louerd, bote he had an to name.

This passage is expressed with some variation, and more like the present language, by another author,

— It were to me a great shame

To have a lord withouten his twa name.

So the king gave him the name of Fitz-roy, who was afterwards earl of Gloucester.

The most antient surnames, and of best account, are deduced from places in Normandy, where, Mr. Camden says, there is not a village but gives name to some family in England; they are known by having the French de, du, des, dela, prefixt; and beginning or ending with font, fant, beau, belle, saint, mont, bois, aux, eux, val, vauz, cort, court, fort, champ, ville, &c. which last termination some have corrupted into field, others into well, as Somerfield, for Somerville; Boswell, for Basseville, &c. Many noble families take their names from places in Brittany, and other parts of France; and there is hardly a village in Great Britain but hath given a family name: which in old English writings had of, or a, commonly set before them; as Thomas of Breadstone, John a Standish, &c.

Rivers gave names to families, as Derwentwater, Trent, Tamer; and trees, as Box, Ash, Pine, Asp, &c. which in former times had at prefixed to them, as well as to some other kinds of local names, viz. At More, At Bower, At Wood, At Down, At Ho, At Beech, At Well, &c. The prefix hath been retained in some, as Atwood, Atho, Atwell; but removed from others. The distinctions of local names [de, of, a, at, and le] were strictly observed in records till about the time of Edw. IV.

Names have been taken from trades, as Brewer, Chapman, Fuller; from offices, as Chamberlain, Steward, Marshal; from ecclesiastical functions, as Bishop, Dean; from civil honours, as King, Prince, Duke; from the qualities of the mind, as Wise, Sharp, Prat, i. e. subtil; from habits of the body, as Strong, Long; from colours, flowers, beasts, birds, fishes, from Christian names, nick names, and a variety of other things and occasions, to exemplify which would take up too much room, and therefore shall mention only one instance more, just as I find it, on account of its singularity, without vouching for the truth of the story. It is of a Grecian family, that obtained the name of Gephyri, i. e. Bridges; of whom it is said, that the mother being delivered of nine children at a birth, in a foolish fear sent seven of them to be drowned; the father coming instantly by, saved them on the bridge of the river, and so gave them the above name.

It is a good proof of antient descent, when the name of the person is the same with the place where he resides, as Codrington of Codrington, Aylworth of Aylworth, Slaughter of Slaughter, and such others.

In times past, gentlemen changed their names upon many occasions, but most commonly upon changing their habitation. The heir took the father's surname, and the younger sons assumed the names of the lands allotted them, which is the custom in France at this time. Thus Hugh de Sudington gave to his second son his manor of Frydon; to his third, that of Pantley; the sons called themselves De Frydon, De Pantley; and their posterity afterwards removed the particle de. Some took their mother's name, others that of their progenitors, benefactors, &c. in remembrance of them; others changed their names at the king's command, as in the instance of king Ed. IV. who often told the family of the Picards that he loved them, but not their names, upon which they changed it, one of them taking the name of Ruddle, where he was born.

A Welch gentleman, temp. H. 8. being called at the pannel of the jury by the name of Thomas Ap Williams, Ap Thomas, Ap Richard, Ap Hoel, Ap Evan Vaughan, &c. was advised by the judge to leave that old manner; whereupon he afterwards called himself Moston, from his principal house, and left that surname to his family.

Many names are strangely contracted, as At Ash into Tash, At Abbey into Tabbey, Saint Oyl into Toly, Saint Ebbe into Tabbe, Saint Olyth into Tows; others again are so distorted by the ignorant vulgar, to make them, according to their apprehensions, significant, that there is but a faint likeness either in sound or orthography left. We find Wormwood for Ormond, Drinkwater for Derwentwater, Cuckold for Coxwold, and many others of the same nature. There is a remarkable instance of this abuse in my own family, who about thirty years ago always wrote their name Rutter; but were induced by an ignorant person to change it, because it should signify something they had heard of; and I have foolishly followed them.

Tho' women with us, at their marriage, change their own surnames for those of their husbands, because it is said, non sunt duo, sed caro una; yet it is not so every where. In France, a woman of family retains her name, and useth it with her husband's; as for instance, if Genevieve Villeville marry A. Belmont, she then writes herself Genevieve Belinont Villeville;—and so of others.

The translating of names into Greek or Latin is still in use among the Germans, for he whose name is Ertswapt, or Blackland, will be Melancthon; if Newman, Neander; if Holiman, Ofiander; if Brook, Torrentius; if Fen, Paludanus, &c. And here in England there are a few that have two surnames, with aliàs betwixt them. Judge Catline having taken exception against a person in this respect, said, no honest man had a double name, and came in with an aliàs; upon which the person asked him, what exception his lordship could take to Jesus Christ, aliàs Jesus of Nazareth? which reply probably might soften his lordship's severity.

It was usual, among the antients, to give such names to their kings and princes as should contain the name of one of their deities. Thus the Tyrian, or Phœnician princes were called Beleafartus, Abdaftartus, Ithobaal, from their deities Baal and Astaroth. Nebo, a Babylonian idol, is a part of the names of Nebuchadonezar, Nabopollassar, and Nabonitus, kings of Babylon. Among the Egyptians were the kings Busiris, Petosiris, Osiris, &c. having the Egyptian deity Siris in their names; as the Jewish kings Amaziah, Azariah, and divers others have in them one of the names of the true God. And the kings of our antient Britons had Belin, or Abellio, one of their deities in the names of Cassibelin, Cynobelin, and of some others.

Adjuncts to names and titles are of very antient usage. Dominus was attributed to the Roman emperors. Lucian says, speaking of the beginning of the empire in Julius Cæsar,

*Namq; omnes voces, per quas jam tempore tanto
Mentimur Dominis, hæc primum reperit ætas.*

By which it should seem, that those titular attributes of greatness had their origin at Rome about that time. Augustus refused the title of Dominus, by public edict, perhaps because it was then taken up by every private man. But Domitian was of another disposition, for Suetonius informs us, that by his express order, it was thus inserted in the letters which carried his commands, Dominus et Deus noster sic fieri jubet. Dioclesian was the next of the emperors, after Domitian, that permitted himself to be so stiled. Constantine the Great was the first of the Christian emperors that assumed it; and the learned Selden has shewn, that some title of the same signification hath been given to the princes of the Mahomedan states, as well as to those of every kingdom in Europe.

The Romans, under the late emperors, were very exact and particular in giving five sorts of titles to their officers and great men. Illustris was the highest, appropriated to the Præfecti Prætorio of Italy and Gallia, the Præfecti of the city of Rome, the Magister Equitum, Magister Peditum, the Quæstor Palatii, the Comes Largitionis, and to all that had voice in the senate.—Spectabilis was the second title due to the lieutenants general, Comites of provinces, &c.—Clarissimus was the third title peculiar to the Consulares, Corretores, and Præstes of provinces.—Perfèctissimus was the fourth.—Egregius was the fifth; and none could have the two last but by patent, nor could Clarissimus be otherwise obtained, except only by these great officers above specified, in virtue of their offices.

The title of duke was antiently given to great men, in respect of their military employments. Under the Roman empire, he that had a province committed to him, not being a count, was called Dux. The first duke of the present acceptation, was the Black Prince, created duke of Cornwall by his father when in parliament, 11 Edw. 3. 1337. By this creation, not only the first born son of the kings of England, but the eldest living also, are always dukes of Cornwall.

As duke and earl were used with us for expressions of the same signification, many years before duke was made a distinct dignity; so earls and barons were sometimes called marquisses. But Marchia or Marchisus, of itself, did not antiently denote any title of honour, any more than Com-marchiones regni nostri, in the old Latin translation of king Ina's laws, for such as lived binnan ðam gemæpum uþer rices, i. e. in the frontiers of the kingdom, which are called marches, from whence the word is derived. But afterwards it became a special dignity also, next beneath that of duke. The first of this sort was Robert de Vere, earl of Oxford, created marquis of Dublin, 9 R. 2. which Walsingham says the lords took very ill, assigning their reasons, quia nec prudentia cæteris, nec armis valentior extitisset.

Viscount is a title of still later date, and stands between earl and baron. The first was John Beaumont, created viscount Beaumont, 18 E. 6.

Baron with us is the most antient title. Before the settling of the Norman monarchy, the kingdom was composed of earldoms and baronies. Most of the great barons fell in the battle of Evesham, 1265, therefore others were called by writ; and because they sat in parliament with the former, they were called peers, [from pares,] being in every respect reputed equal to those barons which were by tenure.

Coronets were first assigned to earls in the reign of king H. 3. to viscounts by king J. 1. and to barons by king C. 2. after the restoration.

The title of baronet is hereditary. The first creation was by king James 1. on the twenty-second day of May, in the ninth year of his reign. In the following year a decree was made that the baronets and their eldest sons, being of full age, should should be knighted, and that they and their descendants should bear the arms of Ulster; i. e. on a field argent, a hand gules, either in a canton in their coat of arms, or in an escutcheon, at their own choice.

The name of knight, [in Latin, eques, miles; in French, chevalier] has been of various significations. In Saxon it is written Cniht or Cnyht, and signifies a boy, a servant, an attendant; sometimes a soldier. The chief gentlemen or freeholders of every county, because they held by knights service, were stiled Chivallers in the statute of Westminster the first, concerning the choice of coroners. Antiently great subjects, as well as their sovereigns, gave this dignity; but the conferring of it has been long since confined to the sovereign only. Various ceremonies have been used on this occasion, such as some antient knight girding the person with a sword, and putting on his spurs, &c. &c. which the reader may see at large in Seldon's Tit. of Honor, c. 5. f. 34.

The esquire [armiger, scutifer] is beneath the knight, and, in the opinion of the learned author just mentioned, is sometimes supplied in our antient writings by serviens, or serjeant, which is the same word, and sometimes distinguished from it. In the statute 23 H. 6. concerning the choice of knights of the shire, it is said they must be either knights ou autrement tielx notables esquiers, gentileshomes del nativite des mesmes les counties come soient ables destre chevalier, & nul home destre tiel chivalier que estoite en le degrer de Vadlet et desouth. This word vadlet is the same as varlet, and has the signification of knave at present; though both of them were antiently names of civil degrees, or service only. In the reign of R. 2. John de Kingstone was created esquire by patent; and Seldon thinks that then it might be acquired by service or employment. At the time of creation, the esquire received a collar of SS from the king, as an ensign of the dignity. It was the business of esquires to attend their respective knights, each of whom had two, to the wars and elsewhere; but long before military service was laid aside, and ever since that time, those whose birth or eminence have been thought worthy some note of distinction, above the rank of gentleman, have had that of esquire given them.

I shall conclude this chapter with an observation of the learned Camden, who, speaking of ancestors, parentage, and names, recommends every man to say, "Vix ea nostra voco; for, says he, "we are come to this present time by various successive descents, the low are descended from the high, and contrariwise the high from the low." He goes on. "If any vaunt of their names, let them look to it, lest they have inania nomina; you know who saith, vestra nomina nunquam sum admiratus; viros qui ea vobis reliquerunt, magnos arbitrabor."

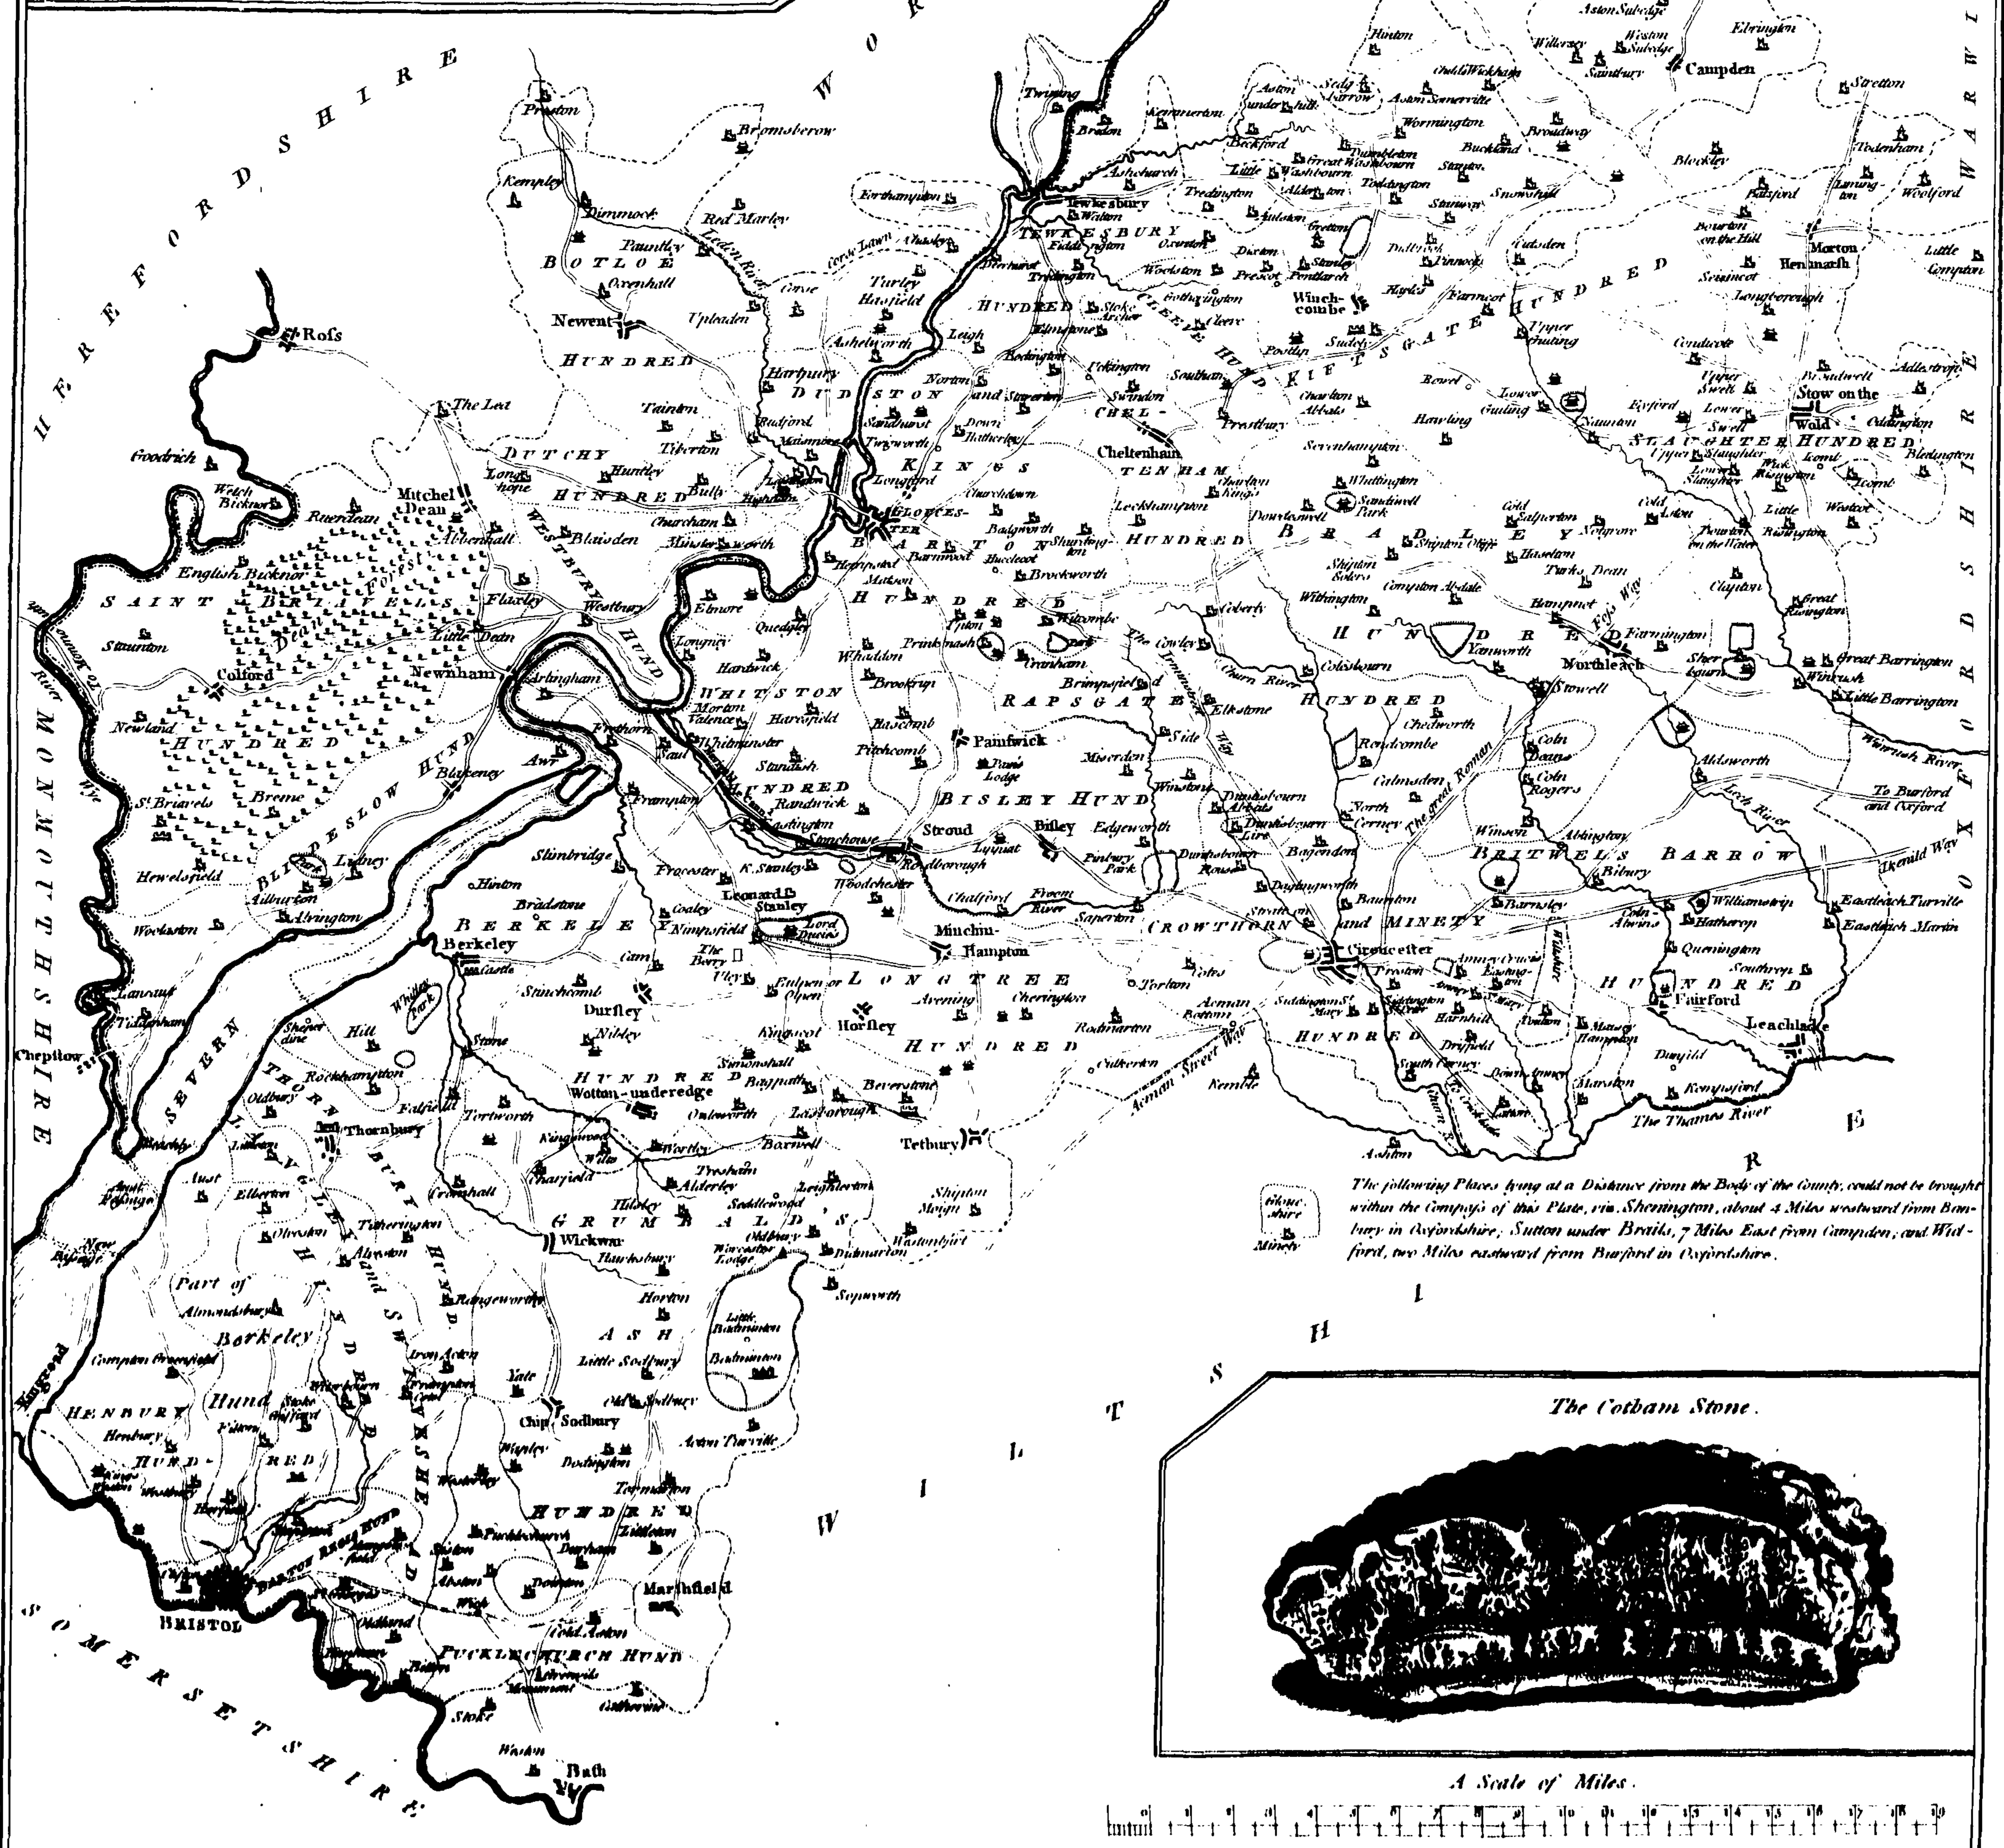

GLOUCESTERSHIRE,

Accurately laid down in the Year 1779.

J. Dury Sculp. S. Thomas Apsd. Lond.

The following Places lying at a Distance from the Body of the County, could not be brought within the Compys of this Plate, viz. Sherington, about 4 Miles westward from Banbury in Oxfordshire, Sutton under Brails, 7 Miles East from Campden, and Wilford, two Miles eastward from Banford in Oxfordshire.

A Scale of Miles.

Gloucestershire.

C O N S I D E R E D,

I. As INTIRE and UNDIVIDED.

II. As divided by Nature into the COTESWOLD, or Hill-country, the VALE, and the FOREST.

III. In its Political Distribution into Hundreds.

Of the Name, Situation, Extent, Antient State, Divisions, Customs, Manufactures, Produce, &c. of the County.

G LOUCESTERSHIRE is so called from Gloucester, a handsome city, its capital, and rype, a Saxon word, signifying a division, from rypan, to cut or separate.

The inhabitants of this county and of Oxfordshire were called by the Romans Dobuni, which Dion has mistaken for Bodunni. The name is supposed to be derived from Dwfn, which in the British language signifies deep, * or low. By the Dobuni, therefore, were originally meant the inhabitants of the vale country; but gradually the word obtained a larger signification; for, as they increased, and removed to the higher lands, they were nevertheless considered as belonging to, and retained the same name with the people of the vale, whence they came; for in all countries the richer soils have been § first inhabited, but the people multiplying, extend their limits, till by degrees the less hospitable hills and woodlands yield to cultivation.

When the Romans were in Britain, there was no such particular district as Gloucestershire. After they had subdued this part of the island almost as far as Scotland, they divided it into Britannia Prima et Secunda. The tract of country, which we now call Gloucestershire, lay in both provinces, because the river Severn divided them for a considerable length. That part which lay on the S. E. of the river Severn was in Britannia Prima, under the government of the president residing at London. The other part, on the N. W. of the Severn, which was formerly much more woody than at present, and had been possessed by the Silures, was in Britannia Secunda, under the government of the president residing at Caerleon, in Monmouthshire.

* Mr Camden has shewn, that many places have taken their names from such a situation, of which Catabathmos in Africa, and Dowdale in Britain, are instances.

§ And men first building towns, themselves did wisely seat
Still in the bounteous vale; whose burthened pasture bears
The most abundant swarth. Drayton's Polyolb. S. 14.
After

After the Romans quitted Britain, in the 476th year from Julius Cæsar's coming over, the Saxons at length seized the reigns of government, and, the best part of the Island falling into their hands, was divided into seven kingdoms, of which Mercia was one. At this time we know nothing of any smaller division of territory, for the name of the Dobuni, which distinguished the inhabitants of Gloucestershire and Oxfordshire, was utterly lost.

When the Saxons, under the heptarchy, were first converted to christianity, the kingdom and the diocese were of the same dimensions, under one king and one bishop. The first subdivision of kingdoms under them seems to be of ecclesiastical establishment; for in the year 679, the kingdom of Mercia was divided into five bishopricks, of which Florence of Worcester saith, Wiccias † was the first.

This province of Wiccias was probably of the same extent with the antient bishoprick of Worcester, containing all that part of Gloucestershire situate on the S. E. of the Severn, with the city of Bristol; the greatest part of Worcestershire, and near the half of Warwickshire, including the town of Warwick.

Why the Saxons gave this province and its inhabitants the respective names of Wiccias and Wicces, is not absolutely certain. Mr. Camden, at the beginning of his account of Gloucestershire, with great diffidence conjectures, that the names might come from the Saxon word Wic, which some have thought to signify the creek of a river; and that because the Wicces or Wiccij dwelt about the mouth of the Severn, they obtained that appellation. But if it be considered, that in Edgar's charter to Oswald, the Cotefwold country about Blockley and Icombe is called * Mons Wiccifca, Wiccian hill; and that Sceorstan is expressly said by Florentius to be in Wiccias, all at a great distance from any large river, one would willingly find a better reason for the name; which I think the same learned author has given in another place. In this province were many § briny wells, which the antient English in their language called Wiches, whence with little trouble they made salt; and 'tis not improbable but that Wiccias might thence obtain it's name, especially as the Wiches were so considerable, that salt was antiently the chief article of commerce in that country. There is at present only one of them remaining, the others being closed up, because it appears by antient writings that they were confined to one place for the making of salt, to prevent too great a consumption of wood.

Gloucestershire was undoubtedly first so called when it was first made a county, which signifies the same as shire; the one coming from the French, the other from the Saxon language, both denoting one of those portions into which the whole kingdom is divided, for the better government of it, and for the more easy administration of justice.

The dividing of the kingdom into counties has generally been attributed to king Alfred. Ingulphus affirms it; but Selden has clearly demonstrated the contrary. The Pagi and Provinciae, which Ingulphus mentions in the following passage, Totius Angliæ pagos & provincias in comitatus primus omnium commutavit, were the same with the comitatus, or shires. And, before Alfred's time, these Pagi had their ealdormen in them. Those of Berkshire, Devonshire and Somersetshire, were Ethelwolfus, Ceorle, and Eanulf, under king Athelwolfe, father of Alfred; as they are expressly mentioned by Asserius Menevensis, who lived in king Alfred's time. And we also learn by the same antient author, and by Ethelwerd, another writer of the Saxon times, that Ealhere, or Alchere was ealdorman of Kent, and Auda or Wuda, of Surry, at the same time that Ofric was ealdorman of Dorset. Further, the charter of the foundation of Crowland abbey, granted by king Ethelbald, was subscribed by the comites of Leicester and Lincoln: And lastly, the original laws of Ina, king of Westsex, anno 720, say, That if an ealdorman were guilty of an escape, þolige hyr rcyne, perdat comitatum suum, i. e. he should lose his shire. Alfred therefore could not be the first that began to divide the kingdom into counties.

This county lies in the Oxford circuit, is bounded on the N. W. by Herefordshire; on the E. by Oxfordshire, and a small part of Berkshire; on the S. by Wiltshire; and on the W. by part of Somersetshire, the British channel, and Monmouthshire. It extends itself in length from the parish of Clifford-Chambers, near Stratford upon Avon, to Clifton, beyond the city of Bristol, in a S. W. direction, about seventy statute-miles; and in breadth, from Leachlade, north-westward to the parish of Preston, in the hundred of Botloe, about forty such miles. Draw a straight line lengthwise through the county, to touch each of the two first mentioned places, and another line to cross it, from one of those points of extreme breadth to the other, and they will intersect about Shurdington, nearly at right angles.

The form of the county resembles an ellipsis, the N. E. end of which is more acute than the other. If five miles of the length, and six of the breadth, be abated for irregular jettings out at those extremities, the superficial content of the whole county will be nearly 1,100,000 acres. Notwith-

† Wiccias is said to contain 300 hides of land. Camd. col. ccxxv.
* Spelman reads it corruptly Monte Wittifca, and the Monasticon more corruptly Wibifca. Add. to Camden, col. 617.

§ The old Chartulary mentions a salt-pit in the boundaries of Scepwæsetune [Shipston upon Stour] a salt-well adjacent to Icomb, on the west; a road called Salt-street near Euinlade; a salt-pit, or Saltere walan, in the limits of Wulfrinton, to the east of Worcester. But the springs that were most famous and have survived the memory of all their rivals, are those near the river Salwarpe, which gave both name and subsistence to a town, that grew up on their margin, now distinguished by the name of Droit-wich; in Domesday called Wich, in Saxon charters Wic, and sometimes Salt Wic. Green's Survey of Worcester, P. 15.

standing this is considerably larger than a former estimate, [800,000] it will be found to come very near the truth.

A vast range of hills, covered with wood in many parts on the north-west side adjoining to the Vale, reaches from Campden, on the borders of Warwickshire and Worcesterhire, to Lansdown, near Bath; and runs through the county lengthwise, a little obliquely with the course of the Severn; dividing, not very unequally, the Vale and the Forest part of the county from the Cotswold.

Various parts of this chain of hills are denominated from the parishes in or near which they lie, and many great roads are carried down them. The turnpike-road from London to Worcester leads down Broadway-hill; that from Stow to Tewkesbury, down Stanway-hill; from Cirencester to Cheltenham, down Windass-hill; from London through Oxford, to Gloucester, down Crickley-hill; but through Cirencester to Gloucester, you descend Birdlip-hill: From the east part of the county, to either of the passages over the Severn at Framilode or Newnham, the road is down Rodborough-hill; from Bath to Gloucester, down Frocester-hill; from Cirencester to Wotton, Dursley, and Berkeley, down Wotton, Dursley, and Stinchcombe hills, respectively; from Oxford to Bristol, down Sodbury-hill; but from Oxford to Bath, down Fryson-hill; and the great road from London to Bristol leads down Tog-hill; so that there is no possibility of passing directly from Oxfordshire, Berkshire, or Wiltshire, to the vale of Gloucestershire, without descending one of the hills in this great chain, which stands as a boundary between the Cotswold and the Vale, the latter being again separated from the Forest by the interposition of the great river Severn.

Nature having thus divided the county into three parts, let us take her for our guide, and survey each of them distinctly in its order.

Of the C O T E S W O L D.

UNDER the denomination of the Cotswold, I now include all that high country on the south-east side of the beforementioned range of hills which runs through the county. It is a noble champaign country, the residence of many of the nobility and gentry, and abounds in verdant plains, downs, corn-fields, parks, woods, and little vallies, well supply'd with springs and rivulets, and enjoys a fine healthy air, which, however, in the higher and more exposed parts, has been thought too thin and cold for persons of very tender and delicate constitutions.

It was antiently much over-run with woods, whence I conjecture it obtained its double name, for Coed, in the British language, and weold, in the Saxon, both signify a wood, and together make a kind of tautology, of which there are many like instances in the names of other places. And with great deference to Mr. Camden, it seems probable that all those that have Cot, or Cotes in their composition, are derived from the beforementioned British word; and the present woody state of such places serves to strengthen this opinion.

Tho' this part of the county lies high with respect to the vale, yet in itself it is not very hilly; for when the traveller has gained the summit of the great ridge already mentioned, he finds himself on the verge of an extensive country, finely diversified with groves and plains, and gently rising grounds; plentifully watered with pleasant springs, purling rills, and winding brooks, some running north-westward into the Severn, whilst others, taking a contrary course, empty themselves into the Thames, which takes its rise in Gloucestershire, and is navigable for vessels of thirty or forty tons burthen, in the same county where it first becomes a river.

This country was always famous for feeding numerous flocks of sheep. Drayton has done it no little honour, who, in his poetic way, invokes the muse

“ to tell
How Ev'sham's fertile vale at first in liking fell
With Cotswold, that great king of shepherds, whose proud site
When that fair vale first saw, so nourish'd her delight
That him she only lov'd; for wisely she beheld
The beauties clean throughout that on his surface dweld.
* * * * *
T' whom Sarum's plain gives place, tho' famous for her flocks,
Yet hardly doth she tythe our Cotswold wealthy locks.
Though Lemster him exceed for fineness of her ore,
Yet quite he puts her downe for his abundant store.
A match so fit as hee, contenting to her mind,
Few vales (as I suppose) like Ev'sham hapt to find.
Nor any other wold like Cotswold ever sped,
So fair and rich a vale by fortun'g to wed.”

POLYOLBION. 14th Song.

Within the last forty years, prodigious improvements have been made here, by a course of husbandry, first introduced into these parts by the late Mr. Richard Bishop, once the most considerable seedsman in the kingdom; who brought the grafs-seeds, turnips, and clover into use, and taught the cotswold farmers how to become an opulent people. 'Till that time their sheep and other cattle were sent to winter in the vale for want of fodder; but the present method in husbandry, enables them to keep more than double the live stock they were used to do, upon their own lands, throughout the year.

Planting of saintfoin, clover, and turnips, answers two grand purposes to the cotswold farmer. His cattle, whilst they feed and fatten upon them, dung and fertilize the soil, which infallibly insures a good succeeding crop of corn; so that under favourable circumstances, and judicious management, ment, the produce of an acre in this country will sometimes equal that of a like quantity of land in the vale. However, if this be not always the case, it is generally allowed that the hill-country farmer has the advantage very considerably, since the vale lands are rented at double, or treble the price, and will not admit of proportionable improvement.

Saintfoin has long since been the produce of the Cotefwolds. Gloucestershire has the honour of leading the county of Norfolk in the culture of this valuable grass, which sir John Turner getting the knowledge of here, introduced into that county. The method of planting it is with barley or oats after turnips; but some persons think it better sown with wheat, to get strong and secure against a dry summer, which is so pernicious to it when planted in the spring. This grass is both fed and mow'd. It flourishes on the most stony land, and will last seven or eight years in pretty good vigour. When worn out, it is usual to break it up, by paring and burning, preparatory for a crop of wheat or turnips.

The cotefwold husbandry varies according to the strength of the soil, and the skill of the farmer. The crops are planted in the following orders.—On good inclosed land, 1. Wheat. 2. Beans, or pease. 3. Barley, or oats with clover.—Or, 1. Turnips. 2. Barley. 3. Pease. 4. Oats and clover. 5. Wheat. 6. Turnips.—Or, 1. Barley. 2. Clover for two years. 3. Wheat. 4. Pease.—Or, on very light land, they sometimes after a crop, lay down with ray-grass and clover.

The common fields are cropped, every other year, with all sorts of grain. And in such places where envy least prevails, and the farmers have discernment enough to see their own interest, they take a hitching out of the common field, by general consent, and plant with turnips or pease, in the year for fallowing.

There are many spots of strong land on this side the great ridge of hills, which are planted in the following order, 1. Turnips, to be fed with sheep 'till the spring. 2. Barley with clover. 3. Wheat. 4. Pease, or Beans. 5. Barley with clover. 6. Wheat. 7. Turnips.

The farmers pen their sheep upon the land universally, besides which they use no kind of manure except that of the yard and stable. Perhaps a few, on the side of Oxfordshire, may have made the experiment of woollen rags, but they are not at present likely to come into general use.

The common methods of planting pease here, are, setting in rows, and sowing broad cast. In both ways, about four bushels of seed go to the acre. But I would recommend an improved one, practised in several parts of Wiltshire. It is thus: With a plough, drawn by one horse, they make three shallow furrows in the dressed land, about eighteen or twenty inches asunder; into which, women following, throw the pease very regularly, at proper distances. A man coming after, covers the seed with earth by means of his foot, or a hoe, according as the land requires.

* See an inquiry into the Prices of wheat &c.

About three weeks after the plants appear, they flat hoe them, and about the same distance of time afterwards, draw the earth that is on one side of the rows, with a large hoe, over the roots and lower part of the plants, so as to lay them flat on the ground. When the blossoms are just dropt, and the kids appear, a person going betwixt the rows, plucks up those plants that are backward in blow, which is called reaping them.

By this management the crop ripens together, and the corn is so very even, and so much superior to what is raised in the common way, as to sell for at least 6*d.* a bushel extraordinary. The two hoeings are done at about 5*s.* an acre, the expence of which, the saving in the seed will defray; for two bushels and three pecks, or, at most, three bushels will plant an acre in this way.

The farms on the Cotefwold, are from one hundred to five or six hundred pounds a year. The price of labour is 10*d.* a day in the winter; 1*s.* in the spring, 1*s.* 6*d.* in grass mowing, and 1*s.* 8*d.* or 2*s.* for about five weeks at corn harvest.

Many of the downs, common fields, and waste lands, in this part of the county, have been lately inclosed, to the vast advantage of the proprietors of estates, and I apprehend of the kingdom in general; for, under favour, I will venture my opinion, that it is our interest to encourage agriculture rather than grazing, to which we have been too much inclined.

In former times, there were two things that operated very powerfully to the hindrance of agriculture. The great barons preferred grazing, because it required fewer hands than the plough employ'd, so that their vassals could be better spared from it, to attend them in their wars with the crown, and with each other, in which they were almost continually engaged.

Another thing was, before the woollen manufactures were brought into England, and from that time 'till the reign of queen Elizabeth, we were supposed to derive great advantages from the sale of unwrought wool to the Flemings; therefore breeding and feeding of sheep was the general practice, and it might perhaps be encouraged by government, for the king had a large revenue arising from the sale of that article.

This neglect of agriculture occasioned frequent famines, and great pestilence ensued. In the reign of that unhappy prince, Edward the Second, in the years 1314, 1315, and 1317, wheat sold for 3*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.* a quarter; and the next year it advanced to 6*l.* 14*s.* 7*d. which, considering all circumstances at that time, was at least equal to 8*l.* a bushel at present.

But I think there must be some mistake in this account.

Pestilence and famine might fill the nation with horror; but nothing besides long experience could convince it of its error in the neglect of agriculture, which a few only of the most sensible men discovered, and complained of, among whom was the great Sir Thomas More. — “Our flocks of sheep, says he, which were formerly so mild and gentle, are now become so voracious, as not only to devour men, but even fields, houses, and walled towns are laid waste and depopulated by them;” meaning, no doubt, that the people, wanting that employment which agriculture afforded them, many were obliged to leave their habitations, and so became thieves and strollers.

In the fourth year of king H. 7. the converting of arable land into pasture, was restrained by a statute, which rather prevented things from growing worse than made them better. But that which above all other things has mostly tended to promote agriculture, was the bounty on the exportation of corn, † first granted by parliament in the year 1689, which has induced a general spirit for inclosing the waste lands and common fields throughout the kingdom; a method of improvement adopted very early in Gloucestershire.

Some objections have been raised against inclosing, but it would be extending this digression too far to take any notice of them here.

Mr. Camden, who was a diligent inquirer, and faithful historian, takes notice of the wool of this country, for its whiteness and fineness, wherein he has been followed by a great number of writers who had either never seen, or seeing, had no judgment in that article. What kind of wool this may have been four or five hundred years ago, I can have no knowledge of, except from history; but can speak with certainty as to the present condition of it. The sheep of this country incline to the large size; for, since by the improvements in agriculture, the quantity of food for cattle is greatly increased, the farmers have both enlarged their flocks and improved the breed, by introducing the Leicestershire ram, which is sometimes brought hither in little carriages made for that purpose. I have been informed, that 40*l.* has been paid for the use of one of these rams for a season only. They are esteemed the stoutest sheep in the kingdom, and bear prodigious fleeces, the hair of which is coarse and long; so that the cotefwold wool, which was never fine within the memory of any man I have conversed with on that subject, is now become still coarser, by thus mixing the breed. The longest sort of it is combed for worsted stuffs, whilst the short is wrought up in cloth for the army, for the East-India company trade, and other coarse goods. Herefordshire, one of the adjoining counties, may justly boast of the finest fleeces in the kingdom. The difference in the quality may in some measure be judged of by their respective prices in the same year. In 1767, the best cotefwold fleeces sold for 8*d.* 3 qrs. a pound, when the best Herefordshire brought two shillings.

There is no coal-pit in this part of the county; but at Stratton, about a mile from Cirencester, they have often found what the miners call plodding-coal; particularly as the labourers were digging a well, about four years since, a good quantity was taken up there. I have now by me three specimens of different fossil substances found at that time, one of which is the common pit-coal; another is very black, with a grain perfectly resembling a piece of oak, and not so heavy as the first; the third is a piece of iron ore. There is a great probability that a good stratum of coal might be found there, as every appearance seems to indicate it, and I am told that the plodding-coal is a circumstance of the strongest presumption of it.

About twenty years ago, the workmen discovered a small vein of coal, of an inch thick, in one of the fine free-stone quarries, in the parish of Barnsley. It lay nine feet below the surface, upon a bed of blue clay. They traced it 'till 'twas imperceptible, and I don't find that circumstances encouraged them to examine further.

Coal has also been found in the parish of Siddington St. Peter, by people that were digging a well there, the water of which was so black and stinking as not to be fit for culinary purposes. Mr. Bathurst, who was lord of the manor, was informed of the discovery, and it is astonishing that it was not followed by a strict and careful examination, in order to the opening of a pit, especially as there was a great probability of success. A good coal-mine in either of these places, round which for many miles firing is dear, would be a prodigious treasure to the proprietor, and a great advantage to the country, which is supply'd by land carriage with that necessary article, either from the pits beyond Sodbury, or from Gloucester, both at great distances.

On the Cotefwolds is a customary annual meeting at Whitsuntide, vulgarly called an Ale, or Whitsun-ale. Perhaps the true word is Yule, for in the time of druidism, the feasts of yule or the grove, were celebrated in the months of May or * December. These sports are resorted to by great numbers of young people of both sexes, and are conducted in the following manner. Two persons are chosen, previous to the meeting, to be lord and lady of the yule, who dress as suitably as they can to the characters they assume. A large empty barn, or some such building, is provided for the lord's hall, and fitted up with seats to accommodate the company. Here they assemble to dance and to regale in the best manner their circumstances and the place will afford, and each young fellow treats his girl with a ribband, or favour. The lord and lady honour the hall with their presence, attended by the steward, sword-bearer, purse-bearer, and mace-bearer, with their several badges or ensigns of office. They have likewise a page, or train bearer, and a jester, drest in a party coloured jacket, whose ribaldry and gesticulation contribute not a little to the entertainment of some part of the company. The lord's music, consisting generally of a pipe and tabor, is employ'd to conduct the dance.

† The author of An Inquiry into the prices of wheat, malt, &c. as sold in England from the year 1000 to the year 1765, has shewn, that 14,332,435 quarters and 3 bushels of wheat; 2,543,096 quarters of barley; 13,653,186 quarters and 1 bushel of malt; and 2,288,321 quarters and 7 bushels of rye, have been exported with the bounty; which amounted in the whole to the sum of 6,658,702*l.* 10*s.* 11*d.* to the end of the year 1764.

* In the north of England Christmas is called, Christmas-yule, and Christmas gambols, yule games. Yule is the proper Scotch word for this festival, vide 10 Anna c. 13.

All these figures, handsomely represented in basso-relievo, stand in the north wall of the nave of Cirencester church, which vouches sufficiently for the antiquity of the custom. Some people think it a commemoration of the antient drink-lean, a day of festivity formerly observed by the tenants and vassals of the lord of the fee, within his manor, the memory of which, on account of the jollity of those meetings, the people have thus preserved ever since. It may, notwithstanding, have its rise in druidism, as on these occasions they always erect a may-pole, which is an eminent sign of it.

I shall just remark, that the mace is made of filk, finely plaited with ribbands on the top, and filled with spices and perfume, for such of the company to smell to as desire it. Does not this afford some light towards discovering the original use, and account for the name of the mace, now carried in ostentation before the steward of the court, on court days, and before the chief magistrate in corporations; as the presenting of spices by great men at their entertainments was a very antient practice?

Mr. Robert Dover, who lived in the reign of king J. 1. instituted certain diversions on the Cotefwold, called after his name, which were annually exhibited about Willerfey and Campden. Even now there is something to be seen of them, every Thursday in Whitsun-week, at a place about half a mile from Campden, called Dover's Hill.

The cotefwold games, and their patron, are celebrated in a small collection of poems, intituled Annalia Dubrenfia, written by Michael Drayton, Ben. Johnson, and about thirty other eminent persons of their time, mostly address'd to the patron of the games; by means of which, if you believe the poet,

Cotswold, that barren was, and rough before,
Is Tempe now become, Cotswold no more.

Pan may go pipe in barren Malvern chase;
The fawns and Satyrs seek some other place.
Cotswold is now th' epitome of myrth;
And joy, presaged erst, is come to birth.

Olympus' mount, that e'en to this day fills
The world with fame, shall to thy Cotswold hills

Give place and honour. Hercules was first
Who those brave games begun: Thou, better nurs'd,
Dost in our anniverſe most nobly strive
To do in one year what he did in five.

The meetings were very numerous, as may be collected from the following lines:

————— On Cotswold hills there meets
A greater troop of gallants than Rome's streets
E'er saw in Pompey's triumphs: Beauties too,
More than Diana's beavie of nymphes could show.
On their great hunting days, —————

————— there in the morn,
When bright Aurora peeps, a bugle horn
The summons gives, streight thousands fill the plains
On stately courfers.

I have selected out of this collection, part of an Eclogue, by Mr. Thomas Randall, of Cambridge, which is one of the best of those pieces, describing the cotefwold diversions. The speakers are Collen and Thenot.

* * * * *

COLLEN. Last evening, lad, I met a noble fwayne,
That spurr'd his sprightly palfry o'er the playne;
His head with ribbands crown'd, and deck'd as gay
As any lass upon her bridal day.
I thought (what easy faiths we shepherds prove!)
This, not the bull, had been Europa's love.
I ask'd the cause; they told me this was he Whom this day's triumph crown'd with victory.
Many brave steeds there were, some you should find
So fleet as they had been sons of the winde.
Others with hoofs so swift beate o'er the race,
As if some engine shot 'um to the place.
So many, and so well wing'd steeds they were,
As all the broode of Pegasus had been there.
Rider and horse could not distinguish'd be;
Both seem'd conjoin'd, a centaur's progeny.
A numerous troupe they were, yet all so light,
Earth never groan'd, nor felt 'um in their flight.

Such royal pastimes Cotefwold mountains fill,
When gentle swains visit her glorious hill;
Where with such packs of hounds they hunting go,
As Cyrus never woon'd his bugle to;
Whose noise is musical, and with full cries
Beat o'er the fields, and eccho thro' the skyes.
Orion hearing, wish'd to leave his sphere,
And call his dogs from heaven, to sport it there.

* * * * *

There, shepherd, there the solemn games be plaid,
Such as great Theseus or Alcides made;
Such as Apollo wishes he had seen,
And Jove desires had his invention been.

The Nemæan and the Isthmian pastimes still,
Though dead in Greece, survive on Cotswold hill.

THENOTT. Happy O hill! the gentle graces now
Shall trip o'er thine, and leave Citheron's brow;
Parnassus' clift shall sinke below his spring,
And ev'ry muse shall on thy frontlet sing:

The goddesses again in strife shall bee,
 And from mount Ida, make appeal to thee;
 Olympus pay thee homage, and in dread
 The aged Alps shall bow his snowy head.

* * * * *
 But gentle Collen, say, what God or man
 Fame we for this great worke, Daphnis or Pan ?

COLL. Daphnis is dead, and Pan hath broke his reed ;
 Tell all your flocks 'tis jovial DOVER's deed.
 Behold the shepherds in their ribbands goe,
 And shortly all the nymphs shall wear 'um too.
 Amaz'd to see such glorie meet together,
 Bless DOVER's pipe, whose musicke call'd 'um hither.
 Sport you, my rams, at sound of DOVER's name;
 Big-bellied ewes, make haste to bring a lambe
 For DOVER's fold. Go maids, and lillies get,
 To make him up a glorious coronet.
 Swains, keep his holiday, and each man sweare
 To faint him in the shepherd's kalendar.

Mr. William Durham, in another copy of verses, hath thus presaged the lasting fame of this public spirited man :

First shall the tender lambs with tygers dwell,
 And fearful harts shall lodge with lions fell ;
 First shall the glorious star-bestudded skie
 Want light, and Neptune's regiment be drie ;
 First shall the courtiers leave their sweet embraces ;
 Ladies to plaster o'er their furrow'd faces ;
 * * * * *
 First shall Nyctimene, that bird of night,
 To flie at noon take pleasure and delight,
 Ere Cotswold shepherds, on their jointed reeds,
 Shall cease to sing his fame-deserved deeds ;
 Who from their tombs, wherein they were in-thrall'd,
 The antient dancing Druides hath call'd.

But those that allow Mr. Durham a competent share of merit as a poet, will probably refuse him their suffrage as a prophet ; for already we hear but little on the Cotswolds of his worthy friend
 Mr. Dover, since whose time the diversions have also much declined, for want of so good a patron.

Damnosa quid non imminuit dies! HOR.

What doth not time's injurious hand impair !

Of the V A L E.

THE Vale of Gloucestershire lies chiefly on the south-east of the river Severn, which gives life and spirit to the soil. For extent and fertility, it is not exceeded, nor do I know that it can be equalled by any in the kingdom ; therefore Drayton, perhaps with more historic justness than poetic licence, gives her the sovereignty, in the following lines :

“ I, which am the queene
 Of all the British vales, and so have ever been Since Gomer's giant brood inhabited this isle,
 And that of all the rest myself may so entile.”

It is honoured with the residence of several of the nobility and gentry, who have estates in this county.

What it more antiently was, may be seen in a passage taken by Mr. Camden out of a book intituled De Pontificibus, written by William of Malmesbury. “ The Vale of Gloucestershire,” says he, “ yields plenty of corn and fruit, in some “ places by the natural richness of the ground, in “ others by the diligence of the country men ;

 “ enough to excite the idlest person to take pains,
 “ when it repays his labour with the increase of “ an hundred fold. Here you may behold high“ ways and public roads full of fruit trees, not “ planted, but growing naturally. The earth bears “ fruit of its own accord, much exceeding others “ both in taste and beauty, many sorts of which “ continue fresh the year round, and serve the “ owner 'till he is supplied by a new increase.
 “ No county in England has so many or so good “ vineyards † as this, either for fertility, or sweet“ ness of the grape. The wine has in it no un“ pleasant tartness, or eagerness, and is little

† “ Many places in this county, says sir Robert Atkyns, bear
 “ the name of vineyards, from thence it has been concluded that “ wine has heretofore been made in these parts ; but these vine“ yards were only apple-orchards, as may appear by many records “ where manors were held of the king, and the tenants were “ obliged to pay yearly vessels of wine, made of apple-fruit. One “ record is 6 Joh. rot. 48. Walter de Hevene held the manor of “ Runham, in the county of Norfolk, by yielding yearly two “ vessels of wine, made of pearmains, to the king, at his “ exchequer, on the feast of St. Michael. Another record is full
 “ to this point ; William Mansfeld, 18 E. 2. was seized of a “ vineyard, six acres of arable, and three acres of wood, in Bisley.
 “ Now it is wholly improbable than any other vineyard than “ that of apples could grow in that cold barren place ; one might “ as soon gather grapes of thistles.” Ancient and present State of Gloucestershire, p. 32.

Thus the learned author determines positively against our vineyards ; but let us examine the strength of his argument.
 In the first record a certain liquor is termed, wine made of pear-mains, by which it appears that such as wrote in Latin used a periphrasis to describe cider, and for this reason, because there is no Latin word for that liquor ; but how does that prove that our vineyards were only apple orchards ? The second record sir Robert declares to be full to this point ; and indeed it is fully against him, for it proves that William Mansfield was seized of a vineyard, &c. in Bisley. But besides this evidence, Domesday is sufficient to determine the dispute, where, in the account of Stonehouse in this county, it is thus recorded : Ibi duo arpenz vinez ; and I believe nobody will contend that vinez, in this place, signifies an apple orchard, or any thing else but a plantation of vines.

 Lastly, sir Robert opposes improbability to plain evidence, and thinks that no other vineyard than that of apples could grow in Bisley ; but he might have known that about Chalford, in that parish, are many warm and sheltered spots of ground of a south aspect, extremely suitable to the purpose in question. The monk of Malmesbury, who lived on the borders of this county, knew it well, and expressly mentions the Gloucestershire vineyards and grapes ; and as his account is supported by the evidence of Domesday, and other records, I give him full credit against all vague opinions, that the vineyards he mentions were not apple-orchards, but plantations of the vine.

“inferior to the French in sweetness. The villages are very thick, the churches handsome, and the towns populous and many.”

Camden says, the reason why so many places in the county are called vineyards, was, on account of the plenty of wines made here; “and that they yield none now, is rather to be imputed to the sloth of the inhabitants, than the disposition of the climate.” But with Mr. Camden’s leave, the lands are employ’d to better advantage, and it is for that reason that we have no vineyard in the county at present.

In this Vale is made that fine cheese, so deservedly esteemed not only in Great Britain, but in all countries wherever it has been carried. The hundreds of Berkeley, of Thornbury, and the lower division of Grumbald’s-ash, produce the best. It is made of various thickesses, from about ten pounds to a quarter of a hundred weight each. The thick sort is called double Gloucestershire, and double Berkeley, and usually sells upon the spot at six-pence a pound. It requires to be kept to an age proportionable to its size and richness, to make it ready for the table.

Cider is another production of this Vale, in which I believe no county in the kingdom can rival it. There is great variety of it, which I shall divide into three classes: 1. The stout-bodied, rough, masculine cider, made of Longney-ruffet, Hagley-crab, Winter-pippin, &c. 2. The full-bodied, rich, pleasant cider, of the Harvey-ruffet, woodcock, golden-pippin, winter-quinning, &c. and 3. A sort made of the Bodnam apple, fox-whelp, and various species of kernel fruit; which, tho’ I have placed last in order, might perhaps have stood with more propriety in the second class, being of a middle nature between the other two, as partaking of the properties of both. There is also some styre made in the vale, but not in that perfection as in the forest of Dean.

Perry being a liquor of a distinct species, must not be omitted. The best of the produce of this country is made of the Tainton squash pear, the Barland pear, and the mad pear. His late Royal Highness the prince of Wales, father of his present Majesty, on his tour through this country in 1750, gave it the name of La Champaigne d’Angleterre. It is a delicious, sprightly liquor, when in perfection; but a person when hot should never drink of it freely.

Most places in Gloucestershire, within ten or twelve miles east and north-east of Bristol, abound in coal mines, some of them of a prodigious depth, and are therefore greatly incommoded with water, which is taken off by the means of fire-engines. The coal is something of the nature of that of Newcastle; about one half of it rising in large lumps, the rest about the size of gravel; but when thrown on a good fire, it melts, forms itself into one mass, and is very durable. The upper part of the county is supply’d with coal out of Shropshire, down the river Severn, which burns quick and lively, but is not so durable as our own.

It is asserted by sir Robert Atkyns, p. 30. that if a line were laid from the mouth of the Severn to Newcastle, and so passed round the globe, coal is to be found within a degree of that line, and scarce any where else in the world. But the remark is unaccountably whimsical and ridiculous, as facts and experiments are wanting, and always must be wanting to support it.

The veins of coal, found about Bristol, are covered with a shell of black, hard, strong substance, called Wark, which will split like blue slate, but is much more brittle, and not nearly so hard. Upon dividing this Wark, there is often found upon one of the separated surfaces, the perfect shape of a fern-leaf, as if it had been engraven by a skilful hand.

The lower part of the Vale from Arlingham downwards, on the south-east of the Severn, is very liable to inundations from that river. Several commissions have been issued for the preservation of these lands, the first of which to be found on record was 5 E. 2. There were others as follow: 33, 36, 38, & 44 E. 3.—2, 4, 6, 8, 9, & 16 R. 2. 11 H. 4. 1 H. 5. Dugdale on Fenns.

The lands are divided into two levels, called the Upper and Lower. Commissions are occasionally held, and orders and regulations made for supporting the banks of the river, on which the preservation of the country depends. In each level, to receive and carry off the water, are ten or twelve pills, or inlets, which, as well as the fea-wall, are repaired by those whose estates lie next them. A small sum is annually raised to defray the expence of the court of sewers, by rating the parishes at 2*d*. an acre, according to the following table, which shews the number of acres given in by the respective places, as particularly liable to inundation; but some of them have not charged themselves with more than about one half, others two thirds of what is actually subject to floods.

Upper Level.	Acres.	Lower Level.	Acres.
Arlingham, — —	738½	Aust, — — —	272
Slimbridge, — —	412	Redwick and Northwick, —	950
Hinton in Berkeley, —	161	Compton Greenfield, —	783
Ham, and Ham Fallow	1400	Stowick, — — —	1111
Hill, — — —	600	Olveston, — — —	500
Elberton, — — —	300	Tockington, — — —	800
Rockhampton — — —	300	Over, — — —	150
Moreton in Thornbury,	426	Hempton and Patchway,	76
Oldbury upon Severn,	1247	Almondsbury, — — —	200
Kington and Cowhill,	300	Lawrence Weston, —	458
Littleton and Coat, —	100	King’s Weston, — — —	530
Awre, a parish on the } north-west of Severn. }	200	Gaunt’s Ircot, — — —	116
	6184½		5946

In the reign of G. 2. another commission was issued for the preservation of lands, lying further up the river, above these levels; but nothing was ever done in consequence of it.

Birdlip-hill and Crickley-hill, part of that ridge which has been already observed to divide the Cotswolds from the Vale, stand about seven miles distant from the city of Gloucester, and are nearly of the same height, the top of the first being about 450 yards above the water in the Severn, at that city, and on a level with a great part of the cotswold country. It is therefore no wonder if the temperature of the air in the Vale should be sensibly different from that on the cotswolds; but Sir R. Atkyns has expressed the difference too strongly in the following passage: "If it be objected against the cold air of the Cotswolds, that there are eight months winter, and cold weather all the year besides, it may be here " affirmed, that there are eight months summer, and warm weather all the rest of the year." The learned historian seems to have been led into this misrepresentation, by his affecting a perfectly contrasted mode of expression: for tho' the difference be considerable, his account of it is very much exaggerated.

The Vale upon the whole is healthy, yet in some places, on the borders of the great river Severn, the inhabitants are very subject to agues.

Most of the other productions of the Vale, besides those particularly noted, being common to other countries, I pass them over, and conclude this head with a short observation, no less just than general, That they are no where to be found in greater plenty and perfection than here. For a further account of the productions of the Vale, see the latter part of the chapter on trade, &c.

Of the F O R E S T of D E A N.

THE Saxons called a forest Bucholt, i. e. sylva ferina, vel cervina. Others define it to be locus sylvestris et saltuosus; a territory of woody grounds and fruitful pastures, privileged for wild beasts and fowls of forest, chase and warren, to rest and abide in, under the king's protection, † for his princely delight and pleasure; incident to which are several courts and officers of record, which must appear on record.

The forests in England (the new forest in Hampshire and that of Hampton Court excepted) are of such antiquity, that history makes no mention when they were first erected; and as in England, so in other countries, the charge of them has always been committed to persons of eminence.

Si canimus sylvas, sylvæ sunt consule dignæ. VIRG.

Or if ye chuse to sing the shady grove,
Make your theme worthy a great consul's love.

For the Roman consuls had the government of forests.

Before the obtaining of the Great Charter of the forests, the king claimed, de jure, to make a new forest wherever he pleased, and to inclose, not only his own demesnes, but the lands of other persons, within its bounds and perambulation; but Lord Coke, whom with great confidence I follow, has shewn, that this was not agreeable to the laws then in force; for, says he, the act of Carta de Foresta is but a declaratory law, restoring the subject to his former right; and that charter is directly against such claim. Indeed originally, all the lands of the subject are derived from the crown, and our forests may have been made when the antient kings had the greatest part in their own hands, and so having a lawful beginning, a forest may be, by prescription, good in law over other men's grounds. But king H. 2. and his two sons, Richard and John, enlarged the antient bounds of the forests, and under the notion of exerting the prerogative, exercised great severities and oppressions on their subjects, who were afterwards restored to their former rights by the Great Charter. But for these, and other matters, concerning forests in general, having just shewn what they are, the reader is referred to the books written professedly on that subject. I shall now confine myself particularly to examine into the bounds and extent, the government, peculiar customs, privileges and produce of the forest of Dean.

This Forest, which gives name to one of the four political divisions of the county, is celebrated in Drayton's lofty strains, as — " Queen of forests all that west of Severn lie;

Her broad and bushy top DEAN holdeth up so high,
The lesser are not seen, she is so tall and large."

POLYOLB. Song 7.

It obtained the name of Dean, * or Dene, from the antient market-town of that name, lying within its bounds and perambulation; which town was so called, perhaps from its remarkable low situation, being almost encompassed round with high hills and woods. The word is of Saxon

† There was a mistaken notion, that no subject could enjoy a forest; whereas the duke of Lancaster had the forests of Pickering and Lancaster; and the abbat of Whitby had the forest of Whitby, in Yorkshire. vid. 4 Inst. 314.

* Mr. Camden, whom Sir Robert Atkyns follows, was of opinion that the Gauls and Britons heretofore used the word arden for a wood, from whence, by rejecting the first syllable, the name of this forest might be derived; but I find no such word of that general signification in their language. Ardunn, indeed, was the proper name of a wood or forest in Gaul.

original,

original, and signifies a dale, a valley, or woody place; whence our English word den, a hole, or cave in the earth. Giraldus, and some others, gave this forest the name of Danubia, and Danica Sylva, or the Dane's woods, because they sheltered themselves here.

In the Roman times it was part of the territory of the Silures, and after the Britons were driven by the Saxons beyond the Severn, it belonged to the dominions of Wales. All this part of Gloucestershire, together with Monmouthshire, and part of Herefordshire, was called by the general name of Gwent, 'till Wales was divided into counties. But king Athelstan, drove the Welch beyond the Wye, which afterwards became the boundary between England and Wales, according to Alexander Neckham;

Inde vagos Vaga Cambrenses, hinc respicit Anglos.

On this side, Wye the English views;
On that, the wandering Welch pursues.

BOUNDS of the FOREST.

King H. 2. as before observed, greatly extended the boundaries of the forest of Dean, and the succeeding kings, Richard and John, following his example, the whole country lying between the Wye and the Severn, and the road leading from Goodrich-castle, in Herefordshire, thro' Weston and Newent, to Gloucester-bridge, was taken within the perambulation.

There was a perambulation made 9 H. 3. upon account of the monks of Flaxley. And a justice-feat was held at Gloucester 10 E. 1. for settling the forest bounds. There were then ten bailiwicks, which included only the king's waste soil, and such assarted lands and purprestures as had been the waste soil, and did not take in the antient manors, &c. tho' within the perambulation § of the forest. The extent of the bailiwicks, with the names of the woodwards, are set forth upon the oaths of twelve regarders; and the proceedings remain on record at the chapter-house, Westminster.

Soon after the confirmation of the Great Charter, and of the Charter of the Forest, 25 E. 1. the king issued out his commission to perambulate the new forest, taken into that of Dean, since the coronation of H. 2. The commissioners returned † the names of all the vills, woods, and lands which were afforested after the coronation of king H. 2. and that they ought to be disafforested; and 28^o regni, another perambulation was made, leaving out all such places as had been newly taken in. The woods so left out were called *purlieu, and some of them still retain the name, as the bishop's purlieu, and Pirton purlieu, in the manor of Lidney. The bounds of the forest of Dean were then settled; and always afterwards, reference was had to this perambulation, which was used by the officers of the forest from time to time 'till the 20th year of James the First.

In the succeeding reign, some attempts were made to enlarge the bounds of it, and 10 C. 1. a justice-feat was holden at Gloucester, before the earl of Holland, assisted by justice Jones, baron Trevor, and serjeant Bridgman, when the jury was prevailed on to find the bounds as extensive as in the time of H. 2. But an act passed in the 17th year of the same reign, for settling the boundaries of all forests, as they were reputed to be 20 Jac. 1.

In the next reign, the legislature taking the affairs of the forest into consideration, the occasion of which the reader will be acquainted with hereafter, an act passed 20 C. 2. by which many good regulations took place. Soon afterwards, the lord warden caused a perambulation ‡ to be made by the regarders, agreeably to that of 28 E. 1. and as it was reputed to be 20 Jac. which was returned upon their oaths.

Previous to the act 17 C. 1. a Survey was made of Dean forest; the particulars of which are exhibited in the following Table.

A SURVEY of the Common of the FOREST of DEAN, taken Anno Domini, 1641.

Woodwardships.	Acres.	Into Wood.	Clear.	Common allotted.	The possessors of the respective woodwards, at that time.
Great Dean woodwardship containeth —	1794	508	1286	626	Maynard Colchester, at the Wilderness, Esq;
Lea Bayley woodwardship containeth —	998	690	308	—	Maynard Colchester, Esq;
Ruar-Dean woodwardship containeth —	1936	1339	597	597	John Clarke, of the Hill, Esq;
Abinghall and Badcock's Bayley containeth	5049	3849	1200	459	John Howell, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq;
Bicknor woodwardship containeth —	1031	877	158	305	Thomas, Lord Viscount Gage.
Staunton woodwardship containeth —	6096	3343	2753	873	Thomas, Lord Viscount Gage.
Blakeney woodwardship containeth —	4297	1620	2677	600	The Rev. Mr. Thomas Savage, of Gloucester.
Bloyse Bayley woodwardship containeth	187	187	—	187	John Beal, of Newent, Esq;
The Bearse woodwardship containeth —	1190	890	300	—	Thomas Wyndham, of Clearwell, Esq;
Abbot's Wood containeth — —	943	135	208	—	Thomas Crawley Bovey, of Flaxley, Esq;
	23521	14034	9487	3647

§ See Appendix, No. 1.

† Appendix, No. 2.

* From two French words pur and lieu, a pure place, exempt from servitude. See 4 Inst. p. 103.

‡ See Appendix, No. 3.

It appears by the survey, that the forest of Dean contains, within its perambulation, 23,521 acres of the king's waste, lying within the hundred of St. Briavel's, besides several antient manors, parishes, vills, and places, to the amount of above 20,000 acres more, some of which were taken from the Saxons by the Conqueror, and given to his Norman followers. But since that time, many thousands of acres that were formerly forest, have been affarted, taken out by purprestures §, and granted away by the crown.

The whole forest, which is extraparochial, is divided into six walks, known by the names of their respective lodges or houses, built for the residence of so many keepers, viz.

1. The king's lodge, but oftener called the speech-house, standing between Kenslo-hill and Daniel's-moor.

2. York lodge, at the upper end of Lumbard's marsh.

3. Worcester lodge, upon Wimbury-hill.

4. Danby lodge, upon the Old Baily-hill, near Lidney.

5. Herbert lodge, upon Ruerdean-hill.

6. Latimer lodge, upon Dane-Meen-hill †, not far from the beacon. The hill takes its name from some stones which stood there in memory of some great Dane slain in these parts.

Each keeper has a settled annual salary of 15*l.* paid out of the exchequer, and an inclosure of ground for his further encouragement.

Of ROYAL and other GRANTS, &c.

MILES or Milo, earl of Hereford, portreeve or constable of Gloucester, was lord of the forest of Dean in the reign of H. I. but Sir William Dugdale, in his Baronage, informs us, that Maud the empress, gave the whole forest of Dean, with the castle of St. Briavel's, to Miles, for his assistance against her brother, 4^o Steph. However incompatible these accounts may seem at first, they may be reconciled, by supposing that the constable had been violently dispossessed of his estate by Stephen, at the beginning of his reign. This great man had five sons and three daughters. The sons all died without issue; but Lucy, the youngest daughter, was married to Herbert Fitz-Herbert, chamberlain to the king, 5^o Steph. who had for her portion the forest of Dean, and was therefore afterwards called lord of Dean. He was high-sheriff of Gloucestershire during that reign. The following abstracts from the records are set down in the order of the dates. The reigns are marked at the beginning of each paragraph.

HENRY II. granted to the abbey of Flaxley two oaks out of this forest every seven days, for the maintenance of a forge there.

JOHN.] Henry de Bohun released all his right in this forest to the king 1^o regni; who granted it 18^o regni to John de Monemuta.

HENRY III.] It was found by inquisition that the monks of Flaxley had a forge for making of iron there 4^o regni. The same year the judges itinerant ordered that none should have an iron forge in the forest, without special licence from the king.—Almarick of the Park had a grant of waste lands in this forest the same year.—Walter de Aure, and Maud de Cantelupe, had each of them an iron forge 5^o regni.—John de Standon had a grant of 12 acres of land, near Sitgrove, on the borders of the forest 8^o regni.—Henry earl of Warwick had a forge in his woods at Lidney, and other iron forges in the forest 10^o regni.—William de Alba Mara had a grant of the forest of Dean 40^o regni.—The king finding the grant of the two oaks every week, which the abbat of Flaxley had obtained of his grandfather, so injurious and destructive to the forest, granted the monks a wood *, in recompense for the said two oaks 42^o regni.—William de Dean was seized of Great Dean, and of a bailiwick in the forest 43^o regni.—William de Londres was seized of Eclawe 50^o regni.

EDW. I.] Henry de Chauworth had a forge here 2^o regni.—Alexander Blith held Blith bailiwick 6^o regni.—Richard de Abbenhalle had the bailiwick of that name 7^o regni, against whom a Quo Warranto was brought, to prove his right of common of pasture in 20 acres in Ridley.—The abbey of Gloucester held Hope Malersfel 9^o regni.—Bogo de Knovile had a licence to inclose Kilocot wood, and convert it into a park the same year.—The ten bailiwicks were kept by the ten persons following, as appears by the proceedings at a justice-seat, held 10^o regni; viz. the bailiwick of Abbenhalle, by Ralph de Abbenhalle; of Blakeney, by Walter de Astune; of Bleythe, by Ralph Hatheway; of Bersô, by William Wodeard; of Bicknoure, by Cecilia de Michegros; Rywardyn, by the constable of St. Briavel's; The Lea, by Nicholas de Lacu; Great Dean, in the hands of the king, and kept by the constable of St. Briavel's; Little Dean, by Ralph de Abbenhalle; Stauntene, by Richard de la More.—William Boteler was seized of a bailiwick 13^o regni.—Cecilia de Michegros was seized of a wood in the forest, and 28 acres of affart land, at Greenway, and 9 yard-§ Affarts and Purprestures. The first so called from the French affartir, to make plain; or from exertum, to pull up by the roots; or exaratum, or exartum, to pull or cut up. The word signifies woodlands cleared and made fit for tillage.—Purprestures, from the French pourpris, conseptum, an inclosure; but properly it signifies an incroachment.

† Mr. Borlace observes, that the common name of the circular monuments in Cornwall, is Dawns Meen, that is, says he, the stone-dance, so called of the common people on no other account, than that they are placed in a circular order, and so make an area for dancing. But with all deference to so respectable a person, I think the name is expressive of the nature of the thing; for in the British language, of which the Cornish is a dialect, Dane Maen, signifies the Dane's stone, having no relation to dancing.

* Appendix No. 27.

lands and a half, at Brat-Forton 29^o regni; and the same year, Ralph de Abbenhalle was also seized of a wood in the forest of Dean.—The tythes of all assart lands within the forest, were granted to the church of All Saints, in Newland, then belonging to John bishop of Landaff, 34^o regni.—And the same year, William Bleyth, and Joan his wife, had a grant of 104 acres of assart lands in this forest.—Also in the same year, Alexander de Bicknore was found seized of the bailiwick of Rywardyn. William Bleyth held the bailiwick of Bleyth 35^o regni.

EDW. II.] John de Abbenhalle, 1^o regni, held a certain bailiwick in this forest, of the king, in capite, ad custodiendum eam per corpus sui cum arrow et sagittis, et non valet ultra custod.—The same year, Bogo de Knovil was seized of Kilcot wood, in this forest.—Henry de Chaworth had a forge here 2^o regni.—The prior and convent of Lanthony, near Gloucester, was seized of 212 acres of assart lands 4^o regni.—John Abbenhalle held a bailiwick 10^o regni.—And the same year, John de Wissham was seized of Noxton vineyard, in the forest, and 200 acres of waste, to be assarted and inclosed.—John Barington held 40 acres of waste, near Malecoyte-wood; and Ralph Hatheway was also seized of 40 acres in Holstone, both in the year last mentioned.—William Joice was seized of 20 acres of waste at Muchel-Clay, and 80 acres of waste at Brakenherd, both in this forest 16^o regni.—Robert de Aure held one messuage, and 12 acres of land here 19^o regni.

EDW. III.] Tythes of the iron-mines were granted to the bishop of Landaff 6^o regni.—John Joice, and his heirs, had a grant of 116 acres in several parcels in the forest, at the yearly rent of 19s. 4d. 12^o regni.

RICHARD II.] Thomas de Brug, and Elizabeth his wife, levied a fine of a bailiwick in Dean, and of lands in Lec-Walton, and in Lee, in Herefordshire, to the use of Thomas in taile, remainder to Richard Curle 5^o regni.—The king granted the castle of St. Briavel's and the forest of Dean to Thomas duke of Gloucester, in special taile, 14^o regni; whereby nothing passed but a frank chase, says lord Coke; but it was afterwards enacted in parliament, that the duke should hold the said forest, with power to constitute such justices and officers as are incident and belonging to a forest.

HENRY IV.] The forest was granted to John the king's son, in taile, 1^o regni.

EDW. IV.] John Throgmorton was seized of a woodwardship 13^o regni.

HENRY VII.] The king by letters patents, 24 Sept. 1^o regni, granted the mines of Newland to Thomas Motten for his life, without rent.—And by like letters patents, 1 Feb. 1^o regni, he also granted the mines beneath the wood vocat. Le Gawle, to John Motten for his life, without rent.

HENRY VIII.] After the dissolution of monasteries, 36^o regni, Sir Anthony Kingston obtained a grant, amongst other things, of all the lands in this forest, formerly belonging to the abbey of Flaxley.

ELIZ.] Richard Brain, esq; died seized of a woodwardship and of a forester's place, in this forest, 15^o regni.

JAMES. I.] The king by letters patents, 7 Feb. 9^o regni, granted to the earl of Pembroke a lease of the forest of Dean, together with the iron-ore, cinders, coal, and wood for making of charcoal, with many other extensive liberties and privileges, for 21 years, at the rent of 2433*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*—The king by his letters patents, 30 June 16^o regni, granted to William Wintour, esq; and William Bell, at the nomination of divers persons therein mentioned purchasers, in consideration of 1074*l.* 8*s.* several messuages, lands and tenements, called assart lands, purprestures, and other lands and tenements belonging to the crown, lying in the forest of Dean, at the rent of 5*s.* saving to himself and his successors, all mines, quarries of sea-coal, &c. And Wintour and Bell covenanted that the lands should remain under the forest laws.

CHAR. I.] The king by letters patents, 28 May 1^o regni, granted to Sir Edward Villiers, knight, and to his heirs, a part of the waste soil of the forest, called Malyscott, together with all woods growing thereon, and all mines, &c.—The king, 16^o regni, disafforested the whole waste soil, and by his letters patents dated March 31, the same year, in consideration of 10,000*l.* then paid, and of 16,000*l.* more to be paid in six years, and of a fee-farm rent of 1950*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to be paid forever, granted to Sir John Wintour, and to his heirs and assigns, the chesnut-wood or coppice, in lease to Richard Brayne, and the Snead and Kidnals, in lease to Tristram Flower, and others; and all those his majesty's coppices, woods, lands, and waste soil in the forest, with their appurtenances, lying within the perambulation made 27^o E. 1. containing in the whole 18,000 acres; and all the mines of iron, tin, lead and coals therein, and in the lands of his majesty's subjects within that perambulation, reserved by the crown; together with free warren and free chase, and power to make salteries in his own lands of Lidney, &c. all royal mines excepted.

The foresters, as such, had long enjoyed many considerable privileges and advantages, and tho' generally well affected to the king, could not with indifference see them granted away to a favourite with this prodigious estate, which Sir John began to inclose. Therefore, in the great rebellion, the inclosures were broken down, and the forest was almost totally destroy'd.

CHAR. II.] After the restoration, Sir John would have repaired the mounds, but was opposed by the whole country round about; upon which a commission issued out of the exchequer to Henry lord Herbert, to inquire into the condition of the forest, &c. and great numbers of the inhabitants subscribed a paper, containing their claims to privileges, privileges, and a kind of petition, desiring that the 18,000 acres might be reforested, and that the letters patents, for the sale thereof, might be made void; which paper, the commissioners made a part of their return. See App. No. 4.

This representation had its desired effect. Sir John Wintour, in obedience to his majesty, by indenture dated 28 July, 14^o regni, in consideration that he should have the Snead and Kidnals, containing 280 acres, to himself and to his heirs forever; and also in consideration of 30,000*l.* then due to him, on account of his patent, surrendered * and yielded up to his majesty all the particulars granted to him by the late king, except the Snead and Kidnals, and except the authority of free warren, and of making salteries in his own lands. And an act passed 20^o C. 2. c. 3. which made the disafforesting of those lands, by the late king, null and void.

By this act, the waste lands of the forest were reforested, and are to be governed by forest laws, as in 10^o C. 1. And all future grants of the wastes, or inclosures, or of the mines, or quarries, are made void. The king is empowered to inclose 11,000 acres, to remain in fealty in the actual possession of the crown for ever, as a nursery for wood and timber only. There is a proviso, that all leases made, or to be made, by the king, his heirs or successors, to any person, for a term not exceeding thirty-one years, of the coal-mines and quarries of grindstone, in the forest, shall be of like force as if this act had never been made, except of such coal-mines, &c. as are, or shall be in any part of the 11,000 acres allotted for inclosing, whilst they shall continue inclosed.

The forest of Dean is, at present, under the power of this law, since the making of which, there has been no alteration in matters relative to the government of this fine district of country.

Of the CASTLE of St. BRIAVEL's, and CONSTABLES of the CASTLE; of the WARDENSHIP and WARDENS of the FOREST, and other Officers, &c.

THE castle of St. Briavel's, antiently written Brulais, stands in the forest of Dean, and gives name to one of the hundreds in the forest division. The king, jure corona, is seized of this castle, which is extraparochial. It is said to have been built to curb the Welch, by Milo earl of Hereford, in the reign of Henry the First. It was antiently the residence of men of eminence in the government, who exercised great power in the forest, demising the waste lands, &c. and such rents as were reserved upon leases of forest lands, were made payable to the constable, i. e. the governor of this castle. The ruins shew it to have been strong, and of large extent, and was formerly of great consequence. It is remarkable for the death of Mahel, the youngest son of Miles earl of Hereford; for there, says Camden, the judgments of God overtook him for his rapacious ways, inhuman cruelties, and boundless avarice, always usurping on other men's rights; for being courteously entertained there, by Sir Walter Clifford, and the castle taking fire, he lost his life by the fall of a stone on his head, from the highest tower †. What now remains of the castle, serves as a prison for criminals, offending against the vert and venison of the forest, and for such as are convicted at the mine-law court, and at the court of pleas, of which hereafter.

CONSTABLES, &c.] John de Monemouth was constable of the castle, and warden of the forest 18^o Joh.—As was John Giffard 47^o H. 3. Taking part with the rebellious barons, he was excommunicated by the archbishop of Canterbury; but afterwards deserting them, and fighting at the battle of Evesham, the king pardoned him.—Thomas, brother to Gilbert the Red, earl of Gloucester, was made governor of this castle by Simon Montfort, earl of Leicester, after the victory gained over king H. 3. at Lewes.—William de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, was constable of the castle 10^o E. 1.—John de Bottourt, descended from Ansfred de Bottourt, who lived 2^o H. 2. was made governor of it, and warden of the forest of Dean 19^o E. 1. but was soon displaced;—for Thomas de Euerty held the castle 21^o E. 1.—John de Handelo was governor thereof, and warden of the forest 27^o E. 1.—Ralph de Abbenhalle held it 29^o E. 1.—Almarick de St. Amand was governor of the castle, and warden of the forest in the latter part of this reign.—And John de Bottourt was restored 1^o E. 2.—William de Staure held the castle 2^o E. 2.—Hugh le Despencer, the elder, was governor of it, and warden of the forest 15^o E. 2.—John de Nivers was made governor of this castle, and warden of the forest, to hold at pleasure 18^o E. 2.—John de Hardeshull was also governor and warden 20^o E. 2.—Roger Clifford was governor 14^o E. 3. and had 55 marks yearly allowed him out of the exchequer; and all succeeding governors were from that time to have feeding, houseboot and hey-boot out of the forest.—This castle was granted to Thomas duke of Gloucester 14^o R. 2.—John duke of Bedford, third son of H. 4. had a grant, and died seized of it 14^o H. 6.—John Tiptot, earl of Worcester, had the custody of it 39^o H. 6.—Richard Nevil, earl of Warwick,

* The surrender is now in the possession of Thomas Bathurst, of Lidney, esq;

† Mr. Camden speaking of the castle of Aber-Gavenni, mentions this person by the name of William, son of earl Miles; and says, that he stained the castle of the last mentioned place, with the infamy of treachery, as William de Breos had done before, both having invited some of the Welch nobility thither upon public assurance, and under pretence of friendship, and then basely murdered them. And then tells the above story of his untimely death. col. 715.

and Ann his wife, levied a fine of it 6° E. 4.—The same countess levied a fine of it to the use of the king 3° H. 7.—The earl of Pembroke was constable of it, and warden of the forest 9° Jac. 1.—Henry lord Herbert of Ragland, afterwards duke of Beaufort, had a grant for life of the constablewick of this castle, with a fee of 40*l.* a year, 1660.

Besides the constable, there are several subordinate officers *, all created by patent, viz. a clerk, a messor, or itinerant officer, two serjeants and a janitor; and a fee was annexed to each of their offices.

The VERDURERS of the forest, of which there are four, are elected by the freeholders of the county, by virtue of the king's writ, directed to the sheriff for that purpose. They are, according to the order of time in which they were chosen, as follow, viz.

William Jones, of Nafs, esq;
John Probyn, of the city of Gloucester, esq;
Maynard Colchester, of Westbury, esq;
John Gyfe, of Highnam, esq; elected 1769.

In the time of king Canute, their fee was yearly of the king's allowance, two horses, one of which was saddled; one sword, five javelins, one spear, one shield, and 10*l.* in money.

The GAVELLER is an officer appointed by the constable of the castle. The name is derived from Gapel, or Gapol, which in the Anglo-Saxon language signifies a tribute. This officer receives by way of perquisite, or fee, a small sum of the miners, called the king's dues, and gives some directions concerning mining. At a justice-seat, held at Gloucester 10° C. 1. the commissioners returned, that the office of Gaveller, or Gawler, was an antient office, and that he usually attended at the mine-law courts; but I have not found upon record any such officer in this forest before the year 1660, when the office was conferred upon Sir Baynham Throckmorton, and which some years afterwards William Wolseley, esq; held by patent. If there had been antiently such an officer, he would probably have accounted to the king, and the name must then have been found in the exchequer; but as lately as 4° H. 7. William Lewellyn, the king's receiver, accounted for the mines of Newland and Le Gawle, and all the other king's mines in the forest, a copy of whose account I have by me.

Of the COURTS of this FOREST.

THERE are three courts incident to all forests.

1. The court of attachment.
2. The court of swanimote.
3. The justice-seat.

1. The court of attachment is held once in forty days before the verdurers, who receive the attachments, de viridi & venatione, taken by the rest of the officers, and inroll them, that the offenders may be presented and punished at the next justice-seat; for this court can only inquire, but not convict.

2. The court of swanimote † is holden before the verdurers, as judges, by the steward of the swanimote, thrice in the year. The foresters ought to present their attachments at the next swanimote court; and the freeholders within the forest are to appear at this court, to make inquest and juries. The court of swanimote may both inquire and convict, but cannot give judgment.

3. The justice-seat, which is the highest court, cannot be kept oftener than every third year. It is holden before the chief justice of the forest, or justice in Eire, of which there are two created by patent, one for the forests on this side of Trent, the other beyond. This court hath jurisdiction to inquire, hear, and determine all trespasses within the forest, and all claims of franchises, privileges and liberties relative thereto. Before a justice-seat be holden, the regards of the forest must go thro', and view the whole forest, in order to present all kinds of trespasses.

About the middle of the forest stands a large building, called the Speech-house, where the courts of swanimote and attachment used to be holden; but they have now been neglected for some time.

Besides these courts, which are common to all forests, the hundred of St. Briavel's, being in the crown, retains the privilege of a court-leet, which is held at the castle.

There are also two other courts held here, which being of peculiar natures, deserve particular notice.

The first I shall mention is a court of record, held for the castle, the manor, and the hundred of St. Briavel's, before the constable of the castle, or his deputy, and the suitors of the manor; for trying of all personal actions, of what value soever, arising within the hundred. Fines of lands within the hundred are levied at this court, which is very antient, as appears by a record, temp. E. 1. where it is said, S'tus Briavellus h'et return' brevium.

All processes run in the name of the constable, or his deputy, only; yet the court, in its stile, is said to be held before the constable of the castle of St. Briavel's, and the homagers, or suitors of the manor-court; upon which account, some persons have been of opinion, that this cannot properly be a court of record, since the homagers, before whom, with the constable, the court is prescribed to be holden, sit as judges. But nothing can be concluded with certainty against its being of record, merely from the complexion of it, as it may formerly have derived its authority either

* Lately there have been only a clerk, a bailiff or messor, and castle-keeper, who have all been appointed by the constable of the castle for the time being.

† Lork Coke derives the word of Swain, that is, in Saxon, mini-ster; and mote, or gemote, which is curia, i. e. Curia ministrorum forestæ, so called because it is but a preparative for the justice-seat.
from

from act of parliament, letters patents, or prescription, the three several ways by which courts of record are created.

To account for the homage sitting in this court, it has been conjectured, that originally, when the castle was in its prosperity, three courts were held here, 1. a court of pleas or record, held before the constable, or his deputy only; 2. a court for the hundred, and 3. a court for the manor, held before the constable or his deputy, and the suitors or homagers. And it is thought, that, for the ease and convenience of the constable and country, these three courts might at some time be united by consent, and so have continued down without any interruption, to the present time. But I give this as mere opinion, without the least authority from the public records to support it.

Another court, called the mine-law court, is held before the constable of St. Briavel's, as steward of the court, or his deputy, for the trial of all causes arising between the miners, &c. concerning the mines, &c. But from 4^o Annæ to 5^o G. 1. it was held before the deputies of Charles earl of Berkeley, who in the court papers is stiled, Lord high steward of her majesty's court of pleas, courts leet, and of the mine-law court, within the forest; the earl having obtained a patent for these purposes, altho' he was not constable of the castle. At this court, none are to be present but the constable, or his deputy, the gaveller, castle-clerk, and free-miners, who must be natives of the hundred of St. Briavel's, and have worked in some of the mines at least one year and a day. The parties and witnesses are sworn upon a bible, into which a piece of holly stick is put, and are obliged to wear the hooft, or working cap on their heads, during examination. The following particulars are drawn from the best authorities that could be procured.

I can find no mention made of the mine-law court in any record before 10^o C. 1. when the earl of Pembroke, as constable of the castle of St. Briavel's, and warden of the forest of Dean, claimed to be judge of it.

In the act of parliament 20^o C. 2. concerning this forest, is a clause, wherein the lawful rights and privileges in all lands and grounds lying within the perambulation and regard of the forest, are saved to the miners, and persons using the trade of digging for iron ore, coal, and ochre.

Before the passing of this act, many disputes had risen between the miners and others, concerning rights and customs, which remained unsettled; but now the miners, considering the forementioned clause as a confirmation of their antient privileges, began to call themselves the free-miners, and the king's miners; and their court a court of record.

Sir Baynham Throckmorton having been appointed gaveller, deputy constable of St. Briavel's, and deputy warden of the forest, presided at this court; and, according to tradition, first introduced the examining of evidences upon oath.

At a court, holden the 16th of Jan. 28^o C. 2. a jury of 48 miners, after setting forth, that several controversies had lately risen between the miners and others, concerning their rights and customs, ordered, That all the articles and clauses contained in a certain writing, called an inquisition, which they declare to contain their antient customs, rights and privileges, shall be inviolably observed by the miners.

At this court, an order was made to raise the price of coals, from 4 d. to 6 d. the horseload, and another order was confirmed, for taxing every miner and carrier, with a quarterly sum *, to defend themselves in all suits that should be brought against them. The inquisition was then revised, and ingrossed on parchment, and the jury set their hands and seals to it, that whenever it should be produced, it might carry the force of an instrument executed with great deliberation, order, and solemnity. From this time the court proceeded with greater freedom; and I find of no opposition made to it 'till the year 1752, when its authority was put to the test.

In that year, Francis Jones commenced an action in the court of king's-bench, against Philips and others, for breaking his close, and taking away and felling three mares. The defendants pleaded, that there had been immemorially in the forest of dean, a court of record, called the mine-law court; and that they had recovered 10 l. in an action brought against the plaintiff, in the said court, and prosecuted and sued out a precept, upon which the said mares were levied.—Upon this plea, a verdict was found for the defendants.—Jones afterwards sued out a writ of error, to which a return was made, and errors assigned; but they were never argued.

Causes tried at this court are not determined by the forest laws, or by any written laws of the realm, but by such as are peculiar to the court itself. The miners exercise the legislative power, and make new laws for their convenience, as often as they see occasion.

PRIVILEGES of the FORESTERS.

AT a justice-seat held at Gloucester 10^o E. 1. already mentioned, the several officers of the forest, and others, put in their claims to common of pasture, common of estovers, and to fees and other privileges and liberties, which I shall have occasion to mention more particularly hereafter.

Also at a justice-seat holden at Gloucester-castle, for the said forest, 10^o Car. all the officers of the forest, and above 120 of the inhabitants of the hundred of St. Briavel's, and other persons bordering on the forest, put in their several claims to estovers*, commons, fees, franchises and other privileges within the forest; all which original claims are now on record in the tower of London.

* They are said to be able to raise about 40 l. at 6 d. per head.

The earl of Pembroke pleaded, that by letters patents he was constituted constable of the castle of St. Briavel's; that the office of warden of the forest is always appendant to it, and that, as warden, he claimed to be judge of the mine law court, held from time to time, whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary.

By 20° C. 2. c. 3. the occupiers and owners of land not being part of the waste, or inclosures, within the bounds of the forest, are impowered to cut timber and wood in their several lands; to manure and improve them, by plowing, assarting, building, &c. and to keep dogs unexpedited, and to hunt, and kill beasts of chase, or other game, without incurring any offence by the forest law. All persons having right of common are to enjoy it, as they did 10° C. 1. and the metes and bounds of the forest to be taken as they were 20° Jac. 1. In this act is a saving to the inhabitants of St. Briavel's of their right of cutting wood in Hudnalls, which they had enjoyed from time immemorially.

The free miners claim a right by prescription, of digging iron ore, and coal in the forest, and of carrying their coal works, begun there, into the inclosed lands adjoining. They also prescribe to cut timber out of the forest, necessary for carrying on their works, as well in the lands of private persons, as in the king's soil. These are very extensive privileges; and as it may be entertaining to some of my readers, I shall endeavour to trace out the gradual progress of their claim.

Very antiently, the crown erected works to manufacture the vast abundance of iron-ore, found in the forest; and generally, the works and mines of ore have been let to farm; and it appears by the inquest of the regards, at a justice-seat, held 10° E. 1. that the miners had a penny a horse-load paid them, for supplying the king's works with ore †. At the same iter some of the keepers of the bailiwicks claimed iron-ore and sea-coal, mortua et sicca et vento prostrata [dead and dry wood and windfalls] and had their claims allowed, particularly the bailiff of Blakeney, and Sir Rauf de Abbenhalle §, as he and his ancestors had enjoy'd the same ever since the conquest.

The same record shews that the keepers in the bailiwicks of Abbenhalle, Bikenore, Staunten, and Blakeneye had coal; and Nicholas de Lacu took the same in his wood of Lideneeye; but it is said, respecting all these, et nesciunt quo warranto. It is also expressly said, that the king had the coal in the other bailiwicks, viz. Bers, Rywardyn, Magna Dene, and Parva Dene; but the record doth not shew upon what terms the coal-pits were worked, as in the case of the iron-mines. Indeed as the inhabitants were intitled to estovers, and the whole country was full of wood, it is probable that very little coal was used at that time.

That the chief property of the mines was antiently in the crown, seems evident from the above inquiries; and also from an antient grant which the abbat of Flaxley obtained 42° H. 3. of a large portion of the forest, wherein the mines are excepted and reserved to the king. It is equally evident, that they were claimed by the crown, in James the First's time, from the grant of the forest of Dean, made to the earl of Pembroke 9° regni, already noticed, wherein the ore, cinders, coal, &c. are expressly mentioned; and the king covenants, that the earl's servants and workmen employ'd in the forest, should be protected as his majesty's own servants had been. In several leases and grants made to others in the same reign, the mines are reserved. See Grants.

Soon after this grant to the earl of Pembroke, the miners began to dig ore without the earl's consent; and claiming a right of so doing, the attorney-general, at the earl's instance, filed an information in the exchequer against several of them. The court, upon the submission of the defendants, acknowledging the soil to be the king's, and that they had no interest therein; and representing that they had been used to mining only, and had no other way to support themselves and families, made an order that the inhabitants of the said forest, who had been used before that time to dig and carry mine, ore, and cinders, should be permitted, of favour and grace, and not of right, to continue the same until the hearing of the cause, so that they carry them to his majesty's works; and if there refused at the usual prices, that then they be permitted to carry them elsewhere. This seems to be the foundation of the miners claim, as probably at that time all parties acquiesced.

Sir Richard Catchmaid farming some lands in the forest, 19° Jac. the miners dug, and claimed a right to dig, grindstone on his farm, without

* Estovers, from the French, estoffe, i. e. materia. West. Symb. part 2. sect. 26. saith, That the word estovers includeth house-bote, hey-bote, and plow-bote; but it appears to have a larger signification, by a precept to John de Monmouth, 7° H. 3. which runs thus: Mandatum est Joh'i de Manemuta quod h'ere fac' hominibus manentibus in foresta de Dene r'onabile estoverium suum in foresta de Dene tam de p'astura quam de basco, sicut habere debent et solent tempore Joh' regis ante guerram motam inter ipsum et barones sui Angliæ.

† Si d'ius rex h'et unam forgeam errantem p'dci operadores invenient ei mincam ad sustentationem p'ed'ce forgee. Et d'us rex dabit eis p' qal' summa i. den'. It. D'us rex h'ebit de q'libt summa mince que ducet' extra foresta un. ob. et omnia que D'us rex capit de min'ia pon't' ad firmam pro xlvi lib.

Lord Ch. Justice Hale's MSS. in Lincoln's Inn Library.

§ His claim runs thus:—Les demandes de Sire Rauf de Abbenhalle in sa baillie. Sire Rauf de Abbenhalle tout la baillie de Abbenhalle e la terre en fee du roy rend X s. p' la terre e XX s. p' la baillie e garder de memes le terres. E si le roy vent guerrier il vendra a cheval od un haubergen od ces 2 valles od arkes e od fetes e fere le commandement le roy de deux le metes de la forest, &c.—Haubergen is an helmet, or head-piece, which covered the head and shoulders, so called from the German hals collum, and bergen, tegere.

‡ See Appendix No. 4.

Sir Richard's leave; for which the attorney-general filed an information in the exchequer, against some of them. The court, without decreeing concerning the right, on account of their poverty, recommended it to Sir Richard, not to oppress them for so trifling an article, the stones not being worth more than the labour of raising them; and it seems they paid 3s. 4d. each, as an acknowledgement for digging.

About 27^o C. 2. they first carried their coal-works, which had been begun in the forest, into the inclosed lands adjoining, which occasioned several contests at law, between the freeholders and miners. And in 1752, the governors and company of copper-miners, in England, commenced an action against one Philips and others, for breaking and entering their close. The defendants justifying, pleaded the custom of the free-miners entering the lands of all other persons, as well as of the king, within the hundred of St. Briavel's, by the licence of the king's gaveler, entered, &c. and paying the king certain dues. Issue was joined, and the custom found by the jury, before Mr. Justice Birch, at Gloucester assizes.

As to their right to timber, it should be observed, that soon after the passing of the act 20^o C. 2. proper inclosures were made, and planted with young oaks and acorns, and new officers, with salaries, appointed for the preservation of them. The forest courts were regularly holden, offenders punish'd, incroachments on the king's soil removed, and in short, every measure was taken to raise a fine forest of timber. But there are always people ready to catch every opportunity to avail themselves of public commotions; so at the revolution, the inclosures were again thrown open, and dreadful spoil made of the timber.

During king William's reign, and the latter part of queen Anne's, the miners were allowed to take wood, but not timber.

Orders having been issued in the latter part of her majesty's reign, for cutting beech, and dead and dotard trees, not likely to become timber, great spoil was again committed; and upon information being filed by the attorney-general, against Richard Whetstone and others, for cutting timber, the defendants set forth their custom of taking it, upon application to, and obtaining an order from, the court of attachments, to the proper officers, for the delivery of it. But this cause never came to a hearing; for the queen dying, the warden, lord Weymouth, was removed, and proceedings were stayed. And ever since the miners have had timber also for carrying on their works, of which it is computed they use about 1000 tons yearly.

From the above records, act of parliament, grants, reservations, and accounts extracted from antient papers, it may be seen what privileges the miners formerly had, and have claimed from time to time, and what they now enjoy.

SOIL, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURE, &c. of the FOREST.

THE face of this country is remarkably uneven, full of little hills, with springs and pleasant rivulets purling down, and running between them. The soil is various, but much inclining to clay, proper for the growth of oak, which flourishes here exceedingly. Here is also plenty of beech, birch, holly, and other kinds of wood.

Our enemies * have always been sensible of the great advantage we derive from the oak timber of Dean forest, which is perhaps the best in the world for ship-building, being extremely tough and hard when dry, and not so apt to splinter as that of the growth of other countries.

The soil of the forest is also particularly agreeable to the cyder-apple. Styre cyder is almost peculiar to this district, and yields a most extraordinary price. But besides this particular sort, it is the opinion of very competent judges, that the foresters make the best cyder in the kingdom. In the year 1763, was such a plentiful crop of apples, that great quantities of them were suffered to rot, for want of casks to put the cyder in; yet even in that year, the best old styre sold at fifteen guineas the hoghead, and is since advanced to twenty. Indeed there is no fixing the price of it, being chiefly purchased by persons of fortune. It is, however, asserted, that Gloucestershire cyder is worth more money in the maker's cellar, than the finest wines in the world, in the respective countries of their own growth. The reasons generally alledged for this liquor bearing so great a price, are, that the styre-apple is not a plentiful bearer, and the cyder in keeping is said to be so particularly liable to injury, from accidents altogether unaccountable, that its proving good is very precarious.

There is not much corn planted here, but some people think the produce in that respect sufficient for the use of the inhabitants.

The forest is full of iron-ore, coal, and ochre, and the waters of many of the springs and rivulets, as they run along, tinge the stones and other substances, lying in their courses, with a reddish brown colour, received from the iron-mine, and ochre, thro' whose beds they pass. I have seen great variety of iron-ore at Mr. Worrall's, at

* Mr. Evelyn observes, that the Spaniards, in queen Elizabeth's reign, sent over an ambassador into England, on purpose to try if he could, either by private practices, great rewards, fair promises, or any other contrivances whatever, procure this wooden wall, the strength of our kingdom, as they called it, to be destroyed, who, had he effected his majesty's commission, had right well deserved his particular favour. But what the crafty

Spaniard could not do by treachery, was in the time of the great rebellion nearly compleated thro' our own divisions and dissensions, by exposing to sale for fewel those stout and sturdy oaks, whose preservation might have proved a sure defence and bulwark on the water, if the frozen winter of that iron age had not destroy'd them by fire. Evelyn's Sylva.

Lidney, who is curious, and has collected many beautiful specimens out of this country; the chief of which are,

1. Minera ferri crystallifata; an ore of a crystalline form, not much attracted by the magnet.

2. Minera ferri nigricans, magneti amica; the dark-coloured ore, of which there are multitudes of varieties as to form, some being striated or channelled; tessellated, breaking into dice; radiated, &c. &c. The miners here call this species by the general name of brush ore. It is very rich, and the magnet attracts it strongly.

The pipe ore is an assemblage of small cylindrical columns, of various lengths, standing close together, and issuing at one end from a lump of the same kind of matter. The cylindrical shape is occasioned by the metallic matter falling in a liquid state from the mass, to which the pipes are fixed, and like icicles gradually concreting into the various forms in which we find them.

Some of the ore is found in lumps, crowned with spar, resembling a cawflower, and other curious figures. I saw there a piece of kidney ore, so called from the figure of that gland always appearing at the end of it, when broken transversely; one of the pieces shews it in relieve, the other impressed. It was almost pure metal, but I think this came from Lancashire.

The forest coal crackles much when first thrown on the fire, and burns very bright. It has a more shining and glossy appearance than the Kingwood coal, but is not so bituminous and lasting; yet is more durable on the fire than the Shropshire coal. The pits are not deep, for when the miners find themselves much incommoded with water, they sink a new one, rather than erect a fire-engine, which might answer the expence very well, yet there is not one of them in all this division. They have indeed two or three pumps worked by cranks, that in some measure answer the intention.

Great quantities of iron cinders are found in all parts where bloomeries were formerly erected. Some of them are very rich and valuable, and being mixed with the ore, not only help to flux it, but render the metal tougher, and of a better temper.

The furnaces for melting of the ore are built of a gritty stone, dug out of the forest, that will endure a fire intense enough to melt or break down almost any other material. The grains of this stone, says Dr. Grew, must therefore be insuperable, yet not so united but that the stone is somewhat soft and crumbly, of a dirty colour, like fuller's earth.

Some furnaces are between twenty and thirty feet high. The cavity is in the shape of a crucible, and about seven or eight feet in diameter, at the mouth. They are generally built against a bank, or at least one is thrown up against them, that the workmen may ascend by a spiral kind of path, to throw in the materials at the mouth, which is done in the following manner; first ten baskets of charcoal, then ten of cinders, and lastly the same quantity of ore; which is repeated every half hour. The blast is made at a hole about three inches diameter, towards the bottom of the furnace, by two vast bellows near thirty feet long, which are driven by water, and work alternately. There is a hole still lower, to which a plug is well adjusted, where they let out the dross, which by the violent action of the bellows, is separated from the metal in fusion, and being the lightest, lies at the top. Quite at the bottom of the furnace is another hole, with its plug, which is drawn out once in twenty-four hours, when the iron runs upon a bed of sand, laid upon the earthen floor, from the furnace to the length of thirty feet. There is a large groove impressed in the sand, from one end of the floor to the other, and short ones all along the sides of it, one end of each of which enters into the large one, that serves as a common conveyance to carry the metal into the short ones, where the iron pigs are cast. That which fills the large groove is called the sow, and is broken into convenient lengths for working.

From the furnace the sows and pigs of iron are carried to the forges, which are of two sorts, one of which is called the finery, the other the chafery. On the hearth of the finery, is a large charcoal fire, excited by bellows like those at the furnace, but not so large. They put the ends of two or three pigs or sows into the finery together, where softening gradually, they stir and work them 'till the metal runs together into one mass or lump, which they call a half bloom. This they take out, and giving it a few strokes with their sledges, they carry it to a great weighty hammer, raised likewise by the motion of a water-wheel, where it is presently beaten out into a thick, short, square figure. This is put into the finery again, and being made red hot, is worked under the same hammer, to the shape of a bar in the middle, with a square knob at each end. Lastly, they give it another heating in the chafery, and more workings under the hammer, 'till they have brought the iron into bars of the required shape and size.

About six years ago, an experiment was tried at Lidney, to make iron with pit-coal, charred to discharge it of the sulphur, which renders the metal friable; but it was not found to answer, otherwise it would have been a prodigious saving to the iron-master, as wood gets dearer almost every season, but the coal-mines are inexhaustible.

The large iron furnaces now in use, were first erected by the crown, not long before 1617, as appears by the return to a commission issued out of the exchequer in that year. The sort in use 10° E. 1. * was called forgeam errantem. I con-

* In that reign there were seventy-two forges in Dean forest, as appears by a record of the affairs of this forest, preserved in a collection of MSS. left by lord chief justice Hale, to Lincoln's Inn Library; where it is further said, Et quilibet forgia per annum dabit domino regi vij sol. et forgia operans p' dimid. anni dabit iij sol. vj den. et forgia operans per quartam partem unius anni dabit xxi. den.

Lidney, who is curious, and has collected many beautiful specimens out of this country; the chief of which are,

1. Minera ferri crystallifata; an ore of a crystalline form, not much attracted by the magnet.

2. Minera ferri nigricans, magneti amica; the dark-coloured ore, of which there are multitudes of varieties as to form, some being striated or channelled; tessellated, breaking into dice; radiated, &c. &c. The miners here call this species by the general name of brush ore. It is very rich, and the magnet attracts it strongly.

The pipe ore is an assemblage of small cylindrical columns, of various lengths, standing close together, and issuing at one end from a lump of the same kind of matter. The cylindrical shape is occasioned by the metallic matter falling in a liquid state from the mass, to which the pipes are fixed, and like icicles gradually concreting into the various forms in which we find them.

Some of the ore is found in lumps, crowned with spar, resembling a cawflower, and other curious figures. I saw there a piece of kidney ore, so called from the figure of that gland always appearing at the end of it, when broken transversely; one of the pieces shews it in relievo, the other impressed. It was almost pure metal, but I think this came from Lancashire.

The forest coal crackles much when first thrown on the fire, and burns very bright. It has a more shining and glossy appearance than the Kingwood coal, but is not so bituminous and lasting; yet is more durable on the fire than the Shropshire coal. The pits are not deep, for when the miners find themselves much incommoded with water, they sink a new one, rather than erect a fire-engine, which might answer the expence very well, yet there is not one of them in all this division. They have indeed two or three pumps worked by cranks, that in some measure answer the intention.

Great quantities of iron cinders are found in all parts where bloomeries were formerly erected. Some of them are very rich and valuable, and being mixed with the ore, not only help to flux it, but render the metal tougher, and of a better temper.

The furnaces for melting of the ore are built of a gritty stone, dug out of the forest, that will endure a fire intense enough to melt or break down almost any other material. The grains of this stone, says Dr. Grew, must therefore be insuperable, yet not so united but that the stone is somewhat soft and crumbly, of a dirty colour, like fuller's earth.

Some furnaces are between twenty and thirty feet high. The cavity is in the shape of a crucible, and about seven or eight feet in diameter, at the mouth. They are generally built against a bank, or at least one is thrown up against them, that the workmen may ascend by a spiral kind of path, to throw in the materials at the mouth, which is done in the following manner; first ten baskets of charcoal, then ten of cinders, and lastly the same quantity of ore; which is repeated every half hour. The blast is made at a hole about three inches diameter, towards the bottom of the furnace, by two vast bellows near thirty feet long, which are driven by water, and work alternately. There is a hole still lower, to which a plug is well adjusted, where they let out the dross, which by the violent action of the bellows, is separated from the metal in fusion, and being the lightest, lies at the top. Quite at the bottom of the furnace is another hole, with its plug, which is drawn out once in twenty-four hours, when the iron runs upon a bed of sand, laid upon the earthen floor, from the furnace to the length of thirty feet. There is a large groove impressed in the sand, from one end of the floor to the other, and short ones all along the sides of it, one end of each of which enters into the large one, that serves as a common conveyance to carry the metal into the short ones, where the iron pigs are cast. That which fills the large groove is called the sow, and is broken into convenient lengths for working.

From the furnace the sows and pigs of iron are carried to the forges, which are of two sorts, one of which is called the finery, the other the chafery. On the hearth of the finery, is a large charcoal fire, excited by bellows like those at the furnace, but not so large. They put the ends of two or three pigs or sows into the finery together, where softening gradually, they stir and work them 'till the metal runs together into one mass or lump, which they call a half bloom. This they take out, and giving it a few strokes with their sledges, they carry it to a great weighty hammer, raised likewise by the motion of a water-wheel, where it is presently beaten out into a thick, short, square figure. This is put into the finery again, and being made red hot, is worked under the same hammer, to the shape of a bar in the middle, with a square knob at each end. Lastly, they give it another heating in the chafery, and more workings under the hammer, 'till they have brought the iron into bars of the required shape and size.

About six years ago, an experiment was tried at Lidney, to make iron with pit-coal, charred to discharge it of the sulphur, which renders the metal friable; but it was not found to answer, otherwise it would have been a prodigious saving to the iron-master, as wood gets dearer almost every season, but the coal-mines are inexhaustible.

The large iron furnaces now in use, were first erected by the crown, not long before 1617, as appears by the return to a commission issued out of the exchequer in that year. The sort in use 10° E. 1. * was called forgeam errantem. I conclude this fort was carried from place to place, and worked by hand. It was certainly owing to their using machines of little power, that our ancestors left the cinders so rich and full of metal.

* In that reign there were seventy-two forges in Dean forest, as appears by a record of the affairs of this forest, preserved in a collection of MSS. left by lord chief justice Hale, to Lincoln's

Inn Library; where it is further said, Et quilibet forgia per annum dabit domino regi vij sol. et forgia operans p' dimid. anni dabit iij sol. vj den. et forgia operans per quartam partem unius anni dabit xxi. den.

Some questions arising between the earl of Nottingham, justice in Eire in all the king's forests, and the earl of Dorset, treasurer of England, concerning the disposing of the king's woods in his forests, all the judges of England were assembled, by the king's command, to resolve them. After conference and deliberation, they delivered their answer; which, with the order of the exchequer in consequence thereof, may be seen in 4 Inst. p. 299.

Some passages in the course of this narration may, perhaps, excite the reader to lament with me the general neglect of the forest timber, which ought to be preserved for public use. The produce of it to the crown is very trifling, as appears by the subsequent account, the authenticity of which may be depended on, as I had it from a gentleman of honour.

Trent, South. { An ACCOUNT of the Produce of TIMBER, together with the Bark, Lops, Tops, and Offal-wood thereof, felled and cut down in his Majesty's Forest of Dean, in the County of Gloucester, by a Medium of Seven Years last past, viz. from the 25th of March, 1745, to the 25th of March, 1752.

Anno 1745,	It does not appear that any timber was felled in the said forest, therefore charged	—	Nil.
	In the account of John Phillipson, esq; surveyor-general of his majesty's woods on the south side Trent, of wood sales by him made in the said forest, pursuant to a warrant from the Right Honourable the lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury, bearing date the 6th day of May, 1746, he is charged with the sale of several quantities of timber, together with the bark thereof, valued and sold to divers persons, for the sum of	£. s. d. 570 13 9	} 1894 0 3
Anno 1746,	In another account of the said John Phillipson, of wood sales by him made in the said forest, pursuant to a like warrant, dated the 3d day of July, 1746, he is charged with the sale of wood, valued and sold to divers persons, for the sum of	£. s. d. 510 6 0
	In another account of the said John Phillipson of wood sales by him made in the said forest, pursuant to a like warrant, dated the 17th day of February, 1746, he is charged with the sale of several quantities of wood, felled and cut down in the said forest, valued and sold to divers persons, for the sum of	813 0 6
Anno 1747,	And in another account of the said John Phillipson of wood sales, by him made in the said forest, pursuant to a like warrant, dated the 31st day of March, 1747, he is charged with divers quantities of wood, felled and cut down in the said forest, valued and sold to divers persons, for the sum of	499 4 2	3
Annis { 1748, 1749, 1750, 1751,	It does not appear that any timber was felled in the said forest; but there are two warrants directed to the said John Phillipson, to cut down timber there, one dated the 18th of January, 1749, to raise, clear of all charges, the sum of 373 l. 4 s. for repairs in Windsor forest; and the other, dated the 29th of January, 1750, to raise the sum of 6767 l. 17 s. 4 d. to be paid to Mr. Whatley, for repairs at Hampton-court house, park, and Windsor great park, which the said John Phillipson has not accounted for, therefore is charged		Nil.

If when the courts of swanimote and attachment were regularly holden, and offenders punished, the very officers of the forest were daring enough to plunder it, as appears to have been the case*; it can be no wonder surely, now those courts are discontinued, and the execution of the forest law, as to this place, has been laid aside for nearly thirty years, that the forest should become the object of avarice and rapine.

During the last war, great quantities of the timber were cut and sent to Plymouth, for the use of the royal navy, which was a proper application of it, and proved a very seasonable supply. And it were to be wished, rather, I fear, than to be expected, in this age of prodigality and extravagance, of venality and corruption, that now, before it be too late, proper means may be used to preserve the timber that remains; and that care may be speedily taken to raise a future crop, to be ready for use before the present be intirely exhausted. This is a matter of great and national concern, and ought not to be neglected.

This forest is winter-heined, or exempted from common, between the 11th of November and the 23d of April, by 20^o C. 2. c. 3.

The gentry of the forest are courteous, hospitable and generous; and the poorer sort of people, by their example, are now brought to an obliging kind of behaviour, which used not to distinguish their character: For this country was formerly so intirely covered with wood, so dark and terrible, and the roads so intricate, from their often crossing each other, that it rendered the inhabitants barbarous, and emboldened them to commit many robberies and outrages, particularly on the banks of the

* A commission issuing out of the exchequer 25 March, 1617, to William Cook, knight, and others, to inquire into the state of the forest, they made this return, That George Castle and William Callow, the persons appointed for the marking of trees and delivery of wood for the iron-works, within the forest, have felled 160 oaks of timber, at a place called the Hayts, of purpose to have the bark thereof; which bark they have sold, as by the deposition of John Dobbs. 14^o Ju. 1.

Severn; infomuch that an act of parliament was made 8^o H. 6. on purpose to curb and restrain them. Mining is the chief employment of the poor, who, I am told, can earn more money than any common labourers in the kingdom besides.

The foresters boast of their independency, and say that the produce of their own country is sufficient for them, without being obliged to any other part of the kingdom; which, that the reader may be the better disposed to credit, I will give him, at the conclusion of the account of this country, an old proverb in its favour,

“Happy is the eye betwixt the Severn and the Wye.”

There was another forest in this county, called the forest of Kingwood; but it was disafforested in the reign of king H. 3. In the act of parliament for erecting the parish of St. George, near Bristol, it is called the now or late forest of Kingwood. It extended from Nibley-green northwards, to the river Avon, which runs to Bristol, southwards, being sixteen or seventeen miles in length, and in some places near six miles broad. At present, what is called Kingwood forest, lies in the parishes of Bitton, Mangotsfield, and St. George's, containing about 5000 acres of ground, several gentlemen being possessed of it, by patent from the crown, and it consists chiefly of coal-mines.

Of the FOUR DIVISIONS of the COUNTY.

HAVING taken a short view of the county, in the three grand divisions made by nature, as at first proposed, it now remains to be considered in the parts or districts into which good policy hath divided it, for the sake of order and government. Of these divisions there are four, viz.

1. Kiftsgate division, comprizing the north and north-east parts, adjoining to Worcestershire, Warwickshire, and Oxfordshire.

2. The division of the Seven Hundreds, lies S. and S. W. of the former, with Oxfordshire and a part of Berkshire on the E. and Wiltshire on the S. and S. E. of it.

3. Berkeley division extends from the Seven Hundreds to the extremity of the county towards Wiltshire and Somersetshire, with the river Severn on the N. W. of it.

4. The forest division takes in all that part of Gloucestershire which lies on the N. W. of the Severn, and that part of the hundred of Dudston and King's-Barton, situated on the other side of that river.

When this distribution was made I have not discovered; but conjecture, that it took place for the convenience of the magistrates in their petty sessions, some of whom residing near the extremity of the county, and not being able to attend business at large, might probably undertake such districts as lay most commodiously to their respective habitations.

The most antient division of the counties is into hundreds and tythings, made by king Alfred, to preserve peace and good order. He appointed, that all free-born men should form themselves into companies of ten persons each, and that every of those ten should be surety and pledge for the appearance of his fellows; therefore those companies were called tythings, as containing the number of ten free men, with their families. And as it was appointed that ten of these companies should meet together at certain times, to consult on matters of great moment, therefore that general assembly was called an hundred.

There are now twenty-eight hundreds in this county, reckoning the hundred of Cirencester and the reputed one of Crowthorne and Minety, to be one. (See the division of the Seven Hundreds.) The city of Gloucester, notwithstanding its being taken into the forest division, will be consider'd separately, as it is a distinct county. The names of the hundreds, with the parishes, and such of the tythings and places as have their respective officers, are set down in the following tables.

KIFTSGATE DIVISION.

Containing the Hundreds of

I. KIFTSGATE.

Parishes in the Upper Part.

Aston Subedge,	Lark Stoke,
Battesford,	Longborough,
Campden, (Chipping)	Marston Sicca,
and its tythings, viz.	Mickleton and
Berrington,	Hidcot Batterham.
Broad Campden,	Pebworth,
Westington and	Queinton, with
Comb.	Almington.
Condicote, (part of)	Saintbury,
Cowhonibourn,	Seifincot,
Dorsington,	Swell, (Upper)
Ebrington, with the ty-	Weston Subedge,
things of	Weston super Avon,
Charringworth,	Willersey,
Hidcot Bois.

Places

Places in the Lower Part.

Aston Somerville,	Sudley Manor,
Buckland,	Sudley Tenements,
Charlton Abbats,	Todington,
Child's Wickham,	Twining,
Didbrook,	Winchcombe, with the
Dumbleton,	tithings of
Guiting Power, with	Cotes,
Farmacot.	Cockbury,
Guiting Temple,	Corndean,
Hawling,	Greet,
Hayles,	Greton,
Pinnock,	Naunton,
Rowel, extraparochial.	Postlip,
Snowhill,	Stanley Pontlarch.
Stanton,	Wormington.

2. SLAUGHTER.

The Upper Part.

Adlestrop,	Stow, with the tithings of
Bledington,	Donington,
Broadwell,	Maugerbury,
Condicote, (part of)	Swell, (Lower)
Icombe,	Westcot.
Oddington,

The Lower Part.

Barrington, (Great)	Rifington, (Wick)
Barrington, (Little)	Sherbourn,
Bourton on the Water,	Slaughter, (Upper) with
Clapton,	Eyford,
Naunton,	Slaughter (Lower)
Rifington, (Great)	Widford,
Rifington, (Little)	Winrush.

3. TIBBLESTON.

Ashton-under-hill,	Grafton in Beckford.
Beckford, and its tithings	Hinton on the Green.
Bangrove,

4. CLEEVE.

Cleeve, with its tithings,	Stoke Archer, (part of)
Gotherington,	in Cleeve,
Southam, &c.	Wodmancot in Cleeve.

5. CHELTENHAM.

Charlton King's,	Westall, Naunton,
Cheltenham, with its	and Sandford.
tithings, viz.	Lechampton,
Alston,	Swindon.
Arle,

6. DERHURST.

The Upper Part.

Coin St. Dennis,	Preston,
Compton, (Little)	Welford.

The Lower Part.

Derhurst,	Staverton,
Haw and Turley, (p'.of)	Uckington, in Elmston
Leigh,	parish,
Presbury,	Wolfstone.

7. TEWKESBURY.

The Upper Part.

Alderton, with Dixton,	Lemington,
Ashton-under-hill, } part	Prescot,
Bourton on the hill, } of	Shenington,
Clifford Chambers,	Stanway,
Didcot in Beckford,	Washbourn.

The Lower Part.

Ashchurch, with its tith-	Kemerton,
ings, viz.	Oxinton,
Aston super Carant,	Stoke Archer, (part of)
Fiddington and	in Cleeve parish,
Natton,	Tewkesbury, and the
Northway and	tithings of
Newton,	Mythe, and Mythe-
Pamington,	Hook,
Boddington, with Bar-	Southwick,
row,	Tredington,
Forthampton,	Walton Cardiff.

8. WESTMINSTER.

The Upper Part.

Bourton on the hill, (p'.)	Sutton under Brayles,
Morton-henmarsh,	Todenham.

The Lower Part.

Apperley and Wight-	Hasfield, field, in the parish of	Heydon, in the parish of
Derhurst,	Boddington,
Corse,	Turley, (part of)
Evington, in the parish	Walton, in the parish of of Leigh,	Derhurst.
Hardwick, in Derhurst,

DIVISION of the SEVEN HUNDREDS.

Containing the Hundreds of

9. CIRENCESTER †.

Castle Ward,	Goffditch Ward,
Cricklade Ward,	Instrip Ward,
Dollar Ward,	St. Lawrence Ward,
Dyer Ward,

The OUT TORN and MINETY †, vulgarly
CROWTHORN and MINETY.

Amney St. Mary,	Amney Crucis,
Amney St. Peter,	Bagendon,
	Barton

† These two divisions make but the hundred of Cirencester, as appears by the sheriff's return of all the hundreds, &c. in the county of E. 1. inserted at the end of this chapter. But on account of the extent of it, the business was divided between several high

Barton tithing in Cirencester,	Minety,
Baunton,	Oakley tithing in Cirencester.
Chefferton tithing in Cirencester,	Preston,
Cotes,	Siddington St. Mary.
Daglingworth,	Siddington St. Peter.
Down Amney,	South Cerney,
Driffield,	Spitalgate, vulgarly Spiringate tithing in Cirencester,
Duntesbourn Abbats,	Stratton,
Duntesbourn Rous,	Wigold tithing in Cirencester.
Harnhill,
Meyfey Hampton,

10. BRITWEL'S BARROW.

Aldsworth,	Eaflleach Turville,
Barnesley,	Fairford,
Bibury, with the tithings of	Hatherop,
Ablington,	Kempsford,
Arlington.	Leachlade,
Coln St. Alwin's,	Quenington,
Eaflleach Martin,	Southrop,

11. BRADLEY.

Afton Blank, or Cold Afton,	Notgrove,
Aylworth in Naunton,	Salperton,
Coln Rogers,	Sevenhampton,
Compton Abdale,	Shipton Oliffe,
Dowdeswell,	Shipton Solers.
Farmington,	Stowell,
Hampnet,	Turkdean,
Hasleton,	Whittington,
Northleach, with	Winson in Bibury,
Eastington,	Withington,
	Yanworth in Hasleton.

12. RAPSGATE.

Brimpsfield,	Duntesbourn Lyre, in
Chedworth,	Duntesbourn Abbats,
Colebourn,	Elkstone,
Cowley,	North Cerney,
Cranham,	Rendcombe,
Cubberley,	Side.

13. BISLEY.

Bisley,	Saperton,
Edgworth,	Stroud,
Miserden,	Winston.
Painswick,

14. LONGTREE §.

Avening,	Shipton Moign,
Cherington,	Tetbury, and its tithings,
Hampton, (Minchin)	Charlton,
Horsley,	Upton, &c.
Rodborough,	Westonbirt,
Rodmarton,	Woodchester.

15. WHITSTON.

The Upper Part.

Frethren, or Frethorn,	Quedgley,
Hardwick,	Randwick,
Haresfield, and its tithing,	Saul,
Harescombe,	Standish, with its tithings
Longney,	Oxlinch,
Morton Valence,	Putloe.

The Lower Part.

Eastington, with	Stanley, (St. Leonard's)
Alkerton,	Stonehouse,
Frampton upon Severn,	Wheatenhurst, or Whitminster.
Frocester,
Stanley, (King's)

BERKELEY DIVISION,

Containing the Hundreds of

16. BERKELEY.

The Upper Part.

Arlingham,	Newington, or Bagpath,
Ashelworth,	Nimpsfield,
Berkeley, and its tithings,	North Nibley,
Alkington,	Olepen, vulgarly Oldpen,
Bradstone,	Ozleworth,
Ham,	Slimbridge,
Hamfallow,	Stinchcombe,
Hinton,	Stone,
Beverstone,	Uley, or Ewley,
Cromhall Abbats, with	Wotton, and its tithings,
Cromhall Ligon,	Huntingford,
Cam,	Simondshall, and
Cowley, or Coaley,	Combe,
Dursley,	Sinwell and Bradley,
Kingfcot,	Wortley.

The Lower Part.

Almondsbury,	Horfield,
Elberton,	King's Weston, in Hen-
Filton,	bury.
Hill, alias Hull, high constables; the borough was assigned to two, and the out-parishes, with Minety, (which was a member of the manor of Cirencester) were appointed to another constable; whose division, to distinguish it from the In-Torn, (i. e. the court within the borough) was called Th' Out-Torn and Minety; and so by common use was at length corrupted to the unmeaning name by which it now passes. The name makes it appear to have been originally a distinct hundred, whereas it is only a part of the old hundred of Cirencester. Thus considered, the division of the Seven Hundreds contains its proper number: But if the Out-Torn and Minety be taken as a distinct hundred, there will then be Eight Hundreds in this division of the Seven Hundreds. — A most glaring absurdity!

§ This was antiently written Langetrev, i. e. Long-town, &c. for Trev, or Tref, in the British language signifies a town, house, or home.

17. THORN-

17. THORNBURY.

The Upper Part.

Marshfield borough, with its tythings.

The Lower Part.

Gaunt's Urcot, in Almondesbury, Iron Acton, Rangeworthy, Titherington,	Thornbury, with the tythings of Falfield, Kington, Morton, Oldbury.
---	--

18. PUCKLECHURCH.

Cold Ashton, Pucklechurch, Syston,	Westerleigh, Wick and Abston.
--	----------------------------------

19. LANGLEY and SWINESHEAD.

Alveston, Bitton, with its tythings, Hanham, Oldland. Deynton, Frampton Cotterel, with Wickwick. Hempton, in Almondesbury,	Littleton on Severn, Olveston, with the tything Tockington, Over, in Almondesbury, Rockhampton, Winterbourn, with the tything of Hambrook.
---	--

20. KING'S BARTON.

Clifton, Mangotsfield,	St. George's, [Easton.] Stapleton.
---------------------------	---------------------------------------

21. HENBURY.

Compton Greenfield, Henbury, and its tythings, Aust, Charlton, Lawrence Weston, Redwick & Northwick, Stowick.	Itchington, in Titherington, Stoke Giffard, Westbury on Trim, with the tythings of Stoke Bishop, Shirehampton. Yate.
--	--

22. GRUMBALD'S ASH*.

The Upper Part.

Alderley, Badminton, (Great) Badminton, (Little) Boxwell and Leighterton Charfield, Didmarton, Hawkesbury, with its tythings,	Hillsley, Kilcot, Tresham, and Seddlewood, Upton. Horton, Oldbury on the hill, Tortworth, Wickwar.
--	---

The Lower Part.

Acton Turville, Acton Ilgar, Doddington, Dyrham and Hinton, Sodbury (Chipping,)	Sodbury (Little,) Sodbury (Old,) Tormarton, Wapley and Codrington, West Littleton.
---	--

FOREST DIVISION.

Containing the Hundreds of

23. St. BRIAVEL'S.

Abbenhall, Bicknor, Dean Magna, or Mitchell Dean, Dean Parva, Flaxley, Hewelsfield, The Lea,	Newland, and its tythings, Bream, Clowerwall, Colford, Lea Baily. Rure Dean, Saint Briavel's, Staunton.
--	---

24. BLIDESLOW.

Awr, Alvington,	Lidney.
--------------------	---------

25. WESTBURY.

Blaiden, Churcham, Newnham,	Tidenham, Westbury, Woolaston.
-----------------------------------	--------------------------------------

26. BOTLOE.

Bromborow, Dimmock, with its tythings, viz. Leddington, Ryeland, Woodend. Kempley, Newent, with its tythings,	Compton, Cugley, Maulswick. Oxenhall, Pauntley, Rudford, Tainton, Upleaden.
---	--

27. DUTCHY of LANCASTER.

Bully, Huntley, Long Hope,	Minsterworth, Tiberton.
----------------------------------	----------------------------

28. DUDSTON and KING'S-BARTON.

Upper Part.

Brockworth, Barnwood, Badgworth, Churchdown, Down Hatherly,	Highleadon, in Rudford, Hucklecot, in Churchdown, King's Holm, Lassington,
---	---

* The ancient name is Grimboldestou, or Grimboldestowe, i. e. Grimbolde's place.

Longford, North Hamlet, Norton, Sandhurst, Shurdington Magna,	Twigworth, Uphatherly, Witcombe Magna, Wotton,
---	---

Middle Part.

Barton St. Mary, Gloucester, Barton St. Michael, Gloucester, Brookrup, or Brookthorp, Elmore, Hafcombe, Hempstead, Littleworth,	Matson, Pitchcombe, Prinknash, (extraparochial) South Hamlet, Tuffly, Upton, (St. Leonard's) Whaddon, Wooltrop.
---	--

Lower Part.

Hartpury, Highnam, Linton, and Over, in Churcham,	Maifmore, Preston,
--	-----------------------

Those hundreds that are divided, have a high constable for each division.

A little after the Norman conquest, many of the above hundreds had different names, and some of those which have still preserved their antient ones, have suffered alterations in their extent and dimensions, as may be seen in the Domesday account of Gloucestershire, from whence the antient names of the hundreds in the following table are extracted.

K I F T S G A T E D I V I S I O N .

Modern Names.	Antient Names.
Kiftsgate nearly includes the hundreds of —	Chelfede, Chelfeode, Chelfedestorn, Cheftesiat. Witelai, Gretestanes, Holefordes, Holiford.
Westminster, — — —	Derheft.
Deerhurst, — — —
Slaughter comprizes the greatest part of —	Salemanesberie, Berintone, Bernitone. Chiltenham.
Cheltenham, — — —
Cleeve, — — —	Tetboldestane.
Tibblestone, — — —
Tewkesbury, — — —	Tcodechelberie.

D I V I S I O N of the SEVEN HUNDREDS.

Modern Names.	Antient Names.
Cirencester and Crowthorn and Minety, somewhat more extensive than the hundreds of —	Cirecestre, and Gerfdon, Gerfdunes.
Britwel's Barrow equal to — — —	Briestwoldeberg, Becheberie, Begeberie.

Bradley nearly commensurate with — — —	Bradelei, Bradelege, and Wacrefcumbe.
Rapsgate, little different from — — —	Respiet, Respigete.
Bisley differs little from — — —	Bifeleie.
Longtree differs little from — — —	Langetreu Langetrewes.
Whitston not fully comprized in — — —	Witeftan and Blacelawes, Blacelew.

B E R K E L E Y D I V I S I O N .

Modern Names.	Antient Names.
Berkeley, — — —	Berkelai.
Thornbury includes — — —	Ederestan, and part of Bacheftanes.
Langley and Swineshead nearly include — — —	Langelei, Langenei, Suinheve, Sineshovedes, Tuiferde.
King's Barton, and Henbury, — — —	Bertune apud Bristou, Part of Welberie and Bernintreu.
Pucklechurch, — — —	Polcrecerce, Grimboldestowes, Bacheftanes, and part of Polcrecerce, and Edredestane, Ederestan.

F O R E S T D I V I S I O N .

Modern Names.	Antient Names.
St. Briavel's and Westbury, take part of the hundreds of — — —	Westberie, Westberies, Ledenei, Letberge, and Tedeneham.
Blidestow includes — — —	Bliteflau, Blidestowe and Ledenei.
Botloe and Dutchy of Lancaster, — — —	Botelau, and part of Westberie.
Dodston and King's Barton include — — —	Dudestan, Dunestane, Langebrige, Tolangebriges.

The king issued his writ to the sheriff of Gloucestershire, 9° E. 2. commanding him to return into the exchequer the names of all the cities, boroughs, and vills in every hundred in the county, and who were the lords of them. In the sheriff's return are two newly erected hundreds, viz. Thornbury and the Liberty of Westminster; and some of the smaller hundreds are incorporated into others. They were then as follow :

Gloucester, Dudston, Botlowe, Berkley, Wiston, Kiftegat,	Holford and Greston, Deerhurst, Westbury, Grymbaldefashe, Swyneshoved, Langley, Cirencester.
---	--

Cirencester *,	Chiltenham,
Bradley,	Salmonsbury,
Langetree,	Pokelchurche,
Repfgate,	Berton regis, juxt. Gl.
Brightwoldeberoe,	Teobaldston,
Tewxbury,	Saint Briavelle,
The liberty of West-	Thornburye,
minster,	Hendbury,
Blideslowe,	Bisley.

The sum of the villis of the whole county of Gloucester, together with five boroughs, viz. Gloucester, Bristol, Berkeley, Dursley and Newnham were then ccxxxiii. The villis are set down in the hundreds to which they belong, which were then much altered in extent from those at the time of the general survey, and were much more like what they now are. Gloucester and Bristol have since been made cities by the royal favour; but the other three antient boroughs are sunk greatly to decay, yet they still keep their rank among the market towns, the whole number of which within the county, where markets are actually holden, is twenty-eight. They are as follow :

Market-Days.	Market-Days.
Berkeley, - - Tuesday,	Newent, - - Friday.
Bisley, - - - Thursday,	Newnham, - Friday.
Campden, - - Wednesd.	Northleach, - Wednesd.
Cheltenham, Thursday.	Painswick, - Tuesday.
Cirencester, - Mo. & F.	Stanley St. Le. Saturday.
Coleford, - Friday.	Sodbury, - - Thursday.
Dean, - - - Monday.	Stow, - - - - Thursday.
Dursley, - - Thursday.	Stroud, - - Friday.
Fairford, - - Thursday.	Tetbury, - - Wednesd.
Gloucester, - W. & S.	Tewkesbury, W. & Sa.
Hampton, - Tuesday.	Thornbury, - Saturday.
Ilchester, - - Saturday.	Wickwar, - Monday.
Leachiade, - Tuesday.	Winchcombe, Saturday.
Marthfield, - Tuesday.	Wotton, - - Friday.

By a statute made 17^o E. 2. this county was indulged to continue its antient custom and privilege, that the lands of persons who might forfeit their lives by felony, should descend to their heirs; according to the words express'd in the statute, The father to the bough, and the son to the plough. The reason of this was, because Wales having newly submitted to England, and this county bordering upon Wales, it was thought convenient to humour the inhabitants with their old customs. The Kentishmen were allowed to enjoy the same privilege upon a like account, because that county bordered on France, and was therefore the more liable to suffer from invasion. The custom may still subsist in Kent, but in Gloucestershire, it has not been used within the reach of memory; and upon the strictest inquiry it does not appear to be claimed at present in any part of the county.

There is a common proverb respecting this county, by different persons a little variously expressed. It is sometimes said, As sure as God's in Gloucestershire; at others, As sure as God's in Gloucester. I shall not venture to say which is the true reading, but Dr. Stukeley takes notice of the latter; and is of opinion, that it was occasioned by the great number of churches, and religious foundations, in that city; "for you can scarcely walk past ten doors, says he, but somewhat of that sort occurs." Itin. Curiosa. p. 64. Sir Robert Atkyns mentions the first manner of expression, having perhaps, never heard the other; and says, "the proverb was occasioned by the words God and Glostershire beginning with the same letter, and not from the extraordinary multitude of religious foundations, tho' that was afterwards assigned for the reason; for Gloucestershire had not more religious houses in proportion than other counties." p. 4.

Upon this matter I shall observe, that whether the proverb originally related to the city, or to the county at large, I think it much more likely to take rise upon some religious account, than on that trifling one of two words beginning with the same letter. As relative to the former, the learned doctor has given his opinion. Let us now see what ground there was for such a saying, upon account of religious foundations, supposing it ought to be apply'd to the latter.

Sir Robert says, "there are eighteen † counties in England larger than this," which, for argument sake, shall be granted him; yet four only of those paid so much in pensions, to the members and servants of dissolved religious houses, in the year 1553, when the pensions in this county amounted to 1434*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.* And by an old account, copied by Stevens in his Supplement to the Monasticon, V 1. p. 23, it appears, that there were but four counties which exceeded Gloucestershire in the yearly value of their religious

* That the Out-Torn and Minety was part of the hundred of Cirencester, will appear from the sheriff's list of the villis in that hundred, viz.

In the hundred of Cirencester are the underwritten villis, viz.
Cirencester, and the abbat of Cirencester is lord of the same.
Upampney, and the abbat of Tewxbury, the abbat of Gloucester, the abbat of Cirencester, and Isabella de Clare, are lords, &c.
Hampton Moysey, and Nicholas de St. Maria is lord.
South Cerney, and the prior of Lanthony, near Glouc. John de St. Amando, and St. Augustine Bristol are lords.
Down Ampney, and Margaret Valers is lady.
Sodington, and Hugo de Spencer, John de Langley, and Gualter de Langley are lords.
Dyfeild, and the abbat of Cirencester, and Rob'tus de Harinhull are lords.

Preston, and the abbat of Cyren' and Peter de — are lords.

Cotes, and Richard de Lymell, and the abbess of Ramsey are lord and lady.

Duntesburne Abbats, and the abbat of Glouc. — de Cadomo, and John de Rowie are lords.

Daglingworth, and — Blunt, and Richard de Hampton are lords.

Bawdinton, and Richard de Bageidden, Robert de Penynton, and Thomas Corbet are lords.

The sum of the villis in the hundred of Cyren. xii.

† I suppose he meant seventeen, because he immediately refers to Mr. Houghton's table for the proportions of the counties to each other; by which it appears, that seventeen counties have a greater number of acres than Gloucestershire.

foundations, at the time of the dissolution; viz. York, Lincoln, Somersfet, and Middlesex, including the city of London. Therefore it may be presumed this county had more, or at least, better endowed houses, than many others of greater extent, which might occasion the proverb in question.

By the above account, the clear yearly value of religious houses, including the abbey of Kingswood, in Wilts, because it was intirely surrounded by Gloucestershire, and the priory of Lanthony, in the county of Monmouth, because it was a cell to Lanthony, near Gloucester, was 6672*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* 3 farthings.

The custom of wassalling, or going from house to house at Christmas, with a bowl to be filled with toast and ale, or cyder, is grown much out of use in this county. Lambard gives the following account of the rise of the "auncient maner of the Wassalling cuppe," which he takes from Galfride [Geoffry] of Monmouth: "Hengist having finished his castle, [now called Thong-castle, in Lincolnshire] for which he had obtained leave of Vortigern, invited him to a banquet, and after he had well pleased his taste, he assayed, by shewing of his daughter, to satisfy his sight also. The maid therefore (being of excellent beautie) came forth with a cuppe of wine in her hand, and kneeling downe in his sight, said, as she had been taught, lapoðe cynyng parrail, Lord king, be in health; which, when the king understood by his interpreter, he answered, ðyncheil, drink in health; and so the maid drank to him, and he pledged her so heartily, that before it was long he took her to wife."

OF PARISHES, &c.

HONORIUS, archbishop of Canterbury, about the year 640, divided that part of England which was then converted to christianity into parishes.

The number of parishes has increased ever since the conquest. When they were first laid out, it is presumed that due regard was had to the extent of them, and to the number of the inhabitants; for it was necessary to consider both circumstances together, in order to divide the duties of the parish priests equally amongst them. But large members have been continually lopped off from the mother churches, and becoming independent, the parishes are now very disproportionate. Under this head, Sir R. A. has observed, that "the parish of Newland, in the forest division, is 30 miles in compass; the parish of Rudford, in the same division, is 3 miles in compass; so that the one parish is an hundred times as large as the other." But these premisses will not justify the learned author's conclusion; for though it should be admitted, that Newland is an hundred times as large as Rudford, it is possible, notwithstanding, that the latter might be the largest. No competent judgment can be formed of the size of a parish, from the circumference of it, without ascertaining its shape and figure; for which reason I have seldom mentioned the circumference of places.

When the Antient and Present State of Gloucestershire was first published, the following remarks were in some measure just and seasonable. "It is," says the author, "a neglect that the highways and footpaths are not better amended; that lights in the dark nights are not set up in market-towns, as they are in London; that hospitals are not erected in the greater towns, for the relief of the sick and wounded, and for the conveniency of women to lye in. Many more such public charities are neglected, because faith, like Pharaoh's lean kine, has devoured charity. It is hard to allow neither free will nor good will."

The first objection is since in a great measure obviated, by the erecting of turnpikes on every considerable road in the kingdom; a mode of collecting money but little known to the author. That between Gloucester and Birdlip was one of the first turnpike roads in the kingdom. I wish it might be said to be one of the best.

As to the other objections, it is proper to observe, that the city of Gloucester is enlightened with lamps, by virtue of an act of parliament; and that in the same city is a noble infirmary, erected and supported by subscriptions and private donations; a more particular account of which will be found in a subsequent section of the general history.

Some persons have considered the latter part of the quoted paragraph, as containing an unnecessary, not to say injurious, insinuation of the want of public charity; for my part, I understand the author as warmly expressing his zeal for the promotion of the practice of that great and noble virtue. That he never intended to reflect on the county, of which he had written the history, is evident from the following passage: "It appears," says he, by examining the particular charities "in the several parishes, that this latter age has been as fruitful in good works as any of the former. There has not been so many pompous buildings, and extravagant donations, which are often the effects of proud and superstitious minds; but the modern charities tend to the relief of the sick and poor, which proceed from an humble and compassionate mind. The others go away with the loud applause of the world; but these are the true praise-worthy, and ought to be encouraged." p. 16.

The

The Monasticon Anglicanum of Sir William Dugdale, and the Supplement to it, by Mr. Stevens, have been sometimes produced to shew the many and great acts of charity before the reformation, by way of depreciating the latter ones; but with how little reason, will appear to those that will take the trouble to examine into the many public charities done since that time, and compare them with those in any like number of years before it. By this method, such a difference will be seen as to render the one unworthy of a comparison with the other. Dr. Willet, in his Synopsis Papismi, has given us a short specimen with regard to the two universities, and the city of London; but vast numbers of benefactions have been made since that work was first published. Besides, the author was not fully informed of all the charities, down to the time when he wrote.—All nations must acknowledge, that none enjoys freedom of sentiment more fully than this, nor is charity any where more liberally dispensed to the poor and needy. Whatever virtues have deserted our country, charity still continues to adorn it.

“ There is no part of Gloucestershire, says Sir R. Atkyns, but what is within seven miles * of some other county: This happens because the city of Gloucester is a distinct county, and the parish of Kingwood is in Wiltshire;” to which he might have added, that Poulton, in the same county, and Broadway, in Worcestershire, are both completely surrounded by Gloucestershire. There are also several places in this county surrounded by Oxfordshire, Wiltshire, Worcestershire, and Warwickshire, which will be particularly taken notice of under the respective parishes.—These are a few of the vast number of instances that might be given of the great irregularity and confusion in the antient division of lands in the kingdom; which some persons have supposed to have been occasioned by the great influence of the barons after the conquest; who, jealous of the rights and honours of their manors, procured their lands on the borders, and within the limits of neighbouring counties, to be appropriated to those in which their demesns, and chief places of residence lay.—But it is very certain that this distribution, as to Gloucestershire, took place before the conquest; because, when the kingdom was surveyed, at the beginning of the conqueror's reign, neither of the places I have just mentioned, as belonging to other counties, were then reputed as part of this; and Widford, which is surrounded by Oxfordshire, was then, as well as now, belonging to Gloucestershire. See Domesday-book.

The same learned author, p. 23, has represented the parish of Keynsham to be in this county, whereas it is in Somersetshire. But this is one of those trivial mistakes which genius frequently overlooks; and which I mention not invidiously, being sensible that all men are subject to error.

Of the R I V E R S.

THE principal rivers are the Severn; the Isis, or Thames; the first Avon, at Tewkesbury; the second Avon, at Bristol. These receive all the others that either rise in the county, or run through it.

THE SEVERN. The British name of this river is Hafren, which was given it, if Giraldus Cambrensis and Geoffry of Monmouth are to be credited, because a virgin of the name of Abren, or Hebren, was drowned in it, by the command of queen Guendolena, after the death of Lochrine, her husband, because she was the fruit of his unlawful love.

— In flumen precipitatur Abren;
Nomen Abren fluvio de virgine; nomen eidem.
Nomine corrupto, deinde Sabrina datur.

Headlong was Abren thrown into the stream,
And hence the river took the virgin's name.
Corrupted, thence at last Sabrina came.

But Leland deservedly treats this story as fabulous, and gives it as his opinion, that both this river and the Humber took their names of Aber, which in the British language signifies the mouth of any river.

It rises out of Plinlimmon-hill, in Montgomeryshire, and makes, says Camden, “ such a number of windings, that a person would think “ many times he returns again to his fountain.” It passes by Lanidlos and Welchpool, where it becomes navigable; and proceeding to Shrewsbury and Bridgenorth, enters Worcestershire above Bewdley; visits Worcester, and hastens into Gloucestershire a little above Tewkesbury, receiving the Avon from Warwickshire, about half a mile below that town. Taking its course downwards “ it “ parts itself to make the isle of Alney, which is “ rich and beautiful, and then hastens to Gloucester; a little below which place, uniting its “ divided streams, it waxeth broader and deeper

* When Sir Robert wrote the Antient and Present State of Gloucestershire, the distances between places were not so commonly measured as they now are; therefore, when he speaks of miles, candour will understand him to intend the common computation of the country.

“ by the ebbing and flowing of the tide.” Passing by the antient borough of Newnham, to a place below Chepstow, after a course of more than forty miles thro’ the county, it receives the Wye, which rises out of the same hill, and loses its name at the place of confluence, their united waters being called the Severn. Here the river becomes a boundary between Gloucestershire and Monmouthshire, and continues so ’till it receives the Avon, which runs from Bristol, at Kingroad. For many miles above this place, the severn is two or three miles over, but here it is three or four times as broad, and capable of receiving ships of great burthen.

On this river, from Gloucester and Newnham, several brigs are employ’d in the trade to London and Ireland, and a great number of barges, or trows, run to and from Bristol, Gloucester, Tewkesbury, Worcester, and Bewdley, at which place, a communication is opened, by a canal, with the rivers Mersey and Trent, promising great advantages to this trading country.

The Severn is remarkable for its tide, which rolls in with a head of three or four feet high, foaming and roaring in its course, as if enraged by the opposition it meets with from a strong current of fresh water, which seems to contend with it for the superiority. They clash in such a manner as to dash the waters to a considerable height. This contest between them is called the Hygre, or Eager, probably from the French eau-guerre, i. e. water-war. The tide getting the better, marches up the stream victoriously. Hear Drayton’s description of this turbulent river.

————— “ with whose tumultuous waves,
Shut up in narrow bounds, the Hygre wildry raves;
And ’frights the straggling flocks, the neighbouring shores to fly
Afar, as from the main it comes with hideous cry.
And on the angry front the curling foam doth bring,
The billows ’gainst the banks, when fiercely it doth fling:
Hurles up the slimy ooze, and makes the scaly brood
Leap madding to the land, affrighted, from the flood;
O’returns the toiling barge, whose steersman doth not launch,
And thrusts the furrowing beake into her ireful paunch.

As when we haply see a sickly woman fall
Into a fit of that which we the mother call.
When from the griev’d wombe she feels the pain arise,
Breaks into grievous sighs, with intermixed cries,
Bereaved of her sense; and struggling still with those
That ’gainst her rising paine their utmost strength oppose,
Starts, tosses, tumbles, strikes, turns, touses, spurns and sprawls,
Casting with furious limbs her holders to the walls.
But that the horrid pangs torment the griev’d so,
One well might muse from whence this sudden strength should grow.”

Sir Robert Atkyns attempts to account for the tide coming in as above described, and not swelling more gradually, as in some other rivers. It is occasioned, he says, by the mouth of the Severn opening to the great Atlantic ocean, which pours in its tide with great violence, and the river growing narrow on a sudden, it fills the channel at once.

The remark that the tides here are largest one year at full moon, and the next at the change; and that the night-tides are larger than the day-tides one year, and the contrary the next, is, I believe, rather a chimera, than the result of accurate observation.

The Severn has been said to be a rapid river, yet there is not a lock upon it, from the top of the navigation downwards, which is a circumstance not very consistent with that notion, for rapid rivers are generally full of shallows. Like other great rivers, it overflows its banks after much rain, from which the vale of Gloucestershire sustained great damage, particularly in the years 1606, 1687, and 1703.

This river does not boast of a great variety of fish, yet the salmon, of which there is great plenty, is truly excellent. To some persons the flavour of the shad of this river is very grateful. This is a sea-fish, of the herring kind, by some naturalists called Clupea. But the Severn is more especially famed for the lamprey, in Latin, lampetra, a species of Petromyzon. It has several rows of teeth, without back-bone, or gills, but instead of the latter, on each side of the throat are seven holes to receive water. It is of a dark colour on the back, but of a fine, clear, light blue on the belly. It sometimes grows to the weight of three pounds, and upwards of two feet and a half in length. They are very scarce, much esteemed, and sell at a high price.

The Severn also produces the elver, a species of fish which the editor of Camden, by mistake, supposes not to be found in any county but Somersetshire. If the spring be mild and open, they generally appear about the middle of April, when they cover the surface of the water, more especially about the mouths of the rivers that empty themselves into the Severn. They are of a dark brown colour, about two or three inches long, and have the name from a supposition that they are young eels. The country people skim them up in great abundance, scour and boil them, and bring them to market as white as snow, where they usually sell at about two-pence a pound.

The bailiwick of the Severn is in the crown. John Arnold had a lease of it 1660, for thirty-one years at 10*l.* a year. Mr. Edward Baylis of Gloucester is the present Water bailiff.—2° E. 6. Thomas Hennage and the lord Willoughby had a grant of a fishery, from Newnham-ladder to Boxgrove, which formerly belonged to the abbey of St. Austin’s, Bristol.

The places for passing of this river are as follow, viz.

At the Lower Load, a mile below Tewkesbury, by ferry.

At the Haw, six miles above Gloucester, by boat.
At Maismore bridge.

At the bridge at Gloucester.

At Framilode, by boat, about ten miles below Gloucester. The passage-house is on the S. E. side of the river. They land at Westbury.

At

At Newnham, two miles farther down, where the passage-house is on the contrary side. They land at Arlingham. Here is a ford, over which, at low water, waggons and people on horseback, of more resolution than prudence, sometimes pass; for many have lost their lives in the attempt. The river is here about a mile over. At the above places they pass almost at any time.

At Pirton, in the parish of Lidney. They land in Berkeley parish.

At Aust, in the parish of Henbury, and Beachley, in that of Tidenham, are correspondent passage-houses. This passage communicates with the roads in Monmouthshire on one side, and those leading to Bristol and Bath on the other. As it is of great importance to travellers to know the time of passing, the following observations will be useful. The passage here depends both on the wind and tide. The southerly, westerly, and northerly winds are proper for passing; but when the wind and tide go both the same way, there is no passing; therefore, when the wind is northerly it must be at flood, or coming in of the tide, and then you may pass for five hours. On the contrary, when the wind is southerly or westerly, all passing must be at ebb, or going out of the tide, which affords seven hours good passing.

Knowing the age of the moon, by which all tides are governed, the following table shows at what hour to pass every day in the year.

The Wind being above.			The Wind being below.
Moon's age.	Time of passing.		Moon's age.	Time of passing.
	H. M.	H. M.		H. M.	H. M.
1 and 16	2:00 to	7:00	1 and 16	7:00 to	2:00
2 and 17	2:48 to	7:48	2 and 17	7:48 to	2:48
3 and 18	3:36 to	8:36	3 and 18	8:36 to	3:36
4 and 19	4:24 to	9:24	4 and 19	9:24 to	4:24
5 and 20	5:12 to	10:12	5 and 20	10:12 to	5:12
6 and 21	6:00 to	11:00	6 and 21	11:00 to	6:00
7 and 22	6:48 to	11:48	7 and 22	11:48 to	6:48
8 and 23	7:36 to	12:36	8 and 23	12:36 to	7:36
9 and 24	8:24 to	1:24	9 and 24	1:24 to	8:24
10 and 25	9:12 to	2:12	10 and 25	2:12 to	9:12
11 and 26	10:00 to	3:00	11 and 26	3:00 to	10:00
12 and 27	10:48 to	3:48	12 and 27	3:48 to	10:48
13 and 28	11:36 to	4:36	13 and 28	4:36 to	11:36
14 and 29	12:24 to	5:24	14 and 29	5:24 to	12:24
15 and 30	1:12 to	6:12	15 and 30	6:12 to	1:12

Example. If the moon be 5 or 20 days old, and the wind above, there is passing from 12 minutes after 4, 'till 12 minutes after 10. If the wind be below, from 12 minutes after 10, to 12 minutes after 5.

When the tide is coming in, the wind being above, they pass an hour earlier at the New Passage than here; but the tide going out, and wind below, they are an hour later at the New Passage; so that this table will serve for both passages.

This river was formerly the limit between England and Wales; and the acts 8^o H. 6. c. 27, and 27^o H. 8. were intended to prevent robberies upon it. The 20^o C. 2. c. 9. is for the preservation of fish therein.

The AVON. This river rises near Naseby, in Northamptonshire, enters Warwickshire at Colthrop, and passes by Rugby, Warwick, and Stratford, where it is navigable. Quitting that county, it hastens by Evesham to enter Gloucestershire, a little above Tewkesbury; and about half a mile below the town, is discharged into the Severn. The name is British, and signifies a river.

The Isbourne, a little river which rises in Charlton Abbats, and runs by Winchcombe, empties itself into the Avon a little below Evesham.

The Carrant, which rises in Beckford, is a boundary, above Tewkesbury, between the counties of Gloucester and Worcester, and empties itself into the Avon; as doth

The Swilyate, a little below that town.

The little river Chilt, rises at Dowdeswell, and running by Cheltenham is voided into the Severn at Wainload's-bridge.

The Badgworth river, after receiving a brook that runs thro' Brockworth, falls into the Severn at Sainthurst, or Sandhurst.

The Leaden or Leddon, rises in Herefordshire, and empties itself into the Severn almost opposite Gloucester.

The Froome, or Stroud river, rises at Brimpsfield, runs by Stroud, thro' Stonehouse, Easington, and into the Severn at Framilode.

The Ewelme, rises at Owlpen and Uly, runs by Dursley, and receives the Broad-well water. Passing on, it changes its first name for that of Cam, which it communicates to the next village; and collecting several little streams in its course to Cowley and Slimbridge, falls into the Severn at the last mentioned parish.

The Berkeley Avon, rises in two heads at Boxwell and Kilcot, and collecting other small brooks in its course, passes by Berkeley, and a little below it, falls into the Severn.

The ISIS. This river has generally been considered as the head of the Thames, which, according to the current opinion, had that name from the junction of the names of the two rivers, Thame and Isis, as their waters also join near Dorchester, in Oxfordshire. But however plausible this etymology may seem, the learned author of the additions to Camden's Britannia has made it appear, that this river, which Camden and others have called Isis and Ouse, was antiently called Thames or Tems, before it came near the Thame, and produces the following authorities.

“ In an antient charter granted to abbat Aldhelm, there is particular mention made of certain lands upon the east part of the river, cujus vocabulum TEMIS, juxta vadum qui appellatur Summerford; and this ford is in Wiltshire. “ The same thing appears from several other charters granted to the abbey of Malmesbury, “ as well as that of Evesham; and from the old deeds relating to Cricklade. And perhaps it “ may with safety be affirmed, that in any charter “ or authentic history, it does not ever occur under the name of Isis; which indeed is not so “ much as heard of but among scholars; the “ common “ common people, all along from the head of it

 “ to Oxford, calling it by no other name but that “ of Thames. So also the Saxon Teme (from “ whence our Tems immediately comes) is a plain “ evidence that that people never dreamt of any “ such conjunction. But further: All our his“ torians who mention the incursions of Æthel-
 “ wold into Wiltshire, A. D. 905; or of Canute, “ A. D. 1016, tell us, that they passed over the “ Thames at Cricklade.—As for the original
 “ of the word [Thames] it seems plainly to be “ British, because there are several rivers in several “ parts of England of almost the same name
 “ with it; as Tame in Staffordshire, Teme in Here“ fordshire, Tamar in Cornwall, &c. And a “ learned person of that nation [Mr. Lhwyd] “ affirms it to be the same with their Táf, which “ is the name of many rivers in Wales; the Ro“ mans changing the pronunciation of the (f)
 “ into (m), as the Latin word Demetia, is in “ Welch Dyfed.” Camden's Brit. col. 100, 101.

Mr. Lhwyd has also shewn that where the Latins use an (m) the Britons have a (v), as Firmus, Firv; Terminus, Tervin; Amnis, Avon; Lima,
Lbiv, &c. and that the word Táv, was, according to the old British orthography, written Tam; wherefore he thinks that Táv, or Taff, is originally the same word with Tame, or Thames; and that tamos in potamos is probably no other.

The Thames has been reputed to rise in the parish of Coats, out of a well that overflows in the winter, or in a very wet season only; but in the summer, this river can be traced no higher than to some springs which rise in the parish of Kemble, a little south of the fofs road. The poetical description of the source of this river may be found in the Marriage of Thame and Isis, which Mr. Camden's Biographer supposes him to be the author of; it begins thus:

Lanigeros quà lata greges Cotswaldia pascit, &c.

The following translation of it is taken from the Britannia.

Where Cotswold's hillocks, fam'd for weighty sheep,
 Their eager course to the Dobunians keep;
 Near the great fosse a spacious plain there lies,
 Where broken cliffs the secret top disguise.
 Hugh free-stones neatly carv'd adorn the gate
 The porch with ivory shines, the roof with jeat,
 And rows of pumice in the posts are set,
 But nature yields to art. the workman's skill
 Does free-stone, ivory, pumice, jeat, excel.
 * * * * *
 Here awful Isis fills his liquid throne;
 Isis, whom British streams their monarch own.
 His never-wearied hands a spacious urn,
 Down on his azure bosom gravely turn,
 And flags and reeds his unpoll'd locks adorn.
 Each waving horn the subject stream supplies,
 And grateful light darts from his shining eyes.
 His grizzly beard all wet hangs dropping down,
 And gushing veins in wat'ry channels run.

The little fish in joyful numbers crowd,
 And silver swans fly o'er the crystal flood,
 And clap their snowy wings, &c. —

The reader will be easily persuaded that the poet has taken greater licence in describing the source of this river, than will be allowed the topographer;
 and if he should survey the place called Thames-head, he will find, that the picture is not a very striking likeness of nature.

This river is navigable as high as Cricklade, in Wiltshire, from whence it runs to Leachlade, and visits Oxford, Abingdon, Wallingford, Reading, Henly and Windsor, in its way to the great metropolis.

The Churn is another river, more antiently written, in composition, Ceri, Cori, Corin; as Caer-Cori, &c. The name is of British original; Chwyrn, in that language signifies rapid. This river rises at Cubberly, ten miles north of Cirencester, and passing thro' that town, joins the Thames near Cricklade; and may with great propriety be called the head of that river, being the highest source from whence it derives its water.

The Coln rising near Withington, runs by Compton, Fofs-bridge, Bibury, Coln St. Aldwin's, and Fairford, and pours its stream into the Thames, a little above Leachlade.

The Lech rises in the parish of Hampnet, and passing by Northleach and Eastleach, empties itself into the Thames a little below Leachlade, which places all take their names from this river.

The Windrush rises near Guiting, and passing by Bourton-on-the-Water and Barrington, and so on to Burford and Witney, in Oxfordshire, joins the Thames at Newbridge, in that county.

The Evenlode runs from a parish of the same name in Worcestershire, near Battersford, and after passing thro' the east corner of Gloucestershire, enters Oxfordshire, and mingles its waters with the Thames near Eansham.

The AVON, or Bristol Avon, takes its rise at Tetbury, in this county, which it quits immediately; and passing by Malmesbury, Chippenham, Bradford, and Bath, where it is navigable, runs to Bristol, and from thence to Kingroad, where the Bristol ships first spread their sails when outward bound, and first cast anchor upon their return home. This river washes the western borders of Gloucestershire, and is the boundary between it and Somersetshire, for about twenty miles. By 11° and 12° W. 3. c. 23. the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the city of Bristol, are conservators of the Avon, from above the bridge there to Kingroad, and so down the Severn to the two islands called Holmes. And the preservation of the rivers Avon and Froome, is the object of the 25th chapter of the same statute; and of the 20th chapter of 22° G. 2. It was once proposed to join the Avon with the Thames by a canal, and so to complet an inland navigation betwixt London and Bristol, which might be easily carried into execution.

The Boyd rises at Codrington, and empties itself into the Avon at Bitton.

The Froome rises in two heads at Doddington and Rangeworthy, and receiving several little brooks, passes on to the key at Bristol, where it falls into the Avon.

The little river Trin, or Trim, runs from Westbury by a very short course into the Avon.

The Wye has but little claim to a place in our list of rivers. It is a boundary between Gloucestershire and Monmouthshire at Welch Bicknor, and at St. Briavel's. It then runs again into Herefordshire to take its last farewell; and quitting it, as tho' with reluctance, divides the two first mentioned counties a little above Monmouth. Half the wooden-bridge over this river at Chepstow is repaired by Gloucestershire, and the other half by Monmouthshire, as directed by 18° Eliz. and 3° Jac. 1. This bridge is built near the confluence of the Wye with the Severn, at which place is one of the highest tides in the world, the flood sometimes rising sixty feet. The Wye is well stored with excellent salmon, and other fish common to such large rivers.

Of the LIEUTENANCY, &c. of the COUNTY.

IN the time of the Saxons, the governors of other counties were called earls, or dukes; but Gloucestershire had its vice-roys, or sub-reguli. Ofrick, or Oshire, was vice-roy of the Wiccij in the year 680. Huctred succeeded him, who was also followed by Eanbert and Aldred, his two brothers.

Mr. Camden is of opinion, that the Custodes Regni, settled in every county by king Alfred, were of the same nature with our lieutenants. And that those were afterwards known in the reign of H. 3. by the name of Capitanei, who, by the assistance of the sheriffs were to curb the insolence of the robbers.

The governors of counties are now called the king's lieutenants. The office of lieutenancy, under that particular name, is but of late establishment, tho' of great honour and dignity. Lords lieutenants were at first appointed occasionally by the crown, whose representatives they are, with coercive power to keep order, within their respective counties, in time of great danger. They seem to have been first used on the suppression of monasteries, which caused a great ferment in the nation. They were afterwards established by law 2° and 3° E. 6. c. 2. and 4° and 5° Ph. and M. c. 3. and confirmed by 13° and 14° Car. 2. c. 3.

The defence of the nation formerly depended on tenures, and on the forces raised by the sheriffs in their counties. King H. 2 issued a proclamation, commanding all freeholders and burgeses of his dominions, on the continent, to provide themselves with arms offensive and defensive, in proportion to their substance; an ordinance which afterwards took place in England, according to the regulation of the assize of arms, which was executed under the inspection of the itinerant judges.

Every person possessed of a knight's fee, was obliged to have a coat of mail, a helmet, shield and lance, and such a suit for every fee he possessed. Every free layman possessed of effects, or rents, to the value of sixteen marks, was bound to have the same sort of armour; and those who had not above ten marks, were excused for a slihter coat of mail, an iron skull-cap and a lance. Burgeses were equipped with an iron cap, a lance, and a wambois, or quilted coat; and no person could pawn, or lend his armour, nor could a lord take it from his vassal by forfeiture, gift, security, or under any pretence whatsoever. When the possessor died, the armour descended to his heir; and during a minority, the guardian took it in charge, and provided a man for service, until his ward was able to serve in person. Benedict. p. 365.

Queen Elizabeth, upon the great invasion threatened by the Spaniard, 1588, by the advice of her council, began to issue out commissions of array, and to model a standing militia. Lord Chandos was then appointed lieutenant of this county, and the trained bands consisted of 3000 foot under ten captains, and 250 horse, divided into four troops.

The earl of Berkeley had a commission of lieutenancy 7° Jac. when the militia was new modelled, but the county provided the same number of men as before. Berkeley division was charged with 750 men, under three captains; the division of the Seven Hundreds furnished 750 men, under three captains; Kiftsgate division 750 men, under four captains; the Forest division 400 men, under two captains; and the city of Gloucester, with the hundred of Dudston and King's-Barton, called the in-county, was charged with 350 men, under one captain.

This body was divided into 600 pike-men, 600 halbardeers, 600 musketeers, and 1200 calivers. There were then only 200 horse, under the command of four captains, of whom 20 were furnished with lances, and the rest were called light horse. The county was also charged with 400*l.* to provide ammunition.

The militia was then raised by the inhabitants in proportion to their estates. By the 13° and 14° C. 2. c. 3. every person having a revenue of 500*l.* per ann. or an estate in goods or money of 6000*l.* value, was liable to find a horse, horse-man and arms; having a yearly revenue of 50*l.* or a personal estate of 600*l.* in goods or money, other than stock upon the ground, made him liable to find a foot-soldier and arms, and so in proportion for a greater estate in both instances. But real and personal estates were chargeable according to these proportions, tho' of a smaller value, to the supplying of arms, and pay.

But this law was repealed 30° G. 2. and a new one, very materially different from the former, took place of it, § which has been since explained and amended by 2° G. 3. By the old laws, property was charged with the burthen of the service; which by the new, is determined by lot on persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, without any regard to property. By 30° G. 2. men were liable to be placed on the lists from the age of eighteen to that of fifty; and according to lists so made out, one man out of twenty-nine was taken in Gloucestershire, to furnish 960 men, which was the complement for this county, including the cities of Gloucester and Bristol. But this proportion would have raised a greater number, had the lists been accurately made.

Among the Romans, the military age, according to Dionysius and Polybius, was from seventeen to forty-five or forty-six, and in dangerous times to fifty. Formerly our militia was composed of persons from the age of sixteen to sixty; so that a great part of them must have been old men and boys.

The earl of Berkeley is the present lieutenant of Gloucestershire. Many of his lordship's ancestors held this office of high trust, 'till the death of the late earl of Berkeley, when it was successively filled by lord Ducie, the late lord Chedworth, and Norborne Berkeley, esq; now lord Botetourt; who, going to take upon himself the government of Virginia, was succeeded as colonel of the militia by the earl of Berkeley. This nobleman is also Custos Rotulorum of the county.

Of the OFFICE of HIGH SHERIFF, With a List of Sheriffs of this County to the present Time.

EVERY county is governed by a yearly officer, whom we call the sheriff. The name is of Saxon original, compounded of Scyþe, already explained, and Geþeþa, a governor, or consul; that is, a governor of a shire or county. The sheriff was sometimes also called Viscount, before the word was used to signify a title of honour.

The principal functions of this office are thus defined by Mr. Madox, in his very accurate History of the Exchequer: "It was the sheriff's duty to do the justice of his county, to keep the public peace, to stock and improve the king's lands, and to collect the king's revenue." It appears that in time of war, he also performed some military functions; and the above-cited author has observed, "that he usually was the præfect, or governor of the king's castle in his county." In the second book of lord Littleton's Life of king Henry the Second, I find most of the following further particulars relating to this office. It is said, that among the Anglo-Saxons, the sheriff was elected in the county-court, by the people; and in the reign of king Henry the First, the citizens of London paid a fine to that prince, of a hundred marks of silver, that they might have the privilege of chusing their sheriffs themselves. But no instance occurs of such a liberty in the counties after the entrance of the Normans, 'till the statute made by Edward the First, in the 28th year of his reign, by which he granted to his people, that they shall have election of their sheriff in every shire where the shirvalty is not of fee, if they list. Nor did that act of parliament continue long unrepealed. In the times of which I write, says his lordship, the sheriffs had the counties committed to them respectively, by the king, at his pleasure, either in custody, or at ferm-certain.

It appears by the rolls, that, under Henry the First, Richard Basset and Aubrey de Vere, were joint-sheriffs of eleven counties. This was extraordinary: but there are several instances under different kings, of two or three being committed to the same person. Urso d' Abitot, in the reign of William the Conqueror, was made sheriff of Worcestershire, and the office was granted in fee to him and his heirs. Nevertheless it appears that his son was turned out of it by Henry the First, for having ordered one of the servants of that king to be slain. But it went to his sister, and in her right to her husband, Walter de Beauchamp, from whom it descended, by inheritance, to William their son, who, in the reign of Henry the

§ An order was publish'd, 43 E. 3. requiring all ecclesiastics in general, to be array'd and arm'd for the defence of the kingdom. Afterwards they were exempt from personal service, but were to find money to provide their quota of men and arms, which they were permitted to settle themselves. But by 30 G. 2. and 2 G. 3. all peers of the realm, the clergy, and members of both universities, with a few others, are intirely exempt from this service.

Second, was also sheriff of three other counties, viz. those of Hereford, Gloucester, and Warwick. Archbishops and bishops were sometimes appointed sheriffs. William bishop of Ely, who was chancellor to king Richard the First, offered to give the king for the shivalty of the several counties of York, Lincoln, and Northampton, 1500 marks in hand, and 100 marks increment, (that is, above the usual term) every year for each county. But the archbishop of York out-bid him for Yorkshire, and was made sheriff thereof, on the payment of 3000 marks for that county alone, and the yearly increment of 300. Three thousand marks were then equivalent to 30,000*l.* in our days. This auction of a ministerial and judicial office, of the highest trust and importance, was a scandalous thing; and the permitting of an office of this kind to descend by inheritance, may be reckoned among the faults of our old constitution; from which the kingdom must have experienced great inconveniencies, therefore provision was at length made by statute, that no person should serve two years together, but should be two years at least divested of the office, and not 'till then be capable of serving again in the same county.

The following is a List of the SHERIFFS of the County of Gloucester, with the Years in which they served, from 1 H. 2. to the present Time.

A. D.	HENRY II.	A. D.		A. D.
1154	Miles de Gloucester.	1193	Herbert Fitz Herbert.	1227	the same.
5	Walter de Hereford.	4	the same.	8	the same.
6	William de Beauchamp.	5	the same, and William de Romen.	9	Henry Bade.
7	the same.	6	Herbert Fitz Herbert.	1230	the same.
8	the same.			1	William Talbot, Peter de Edward, and Thomas de St. Martin.
9	the same.		JOHN.	2	the three same.
1160	the same.	7	William earl Marshal, and John Avenel.	3	William Talbot.
1	the same.	8	the same.	4	Thurstan de Spencer.
2	the same.	9	William Marshall, and Thomas Rochford.	5	the same.
3	William Piperd.			6	John Fitz Jeffry, and Jeffry de Derehurst.
4	the same.	1200	the same.	7	John Fitz Jeffry, and Marsdat Canonwite.
5	the same.	1	the same.	8	John Fitz Jeffry.
6	the same.	2	William Marshal, and Richard Haselrue.	9	the same.
7	Gilbert Piperd.	3	the same.	1240	the same.
8	the same.	4	Richard Musgrofs, and Reginald Patenolt.	1	the same.
9	the same.	5	the same.	2	the same.
1170	the same.	6	Gerard de Alcia, and Richard Burgeis.	3	Robert de Waleran, and Jeffery de Derehurst.
1	Ralph Fitz Stephen, and William his brother.	7	Engelrad de Cumat, and Richard Burgeis.	4	Robert de Waleran, and Nicholas de Montacute.
2	the two same.	8	the same.	5	Robert de Waleran, and Reginald Acle.
3	the two same.	9	the same.	6	Robert Waleran.
4	the two same.	1210	the same.	7	John de Fleming.
5	William Fitz Stephen.	1	the same.	8	the same.
6	the same.	2	the same.	9	Adam de Hitteffre.
7	the same.			1250	the same.
8	the same.		HENRY III.	1	the same.
9	the same.	3	Ralph Musard,	2	the same.
1180	the same.	4	the same.	3	William de Laborowe.
1	the same.	5	the same.	4	the same.
2	the same.	6	the same.	5	Robert de Maysey.
3	the same.	7	the same.	6	John de Brun.
4	the same.	8	Ralph Musard, and Peter Edward.	7	the same.
5	the same.	9	Ralph Musard.	8	the same.
6	the same.	1220	the same.	9	Matthew Werill.
		1	the same.	1260	the same.
		2	William Putot.	1	the same.
		3	the same.	2	Reginald de Acle, Roger de Chedney, and Peter de Coventry.
		4	the same.
		5	the same.
		6	the same.

A. D. 1263 the same. 4 the same. 5 the same. 6 the same. 7 the same. EDWARD I. 8 Peter de Chanett, and fir Walter Boking. 9 Reginald de Acle. 1270 Adam de Botiler. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 the same. 4 the same. 5 Richard de la Riviere. 6 Walter de Steuckly. 7 the same. 8 the same. 9 the same. 1280 Roger de Lackington. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 Jeffry de Maudiacre. 4 the same. 5 Fulk de Lacy. 6 the same. 7 Fulk de Lacy, and Thomas de Gardins. 8 the same. 9 the same. 1290 the same. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 the same. 4 John de Langley. 5 Richard Talbot. 6 the same. 7 John de Newborough. 8 Thomas de Gardens. 9 the same. 1300 the same. 1 the same. 2 the same. EDWARD II. 3 John de Langley. 4 Nicholas de Kingston, and John de Amesly. 5 the same. 6 John de Amesly, and John de Acton 7 the same. 8 William Mansell, and Ro- bert Darcy. 9 the same. 1310 Richard de la Riviere. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 the same. 4 John de Hampton. 5 the same. 6 the same. 7 the same.	A. D. 1318 the same. 9 John de Sulansell, and William Tracy. 1320 the same. 1 the same. EDWARD III. 2 Thomas de Rodborow. 3 the same. 4 the same. 5 William Gamage, and Thomas de Rodborow. 6 Thomas de Berkeley. 7 the same. 8 Richard Foxcott. 9 the same. 1330 the same. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 Thomas Berkeley of Cub- berly, and Richard Fox- cott. 4 Thomas de Berkeley. 5 the same. 6 Walter de Daftin. 7 Simon Basset. 8 the same. 9 the same. 1340 the same. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 the same. 4 the same. 5 the same. 6 Walter Daftin, and Phil- lebert Moreftel. 7 John de Wreston. 8 William de la Dene. 9 the same. 1350 Thomas Berkeley of Cub- berly, and William de la Dene. 1 Thomas Berkeley of Cub- berly. 2 Robert de Hildeslee. 3 the same. 4 the same. 5 the same. 6 Thomas Moigne. 7 the same. 8 the same. 9 Thomas Tracy. 1360 the same. 1 the same. 2 the same. 3 John Pointz. 4 the same. 5 the same. 6 John Tracy. 7 John de Clifford. 8 Thomas de Ocle. 9 John de Joce. 1370 Nicholas de Berkeley.	A. D. 1371 Peter de Veale. 2 John de Joce. 3 Peter Chament. 4 the same. 5 the same. 6 the same. 7 the same. RICHARD II. 8 Thomas Bradwell. 9 John Tracy. 1380 Ralph Walledge. 1 Thomas Bradwell. 2 Sir John Thorp. 3 Thomas Fitz Nicholas. 4 Ralph Wallery. 5 Thomas Berkeley. 6 Thomas Bruges. 7 Thomas Bradwell. 8 Thomas Berkeley of Cub- berly. 9 Lawrence Leabrook. 1390 Thomas Bruges. 1 Maurice de Kensell. 2 Henry de la River. 3 John de Berkeley. 4 Gilbert Dennis. 5 William Tracy. 6 Maurice Ruffel. 7 Robert Pointz. 8 John Berkeley. 9 John Browning. HENRY IV. 1400 Henry de la Riviere. 1 Maurice Ruffel, and Ro- bert Somerville. 2 Robert Whittington. 3 Sir William Beauchamp. 4 the same. 5 John Grinder. 6 Maurice Ruffel. 7 Robert Whittington. 8 Richard Mawarden. 9 Alexander Clivedon. 1410 William Wallwynne. 1 Sir John Grinder. HENRY V. 2 William Beauchamp of Powick. 3 Sir John Berkeley. 4 John Greville. 5 the same. 6 William Tracy. 7 Bishop Stone. 8 John Bruges. 9 John Willecots. 1420 the same. HENRY VI. 1 John Pouncefoot. 2 John Blacket. 3 Stephen Haytfield.
---	--	---

A. D.	A. D.	A. D.
1424 John Greville.	1483 Sir William Berkeley, and Robert Poyntz.	1541 Sir Edward Tame.
5 John Pauncefoot.		2 Walter Dennis.
6 Guy Whittington.		3 Sir George Baynham.
7 Robert Andrew.		4 Sir Nicholas Poyntz.
8 Giles Bruges.		5 Nicholas Wickers.
9 Sir Maurice Berkeley.
1430 Stephen Haytefield.	HENRY VII.	EDWARD VI.
1 John Stourton.	4 Sir Robert Poyntz.	9 Sir Miles Patrick.
2 Guy Whittington.	5 John Sanctloe.	7 Arthur Porter, esq;
3 John Pauncefoot.	6 John Walsh, esq;	8 Sir Thomas Bridges.
4 Sir Maurice Berkeley,	7 Thomas Mourton.	9 Sir Anthony Kingston.
5 the same.	8 Christopher Throgmorton.	1550 Sir Walter Dennis.
6 John Beauchamp.	9 Sir Thomas Hungerford.	1 Hugh Dennis, esq;
7 William Stafford.	1490 Richard Pool, esq;
8 Sir John Sturton.	1 Sir Robert Poyntz.	PHILIP and MARY.
9 the same.	2 Sir Walter Dennys.	2 Anthony Hungerford.
1440 John Boteler.	3 Sir Edward Berkeley.	3 Nicholas Hicks, esq;
1 Robert Leversey.	4 Sir Robert Poyntz.	4 Sir Walter Dennis.
2 William Tracy.	5 Robert Whittington, esq;	5 Nicholas Pauncefoot.
3 the same.	6 Richard Pool, esq;	6 Richard Brayne, esq;
4 William Gifford.	7 Alexander Baynham.	7 Thomas Throgmorton esq;
5 John Boteler.	8 Sir Giles Bruges.
6 Henry Clifford.	9 John Huddleston.	ELIZABETH.
7 John Try.	1500 Sir Robert Poyntz.	8 Nicholas Arnold.
8 John Gife.	1 Alexander Baynham.	9 the same.
9 William Tracy.	2 the same.	1560 Richard Tracy, esq;
1450 James Clifford.	3 Giles Greville.	1 Nicholas Walsh, esq;
1 John de Veale.	4 John Boteler, esq;	2 William Read, esq;
2 Giles Bruges.	5 Edmund Tame, esq;	3 George Huntly, esq;
3 John Gife.	6 John Pauncefoot, esq;	4 Richard Berkeley, esq;
4 Sir Walter Devereux.	7 Anthony Poyntz, esq;	5 Sir Giles Pool.
5 Sir John Barre.		6 William Palmer.
6 Sir Edward Hungerford.	HENRY VIII.	7 John Hungerford.
7 Nicholas Latimore.	8 Sir Maurice Berkeley.	8 Robert Brayne, esq;
8 Thomas Hungerford.	9 Thomas Poyntz, esq;	9 Sir Nicholas Poyntz.
	1510 Christopher Baynham, esq;	1570 Richard Baynham, esq;
EDWARD IV.	1 Sir Robert Moreton.	1 Thomas Smith, esq;
9 John Greville, esq;	2 Sir William Tracy.	2 John Higford, esq;
1460 Maurice Dennis.	3 Sir William Kingston.	3 Robert Strainge, esq;
1 the same.	4 Sir Maurice Berkeley.	4 Sir Thomas Porter.
2 Maurice Berkeley, esq;	5 Sir Alexander Baynham.	5 Thomas Wye, esq;
3 Edward Hungerford, esq;	6 Sir Christopher Baynham.	6 Walter Compton, esq;
4 John Hungerford, esq;	7 John Whittington.	7 Thomas Chester.
5 ——— Henton.	8 Sir William Dennis.	8 John Tracy, esq;
6 Sir John Grevill.	9 Sir Giles Tame.	9 William Read, esq;
7 Robert Pointz, esq;	1520 Thomas Poyntz.	1580 Richard Peate, esq;
8 John Cassey, esq;	1 Sir Thomas Berkeley.	1 Sir Thomas Porter.
9 Sir Richard Beauchamp.	2 Sir Anthony Pointz.	2 Thomas Baynham, esq;
1470 the same.	3 Sir Edmond Tame.	3 Thomas Smith, esq;
1 Humphrey Foster.	4 Sir Edward Wadham.	4 Anthony Hungerford, esq;
2 John Boteler, esq;	5 Sir John Walsh.	5 John Higford, esq;
3 Thomas Whittington.	6 Sir William Dennis.	6 Paul Tracy, esq;
4	7 Sir Anthony Poyntz.	7 Sir Thomas Throgmorton.
5 Thomas Norton, esq;	8 William Throgmorton esq;	8 Sir Henry Poole.
6 Thomas Baynham, esq;	9 Sir John Walsh.	9 Thomas Lucy, esq;
7 Edward Langley.	1530 Sir Edward Wadham.	1590 William Dutton, esq;
8 Walter Dennis.	1 Walter Dennis, esq;	1 Sir John Poyntz.
9 Sir John Sanctloe.	2 Anthony Kingston.	2 William Chester, esq;
1480 Robert Poyntz, esq;	3 Sir Richard Ligon.	3 Sir John Danvers.
	4 Sir John Walsh.	4 Joseph Baynham, esq;
RICHARD III.	5 Sir John Sanctloe.	5 Sir Henry Winstone.
1 Sir Alexander Baynham.	6 Sir Edward Tame.	6 John Chamberlain, esq;
2 John Huddleston, esq;	7 Sir Walter Dennis.	7 Sir John Hungerford.
	8 Sir Nicholas Poyntz.	8 Sir Edward Wintour.
	9 Sir John Walsh.
	1540 Sir Edward Wadham.

A. D.
1599 George Huntly, esq;
1600 Sir Thomas Throgmorton.
1 William Dutton esq;
2 Thomas Baynham, esq;

JAMES I.

3 Sir Henry Poole.
4 Giles Reade, esq;
5 Sir Thomas Staymet.
6 William Norwood, esq;
7 Sir Thomas Estcourt.
8 Sir Thomas Woodroff, who dying in May, William Guife was sheriff the rest of that year.
9 Sir John Tracy.
1610 Paul Tracy, esq;
1 Robert Bathurst, esq;
2 John Carter, esq;
3 William Kingston, esq;
4 Richard Brent, esq;
5 Henry Finch, esq;
6 Ralph Cotton, esq;
7 Thomas Chester, esq;
8 Sir Richard Hill.
9 Philip Langley, esq;
1620 Sir Thomas Baker.
1 Sir Thomas Thynne.
2 Thomas Hodges, esq;
3 Sir Richard Rogers.
4 John Dowle, esq;

CHARLES I.

5 Sir William Sandys.
6 Thomas Nicholas.
7 Sir William Masters.
8 Sir Richard Tracy, bart.
9 Henry Dennis, esq;
1630 Sir Ralph Dutton.
1 Sir George Wintour.
2 Henry Poole, esq;
3 Sir George Fettiplace.
4 Edward Stephens, esq;
5 William Leigh, esq;
6 Sir Richard Ducey, bart.
7 Sir Robert Poyntz.
8 John Codrington, esq;
9 Sir Humphry Tracy, bart.
1640 Robert Pleydell, esq;
1 Francis Creswick, esq;
2 Sir Baynham Throgmorton, bart.
3 William Moreton, esq; for the king.
Thomas Stephens, esq; for the parliament.
4 Thomas Stephens esq;
5 John Fettiplace, esq;
6 William Brown, esq;
7 William Guife, esq;
8 John Browning, esq;

CHARLES II.

9 John Dennis, esq;
1650 John Howe, esq;
1 John Keyte, esq;
2 John Goslet, esq;
3 Richard Talboys, esq;
4 Simon Bennet, esq;
5 George Raymond, esq;
6 the same.
7 John Barnerd, esq;
8 the same.
9 the same.
1660 Sir William Ducey, bart.
1 Sir Humphry Hooke.
2 Sir Thomas Estcourt.
3 William Cook, esq;
4 Sir John Hammer.

A. D.
1665 Sir Richard Cocks, bart.
6 Richard Whitmore, esq;
7 William Dutton, esq;
8 Sir Richard Ashfield, bart.
9 John Browning, esq;
1670 Sir Robert Canne, bart.
1 Sir Thomas Stephens.
2 Henry Dennis, esq;
3 John Dowle, esq;
4 Abraham Clark, esq;
5 Sir John Fust, bart.
6 Sir William Juxton, bart.
7 Richard Jones, esq;
8 Miles Sandys, esq;
9 Thomas Smith, esq;
1680 Sir Gabriel Lowe.
1 William Wall, esq;
2 Robert Pleydel, esq;
3 Charles Jones, esq;

JAMES II.

4 Charles Hancox, esq;
5 Sir Charles Wintour.
6 Sir Thomas Canne.
7 Henry Benedict Hall, esq;

WILLIAM III.

8 Sir Hele Hook, bart.
9 William Dennis, esq;
1690 John de la Bere, esq;
1 Samuel Barker, esq;
2 Sir Richard Cocks, bart.
3 Thomas Stephens, esq;
4 Nathaniel Ridler, esq;
5 Sir George Hanger.
6 Walter Yate, esq;
7 John Marriot, esq;
8 Nathaniel Stephens, esq;
9 Thomas Chester, esq;
1700 Richard Haynes, esq;
1 Samuel Eckley, esq;

ANNE.

2 Sir Samuel Eckley.
3 Sir Edward Fust, bart.
4 William Hayward, esq;
5 Edmond Chamberlain, esq;
6 Matthew Ducey Moreton, esq;
7 Francis Wyndham, esq;
8 Henry Wagstaff, esq;
9 Henry Sackville, esq;
1710 William Batson, esq;
1 George Smith, esq;
2 Thomas Winstone, esq;
3 Lawford Cote, esq;

GEORGE I.

4 William Whittington, esq;
5 William Kingscott, esq;
6 Abraham Elton, esq;
7 Edmund Bray, esq;
8 Sir Edward Fust, bart.
9 Christopher Bond, esq;
1720 Edward Saunders, esq;
1 John Baker Dowell, esq;
2 William Blathwait, esq;
3 Thomas Warner, esq;
4 Samuel Roch, esq;
5 Windsor Sandys, jun. esq;
6 John Sampson, esq;

GEORGE II.

7 Sir Robert Cann, bart.
8 Robert Cocks, esq;
9 Joseph Small, esq;
1730 Samuel Sheppard, esq;
1 Samuel Meo, esq;

A. D.
1732 Robert Martin, esq;
3 Reginald Winyatt, esq;
4 Richard Marriett, esq;
5 Thomas Lingēn, esq;
6 John Gladwin, esq;
7 William Robins, esq;
8 Ambrose Baldwyn, esq;
9 William Giles, esq;
1740 Edward Rogers, esq;
1 William Holbrow, esq;
2 Samuel Hawker, esq;
3 William Tayloe, esq;
4 Thomas Snell, esq;
5 Daniel Adye, jun. esq;
6 William Baghott Delabere, esq;
7 John Harding, esq;
8 Robert Ball, esq;
9 Thomas Winstone, esq;
1750 Henry-Toy Bridgman, esq;
1 Richard Hill, esq;
2 John Beale, esq;
3 Thomas Kemble, esq;
4 Thomas Ingram, esq;
5 John Collins, esq;
6 Charles Wyndham, esq;
7 William Mills, esq;
8 Thomas Jones, esq;
9 Samuel Hayward, esq;

GEORGE III.

1760 Onesiphorus Paul, esq;
1 John Delafield Phelps, esq;
2 Peter Hancock, esq;
3 Samuel Paul, esq;
4 Giles Nash, esq;
5 Robert Dobyns Yate, esq;
6 William Dallaway, esq;
7 Edmund Probyn, esq;
8 John Guife, esq;
9 William Singleton, esq;
1770 George Smyth, esq;
1 Thomas Maller, esq;
2 Edmond Walter, esq;
3 Joseph Pyrke, esq;
4 Henry Wyatt, esq;
5 Sir George Smith, bart.
6 Henry Lippincott, esq;
7 William-Hayward Winstone, esq;
8 Edward Sampson, esq;

N. B. The dates from 1701, represent the years of their office at Michaelmas, after their appointment.

OF KNIGHTS of the SHIRE, sent from this County to Parliament, from 1° E. 6. to the present Time; with a few previous Observations on our antient Parliaments.

TO trace out exactly the original of our parliament, and to observe the several alterations it hath undergone, 'till it came to be modelled as we now see it, is a work of the greatest difficulty, owing to the destruction of our records in the Saxon and other wars.

The Anglo-Saxons brought with them many of the laws and customs of the antient German nations, with whom all the freeholders enjoy'd an equal right with the nobles, to assist in deliberations on affairs of great moment. And it is highly probable, from a passage in Matthew of Westminster, that the people's right of appearing in parliament, was exercised originally by the whole body of freeholders, assembling together in open plains. "The meadow near Steins," says he, "in which the Great Charter was granted by king John, had the name of Runemeed; which in the Saxon language, signifies the meadow of counsel, because, from antient times, it had been usual to consult there, upon business which concerned the peace of the kingdom."

The presence of the people in the Saxon councils, either in person, or by representation, and their having had a share in the highest acts of legislature and government, may be proved, in the strongest manner, by the preamble to laws, and other proceedings of those councils.

About the year 800, Egbert, king of the West-Saxons, overpower'd the other kingdoms, and united them under one monarchy. Soon after, the lords of the leet, and the representatives of towns, who were chosen by the burgeses, were summoned by the king, and appeared at the Witena gemot, which in the Saxon language, signifies the assembly of wise men, who met once a year at least, and generally twice, about Easter and Michaelmas. Wilkins LL. Sax.

We are not told where this meeting was holden; but 'tis probable, that at this time the custom of assembling in the open fields had been disused; nor do we find an instance of its being ever revived, 'till that extraordinary meeting in the reign of king John; all the parliaments, or great councils, whereof we have any accounts before, having been held in churches, abbies, or royal castles; it should seem therefore, that the freeholders must have exercised their right, not personally, as they did in more antient times, but by representatives; for no building could be sufficient to contain all the freeholders in the kingdom, even in those times.

On long usage the people's right of going to parliament seems to have been established, before the conquest; and it appears to have been continued under William the Conqueror, with other customs and rights, confirmed by him to the nation; and under his successors, by like sanctions of antient liberties, granted in repeated royal charters. But of what orders of men the English parliament was composed, for several reigns immediately succeeding the conquest, is a question much disputed, and which can never, perhaps, be so absolutely decided as to put an end to any difference of opinion about it; but happily the inquiry is rather matter of curiosity, than of real importance; because the right of the commons to a share of the legislature and national councils, even according to the hypothesis of those who are not most favourable to them, has antiquity enough to give it all the establishment which can be derived from long custom, and all the reverence and authority, which time and experience can add to the speculative reason and fitness of wise institutions.

We learn from Hoveden, that William the First, after having compelled all the English, as well as Normans, to take out patents of their lands, to be holden of him by knight-service, summoned the most eminent of those feudaries called * barons, with persons learned in the law, to sit with him in the great council, particularly in the 4th year of his reign, which was that in which he first brought the bishops and abbats under the tenure of barony. To this council, twelve were returned out of every county, who shewed what the customs of the kingdom were, which Aldred archbishop of York, and Hugh bishop of London took down in writing; and they were confirmed in that assembly, which was a parliament of that time.

At the coronation of H. 1. Clerus Angliæ, et populus universus, the clergy and all the people of England, saith Matthew Paris, were summoned to Westminster, where several laws were made and published. And in the second year of king H. 5. the house of commons assert, in their petition to the king, that it ever hath been their liberty and freedom, that there should no statute or law be made without their assent; and that they are, and ever

* There is no colourable testimony in any record or law, that so much as seems to justify the common notion of 131 knights fees held in capite, making a great barony; and of 20 making an earldom. In truth the contrary is very plain. Jeffery lord Talbot held 20 knights fees in chief, of H. 1. the same which Walter de Meduana held afterwards of H. 2. yet neither of these were ever accounted to have had earldoms. The same may be said of John de Pōrt, who had 57 knights fees, &c. and many others, as may be seen in the records of the exchequer, where are some who have had fewer than 13, and yet are equally barons with the rest.

Selden's Tit. of Honour.

have been, a member of the parliament; which claim was not disallowed either by the lords or the king.

We are assured by a record which Dr. Brady has cited, that so late as in the 15th year of king John, not only the greater barons, but all the inferior tenants, in chief, of the crown, had a right to be summoned to parliament by particular writs; but these were far from being all the freeholders in the kingdom. We are therefore to inquire whether at this time the rest were excluded from parliament, or were present there by any kind of representation.

Sir Henry Spelman, and some other learned writers, have supposed, that every superior lord who held of the king immediately, and in chief, being the head of his tenants, in all the degrees of sub-infeudation, whatever he agreed to in making of laws, bound all his vassals, he being as it were, their tribune or procurator; in like manner as the freeholders are now bound by the acts of the knights of the shire. But it is to be observed, that the knights, citizens and burgessees, who are now the representatives of the commons of England, are electèd by those for whom they serve; all their power is derived to them from their electors, and on the calling of a new parliament, those electors are at liberty to make a new choice; whereas the superior lords were neither electèd, nor liable to be changed, at any period of time, by those whom, according to Sir H. Spelman's hypothesis, they represented; and indeed it seems improper, and a force on the words, to call them representatives, or procurators.

But further, if the barons, and superior lords of great fiefs, holden immediately of the crown, had, by virtue of the institutions of William the First, been supposed to represent their vassals in parliaments; and the notion was then, that every feudatory, holding by a mesne tenure, was bound by the parliamentary acts of his lord; how came that notion to be discarded in the reigns of H. 3. Edw. 1. Edw. 3. &c. since it is certain, that a baron who held of the crown, was to all intents and purposes the head of his vassals in those reigns, as much as in any of the preceding ones? How happened it then, that the consent of the vassals to the making of laws in those reigns, was not still included in the vote of their lord? And why was it given, against the course of former proceedings, not by him, as their representative, but by knights of the shires, or by citizens, or by burgessees, chosen by the vassals?

Some learned men have asserted, that this change was brought about by the power of the earl of Leicester, 49^o H. 3. But we have a record that demonstrates that date to be false. A writ of summons directed to the sheriffs of Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire, requiring two knights to be sent for those counties, is extant in the close roll of 38^o H. 3. And there is a clause in the Great Charter, of the 9th of the same king, whereby it is declared, that together with the spiritual and temporal lords, other inferior freeholders, et omnes de regno, by which words I understand the whole commonalty of the realm, granted to the king the fifteenth part of all their moveable goods, in return for the liberties accorded to them in that charter. Nor can I discover, in the history of those times, any reason sufficient to render it probable, that so great an alteration should then have been made in the constitution of England. But if it had been made, it must naturally have produced some disputes, which would have been taken notice of by some of the many historians who lived in that age, and who have left very large and particular accounts of less important transactions; whereas they are quite silent as to any disputes between the nobility and the people, on this account, from the earliest times of the Saxon government, down to the reign of Ch. 1. wherefore I think we may presume, that the right of the commons must have been incontestably established by custom, and interwoven into the original frame of our government; and that the antient parliaments, from the conquest down to H. 3. contained in them the first elements of those we have now; but were only a rough draught, in which regularity and decorum were absolutely wanting.

The clergy had formerly their particular representatives in parliament. There are not, indeed, any writs of summons now remaining, which require proctors to be sent for them to the parliaments of this kingdom, before 23^o E. 1. but from the annals of Burton it appears, that the whole body of the clergy was so represented, 39^o H. 3. And the commons, in a petition to the king, 21^o R. 2. shew'd, That before those times, many judgments and ordinances, made in the times of the progenitors of our lord the king, in parliament, had been repealed and disannulled, because the state of the clergy were not present in parliament, at the making of the said judgments and ordinances.

Upon the reformation of religion, in the reign of E. 6. an attempt was made in convocation, to have the lower house united to the house of commons, according to antient custom, Sicut ab antiquo fieri consuevit. It was also proposed to queen Elizabeth, but rejected. The clergy continued to tax themselves, in a separate body, 'till the restoration of Ch. 2. soon after which they were taxed in the same manner, and conjointly with the rest of the commons; and have ever since been represented in parliament by the same persons; which has more embodied them with the laity, and prevents the setting up of a church interest, distinct from that of the people. It is remarkable, that this very important alteration in the state of this kingdom, was made without any law, by agreement with the clergy.

A LIST of the KNIGHTS of the SHIRE for this COUNTY.

Anno Reg.	A. D.		N A M E S.
Edw. 6.	1, 1547,	at Westminster,	Nicholas Pointz, knight,
	7, 1552-3,	same place,	Anthony Kingston, knight,
Mary	1, 1553,	same place,	Edward Bridges, knight,
	1, 1554,	{ at Oxford, but adjourned to Westminster. }	Giles Poole, knight,
P. & M.	1 & 2, 1554,	at Westminster,	Arthur Porter, esq;
	2 & 3, 1555,	same place,	Ant. Kingston, knight,
	4 & 5, 1557,	same place,	Walter Dennys, knight,
Eliz.	1, 1558-9,	same place,	Arthur Porter, esq;
	5, 1563,	same place,	Nicholas Walshe, esq;
	13, 1571,	same place,	Giles Poole, knight,
	14, 1572,	same place,	{ Giles Bridges, esq; Thomas Chester, esq; in the room of Bridges, created lord Chandois.
	27, 1585,	same place,	John Darcy, knight,
	28, 1586,	same place,	William Bridges, esq;
	31, 1588,	same place,	Thomas Throckmorton, kt.
	35, 1592,	same place,	Henry Poole, knight,
	39, 1596,	same place,	John Tracy, esq;
	43, 1601,	same place,	Edward Wintour, knight,
Jac.	1, 1603,	same place,	{ Thomas Berkley, knight, room of fir Thomas Berkley, John Throckmorton, esq;
	12, 1614,	same place,	Richard Berkely, knight,
	18, 1620,	same place,	Robert Tracy, knight,
	21, 1623,	same place,	Maurice Berkley, knight,
Car. I.	1, 1625,	{ at Westminster and at Oxford, }	Robert Tracy, knight,
	1, 1625,	at Westminster,	Maurice Berkley, knight,
	3, 1628,	same place,	Robert Pointz, knight,
	15, 1640,	same place,	Robert Tracy, knight,
	16, 1640,	same place,	John Dutton, esq;
	1653,	same place,	John Seymer, knight.
	1654,	same place,	John Crofts, William Neaft, and Robert Holmes.— Oliver Cromwell convened this, which was called the Little Parliament, to which no representatives for the cities or boroughs were summoned, except for the city of London. It was composed of a few members re- turned from the counties in general; and, meeting July 5, sat 'till December 12, 1653.
	1656,	same place,	George Berkley, esq;—Matthew Hale, one of the justices of the common bench.—John How, esq;—Christopher Guise, esq;—Sylvanus Wood, esq;—N. B. To this parli- ament Yorkshire returned 13, Essex 12, Kent 11, Nor- folk 10, and other counties more than their proportion, whilst many cities and boroughs sent but one each. Scotland sent 21, Ireland 30.
	1658,	same place,	George Berkley, esq;—John Howe, esq;—John Crofts, esq; Baynam Throckmorton, esq;—William Neaft, esq; N. B. Scotland sent 28, Ireland 30.
	1658-9,	same place,	John Grubham Howe, esq;—John Crofts, esq;—Baynam Throckmorton, esq; John Grubham Howe, esq;—John Stephens, esq;—N. B. At this parliament the counties and boroughs sent the usual numbers.—Scotland 21, Ireland 30.

R

The

Common Wealth Parliaments.

The Convention Parliament.			Baynham Throckmorton,	John Howe.
		1661, at Westminster,	The same,	The same.
		1678, same place,	Sir John Guise,	Sir Ralph Dutton.
		1680, same place,	The same,	The same.
		1680, at Oxford,	The same,	The same.
Jac. 2.	1,	1685, at Westminster,	Charles Somerset,	Sir Robert Atkyns.
	4,	1688, same place,	Sir John Guise,	Sir Ralph Dutton.
W. & M.	1,	1689, same place,	The same,	The same.
	7,	1695, same place,	The same,	The same.
	10,	1698, same place,	John Howe,	Richard Cocks.
	12,	1700, same place,	The same,	The same.
	13,	1701, same place,	Richard Cocks,	Maynard Colchester.
Anne,	1,	1702, same place,	John Howe,	The same.
	3,	1705, same place,	Sir John Guise,	The same.
	5,	1707, same place,	The same,	The same.
	6,	1708, same place,	The same,	Matthew Ducie Moreton.
	8,	1710, same place,	John Berkeley,	The same.
	11,	1713, same place,	The same,	Thomas Stephens.
Geo. 1.	1,	1714, same place,	} Matthew Ducie Moreton, ing, in his place was chosen	Thomas Stephens, who dy-
	9,	1722, same place,		Henry Berkeley,	Kinnard De La Bere.
Geo. 2.	1,	1727, same place,	The same,	Sir John Dutton.
	8,	1734, same place,	Hon. Benjamin Bathurst,	Thomas Chester.
	15,	1741, same place,	Thomas Chester,	Norborne Berkeley.
	21,	1747, same place,	The same,	The same.
	28,	1754, same place,	The same,	The same.
Geo. 3.	1,	1761, same place,	} Berkeley being made a peer, there was elected in his stead—	Thomas Tracy.
	8,	1768, same place,		Edward Southwell,	Thomas Tracy, who dying in 1770, there was elected—
	14,	1774, same place,		Sir William Guise,	Sir William Guise, baronet. Edward Southwell, on whose advancement to the barony of Clifford, in 1776, there was chosen in his stead—William-Bromley Chester.

The knights of the shire were formerly paid 4 sol. and the citizens and burgeses 2 sol. per diem each, for their attendance on the public business, which many of the boroughs thinking too great an expence for them to bear, got themselves exempted.

In antient times, all mitred abbats sat in the great council. In the 49^o H. 3. 102 abbats and priors were summoned to parliament, and only 25 lay barons. 1^o E. 2. 56 abbats and priors were summoned; but 4^o E. 3. there were only 33, and in the reigns preceding the dissolution of monasteries, no more than 27 abbats and priors sat in parliament; which shews the gradual decline of the power of the clergy.

When the commons formerly went to consult by themselves, upon any business of great moment, they returned their answer by a member of their own, whom they chose upon that particular occasion. Their first standing speaker was Sir Thomas Hungerford, 51^o E. 3.

Sir Edward Coke, 4 Inst. p. 2. says, "of antient time both Houses sat together;" which is a mistake he was led into by a mistranslation of the French word grants, in Sir Robert Cotton's Abridgment of the parliamentary rolls in the Tower, which he has rendered commons, whereas it signifies great men.

In Sir Robert Atkyns's Ancient and Present State of Glostershire, p. 19, is the following observable passage, concerning the British parliament:

"The ambition of priests has abolished the like constitution in Italy; the mutual wars betwixt contending princes have extinguish'd it in Germany; the pride of monarchs has destroy'd it in Spain; differences in religion have laid it aside in France; the arrogancy of the lords has subverted it in Denmark; the madness of the commons has ruined it in Sweden; and the barbarity of the Muscovites has not admitted it in Russia*; but curst be the man who shall attempt to undermine this happy constitution of Great Britain."

This sentence discovers the goodness of the author's heart; I approve his patriotism, but can-

* It has been the singular fortune and wisdom of England, says lord Lyttleton, that whereas France, Spain, and other realms, in which much the same feudal policy had taken place, have thro' an impatience of the oppressions which the people often suffered from the nobility, desperately run into absolute monarchy, or have been compelled to yield to it by force of arms; in the change which has gradually happened in ours, all that excess of power which the nobles have lost, has been so divided between the crown and the commons, that the whole state of the kingdom is much better poised, and all incroachments of any one part on the other are more effectually restrained. Life of Henry II.

not altogether subscribe to his politicks; for in the same page he proposes a plan, that in all probability, would soon subvert that very constitution he so ardently wishes to have preserved. "Perhaps" says he, "it might be a good expedient, in Utopia, that senators should hold their places for life, and their estates should consist of 500*l.* a year, which ought to undergo a strict examination. If their members by these means should be thought too many or too few, this might be regulated by fixing an age, either thirty or forty years old.—These persons would be above temptations, and all debauchery and animosity in elections would be prevented; they would then be a venerable assembly of wealthy citizens."

I agree with the learned historian, that persons of independent fortune are certainly the properest to represent the people. Such will probably be most careful of the public treasure, who have contributed largely to the stock themselves; but on the other hand, the history of the present age will furnish instances of men whom no fortune will satisfy, and whose avaritious dispositions will always expose them to temptations.

I am a declared enemy to riot and debauchery, but the expedient proposed to prevent them, I fear, would be attended with greater inconveniences. We have found, by dreadful experience, that in long parliaments, those who at their first election were truly the representatives of the people, become, in time, a cabal of men, that pursue their own interests more than the public service.

Tho' some inconveniences attend elections, especially in the present mode of conducting them, it is their frequency by which the good people of England hope to preserve their liberties, and the constitution; for by how much the oftener elections recur, by so much the more dependant on the people will their representatives be, as the constituents will not probably make those the objects of their second choice, whose former conduct they have disapproved. I speak now of counties, and of those cities and boroughs only, which have too many voters to be purchased, if any such there be: for corruption hath so universally spread her baleful influence through the petty ones, that I cannot suppose such to be in the least attentive to the conduct of their representatives, who never made their characters, when candidates, the subject of inquiry among them; and to whom their persons and very names have been totally unknown, 'till perhaps the day before polling.

If I have digressed from my subject, I have taken no greater liberty than the gentleman whose notions I have opposed, because I think him mistaken in a matter very essential to the good of my country.

Of the COUNTY INFIRMARY.

ABOUT the year 1756, a subscription was opened for establishing a county infirmary, which was filled with great success, under the auspices of Norborne Berkeley, esq; now lord Botetourt, and the Honourable and Reverend Dr. Talbot, who contributed to this noble charity in a measure adequate to their great generosity, and public spirit.

A large sum of money being raised, and a piece of ground purchased in the south-gate street, in the city of Gloucester, a very handsome and commodious building was erected for the purpose, and patients were admitted as soon as it could be got ready for their reception, which was in the year 175 . But the charity was extended to proper objects long before this house was built; for the governors purchased the Crown-and-Sceptre, a large inn, in the Westgate-street, and fitted it up for the reception of patients, 'till the contributions were sufficient for building the present infirmary, towards which his late majesty granted 9,200 feet of timber, out of the forest of Dean. The building cost 6,200*l.*

This extensive charity is supported by annual subscriptions, amounting to 997*l.* 10*s.* 6*d* in the year 1767; and by the interest of near 12,000*l.* placed out on government and land securities. It is managed by a society, called the governors of the infirmary, who have established rules, by which the whole is orderly and prudently conducted.

All subscribers of two guineas a year, or contributors of 20*l.* or more, at one time, are governors, and may attend and vote at the meetings.

Every subscriber hath a right to recommend one in-patient, and one out-patient, every year, for each guinea per ann. subscribed and paid, provided the in-patients do not exceed five. A benefactor of 50*l.* hath the privilege of a subscriber of five guineas; of 20*l.* that of two guineas per annum. But no subscriber can have more than one in-patient at a time; nor can a benefactor of less than 20*l.* at one time, recommend a patient. Only such as are recommended by a subscriber, or benefactor, and appear to the weekly board and receiving physician and surgeon to be curable, and real objects of charity, to be admitted, and that on Thursdays only; except in such cases as will admit of no delay.

If at any time, more should be recommended than there is room for, in cases of equal exigence the preference preference is given, first, to those that come from the greatest distance; secondly, to the recommendation of such subscribers as have not sent any in-patient, within the year of their subscription; thirdly, to the recommendation of the greatest subscribers to the charity.

Proper objects excluded at any time for want of room, are entered in the books as in-patients, and received by the matron, without order, on the first vacancy. And persons recommended according to the rules, are received into this infirmary, from any country or nation.

Whilst we admire the truly christian charity of those gentlemen who were most active in promoting this establishment, we cannot too much applaud the beneficence of all that contribute to support it.

Of the TRADE, MANUFACTURES, &c. of the COUNTY.

NOTWITHSTANDING the port of Gloucester is furnished, by the favour of queen Elizabeth, with proper custom-house officers, very few foreign entries are made there. Yet, if we import but little goods, this county supplies large quantities for exportation, part of which is the produce of the soil, and part the manufacture of the industrious inhabitants.

The manufactures are woollen cloths of various sorts, harrateens, chenies, cotton and worsted stockings, carpets, blankets, rugs, men's hats, leather, pins, paper, bar-iron, edge-tools, nails, wire, tinned plates, brass, &c. Of the growth of the county, the principal articles of commerce are, cheese and bacon, cyder and perry, fish, &c.

I shall first speak of the cloathing manufacture, as it has a just claim to the preference on every account. It is probable that the colony of Flemings, who came into this kingdom in the reign of William the Conqueror, might bring with them the art of making woollen cloth, which their countrymen excelled in, and that in process of time the English learnt it of them; for the records shew, that payments were made by various gilds of weavers in many parts of the kingdom, for the farm of their gilds, in the reign of Henry the Second, and Richard the First; when, according to the learned Sir Matthew Hale, this kingdom greatly flourished in the art of manufacturing woollen cloth: but by the troublesome wars in the time of king John and Henry the Third, and also of Edward the First and Edward the Second, this manufacture was wholly lost, and all our trade ran out in wool, woolsels, and leather, carried out in specie. It is also observed by Mr. Madox, in his History of the Exchequer, that the cities of Worcester, Gloucester, Nottingham, Norwich, Bedford, and many other towns, paid fines to king John, that they might buy and sell dyed cloth, as they were accustomed to do in the time of king Henry the Second. This shews, that both the cloathing and dying trades had then flourished, and had been free from some oppressions with which they were afterwards loaded.

Many centuries ago, the city of Gloucester was famous for its cloth manufacture, where Brook-street, situated upon Fullbrook, was the place of habitation for clothiers, dyers and shearmen; and even as lately as 1629, there was a company of clothiers in that city. It was considerable at Cirencester, in the reign of king H. 4. who granted a charter to a company of weavers there, which still subsists. It has flourished also at different times in various other parts of the county. But nature pointing out the most convenient situation for carrying on this manufacture, which requires plenty of water for driving the fulling mills, and scouring of wool; it has long since seated itself principally on the borders of the little rivers and brooks in the parishes of Bisley, Hampton, Stroud, Painswick, Woodchester, Horley, Stonehouse, Stanley, Uley, Dursley, Wottonunderedge, and neighbouring places of less note. 'Tis there the master clothiers live, and the most curious operations of the manufacture are performed under their immediate inspection; but the women and children all over the country are chiefly employ'd in carding of wool, and spinning of yarn; nor is the Gloucestershire cloathing bounded by the limits of the county, if it be allowable in point of language to say, that it furnishes employment for great numbers of hands, from the borders of Wiltshire to the edge of Salisbury plain.

The manufacture has been gradually advancing in this county during the last century, but by very unequal steps, for it is sensibly affected by the situation of our public affairs. In time of war, there is an extraordinary demand for cloathing the army; and if it be with the French, who are our great rivals in this trade, it is an additional circumstance in its favour, as they have usually at such time been much interrupted by our superior fleets, in the conveyance of their goods to market: and then also the great internal enemies of our country, the smugglers and owlers of wool, find it it very hazardous to help our neighbours to that commodity, without which they could not succeed so well in the woollen † manufacture.

To enable the reader to judge of what importance this manufacture is to the nation, I have procured from some of the most intelligent clothiers, persons of acknowledged judgment and integrity, the various particulars which, taken together, make the following account of the present state of it. I shall consider it under four heads, 1. The country trade, or inland trade. 2. The army trade, and that with the drapers in London. 3. The Turkey trade. 4. The East India company trade.

1. The inland trade, in the language of the manufacturer, must not be strictly taken, as if confined to our own kingdom, for that is not the fact. It may be so called from its furnishing the sorts of cloth usually worn in our own country, consisting of superfines, seconds, forests, drabs, naps, duffils, and all that variety to be found in a well stored draper's shop.

This trade is governed by fashion and fancy, and has been introduced into Gloucestershire within the last fifty or sixty years. Great part of the goods are dispersed by means of travelling thro' Great Britain and Ireland, by the manufacturers themselves, or their servants. Many of them are likewise sold to merchants, who send them to our colonies, and other foreign markets; and some go to the warehouses in London, from whence they are dispersed in like manner.

This branch has been supported with such spirit and industry, as from small beginnings to become very valuable.—Being less subject to fluctuation than the other branches, it employs more regularly and uniformly a number of hands, perhaps the most of any of them. Many persons have succeeded in it, and some large fortunes have been made; but at present, thro' the dearness of provisions, the disagreement with our colonies, and other discouraging circumstances, common to most trades at this time, 'tis in a languid condition, tho' the returns in it are estimated at 250,000*l. per ann.*

2. The second branch is the trade with the drapers in London, who take a variety of goods for their retail customers; and the cloth for the army, the marines and the militia passes thro' their hands. The demands in this part of the cloathing trade at different times is very disproportionate. In time of war 'tis great; but not very considerable at present, the share which this county has of it being estimated at 100,000*l. per annum.*

3. The third branch is the trade to Turkey, which is much declined. The French, by reason of their political connections with the Porte, the situation of their country, the price of labour, and their method of conducting their trade, have gained a great superiority over us at this market. But I am told that our superfines still support their credit there, and that the share of this country in the Turkey trade cannot be less than 50,000*l. per annum.*

4. The cloth made for the East India company, is the last and most considerable branch of our foreign trade, yet from the present method of conducting it, 'tis far from being advantageous to the clothier. Very few persons have succeeded in the coarse trade, whilst many, labouring all their time with great care and assiduity, have ruined their fortunes, without making a bad debt in it. In short, there are not wanting persons of observation, knowledge and integrity, who are confidently of opinion, that, averaging the profit and loss on all the coarse cloth, sold to the company, for many years back, by the clothiers in this county, not a shilling has been gained by it.

This will seem still more unaccountable to the reader, when he is informed, that the company never require of the clothier any abatement of price, nor doth it appear that they wish to withhold from him, that reasonable profit which should be the reward of his skill and industry. This is a kind of paradox, which I shall endeavour to explain, as things have been often represented to me.

First it should be observed, that the business of the sales to the company, is transacted by the Blackwell-hall factors, who are the clothiers agents; and the coarse cloth, which is by much the largest quantity, lies in the hands of a few, not more than four or five of them. The sales are conducted in the following manner.

The company having given the factors previous notice of the time appointed for buying, they send in sample cloths for the inspection of the buying committee, with the prices, and number of cloths they have to sell, corresponding with the respective samples. In buying, the company's servants impartially choose the best samples, according to the prices, 'till their quantity is supplied; and if such as are deemed equal in quality and price should amount to more than are wanted, they have lately taken a part of each lot, in order that every clothier might benefit by the sale. These measures are so prudent and equitable, that I have never heard any person object to them.

Let us now turn to the factor, and upon inquiry, instead of finding him a mere agent to the clothier, which he originally was, and still ought to be, it will appear that he is now, by insensible degrees, become a very different kind of person; for the commission on the sales being great in proportion to the value of the goods, and the business attended with little trouble, he hath found out an expedient to establish himself on a firmer foundation than the mere good opinion of the clothier; which was all, according to the original institution, he had to depend on. By this expedient he hath virtually, in many instances, the power of the principal, yet still preserves the appearance, the indemnity, and every other advantage of the agent. 'Tis thus: He seeks out persons of little or no fortune; some who have been servants to clothiers, and may have worked at particular branches of the manufacture; others who understand no branch of it. To such as these he lends money at common interest, to make cloth for his warehouse: And it can be no wonder, surely, if many embrace the offer, from a possibility of gaining something by it.

† It is the common notion that all sorts of wool are smuggled to France; but I have been informed that it is principally, if not solely, the long wool, for making of worsted stuffs. The French, besides what is grown in their own country, are supply'd with the coarse cloathing wool from Barbary.

By these means it may be conceived, that goods are too often ill made, to the discredit of the manufacture; however, if they sell at any rate, the factor is not affected by abatements on them, his commission arising from the number of cloths sold, without regard to the value of them. This being the case, 'tis the factor's business to bring large quantities of goods to market; and when there, the clothier is often induced, by specious arguments, to offer his goods at a lower rate than he can afford them, occasioned by the factor's endeavouring to appear at the sale to a greater advantage than his rivals in the same business.

In order to this, as the sales approach, would it be matter of wonder, if the dependent clothiers in the country should be advised of the general apprehension of a dull sale, on account of a great quantity of cloth in town; and with the report that the company will buy but little? The inference is easy, i. e. that unless the goods are offered at a very low price, they can have no chance of being sold for that season. It should be observed, that they are fit for no other market, and at this there is but one buyer.

Notwithstanding all this, some manufacturers might be disposed to wait an opportunity 'till they could sell their goods for a reasonable profit; but when a man, considerably indebted, receives information that the money advanced in his favour will be shortly wanted, he begins to be convinced that he is not absolutely his own master, and finds himself under a necessity of submitting to disagreeable terms.

Thus it happens, that cloths of eight or nine pounds value, are frequently offer'd at thirty or forty shillings less than they cost the maker; and tho' not always so, yet the many disadvantages and expences consider'd, such as short sales, a glutted market, occasioned by setting up, and pushing on so many people in the trade; the loss on returned goods spoilt in the hurry of making; interest of money, warehouseage, * commission, &c. &c. it is not doubted, by such as best understand this branch of the manufacture, but that during the last ten years, the Gloucestershire clothiers have been losers upon an average.

Let us consider this matter a little further. In this inverted order of things, when the clothier becomes the factor's servant, he sends his cloth as fast as 'tis made to the factor, to be a collateral security for the money borrowed of him; with whom it remains 'till the sales begin. At first the new adventurer is enabled to pay his creditors in the country, by draughts on the factor, in virtue of which he soon gets in debt, and enlarges his trade upon his credit with the woolstapler and yarnmaker; proceeding (as is too often the case) from time to time, 'till he has wormed himself so deeply in their books, as to be unable to make good his payments. For having, to the factor's knowledge, been losing considerably in the course of trade, his draughts are no longer honoured, than the goods remitted to the factor are ample security for them; who, knowing the situation of this sort of people much better than any other person, generally takes care to abandon them when they appear to be no longer in a condition to serve his purpose.

Hitherto I have been speaking of the necessitous clothier only; but what is the case of the man of capital in this branch?—After a moment's consideration will it not appear, that if others offer great quantities of goods at under rates, he will also be obliged to sell at the same prices, if he sell at all. Besides, let it be consider'd, that if the factor hath it in his power to prefer one person before another, as no doubt in some cases it may be possible, will not his interest direct him to promote the manufacture where his money is employ'd at five per cent. and from which he may derive other considerable advantages? Therefore many clothiers of property have declined the company trade, and struck into other employments. Some of them who continue still engaged in it, are convinced by experience, that unless some regulations take place, it will never answer, tho' the returns in it are very considerable, estimated, for this county only, at 200,000 l. per annum.

Thus, if I am rightly informed, has the clothier in the course branch of the company trade, which is by much the greatest part of it, the trouble and hazard of a large business, without a reasonable advantage from it. The poor indeed have hitherto been employ'd by fits, but how long this branch may furnish any work for them, when the manufacturer has no reasonable prospect of advantage to himself, I will not take upon me to determine.

Cloathing is the great manufacture of the nation, and that branch of it which cet. par. keeps the labouring hands most constantly employ'd, is certainly the most valuable. But the measures complained of render it unsteady, languid and convulsive. For a considerable time back, we have had two or three bankrupt clothiers within the year, for many thousands each, which without such connexions with the factors could never have happened, as few, if any of them, had ever been worth a shilling. If one of them die, or break, which cases differ but little in consequence,

* The commission on a cloth of 6*l.* or 7*l.* value is 5*s.* besides the factor seizes the cloth in his hands unfold, and the debts outstanding, to secure himself, leaving the woolstapler, yarnmaker, shopkeeper, poor workmen, and other creditors in the country, to divide four, five, or perhaps two shillings in the pound, and sometimes less.—A long train of dreadful consequences always follow: Many of the creditors are greatly injured in their fortunes, some utterly ruined. The poor, who seldom save a penny in times of the greatest plenty of work and provisions, being out of employment, are reduced to the parish, to beggary, and some of them exposed to famine itself.

6*d.* for drawing, and 6*d.* for cash-money, which last I don't well understand.

These evils which are growing, for bankruptcies are more and more frequent, seem to arise chiefly from the too great security of the factor, who, in cases of failure, claims all the bankrupt's goods remaining in his custody, and all debts upon contracts by him made, to indemnify himself, not for his commission only, but for all monies advanced on interest to the clothier.

I have never been made sensible, by any good argument, why the factor should be so highly privileged over other creditors. On the contrary, I apprehend it has a manifest tendency to discredit the manufacture, to advance the raw materials, to beggar middling tradesmen; but to enrich, (besides about half a dozen individuals) the most opulent trading company on earth; who ought, and 'tis probable would be willing, to give a fair price for the manufacture of their country.—If the factor was made equally liable to losses with other creditors, he would be more cautious to whom he lent his money, and it might prevent the ruin of numbers that are decoy'd, by specious appearances, to credit those that trade, or rather trifle with it. This is a matter that calls loudly for redress, which might probably be obtained; but many of the clothiers are so intirely in the power of the factors, as to make it unsafe for them to apply for it.

Thus, free from the least intention of injuring any person, in estate or reputation; and without either an apprehension of offending, or the hope of pleasing, any man, or sett of men whatever, I have given the state of the company trade, as fairly and impartially as possible, agreeably to the information received from several persons of credit, who understand the subject, and will vouch for the facts. I am willing to believe, notwithstanding, that there may be some instances of exception, among the body of people whose conduct is reprehended.—That regard to truth which I profess, and that justice which is equally due to all, will have it acknowledged, that there are at this time a few clothiers, who were set up by the factors, as already mentioned, that, either from their superior skill, great application, or some other cause, too latent for me to discover, have flourished in the trade, and continue to carry on business with credit and reputation.

The iron manufacture is of the next greatest consequence to this county. In the forest of Dean are several furnaces and forges, that afford employment for great numbers of miners, colliers, carriers, and other labourers. See Forest, p. 35.

—At Froombridge, in the parish of Frampton upon Severn, has lately been erected one of the largest and completest works of the kind in the kingdom, consisting of a set of mills for making of iron and steel wire. And at Framilode is a tin-plate work, carried on by the same proprietors.

There are two very large brass-works in this county; one at the Baptist-mills, near Bristol, the other at Warmley, in the parish of Bitton. They are both carried on in company, by persons of large fortune, and vast sums are employ'd in the trade.

At Gloucester is a valuable pin-manufacture, which employs great numbers of the women and children, and besides a large country trade, returns near 20,000*l.* from London yearly.

The making of cards, for the use of the clothier, has seated itself at Dursley, Stroud, and Wottonunderedge.

Scarlet-dying is scarcely any where done in that perfection as about Stroud.

Worsted combing is carried on at Gloucester, Cirencester, Tewkesbury, and Tetbury. The markets for the goods are Kidderminster, Andover, and Leicester, where they are manufactured into shalloons, stuffs, stockings, &c.

Stocking-frame knitting is found at Cirencester, Tewkesbury, Newent, and a few villages in that neighbourhood.

Carpet-weaving has been lately brought into Cirencester, by two persons, who make all the various sizes and patterns, with good success.

The heavy edge-tools, made at Cirencester, are in great reputation. Two families have enjoy'd one branch of that business for some time unrivalled throughout the world, at least they know nothing to the contrary. It is that of making knives for carriers to shave the leather with, which the people of Birmingham have attempted in vain.

Harrateens, cheneys, and a few other woollen-stuffs are made at Cirencester, and sent white to London.

Fine writing paper is made at Postlip, in the parish of Winchcombe, at Quenington, and at Abbenhall; and brown sorts at a few other places in the county.

The manufacture of felt-hats, at Frampton Cotterel, deserves a place in our account, because it employs so many hands. Neither would it be just to pass by, unnoticed, the rug and blanket manufactures, at Nailsworth, Dursley, Nibley, and other places of the clothing country, with which I shall close this short account of the Gloucestershire manufactures. Woolstapling, or breaking of wool, is not mentioned in the number, because it will hardly be admitted to be one, in the common acceptation of the word, tho' it is a very considerable trade; and the most eminent places for for it are Gloucester, Cirencester, and Tetbury. To be so particular as to enumerate every trade carried on in the county, would be impertinent, but I think I have omitted no manufacture that deserves notice.

The chief article of our produce is grain, of which large quantities are raised in the vale, and on the cotswolds. The city of Bristol is supply'd out of Gloucestershire with great part of its provisions, from whence it has been concluded, that this county grows a great quantity of corn more than it consumes. But if it be considered, what a vast consumption there is of every kind in the manufacturing and populous parts of the county; and that the meal-men and corn-dealers are continually supplying the markets in the south-eastern parts, with grain and flour, out of Oxfordshire and Berkshire, and that in common years a great quantity of corn is brought to Gloucester market from Herefordshire, in waggons, as well as by water from Upton upon Severn; there is good reason to believe that the corn of the growth of this county is not more than sufficient for its inhabitants; so that grain will not be an article in our account.

The quantity of cheese made in the county is calculated in the following manner: The vale is estimated at 500,000 acres, allowing for the Severn, &c. 350,000 of them are in pasture, of which admit 158,000 acres to be fed by milch cattle. Then at three acres to each cow, the stock will be 50,000. The most usual calculation is 3 C. weight of cheese to a cow, according to which the sum of the whole year's making, in the vale, will be 7,500 tons. But there are milch beasts kept in the other parts of the county. If you allow 20 to every 3000 acres, upon an average; then on 500,000 acres will be found 3333 milch cattle, from which, according to the above proportion, may be made about 500 tons of cheese: And together, the year's making will be 8,000 tons for the whole county.

For the three or four last years, cheese upon an average has sold at about 28*l.* per ton; therefore the value of the whole will be 224,000*l.* The greatest part of it is sent by the factors to London; a considerable quantity of it goes to Bristol, and to the fairs at Gloucester, Stow, Leachlade, &c. and so is dispersed thro' the country.

Gloucestershire bacon is in good repute; London and Bristol take large quantities of it annually.

Cyder is another article, of which we make more than we consume ourselves, to the amount, perhaps in a good year, of about 5,000*l.*

Salmon is the only kind of fish that is sent from hence to London in any quantities, for which the metropolis pays us about 4,000*l.* annually.

The value of fat cattle fed in the county, with their skins, hides and wool, must be very great, but I have not been able to collect particulars enough to make an estimate of the amount of them.

Of the antient SURVEY of the KINGDOM, but more especially as far as it relates to GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

OUR histories are almost wholly silent as to particular property in this county, 'till the 11th century, when there was a register made by the command of William the Conqueror, with great care and exactness, of all the lands in the kingdom, and the names of the owners of them, with the quantities and other particulars of their estates, except in the counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durham, and part of Lancashire, with Wales, which were not then surveyed. The business was begun under the care of five justices in each county, appointed for that purpose, in the year 1081, and completed in 1086. The materials of this survey were digested, and fairly entered in a book, which some have called Liber Judiciarius, vel Censualis Angliæ, others Domesday-Book §, from the Saxon word dom, census, vel estimatio. It is a most antient record, and now remains in the exchequer, very fair and legible.

A soon as William had settled himself in his his new dominions, he made such alterations in § Ingulphus says, that king Alfred made such another roll, which he kept at Winchester, and called it Domesday. It referred to the time of king Æthelred, as that made by William the First refers to the time of Edward the Confessor. There is a third book in 4to, differing from the others which are in folio, more in form than matter, made by the command of the same king, which is more fairly written, hath fewer erasures, and seems to be more antient. A fourth Domesday is kept in the exchequer, being only an abridgement of the first; and there is a fifth, an exact copy of the last, kept in the remembrancer's office. There is also a book in the exchequer, something of the same nature, called Nomina Villarum, made at the command of king E. 2. containing the names of all the hundreds, cities, burghs, and vills in England, and the possessors of them, returned by the sheriffs of all the counties; I have a copy of the part concerning Gloucestershire. What is contained in the Domesday of W. 1. appears by these old verses.

*Quid deberetur fisco, quæ, quanta tributa,
Nimine quid census, quæ vectigalia, quantum
Quisque teneretur feodali solvere fure,
Qui sunt exempti, vel quos angaria damnat,
Qui sunt vel glebæ servi, vel conditionis,
Quove manumissus patrono, jure ligatur*

the laws, partly from policy, and partly from prejudice, as to bring the whole constitution to as near a conformity as he could with that of Normandy, by ingrafting the feudal tenures, and other customs of that country, upon the old Saxon laws, which produced a different political system, and changed both power and property in many respects; though the first principles of the feudal law, and general notions of it, had been in use among the English some ages before. But that the liberty of the subject was not destroy'd by these alterations, as some writers have supposed, plainly appears by the very statutes that William enacted, in one of which we find an express declaration, That all the freemen in his kingdom should hold and enjoy their lands and possessions free from all unjust exaction, and from all tallage; so that nothing should be exacted or taken of them but their free service, which they by right owed to the crown, and were bound to perform. It is further said, That this was ordained and granted to them as an hereditary right for ever, by the common council of the kingdom.

Some of our eminent lawyers have been of opinion, that 'till this time estates were not hereditary in England; but that William made them so, in imitation of the system that had then lately obtained in the kingdom of France, where the nobility and gentry had had their honours and estates granted to them and to their heirs in feodo for ever; whereas before, the French held them only at will, or for life. But in objection to this opinion, it is most certain, that our Saxon ancestors had their hereditary estates, which Spelman calls thaneland, and speaks of it as synonymous to Bocland, which in antient writings has been interpreted by * Allodium, Terra † hereditaria, Terra † libera, Terra § testamentalis. But our Saxon ancestors had other lands of a feudal nature, distinguished from the former, by the name of Folc-land, perhaps, because they were such as the common people possessed; yet the barons, or thanes, frequently held both sorts together. Folc-land was personal, and held only for life, and sometimes indeed at the will of the lord, or for a certain number of years. But these estates were made hereditary fiefs under William the Conqueror, and most of the Bocland was converted into the same kind of tenure.

If we consider this change with regard to boc-land alone, in which before they had an absolute property, and power to dispose of it by will, it may seem at first a matter of astonishment, that freeholders thus possessed of alodial estates, should ever have been disposed to convert them into fiefs, subject to so many services, entails and other burthens. Yet it is certain, that such alterations were desired. The reasons given for it are these: The possessors of fiefs had several privileges, which other freemen had not; a higher value was set upon their persons; the compositions for injuries done to them were greater, which was an important distinction, when most offences were punished by pecuniary fines, according to rates ascertained and fixed by law; and what seems to have weighed more than any other reasons, the demesne lands of those who held by knight-service, were exempted from tallage, and many other impositions, which fell heavy on the possessors of alodial estates.

Originally all proper feuds, I mean, all of a military nature, descended in equal proportions to all the sons of a vassal, but not to daughters. This exclusion of females had been taken off in most countries, before the Normans came hither; but whether the equal division of all military fiefs continued after that time, and when it absolutely ceased, is not very clear. The impartibility of them is ascribed, by many writers, to a constitution made by the emperor Barbarossa, in the year 1152. But earldoms and baronies, which that ordinance chiefly relates to, had before been indivisible, both in England and in France, except in the case of a baron leaving several daughters, and no son, at his death. I should therefore suppose that the custom of preserving knights-fees undivided, in the course of descent, which seemed necessary to enable the military tenant to perform his honourable service with the requisite dignity, began to prevail among the English some time before it was settled by law in the empire. And, together with that, was introduced the right of primogeniture in feudal successions. For when, in order to preserve the tenure entire, only one son could take it, the eldest was preferred as soonest able to perform the duties of the fee, and most naturally coming into the place of his father. Certain it is, that when Glanville's Treatise was writtin, it was the established law of England, that in a military fief, the eldest son should succeed to the whole inheritance. Yet it appears from records, that men frequently held by parts of a knight's-fee; but such divisions either arose from marriages with the daughters of a military tenant, who had no son, and several daughters; or were made by enfeoffments, and not in virtue of the rule and course of succession. Lands held in free socage were equally divided among all the sons, unless they were such as had been impartible, by antient custom; of which some went to the eldest son, and others to the second.

William divided the kingdom into 60,215 knight's-fees, making 30,000 baronies, vills, or manors, the proprietors whereof were the only freeholders in the kingdom. The number of them in the whole county of Gloucester was between sixty and seventy, including the Cyninger Degenr, or the king's thanes, by which I mean, those that held of the king in chief by knight-service; and all the lands, besides what they held, were either in the crown or the church.

* Textus Roffensis.† Leges Aluredi.‖ Leges Ethelredi.§ Leges Canuti.

These thanes, according to Mr. Selden, were honorary, and were of the same kind with them that were, after the Normans, parliamentary barons; and the tainlands only were the parliamentary baronies. But there was an inferior order of men called Webmeþa þegen, or middlethane, who after the Normans, were often stiled Vavofors, a name that never was honourary here, but only feudal, and occurs sometimes in Domesday book, as a synonymy with liberi homines regis.

Those lands which were in the possession of Edward the Confessor, and afterwards came to the Conqueror, and were set down in Domesday-book under the title Terra Regis, are § antient demesnes; and therefore, whether they are such or not, can be tried only by that book.

Of these lands there were two forth of tenants, one that held them frankly by charter, the other by copy of court roll, or by the verge, at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the manor.

The privileges of this tenure consisted in three points; the tenants holding by charter could not be impleaded out of their manor; they were free from toll for all things concerning their livelihood, or husbandry; and they were not liable to serve on juries. F. N. B. fol. 14, and 228. These tenants held originally by plowing and cultivating of the king's lands, for the supplying of his household with provisions, wherefore such liberties and privileges were allowed them, which still belong to that kind of land, tho' the service is now changed from labour to money.

The names of all the manors and their dependencies, together with the owners, and other particulars of them, at the time of the general survey, are set down in Domesday-book; a copy of which, in the contracted manner of that writing, as nearly as it could be imitated with the common printing types, is as follows. Note, the Apostrophe ['] shews the place of contraction.

COPY of DOMESDAY BOOK.

GLOWCEST'SLIRE.

TEMPORE REGIS EDWARDI reddebat Civitas de GLOWCESTRE xxxvj lib' numeratas & xii sextaria mellis ad mensuram ejusd' burgi & xxxvi dicras ferri & c virgas ferreas ductiles ad clavos navium Regis & quasdam alias minutas consuetudines in aula & in camera Regis. Modo reddit ipsa Civitas regi lx lib' de xx in ora & de moneta vero h't rex xx lib' In d' inca t'ra Regis ten' Rogerius de Berchelai unam domum & unam piscariam in ipsa villa & est extra manum Regis. hanc Balduinus tenuit T. R. E.

Osbnus ep's ten' terram & mansiones quas Edmarus tenuit redd x solid. cum alia consuetudine.

Gaufridus de Manneville ten' vi mansiones. he T. R. E. redd' b. vi solid. & viii denar' cum alia c'fuetud.

Will's Baderon ii mansion' de xxx denar.

Will's Scriba i mansion' ten. de li denar.

Rogerius de Laci i mansion' de xxvi denar.

Osbnus ep's i mansion' de xli denar.

Bernerius i mansion' de xiv denar.

Will's Calvus i mansion' de xii denar.

Durandus Vicecom' ii mansion' de xiv denar.

Isd' Durandus ten' i mansion' de xxvi den. & adhuc unam mansion' que nullam c'fuetud' redd.

Hadeuinus ten' i mans' que dat gablum sed aliam c'fuetud. retinet.

Gosbtus i mansionem Dunning i mans' Widardus i mans' Arnulfus p'br i mans' que redd. gablum et aliam c'fuet. retin.

Om's iste mansiones reddeb. regalem c'fuetud. T. R. E. modo rex W. nichil inde h't nec Rotbtus minister ejus. Iste mansiones fuer' in firma regis E. die qua fuit vivus & mortuus modo vero sunt ablata de firma & c'fuetud. regis. T. R. E. erat d'nium regis in civitate totum hospitatum t' vestitum. Quando comes W. ad firmam recep' similit' vestitum fuit.

Sedecim domus erant ubi sedet castellum que modo defunt & in burgo civitatis sunt wastate xiv domus.

CASTELLUM de ESTBRIGHOIEL fecit Will's Comes et ejus tempore reddeb. xl fol. tantum de navibus in silvam euntibus.

Tempore vero ^{Com.} Rogerij filij ejus reddid' ipsa villa xvi lib. et medietatem habeb. Rad. de Limesi. Modo h't rex inde xii lib.

Int' redditionem de Carleion & i carucam que ibi est & vii piscarias in Waie & Hufcham exeunt vii lib. & x solid.

In Wales sunt iii harduices Lamecare et Poteschuet et Dinan. In his sunt viii car. & xi vill'i dimidii & xv bord. cum vi car'

Pro his iii harduices voleb. habere c solid. Rog' de Ivrei.

Sub Waffunic p'posito sunt xiii ville. Sub Elmvi xiiii ville.

Sub Bleio sunt xiii ville. Sub Idhel sunt xiv ville.

Hi reddunt xlvii sextaria mellis & xl porc. & xli vaccas & xxviii solid. pro accipitrib' Tot. hoc val. ix lib. & x fol. & iii den.

De una wasta t'ra redd. Walter' Balistarius i sext' mell. & i porc. Berdic jocularor regis h't iii villas & ibi v car. nil redd.

Morinus i villam Chenesis i filius Waffunic i Sessifbert i.

Abraham pb'r ii villas. Hi h'nt vi car' & nichil reddunt. Hos misit W. comes ad c'fuetud. Griffin regis licentia regis W.

Sub eisd. p'positis sunt iii ville wastate p' regem Caraduech.

In Elemofina regis est una villa que p' anima ejus redd. eccl'e ad fest' S. Martini ii porc. & e panes cum cervisia.

Ad sc'm Michaellem est i carucata terre & ad sc'm Deuum una carucata. He non redd't servitiam nisi sc'is.

Unus Beluard de Caruen h't dimid. car. t're & nihil redd.

Sexaginta & sex porci exeunt de pasuag' & app'tiant xlv fol. H' omnia redd't xl lib. & xii fol. & viii den.

Durandus vicecom. ded. h' ead. Will'o de OW p' Iv lib. ad firmam.

Walt'ius Balistarius ten. de rege ii carucat. t're & ibi h't iii car. & iii servos & iii ancillas. Val. h' xx fol.

Girardus h't ii caruc. t're & ibi ii car. val. xx fol.

Ouus p'positus regis ii car. t're & ibi iii car. val. xx fol. Ibi est in d'nio regis i caruc' t're quam tenuit Dagob'tus.

Gozelinus Brito ten' v caruc' t're in Caroen & ibi sunt ii car. cum ii Walensibus val. xx fol.

Ep's CONSTANTIENSIS ten. de rege v caruc' t're & de eo unus ho' ejus. Ibi sunt ii car. in d'nio & iii villanorum val. xl fol.

Rogerius de Berchelai ten. ii car. terre ad Strigoieig & ibi h't vi bord. cum i car. val. xx fol.

Vicec' Durandus ten. de rege in Caroen i t'ra ^{Nom.} Coldecote Ibi h't in d'nio iii car. & xv dimid. vill'os & iii servos & unum militem. Hl om's h'nt xii car. Ibi molin. de x solid Hoc totum val. vi lib.

Will's de Ow h't de Strigoieig ix lib. p' c'fuetud. ut dicit. Sed Girardus & alii ho'es d'nt nil plus hab'e illum juste de x lib. de c'fuetud. Strigoieig etiam si app'rtaret. c lib.

In Wales h't isd. W. in feudo iii piscarias in Waie redd't lxx solid. & in eodem feudo ded. Will's com' Rad. de Limesi l carucatas t're sic' fit in Normania. Hoc testant' Hugo & alii lib'atores q'd ita Rad. concessit.

Modo dic. W. de Ow non se hab'e de hac t'ra nisi xxxii car. Ibi sunt in d'nio viii car. & ho'es h'nt xvi car. Ibi duo molini de x fol. Tot. val. x lib. & x fol.

§ The fee-farm rents remaining to the kings of England from their antient demesnes, were many of them alienated from the crown, in the reign of king Charles the Second.—How doubtful people were of the title to alienations, of any nature, from the crown, may be gathered hence: Whilst these rents were exposed to sale for ready money, there were very few purchasers; but an expedient was found out, which served as a spur; it was no less than stopping some of his majesty's payments. People then began to purchase them, as the only method of getting their own in that conjecture; and by 22 C. 2. c. 6. l. 10. the letters patents by which these alienations are made, are confirmed, and declared to be good.—But alienations from the crown have been better secured to the subject, by the decision of the house of lords, in the case of the earl of Portland, in 1769, wherein the Nullum Tempus, so often pleaded by the crown in cases of resumption, was set aside.

Rog' de Laci ten. in feudo de Strigoiclg tant. t're hospitat. cum uno molino q'd val. xxxvi solid.

Turstinus filius Rolf h't int' Hufcham & Waiaam xvii carucas. De his sunt in d'nio iiii & dimid. alie sunt ho'um. Ibi xi bord. sunt et molin. de vii solid. val. viiii lib. tot. De hac t'ra v caruc. & dimid. calumiant' p'positi regis dicentes q'd eas Turstinus sine dono assumpsit.

Iisd. Turstinus h't vi caruc. t're ult. Hufcham & ibi ho'es ejus h'nt iiii car. & molin. redd. xv sol. & dimid. piscaria de x sol. Tot. val. liiii sol. & vi den.

Aluredus Hilpanus h't in fendo ii carucat. t're. Ibi ii car. in d'nio Iisd. A. h't in Wales vii villas que fuer' Will'i Comit' & Rog' filii ejus in d'nio. He redd. vi mell. sextaria & vi porc. & x solid.

BURGUM de WINCELCUMBE reddeb. T. R. E. vi lib. de firma. De his habeb. Comes Heraldus terc'm denar' id est xl sol. Postea redd. xx lib. cum toto hund. ejusd. ville. Durandus vicecom. appofuit c sol. & Rogerius de Iurei lx solid.

Modo adjunctis iiii hund. redd. xxviii lib. de xx in ora.

HIC ANNOTANT' TERRAM TENENTES IN GLOWEEL'SLIRE.

- I. REX WILLELMUS.
- II. Archiep's Eboracensis.
- III. Ep's de Wirecestre.
- III. Ep's de Hereforde.
- V. Ep's de Exceestre.
- VI. Ep's de S'co Laudo.
- VII. Eccl'a de Bade.
- VIII. Abbatia de Glasfingb'ie.
- IX. Abbatia de Malmesb'ie.
- X. Abbatia de Glouuecestre.
- XI. Abbatia de Wincelcumbe.
- XII. Abbatia de Evesham.
- XIII. Abbatia de Abendone.
- XIII. Abbatia de Perfore.
- XV. Abbatia de Coventreu.
- XVI. Abbatia de Cormelies.
- XVII. Abbatia de Lire.
- XVIII. Abbatia de Eglesham.
- XIX. Abbatia de Westmonast.
- XX. Eccl'a S. Dionisij Parisij.
- XXI. Eccl'a de Langheig.
- XXII. Eccl'a S. Ebrulfi.
- XXIII. Eccl'a S. TRINITAT. Cadom.
- XXIII. Eccl'a de Troarz.
- XXV. Eccl'a de Cirecestre.
- XXVI. Renbaldus P'br
- XXVII. Comes Rogerius.
- XXVIII. Comes Hugo.
- XXIX. Comes Moritonienfis.
- XXX. Ep's Liciae'fis Gisleb'tus Maminoth.
- XXXI. Willelmus de OW.
- XXXII. Will's filius Baderon.
- XXXIII. Will's Camerarius.
- XXXIII. Will's Goizenboded.
- XXXV. Will's filius Widon.
- XXXVI. Will's Froiffleuu.
- XXXVII. Will's filius Norman.
- XXXVIII. Will's Leuric.
- XXXIX. Rogerius de Laci.

- XL. Rogerius de Belmont.
- XLI. Rogerius de Luri.
- XLII. Rogerius de Berchelai.
- XLIII. Radulfus frater ejus.
- XLIII. Radulfus Pagenel.
- XLV. Radulfus de Toden.
- XLVI. Rob'tus de Toden.
- XLVII. Rob'tus Dispenfator.
- XLVIII. Rob'tus de Oilgi.
- XLIX. Ricardus Legatus.
- L. Oibernus Gifard.
- LI. Goisfridus Orleteile.
- LII. Gisleb'tus filius Turoid.
- LIII. Durandus Vicecomes.
- LIII. Drogo filius Ponz.
- LV. Walterius filius Ponz.
- LVI. Walterius filius Rog.
- LVII. Walterius Diaconus.
- LVIII. Walterius Balistarius.
- LIX. Henricus de Ferieres.
- LX. Ernulfus de Hefding.
- LXI. Heraldus filius Rad.
- LXII. Hugo de Grentemaisn.
- LXIII. Hugo Lafne.
- LXIII. Milo Crispin.
- LXV. Urfo de Abetot.
- LXVI. Hascoit Mufard.
- LXVII. Turstinus filius Rolf.
- LXVIII. Anfridus de Cormel.
- LXIX. Hunfridus Camerarius.
- LXX. Hunfridus de Medehalle.
- LXXI. Hunfridus Coquus.
- LXXII. Sigar de Cioches.
- LXXIII. Maci de Mauritanic.
- LXXIII. Gozelingus Brito.
- LXXV. Rogerius filius Radulf.
- LXXVI. Uxor Geri.
- LXXVII. Balduinus.
- LXXVIII. Elfi & alij taini regis.

GLOWEEL'SLIRE.

I. TERRA REGIS.

Rex EDWARDUS tenuit CHINTENEHAM ibi erant viii hide & dim. Ad eccl'am p'tiu. i hid. & dim.

Reinbaldus ten. eam. In d'nio erant iiii car. & xx vill'i & x bord. & vii servi cum xviii car. Pr'b'ri ii car. Ibi ii molini de xi sol. & viii denar.

Huic m. accrevit p'positus regis W. duos bord. & iv vill'os & iii molinos hor. ii sunt regis t'cius prepositi & i car. plus e. ibi T. R. E. redd'b. ix lib. & v sol. & ter mille panes canibus.

Modo redd. xx lib. & xx vaccas & xx porc. & xvi sol. pro panibus.

In BERTUNE habuit rex E. novem hid. De his erant vii in d'nio & ibi iiii car. & xiv vill'i & x bord. cum ix car. Ibi vii servi. De hoc m. ten. ii lib'i ho'es ii hid. h'nt ibi ix car. ipsi se non possunt nec t'ram separare a manerio ibi molin. de iv solid. P'positus W. regis accrevit viii bord & ii molinos & i caruca. T. R. E. reddeb. ix lib. & v solid. & ter mille panes canibus.

Modo redd. xx lib. xx vaccas xx porc. & pro panibus xvi sol.

De hoc m. p'stitit Aeldred archiep's i membrum BREWERE ibi sunt iiii virg. t're & iiii ho'es. Milo Crispin tenet.

Alter membrum no'ie Optune p'stitit Aluui vicecom. Ibi una hida t're & ibi sunt iv ho'es. Hunfridus ten.

Tertium membrum no'ie MERWEN p'stitit isd. Aluui. Ibi sunt iiii virg. t're Nigellus medicus tenet.

In DUDESTAN Hund. habuit quidam tainus Edmar iiii maner. Herferel & Athelai & Sanher. Iste ho. poterat dare & vend'e t'ram suam cui voluisset pro ii hid. se def'd'b. h. t'ra. In d'nio erant viii car. & iv vill'i & iv bord. & xxx servi cum v car. Ibi p'tum sufficiens carucis.

In HERSECOME teneb. Wifet iiii virg. t're lib'as sicut & Edmer. Ibi habeb. ii car. & ii bord. & v servos & prata carrucis.

In BROSTORP tenuit Aluric iiii virg. t're hic habeb. ii car. et un. uillin iiii bord. iv servos. Has v t'ras abstulit Comes Herald. post mortem regis E. Has eafd. Rog. de Lurei possit ad firmam pro xlvj lib. & xiii sol. & iv den.

In eod. HUND. juxta Civitatem habuit Uluuard dimid. hidam de rege E. quietam & ibi ii car. & iv servi. Hanc ded. W. com. cuidam coquo suo Vluuard enim utlag. fact. est.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. habuit rex E. quinq; hid. t're Ibi in d'nio v car. & xxxi vill'ni cum x car. Ibi xiii servi & x bord. & iii molini de xxx solid. prata & ii silvas de l. sol. & ibi ii lib'i ho'es ii car. h'ntes lanam o'nium regina habeb. T. R. E. reddeb. hoc m. iii modios frumenti & dimid. & braisi iiii mod. & mell. sex sextar. & dimid. & ix lib. & v sol. & ter mille pan. canibus. Modo redd. xx lib. & v sol. & xx vaccas xx porc. & pro pan. xvi sol. & de nouo foro xx sol. quorum h't S Maria t'cium den.

In CIRECESTRE unus lib. ho. teneb. ii hid. t're & reddeb. xx sol. in firma & per totam Angliam vicecomiti servitium faciebat.

Will's Com. hanc t'ram milit ext. firmam & cuidam suo ho'i. dedit eam.

In SUINHEVE Hund. erant T. R. E. ad firmam xxxvi hide: in BETUNE cum ii Membris Wapelei & Wintreborne.

In d'nio erant v car. & xli vill'i & xxix bord. cum xlv car. Ibi xviii servi cum i molino.

Hoc m. T. R. E. reddeb. firmam unius noctis & mo. similit' facit.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. tenuit E. rex SCLOSTRE. Ibi erant vii hide. & in d'nio iiii car. & ix vill'i & xi bord. cum viii car. Ibi vii servi & ii molini de una Marka Arg'ti. prata de x sol. & de una ex his hid. x solid. & canib. v solid.

De hoc m. reddeb. q'd voleb. Vicecom. T. R. E. Ido' nesciunt app'ciari. Modo vicecom. accrev. ibi i car. & v bord. cum i car. Redd. nunc de m. iolo & de hund. xxvii lib. ad numerum.

In WESBERIE xxx hide. Ibi habeb. E. rex v car. in d'nio & xxxii vill'os & xv bord. cum xxviii car. Ibi i servus. Hoc m. reddeb. unam noctem de firma T. R. E. Similiter T. R. W. per iv annos. Postea ablatae sunt de isto m. vi hide. In Chire & in Clifstone x hide. In Noent & Chingestune viii hid. In Ladenent i hid.

Has t'ras ten. mo. abb. de Cormelies & Osb'nus & Will's f. Ricardi & tam. de remanenti inven. vicecom. totam firmam.

D'nt autem ho'es de comitatu q'd Sapina jacent in Westberie ad firmam regis E.

In CHEFTESIAT Hund. tenuit E. rex LANGE-BERGE cum uno membro no'e MENE. In utroq; erant viii hide. In d'nio iiii car. & x vill'i & iv bord. cum vi car. & molin. de v sol. & vi servi pratum de x sol. T. R. E. reddeb. vicecom. de hoc m. q'd exibat ad firmam. Modo redd. xv lib. cum ii hund. quos ibi vicece. appofuit.

In BLITESLAU Hund. tenuit E. rex AURE. Ibi v hide & in d'nio i car. & xii vill'i & viii bord. cum xiv car. Ibi unus servus & molin. de xxx denar. & salina de xxx summis salis & eccl'a cum i virg. t're.

Hoc m. reddeb. dim. firmam noctis T. R. E. & mo. similiter facit.

De eod. m. jacet wastata dimid. hida & ido. non redd. nisi xii lib. vicecom. tam. redd. totam firmam.

Extra m. sunt iii membra que semper in eo fuer. & esse debent ut testant' ho'es de comitatu id est Peritone, Etelau, Bliteslau.

In his sunt vii hide & in d'nio i car. & xx vill'i & iii bord. cum xiii car. & ii servi & piscaria.

Peritone est in feudo Will'i Comit'is, Etelau ten. Rog. de Berchelai, Bliteslau ten. Will's filius Baderon. Aluui vicecom. misit h. extra firm.

In LANGELEI Hund. tenuit Comes Heraldus ALWES-TAN. Ibi erant x hide. In d'nio i car. & xxiii vill'i & v bord. cum xxii & ii servi. Ibi p'positus accrevit ii car. & v servos. Redd. xii lib. ad pensum.

de una leuaa l'g & una lat. Hunfridus redd. de hoc m. xvi lib. & x solid.

Ad hoc m. p'tin. una v' in Wiche que reddeb. xxv sext. falis Ursus vicecom. ita vastavit ho'es q'd modo redd'e non possunt fal.

In LANGETREU Hund. Isd. Brietric tenuit AVENINGE. Ibi T. R. E. erant x hide & in d'nio viii car. & xxiii vill'i & v bord. & xxx servi cum xvi car. Ibi iv molini de xix sol. & ii den. modo crevit p'positus unum molin. de xl denar. Ibi silva ii leuuis l'g & dimid. leuaa lat. Ibi est aira accipitris. Val. xxvii lib.

In BRISTOLDESBERG Hund. Isd. Brietric tenuit Fareforde. Ibi T. R. E. erant xxi hida, & lvi vill'os & viii bord. cum xxx car. Ibi p'br qui teneb. unam v' t're de d'nio & iii molini de xxxii solid. & vi den. In d'nio non sunt nisi xiii hide & una v'.

Hoc M. tenuit Mathild Regina. Hunfridus redd. xxxviii lib. & x sol. ad numerum. De t'ra hujus M. ded. regina iv hid. Johi Camerario. Ibi sunt ii car. & ix vill'i & iv bord. cum iv car. Ibi xiiii servi redd. ix lib. de firma.

Ipla regina ded. Balduino iii hid. & iii virg. de ead. t'ra & ibi h't ii car. & v servos & un. liberum hoe'm h'ntem i car. & ii bord. Val. iv lib.

Qui has ii t'ras tener. T. R. E. non poterant reced'e a capite. M.

In BOTELAU Hund. REX E. tenuit DIMOCH. Ibi erant xx hide & ii car. in d'nio & xlii vill'i & x bord. & xi colib'ti h'ntes xli car. Ibi p'br tenens xii ac's & iv radechenistre cum iv car. Ibi silva iii leuu. l'g & una lat.

De hoc M. reddeb. vicecom. q'd voleb. T. R. E.

Rex W. tenuit in d'nio suo iv annis postea habuit eum com. W. et Rogerius filius ejus. Ho'es de comitatu nesciunt quomodo. Modo redd. xxi lib.

In BLITESLAU Hund. ^{Com.} Heraldus tenuit NEST. Ibi erant v hide & in d'nio i car. & x vill'i & ii bord. cum ix car. T. R. E. non fuit ad firmam.

Comes v'o W. adjunx. illum duob. alijs M. scilicet Pontune et Peritune. In his erant ix hide et ii car. in d'nio et xv vill'i et ii bord. et ii servi cum ix car. ibi i piscaria. Modo crevit p'positus in Pontune i car. Peritune est in Calumnia ad firmam regis. Int. tot. redd. xi lib.

In LINDENEE fecit Com. W. un. M. de iv t'ris quas ab earum d'nis accepit. De d'nio ep'i de Hereford iii hid. De d'nico victu monachorum de Perfore vi hid. ubi erant vi vill'i cum iv car. De duobus teinis accep. iii hid. et dim. Ibi sunt in d'nio iii car. et viii bord. et molin. de xl den. silva i leuu. l'g et dim. lat. Int. tot. redd. vii lib.

In TEDENEHAM Hund. habuit Abb. de Bade unum man. no'e TEDENEHAM. Ibi habebant xxx hide harum x erant in d'nio. Ibi erant xxxviii vill'i h'ntes xxxviii car. et x bord. In Saverna xi piscarie. in d'nio et xlii piscarie villanorum. In Waia i piscaria et villanorum ii piscarie et dimidia.

Rogierius Comes crevit in Waia ii piscarias. Ibi est silva ii leuu. l'g et dimid. leuaa lat. et xii bord. plus sunt.

W. Com. ded. de hac t'ra fr'i suo O. ep'o unam v' t're cum i vill'o et Walterio de Laci ded. ii piscar. in Saverna et dimid. in Waia cum uno vill'o Rad. de Limefi ded. ii piscar. in Waia cum uno vill'o Abbatie de Lyra ded. dimid. hid. t're et eccl'am M. cum decima.

Hoc M. non reddeb. censum T. R. E. nisi victum monachis Stigandus archiep's teneb. illum q'do com. W. accep. eum. Modo redd. xxv lib. de xx in Ora et albas. Ibi est m'o molin. de xl denarijs.

In RESPIET Hund. WLWARDUS tenuit CEDEORDE. Ibi xv hide int. silvam et planum et pratum et vii car. in d'nio T. R. E. et xvi vill'i et iii bord. cum vi car. et iii molini de xiiii solid. et ii denar. et theloneum fal. q'd venieb. ad aulam. Ibi crevit vicecom. viii vill'os et iii bord. h'ntes iii car.

In BEGEBERIE Hund. CHENVICHELE teinus regis E. tenuit ALVREDINTVNE. Ibi erant v hide et iii car. in d'nio et xii vill'i et unus bord. cum vi car. et xvi inter servos et ancillas et ii molini de xx solid. silva i leuaa l'g et dim. lat. Horum ii maneriorum p'positi. q'd voleb. reddeb. T. R. E. Modo redd't x lib. alborum nummorum de xx in ora. Rog' com. tenuit.

In TETBOLDESTANE Hund. ROTLESE Hufcarle R. E. tenuit BECEFORD. Ibi erant xi hide et iii car. in d'nio et xxxiv vill'i et xvi bord. h'ntes xxx car. ibi xii servi et iii ancille.

De hoc M. ded. W. com. iii hid. Ansfrido de Cormelijs. In quib; erant xii vill'i cum v car.

TURBERTUS teinus ^{Com.} Heraldus tenuit ESTONE. Ibi t't viii hide et iii car. in d'nio et x vill'i et iv bord. cum vi car. Ibi viii servi et iii ancille.

De his ii vill'is fec. Com. W. unum M. et non erant ad firmam donec Rog' de Lurei misit ad xxx lib. firme. Decimam v'o et eccl'as cum ii vill'is et iii virg. t're ded. ipse Com. Abbatie de Cormelijs.

Ho'es de comitatu inquisiti dixer. se nunq. vidisse breuem regis q' hanc t'ra diceret datam e'e Comiti W.

In LANGENEI Hund. Wlgar teinus regis E. tenuit Tochintune. Ibi fuer. viii hide et v car. in d'nio et xx vill'i et xii bord. et x servi cum xx car.

Hoc M. non redd. firmam T. R. E. sed inde viveb. cujus erat. Com. W. tenuit in d'nio et ibi crevit p'positus i car. et molin. de viii denar.

Modo redd. xxv lib. candidorum nummorum de xx in ora.

In DODESTAN Hund. EDRIC Lang teinus ^{Com.} Heraldus tenuit HECHANESTEDE. Ibi erant v hide et in d'nio iii car. et vi vill'i et viii bord. cum vi car. Ibi vi servi et dimid. piscaria. Hoc M. cep. W. com. in d'nio et non fuit ad firmam sed m'o vicecom. posuit eum ad lx sol. nu'o.

In LANGETREU Hund. Gueda mat. ^{Com.} Heraldus tenuit UDECESTRE. Goduinus emit ab Azor et ded. sue uxori ut inde viveret donec ad Berchelai maneret. Noleb. enim de ipso M. aliquid comedere pro diffrucc'one Abbatie. Hanc t'ra ten. Eduuardus in firma de Wiltescire injuste ut dicit comitatus qia non p'tin. ad aliq' firmam. De quo M. nemo legatis regis reddid. rationem nec aliquis eorum venit ad hanc descriptionem. H. t'ra redd. vii lib.

In TUIFERDE Hund. Brietric tenuit iii hid. in MODIETE & geldab. In d'nio h't rex ibi ii piscarias Rog'us de Laci h't unam piscar. cum dimid. hida. Abb. de Malmeferiam h't unam piscar. cum dimid. hida et hoc dono regis sicut dicunt.

Will's de Ow h't ii hid. et ipfas iv piscarias calumniat. He piscarie sunt in Waia et reddeb. iv lib.

In GERSDON Hund. EDNOD tenuit OMENEL. T. R. E. Ibi xv hid. geld. De his p'donavit rex E. Ednodo v hid. ut dicit scira et postea reddid. de x hid.

Hoc M. In d'nio iv car. et p'br et xix vill'i et iii bord. cum x car. Ibi xii servi.

Hoc M. fuit Ep'i Baioc'fis et val'b. xx lib. modo redd. xxv lib. in firma regis.

In BERNITONE Hund. Tovi Widenesa Hufcarle ^{Comit.} Heraldus tenuit BERNITONE. Ibi iiii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. et x vill'i et v bord. cum v car. Ibi iiii servi et molin. de v solid. Val. et valuit vii lib. Elsi de Ferendone ten. in firma regis.

EILMER tenuit in BERNITONE iiii hid. pro M. T. R. E. In d'nio est i car. et vii vill'i et iii bord. cum iiii car. Ibi vi servi et molin. de v sol. Valuit c solid. modo lx solid. Goduinus de Stanton ten. in firma regis.

GLOWEL'SIRE.

II. TERRA THOME ARCHIEP'I.

STIGANDUS Archiep's tenuit CIRCESDUNE. Ibi erant xv hide et dimid. et ii car. in d'nio et xviii vill'i et v bord. et vii radechenist. cum xxx car. Ibi silva dimid. leuaa l'g et iii qr. lat. T'c valeb. xiii lib. m'o xii lib.

Isd. Stig. tenuit HOCHILICOTE. Ibi erant iiii hide et in d'nio ii car. et xi vill'i et v bord. cum xi car. Ibi est molin. de xxxii den. et silva i leuaa l'g et dimid. lat. T'c et m'o val. iiii lib.

Isd. Stig. tenuit NORTUNE. Ibi erant v hide et dim. In d'nio ii car. et xv vill'i cum xv car. et iiii servi et molin. de xvii den. T'c et m'o val. iiii lib. Hos iii man. ten. m'o Thomas Archiep's. Nortune ten. Walchelmus de eo nepos Ep'i de Winton.

In SALMANSBERIE Hund. ELDREDUS Archiep's ten. OTINTUNE cum BEREW. Condicote. Ibi erant x hide et ii car. in d'nio et xvi vill'i et ii radechenist. et iiii bord cum xiiii car.

H. t'ra nunq. geldau. T. R. E. val'b. vi lib. m'o x lib.

Thomas Archiep's ten. Sci. Petrus de Glounecestre habuit in d'nio donec rex W. in Angliam venit.

In CILTEHAM Hund. Stigand. Archiep's tenuit SUINDONE. Ibi erant iii hide et ii car. in d'nio et vii vill'i et ii bord et h'nt vii car. Ibi t't iiii servi. T'c val'b. iii lib. m'o iiii lib. et x solid. Hoc M. ten. Thomas Arch. de t'ra S't Ofsualdi et geldat.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Gandulf tenuit et ten. SCIPETUNE un. M. de una hida et geld. et ibi i car. in d'nio & val. viii solid. De Thoma Arch. ten.

PIN tenuit i M. de i hida in HAGEPINE & geld. Anſgerus ten. de Thoma Arch. & h't i car. in d'nio. Valuit xx fol. modo x folid.

In BRADELEGE Hund. Sc's Petrus de Glouuec. tenuit LECCE & Eldred Archiep's tenuit cum Abbatia. Ibi erant xxiiii hide in d'nio sunt iiii car. & xxxiii vill'i & xvi bord. cum xxx car. Ibi sunt iiii serui & ii molini de vii folid. & iiii den.

Ad hoc M. adjacet Stanuuelle. Ibi sunt ii car. in d'nio & v vill'i cum v car. & molin. de xl den. & iiii serui & ii ancille & in Culberlege est una hida p'tin. huic M.

De hac t'ra hujus M. ten. Walt. filius Pontii unum M. de xii hid. q't jacuit in eod M. T. R. E. Ibi sunt ii car. in d'nio ap. Tormentone & xxv vill'i cum xii car. & iiii serui.

Tot. M. T. R. E. val'b. xviii lib. Thomas Arch. misit ad firmam pro xxvii lib. Hida de Culberlege p'ciat xx fol.

Q'd Walt'us ten. val. xiiii lib. Thomas Arch. calumniat. Stigandus Archiep's tenuit CUNTUNE. Ibi erant ix hide. Ibi sunt ii car. & v ac. p'ti & xxii vill'i & v bord. cum xi car. Ibi v serui & molin. de v folid. T. R. E. val'b. viiii lib. modo vii lib. Thom' Arch. tenet. Unus h'o Rog. de Lurei ten. un. M. de iii hid. pertin. huic M. Hoc. ipse Arch. calumniat.

In WITESTAN Hund. ELDRÉD Archiep's tenuit STANEDIS. De d'nio S. Petri de Glouueceſtre fuit. Ibi erant xv hide T. R. E. In d'nio sunt iii car. & viiii vill'i & xiiii bord. cum xvi car. & vii radecheniſt. h'ntes xvii car. Ibi viii serui & dimid. piſcaria. Silva dim. leuua l'g & una qr. lat.

Tot. M. T. R. E. val'b. xvi lib. modo xii lib. Thomas Archiep's ten. & ſimilit. geldat.

De hac t'ra hujus M. ten. Abb. de Glouuec. ii hid. & jure deb. ten'e. Com. ten. unam hidam inuſte. ^{Viccom.} Hugo ^{Durandus} ten. iii hid. q's W. Com. ^{ed.} fr'i ejus Rogerio. Has calumniat. Archiep's Thomas.

In BERNITON Hund. Sc's Ofwaldus de Glouuec. tenuit WIDIFORDE. Ibi T. R. E. erant ii hide & ii car. in d'nio & iiii vill'i & iii bord. cum ii car. Ibi iiii serui & viii ac. p'ti & molin. de x folid. T. R. E. Val'b. xl fol. m'o lx fol. Ead. h'ntes ten. de eod. sc'o. Qualis t'c fuit talis est modo.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Sc's Ofwaldus tenuit in KANNEI un. M. de iiii hid. T. R. E. Id. sc's ten. adhuc & h't in d'nio & vi vill'i & ii bord. cum v car. Ibi i ſervus & molin. de vii fol. & ii ac. p'ti. T'c valuit c fol. modo iiii lib.

In LANGEBRIGE Hund. Ulchetel tenuit LESSEDUNE M. de ii hid. modo ten. Rog. de Thoma Arch. h'ntes geld. In d'nio est una car. & v vill'i & ii bord. cum iii car. Ibi iiii serui & xx ac. p'ti. Valuit xl fol. modo xxx fol.

III. TERRA ECCL'E DE WIRECESTRE.

In BERNINTREU Hund. SC'A MARIA de Wireceſtre tenuit & ten. HUESBERIE. Ibi fuer. & sunt l. hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & vi bord. cum viii car. Ibi iiii serui & una ancilla. Ad hoc M. p'tin. h. membra. Henberie. Redeuuiche. STOCHE. GIETE. In his sunt viiii car in d'nio & xxvii vill'i & xxii bord. cum xxvi car. Ibi xx serui & ii ancille & xx colib'ti cum x car. & molin. de xx den.

Ad hoc M. p'tin. vi radecheniſt. h'ntes viii hid. & viii car. Non poterant a M. ſeperari & in Briſtoui ii dom. reddeb. xvi den.

De hac t'ra hujus M. ten. Turſtinus filius Rolf v hid. in Auſtrecliu. & Giſleb'tus filius Turol'd iii hid. & dimid. in Contone. & Conſtantine v hid. in Icetune. In his t'ris sunt v car. in d'nio & xvi vill'i & xii bord. cum xii car. ibi xi serui.

De ead. t'ra hujus M. ten. Oſb'nus Giſard v hid. & nullum ſervitium facit.

Totum M. cum membris ſuis T. R. E. val'b. xxiiii lib. modo d'nium S. MARIE val. xxix lib. & xiiii fol. & vi den. Q' ho'es ten. viiii lib.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Ipſa Eccl'a tenuit COLESBORNE & Suein de ea non poterat recedere. Ibi viii hide geld. Walterius f. Rog. ten. de eccl'a. In d'nio est una car. & xviii vill'i & ii bord. cum v car. Ibi ii serui & iii ac. p'ti & ii molini de vii folid. & vi denar. T'c valuit viii lib. modo iiii lib.

Ipſa eccl'a ten. AICOTE & Ailricus de ea. In Begeberie jacet. Ibi una hida. In d'nio sunt ii car. & ii vill'i & iiii bord. cum ii car. Ibi ii serui & viii ac. p'ti molin. de lxiiii den. Valuit xx fol. modo xxx folid. Ordric ten. de Ep'o.

In BECHEBERIE Hund. Ipſa Eccl'a tenuit BECHEBERIE. Ibi xxi hida. In d'nio sunt iiii car. & xix vill'i & ii bord. cum xi car. Ibi iii radcheniſt. h'ntes iiii hid. & iiii car. & p'br h'ns iii hid. & cum ſuis iiii car. Ibi xi int. ſervos & ancillas & ii molini de xvii folid. & x ac. p'ti. De ead. t'ra hujus M. ten. Durandus de Ep'o un. M. de iii hid. & unam v' in Bernelleis. & Eudo vii virgat. ibid. pro M.

In his sunt v car. in d'nio & xii vill'i cum vi car. Ibi xii serui. Tot. M. T. R. E. valuit xviii lib. & m'o ſimilit. Ulſtanus Ep's ten. & geldat.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Ipſa Eccl'a ten. WIDINDVNE. Ibi xxx hide. Tres ex his nunq. geldauer. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xvi vill'i & viii bord. cum vii car. Ibi vi serui & x ac. p'ti ſilva i leuua l'g & dim. lat. & in Contone est una car. & ii vill'i & ii bord. cum i car. & ii serui & molin. de v folid.

In eod. M. sunt iiii radcheniſt. h'ntes ii hid. & iii virg. & h'nt ii car. & p'br h'ns dimid. & i car. In Glouuec. iiii Burgenſes redd. vii den. & obolum.

De hac t'ra hujus M. ten. de ep'o Morinus iii hid. in Fuſcote. Anſchitil ii hid. in Coleſburne & Willecot. Rob'tus iiii hid. & dimid. in Dodeſuuelle & Pecleſurde. Schelinus v hid. in Nategrau. Drogo x hid. in Eſtone.

In his t'ris sunt xvi car. in d'nio & li vill's & vii bord. cum xxviii car. Ibi xli ſervus & iii molini de xiiii folid. & iiii denar. In Wicelcumbe i Burg'ſis redd. iii folid. In qibusdam locis p'tum & ſilva ſed non multa. Tot. M. T. R. E. val'b. xxxviii lib. modo xxxiiii lib. in't om's. Ulſtanus Ep's ten. hoc M.

In TEDBOLDESTAN Hund. Ipſa Eccl'a tenuit CLIVE. Ibi xxx hide. In d'nio ſ't iii car. & xvi vill'i & xix bord. cum xvi car. Ibi viii serui & unus Afrus. Ibi p'br h't i hid. & ii car. & unus radcheniſt. h'ns unam hidam & ii car. Ibi ſilva paruula.

De hac t'ra ejuſd. M. ten. de eccl'a ^{Viccc.} Durandus vi hid. in Surham. Rad's iiii hid. in Sapletone. Turſtinus f. Rolf vi hid. in Godrinton. In his t'ris sunt in d'nio viii car. & xxii vill'i & vii bord. cum xiii car. Ibi xx serui & iii afri & molin. de xii den. & aliq'tum p'ti. De ead. t'ra ten. Bernardus & Raynaldus vii hid. in STOCHE & ſervitium S. MARIE noluit facere.

Tot. M. T. R. E. valuit xxxvi lib. modo xxvi lib. in't om's. Hoc M. ten. Ulſtanus Ep's.

In WITELAI Hund. Ipſa Eccl'a ten. in CONDICOTE ii hid. & Oſb'nus de Ep'o. Val. & valuit xl folid.

III. TERRA ECCL'E DE HEREFORD.

In CILTEHAM Hund. EP'S DE HEREFORD tenuit PRESTEBERIE. Ibi xxx hide. In d'nio ſ't iii car. & xviii vill'i & v bord. cum viiii car. Ibi p'br & un. radcheniſt. cum ii car. & in Wicelcumbe i burg'ſis redd. xviii den. & int. ſervos & ancillas xi. Ibi xx ac. p'ti & ſilva de una leuua l'g & dimid. lat.

Ad hoc M. adjacet una villa SEVENHAMTONE ext. iſt. HUND. Ibi sunt xx hide de ſup'dictis xxx hid. & ibi sunt ii car. & xxi vill'i cum xi car. ibi iii lib'i ho'es h'ntes vii car. cum ſuis ho'ibus.

De his xx hid. ten. Durandus de Ep'o iii hid. Tot. M. T. R. E. valuit xii lib. modo xvi lib. Hoc M. ten. Rotb'tus Ep's eid. Urbis.

V. TERRA EPI OSBERNI.

In SINESHOVEDES Hund. EP'S de EXCESTRE ten. ALDELANDE Aluui tenuit ho. ^{Com.} Heraldus & poterat ire quo volebat. Ibi ii hide una geld. alia non. In d'nio sunt ii car. & unus vill's & vi bord. cum i car. Ibi ii serui & x ac. p'ti. T'c valuit iiii lib. modo xx fol.

In BACHESTANES Hund. Id. Ep's ten. Tidrentune. Aluui tenuit T. R. E. Ibi v hide & ii car. sunt in d'nio & unus vill's & v bord. & ii serui & xx ac. p'ti ſilva dimid. leuu. in l'g & lat. Valuit c folid. m'o xl fol.

VI. TERRA EPI CONSTANTIEN'S.

In BACHESTANES Hund. EP'S de S. LAUDO ten. ACTUNE & Ilgerus de eo. Ibi ii hide & dimid. in d'nio est i car. & iiii vill'i & v bord. & i ſervus & ii ancille cum i car. & dimid. Ibi dimid. molin. de xvi den. & x ac. p'ti & una qr. ſilve. Val. & valuit xl folid. Ebbi tenuit hoc M. h'o Brietric f. Algar.

In SINESHOVEDES Hund. Id. Ep's ten HANBROC & Oſulfus de eo. Algar tenuit de Rege E. & poterat ire quo voleb. T'ra est v car. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio ſ't ii car. & ii vill'i cum ii car. & ii serui & vi ac. p'ti. Valuit c folid. modo lx folid.

Iſdem Ep's ten. unum MANER. de una hida & Goiſmerus de eo. In iſta hida q'do arat. non sunt niſi lxiiii ac. t're. Ibi est in d'nio i car. Valuit xx fol. modo xvi folid.

Id. Ep's ten. ESTOCH & Tetbalduſ de eo. Eldred tenuit de ^{Com.} Heraldus & poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi ii hide una geld. al'ra non. In d'nio est una car. & ii vill'i & i bord. cum i car. Ibi vi serui & v ac. p'ti. Valuit xl folid. modo xx folid.

In POLCRECERCE Hund. Id. Ep's tenuit DIDINTONE & Rob'tus de eo. Aluuardus tenuit. teinus Regis E. Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xiiii vill'i & viii bord. cum cum viii car. Ibi x servi & ii molin. de x sol. & x den. & ii ho'es de v solid. & xii ac. p'ti silva dimid. leuua l'g & dim. lat. Val. & valuit viii lib.

Ibid. Ep's ten. WAPELIE & Aldredus de eo. Ibd. tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida in d'nio i car. & ii servi. Val. & valuit xx solid.

In LETBERGE Hund. Ibd. Ep's ten. LEGA & Rob'tus de eo. Algar tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida geld. & ii car. in d'nio & iii bord. & ii servi cum i car. Val. & valuit xx solid.

In LANGELIE Hund. Ibd. Ep's ten. HERDICOTE & Rob'tus de eo. Cuulf tenuit T. R. E. Ibi ii hide geld. & ii car. sunt in d'nio & ii bord. & iii servi & iii vill'i & x ac. p'ti & silva. Val. & valuit xl fol.

In EDREDESTAN Hund. Ipse Ep's ten. DODINTONE & Rogerus de eo. Ulnod tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida & dim. & tertia pars dim. hide in d'nio est i car. & iii vill'i & unus bord. cum i car. Ibi iii servi. Val. et valuit xxx solid.

VII. TERRA ECCL'Æ DE BADE.

In LANGELEI Hund. SC'S PETRUS DE BADA tenuit ALVESTONE. Ibi v hid. Tres geldant ex his ii non geld. c'cessu E. & W. regum. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & vi bord. & p'br & unus radchen. cum x car. Ibi vii servi & p'ta & silva ad M. Sustinend. valuit c fol. modo iii lib. Ipsa eccl'a ten. adhuc.

In PVLRECERCE Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. ESCETONE ibi v hide harum ii sunt a geldo quiete c'cessu E. & W. regum. Tres non geld. In d'nio est una car. & iii vill'i & iii bord. & unus radchen. Int. om's iii car. Ibi i colib'tus & molin. de l. denar. & vi ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit iii lib.

VIII. TERRA ECCL'Æ GLASTINGBER.

In PVLRECERCE Hund. S'CA MARIA DE GLASTINGEBERIE ten. PVLRECERCE. Ibi xx hide in d'nio s't vi car. & xxiii vill'i & viii bord. cum xviii car. ibi x servi & vi ho'es redd't c massas ferri x minus & in Glouuecestre i burg'is redd. v den. & ii colib'ti redd. xxxiiii den. & iii francig. sunt ibi & ii molini de c den. ibi lx ac. p'ti & silva dimid. leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Valuit xx lib. modo xxx lib.

IX. TERRA ECCL'Æ MALMESBER.

In LANGELEI Hund. S'CA MARIA de MALMESBERIE tent. LITELTONE. Ibi v hide harum ii & dimid. geld. aliæ sunt quiete. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xiii vill'i & ii bord. cum viii car. Ibi eccl'a & p'br & xxx ac. p'ti. Valuit lx solid. modo c solid.

X. TERRA S. PETRI DE GLOWEC.

In DVDESTANES Hund. SC'S PETRUS DE GLOWECESTRE tenuit T. R. E. M. BERTUNE cum membris adjacentibus Berneuude Tuffelege Mereuent. Ibi xxii hide una v' minus. Ibi t' in d'nio viii car. & xlii vill'i & xxi bord. cum xlv car. Ibi xii servi & molin. de v solid. & cxx ac. p'ti & silva v qr. l'g & iii lat. Valuit viii lib. modo xxiii lib. Hoc M. quietum fuit temp. a geldo & ab omni regali seruitio.

In BLACELAWES Hund. Ipsa ead. eccl'a tenuit FROWECESTRE. Ibi v hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. & viii vill'i & vii bord. cum vii car. ibi tres servi & x ac. p'ti & silva iii qr. l'g & ii qr. lat. Valuit iii lib. m'o viii lib.

In GRIMBOLDESTOWES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. BOXEWELLE. Ibi v hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xii vill'i & i radchenist. h'entes xii car. ibi viii servi & molin. de v solid. Valuit lxx fol. modo c fol.

In BRICWOLDESBERG Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. CULNE. ibi iii hide. in d'nio sunt iii car. & xi vill'i & vii bord. cum xii car. ibi iii servi. Valuit vi lib. modo viii lib. Duo molini reddeb. xxv solid.

In BEGEBRIGES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. ALDESORDE. Ibi xi hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xxi vill'i & v bord. & ii franchig. cum xv car. Ibi vi servi. Valuit c solid. modo viii lib.

In WIDELES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. BOCHELANDE. Ibi x hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xxii vill'i & vi bord. cum xii car. Ibi viii servi & x ac. p'ti. Valuit iii lib. modo viii lib.

In TETBOLDESTANES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HINETUNE. Ibi xv hide. In d'nio s't ii car. & xxx vill'i & vii bord. cum xvi car. Ibi xi servi & un. francigena. Valuit iii lib. modo x lib. Hoc M. quietum est a geldo & ab o'i forensi seruitio p'ter eccl'e.

In TOLANGEBRIGES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HAMME. Ibi vii hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xxii vill'i & iii bord. cum vii car. Ibi viii servi & xxx ac. p'ti silva q'tm M. sufficit. Valuit xl fol. modo iii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. PRESTETUNE. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & iii bord. cum viii car. ibi iii servi. Valuit xxx fol. modo iii lib.

In BOTELEWES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. LEDENE. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & unus bord. cum viii car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de iii solid. & x ac. p'ti. Silva ii leuu. l'g & ii qr. lat. Vix val. xxx fol.

In WESTBERIES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HAMME & MORTUNE. Int. silvam & plan. v hid. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vii vill'i & ii bord. cum vi car. silva i leuu. l'g & una lat. Ibi habuit eccl'a venationem suam p' iii haia T. R. E. & t'pr W. Valuit xx fol. modo xl fol.

In GERSDVNES Hund. In Omenie ten. fr. Reinbaldi ii hid. Ibi ii car. & v vill'i cum iii car. & iii servi & xxiiii ac. p'ti & molin. de v fol. Valuit xl fol. modo vix xx fol.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Uxor Walterij de Laci c'cessu Regis W. ded. se'o Petro pro anima viri sui DUNTESBORNE Maner' de v hid. In d'nio iii car. & viii vill'i cum v car. Ibi xvi servi & molin. de ii solid. Val. iii lib.

T. R. E. habeb. Sc's Petrus in Glouuecestre de suis burgenfibus xix solid. & v den. & xvi salmons. Modo h't totid. salmons & l. fol. Ibi est molin. de xii sol. et iii piscarie ad uictum monachorum.

XI. TERRA ECCL'Æ DE WINCELCUMBE.

In SALEMONES Hund. ECCL'Æ S. MARIE DE WINCELCUMBE ten. SCIREBURNE. Ibi xxx hid. ex his x sunt libere ad curiam p'tin. Ibi sunt in d'nio v car. & xl vill'i & vii bord. cum xxii car. ibi xii servi & iii molini de xl fol. & xxx ac. p'ti. T. R. E. val'b. xx lib. m'o xiiii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. Bladintvn. Ibi vii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & iii bord. cum v car. & viii servi & ii ancillæ. Ibi molin. de v fol. & xxx ac. p'ti. Valuit iii lib. modo iii lib.

In GRETETANES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. TUENINGE. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xxiiii vill'i & viii bord. cum xxvii car. Ibi viii servi & ii ancillæ & xl ac. p'ti silva ii qr. l'g & i lat. Valuit viii lib. modo vii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. FREOLINTUNE. Ibi est una hida et in d'nio iii car. & vi servi & ii ancillæ. h. t'ra lib'a fuit & quieta ab omni geldo & regali seruitio. Valuit xl fol. m'o l. solid.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. ALDRITONE & qidam Miles de Abbe. Ibi ii hide & dimid. In d'nio sunt ii car. & unus vill's cum una car. & adhuc iii possunt e'e. Ibi iii servi. Val. & valuit xxx fol.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. NIWETONE et duo Milites de Abbe. Ibi iii hide & dim. In d'nio s't iii car. & iii servi & ii vill'i cum i car. & adhuc vi ibi possent e'e. Val. & valuit xl solid.

Ipsa eccl'e ten. STANTONE. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xiiii vill'i cum vii car. Ibi iii bord. & vi servi & vi ac. p'ti. Silva una leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Val. & valuit iii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. CERLETONE. Ibi ii hide libere & quiete. In d'nio est i car. & iii vill'i & ii bord. cum iii car. ibi vi servi & molin. de xx den. & ii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit xx solid.

In HOLEFORDES Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. SNAWESILLE. Ibi vii hide geldantes. In d'nio s't iii car. & xii vill'i & ii bord. cum vi car. Ibi vi servi. Val. & valuit c solid.

In CELFLEDE Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HENBERGE. Ibi x hide sunt harum ii in d'nio & ad seruitium viii. In d'nio sunt v car. & xv vill'i cum v car. Ibi viii servi & iii ancillæ. Valuit vi lib. m'o viii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. EDELMINTONE. Ibi iii hide & dimidia. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xiii vill'i cum vi car. ibi iii servi & ii ancillæ. Valuit iii lib. modo iii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. HEDICOTE. Ibi ii hide libere. In d'nio est i car. cum i seruo. Val. & valuit xl solid.

T. R. E. def'd' b. se h' eccl'a in Glouuecestrefcyre pro lx hid. ELSI de Ferendone ten. de ipsa Abbatia iii hid. & dimid. in WENRIC. Bolle tenuit & Abbatie dedit q'i cum ista t'ra poterat ire quo voleb. In d'nio sunt v car. & ix vill'i & vii bord. cum i car. & x servi & molin. & dimid. de xii solid. & vi den. Val. int. totum viii lib. Ulric tenuit de hac t'ra ii hid. pro M. & Tovi v virg. pro M. & Leuinus. i virg. pro M.

Hoc M. quem ten. Elli de Abbe injuste jacuit in Salemonesberie hd. postq. Bolle mortuus fuit. Modo jacet in Bernitone hd. iudicio ho'um. ejusdem hund.

XII. TERRA

XII. TERRA S. MARIE DE EVESHAM.

In SALEMONES Hund. Eccl'a S. MARIE DE EVESHAM ten. MALGERESBERIE ad Eduuardestou. Ibi T. R. E. erant viii hide et nona hida jacet ad eccl'am S. Edwardi. Rex Adelredus quietam dedit ibi. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xii vill'i et unus lib. hom. & p'br int. se h'ntes vii car. Ibi vi servi & molin. de viii solid. p'ti aliq'tum. T. R. E. val'b. c solid. modo vii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. TEDESTROP. Ibi vii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & x vill'i & ii bord. cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & unus miles cum ii car. Ibi parum p'ti. Valuit iiiii lib. modo c solid.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. BORTVNE. Ibi x hide. In d'nio sunt vi car. & xvi vill'i & viii bord. & ii lib'i ho'es cum vii car. Ibi p'br cum dim. car. Valuit viii lib. modo xii lib.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. BRADEWELLE. Ibi x hide. ibi vi. car. ibi xiii servi in d'nio & xxv vill'i & viii bord. & unus lib. h'o & p'br. Int. om's h'nt xii car. In Glouuec. iiiii burg'fes & in Wicelcombe unus redd't xxvii den. Valuit tot. viii lib. modo xii lib.

In WIDELEI Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. SVELLE. Ibi iii hide & viiii vill'i & ii bord. et p'br. Int. om's iiiii car. Ibi vi servi. Valuit iiiii lib. modo v lib. In d'nio s't iii car. ibi iii molin. xx fol.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. WILLERSEI. Ibi viii hide i ad Wiquennam. ibi iii car. in d'nio & xvi vill'os & iiiii bord. & p'br cum vi car. Ibi ii servi & parum prati. Valuit iiiii lib. modo c solid.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. WESTUNE. Ibi iii hide & una libera. In d'nio s't ii car. & v vill'i & p'br cum ii car. Valuit xx fol. m'o xl fol.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. STOCH. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio est una car. & vii vill'i & ii bord. cum ii car. ibi i servus. Val. & valuit xl solid.

Ipsa eccl'a ten. HEDECO'FE. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio est una car. & ii servi & uxores iiiii vill'orum nuper defunctorum h'nt i car. Val. & valuit xx solid. Has ii villas h't abb. ii militibus suis comendatas.

In Ferdingo de WICELCOMBE habuit S. Maria de EVESHAM lvi hidas T. R. E.

XIII. TERRA S. MARIE DE ABENDONE.

In GRETETAN Hund. ECCL'A S. MARIE de ABENDVNE ten. DUBENTONE. Ibi vii hide & dimid. In d'nio sunt iiiii car. & xiii vill'i & viii bord. cum viii car. Ibi vi servi & molin. de vi solid. T. R. E. Val'b. xii lib. modo viiii lib. Hoc. M. geldab. T. R. E.

XIII. TERRA S'CE MARIE DE P'SORE.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Eccl'a S. MARIE de PERSORE ten. KVLEGE Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xiii vill'i & unus bord. cum vii car. Ibi v servi & molin. de l. den. & vi ac. p'ti & silva iii qr. l'g & una lat. Val. c solid.

In GRIMBOLDESTOV Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HAVOCHESBERIE. Ibi xvii hide. In d'nio v car. & xviii vill'i & xxv bord. cum xv car. Ibi ii servi et vii colib'ti. Ibi iii molini de xix fol. et ii den. et x ac. p'ti. Silva de ii leuu. l'g et una lat. Valuit xvi lib. modo x lib.

XV. TERRA S. MARIE DE COVENTREV.

In CELFLEODE Hund. ECCL'A S. MARIE de COVENTREV ten. MERESTONE. Ibi x hide. In d'nio s't iii car. et xv vill'i et iii bord. cum xii car. Ibi vi servi et p'tum de x fol. Valuit viii lib. modo c solid.

XVI. TERRA S. MARIE DE CORMELIIS.

In BOTESLAU Hund. Eccl'a S. MARIE de CORMELIES ten. NOENT. Rex E. tenuit. Ibi vi hide. non geldauer. Rogerius Com. ded. huic eccl'ie pro Anima Patris sui concessu Regis W. In d'nio sunt iii car. et viiii vill'i et viiii bord. cum xii car. Ibi p'positus h'ns i vill'm et dim. et v bord. Int. om's h'nt v car. et molin. de xx den. Ibi ii servi et ii molin. de vi fol. et viii den. De silva xxx den.

De hac t'ra ten. Durandus de Abbe i hid. et ibi h't i car. et v bord. et ii servos cum ii car. Ibi ii haie quas h't faitas rex.

Totum M. T. R. E. val'b. iiiii lib. modo c solid. hida Durandi xii fol.

De t'ra hujus M. ten. Will's filius Baderon unam v' p. m'm.

XVII. TERRA S'CE MARIE DE LIRE.

In RESPIGET Hund. ECCL'A S. MARIE de LIRE ten. TANTESBORNE. Ibi i hida et una v'a. In d'nio est una car. et ii bord. Val. et valuit xx solid. Hauc t'ra ded. ip'i ecl'æ Rogerus de Laci. Edmer tenuit T. R. E.

XVIII. TERRA ECCL'E DE EGLESHAM.

In CELFLEDETORN Hund. ECCL'A DE EGLESHAM ten. MUCELTUDE. Ibi xiii hide. In d'nio sunt v car. et xx vill'i et viii bord. cum x car. Ibi viii servi et ii ancillæ et xxiii mensuræ Salis de Wich. Val. et valuit x lib. Ead. eccl'a tenuit T. R. E.

XIX. TERRA S. PETRI WESTMON.

In DERHEST Hund. ECCL'A S. PETRI WESTMONAST. ten. DERHEST. Ibi s't lviiii hide. In capite M. erant T. R. E. v hide. Ibi sunt iii car. et xx vill'i et viii bord. cum x car. Ibi vi servi et lx ac. p'ti silva ii leuu. l'g et dimid. leuu. lat. Val. et valuit x lib.

Ad hoc M. p'tin. he BEREW. Herdeuic v hid. Bortune viii hid. Teodcha vii hid. Sudtune v hid. Int. tot. xxv hid. Ibi in d'nio sunt xiii car. et xlv vill'i et xxvii bord. cum xxi car. Ibi xxxvii servi et iiiii molini de xx solid. et xx ac. p'ti. Silva i leuu. l'g et dim. lat. et Broce iii qr. l'g et i lat.

De t'ra hujus M. teneb. radchen. id est lib'i ho'es T. R. E. qui tam. om's ad opus d'ini arabant et herciabant falcabant et metebant.

Ad Almundeftan Brietric i hida. Reimbaldus ten. Ad Tellinge Godric ii hid. Ad Wicfeld Eduui i hid. Ad Toteham Eduui i hid. H. ten. Walterius Pontherius. Ad Botingtune ii hid. Ad Bortune ii hid. Has tenuit Wluui. Ad Chinemertune dim. hid. Leuuius tenuit. Girardus tenet istas t'ras. Ad Giningtune Eluui i hid. et unam v' Ad Tereige Leuuius dimid. hid. Ad Trinleie Edricus ii virg. et dimid. H. ten. Will's filius Baderon. Ad Chinemertune Eluuius dimid. hid. H. ten. Balduinus Abb. Ad Hasfelde Brietric i hid. et dimid. Turstinus f. Rolf ten. Ad Lemingtune Anti iii hid. Gisleb'tus f. Turaldi ten. Ad Mortune Elfridus dimid. hid. Idem Ipte tenet. In his t'ris sunt in d'nio xi car. et dimid. et xiii vill'i et xxvii bord. cum vii car. Ibi xiii servi et xx ac. p'ti.

Preter hæc ten. Girardus Camerarius in Chenemertune viii hid. et in Botingtune iii hid. que semper geldaver. et Servitia alia fecer. in Derhefte hund. Sed postquam Girardus habuit nec geld. nec servitium reddidit.

Totum M. T. R. E. dabat de firma xli lib. et viii sextaria mellis ad mensuram Regis. Modo val. xl lib. De his p'tin. ad d'nicum M. xxvi lib. et ad ho'es xiii lib.

XX. TERRA S'CI DYONISII PARISII.

In DERHEST Hund. Eccl'a S. DYONISII tenet has villas. Hochinton v hid. Staruenton iii hid. Colne et Caldecote v hid. Contone xii hid. Preston x hid. Welleford xv hid. In his t'ris sunt in d'nio xv car. et lx xv vill'i et xii bord. cum xxxix car. Ibi xxxviii servi et iiiii molini de xl solid. et xxxvi ac. p'ti. Silva ii leuu. et dim. l'g et una leuu. et ii qr. lat.

De hac t'ra sup'dicta ten. v lib'i ho'es iiiii hid. et dimid. Ad eund. M. p'tin. ii hid. et dimid. ultra Saverne. In Olfendone v hid. In Lalege i hid. In Valtou i hid. In Caneberton dim. hida. In his t'ris sunt in d'nio v car. et v vill'i et xviii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi manet i lib. h'o. Ibi xxxviii ac. p'ti. Silva dim. leuua. l'g et ii qr. lat.

Ad hoc M. p'tin. xxx burgenses in Glouuec. redd. xv fol. et viii den. et in Wicelcombe ii burg'es redd. x denar.

T. R. E. Tot. M. valeb. xxvi lib. et x solid. modo xxx lib.

XXI. TERRA ECCL'E DE LANHEIE.

In CELFLEDETORN Hund. Eccl'a S. MARIE DE LANHEIE ten. ESTUNE Goda comitissa tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iiiii hide. In d'nio s't iii car. et vi vill'i et unus miles cum iii car. et dimid. Ibi vi servi et iii ancillæ. Valuit c fol. modo iiiii lib.

XXII. TERRA S'CI EBRULFI.

In HOLEFORD Hund. Eccl'a S. EBRULFI ten. de Rege RAWELLE Wluuard tenuit T. R. E. Ibi x hide. In d'nio sunt iiiii car. et xvi vill'i et ii bord. cum vi car. Ibi iii servi. Val. & valuit x lib. hoc M. nunq; geldavit.

XXIII. TERRA ECCL'E MONIALIUM DE CADOM.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Eccl'a S. TRINIT. MONIALIUM de CADOMO ten. de Rege PENNEBERIE. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. et viii vill'i et unus faber cum iii car. Ibi ix servi et molin de xl den. Val. et valuit iiiii lib.

In LANGETREU Hund. Ipsa eccl'a ten. HANTONE Goda Comitissa tenuit T. R. E. Ibi viii hide. In d'nio sunt v car. et xxxii vill'i et x bord. cum xxxiii car. Ibi p'br et x servi et viii molini de xlv fol. et xx ac. p'ti. Silva ii leuu. l'g et dimid. leuu. lat. Valet xxxviii lib.

XXIII. TERRA

XXIII. TERRA ECCL'Æ DE TROARS.

In LANGETREW Hund. Eccl'ia S. MARTINI de TROARS ten. HORSELEI dono Regis W. Goda tenuit foror R. E. Ibi x hide. In d'nio sunt iiii car. & vi vill'i & v bord. cum vi car. & un. Radchenist. & in Glouuecefre una domus de vi den. Ibi molin. de l. denar. Valuit xii lib. m'o xiiii lib.

XXV. TERRA ECCL'Æ DE CIRECESTRE.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Eccl'ia de CIRECESTRE ten. de rege ii hid. in Elemofina & de rege E. Tenuit quietas ab om'i consuetudine. Ibi sunt vi ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit hoc xl fol.

XXVI. TERRA RENBALDI PR'BI.

In GERSDONES Hund. Reinbaldus ten. OMENIE de rege. Godricus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iiii hide & una v'. In d'nio ii car. & viii vill'i & i bord. cum vi car. & p'bro. Ibi viii serui & ii molini de x solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit c solid.

Ibid. Reinbaldus ten. DRIFELLE. Elaf tenuit de Comite Tosli. Ibi vii hide. In d'nio iiii car. & viii vill'i & ii bord. & p'br cum v car. Ibi xv serui & molin. de v solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit viii lib.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. Rainbaldus ten. in NORTCOTE i hid. Godricus tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio est una car. & ii vill'i & ii bord. cum ii car. Ibi vi serui. Val. xl solid. Hic tainus poterat ire quo volebat.

Ibid. Rainb. ten. PRESTETUNE. Elaf tenuit T. R. E. Ibi viii hide geld. p'ter d'nium. In d'nio sunt iiii car. & vii vill'i & vi bord. cum vi car. Ibi viiii serui & xii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit viii lib. Ipse Ealf poterat ire quo voleb.

XXVII. TERRA ROGERIJ COMITIS.

In GERSDONES Hund. COMES ROGERIUS ten. HANTONE & Tuoldus de eo nepos Wiget. Leueric tenuit. Ibi v hide. In d'nio est i car. & iiii vill'i & ii bord. & p'br & ii alij ho'es. Int. om's h'nt ii car. & dimid. Ibi vi serui. Valuit viii lib. modo iii lib.

XXVIII. TERRA HUGONIS COMITIS.

In BISELEIE Hund. COMES HUGO ten. BISELEGE & Rob'tus de eo. Ibi viii hide. In d'nio sunt iiii car. & xx vill'i & xxviii bord. cum xx car. Ibi vi serui et iiii ancille. Ibi ii p'bri & viii radchenist. h'ntes x car. & alij xxiii ho'es redd'tes xliiii solid. & ii sextar. mell. Ibi v molini de xvi solid. & silva de xx solid. & in Glouuec. xi burg'fes redd'tes lxxvi den. Valuit xxiiii lib. modo xx lib.

Ibid. ten. ipse Comes i hid. ad Troham. Levenod tenuit de rege E. & poterat ire quo voleb. H. t'ra geld. Ibi sunt iiii bord. cum i car. & iiii ac. p'ti. Val. xx solid.

Ibid. ten. ipse com. dimid. hid. quam Rog. de Laci calumn'at. ad Egeifuurde teste comitatu. Val. x fol. & geld.

In WITELAI Hund. Ipse Comes ten. CAMPEDENE. ^{Com.} ^{Huoldus} tenuit. Ibi xv hide geldant. In d'nio vi car. & l. vill'i & viii bord. cum xxi car. Ibi xii serui & ii molini de vi solid. & ii denar. Ibi iii ancille. Valuit xxx lib. modo xx lib.

In LANGETREU Hund. Idem Com. ten. WESTONE. Elnod tenuit. T. R. E. Ibi iii hide geld. In ip'o hund. tenuit Leuuius i hid.

Ipse Com. ten. ii M. de iiii hid. geldant & ii ho'es ejus de eo. Elnod & Leuuius tenuer. T. R. E. non fuit q' responderet de his t'ris sed p. ho'es comitatus app'ciant viii lib.

XXIX. TERRA COMITIS MORITON.

In WITELAI Hund. COMES MORITON. ten. LANGEERGE. Toni tenuit T. R. E. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio f't ii car. & iii vill'i & unus bord. cum i car. & iiii serui. Valuit iii lib. m'o xl fol. & geld.

XXX. TERRA GISLEBERTI EPI LISIAC'SIS.

In LANGETREW Hund. HUGO Maminot ten. REDMERTONE de Gisleb'to ep'o Lisiac'fi & ipse de rege. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & i vill' & ii bord. & p'br cum i car. Ibi ii serui. Valuit iiii lib. modo iii lib. Leuuius tenuit de rege E.

Idem Hugo ten. de ipso ep'o LESSEBERGE. Leuuius tenuit. Ibi v hide. In d'nio est una car. & v vill'i & p'br cum ii car. Ibi vii serui. Valuit x lib. modo l. solid.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Hugo ten. SOPEBRIE de eod. ep'o. Aluardus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio f't ii car. & iiii vill'i & ii bord. cum ii car. Ibi iiii serui & xx ac. p'ti. Silvæ aliq'tulum. Valuit viii lib. modo iiii lib.

XXXI. TERRA WILLELMI DE OW.

In BLACHELEW Hund. WILL'S de OW ten. STANHUS. Toui tenuit T. R. E. Ibi erant vii hide. Ibi sunt in d'nio ii car. & xxi vill'i & viiii bord. cum xx car. Ibi iiii serui & ii molini de xvii solid. & vi denar. Ibi ii arpens. uince. Val. & valuit viii lib. Hoc M. geldat.

In LEDENEI Hund. Id. Will's ten. ALVREDESTONE. Bondi tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide. geldant nil. Ibi est in d'nio fed v vill'i & iii bord. h'nt iii car. Ibi piscaria de xii den. & x ac. p'ti. Silva dimid. leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Valuit xx solid. modo xxx solid. Henricus de Fererijs calumniat eo q'd Bondi tenuerit. Willi. v'o antecessor tenuit Rad. de Limesi.

Ibid. W. ten. ibid ii hid. geld. & ibi sunt ii vill'i cum ii car. Vlnod tenuit. Val. & valuit x solid.

Ibid. W. tenuit WIGHEIETE & Rad. de Limesi ante eum. Alestan tenuit. T. R. E. N'c est iustu Regis in foresta sua. Ibi erant vi hide & geld'b. & valeb. lx solid. modo non est nisi piscaria de x solid.

In TWIFERDE Hund. Id. W. ten. ODE-LAVESTON. Brietric f. Algari tenuit. Ibi ii hide. Nil ibi est in d'nio nisi v vill'i cum v car. Ibi una piscaria in Saverna de v solid. & molin. de xl denar. Val. & valuit xx solid. h. t'ra geld.

Iste W. ten. in TIDEHAM unam v' & dimid. geldant. Stigand Arch. tenuit. Ibi i vill'us cum i car. & ii piscarie. Val. & valuit x fol.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Idem W. ten. DUNTESBORNE. Alestan tenuit T. R. E. Ibi v hide & dim. geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vi vill'i & iiii bord. cum v car. & dimid. Ibi vii serui & molin. de viii solid. Hoc M. ten. Radulfus de Will'o & geld. sed ipse geld. retin. de iii hid. Un. francig. ten. dimid. hid. de ipsa t'ra & ibi h't i car. cum suis ho'ibus. Tot. T. R. E. val'b. x lib. modo viii lib.

Idem W. ten. in TORNENTONE i hid. & Herb'tus de eo. Leuicrus tenuit. T. R. E. & potuit ire quo voluit. In d'nio est una car. & iiii serui. Valuit xl solid. modo xx fol.

In LANGETREV Hund. Id. W. ten. SCIP-TONE sic' Rad. de Limesi teneb. Wlui tenuit T. R. E. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & ii bord. & viii serui. Val. & valuit xl fol. Ipse Wlui poterat ire quo vellet. Hugo ten. de Will'o.

Ibid. W. ten. CULCORTORNE & Herb'tus de eo. Scireuold tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii virg. & v acre. In d'nio est una car. & iii serui. Val. & valuit xxxv fol. Hanc t'ram tenuit Rad's de Limesi sed non fuit Alestani.

In DUDESTANES Hund. Id. W. ten. BEIEWRDE. Alestan tenuit. Ibi viii hid. In d'nio sunt vi car. & xx vill'i & xiiii bord. cum xxiiii car. Ibi xvii serui & molin. de xii denar. Silva ii leuu. l'g & una lat. Valuit xv lib. modo xiii lib.

In SALEMANESBERIE Hund. Id. W. ten. SUELLE. Ernesi tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide geld. Valuit xl fol. modo x fol.

XXXII. TERRA WILL'I FILIJ BADERON.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Will's filius BADERON tenuit ii hid. in CIRECESTRE & Hugo ten. de eo. In d'nio est una car. & unus vill's & dimid. & iiii bord. cum i car. Ibi ii serui. Valuit c solid. modo lxx solid. Aluui tenuit hanc t'ram.

Ibid. Will's ten DUNTESBORNE. Chetel & Aluric tenuer. & poterant ire quo volebant. Ibi iii hide & dimid. In d'nio i car. & dimid. est & unus vill's & ii bord. cum i car. Ibi i seruus. Valuit x lib. modo lxx fol.

Ibid. W. ten. in SUDITONE i hid. Osvuid tenuit T. R. E. & potuit ire quo voluit. In d'nio est i car. & iiii serui. Val. & valuit xxiiii fol.

In LANGETREU Hund. Id. W. ten. Westone. Bricfi tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio f't ii car. & ii vill'i & iii bord. cum ii car. Ibi iiii serui & vi ac. p'ti. Valuit vi lib. modo iii lib.

In BOTELAU Hund. Id. W. ten. TEBRISTON. Ibi v hide. Vlfelmus tenuit de rege E. & poterat ire quo vellet. In d'nio sunt iii car. & x vill'i & viii bord. cum viii car. Ibi iiii serui & silva iii leuu. l'g & una lat. Valuit vi lib. & x solid. modo c solid.

Ibid. W. ten. HVNTELEI. Aluui tenuit de Aldred Archi-ep'o & poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio est una car. & iiii vill'i & vi bord. cum iii car. Ibi i seruus. Silva ii leuu. l'g & i lat. Valuit xl fol. m'o xxx solid.

In WESTBERIE Hund. Id. W. ten. HOPE. Forne & Ulfeg tenuer. de rege E. & ibi v hide geld. & poterant ipsi teini ire quo voleb. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xii vill'i & unus bord. cum xii car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de xvii denar. Valuit viii lib. modo c fol.

Id. W. ten. STAURE. Ulfeg tenuit T. R. E. Valuit x fol. modo v fol. Ibi est una hida & non geldat.

Id. W. ten. ii virg. & dimid. & ibi h't i vill'm & i bord. Antecessor ejus Wihanoc tenuit sed comitatus affirmat hanc t'ram esse de d'in'ca firma regis in Wostberie. Val. iii fol.

Id. W. ten. NEUNEHAM. Ibi i hida & iii vill'i & iii bord. redd'tes xx fol. H. t'ra non geldat. Silva ibi ii qr. l'g & una lat.

In LEDENEI Hund. Id. W ten. LEDENEI. Alfer tenuit T. R. E. Ibi vi hide geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. & iii vill'i & v bord. cum ii car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de v fol. & xx ac. p'ti & in Waie dimid. piscar. Silva i leuu. l'g & dimid. lat. Valuit iii lib. modo xl solid.

Id. W. ten. HIWOLDESTONE. Ulfeg tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide. H. t'ra jussu regis est in foresta. Valet xxx fol.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Id. W. ten. HAGENEPENE & Goisfridus de eo. Eduui tenuit. Ibi v hid. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vi vill'i cum iii car. Ibi iiiiii servi. H. t'ra geldat. Valuit c fol. modo lx fol.

XXXIII. TERRA WILLELMI CAMERARIJ.

In WITELAI Hund. Will's Camerarius ten. WENECOTE. Wenric tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. & ii vill'i & ii bord. cum i car. Ibi iiiiii servi. Val. & valuit iiiiii lib. Hoc M. geldat.

XXXIII. TERRA WILL'I GOIZENBODED.

In CEOLFLEDE Hund. Will's Goizenboded ten. PEBEWORDE de rege. Vluiet & Uluardus tenuer. T. R. E. pro ii M. Ibi vi hide & una v'. In d'nio est una car. & i bord. & unus servus. Valuit vii lib. modo iiiiii lib. & x solid.

Id. W. ten. WENITONE. unus tainus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi v hide. In d'nio f't ii car. & ii vill'i & unus francig. ten. i hid. & dimid. cum i car.

Hoc M. misit Algar Com. in Pebeuorde. Valuit x fol. modo xl fol.

Id. W. ten. CLOPTUNE. Hufcarle tenuit T. R. E. Ibi x hide. In d'nio iii car. & xii vill'i & iiiiii bord. & unus radchenist. cum viiii car. In Wicelcombe unus burg'fis. Valuit viii lib. modo c solid.

In WITELAI Hund. Id. Will's ten BRISTENTUNE. Brifmar tenuit. Ibi x hide. In d'nio iiiiii car. & xviii vill'i & iiiiii bord. cum xiiii car. Ibi viii servi & iii ancillæ & ii molini de xv solid. Valuit xii lib. modo vii lib.

In SALEMANESBERIE Hund. Id. Will's ten. Callicote & Rannulfus de eo. Aluvinus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio iii car. & viiii inter servos & ancillas. Valuit lx fol. modo xl fol.

Id. W. ten. AILEWRDE. Aluvinus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi una hida geld. In d'nio i car. & ii servi. Valuit vi fol. modo iii fol.

In HOLEFORD Hund. Id. Will's ten. FERNECOTE. Aluvinus tenuit. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio ii car. & iiiiii vill'i cum iiiiii car. & xiiii inter servos & ancillas. Goisfridus ten. de Will'o. Valuit x lib. modo iii lib.

Id. W. ten. GETINGE. Rex E. tenuit & accommodavit eum Aluino, Vicecomiti suo, ut in Vita sua habet. Non tam dono dedit ut comitatus testat. Mortuo v'o Aluino Rex W. dedit Richardo cuidam juveni uxorem ejus & t'ram. N'c Will's successor Richardi ita ten. hanc t'ram. Ibi x hide harum viiii geldant. In d'nio sunt iiiiii car. & iiiiii vill'i & iii francig. & ii radchenist. & p'br cum ii bord. Inter om's h'nt v car. Int. servos & Ancillas xi & ii molini de xiiii solid. Ibi v salinæ redd't xx summas salis. In Wicelcombe ii burgenfes redd't xi fol. & iiiiii denar. Valuit xvi lib. modo vi lib.

Id. W. ten. CATESLAT. Aluvinus tenuit. Ibi ii hide geld. In d'nio ii car. & iiiiii servi & molin. de v solid. Valuit xl solid. modo x solid.

In BOTELAU Hund. Id. W. ten. TETINTON. Aluvinus tenuit. Ibi vi hide. In d'nio est una car. & viiii vill'i & vii bord. cum viiii car. Valuit vi lib. modo iii lib.

In BERINTONE Hund. Id. W. ten. ii hide in BERINTONE & Radulfus de eo. Aluvinus tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio est una car. & unus servus & molin. de xl den. & vi ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit xl fol.

In WESTBERIE Hund. Id. W. ten. dimid. hid. t're & dimid. piscaria. Aluvinus Vicecom. tenuit & uxori sue dedit. H. t'am suer. de firma Regis in Westberie.

In GRETESTAN Hund. Id. W. ten. in DVN. BENTVNE i hid. Sauvinus tenuit T. R. E. & potuit ire quo voluit. Valuit xx solid. modo xii solid.

XXXV. TERRA WILL'I FILIJ WIDON.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Will's filius Widonii ten. de rege DIRHAM. Aluric tenuit T. R. E. Ibi vii hide geld. In d'nio est una car. & xiiii vill'i & xiiii bord. cum ii car. Ibi viiii int. servos & ancillas & iii molini de xv solid. & vi ac. p'ti. Valuit xii lib. modo viiii lib.

Id. Will's tenuit iii hid. hujus M. Quibus Durandus vicecom. saifierat S. MARIAM de Perfore jussu regis quas W. Com. dederat Turstino filio Rolf cum hoc M.

XXXVI. TERRA WILL'I FROISSELEW.

In DUDESTAN Hund. Will's Froisseleuu. ten. de rege ULETONE. Godric tenuit. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & iiiiii bord. & iiiiii servi. Valuit xxx fol. modo lx fol.

In WITELAI Hund. Id. W. ten. in CONNOCOTE dimid. hid. geld. Ibi erat i car. & iiiiii servi. Valuit xx fol. modo iii solid. Brittric tenuit T. R. E.

In GRETESTAN Hund. Id. W. ten. in LITENTUNE i hidam. Godric tenuit. In d'nio sunt ii car. & ii bord. & iii servi & molin. de iiiiii solid. Valuit xl fol. modo xxx fol. et geld.

XXXVII. TERRA WILL'I FILLIJ NORMAN.

In LANGEBRIGE Hund. Will's filius Norman ten. MORCOTE. Ulfegh tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida. In d'nio est una car. cum ii bord. Valuit viii fol. modo x fol. H. t'ra non geld.

In WESTBERIE Hund. Id. Will's ten. BICANOFRE. Morganan tenuit. T. R. E. Ibi dimid. hida. In d'nio est dim. car. cum vi bord. Valuit v fol. modo x fol.

Id. W. ten. in DENE ii hid. et ii virg. t'ræ et dimid. Has tenuer. iii teini, Godric, Elric, et Ernui, T. R. E. In d'nio sunt iii car. Ibi xxxviii bord. h'ntes vii car. et dimid. et tres ex eis redd't viiii solid. Valuit xxxiiii fol. modo xliiii solid. Has t'ras c'cessit rex E. quietas a geldo pro foresta custod.

In BOTELAU Hund. Id. W. ten. TATINTON. Ulgar tenuit de rege E. H. t'ra lib'a est. Ibi sunt vi bord. cum i car. Val. et valuit xx solid. Ibi una virg. t'ræ jacet ad forestam et redd. xii denar.

In BLIDESLAWE Hund. Id. W. ten. i hid. et dim. v't're. Siuardus et Winstan tenuer. In d'nio sunt ii car. et xvii bord. cum v car. Valuit xv fol. modo xxx fol.

XXXVIII. TERRA WILL'I LEURIC.

In CILTEHAM Hund. Will's Leuric ten. de rege LECHANTONE. Ofgot tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. et ii vill'i et viiii bord. cum i car. Ibi iiiiii servi. Silva una qr. l'g et una lat. Val. et valuit xl fol.

In GRETESTAN Hund. Id. W. ten. HEILE. Ofgot tenuit T. R. E. Ibi xi hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. et viiii vill'i et xi bord. cum viiii car. Ibi erant xii servi quos Will'us liberos fecit. Ibi molin. de x solid. Silva una leuua l'g et dimid. lat. Valuit xii lib. modo viiii lib. Hoc M. geldat.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Id. W. ten. WITETUNE. Ofgot tenuit. Ibi iii hide et geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. et vi vill'i et unus radchen. et iiiiii bord. cum iiiiii car. Ibi molin. de x fol. Silva una leuua l'g et dimid. lat. Valuit c fol. modo lx fol.

Id. W. ten. in SCIPETVNE iii hid. una v' minus et geld. Goisfridus ten. de eo. Ofgot tenuit. In d'nio f't ii car. et p'br et i vill's et iiiiii servi sine car. Valuit xl fol. modo xx fol.

In BRADELEG Hund. Id. W. ten. TVRGHEDENE et Goisfridus de eo. Ofgot tenuit. Ibi v hide et una v' et dimid. In d'nio nichil. Ibi sunt ii vill'i et iii bord. cum i car. H. t'ra geld. Valuit iiiiii lib. modo x lib.

XXXIX. TERRA ROGERIJ DE LACI.

In BOTELAU Hund. ROGERIUS DE LACI ten. de rege CHENEPELEI. Edricus et Leuricus tenuer. T. R. E. pro ii M. et poterant ire quo volebant. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt iii car. et x vill'i et vii bord. cum xii car. Ibi vii servi. Valuit iiiiii lib. modo c fol.

Id. Rogerius ten. HORSENEHAL. Turchil tenuit de ^{Com. Herald} et poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. et v vill'i vill'i et iii bord. cum v car. Ibi ii servi et in Glouuecest. iii burgenfes de xv den. Val. et valuit xl fol.

Ibid. Rog. ten. CRASOWEL & Odo de eo. Ulfel tenuit T. R. E. & poterat ire quo vellet. Ibi i hida & una v'. In d'nio est una car. & iii vill'i & un. bord. cum iii car. Val. & valuit xx fol.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. Iccumbe & Radulfus de eo. Haldene tenuit. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio sunt ii car. & ii vill'i & ii bord. cum una car. Ibi iii servi & iii ancillæ. Val. & valuit xl fol. H. t'ra geld.

Ibid. Rog. ten. RISEDUNE & Hugo de eo. Ibi viii hide geld'tes. Aluuard, & Achil, & Aluuard, & Uluui tenuer. pro iii M. In d'nio sunt vii car. & iii vill'i cum ii car. Ibi xii servi & ii ancillæ. Ibi molin. de x solid. Val. & valuit vii lib. & x fol.

In HOLEFORD Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. GETINGE. Ibi x hide geld. p'ter d'nicum q'd non geld. Brietric tenuit teinus regis Ed. In d'nio sunt v car. & xxv vill'i et p'br & vii radchen. cum xviii car. Ibi xviii int. servos & ancillas & iii molini de xxiii solid. & salina de xx fol. & xii summas falis & in Wincelcumbe iii burgenfes de xxxii den. & in Glouuec. ii burg'fes de x den. De silva & pastura xl gallinas. Val. & valuit x lib.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. TANTESBORNE & Gisleb'tus de eo. Keneuardus tenuit teinus regis E. & poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio est i car. & ii vill'i & ii bord. cum i car. & dimid. Ibi ii servi. Val. xl fol. & valuit.

In BISELEGE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. Wiche. Ibi una hida geld. Ernesi tenuit. In d'nio est i car. & xxxv vill'i & xvi bord. & p'br & iii radchen. Inter om's h'nt iii car. Ibi xi servi & iii molini de xxiii fol. Silva v leuu. l'g & ii lat. Valuit xx lib. modo xxiii lib. Ipse teinus poterat ire quo voleb.

In hac t'ra ten. S. MARIA de Cirecestre i vill'in & partem silve. Hoc concessit ei W. Rex. Val. x fol.

Ibid. Rog. ten. EGESWORDE. Ibi i hida & dimid. geld. Eluuinus tenuit. In d'nio sunt iii car. & iii vill'i et iii bord. cum ii car. Ibi ii lib'i ho'es cum ii car. Ibi xv servi & molin. de xxx den. & ii ac. p'ti. Silva i leuaa l'g & dimid. lat. Val. & valuit vi lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. dimid. hidam cum i piscaria in Waie & ibi i vill's cum una car. H. t'ra vocatur MODIETE. Val. & valuit xx fol. Brietric tenuit.

Ibid. Rog. ten. dimid. hida in TEDEHAM. ^{Arch.} ^{Stigandus} tenuit. Ibi i vill's cum i car. & iii piscarie & dimid. Val. et valuit xx fol.

In BRICWOLDESBERG Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. QUENINTONE. Ibi viii hide. Tres lib'i ho'es tenuer. Dodo & alt. Dodo & Aluoldus pro iii M. & poterant ire quo voleb. & geld. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xx vill'i & vii bord. & p'br & p'positus. Inter om's h'nt xii car. & ii radchen. cum i car. Ibi xii servi & ii molin. de xx fol. & x ac. p'ti. In Glouuec. i burg'fis redd. iii foccos, & fab. i redd. ii fol. Valuit viii lib. modo x lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. LECCE & Will's de eo. Ibi v hide. Aluuinus tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xii vill'i & i bord. cum v car. Ibi v servi & viii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit vi lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. HETROPE & Will's de eo. Ibi ii hide. Dunning tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio sunt ii car. & iii vill'i & iii bord. cum i car. Ibi vi servi. Val. & valuit c fol.

In BERNINTONE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. WENRIC & Radulfus de eo. Ibi ii hide. W. Luric tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio est i car. & iii vill'i & ii bord. cum i car. Ibi v servi & molin. de v fol. & x ac. p'ti. Valuit c fol. modo iii lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. ibid. unam hid. & unam v' & Hugo de eo. Godric tenuit teinus regis E. In d'nio est i car. & ii bord. & unus servus & molin. de iii fol. & viii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit xxiii solid.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. STRATONE. Ibi v hide geld. preter dominium. Edmundus tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio sunt iii car. & xvi vill'i & vii bord. cum p'bro h'ntes ix car. Ibi v servi & ii molini de xx solid. Valuit viii lib. modo vi lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. SUINTONE & mat. ejus ten. de sua dote. Ibi vi hide. Godricus & Leuvinus tenuer. pro ii M. In d'nio sunt iii car. & viii vill'i & vi bord. & p'br cum vii car. Ibi ii servi & molinum de x fol. Valuit viii lib. modo viii lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. ACHELIE. Ibi i hida & dimid. Leuvinus tenuit modo ten. Girardus de Rog. In d'nio sunt ii car. & ii vill'i cum p'bro h'ntes ii car. & dimid. Ibi viii servi. Valuit iii lib. modo iii lib.

In SALESMANESBERIE Hund. Ibid. Roger & mat. ejus ten. SCLOSTRE. Ibi iii hide. Offa & Leuvinus tenuer. pro ii M. & poterant ire quo voleb. In d'nio sunt iii car.

& iii bord. & viii servi & molin. de xii solid. Val. & valuit vi lib. De his iii hid. geldab. i hid. singul. annis pro x solid. ad opus regis.

In GRETETAN Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. WORMETVN. Walt. f. Ercold. de eo. Ibi v hide geld. Eduui tenuit. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vi vill'i cum ii car. Ibi ii servi & molin. de viii solid. & x ac. p'ti. Valuit c fol. modo iii lib.

XL. TERRA ROGERIJ DE BELMONT.

In CEOLFLEDE Hund. ROGERUS de Belmont ten. DORSINTUNE & Rob'tus de eo. Ibi x hide. Saxi tenuit. In d'nio iii car. & viii vill'i cum v car. & vi servi. Valuit viii lib. modo c solid.

XLI. TERRA ROGERIJ DE LUERI.

In BRADELEGE Hund. ROGERIUS DE LUREI ten. HANTONE. Ibi x hide. ^{Arch.} ^{Eldred} tenuit. Rex E. ded. ei ii hid. quietas ex his x ut dicunt. In d'nio sunt iii car. & x vill'i cum p'bro & i bord. cum v car. Ibi xi servi & in Wincelcumbe x burg'fes redd't lxxv denar. Valuit viii lib. modo vi lib.

In LANGETREWES Hund. Ibidem Rog. ten. TETEBERIE Ibi xxiii hide geld. Siuuard tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio f't viii car. & xxxii vill'i & ii bord. & ii radchen. cum p'bro inter om's h'ntes xiiii car. Ibi xviii servi & molin. de xv den. & pastura de x solid. & x ac. p'ti.

Ibid. Roger ten. UPTONE. Ibi ii hide & una v' geld. Aluricus tenuit de rege E. In d'nio sunt ii car. & v vill'i & iii bord. cum iii car. Ibi viii servi. Hec duo M. T. R. E. val'b. xxxiii lib. modo sunt ad firmam pro l. lib.

Ibid. Rog. ten. Culcortone. Aluric tenuit & Anschitil de eo. Ibi i hida & dim. In d'nio ii car. & iii servi. Valuit xx fol. modo xxx solid.

Ibid. Roger ten. HASEDENE. Ibi iii hide & iii virg. geld. Elnoc tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio sunt iii car. & vii ^{dimidii} vill'i & i bord. cum iii car. & xvii servi & dimid. molin. de xxx denar. & xv ac. p'ti. Hoc M. tenuit qidam ho. Rog. de ep'o baioc'fi pro xvi lib. postea ded. ep's eidem Rogerio cum firma.

XLII. TERRA ROGERIJ DE BERCHELAI.

In RESPIGETE Hund. ROGERIUS de BERCHELAI ten. COBERLEIE. Ibi x hide. Dena tenuit teinus Regis E. In d'nio sunt ii car. & xviii vill'i & iii bord. cum v car. Ibi iii servi & v ac. p'ti. Silva iii qr. l'g & ii lat. Valuit vii lib. modo viii lib.

In HEDREDESTAN Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. Dodintone. Ibi iii hide & ii p'tes dimid. hide. Aluuinus tenuit T. R. E. In d'nio est i car. & vii vill'i & iii bord. cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & x ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit iii lib.

In PULCRECERCE Hund. Ibid. Rog. ten. SISTONE. Anne tenuit. Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio sunt ii car. & viii vill'i & x bord. cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & viii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit c solid.

XLIII. TERRA RADULFI DE BERCHELAI.

In PULCHECERCE Hund. RADULFUS frater ip'ius Rogerii ten. de rege WAPELIE. Ibi i hida. Godricus tenuit. In d'nio est una car. & iii servi. Val. & valuit xx solid.

In BLACELEW Hund. Ibid. Rad. ten. STANLEGE. Ibi iii hide & dim. Godricus & Wisnodus tenuer. p. ii M. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vi vill'i & xiiii bord. cum xii car. Ibi v servi & x ac. p'ti. Valuit & val. c solid.

XLIII. TERRA RADULFI PAGENEL.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. RADVLVVS Pagenel ten. TORENTVNE et Radulfus de eo. Ibi iii hide et dimid. geld. Merlesuen tenuit. In d'nio sunt iii car. & x vill'i & i bord. cum iii car. Ibi x servi. Valuit x lib. modo c solid.

In LANGETREWES Hund. Teneb. Rog. de Iurei unam v' t'ræ & dimid. de Rad. Pagenel quam utriq; derelinquerunt.

XLV. TERRA RADULFI DE TODENI.

In WITELAI Hund. RADULFUS de Todeni ten. CHEURINGAURDE & Rogerius de eo. Ibi x hide. Brismar tenuit. In d'nio iii car. & xiii vill'i & unus radchen. cum vi car. & viii inter servos & ancillas. Valuit viii lib. modo vi lib.

In SALEMNES-

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. Id. Radulfus ten. Icumbe & Rog. de eo. Ibi x hide geldantes. In d'no iii car. & xii vill'i & ii bord. cum vii car. Ibi viii servi. Val. & valuit vii lib.

In BOTELAU Hund. Id. Rad. ten. BRUNMBERGE. Ibi v hide. ^{Com.} Heraldus tenuit. In d'no est i car. & xi vill'i & viii bord. cum xiiii car. Ibi unus servus. Silva ii leuu. l'g & una lat. Valuit viii lib. modo c solid.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. Radulfus ten. HAREHILLE & Rogerius de eo. Ibi v hide. Elric Aluinus & Uluricus tenuer. p. iii M. Id. Radulfus ten. OMENIE & CERNEI & Rogerius de eo. Ibi iii hide. Quatuor teini tenuer. p. iii M. & poterant ire quo voleb. In d'no x car. & i vill's & i bord. Ibi xxi serv. & molin. de v fol. & xxx ac. pr'ti. Valeb. x lib. modo vi lib.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. Id. Rad. ten. SUELLE & Drogo de eo. Ernesi tenuit. Ibi vii hide geld. In d'no sunt iii car. & x vill'i cum vi car. & molin. de vii fol. & vi den. Valuit viii lib. modo vii lib.

XLVI. TERRA ROBERTI DE TODENI.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. ROTBERTUS de Toden ten. RISENDONE. Ulf tenuit. Ibi xiii hide geld. In d'no sunt iii car. & xxiii vill'i & vi bord. cum x car. Ibi viii inter servos & ancillas & molinus de x fol. & unus burg'fis in Glouuecest. de iii den. Valuit xii lib. modo x lib.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Rob'tus ten. HOREDONE. Ibi x hide geld. Ulf tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xi vill'i & viii bord. cum viii car. Ibi vii servi & molin. de vi solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Silva ii leuu. & una lat. Valuit xii lib. modo vii lib.

In BISELEGE Hund. Id. Rob'tus ten. SAPLETORNE & FRANTONE. In uno v hide & in alio v hide. Ulf tenuit. In d'no sunt vii car. & xvii vill'i & viii bord. cum x car. Ibi xiii servi & ii molini de vi solid. Silva dimid. leuua l'g & ii qr. lat. H. ii M. T. R. E. val'b. xiiii lib. simul modo xvi lib.

XLVII. TERRA ROBERTI DISPENSAT.

In GRETESTANE Hund. ROTBERTUS Dispensator ten. WICUENE. Ibi x hide geld. Balduinus tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xxxii vill'i & x bord. cum xii car. Ibi i servus & ii molini de x fol. & x ac. p'ti. In Wincelcumbe i burgenfis de xvi den. Valuit xii lib. modo xvi lib.

XLVIII. TERRA ROBERTI DE OILGI.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. ROTBERTUS de Olgi ten. RISENDVNE. Ibi x hide geld. Siuuard tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xii vill'i & ii bord. cum. v car. Ibi viii servi & ii molini de xx solid. Valuit x lib. modo viii lib.

In BRADELEG Hund. Id. Rotb'tus ten. TURCHEDENE. Ibi v hide & ii virg. & dimid. geld. Siuuard tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. et xii vill'i cum vi car. Ibi viii inter servos et ancill. Valuit vi lib. modo c fol.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. ROGERUS de Olgi ten. NIWETONE de Osb'no f. Ricardi. Ibi v hide geld. Turstan tenuit. In d'no ii car. et viii vill'i cum iii car. et dimid. Val. iii lib.

XLIX. TERRA RICARDI LEGATI.

In HEDREDESTAN. Hund. RICARDUS Legatus ten. de rege TORMENTONE. Ibi viii hide. Alricus tenuit de rege E. In d'no s't vi car. et xx vill'i et iii bord. et p'br et unus radechen. Int. om's xii car. h'nt. Ibi xii servi. Valuit xii lib. modo xv lib.

L. TERRA OSBERNI GIFARD.

In LANGELEIE Hund. OSBERNUS Gifard ten. de rege ROCHEMTUNE. Ibi iii hide geld. Dunne tenuit T. R. E. In d'no sunt ii car. et vi vill'i et vii bord. cum iii car. Ibi v servi et xx ac. p'ti et salina ad Wich de iii summis falis. Silva i leuua l'g et dim. lat. Val. vi lib.

In LETBERG Hund. Id. Osb'nus ten. STOICHE. Ibi v hide geld. Dunne tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. et viii vill'i et iii bord. et p'br cum viii car. Ibi iii servi. Valuit vi lib. modo viii lib.

In RESPIGET Hund. Id. Osb'nus ten. BRIMES. FELDE. Ibi viii hid. geld. Duns tenuit de ^{Com.} Heraldus. In d'no sunt iii car. et xvi vill'i et vi bord. et p'br cum xii car. Ibi viii servi et iii ancillæ et ii molini de lxxiii den. In Glouuec. v burg'fes de ii fol. Val. et valuit xii lib.

Id. Osb'nus ten. ALDEBERIE sed non p'tinuit ad Duns h'o t'ra quam Osb'nus ten. ut scira dicit. Eilricus tenuit et potuit ire quo voluit. Ibi i hida et i car. Val. et valuit x fol.

LI. TERRA GOISFRIDI ORLETEILE.

GOISFRIDUS ORLETEILE ten. de rege in BAUDINTUNE ii hid. et unam v' geld. Bolli tenuit. Non est in d'no q'd. Ibi ii vill'i et viii bord. cum iii car. Val. et valuit lx fol. Ibi viii ac. p'ti.

LII. TERRA GISLEB'TI FILIJ TUROLD.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. GISLEBERTUS filius Turoldi ten. in ACHELIE i hid. de rege et Osulfus de eo. Keneward tenuit T. R. E. In d'no sunt ii car. et iii bord. et vi servi. Valuit xl solid. modo xxx solid.

Id. Gisleb'tus ten. in TURSBERIE dim. hida et Ofuard de eo. Aluardus tenuit. In d'no est i car. Valuit x fol. modo xv fol.

In RESPIGET Hund. Id. Gisleb'tus ten. CERNEI. Ibi vii hide. Elaf et fr. ejus duo teini tenuer. pro ii M. et poterant ire quo voleb. In d'no s't iii car. et vii vill'i et vi bord. cum v car. Ibi vi servi et molin. de viii solid. et vi ac. pr'ti. Silva ii qr. l'g et una lat. Ibi iii milites Gisleb'ti h'nt cum suis ho'ibus vii car. et molin. de viii fol. Tot. T. R. E. val'b. xiiii lib. modo xii lib.

Id. Gisl. ten. RINDECOMBE. Ibi v hide geld. Aluricus tenuit. In d'no est i car. et iii vill'i et vii bord. cum iii car. Ibi vii servi et unus francig. ten. t'ram duor. villor. et molin. de viii solid. et iii ac. pr'ti. Valuit vii lib. modo c solid.

Id. Gisl. ten. RINDECUMBE et Walterius de eo. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'no s't ii car. et iii vill'i et iii bord. cum ii car. Ibi vi servi et molin. de v solid. et iii ac. pr'ti. Val. et valuit vi lib.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. Id. Gisleb'tus ten. ELEWRDE et Walterus de eo. Aluinus tenuit. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'no ii car. et iii vill'i cum ii car. et vi inter servos et ancillas. Val. et valuit xl fol.

Id. Gisl. ten. HURFORD. Alfer tenuit. Ibi i hida geld. In d'no ii car. iii vill'i et i bord. cum ii car. et li servi et molin. de v fol. Val. et valuit xl solid.

LIII. TERRA DURANDI DE GLOWEC.

In WESTBERIE Hund. DURANDUS Vicecomes ten. unum M. de iii hid. Aluold tenuit et geldab. In d'no est i car. et iii vill'i et iii bord. cum iii car. Ibi ii servi. Valuit lx fol. modo xl fol.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. Durandus ten. in ESBROC i hid. et Miles ejus qidam de eo. In d'no i car. et i bord. et i servus. Val. et valuit x solid.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. Durandus ten. ii hid. in DUNTESBORNE et Radulfus de eo. Wluuardus tenuit pro M. de rege E. In d'no sunt ii car. et iii vill'i et unus bord. cum i car. Ibi iii servi et ii ac. pr'ti. Val. et valuit xl fol.

In LANGETREU Hund. Id. Durandus ten. CULCORTONE et Rogerus Ivri de eo. Ibi ii hide et ii v' et dimid. Grim tenuit. In d'no s't ii car. et vi vill'i cum iii car. Val. et valuit iii lib.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Durandus ten. DEDMERTONE et Anschitil de eo. Ibi iii hide geld. Leuinus tenuit de ^{Com.} Heraldus. In d'no sunt iii car. et viii bord. cum i car. et iii servi et vi ac. pr'ti. Valuit xxx fol. modo xl fol.

In DVNESTANE Hund. Id. Durandus ten. WADUNE. Ibi v hide. Quinque fr's tenuer. pro v M. et poterant ire quo voleb. et pares erant. In d'no s't v car. et unus vill's et vii bord. cum v car. T. R. E. valeb. viii lib. m'o c solid.

In CELFLEDETORNE Hund. Id. Durandus ten. CHIESNECOTE et Walterius de eo. Ibi ii hide et dim. Leuinus et Leui tenuer. pro ii M. In d'no sunt ii car. et iii bord. Val. xl fol. modo lx solid.

In SALEMNESBERIE Hund. Id. Durandus ten. ICCUMBE et Walterius de eo. Ibi ii hide geld. Turstan tenuit. In d'no ii car. et ii vill'i et li bord. cum i car. et vi inter servos et ancillas. Valuit xxx fol. modo xl fol.

In WACRES-

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Id. Durandus ten. SCRIPTUNE & Radulfus de eo. Eduui tenuit. Ibi iii hide & dimid. geld. In d'no sunt ii car. & iii vill'i cum ii car. & iii servi & x ac. p'ti. Valuit iii lib. modo xl fol.

In WITESTAN Hund. Id. Durandus ten. in HERSEFELD vii hide geld. Godrick & Edric ii fr's tenuer. pro ii M. & poterant ire quo voleb. In d'no sunt iii car. & viiii vill'i & xi bord. cum viiii car. Ibi iii servi & v figuli redd't xliiii den. Silva dimid. leuua l'g & iii qr. lat. Val. & valuit vi lib.

Id. Durandus ten. MORTUNE. Ibi iii hide geld. Anti tenuit. In d'no est i car. & iii vill'i & vi bord. cum iii car. & dimid. Ibi iii servi & xx ac. p'ti. Valuit iii lib. modo xl fol.

In GRETETAN Hund. Id. Durandus ten. LITETUNE & Randulfus de eo. Ibi dimid. hida geld. Leuenot tenuit pro uno M. Ibi est una car. Val. & valuit x solid.

In WITELAI Hund. In CONDICOTE ten. Os'nus de Durando i hid. & dimid. Val. & valuit xx fol.

LIIII. TERRA DROGONIS FILIJ PONZ.

In BLACHELEU Hund. DROGO Filius Ponz ten. de rege FRANTONE. Ibi x hide geld. Ernest tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & x vill'i & viiii bord. cum vi car. Ibi ix servi & molin. de x solid. & x ac. p'ti. Silva i leuua l'g & iii qr. lat. In Glouuec. i burg'fis de vi den. Val. & valuit c solid. De hoc M. ten. Rog. de Laci i hid. injuste.

In BRICSTUOLDES Hund. Idem Drogo ten. LECE. Ibi x hide geld. Cola tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xv vill'i & iii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi viiii servi & molin. de x solid. & x ac. p'ti. Valuit viii lib. modo x lib.

LV. TERRA WALTERIJ FILIJ PONZ.

In BRICSTUOLDES Hund. WALTERIUS Filius Ponz ten. de rege LECE. Ibi x hide geld. Tofti Com. tenuit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xvi vill'i & vi bord. & p'br cum viii car. Ibi xii servi & molin. de x solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Valuit xii lib. modo xv lib.

LVI. TERRA WALTERIJ FILIJ ROGER.

In BERNINTON Hund. Walterius Filius Rogerij ten. de rege BERNINTONE. Ibi viii hide. Turstan & Eduui tenuer. pro ii maner. In d'no sunt iii car. & xiiii vill'i & p'br & ii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi xiiii servi & molin. de x solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit viii lib.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. Walterus ten. CERNEI. Ibi xiiii hide & una v'. ^{Arch.} Stigandus tenuit. In d'no sunt ii car. & xxv vill'i & p'br & viiii bord. cum x car. Ibi iii servi & c ac. p'ti & iii molini fuer. de xxx solid. Val'b. xvi lib. modo xii lib.

Hoc M. calumniatum est ad eccl'am S. MARIE de Abendone sed om'is Comitatus testificatus est ^{Arch.} Stigandus x Annis tenuisse vivente E. Rege. Hoc M. ded. W. Com. Rogerio vicecomiti patri Walterij.

LVII. TERRA WALTERIJ DIACONI.

In WITELAI Hund. Walterius Diaconus ten. de rege CHESNECOTE. Ibi iii hide & dimid. Goduinus tenuit & potuit ire quo voluit. In d'no ii car. & viii vill'i cum vi car. & x servi Val. & valuit iii lib.

LVIII. TERRA WALTERIJ BALISTAR.

In WESTBERIE Hund. WALTERIUS Ba- listarius ten. de rege BULELEGE. Ibi iii hide geld. Tovi tenuit de rege E. In d'no sunt ii car. & iii vill'i & vi bord. cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & x ac. p'ti. In Glouuec. unus burg'fis redd. xviii den. Valuit lx fol. modo xl fol.

Id. Walter. ten. RODELE. Ibi i hida geld. Tovi tenuit. In d'no est i car. & ii vill'i & iii bord. cum ii car. Valuit xl fol. modo x fol.

In BLIDESLAU Hund. Id. Walt. ten. dimid. hidam que non geldat. Palli tenuit. Ibi est molin. Val. xviii folid.

In LANGELEI Hund. Id. Walter. ten. FRANTONE. Ibi v hide geld. Alestan tenuit de Boscombe. In d'no est i car. & x vill'i & xi bord. cum v car. Ibi v servi & ii molini de v solid. Ibi & eccl'a q. non fuit. Valuit viii lib. modo iii lib.

LIX. TERRA HENRICI DE FERIERES.

In BRICTUOLDEBERG Hund. HENRICUS de Ferreres ten. LECELADE. ^{Bar.} Siuuard tenuit. Ibi xv hide T. R. E. geldantes fed ipse Rex c'cessit vi hid. quietas a geldo. Hoc testat. om'is comitatus & ipse qd Sigillum Regis detulit. In d'no sunt iii car. & xxviii vill'i & x bord. & unus Francig. ten. t'ram unius vill'i. Int. om's h'nt xvi car. Ibi xiii servi & iii molini de xxx solid. & piscaria de cc anguill. xxv minus. De pratis vii lib. & vii fol. p'ter fenum boum. In Wicelcumbe ii burgenfes redd. xvi den. & unus in Glouuec. sine censu. Tot. M. T. R. E. val'b. xx lib. & modo similiter.

LX. TERRA ERNULFI DE HESDING.

In BRICTUOLDESBERG Hund. HERNULFUS de Helsing ten. CHENEMERESFORDE. Ibi xxi hida geld. Osgot tenuit de ^{Com.} Heraldo. In d'no sunt vi car. & xxxviii vill'i & viiii bord. & i radchen. cum xviii car. Ibi xiiii servi & iii molini de xl fol. & xl den. Et de p'tis viiii lib. p't' pasturam boum & de ouili cxx pensas caseorum. In Glouuec. vii burgenfes redd. ii solid. Tot. T. R. E. val'b. xxx lib. modo lxvi lib. & vi fol. & iii den.

Id. Hernulf. ten. Etherope. Ibi vii hide. Uluuardus tenuit. In d'no sunt vi car. & xxiii vill'i cum x car. Ibi xii servi & molin. de xv solid. Valuit viii lib. modo xii lib.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. Hernulf. ten. in OMENIE iii hide & ii virg. & dim. Elricus & Godricus tenuer. pro ii M. In d'no sunt iii car. & vii vill'i & ii bord. cum ii car. Ibi iii servi. Tot. valuit & val. vi lib.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Hernulf. ten. ALDEBERIE. Ibi v hide geld. Edricus tenuit. In d'no f't iii car. & iii vill'i cum iii car. & ibi viiii servi & unus francig. h'ns i car. Ibi vi ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit x lib.

Id. Hernulfus ten. MADMINTUNE. Ibi iii hide geld. Edricus tenuit. In d'no f't ii car. & vi vill'i & viii bord. cum p'b'ro h'nt xiii car. Ibi viiii servi & viii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit x lib.

Id. Hernulfus ten. ACHETONE. Ibi v hide geld. Edricus tenuit. In d'no f't iii car. & iii vill'i & iii bord. cum iii car. Ibi xv ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit c fol.

In SINSHOVEDES Hund. Id. Hernulfus ten. HANUN & Humbaldus de eo. Edric tenuit. Ibi dimid. hida. In d'no f't ii car. cum viii bord. & iii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit xl solid.

LXI. TERRA HERALDI FILIJ COMITIS RAD.

HERALDUS filius ^{Com.} Radulfi ten. de rege SUDLEGE. ^{Pat' ejus} Radulfus tenuit. Ibi x hide geld. In d'no sunt iii car. & xviii vill'i & viii bord. cum xiii car. Ibi xiiii int. servos & ancillas & vi molini de lii solid. Silva iii leuu. l'g & ii lat.

Idem Heraldus ten. TODINTUN. ^{Pat' ejus} tenuit. Ibi x hide geld. In d'no f't iii car. & xvii vill'i & vii bord. & ii lib. ho'es. Int. om's h'nt viii car. Ibi x int. servos & ancill. & ii molin. de xx solid. De una falina l. mittas sal. H. duo M. Val. & valuer. xl lib.

LXII. TERRA HUGON. DE GRENTEM.

In CEOLFLEDE Hund. HUGO de Grente- maisnil ten. PEBEWORDE. Ibi ii hide & una v' Duo teini tenuer. pro ii M. Ibi iii car. & i vill's & unus bord. & vii servi.

Id. Hugo ten. MERESTUNE. Ibi ii hid. Id. Hugo ten. QUENINTUNE. Ibi ii hide. Unus teinus tenuit. In d'no ii car. & v vill'i & i bord. cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & una ancilla. Valuer. vii lib. m'o iii lib.

Id. Hugo ten. QUENINTUNE & Rogerus de eo. Ibi xii hide. Balduinus tenuit T. R. E. In d'no iii car. & xvii vill'i & ii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi vii servi. Valuit vii lib. modo vi lib.

Id. Hugo ten. WESTONE & Rogerus de eo. Ibi iii hide. Balduinus tenuit. In d'no ii car. & vi vill'i cum iii car. Ibi iii servi & v ancille & molin. de x sol. Val. vii lib. modo vi lib.

Id. Hugo ten. WILCOTE & Clericus ejus de eo. Ibi ii hide & dimid. In d'no ii car. & ii vill'i & i bord. cum i car. Ibi iii servi & una ancilla. Valuit xl fol. modo xxx. Leuricus tenuit.

LXIII. TERRA HUGONIS LASNE.

In DUDESTAN Hund. HUGO Lafne ten. de rege BROCOWARDINGE. Ibi v hide. Turchil tenuit de rege E. In d'no f't ii car. & viii vill'i & vi bord. & p'br & ii lib'i ho'es & p'positus. Int. om'es h'nt xv car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de ii solid. Silva una leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Valuit vi lib. modo c solid.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Id. Hugo ten. SCIPTVNE. Ibi v hide geld. Uuluard tenuit. In d'nio sunt ii car. & iiii vill'i & i bord. cum ii car. Ibi v servi & molin. de x solid. Valuit iiii lib. modo iii lib.

In BRADELEGE Hund. Id. Hugo ten. SALPRE-TUNE. Ibi x hide geld. Uuluard tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. & x vill'i & p'br cum vii car. ¶ et xi int. servos et ancillas et v ac. p'ti. Valuit viii lib. modo vii lib.

¶ In another copy after this mark [||] it runs thus: & vi servi & molin. de x fol. & viii ac. p'ti. Then follows Valuit as above, which is according to Sir Matthew Hale's copy.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. Hugo ten. BEN-WEDENE & Gisleb'tus de eo. Ibi iii hide geld. Wluuud tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. & v vill'i cum iii car. & vi servi & molin. de x fol. & viii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit iiii lib.

LXIII. TERRA MILONIS CRISPIN.

In DUDESTAN Hund. MILO Crispin ten. in BRUURNE iii virg. t're. Wigot tenuit. In d'nio i car. & vii bord. cum ii car. & dimid. pitcaria. Valuit xl fol. modo xxx fol.

In LANGETREU Hund. Id. Milo ten. CERINTONE & Goisfridus de eo. Haminc tenuit de rege E. Ibi ii hide geldant. In d'nio sunt iii car. & iii vill'i & viii bord. cum iii car. & dimid. Ibi xii servi & molin. de xxx den. & iiii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit iiii lib.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Milo ten. ALRELIE. Wigot tenuit. Ibi una hida. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vii vill'i & v bord. cum vii car. Ibi iiii servi & molin. de x fol. & xii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit c solid.

LXV. TERRA URSONIS DE ABETOT.

In WITELAI Hund. URSO de Wirecestre ten. in CHEISNECOTE unam hidam. Eluunus tenuit pro M. & geld. In d'nio i car. & iiii servi. Valuit xl fol. modo x solid.

LXVI. TERRA HASCOIT MUSARD.

In WITELAI Hund. Hascoit Musard ten. de rege SUINEBERIE. Chenuicelle tenuit. Ibi x hide. In d'nio iii car. & xviii vill'i & iii bord. cum viiii car. & x int. servos & ancill. & molin. de vi den. Valuit xii lib. modo x lib.

Id. Hascoit ten. i hidam in CHEISNECOTE & geld. Uluunus tenuit pro M. Ibi i car. & i bord. Val. & valuit x fol.

In SALEMANESBERIE Hund. Id. Hascoit ten. AIFORDE. Ibi v hide geld. Ernest tenuit. In d'nio f't ii car. & xii vill'i & i bord. cum v car. Ibi viii int. servos & ancill. Val. iiii lib.

In GRETESTAN Hund. Id. Hasc. ten. ESTUNE. Ibi vi hide geld. Ernest tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. & xii vill'i cum iiii car. & viiii int. servos & ancill. Ibi molin. de viii solid. & xx ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit vi lib.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. Hascoit ten. SUDINTONE. Ibi x hide geld. p'ter d'nium. Ernest tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. & viii vill'i & x bord. cum p'b'ro h'ntes v car. & dimid. Ibi vii servi & xx ac. p'ti. Valuit x lib. modo viii lib.

In BISELEGE Hund. Id. Hascoit ten. GREN-HAMSTEDE. Ibi i hida geld. Ernest tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. & viii vill'i & v bord. & p'br & unus radchen. Int. om's h'nt viiii car. Ibi x servi & viii ac. p'ti. Silva i leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Valuit c fol. m'o vii lib.

LXVII. TERRA TURSTINI FILIJ ROLF.

In GERSDONES Hund. TURSTINUS filius Rolf ten. de rege OMENIE. Ibi vii hide. Tovi tenuit de rege E. In d'nio f't iii car. & viii vill'i & p'br cum viii car. Ibi vii servi. De hac t'ra ten. Tovi ii vill'orum t'ram & quidam Miles t'ram iiii vill'orum. Ad eccl'am p'tin. dim. hida & iiii ac. p'ti. Valuit viii lib. modo vi lib.

Ibid. ten. ipse Tursten i hid. Ului tenuit pro M. et poterat ire quo voleb. In d'nio ii car. cum i bord. Valuit lx fol.

In CIRECETST. Hund. Id. Tursten. ten. in Achelie unam hid. Brietric tenuit pro Manerio de rege E. In d'nio est una car. & iii vill'i cum iii car. Ibi vi servi & iii ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit l. fol. Gervius ten. de Turstino.

In GRIMBOLDESTOU Hund. Id. Turstinus ten. HILDESLEI & Bernardus de eo. Ibi i hida. Aluricus tenuit. In d'nio f't ii car. & v dimidij vill'i & vii bord. cum ii car.

Ibi viii servi & iii molin. de xviii fol. & viii ac. p'ti. Valuit xl fol. m'o lx fol.

In BACHESTAN Hund. Id. Turst. ten. TORTEWORD. Ibi una hida. Aluuld tenuit. In d'nio sunt ii car. & vi vill'i & vii bord. cum vii car. Ibi vi servi et iii molini de xv solid. et x ac. p'ti. Silva i leuu. l'g et dimid. lat. redd. v solid. Valuit vii lib. modo c. solid.

In BLACHELAVE Hund. Id. Turst. ten. STAN-TONE. Ibi v hide. Tovi tenuit de rege E. In d'nio f't ii car. et viii vill'i et vi bord. cum x car. Ibi iiii servi et ii molini de xxxv solid. et x ac. p'ti. Silva i leuua l'g et dimid. lat. Val. et valuit c fol. De hac t'ra ten. Tovi ii hid. Elemofina Regis W. Id. Turstin. ten. FRIDORNE. Auti tenuit. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio est una car. et iii vill'i et iii bord. cum ii car. et unus servus. Val. lx solid. modo xxx fol.

LXVIII. TERRA ANSFRIDI DE CORMELIIS.

In BISELEGE Hund. ANSFRIDUS de Cormelies ten. WINESTANE. Ibi v hide. Uluuud tenuit. In d'nio f't iii car. et x vill'i et iiii bord. et unus francig. cum viii car. Ibi viii servi et molin. de xx den. Val. et valuit vii lib.

In CELFLESTORN Hund. Id. Ansfr. ten. WESTONE. Duo teini tener. unus ho. ^{Com.} alter Leurici. ^{Heraldi.} Ibi x hide pro ii M. Et poterat ire quo voleb. In d'nio iiii car. et xviii vill'i et i bord. cum viiii car. et xii servi. Valuit c fol. modo vii lib.

Id. Ansfr. ten. in NORTUNE v hid. Duo teini tener. pro ii M. et poterant ire quo voleb. In d'nio iiii car. et viiii vill'i et ii bord. cum iiii car. et x servi. Valuer. iiii lib. modo vi lib.

In WITELAI Hund. Id. A. ten. BECESHORE. Brifmer tenuit. Ibi iii hide. In d'nio iii car. et x vill'i cum vi car. et xvi servi et unus ho' redd. vi fochs. Valuit viii lib. modo vi lib.

In GRETESTAN Hund. Id. A. ten. POTESLEPE. Godric tenuit. Ibi iii hid. geld. In d'nio f't ii car. et iii vill'i et v bord. cum ii car. Ibi xi servi et ii molini de xv fol. Silva i leuua l'g et una lat. Val. c fol. m'o iiii lib.

In WACRESCUMBE Hund. Id. A. ten. in SCIPTUNE iii virg. t're. Bil tenuit pro M. et geld. In d'nio est i car. Val. et valuit x fol. Hic Bil potuit ire q'o voluit.

In BRADELEGE Hund. Id. A. ten. WINES-TUNE. Edricus, et Leuric, et Elricus tener. pro iii M. et poterant ire quo voleb. Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio sunt iiii car. et viiii vill'i & iii bord. cum v car. Ibi x int. servos et ancill. et molin. de vii fol. et vi den. et xv acre p'ti. Valb. viii lib. modo vii lib.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. A. ten. i hid. in TANTESBORNE. Elmer tenuit pro M. et potuit ire q'o voluit. In d'nio est una car. et unus vill's et ii bord. et v ancille. Valuit xl fol. m'o xx fol.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Id. A. ten. ELCHESTANE. Duo Leuuni tener. pro ii M. Ibi iiii hide et dimid. Et in COLESBORNE i hid. & dimid. Eluunus tenuit pro M. et poterant ire q'o voleb. isti iii teini. In d'nio f't ii car. et v vill'i et ii bord. cum iii car. et dimid. Ibi iii servi et x ac. p'ti. Silva dimid. leuua l'g et ii qr. lat. Medietatem hujus M. ten. un. Miles de Ansfrido et ibi h't ii car. et v vill'i et ii bord. cum iii car. et alt. Miles ten. Coleburne de eo et h't ibi dimid. car. et ii vill'i et ii bord. cum i car. et molin. de l. denar. H. val'b. viii lib. m'o vii lib. et x solid.

Id. A. ten. SIDE et Turstinus de eo. Leuunus tenuit de rege E. Ibi iii hide geld. In d'nio f't ii car. et i vill. cum p'br'o et iii bord. cum i car. et vi servi et iii ac. p'ti. Valuit iii lib. m'o xl fol.

Id. A. ten. ii v' et dimid. in DANTESBORNE et Bernardus de eo. Elmer tenuit pro M. et poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi est i bord. Val. et valuit xl solid.

Id. Ansfridus ten. i hid. & dimid. & i hid. & i hida. & i hida. PANTELIE & CHILCOT & CHILFORD & HEGE. Int. tot. iiii hid. et dimid. Uluel et Eluuard et Wiga tener. pro iii M. una hida et dim. lib'a a geldo. In d'nio f't ii car. et vii vill'i et iii bord. cum vii car. Ibi ii servi et molin. de vii fol. et vi den. Val'b. iii lib. et x fol. modo iii lib. Qui has t'ras teneb. poterant ire quo voleb.

Has t'ras et WINESTAN et TANTESBORNE sup'ius scriptas habuit Ansfridus de Walterio de Laci cum ejus nep'te accepit. Alias v'o terras ten. de rege.

LXIX. TERRA HUNFRIDI CAMERARIJ.

In WITELAI Hund. HUNFRIDUS Camerarius ten. de rege LANGEBERGE. Ibi iiii hide geld. Elfan et Blacheman

Blacheman et Edric et Alric tener. pro iiii M. et poterant ire quo voleb. In d'no erant iiii car. et iii vill'i et v bord. cum iiii car. Ibi ix servi. Valeb. xvi lib. modo c solid.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. Hunfridus ten. in OMENIE i hidam. Æluui tenuit pro M. de rege E. In d'no ii car. & iiii servi & i bord. & molin. de v fol. Val. & valuit xxv fol.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Id. H. ten. i hid. in PRESTITUNE. Æluuinus tenuit pro M. In d'no est una car. & ii servi & iii bord. cum i car. Val. & valuit xxx fol. Hic q. teneb. poterat ire q'o voleb.

Id. H. ten. i hid. in NORCOTE. Eluardus tenuit pro M. In d'no sunt ii car. & ii bord. cum dim. car. Val. & valuit xl fol. Has ii t'ras tenuit Will's de Hunfrido. Q. teneb. poterat ire q'o vol'b.

Id. H. ten. ii hid. in SUDINTONE & Anschitil de eo. Aluuard tenuit pro M. In d'no est i car. & ii bord. cum dim. car. & molin. de v solid. Val. & valuit xl fol. Q. teneb. poterat ire q'o voleb.

In BACHESTANES Hund. Id. H. ten. ACTUNE. Heroldus tenuit. Ho. Eluui H'des q'i poterat ire quo voleb. Ibi ii hide & dimid. In d'no est i car. & iii vill'i & iii bord. cum dimid. car. Ibi ii servi & molin. & dimid. de lxiii den. & v ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit xl fol.

Id. H. ten. WICHEN. Ibi iiii hide. Tres ho'es ^{F. Algar} ^{Briſtrici} tener. pro tribus Maner. T. R. E. & poterant ire q'o voleb. In d'no erant iii car. & viiii vill'i & xiiii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi v servi & xx ac. p'ti & vi qr. de filva. Val. & valuit xii lib. Has ii villas ded. Regina Hunfrido Actune & Wichen.

In GERSDONES Hund. Id. H. ten. i virg. t're in ESTBROCE & Will's de eo. Aluuius tenuit pro M. Ibi est i vill's. Val. ii fol. & valuit.

LXX. TERRA HUNFRIDI DE MEDEHAL.

In DUNESTAN Hund. HUNFRIDUS de Medehalle ten. UTONE. Pagen tenuit. Ibi i hida. In d'no i car. & iii servi & iiii bord. cum ii car. Valuit xxx solid. modo xl fol.

In WITELAI Hund. Id. Hunfridus ten. i hid. in CHEISNECOT. Aluui tenuit pro M. & geld. In d'no erant ii car. & vi servi & i bord. & val'b. l. solid. modo xii den. tant. p'pt' prata.

LXXI. HUNFRIDI COCI.

In SALESMANESBERIE Hund. HUNFRIDUS Coqus ten. in LECHETONE i hid. & ibi h't i car. cum iiii bord. & val. xv fol. & geld. Oſb'nus de Keresburg tenuit. Ordric tenuit pro M. T. R. E.

LXXII. TERRA SIGARI DE CIOCHES.

In HOLIFORDE Hund. SIGAR de Cioches ten. de rege HALLINGE. ^{Comitiſſa} ^{Goda} tenuit. Ibi x hide geld. In d'no sunt iii car. & xx vill'i & v bord. cum viiii bord. Ibi vi servi & iii ancille. Silva est ibi. Valuit vii lib. modo viii lib.

In BRADELEGE Hund. Id. Sigar ten. HASEDENE. Goda tenuit. Ibi x hide. Will's Rex c'cessit iii hid. ex his quietas a geldo ut testat. comitatus. In d'no f't iii car. & xiiii vill'i & p'br cum x car. Ibi vi servi. Valuit viii lib. modo vii lib.

Id. Sigar ten. Jeneurde. Goda tenuit. Ibi v hide. Ex his iii f't quiete a geldo per W. Regem ut dicit h'o Sigardi. In d'no f't iii car. & xiiii vill'i & ii bord. cum vii car. Ibi vii servi & molin. de xl den. Silva iii qr. l'g & ii lat. Valuit vii lib. modo vi lib.

LXXIII. TERRA MATHIU DE MORETANIE.

In LANGETREWES Hund. MACI de Mauritania ten. de rege SCIPETONE. ^{Danus} ^{Strang} tenuit. Ibi x hide geld. In d'no f't ii car. & iiii vill'i & ii bord. cum iiii car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de x solid. De pastura ii fol. Valuit xv lib. modo viii lib.

Id. Maci ten. SCIPETONE & Rumbaldus de eo. Ibi x hide geld. Joh's tenuit T. R. E. In d'no f't iii car. & iiii vill'i & viii bord. cum iiii car. Ibi iiii servi & molin. de xii fol. De pastura ii fol. Valuit xv lib. modo viii lib.

Id. Maci ten. ibi i hid. & Rumbaldus de eo. Aluuius tenuit & potuit ire quo voluit & Rainb'tus Flandrensis p'tea habuit. In d'no est i car. & i vill'i & i bord. cum dim. car. Valuit xx solid. modo xiiii solid.

LXXIII. TERRA GOZELINI BRITONIS.

In BACHESTANES Hund. GOZELINUS

Brito ten. de rege CIRVELDE. Elfelt tenuit de rege E. Ibi iii hide. In d'no f't ii car. & iiii vill'i & vii bord. cum iiii car. Ibi iiii servi & molin. de x solid. & viii ac. p'ti. Silva dimid. leuua l'g & lat. Valuit iiii lib. m'o xl fol.

LXXV. TERRA ROGERII FILIJ RAD. ^{No'ie} CLISTONE.

In SINESHOVED Hund. Rogerius filius Rad. ten. unum Manerium q'd tenuit Seuuius p'positus de Bristou de rege E. & poterat ire cum hac t'ra quo voleb. nec aliquam firmam inde dabat. Ibi iii hide. In d'no f't iii car. & vi vill'i & vi bord. cum ii car. Ibi iii servi & viii ac. p'ti. Val'b. c solid. modo lx solid.

In SINESHOVEDES Hund. Rogerius h't i manerium de i hida t're & ibi h't ii servos. Hoc app'ciat' x solid. Non fuit qui de hac t'ra respond'et. Walterius h't un. M. de i virg. t're. Valuit xx den. m'o ii solid.

LXXVI. TERRA UXORIS GERI.

In HOLIFORDE Hund. UXOR GERI de Loges ten. de rege iiii hid. in GETINGE. Tres taini tener. pro iii M. & geldab. Gulvert Tovi & Turbern. In d'no est i car. & i vill's cum dim. car. Val'b. xl fol. modo xx fol.

LXXVII. In GERSDONES Hund. Balduinus ten. de Rege iii v' t're in OMENIE. Aluuius tenuit T. R. E. Ibi est i car. cum ii bord. Val. & valuit x solid.

LXXVIII. TERRE TAINORUM REGIS.

In BERNINTONE Hund. ELSI de Ferendone ten. de rege in WENRIC iii hid. & dimid. Uuluric & Tovi & Leuuius tener. pro iii maner. & poterant ire quo voleb. In d'no f't v car. & i vill's & vii bord. cum i car. Ibi x servi & molin. & dimid. de xii solid. & vi den. Val'b. iii lib. modo viii lib.

In GERSDONES Hund. Chetel ten. de rege i hid. & unam v' in WENRIC. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i car. & iiii servi. Val. & valuit xx solid.

In RESPIGETE Hund. Id. Chetel ten. iii virg. & dimid. in DANTESBORNE. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i car. & ii bord. & ii servi. Valuit x fol. modo xv.

In LANGETREU Hund. OSWARD ten. de rege REDMERTONE. Ibi iii virg. geld. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi est i car. Valuit xx fol. modo x fol.

In CIRECESTRE Hund. Edric f. Ketel ten. BAUDINTONE de rege. Pater ejus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iii hid. & iii virg. geld. In d'no sunt ii car. & iii vill'i cum i car. & iiii servi & xv ac. p'ti. Val. & valuit lx solid.

In DUNESTAN Hund. EDWARDUS ten. de rege dimid. hid. pro M. & ibi h't in d'no i car. & vi bord. cum ii car. Val. xxx fol.

In CEOLFLEDE Hund. EDDIET ten. de rege BICHEMERSE. Ipsa tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida & in d'no ii car. & i vill's & i bord. & iiii servi. Valet & valuit xx solid.

In SALEMANESBERIE Hund. CVENILD Monial. ten. de rege viiii hid. in NIWETONE. Ex his iiii hide geld'b. Estmerus tenuit pro M. In d'no sunt iiii car. & vii vill'i cum v car. & m'o habet. i car. & molin. de v solid. & xiii inter servos & ancillas. Valuit viii lib. m'o v lib.

In CILTENHAM Hund. BRICTRIC ten. de rege iiii hid. in LECHAMETONE & geld. Ipse ii hid. T. R. E. & Ordric tenuit alias ii. Rex W. utranq; eid. Brietric c'cessit p'gens in Norman. In d'no h't i car. & viiii bord. cum iii car. & ii servos & i ancill. Silva ii qr. l'g & ii lat. Val. xxx solid.

In HOLEFORD Hund. ALWOLD ten. de rege PIGNOCSIRE. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iiii hid. una ex his non geld'b. In d'no sunt iiii car. & xi vill'i & v bord. cum iiii car. Ibi viii servi & molin. de xxx denar. In Wicecumbe i burgenſis redd. viii den. Silva dimid. leuua l'g & una qr. lat. Val. & valuit iiii lib.

In BECHEBERIE Hund. ELWARD f. Reinaldi ten. ALDESWRDE. Balchi tenuit. Ibi ii hide geld. In d'no est i car. & iiii vill'i & ii bord. cum ii car. & unus servus. Valuit xl solid. modo xxx fol.

In WITESTAN Hund. ELSI ten. de rege LANGENEL. Ibi v hide geld. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. In d'no f't ii car.

ii car. & vi vill'i & xii bord. cum viiii car. Ibi iiiii servi & x ac. p'ti & piscaria. Valuit c solid. modo lx solid.

In SINESHODES Hund. DONS ten. de rege BETONE. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi ii hide una ex his geld'b. alia ad eccl'am p'tinebat. In d'nio sunt ii car. & v vill'i & ii bord. cum v car. Ibi iiiii servi & x ac. p'ti. Valuit vi lib. modo iii lib.

In BLACHELEU Hund. BRICTRIC ten. de rege WIDECESTRE. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi i hida geld. Ibi sunt xvi vill'i & xii bord. cum xvi car. In d'nio nichil. In Gloucest. i burgenfis redd. xx ferra. Ibi molin. de x solid. Val. & valuit c solid.

Hardinc ten. in Vadimonio de Brictric WITENHERST. Ipse Brictric tenuit T. R. E. Ibi v hide geld. In d'nio est i car. & p'br & ii vill'i & vi bord. cum v car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de x fol. & x ac. p'ti. Val. c fol. modo xxx solid.

EDRIC f. Chetel ten. ALCRINTONE. Pater ejus tenuit T. R. E. Ibi iiiii hide & dimid. geld. In d'nio est i car. & vi vill'i & iiiii bord. cum viii car. Ibi iii servi & molin. de x solid. & viii ac. p'ti. Silva i leuua l'g & dimid. lat. Val. & valuit iii lib.

In BOTELAU Hund. MADOCH ten. de rege RUDEFORD. Ipse tenuit T. R. E. Ibi ii hide. In d'nio ii car. & iii vill'i & iiiii bord. cum iii car. & molendin. redd. annonam q'tum potest lucrari. Val. & valuit xl fol.

END OF GLOUCESTERSHIRE IN DOMESDAY-BOOK.

The following EXPLANATIONS will elucidate some Passages in the ANTIENT SURVEY.

SOME authors derive the word Villani from the French, vilain, or from the Latin, villa, a country farm. Villenage was of two kinds, the one being a state of servitude, which some were subject to from their birth, called pure villenage; from whom, says Bracton, uncertain and undeterminate service was due to the lord. The other was villenage by tenure, by which the tenant was bound to perform certain services agreed upon between him and his lord, such as plowing of his ground, reaping of his corn, &c. Of this sort the Villani so often mentioned in Domesday are supposed to be.

The Bordarii were such as held a cottage, or some small parcel of land, on condition of supplying the lord with poultry, eggs, and other small provisions for his board and entertainment. Hence small estates so held were usually called bord-lands. Gloss. to Kennet's Par. Antiq. The bordarii held those lands which we now call Demesnes.

The Servi and Ancillæ were pure villeins, living under the arbitrary pleasure of the lord, and received their wages according to his discretion.

Liberi homines were such as might dispose of their estates without leave of their lords.

Radchensifres are explained in Domesday to be free men. See Terra S. Petri Westmon. p. 72. col. 2.

Sochs, for Socmanni. A certain number of free socmen appears to have been necessary to every lord of a manor, for holding the pleas of the manor court, which the Saxons called Soke, or Soc, a word signifying a franchise, or jurisdiction, to which a franchise was annexed. And it is from this that some derive the terms socmen and socage, with great appearance of truth. Lord Lyttelton's Life of H. 2. vol. 2. p. 252.

Francigena was a general name for all persons who could not prove themselves to be English. Canute, the Dane, having settled himself in the kingdom at peace, at the request of his lords discharged his army, upon condition, that whoever should kill an alien should be liable to justice; and if the manslayer escaped, the town where the man was killed should forfeit 66 marks to the king; but if it was not able to pay the fine, it should be levied on the hundred. And further, that every man murdered should be accounted francigena, except he could be proved to be an Englishman before the coroner.

Coliberti, men who held in free socage, whom we sometimes meet with under the names Conditionales and Colones, from which last the word Clown is supposed to be derived.

Ut scira dicit, (p. 76, col. 2. &c.) in the language of Domesday, signifies the jury by which the survey was made, the form of which remains now in the Cotton Library, beginning thus: Hic scribuntur Inquisitio terrarum quomodo barones Regis inquisuerunt, videlicet, per sacramentum Vicecomitis, Scire, & omnium Baronum, & earum Francigenarum, & totius Centuriatus, Presbyteri, Prepositi, sex Villani, unusquisque villæ. Each article concludes in these words, — Et alii omnes Franci & Angli de hoc hundredo iuraverunt. Cott. Lib. Tib. A. vi.

Burgaris and Burgenfes are properly men of trade, or the inhabitants of a borough or walled town.

Hai, Haia, a hedge, and sometimes it signifies a park, or inclosure. Bracton.

Harduices, is a word variously understood. Cowell derives it from Heord-wic, the herdman's village, which seems to be a right interpretation.

Broce, a thicket, or covert of bushes and brush wood.

The Pound, so often mentioned in Domesday-Book for reserved rent, was the weight of a pound of silver, consisting of twelve ounces.

The Shilling, consisted of twelve pence, and was equal in weight to something more than three of our shillings; so that the Norman Pound, consisting of twenty of such shillings, was worth three pounds two shillings of our present money. The Saxon Shilling was valued at five pence, and forty-eight of them went to the pound; but one of their pence was three times the weight of our present silver penny, consequently the Saxon Pound was also worth three pounds sterling of our present money. But it is observable that there was no such piece of money as the shilling coined in this kingdom, 'till the year 1504. The penny was antiently the only current silver coin, 'till about the reign of king John, when the silver half-penny and farthing were introduced; but in the year 1353 king E. 3. began to coin larger pieces, which obtained the name of Groats from their size. Crowns and Half-Crowns were first coined in the year 1551.

The Mark, must be understood to be two thirds of a pound of silver, that is, twice the value of our present pound sterling. And Mr. Madox has shewn, in his History of the Exchequer, that, in the reign of king Steghen, nine marks of silver were accepted in payment for one mark of gold, as appears from the pipe-rolls. And that, in another instance, six pounds in silver were paid for one mark of gold.

Sir Robert Atkyns has endeavoured to shew what proportion the value of silver, at the time of the survey, bore to the present value of it. "The rate of necessaries," says he, "which subsist humane life, is the true estimate of money. Since therefore wheat corn seems to be the most necessary of any one thing, we may best value coin by the price of wheat in the several ages. A bushel of wheat, soon after the Norman conquest, was sold for a penny, which was equal in weight to our three pence. At this day a bushel of wheat, one year with another, may be valued at four shillings, which is sixteen times the value of it six or seven hundred years ago. The conclusion will be, that a man might live in that time as well on twenty shillings a year of our money, as on sixteen pounds a year at present. And to carry it further, two pounds of their money would buy as much wheat as ninety-six pounds of the present.

Oro, in Domesday, signifies a Saxon piece of coin, value sixteen pence, and sometimes, according to the variation of the standard, twenty pence. In the laws of king Canute fifteen Oræ make a pound.

The expressions libras numeratas, pensatas, ad pensum, de numero, ad scalam, are to be understood in this manner. It has been already shewn that 240 silver pence, perfect as they came from the mint, weighed just a pound Troy. But much of the money being clipped, the words pensatas, ad pensum, were sometimes inserted to signify that the money should not be received in payment by tale; but that if the coin had been any way diminished, the payer should make good the weight, by adding other money, altho' it amounted to more or less than six-pence in the pound, which was the solutio ad scalam. The libra numerata, or ad numerum, or de numero, was the pound by tale of 240 pence, without regard to the weight of them. The payment ad numerum was always intended in grants, unless the contrary was expressed.—Arfas et pensatas. Arfas signified lawful money, whose alloy was tried by fire.

Firma.—Red. firmam unius noctis, — unam noctem de firma.—The two latter of these expressions are to be understood of entertainment for so many nights. For our ancestors computed time not by days, but by nights, which was not intirely out of use 'till about Henry the First's time; and hence it is that we now say a fortnight, se'nnight. The A. S. word Feormian signifies to feed, or yield victuals; and those who held the out-lands of the lord, as customary tenants, paid him a certain portion of victuals and things necessary for human life, which rent they called a Feorm; and tho' ever since the reign of H. 2. the rent has been changed from victuals into money, yet we still retain the names farm, and farmer.

Geldat. Geldum with the A. S. signified tributum. So geldare here signifies to pay tax or tribute.

Mensura, was a bushel.

Modius, usually a bushel, but various, according to the custom of the country.

Dicra ferri, a quantity of iron, supposed to consist of ten bars. Gale's Hist. Brit. 766.

Leuca, Leuua, a measure of land consisting of 1500 paces; but according to Ingulphus (p. 710.) of 2000 paces. In the Monasticom (1 tom. p. 313.) 'tis 480 perches.

T H E

H I S T O R Y

Of the CITY and DIOCESE of

G L O U C E S T E R.

Of the Name, Foundation, Situation, Extent, &c. of the CITY.

G L O U C E S T E R is a handsome city, the capital of the surrounding county, to which it gives name. It is situated in lat. $51^{\circ} 49'$ ||, longitude 101 miles W. from London; in the midst of the fine and extensive vale of * Gloucester. It stands 36 miles N. E. from Bristol, 25 S. W. from Worcester, 32 S. from Hereford, and 26 E. from Monmouth.

The river Severn flows on the west side of it, where is a convenient key or wharf. It is the first port upon that river, with its proper officers, viz. a customer and collector, a controller, a searcher, a surveyor and two boatmen. Queen Elizabeth granted the city this privilege by her charter, dated the 20th of June in the 22d year of her reign.

The prospect of the city, on the west side of it is delightful, being adorned with many beautiful towers and spires, but more especially with the lofty and most elegant tower of the cathedral church, which, to use Leland's expression, stands as a pharos to all parts around for a considerable distance.

From the middle of the city, where the four principal streets meet, there is a descent every way, which makes it not only clean and healthy, but adds greatly to the beauty of the place.

The buildings are chiefly of brick, whereas formerly they were of wood. The streets are well paved, and enlightened with lamps by authority of parliament. An act passed 12^o E. 4. to oblige the inhabitants to pave the streets, and the next year, the king by his charter empowered the corporation to do it. This had before been an object of royal care, for king E. 3. in the 9th year of his reign, gave the toll of Gloucester for seven years for that purpose; and afterwards king H. 4.

|| But according to Sir Robert Atkyns, 51^o 53.
* This has sometimes been called the vale of Evesham, but I know not by what authority. Antiently this vale was denominated from the city of Gloucester; for Malmesbury de Gift. Pont. Aug. l. 4. and Camden from him, says, this city stands in the Vale of Gloucester. Ravelle in his Gift. to the priory of Beckford, in Mon. Aug. says, Beckford is in the Vale of Gloucester. In a confirmation of lands by king R. 1. to Almaric Despencer, Stanley is expressly said to be in the Vale of Gloucester. And Malmesbury says, that Bristol stands in the same vale.

T H E

H I S T O R Y

Of the CITY and DIOCESE of

G L O U C E S T E R.

Of the Name, Foundation, Situation, Extent, &c. of the CITY.

G L O U C E S T E R is a handsome city, the capital of the surrounding county, to which it gives name. It is situated in lat. $51^{\circ} 49'$ ||, longitude 101 miles W. from London; in the midst of the fine and extensive vale of * Gloucester. It stands 36 miles N. E. from Bristol, 25 S. W. from Worcester, 32 S. from Hereford, and 26 E. from Monmouth.

The river Severn flows on the west side of it, where is a convenient key or wharf. It is the first port upon that river, with its proper officers, viz. a customer and collector, a controller, a searcher, a surveyor and two boatmen. Queen Elizabeth granted the city this privilege by her charter, dated the 20th of June in the 22d year of her reign.

The prospect of the city, on the west side of it is delightful, being adorned with many beautiful towers and spires, but more especially with the lofty and most elegant tower of the cathedral church, which, to use Leland's expression, stands as a pharos to all parts around for a considerable distance.

From the middle of the city, where the four principal streets meet, there is a descent every way, which makes it not only clean and healthy, but adds greatly to the beauty of the place.

The buildings are chiefly of brick, whereas formerly they were of wood. The streets are well paved, and enlightened with lamps by authority of parliament. An act passed 12^o E. 4. to oblige the inhabitants to pave the streets, and the next year, the king by his charter empowered the corporation to do it. This had before been an object of royal care, for king E. 3. in the 9th year of his reign, gave the toll of Gloucester for seven years for that purpose; and afterwards king H. 4.

|| But according to Sir Robert Atkyns, 51^o 53.
* This has sometimes been called the vale of Evesham, but I know not by what authority. Antiently this vale was denominated from the city of Gloucester; for Malmesbury de Gist. Pont. Ang. l. 4. and Camden from him, says, this city stands in the Vale of Gloucester. Ravelle in his Gift. to the priory of Beckford, in Mon. Ang. says, Beckford is in the Vale of Gloucester. In a confirmation of lands by king R. 1. to Almaric Despencer, Stanley is expressly said to be in the Vale of Gloucester. And Malmesbury says, that Bristol stands in the same vale.

in the 13th year of his reign, did the same for five years, as appears by the city books and writings.

The Britons called this city Caer Gloi, Caer Glou, or Caer Gloui; which name, after the Romans had subdued a great part of this island, was changed into Glevum, or Clevum, agreeable to the Latin idiom. This conquest was made in their second expedition by Aulus Plautius, the prætor, under the emperor Claudius, about the 44th, 45th, or 46th year of the Christian æra. Many of the Britons submitted to the Roman government, and a colony was stationed at Gloucester, as a convenient situation to curb the Silures, who gave the invaders more trouble than any other of the inhabitants of the island. It was called Colonia Glevum, as appears by an antient inscription to be seen on a stone near the north gate at Bath. Dr. Gale has given his reading of it, which Mr. Hern, in his notes upon Leland's Itinerary, finds fault with, and substitutes the following:

DEC. COLONĒ GLEV.

VIXT AN. LXXX. VI.

The doctor thinks the decurio died at Bath, whither he is supposed to have gone to refresh his forces.

When the Romans quitted this island, the Britons were masters of the town for some time; but it was taken from them by the Saxons in the year 570, or 577. They called it Gleaucerter, Gleaucerpe, Gleapancearter, Gloucerter, Gleucerter, Gleancerter. By the modern Latinists it is written Glavorna, Glavornia, Glovernia, Gloveria, Glocestria, Glaucestria, Glocestria, and Gloucestria. By antient English writers, Glocestar, Gloucestre, Glowcester, Gloucestyre, Glocester; and now we write it Gloucester, or, by contraction, Glocester, but it is pronounced Gloster.

Varunnius and others have accounted differently for the name of this place. They would have us believe that the emperor Claudius, having here married his daughter Genuiffa to king Arviragus, commanded the town, and castle, adds the master of St. Albans, to be § built, and ordered it to be called after his own name. Thus, according to them, have we the origin of Claudia, Claudiocestria, Claucestria, Claudiana civitas, Claudiocestriensis civitas, Claudiocestre, Claucestre, &c. A little after this, a small alteration is said to have been made in the name, out of respect to one Gloius, a general, whom Claudius begat here, and was sometime governor of Demetia, a part of South Wales. Robert of Gloucester says, (Chron. p. 66.) that before the emperor Claudius's time 'twas a little town, and that to render it more like to Gloius's name, it was called Gloucestre, instead of Claucestre, which was its former name.

But Dr. Plot, in his Natural History of Oxfordshire, observes, that notwithstanding the name Claudii Castrum may seem to favour these stories, yet in all likelihood there was never any such matter; for tho' Suetonius and Dion enumerate the emperor's daughters, and shew to whom they were married, neither of them mentions any thing of this † Genuiffa; which might be expected, especially as the latter of these historians lived in Claudius's time, and bore the office of consul. Besides, the best historians agree, that ‡ Arviragus was never heard of before the time of Domitian: So that this derivation of its name, founded on so many fabulous stories, must be rejected.

Ninius advances an opinion of his own, that there were three brothers, the sons of Glouus, great grandfather to king Vortigern, who built this town, and called it after their father's name; but this story is as groundless as the former, for Clevum, or Glevum, with its distance from Durocornovium, or Corinium, now Cirencester, is mentioned long before that time by Antoninus, in his thirteenth journey.

Others have conjectured, that when the Romans divided Britain into five parts, the making of this town the head of Flavia Cæsariensis, which was one of the five, gave rise to the name; for, say || they, Flavius in the British language sounds the same as Glau, which by a British pronunciation might easily pass into Gloui.

But this etymology is also to be rejected for the better one of Minshew, Skinner, and others, who are of opinion, that the Britons gave it the name of Caer Glou, or Caer Gloyw, which in their language signifies the bright or * splendid town, on account of its situation, which is on a fine eminence in the midst of the flat and low part of the country of the Dobuni, and therefore it might justly be esteemed fair, bright, and beautiful. Camden is of this opinion, and says that upon the like account, the Greeks had their Callipolis, Callidromos, Callistratia, and amongst the English, Brightslow, and Fairford.

The Romans, as was usual with them, altered the termination of the British name, to make

§ They pretend that this was the city mentioned by Seneca, in Lib. de morte Claudij, who says, that the barbarians in Britain worshiped him for a god, and built a city for his honour.

† Bale, (Cent. 1. p. 18.) says, Genuiffa was the emperor Claudius's natural daughter. Her name is sometimes written Jeniffa, Genniffa, and Gewife.

‡ Bishop Stillingsfleet mentions Arviragus (Ant. Brit.) as a considerable British prince, and an enemy at first to Cæsar; but he brings him down to the time of Domitian. He is otherwise called Armiragus, Armoger, Arivoger, or Arivog; by Hector Boetius, Protufagus; by the Britons, Gwerydh ap Arwencydog, brother to king Guiderius, and son to king Cunobeline.

|| Gale's Antoninus, p. 129.

* The word Caer, signifies only a wall, fortress, or inclosure; which being prefixt to the names of Roman towns, because fortified, has occasioned several to suppose the genuine signification of it to be a town or city. We have divers camps on our mountains called Caer, where we have not the least ground to suspect that ever any cities were founded; and in some places I have observed the church-yard wall to be called Caer y Pymwent. Nor does it seem improbable that this Caer was derived originally from Kai, which signifies to shut up or inclose. Camden col. 822.

it more agreeable to their own language, and called it Glevum; whence, or from the British name, the Saxons called it Gleauceartpe; for wherever they found the word Caer, in the British names of places, they always translated it by ceartpe, which was of the same signification in their own language.

This is a place of considerable antiquity. Alfred of Beverly mentions Kair Gloi, i. e. Gloucestria, as one of the twenty eight cities built by the Britons before the Roman invasion. One of those highways, called by the Romans Vias Consulares, Regias, Prætorias, Militares, &c. passed thro' the town, from St. David's to Southampton, in Hampshire. This was the Irminstreet, and seems to have come from Newland or Dudston, on the N. side of St. Mary de Cript church, along the school-master's garden, and Mary-lane, and under the gate belonging to the school, across the south-gate street, to the house directly opposite to the school, and thence to the river Severn.

It is observable that this place is called a city, [civitas] when many others, at present much larger, are called only burghs. Alfred of Beverly says expressly, that it is a city; and Huntingdon affirms that there are more cities in England than bishopricks, and then instances Gloucester, &c. But notwithstanding the title of civitas, or city, was frequently given to this place in several king's charters, pope's bulls, and other authentic records and registers, it cannot thence of necessity be inferred, that it was really such. Antiently indeed there was little difference between cities and great boroughs; but afterwards a distinction arose, when cities, properly so called, were invested with particular privileges, and by particular charters made counties of themselves. The word Urbs, which is often used when speaking of this place, is of a more restrained signification than Civitas, and denotes a large and populous place.

This town being well situated to curb the Silesures, was enlarged by the Roman emperors, as their occasions and necessities of employing more forces required. It is said to have been large and populous, when the consul of it was summoned, together with other great persons, to attend king Arthur's court, to solemnize his coronation.

In the year 577, according to the Saxon chronicle, when it was taken from the Britons by the West Saxons, 'twas reputed one of their principal cities.

During the wars between the Britons and Saxons, and (after the Norman conquest) between the crown and the great barons, this place was thought very important, on account of its situation, which always gained it the favour of one party, and drew upon it the resentment of the other; so that it hath experienced a great variety of fortune.

In the year 679, (as it is in Mon. Anglic.) Wolphere, son of king Penda, repaired it, having greatly suffered in the wars, and so enlarged and adorned it, as Bede informs us, that about the beginning of the eighth century, it was esteemed one of the noblest cities in the kingdom. And in the year 918, it was very instrumental in routing and destroying the Danish army.

In § 1087, or according to some 1088, the greatest part of the town was consumed by fire, in the wars between the different parties of William Rufus and his brother Robert. And again in 1093, or according to others, 1095, William de Ewe, or Auco, with his Welch confederates, in an insurrection to depose king William the Second, assaulted and greatly damaged the town and neighbourhood.

The town being antiently built of timber, made it extremely subject to fire. On the eighth ides of June, 1101, says Dunelm, (others will have it to be on the 11th of June, 1102) most of the town was burnt down; and on the 7th ides of March, 1121, (Leland's Itin.) or 1122, (Antiq. Brit.) it suffered the like calamity.

In the beginning of king Stephen's reign 'twas large and handsome, but siding with the empress Maud, and her adherents, greatly impoverished it. And we learn by a MS. called the Gloucester book, in the library of C. C. C. Oxon, that it was burnt on the 5th ides of May, 1150; and that again on the 17th of June, 1264, almost the whole town was destroyed by fire.

About 1487, there were 300 houses in it fallen to decay; and an act of parliament was made 27 H. 8. to enforce the rebuilding of part of it, which had so good effect, that even in the same reign, there were several streets and lanes which are now intirely demolished and forgotten. But the terrible destruction made at the † siege, Aug. 10th, 1643, in pulling down or burning 241 dwelling houses and other buildings, reduced it so much, that it has scarcely yet recovered its former size and grandeur.

Mr. Camden says of Shrewsbury, when the Normans first settled here, it was a well built and well frequented city; for it appears by Domesday-Book, that it was taxed at 7*l.* 16*s.* to the king yearly. Upon which it may be observed, that if the extent and riches of places, hold any proportion with the tax paid to the king at that time, Gloucester must have been, and it certainly was, greatly superior to Shrewsbury, as appears by the following account.

In Domesday-Book, the gross of the borough

§ Loyde, in his History of Wales, says, that in 1087, the earls of Hereford and Shrewsbury, with the Welchmen, burnt all Worcester-shire and Gloucestershire. The Saxon Chronicle mentions the commotions in that year.—Dugdale says, William de Auco, or Ewe, with his forces, did great mischief in Gloucestershire 1 Willi Rufi; but by mistake he calls this 1088. For the intent of this rebellion was to obtain the crown for Robert, upon his father's death, which was in 1087. But historians beginning the year at different times might occasion this difference.

† Civ.

is surveyed at the beginning of the county, distinctly from the Berton. The demesnes of the crown are placed first, as follow, viz.

“ In king Edward’s time, the city of Gloucester paid thirty-six pounds in money ; twelve sextaries [gallons] of honey, according to the measure of the burgh ; thirty-six dicres of iron [each of ten bars] ; a hundred iron rods drawn out for the nails of the king’s ships, and some other small customs in the king’s hall and chamber. Now this city pays the king sixty pounds, twenty in ora, and of money the king hath twenty.

“ In the demesne lands of the king, Rogerius de Berchelai holds one house, and one fishery in the vill, and it is out of the king’s hands. Balduinus held it in king Edward’s time.

“ Osbernus Episcopus [Exon.] holds the land and mansions which Edmarus held. They pay ten shillings, with other custom.

“ Gaufridus de Manneule holds six mansions. In king Edward’s time, these paid six shillings and eight pence, with other custom.

“ Willielmus Baderon, two mansions of thirty pence.

“ Willielmus Scriba, holds one mansion of fifty one pence.

“ Rogerius de Laci, one mansion of twenty six pence.

“ Osbernus Episcopus, one mansion of forty one pence.

“ Bernerus, one mansion of fourteen pence.

“ Willielmus Calvus, one mansion of twelve pence.

“ Durandus the sheriff, two mansions of fourteen pence. The same Durandus holds one mansion of twenty six pence, and another mansion which pays no custom.

“ Hadeuinus holds one mansion which pays gabel, but witholds other custom.

“ Gosbertus, one mansion ; Dunning, one mansion ; Widardus, one mansion ; Arnulfus the priest one mansion which pays gabel, and witholds other custom.

“ All these mansions paid royal custom in the time of king Edward. Now king William hath nothing thence, nor Rotbertus his minister.

“ These mansions were in the farm of king Edward when he was alive, and after his death ; but now they are taken away from the farm and custom of the king. In king Edward’s time, there was demesne of the king in the city, all his entertainment and clothing. When earl William was received to farm, he was likewise clothed.

“ There were sixteen houses where the castle stands, which are now wanting, [demolished] and in the burgh of the city, fourteen that are waste.

The number of burgages and houses with the names of the owners, specified in the above account, are twenty three, besides sixteen which were demolished for the building of the castle ; fourteen that were waste ; and some that belonged to Osbernus, that are not numbered ; but they yielded the yearly rent of ten shillings, which at five pence or six pence a house, the usual rate of houses in Gloucester at that time, will produce twenty in number. Besides these, there are mentioned in the same survey, under the titles of several owners of lands, as Terra S’ti Dyonisij, &c. about eighty two in all. Under the title Terra S. Petri de Glouec’ it is said, “ In king Edward’s time Saint Peter in Gloucester had from its burgages xix. fol. and v. den. and xvi. salmons. Now it hath the same number of salmons and l. fol.” In this instance also the number of burgages is not mentioned, but according to the above calculation, we may well suppose them to be a hundred. Admitting then this calculation, the total of burgages and houses taken notice of in Domesday, are about two hundreds and fifty-five.

That Gloucester was formerly a place of considerable note, may also be collected from its fines, tallages, aids, and fee farm rents.

In Madox’s History of the Exchequer, pp. 226, 227, 485, &c. are the following particulars. The ferm of the burgh, 16, 17, 19, 22 H. 2. was lv. lib. and the increment thereof v. lib. King Richard the First, by his charter dated the 5th and 6th of May, 5^o regni, granted to the burgeses to farm the whole borough, with the appurtenances, at the yearly rent of lv. lib. and x lib. increase of farm. King John, by his charter in the first year of his reign, granted it so to them ; and 8^o regni, § they paid c. marks for having this to farm, according to the king’s charter. 2^o and 9^o H. 3. the old increment of the borough was v. lib. and the new x. lib. more ; and that king, by his charter 6 Apr. 11^o regni, granted it to them exactly as king John did by his.

The king, by his letters patents, dated 10 Jan. 7^o E. 3. for a fine § which they paid him, and for some other causes, granted to them the borough, with its rents, free from all charges, except lxv. lib. per ann. And it appearing that king H. 3. granted to Ely de Rochester, and his heirs, v. lib. thereof, to be allowed, that allowance is yearly made, and the fee farm rent now paid is but lx. lib. per ann.

Gloucester was antiently a distinct hundred of itself, and ’tis probable that it continued so till the reign of king E. 3. for before that time, several acts are expressly said to be done in the full hundred of Gloucester. The high sheriff of Gloucestershire, in answer to the king’s writ, dated 5^o Mar. 9^o E. 2. certified as follows: Hundred de Gloucester. Et D’na Margaret regina est Domina ejusdem Hundred. Hundred of Gloucester. And the lady queen Margaret is lady of that hundred.

The perambulation or bounds of the town, which is generally walked every year, is about three miles. Thomas Styward and John de Elmore, bailiffs of the borough, die Mercurij, 44^o E. 3. perambulated the liberties thereof; and the perambulation was then as follows, viz.

From the west-gate to the cross in the middle of the west bridge, the meadows of the abbot of S. Peter's on each side of the bridge excepted. Then from the river Severn, within the little gate towards the east, between the meadow of the archdeacon, and the garden of the Bartholomews, to Little Severn; and so from Little Severn to Tulliwel brooke, on which there is a bridge with iron bars. Thence from the highway to the gate of the monks garden, with the lane called Fete-lane, to Newlands, by marks and bounds, as appears by the stones there fixed. Thence to the south-gate, to the limit there, the inn excepted, with the houses and lands on the other side. Thence from Rigley stile, to the tenements of the abbat of S. Peter's. Thence to the lane called Severn-street, to the key at the end of that street, the king's castle, and the meadows excepted, as it appears by the extent of the city, in the treasury of the kings of England. And, to prevent disputes, great stones with C. G. cut on them, are now set up at the limits thereof.

The WEST-GATE-STREET

Is the modern name of the principal street, the lower part of which is called the Island, or Between the Bridge. It is 938 yards long, from the top of the street to the West-gate. Before 6^o E. 2. it was termed Ebrug-street, as it has been also in several records and evidences since that time. Part of it was antiently, and is now, thus called:

On the North Side.

The Mercer's Row, sometimes called Zonaria.
The Cofery.
The Century.
Craftis, or Craftis Lane, called also Ironmonger's Row, Currier's Lane, Trinity-Lane, or, because it joins the abbey or college, Upper College Lane; what was formerly within the walls, being now called the College.
Rotten Row, extending from near Abbey Lane, to near St. Nicholas church. Streets and lanes out of it are, Grace Lane, or Maverdine's Lane, so called from John Maverdine, who had possessions and lived there in the

On the South Side.

Mercer's Entry, formerly called Love Alley; and from this alley was another alley, which led from the Southgate street, tho' now quite destroyed.
The Bull Lane, or Goose Lane; perhaps because it joined to the Butcher's Row.
The Upper Key Lane, or Castle Lane, and beyond that,
The Bariland, and 938 yards.

Butcher Row. Lanes leading out of it, are

Westgate-street continued.

On the North Side.

time of E. 1. King Edward's Lane, or Lich-Lane, or Peter's Lane, or Lower College Lane, because it leads into the abbey or college.
Abbey-Lane, or Three-Cocks-Lane.
Archdeacon-Lane, or Street; so called because the archdeacon of Gloucester had a house on the W. side thereof, and the first herbage of a meadow which contained 18 acres, and was, about 1473, exchanged by archdeacon Seydon with the abbey of Gloucester for Darley rectory, which is now united to the archdeaconry. This is also called Leathern Bottle-Lane, because of an alehouse that was in it.---
And beyond these,
Mary de Lode Street.
St. Oswald's Priory, and because houses are built but on one side of the way, Half Street, which leads to The Bridge-Gate.
Dockham, or Dock-Lane, because large barges or trows which were made use of in Severn, were built near it.
Pewke-Lane.

On the South Side.

The Castle.
Castle-Lane, or Street, on the E. side, and Marybone-Park on the W.
The Lower Key-Lane, or Walker's Lane, or Fuller's Lane.

N. B. The King's Board, Trinity Tower, and a statue of King George, stood in the middle of the street, but are taken down, of which hereafter.

In the Middle.

The West Gate.

The EAST-GATE-STREET

Is 294 yards long, from the crossing of the four principal streets to the East Gate. 'Twas antiently, and is also now sometimes called, the Hailes-Gate, or Ailes-gate-Street*. 'Twas formerly known by the name of Jury-Street, or Judaismus, on account of the Jews, many of whom were settled here. In the reign of H. 2. they had a synagogue, and § crucified a boy; and in that of H. 3. their school was here.

On the North Side, is Sir Thomas Rich's Hospital.

On the South Side.

St. Michael's Church.
Stadenham, or Seathenam.

In the Middle.

A Statue of King George I.

Removed in July 1767, from the middle of the Westgate-street, and placed here.

The Barley Market-House.

The Pillory and Stocks.

The East Gate.

* Perhaps it was called Ailes-gate-street because here was antiently a place for the reception of persons who had ails and distempers. 32 H. 6. the abbey of Gloucester had a tenement next to the wall by the corner of the lane leading to the Fryers Preachers, wherein lay many sick and infirm people. Or it may be from bail, which formerly, as well as at present, was used to signify health, vigour and strength; and as 'tis likely this was antiently esteemed the strongest gate in the city, and particularly mentioned, which the other parts never are, as newly erected, about the reign of king H. 3. perhaps this gate hence received its denomination, and was called by way of eminence the Haile, or strong Gate.

§ Trevisa, fol. 355, has it, in the 7th of H. 2. Brompton says, in 1160. In MS. Coll. it is said, the Jews had a synagogue in or near the same place which is called St. Kimbro's chapel, near to the South-gate.

The UPPER NORTH-GATE-STREET

Is 180 yards long, from the crossing of the streets to the Upper Northgate.

On the West Side.

The upper part was antiently called Cordwainer's Row.
St. John's Church.
St. John's Lane.

On the East Side.

St. Martyn's Place.
Graunt's Lane, or Rofs Lane; or because part of the New Inn, built by R. Twining, New-Inn-Lane; or, for the great resort of pilgrims and persons who undertook travelling on a religious account, and seem to have had proper accommodations prepared for them by the abbey, at this great inn, Pilgrim-Lane.
Oxbody-Lane, so called from an alehouse, which is the sign of the ox's body.
St. Aldate's Lane, which leads to St. Aldate's church, where are several houses.
Almesham.
Postern, or Sally-Gate.

180 yards

In the Middle.

The Upper North-Gate.

For Lower North-Gate, see North Hamlets.

The SOUTH-GATE-STREET

Is 391 yards long.

On the West Side.

Mr. Scriven's, or Mr. Longden's, because they lived at the East end of it, and had possessions in it.
Long Smith-Street, or Old Smith Street; or, because the priory of Lanthony had a school there, The School-House-Lane; or because the Bolt is now the chief alehouse in it, 'tis called The Bolt-Lane.
Austin's Place.
Sater's Lane, which leads to The Black Fryers.
St. Kyneburg's Lane.
There was another lane about the time of the conquest, called Shepster's Lane, which extended from the Southgate Street to the moat of the castle. But it seems to have been utterly destroyed not long after the foundation of Lanthony priory, at least in or near the reign of king Henry 3.

On the East Side.

Travail-Lane, or St. Peter's Lane; or because the bellman or cryer lived therein, The Bellman's Lane.
Crypt-Alley, which was formerly called Mary-Lane.
St. Mary-de-Crypt-School and Church.
Fryer's Lane, which leads to the Grey Fryers. There was formerly a lane called Sheep-Lane, in St. Owen's parish, which extended from the Southgate Street to the walls of the Grey Fryers.

391 yards

In the Middle.

Queen Anne's Statue.

The Wheat Market.

Scriven's Conduit.

The South-Gate.

As to the streets, &c. without the walls of the city, see North and South Hamlets.

Probably Pelleteria and Draperia, which are mentioned as being in this town in the time of king H. 3. — Suetaria, 5° E. 1. — Glovers Row, 30° E. 3. — Small Lane, near Brookstreet, 34° E. 3. Sueria, 35° E. 3. — and Fishmongers Row, 8° H. 4. were in some part of the streets already named.

In the year 1562, the number of householders in this city, according to bishop Cheiney, was 936, to which 16 more were added for St. Margaret's and St. Mary Magdalen's hospitals. About the year 1710, the number of houses is reckoned at 1003; of inhabitants, 4990. In Mr. Wantner's MS. Collections, about 1714, it is said that there were not less than 6000 souls within the precincts. In the year 1743, there were 1335 householders, and about 5585 inhabitants in Gloucester; and in the hamlets which are within the liberties, 275 householders and 936 inhabitants more.

Of its Strength, Walls, Gates, Bridges, &c.

EARL Eldol, in 489, and Edmund Ironside, in 1016, flying to this city for safety, protection and succour, against their adversaries, evidence that in those times 'twas of great strength. In king Stephen's reign, 'twas kept for the king, with a strong garrison. But the inhabitants of the town, who sided with the empress Maud, drove out the garrison, and frequently gave vigorous assaults to his adherents; particularly in November 1139, when they sent out a considerable army of horse and foot to spoil the city of Worcester, for refusing to espouse the empress's title. King John, in May 1216, fled hither for his defence, and continued here for some time. The parts about it that were open and undefended were frequently molested by war, and brought almost to ruin, by the great forces of Lewis, the French king's son. Upon king John's death, the pope's legate and the earl of Pembroke, took care to secure the young king, queen Isabel his mother, his brother Richard, with his sisters, and great numbers of the nobility, and chief of the realm, in this place, which then was esteemed the safest in the kingdom. One of that king's reasons for his being here often in his long reign was, as we are told in Fuller's Church History, because it was the strongest, and adhered to his interest. In 1326, king E. 2. retired hither, and the queen soon followed him, and had the gates opened to her. At this place she published a proclamation, inviting him to come and resume the government of the realm. Her army was very much increased by the addition of new forces, which, whilst she was here, came to her; particularly the lords of Percy and Wake, and others from the Northern parts, and from the Marches.

In 1473, queen Margaret, wife of king H. 6. having got together a great army at Bristol, would fain fain have went thro' this town, but she was refused by the governor; and there being no likelihood of taking it at the first assault, much less by laying siege to it in form, they resolved to pass the Severn at Tewkesbury.

The walls occur in merlin's prophecy *, tho' 'tis said § That they were founded, or rather perhaps regularly made round every part of the town by the same prince that founded those at Chichester, who was Cissa, the second king of the South Saxons. † King William the Conqueror, after he had settled the southern parts of the kingdom, visiting the western ones, came to Gloucester; and greatly liking the situation of this place, which he considered as a barrier between England and Wales, from which it was divided by the river Severn, he therefore caused the north-east and south sides to be fortified with embattled stone walls, and gates, to repel the incursions of the turbulent Welch, who had greatly disquieted the peace of king Edward the Confessor.

Sir Thomas de Bradestan, or Bradston, an active person in those days, and eminent for his military employments, was very instrumental in repairing and sustaining them, and it appears by the city books, that, 19° E. 3. he obtained a grant of the tolls, or rather the fee-farm rent of the town for this purpose. Before that time, as well as since, a great deal was expended for murage. And particular persons, called Murage-gatherers, accounted for the money which they received for this use. In the time of H. 8. according to Leland, the town was strongly defended by its walls, where it was not well secured by the river Severn, and so it continued 'till the siege in 1643 ||; when, from the South-gate to the North-port, or Postern gate, was an antient wall, well lined with earth to a considerable height. Thence to the North-gate was a slender work, raised upon a low ground. From the North to the West-gate was no antient defence, but a small work newly raised, with the advantage of marshy grounds without, and a line within, from the inner North-gate under the college wall, to the priory of S. Oswald. From the West towards the South-gate, along the river side, it had no more defence than the river itself, and the meadows being level with the town. From the castle to the South-port was a firm and lofty work, to command the high ground in the suburbs. The ditches or moats narrow, but watered round.

In 1662, the walls were demolished by order of the commissioners appointed for the regulation of corporations.

Before the walls were taken down, four principal gates stood in them, denominated, as already observed, from their situation, East, West, North and South, which are still remaining.

The West-Gate, belonging to the porter that attends the eldest sheriff, was built in the reign of king H. 8. . It is a very handsome building, little impaired by time.

The East-Gate, belonging to the porter that attends the younger sheriff, is now the house of correction. A charity school also was kept here 57° H. 3. In antient deeds belonging to Bartholomew's hospital, 'tis called The New East-gate.

The North-Gate, which stands upon Fulbrook, is now the city prison §§ for debtors and malefactors. Mr. Richard Pate, recorder of the city, bequeathed twenty marks for the repairing of the East and North-gates, provided it were done within two years after Feb. 2, 1588. The mayor and burgeses expended that sum, and 40*l*. or, according to some MS. papers, 100 marks more, for building the house adjoining on the east side of it, for the goaler's lodgings.

The South-Gate, belonging to the porter that attends the mayor's wife, was so battered † at the siege, that very soon after it fell to the ground. In the same year it was rebuilt; and on it was cut in capital letters †† round the arch, on the one side, A CITY ASSAULTED BY MAN, BUT SAVED BY GOD. On the other side next the city, EVER REMEMBER THE FIFTH OF SEPTEMBER, 1643. GIVE GOD THE GLORY.

'Tis said that the arms ||| of the king, the prince, and the duke, were appointed to be erected here: but they were afterwards demolished, and 1671, the two first were put up, and an inscription was appointed to be cut thereon.

This gate remains almost intire. Part of the city wall, tho' reduced to the height of eight or nine feet, runs eastward of this gate, and is a boundary to the lands of the late friary of Franciscans, or Gray Friars. On the west side also of the said gate a small part of the wall remains.

There are other gates of less note within the city, and they are,

King Edward's Gate, a noble one, and made of freestone. It was built by king E. 3. and

* The prophecy is, An Owl shall build her nest upon the walls of Gloucester, and in her nest shall be brought forth an ass. Thompson's Translations, p. 220. Also p. 221. Gloucester shall send forth a lion, and shall disturb him [the Bull of Totnefs] in his cruelty in several battles. He shall trample him under his feet, and shall terrify him with open jaws. At last the lion shall quarrel with the kingdom, and get upon the backs of the nobility. A bull shall come into the quarrel, and strike the lion with his right foot. He shall drive him thro' all the inns in the kingdom, but shall break his horns against the walls of Oxford. But for the authority of this prophecy see Camd. Brit. coll. x. where Geoffry of Monmouth, who translated them into Latin, is charged with adding a great deal of his own invention by William of Newborough, who was a contemporary writer.

§ Mr. Hearne's Notes to A. of Beverly, from an antient MS. in the Univ. Coll. Oxon.

† MS. C.

|| Corbet's Military Government, p. 41. In the 1 R. 2. the burgeses of Gloucester cleaned and enlarged the ditch under the wall of the Friars-Preachers, to the quantity of twelve feet, so that several elms and ashes in the bank, and in the churchyard of St. Kyneburg, were cut down. A. 11.

 Leland's Itinerary, V. 3.

§§ In the time of king James 1. the four principal gates of the city were then made prisons for the city, and the Boothall was the place to which the burgeses were committed for any misdemeanor. MS. C.

† MS. C.

†† Dorney's Speeches. MS. C.

||| Civ. repaired

repaired by abbat Parker, but almost demolished in the civil wars.

Lady Bell's Gate, received its name from the Lady Bell, who, with Sir Thomas Bell, her husband, lived at the Black Fryers, which from him was termed Bell's Place; and was called the East-gate of the Black Fryers. 'Twas neatly arched with freestone, and lately fell down.

There were two other gates which led out of the city, and were in the walls thereof, but not of considerable note, and they were,

The Postern-Gate, which was in the middle between the East and the North-gates, and had, as I suppose, on the east side of it, a kennel for the hounds belonging to the city.

The Blind-Gate *, which is sometimes called St. Oswald's gate, as being near, and leading to the church and priory of that name.

These gates were within the liberties of the city, tho' without the walls.

Alvin-Gate, and the Lower North-Gate, are found in the Suburbs.

Within a little time after the restoration, it is reported, generally, that the doors belonging to the gates, by the king's order, were pulled down, and most of them given to the city of Worcester, where they now are. A great many of the large iron hooks, which were part of the hinges thereof, still remain here.

Forreign Bridge §, which was antiently accounted to be over the chief arm of the Severn, was of seven great arches.

Cole-Bridge, which is a little below the Bartholomew's Hospital, consists of one arch, and serves to drain the meads. It is likely it received its name from its situation, as it is very convenient for conveying coals, fuel and other things, from Severn to St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

The West-gate Bridge was built by † Nicholas Walred, clerk, in the reign of king H. 2. William Coxnel ‡, minister of St. Nicholas, claimed, in right of his church, 5° H. 3. forty feet of pasture on each side, for the repair and sustaining thereof. William Fitz Catherine gave lands to it, about that king's reign. In the time of king E. 3. the brethren of St. Bartholomew's Hospital claimed St. Nicholas's church, with all its customs, especially for the sustentation of it. The priors and brethren thereof frequently repaired it, as appears by a process in the King's Bench, 10° H. 7. And in divers records, that prior is called by the name of the keeper of the same. Dame Joan Cook, 31° H. 8. gave to the mayor and burgessees 5*l. per ann.* towards the keeping of this bridge and the causeys in repair. Also Sir Thomas Bell, 34° H. 8. gave 10*l. per ann.* for the same uses. About the time of this reign, there were several || benefactions to it. It is probable, that the acre of land in Winnals, in the parish of Hasfield, called formerly Bridge-Acre, was given for it. This bridge consists of five great arches over Severn. In 1691, the water works on the south side were begun, and here perhaps the two water-mills, erected 30° H. 6. might stand.

From the bridge there goes a great and lofty  causey of stone, called, according to the name of the place at the other end of it, Over's Causeway, thrown up, thro' the low meadows, across the isle of Alney. In it are several arched bridges, some of one, some of two, and some of three arches, intended to draw the water off the meadows when they are overflowed. Part of it is within the liberties of the city, and is repaired by it to near the bridge. 'Twas made as it now is in the reign of king H. 8. and is about half a mile long, consisting of thirty-six arches.

PUBLIC STRUCTURES.

IN the midst of the city stood the lofty and beautiful HIGH CROSS, which received its name from its situation, and to distinguish it from several other crosses in various parts of the city. There were several elegant statues at full length placed upon it, in distinct niches, facing the several streets. Westward stood those of king John, and king Edw. 3. Eastward, king H. 3. and queen Eleanor. Northward, queen Elizabeth, and king Charles the First. And Southward, the kings Richard the Second, and Richard the Third.

Leland takes notice of this building, and says, The beauty of the town lies in two crossing streets, and at the place of the middle meeting is an aqueduct incallated. The Grey Fryers, in 1438, granted, that water might be brought hither from Mattell-noll, or Robin-Hood's hill, for the use of the city. Civ.

It was built in the reign of king Henry the Seventh, and has been repaired several times since,

* Perhaps it was so called because it was but as a postern, or little gate, out of the city, which had four others that were more conspicuous; whereas that was reputed as a dark and blind passage thro' the walls, and no particular porter appointed to it. La Walchard, which was toward Brook-street, and is mentioned 1255 Barth. 'tis probable was this, and so called because it is a shoard or break made in the wall to pass thro'.

§ It was called Forreign Bridge from its being outward, near the west end of the town. Very antiently what was beyond it is said to be beyond the bridge. And even in the reign of king H. 3. St. Bartholomew's hospital is mentioned as so standing. See the word Forinfacus, in the Glossary to Kennet's Paroch. Antiq.

† Monast. Anglic. v. 2. p. 456, and an antient copy now in the custody of the mayor and burgessees.

‡ MS. of abbat Froucester.

|| Sir Thomas Hill gave certain houses and lands to Dr. Greenwood and Mr. Woodwell, with an intent that the income thereof should be expended for the public benefit of this place; and a certificate of his having given so much for the supportation or maintenance of the city and bridge, was signed by the mayor and nine aldermen, and sealed with the seal of the mayoralty and their own seals on it, as in Madox's Forine Angl. p. 20.

 Leland's Itinerary, v. 4, and 8. Some MS. Coll. say, that the West-Gate, and Over's Bridge of seven arches, were built in the reign of H. 8. That from Over's bridge, which leadeth over the rivulet Leddon, to the far end, or Foreign bridge, in the city, is half a mile at least, under which continued causey there are thirty-six arches for the draining of the water.

particularly in 1550, 1635, and 1712. But by act of parliament, 23 G. 2. it was taken down, because, being situated in the centre of the four principal streets, it greatly interrupted the passage of carriages.

‡ Several fields stood near the high cross, and the burgesſes, 6 Joh. paid the king 20*sol.* fine for removing them §.

The TOLSEY, or TOLSEND, or TOLBOOTH, || ſo called, according to biſhop Kennet, becauſe it was the place where the lord of the manor received his dues, rents, and profits of the fair or market, called Toll. The Tolſey was antiently employ'd, as it is now, for the public affairs of the city.

By an act of parliament, 23 G. 2. the old Tolſey was taken down, and has been lately rebuilt from the ground, with a handſome front. Here the mayor, and juſtices for the city and in-county, hold the quarter-ſeſſions, and tranſact all public buſineſs. But the trial of criminals, and all civil cauſes of importance, are carried before the judges of aſſize at the Boothall.

The BOOTHALL, ſometimes called Boballe, and Guildball. Mr. Madox ſays, that the burgesſes paid 2*s.* to the king, for a fine to buy and ſell therein for the improvement of the borough, 5 R. 1. It was rebuilt in the year 1606, and by the charter of the city is made ſubject to the juriſdiction both of the out-county and of the city; and here the aſſizes are held, and the quarter-ſeſſions for the out-county only.

The KING'S BOARD*, (formerly aſſigned for the ſelling of butter and cheeſe) was built or repaired by king Richard the Second, but it is now taken down †.

The KEY occurs by that name in the reign of king Edward the Fourth, as alſo the lane leading to the key, in that of king Henry the Seventh. In queen Elizabeth's time 'twas called the King's Key. In 1621, 1622, and 1713, 'twas greatly repaired and enlarged. In the preſent charter, expreſs mention is made of the Old and New Key; and there was lately a pillar of timber ſtanding on the great key*, and the following inſcription engraven on a braſs plate, at the top of it.

1650, QUI FELICITER OPTAT CIVITATI GLE-
VENSIS, NON UT HERCULEAM COLUMNAM, SED
PERPUSILLAM, HOC PIGNUS AMORIS ET GRATITUDINIS.

In the middle were theſe arms: On a chevron three roſes; and on a canton a dexter hand gules, to denote they belonged to a baronet.

The BARLEY-MARKET-HOUSE*, in the Eaſt-gate-ſtreet, appointed for barley, beans, and oats, was built in 1655, or 1656. Margery Price gave 50*l.* towards it, and ſtones were taken from the churches of St. Katherine, and St. Mary de Grace, and uſed in this market-houſe. Before that time, there was one which ſtood nearer to the Eaſt-gate, many of the materials of which were alſo applied to the building of this.

The WHEAT-MARKET-HOUSE*, in the South-gate-ſtreet, was built in 1606. Being very much battered and weakened at the ſiege, another, with a poor ſtatue of king Charles the Second, in a nich at the north end of it, was erected in 1660 and 1661.—Near it, in the miſt of the ſtreet, on a pedeaſtal incloſed with iron palifades, is a ſtatue of queen Anne. And near to the ſouth end of this market-houſe, in the middle of the ſtreet alſo, is a Gothic building, of an octagonal form, incloſing a ciſtern for the water of an antient aqueduct from Robinhood's hill, which at ſtated hours is open for public uſe. On the ſouth ſide of it is an inſcription. This was erected at the charge of alderman John Scriven, in 1636.

The STATUE of king George the Firſt, upon an ornamented pedeaſtal, incloſed with iron palifades, ſtands in the Eaſt-gate-ſtreet.

The CASTLE of Glouceſter. 'The caſtle of 'Eſtbrighoiel was built by earl William, and paid 'only 40*sol.* in his time for ſhips going to the 'foreſt.' Domeſday, p. 66. It is now the common jail for the out-county. Some part of the buildings is in private hands, held by leaſe from the crown; but the greater part belongs to the county, and is ſettled in the ſheriff, by a ſtatute 19 H. 7. It is extraparochial, and ſo is the hill adjoining, called the Barbican, which, according to Camden, is an Arabic word, ſignifying a watch-tower, or military defence.

There were many other places of note in the city, which are now either converted into pariſh dwellings, or totally deſtroy'd, as

St. MARTIN'S PLACE*, near the ſcite of the High Croſs, which king Edward the Third, in 1371, granted to the bailiffs, to erect a tower, and place a clock therein, for which the ſheriffs of the city paid 12*d.* yearly.

† Madox's History of the Exchequer, p. 280.

§ R. Cole's Roll in Civ.

|| It formerly conſiſted only of the council-chamber, and the room under it, (which were erected in 1602, upon the demolithing of the former edifice, made in 1565) 'till 1648, when the north wall of All Saints church was taken away, and the whole church converted into a court for the ſheriffs, and other public uſes. The chancel was turned into a ſtair caſe, leading to a room over it, and to the council-chamber. Some lands between that church and the ſtreet were afterwards purchaſed to enlarge the place. And, in 1685, the chamber over the ſheriff's court was made into a chapel, and king James the Second coming to Glouceſter, in his progreſs in 1686, was ſeated on a throne erected for him there, at the city charge; and from him it obtained the denomination of the King's Chapel. But ſoon after the revolution, in 1688, moſt of the coſtly furniture belonging to it was burnt and deſtroy'd.

* Civ.

† It was a magnificent market houſe, according to Dr. Stukeley, of Gothic Architecture, uncommon and antient, but finely adorned. Over the arches, and on the ſides and ends of it, were carvings of many hiſtorical parts of the Holy Scripture. At each corner was a large ſtatue, and on the upper part a croſs upon a pyramid, between four effigies, and it had battlements round it. In 1572, the upper part was repaired, and about 1691, was taken down, that a large ciſtern might be erected as a reſervoir for water, conveyed thither from near the Weſtgate.

The MEAL-MARKET, joining to the east end of St. John's church. It was ordered to be repaired in 1619, and about 1657, was converted into a dwelling house. But upon rebuilding St. John's church, in 1733, or 1734, it was intirely demolished, as being very incommodious.

Formerly there were several conduits and public wells in the city, which are now destroy'd, and there are no vestiges of them remaining.

The lands extending along where the work-house now is, to a moat which led to the castle, and thence down to the key, were called Mary-Bone Park, and were inclosed in 1635, and afterwards built upon, in 1644.

By a voluntary subscription of the inhabitants of this city and county, an act of parliament was obtained 23 G. 2. whereby certain commissioners were appointed, and impowered to purchase and pull down several buildings, both public and private; among others, the antient High Cross, as before observed; the King's Board, or Butter-market-house, with the tower of the demolished church of the Holy Trinity, which stood in the middle of the West-gate-street, and were very incommodious to carriages. By this act, these buildings, with some dwelling houses, were taken down; and lately, several public nuisances and obstructions have been removed, and the streets new paved, greatly to the public convenience, and beautifying of the city.

Of COINAGE, MINT, and MONEY.

THIS town, together with all other great places*, antiently enjoy'd the privilege of coining. King John's grant of a mint seems to be no more than a confirmation of a more antient grant, and 'tis very likely, that some of the British coins which have been found here in great plenty, were struck in this place. There is a silver coin of king Harold, the son of king Canute, with this inscription,—HAROLD REX ANGLORUM. The king had crown and sceptre. The reverse is, WVLFGREATON (de) GLEape-cerpe. With PAX in the middle.

In antient grants to this place, the Monetarii (moneyers, or coiners, who were ministers of the mint, and made, coined, and delivered out the king's money) are expressly mentioned, and had particular privileges granted to them. It is probable that several of the coins, whereon are fleurs de lis, and this inscription, AVE MARIA GRATIA PIA ET PLENA, were struck in this place, since they are so frequently found here.

* As at the council, or synod of Grateley, held by king Athelstan, in 928, and also by the king's own order, it was appointed, that there should be one mint for coining of money in all Burghs, as 'tis in the Saxon, which is rendered by Mr. Lambard in Latin, oppida, or towns; castles, as 'tis in Cl. Wilkins's Councils, vol. 1, p. 206; great towns, as in Tindale's Notes upon Rapin, vol. 1, p. 114; it may thence be well concluded

In 1657, a farthing was coined, with the city arms in the middle, and round them this inscription: FOR NECESSARY CHANGE. On the reverse, in the middle, C. G. round which LUKE NOURSE MAIOR, 1657.

On another farthing, in the middle, the arms of the city; round them THOMAS PRICE MAIOR. On the reverse, in the middle, C. G. round which, A GLOCESTER FARTHING.

On another farthing, in the middle, the city arms; round them, THE ARMS OF GLOUCESTER. On the reverse, in the middle,

* * *
{ C * G }
1669.

Round it, A GLOUCESTER FARTHING.

Of COURTS.

THERE were courts held in this town very antiently, particularly before the reign of king John, who granted the burgeses a charter, by which they were impowered to hold all pleas in the town for their lands, tenures, wages, just debts, and whatsoever was due to them there. King Edward the Second, in the 6th year of his reign, granted them, that they might hold pleas of lands and tenures in the vill; and for the future, that they might hear complaints, and punish offences, so as not to be subject to communicate with, or impart to foreigners, but only with their fellow burgeses. King Richard the Second, by his charter, in the twenty-first year of his reign, gave them like authority to hear and determine all causes, and to punish offenders in the town; at which time the court was held in the Guildhall.

And ever since that king's reign, the burgeses of the vill have had authority to hold pleas, real and personal, within their liberties. And 'tis expressly granted, by former charters as well as the present §, That the mayor, &c. upon every Monday, may hold a court for this purpose, as the same used to be holden time out of mind. And that the sheriffs, for all debts, &c. may hold the Tolsy-court, from hour to hour, and from day to day, as there is occasion.

The sheriffs shall, in every month, hold a county-court, and twice in the year a law-day.

The suitors of this hundred, or law-day court, were as follow †, 18 H. 7.

The earl of Gloucester.

The archbishop of York.

The prior of Lanthony.

that there was a mint in Gloucester long before the time of king John; and that that king only established it by his charter.

Mr. Camden, in his Remains, p. 185, says, There was in every good town one coiner, called Monetarius, in the time of our antient Saxon kings. The mint, or place particularly appointed for coinage, was near Trinity church, in the reign of king Henry the Second. A. 5. A. 6. A. 9.

§ See Appendix, No. 6.

† Civ.

The

The prior of St. Bartholomew's, Gloucester.

The prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem.

The abbat of Wynchecombe.

The abbat of Eynesham.

The abbat of Tewsbury.

The abbat of S. Aug. in Bristol.

The abbat of Hayles.

The earl of Hereford.

The abbat of St. Peter's of Gloucester.

The prior of St. Oswald's of Gloucester.

The prior of Derehurst.

The abbess of Godestow.

The abbat of Keyneham.

The proctors of the service of St. Mary, in the Church of St. Michael, in Gloucester.

The abbat of Flaxley.

The abbat of Kingswood.

The heirs of Peter Flory.

§ All these are mentioned, 20^o and 21^o of H. 7. except the abbat of Hayles, and the heirs of Peter Flory, who are then omitted.

§ In 1657, the suitors of this court are mentioned thus :

The earl of Hereford and Gloucester.

Henry lord Stafford, for his honours of Hereford and Gloucester.

The several purchasers of the lands of the late dean and chapter of Gloucester.

Miles Clent, gentleman, for the lands of John Jennings, being St. Oswald's priory.

The heir of John Chamberlayne, esq; and the heir of Richard Pate, esq; being Edward Willoughby, esq; for the lands lately belonging to St. Mary, and St. Oswald, in Gloucester.

The heirs of Thomas Bell, for the lands lately belonging to the priory of Lanthony.

After the restoration, instead of the purchasers of the Dean and Chapter's lands, the Dean and Chapter, are suitors to this court.

In 1660 and 1688, Henry Sutton, D.D. occurs in the place of Miles Clent. October 8, 1688, John Webb, A. M. occurs, in the place of Dr. Sutton, as he does also in 1700. Saunders Saunders, gent. occurs in the place of Mr. Webb, as he does also in 1717. Since that time Saunders Saunders, gent. sold several possessions which he had in the city, to Mr. Bridges Pateshall, after which, his widow was reckoned suitor to this court.

‡ An act of parliament was passed in the first year of king William the Third, for the erecting of a court of requests, or court of conscience, for all debts under forty shillings, to be holden as often as the commissioners shall think fit, before three at least of them. This court being designed for the benefit and relief of the burgeses and inhabitants, the expences of proceedings are so moderate as not to frustrate the intention of it.

Besides this court of the town, there was also another court, which was commonly called the Foreign court of the honour of Gloucester, and was holden within the jurisdiction of the honour, but not within the liberties of the governors of the town. Maud, the wife of the last Gilbert de Clare, who was earl of this place, had for her dowry an assignment, among other things, of the Foreign court of the honour of Gloucester. Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 217. And this foreign court is mentioned Clauf. 8^o E. 2. It was reserved by earl Mylo, the founder of Lanthony priory, and his descendants enjoyed the same for many ages after him.

'Tis said, that upon the death of Humphry de Bohun, Mary, his daughter, had assigned to her, amongst other things, for the purparty of her father's part, the court of the honour of Hereford, holden at Gloucester; which was worth ten shillings a year. And Henry of Lancaster, her husband, having sworn fealty to the king, his majesty commanded his escheater, by his charter, dated at Westminster, the 22d day of December, 8^o R. 2. to give the said earl possession thereof.

Of the HONOUR of GLOUCESTER.

ALTHOUGH in a great many writers the Honour and Title are confused, and frequently put one for the other, I rather chuse to mention them distinctly and separately.

The honour of Gloucester was enjoy'd by several persons who never had any title of dignity taken from this place; whilst others took their titles hence, but were never possessors of the lands which belonged to this barony, which was very great.

What is affirmed of land baronies *, That they were divided and subdivided, 'till at length they were brought to little or nothing, may truly and properly be said of the honour of Gloucester, to which, being a noble feignery or lordship, tho' several others did originally belong, yet was it afterwards greatly reduced, as will appear by the following short account of it.

Brictrick † (called also Brithrick) obtained it from Hailward Snow, before the conquest; but having incurred the hatred of Maud, William the Conqueror's queen, whom, when he was a public ambassador abroad, he had refused to marry, soon after the entrance of the Normans she revenged the insult, by procuring his imprisonment, and the confiscation of his estate.

The queen, after Brictric's death, enjoy'd it, and after her death king William the First, to whom succeeded king William the Second, who held it for some time, and then granted it to

Robert Fitz Haman, or Hayman, lord of Corboil and Thorigny, in Normandy; kinsman

§ Civ.

‡ Which was then printed.

* Madox's Bar. Ang. p. 59.

† Dugdale's Bar. vol. 1. p. 406.

and assistant to the Conqueror, who had very large possessions in several places. This great person was the first, I suppose, who held the honour and the title together. He was the chief actor in the conquest || of Glamorganshire, in 1091, and seated himself for the most part at Cardiff, where, says Camden, (col. 733) he fortified the town with walls and a castle, and made it both a seat of war and a court of justice. In 1102, he new built the abbey of Tewkesbury, with all its offices, and endow'd it with many lands, rents, and large possessions, and made Cranburne, in Dorsetshire, a cell to it. In the retaking of Faleise, in Normandy, he was struck on the temples, which deprived him of his senses, but he lived a considerable time after; and dying, he was buried in the chapter-house of Tewkesbury, in 1107; but was moved into the middle of the presbytery in 1241. And in 1397, an admirable chapel was made by abbat Parker, on the north side of the chancel, and certain offices were daily celebrated for him. Round the top of the chapel was written, but now not legible, "In ista capella jacet D^{nu} Robertus Filius Hammonis, hujus loci Fundator." His bones now lie wrapt in fine diaper in a plain tomb above ground, in the middle of the chapel.

But 'tis probable that king Stephen † took this honour away from Earl Robert, and gave it to Miles of Gloucester, who, I think, had it but a little time before his revolt to the empress. Afterwards 'twas again ||| in the king's hands; for Hugh Bardolf §§ 1^o R. 1. was accountable for 42*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* of the antient farm of the honour of Gloucester; and likewise for 370*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* for the farm of the manors belonging to it, for three quarters of a year, before the king gave it to his brother John; and for 32*l.* for the third part of the profits arising from the pleas of the county for half a year. And by Mag. Rot. 9^o R. 1. it appears, that William de Warrenna accounted for 340*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* for the scutage of the honour of Gloucester, assised for the king's redemption, after his return from Aleman; of the knights of the said honour, which he can find, as he says, in the treasury 196*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* and of Eustace of Grainville of the fee of one knight, by the king's writ, which he holds in capite of the king, as the said William says. And he owes 143*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* which ought to be required of the knights, whose names are noted in the roll which the said William delivered in the treasury, when he left off to have the custody of the said honour. The same accounts for the same debt nothing. Also of Thomas de Sandford, 25*sol.* who went to the service of the king by the said writ, and he owes 145*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* which ought to be required of the aforefaid knights, as he says.

Robert Fitz-Haman left behind him † four daughters, viz. Mabel, by others called Sibil, or Maud, who afterwards married Robert Melhent; Cicily, afterwards abbess of Shaftesbury, in Dorsetshire; Hawise, abbess of Winchester, or, as Dugdale says, of Wilton; and Amice, who married the earl of Britain. But among these four females king Henry the First would not have the honour divided, and therefore gave this whole honour to his natural son Robert, concerning whom hereafter.

Earl Robert was succeeded in this honour by his son William, who dying, left three daughters.

John the fourth son of king H. 2. received this honour of his brother king Richard, as a portion with Isabel, one of the daughters of earl William; and tho' he was afterwards divorced from her, yet he retained  the honour to himself; for it is said, Mag. Rot. 1^o Joh. that William de Faleise and Master Swain, rendered an account of the honour of Gloucester, namely, 223*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.* for the farms and issues of the manor of this honour, which were in the king's hands for half a year; that is to say, 18*l.* 10*s.* for the farm of Bradestede for half a year, it having been let to farm at that rate by the said William and Master Suein, 78*sol.* arising by the sale of wood, five marks for the  assised §§ aid in the said vill, 46*sol.* and three halfpence of the  assised §§ rent of Peteresfield, of the said farm; five marks in toll, and other perquisites; four marks for the tallage of the same vill; 8*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* for the rent assised of Mapelderesham; 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for the tallage of the same town, and in many other items.

* Guy de Chancels, 15^o John, accounted for the scutage of the honour of Gloucester, as well of the old feoffment as of the new, viz. for 327 knights fees and a tenth, and a twelfth part of a fee. Several of the knights fees belonging to this honour, about twenty in number, could not at present be found, or ascertained.

|| This conquest was made in the following manner: Jestyn, lord of Glamorganshire, having been defeated in a rebellion against Rhees ap Tewdor, sent Eneon, a Welch gentleman, to Robert Fitz-Haimon, who was a great baron and a gentleman of the king's privy chamber, to solicit him to come to his assistance, with promises of great rewards and emoluments; and Eneon, if he succeeded in his negotiation, was promised Jestyn's daughter in marriage. The proposal was agreeable to the spirit of the times, and Fitz-Haimon, with twelve knights of considerable note and distinction, at the head of a large body of troops, joined those of Glamorganshire, and invaded the territories of Rhees ap Tewdor, who met them near Brecknock, and giving them battle was vanquished by them, and slain in the action. Jestyn kept his engagements with the Normans very faithfully, but broke his word with Eneon, who burning with resentment, followed the Normans who were already embarked for England, and complaining to them most bitterly of his master's perfidiousness, incited them to turn their arms against him; upon which, partly out of regard to the man, and partly being alured by the bait he proposed to them, of the conquest of the country, they all returned with him, attack'd the lord of Glamorganshire, defeated, and slew him. This is the account given by Caradoc of Lancarvon; but another account says, that Jestyn refused to perform the covenants he had made with the Normans. However, Fitz-Haimon seized the country, and reserving to himself some principal parts, and the seignory of the whole, gave all the rest of that fertile province to be held as fiefs under him, by the twelve knights and some others who had assisted him, particularly Eneon.

Lord Lyttelton's Life of H. 2. vol. 2. p. 47, 48.
 † Dug. Bar. V. 1. p. 407. † Dug. Bar. V. 1. p. 537. Madox's Hist. Excheq. p. 134. || Madox's Bar. Angl. p. 77.
 §§ Selden's Tit. Hon.  Madox's Bar. Angl. p. 76.
 * Madox's Hist. Excheq. p. 445. Mad. Bar. Angl. p. 92. 123.

§ John, earl of Moreton, afterwards king of England, by his charter, granted the land or manor of Bristelton, belonging to the honour of Gloucester, to John la Warre, to be holden by John la Warre and his heirs, of Earl John and his heirs, by the service of half a knight; and the same grant was confirmed 8^o John.

† In the second year of king Henry the Third, Gilbert earl of Gloucester was vested with this honour, and paid 100*l.* for the relief of it.

‡ Gilbert de Rue held it 27^o H. 3.

Robert Musgrove was seized of it 38^o H. 3.

Nicholas Berkeley held it 47^o H. 3. as did Patronelle de La Mere in the same year.

|| King Henry the Third, towards the latter end of his reign, granted several manors in the counties of Southampton and Kent, belonging to the honour of Gloucester, to the then countess of Gloucester, and her son Gilbert de Clare. I suppose this honour, at or before the time last mentioned, was continually decreasing. In the second year of the reign of queen Mary, 'twas given by the queen, with other things, to the lady Ursula Stafford. And 13^o Eliz. it appears that this honour was then worth but 19*s.* 11*d.* 'Tis certain, 32^o H. 3. earl Gilbert de Clare, who then had this, gave to William, his brother, the inheritance of the manors of Maplederham and Petersfield in the county of Southampton, which formerly belonged to it, and that other estates which were part thereof have been since parted with.

Of the EARLS of GLOUCESTER.

THERE is no earldom in the kingdom so antient as this of Gloucester. Eldol, * or Edol, the Briton, by some called earl, by others duke and consul, was earl of this place in the year 461; and attended king Vortigern at the treaty of peace at Ambresbury, in Wiltshire, to which they were invited by Hengist the Saxon, when it was agreed that neither party should go thither armed; but the Saxons concealing long knives under their cloathes, murdered great numbers of the Britons. At this time Eldol is said to have taken up a stake, which he found by chance, and to have laid about him with such courage and effect, that he slew no less than seventy of them; and having broke the heads, arms, and limbs of many more, got from them into Gloucester, his own city. Also, that in the bloody battle fought between Ambrosius, king of the Britons, and Hengist, in 489, earl Eldol charging thro' the midst of the pagan army, took Hengist prisoner, and remembering his former treachery, cut off his head.

Swaine,  or Suane, eldest son of Godwin, earl of Kent, was earl hereof in the time of king Edward the Confessor, and going to Jerusalem barefooted, on penance, to expiate the murder of Beorne, his kinsman, took cold thereby, and died at Licia, in his return in the year 1053.

Some have obtruded §§ William Fitz Eustace, in 1094; but it does not †† appear that there ever was such a man.

Robert Melhent, or Fitz Roy, sometimes called Robert Rufus, consul of Gloucester. He was natural son of king Henry the First, born of Nesta, the beautiful daughter of Rhees ap Tudor, or Theodore, prince of South Wales, and was made first earl after the conquest. For as it was not esteemed honourable to be enriched with great possessions, without some title or dignity, having married Sibil, the eldest of the daughters of Robert Fitz Haman, he was created, in 1109, earl of this place, which was the most eminent of her heritage. By the writers of that time, he is called the consul, and also earl of Gloucester, and was a person above all others, of a great and undaunted spirit, never dejected by misfortunes; and who being esteemed a prudent, learned, brave, and valiant prince ††, skilled in the arts of war and peace, performed many heroic and difficult exploits with great honour, in the cause of his sister Matilda, against king Stephen. As his mother was daughter to Rhees ap Teudor, the last king of South Wales, he derived from the affection of the Welch to her family a great interest there, § Madox's Bar. Angl. p. 59. † Ibid. p. 33. ‡ Sir R. Atkyns p. 84. || In about the time of Henry the Third, amongst the king's tenants in capite, in the county of Gloucester, 'tis said, the honour of Gloucester holds of the king, in Gloucestershire, twenty-seven knights and a half, and one fourth part of one knight.—The honour of Gloucester. Nicholas Pointz seven knights and three parts. Gessly fil. Roberti six knights. Roger de Mayby eight knights. Roger Corbet one knight. William Camerarius one knight. Richard de Dickesdon two knights and a half. William de Kindil one knight. John de Sor fourteen knights. (In the roll of the charters 'tis said fifteen knights) Robert de Filcham two knights. Robert Treham half a knight. Thomas de la Mare ten knights. Roger de Berkelegh two knights. Adam fil. Nigel the fifth part. Thomas Blundus half a knight. Evidences extracted from the Red Book of the Exchequer, Roll 156.

* Dugd. Bar. vol. 1. p. 1.—Robert of Gloucester says that earl Eldol was a strong knight, and has many particulars relating to him, agreeable to Matthew Westminster, p. 160.

† Dugdale's Bar. v. 1. p. 18. §§ Lloyd, in his History of Wiltshire, p. 153, says, he was slain between Cardiff and Brecknock by the Welchmen. He also affirms, That William de Albermale was earl of this place in 1216, but he does not mention any authority for these assertions.

|| Camden's Britannia, v. 1. col. 287.

†† All writers concur in their testimony of the excellent character of this nobleman, "who had no inconsiderable tincture of learning, and was the patron of all who excelled in it; qualities rare at all times in a nobleman of his high rank, but particularly in an age when knowledge and valour were thought incompatible, and not to be able to read was a mark of nobility." Lord Lyttelton's Life of H. 2. p. 281. And in another place, "He was unquestionably the wisest man of those times; and his virtue was such, that even those times could not corrupt it. If when the nation was grown equally tired of Matilda and of Stephen, he had aspired to obtain the crown for himself, he might very possibly have gained it from both; but he thought it less glorious to be a king, than to preserve his fidelity and honour inviolate. He seems to have acted only from the purest and noblest principles of justice and duty, without pride, without passion, without any private views, or selfish ambition; and to this admirable temper of mind he joined all the address and extensive abilities, that are peculiarly necessary for the head of a party; who must connect and keep together great numbers of independent persons, held by no regular bond of obedience; conciliate their different passions and interests, endure their absurdities, soothe their ill humour, manage their pride, and establish an absolute authority over them, without seeming to exercise any, but that of persuasion." p. 344.

which was still increased by a close union with two of the most powerful lords in those parts, who were cousin-germans, and acted together in support of Matilda, namely, Brian Fitz-comte and Milo Fitz-walter. The former of these possessed the lordships of Abergavenny and Overwent, in what is now the county of Monmouth; the latter enjoyed the best part of Brecknockshire, in right of his wife, with ample possessions in Herefordshire and Gloucestershire, having also the government of the royal castle of Gloucester, and being hereditary constable of England. When king Stephen was taken, in 1140, he would surrender to none but this earl. And when the earl of Gloucester was taken prisoner, in 1141, and by William de Ypre sent to Rochester castle; tho' an offer was soon made to release him for the king, he would not hearken to it without the empress's consent. And at length after six months imprisonment, the empress agreed that the king and he should be set at liberty; and this exchange, one for the other, was deemed equal.

This earl * had with his wife, besides this whole honour, a great inheritance in Normandy, and all the land of Hamo Dapifer, his wife's uncle. Mr. Tyrrel says, that his father, king Henry the First, by his will, made him his executor, and is said to have given him 60,000 lib. at his death. He died at Gloucester of a fever, on October 31, 1147, and was buried under a great jasper stone in the choir of St. James's priory, in Bristol, which he had founded upon his own demesne lands, and endowed with lands, ornaments, possessions and liberties, and made a cell to Tewkesbury abbey, whereof he had the abbat and twelve monks to dine with him constantly every Sunday. He built the castles of Bristol and Cardiff, and of that at Bristol, which was made of stone, brought from Caen in Normandy, he gave every tenth stone towards the erecting of St. Mary's chapel §, in St. James's priory there. He also founded, in 1147 †, the priory of Morgan, in Glamorganshire, valued at its dissolution at 181 l. 7 s. 4 d. or 188 l. 14 s. And is said ‡ to have founded a priory at Cardiff, and was a great benefactor to the priories of Neth and Great Malvern ||, and to the abbies of Tewkesbury and Gloucester. After his death the empress's cause declined very much, and at length came to little, the chief support being gone. This great || and illustrious earl had the town of Bristol, which Robert Fitz Haman, his father-in-law, held in fealty of king William the Conqueror. At his instance the prince, afterwards king Henry the Second, came into England, and staying a considerable time here, the earl, his uncle, conducted him into Normandy, on his return. He left issue behind him, by the beforementioned Sibil, or Maud, his wife, four sons, viz. William, his successor in that honour; Roger, bishop of Worcester; Haman, and Phillip; and one daughter named Maud.

§§ William, his eldest son, succeeded him in his earldom. In his father's time, he was made governor of the castle of Warham; and 12° H. 2. upon levying the aid for marrying the king's daughter, certified his knight's fees in Kent to be twenty-two and an half and a third part, and elsewhere two hundred and sixty and a half d. veteri Feoffamento, and thirteen and a half de novo. Having, with other gentlemen, opposed the king in behalf of young Henry, 20° H. 2. he returned to his obedience. He had a great contest with one Yvor, or Ivor, surnamed Bách, a little man of stature, but exceedingly resolute and courageous who kept himself chiefly in the woods and mountains, of which this earl endeavoured to bereave him, or at least to straiten his limits. Yvor being irritated thereat, came in the night to Cardiff castle, with his men, and tho' the walls were high and there were no less than 120 soldiers, besides a large number of archers therein; he scaled them, and took away this earl William, with his countess, and their young son, and carrying them to the woods, refused to release them, until he had full restitution of what had been wrongfully taken from him. This earl obtained the lordship of Caerleon from Meredith ap Howell, who was lord thereof. He died †† November 23, 1173, or as others 1183, and was buried in the abbey of Keynsham, which he founded, and amply endowed and adorn'd, next his wife Hawise, the daughter of Robert Boffu, earl of Leicester, and a son called Robert, who is before mentioned. He also had three daughters, viz. Mabel, Amice, and Isabel or rather Avifa. This earl was a great benefactor to the monasteries of Bradenstoke, Co. Wilts; Nuneaton, Co. Warwick; Tewkesbury, Co. Gloucester; Bermondsey, Co. Surrey; St. Augustine's and St. James's, Bristol; Stanley, in Wilts; Neth, in Glamorganshire; Lyra, in France; Dureford, in Suffex; and the cell of Goldcliff, in Monmouthshire. Being unwilling that his inheritance should be divided amongst females, for reasons unknown, says Rapin's History, being at Windlesore, or Windsor, on the 4th or 6th

* Dug. Bar. V. 1. p. 534. § Annal. Teux. in Mon. Angl. † But Mr. Camden, Britannia, V. 2. col. 738, says, that Morgan was founded by his son William. And in the Note to Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monast. p. 713, the editor seems for a reason there mentioned, to think, that this earl Robert only began this house a little before his death, and William, his son and successor, finished it some time after; tho' it the first edition of Not. Monast. 'tis said, That Morgan was built by earl Robert, not William, as in Speed.

† Tanner's Notitia Monast. p. 715. || Dug. Bar. V. 1. 535. §§ Dug. Bar. V. 1. p. 535, 536.

†† Annal Teux. in Mon. Ang. say, That this earl William died in 1173, and his body was honourably buried, as it ought to be, in the abbey of the canons of Keynsham, near by his son Robert, which abbey he had founded in memory of his son, and endowed it with lands, ornaments, and liberties. Dug. Bar. V. 1. p. 536, says, That upon St. Clement's night, 1173, 20 H. 2. he departed this life. Sir R. Atkyns, p. 90, says, that he died in 1183. And Wilkin's Councils, V. 1. p. 486, says, This earl William was one of the witnesses at the council at Westminster, holden by king Henry the Second, in 1177, regni 23^o in the first week of lent.

of the kalends of October, in 1176, he constituted for his heir,

John, commonly called Sans-Terre, or Lackland, fourth son to king Henry the Second, and of all his children was the chiefest favourite. But that king retained this honour in his own hands for many years. And, as 'tis in Annal. Teux. in Mon. Anglic. and some other authors, in the last year of his reign, gave one of earl William's three daughters in marriage to his son John; who * had with his wife this whole earldom. He was also earl Moreton in Normandy, and, during the reign of his brother king Richard the First, built the long bridge at Tewkesbury, and gave the toll of the market there for the repair thereof. But because earl John and his lady were in the third degree of consanguinity, (for king Henry the First was great grandfather to them both) Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury, put all the earl's lands under an interdict; but from that interdict he appealed to the see of Rome. His appeal was confirmed, and he was released by the Pope's legate from it. This John was afterwards king of England, and having no child by his wife, after he had reigned one year, was divorced from her, whom, after he had retained in his hands part of her inheritance, 'tis said §, he sold, with all her lands and fees, except the castle of Bristol, and chaces thereto belonging, for 20,000 marks, to Geofry de Mandeville †, earl of Essex, in the fifteenth year of his reign, and created him earl of Gloucester, and gave him the county of Gloucester. This earl Geofry, the same year, delivered up the custody of the tower of London, which he before had, 17^o Joh. He had seisin of all the liberties belonging to the honour of Gloucester, of the inheritance of Isabel his wife, as amply as William earl of Gloucester, his father, had enjoyed them, having then the title of earl of Gloucester. But soon after, ‡ adhering with the barons, who then were in arms against the king, he was excommunicated by the Pope, and was one of the chief of those lords who would have assumed the whole sway of the realm in their own power. And about that time he was killed by a Frenchman at a tournament holden at London, and left no issue. Isabel, his wife, survived him, and afterwards married to Hugh de Burgh, justice of England, who was a great benefactor to Dureford priory, Co. Suffex. Isabel died without issue by either of her husbands, whereby the honour of Gloucester came to her nephew,

Almerick ||, son to the earl of Eureux, in Normandy, as being descended from Maud, another daughter of earl William, before mentioned. But he enjoy'd this earldom only for a short time, and was buried at Keynsham, to which, and Dureford priory, he was a great benefactor. He died without children, whereby

Gilbert de Clare , son of Richard de Clare earl of Hertford, who married Amice, another daughter of earl William, was the first earl of Gloucester and Hertford jointly. The county §§ of Hertford had very antiently earls that were of the family of Clare, who therefore were more commonly called earls of Clare, from Clare, their principal seat in the county of Suffolk. But when this family, by right of inheritance as well as by their prince's favour, came to be also earls of Gloucester, they bore the two titles jointly, and were summoned to parliament by the names of earl of Gloucester †† and Hertford. Leland says, that he took those two earldoms into his possession, in 1216, and was one of the chief of those barons who kept themselves in arms against king John, in the seventeenth year of his reign, seizing the city of London totally in their own power, and appointing that all things should be directed by twenty-five persons, whereof he was one. He was excommunicated †† by Pope Innocent the Third, and adhering to Lewis the French king, was taken prisoner at the battle of Lincoln,

* But there is a great dispute concerning the person who gave this earldom to John. The pipe roll, 1^o R. 1. implies that king Richard the First, had it in his hands for some time before he gave it his brother. Robert of Gloucester says, that king Richard gave to his brother John this earldom, and many lands in England and beyond sea. Hoveden, p. 655, says, that king Richard the First, came into England, and gave to his brother John the earldom of Moreton, and those of Cornwall, Dorset, Somerset, Nottingham, Derbyshire, and Lancaster, and the castles of Meleberg, and Lutegareshale, with the forest and all their appurtenances; and the honours of Wallingford, Tikehill, and Hain; and the county of Gloucester, with the daughter of the earl, whom he made immediately to be married to him; and also Le Peol, and Bolefovers; but the duke (meaning the king) retained some of the castles of the said earldom. Probably king Henry the Second verbally gave this earldom, &c. to his son John; but the king died before earl John was legally possessed of it; for Brompton says, that the duke (meaning king Richard the First) granted and gave to his brother John all the lands which his father gave him. He granted him also the daughter of the earl of Gloucester, with that honour; and that this John married the said daughter on the 4th of the kalends of September, at Marleberg. It is affirmed also by other historians, that at king Richard's coronation, which was on the 3d of the nones of September, John was then called the earl of Gloucester and Moreton, and carried one of the royal swords before him.

§ Camden's Brit. v. 1. col. 288. Madox's Hist. Excheq. p. 322. Dug. Bar. v. 1. 706.

† Camden's Brit. v. 1. col. 288. But Annal. Teux. in Mon. Angl. as translated by Sir R. Atkyns, p. 728, mistake in saying that after the divorce made by earl John, Walter (not Geofry) was married to her. 'Tis said in Madox's Hist. of the Excheq. p. 322. that he owed to the king 20,000 marks for marrying Isabel, countess of Gloucester, with all the lands, tenements, and fees which belonged to her, as is contained in the roll, 16^o king John.

‡ Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 694, 705.

|| Sir Robert Atkyns says, that this Almaric assumed the title of earl of Gloucester, upon the divorce of king John from Isabel. But Dugdale in his Baronage, vol. 1. p. 536, says, that upon the death of Elizabeth, Almaric had this earldom for a short space. Camden, in his Britannia, v. 1. col. 288, says, that this Almaric had this honour, or earldom, conferred upon him.

 Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 211.

§§ Camden's Britannia, vol. 1. col. 360, by mistake the Clares are called earls of Gloucester and Hereford, instead of Hertford.

†† If two or more baronies happened to be vested in the same man, they did not consolidate in his person, but he held them distinct, and was chargeable with a separate relief for each barony; so it appears by the rolls, 20 H. 3. that this earl paid 100l. relief for the honour of Gloucester; 100l. for the honour of Clare; 100l. for the honour of St. Hilary; and 50l. for the moiety of earl Giffard's honour. Lord Lyttelton's H. 2. vol. 2. p. 214.

|| Dug. Bar. v. 1. 211. Annal. Teux. in Mon. Ang. Walsingham's Topogima Neusha, p. 57.

by William Mareschal, earl of Pembroke, and carried to safe custody at Gloucester. But after the peace was settled, he married Isabel, the third daughter, and at length coheir of that earl. He was in the expedition into Wales, 7° H. 3. and on that account had scutage of all his tenants by military service. He was also one * of those English noblemen who first invaded Ireland, and subdued it to the crown of England. He died at Penros, in Brittany, 14° H. 3. being then in his return from those parts, leaving issue, by Isabel his wife, three sons and three daughters, Richard, William, and Gilbert; Amice, Agnes, and Isabel; and was buried in the middle of the choir at Tewkesbury, to which abbey he was a considerable benefactor. At the S. W. end of that town, on an elevated situation, at a place called Holmes, he and his successors had an eminent castle, which is now destroyed. Leland speaking of it says, In the time of mind, i. e. in memory, some ruins of bottoms of walls did then appear, and now it is called Holme Hill. The time of the building of it is uncertain. It is certain that the Clares, earls of Gloucester, especially the Redde earl, lay much at Holmes. His coat armour is, Topaz, 3 Chevrons Ruby, which may be seen in Tewkesbury church, and in the church windows; but on the covering of the tomb of this earl is the same coat, with the addition in the first quarter, of a Label of three points Argent, each charged with a Canton Gules.

Richard de Clare, his eldest son, succeeded him; but in regard of his minority, the guardianship of him, with his lands and manors, was committed to Hubert de Burgh, then Justiciary of England. In 1227, he took up arms with many other barons, and joined prince Richard, to compel king Henry the Third to restore the charters to the duke of Cornwall, which he had lately annulled. In 1240, ‡ he went to the Holy Land, notwithstanding the pope's prohibition. Upon collecting the aid for marrying the king's daughter, 29° H. 3. he paid 261 l. 10 s. for 261 knights fees and a half, as also 43 l. for 43 knights fees, for the moiety of the honour of Giffard. And 38° H. 3. double as much, upon collecting the aid for making the king's eldest son knight; the scutage then levied being according to that proportion. In that year, ‡ upon Whitsunday, the king celebrating that festival at London, made him a knight, together with forty more brave young soldiers, for the greater honour of that solemnity. In 30° H. 3. ‡ he was one of those peers who subscribed a letter then sent to the pope, complaining of his oppressions, and threatening to do themselves justice if they were not speedily redressed. In 32° H. 3. ‡ this earl brought the Augustine friars first into England. In 34° H. 3. ‡ he travelled beyond sea to the pope at Lyons, whence he returned about rogation week. In 39° H. 3. ‡ he was sent by the king into Scotland, together with John Mansel, the king's secretary, on the behalf of the king of Scotland, and the queen, sister to king Henry, then kept in restraint within the castle of Edenborough, where he behaved with great subtilty; for leaving his attendants at a distance, he got into the castle without any opposition, and surprising the guard, gave entrance to his followers, so that the king and queen were soon relieved and rescued. In 40° H. 3. ‡ he was one of the chief persons present in Westminster hall with the king, when Boniface, archbishop of Canterbury, with divers other bishops, pronounced that solemn curse, with candles lighted, against all those who should henceforth violate the Great Charter, and charter of the forests; and the same year paid a debt of 640 marks, due to the king for the dowry of Eleanor, the king's sister, for the lands which belonged to the earl Mareschal, of Ireland. In 41° H. 3. ‡ upon an insurrection of the Welch, the king preparing a great power, he was made commander in chief of all the forces in the counties of Glamorgan and Pembroke, and other parts of South Wales. In 42° or 43° H. 3. § he and his brother William had poison given to them, from which he hardly escaped with his life, his hair, nails, and skin coming off, and his brother died of it. In 1258, † he was chosen by the barons, one of the twelve appointed by them for the reformation of the kingdom. In that year, || he and ten more sent to the pope concerning Sicily, and to recall Ethelmar, the bishop elect of Winchester. The instrument for this purpose was sealed with their own seals, instead of that of the whole commonalty of the kingdom. In or about this year,  he, by the advice of the parliament then sitting, was employ'd with some others of the nobility, by the appointment of the king, in the great convention of the estates of France met in the parliament of France, to carry king Henry the Third's resignation of Normandy, and to compose all difficulties betwixt both crowns, and to treat of the most important affairs; and at his return, he acquainted the king in open parliament, with what he had in charge from the French. In 1260, †† being jealous of the earl of Leicester, who was also appointed one of the twelve to reform the kingdom, he endeavoured to form a party against him, and accused Edward, prince of Wales, of endeavouring to obtain the kingdom, during his father's life time. The prince was exceedingly incensed at him, and the quarrel might have been attended

* Camd. Brit. v. 1. col. 1321, 1322, 1388.

† Dugdale's Baronage.

§ Dug. Bar. vol. 1. p. 212, 676. By Walter de Scatenay, or Scotney, who, says Wykes, p. 53, was one of his knights. But Dugdale calls him the principal person of council with the earl of Gloucester, and likewise his steward, as p. 676, his chief counsellor, as p. 212, and as 'tis p. 676, 'twas believed he committed this act of villainy for a great sum of money then given him by William de Valence; shortly after which, having his trial by the country, and being found guilty thereof, he was drawn thro' the city of Winchester, and there hanged. Vid. M. Paris. M. Westm.

† Additions to M. Paris's Hist. p. 215. Annales Burton, p. 415.

|| Ibid.  Dugdale's Baronage vol. 1. p. 213, 715.

†† Rapin's Hist. v. 1. p. 334, 335, 336.

with fatal consequences, had not the king of the Romans used his interest to end it, and appease the prince his nephew. In 1261, he and the earl of Leicester were reconciled, and swearing once more to the Oxford provisions, sent a threatening message to the king; but in the year 1262, the earl of Leicester retired into France, and the earl of Gloucester died. It is reported of him §, that being in Tewkesbury, 45° H. 3. and hearing that a Jew who had fallen into a jakes upon a Saturday, refused to be pulled out for the reverence he bore to that day, being his sabbath, he prohibited any help to be afforded him on the Sunday, being the Lord's day, deluding by this means his Jewish niceness, but forgetting in the mean time Christian charity and godliness; for the same day the poor wretch died for want of succour. Keeping his Christmas at Tewkesbury he made a feast there, at which sixty knights were present. He was a great benefactor to Thorney abbey †, and died July 14, or according to the Monasticon, on the 14th of the kalends of July, 1262. His bowels were buried ‡ at Canterbury, his heart in the church at Tunbridge, in Kent, where he had a castle, near the walls whereof he founded a priory of canons of the order of St. Augustine; and his body on the right hand of his father in Tewkesbury abbey, the bishops of Worcester || and Landaff, twelve abbats, and a great number of barons, knights, and great men attending his funeral. His wife erected over him a very stately tomb, ornamented with gold and precious stones, the sword and spurs which he wore when alive, and other valuable materials. Upon the tomb was a large image of the earl in silver, and the following epitaph:

* Hic pudor Hippolyti, Paridis gena, sensus Ulyssis, Æneæ pietas, Hectoris ira, jacet.

Which is thus translated by Weaver, in his Funeral Monuments.

Chaste Hippolite, and Paris faire; Ulysses wife and fly;
Æneas kinde, fierce Hector, here jointly en-tomb'd lye.

By an inquisition after his death it appears that he held the town and court of Gloucester. It is several times mentioned in Dugdale's Baronage, that this earl was poisoned at the table of Peter de Savoy, the queen's uncle, in July 1262, and with him Baldwin Redvin, earl of Devon, and several others who were of the king's household.

Gilbert de Clare, son of the last earl, born the 2d of September, at Christ-Church, in Hants, succeeded his father, at the age of about seventeen, and was commonly called the Red, from the colour of his hair. Upon the death of his father, he repaired to the king, at Guienne, in France, to be invested with his father's inheritance, but the king having no friendship for him, was solicited some time before he would do him that justice; and it was not 'till after receiving a considerable present that he sent him away satisfied in 1262. The next year he had livery of all his castles, manors, and lands in England and Ireland; but not long after, associating himself with Simon Montfort, earl of Leicester, and the rest of the mutinous barons, he was one of the framers of those unreasonable ordinances called Provisiones Oxonij, whereby they did, in effect, wholly divest the king of his royal power, which occasioned him soon after to arm. He was with the barons when the king and prince were taken prisoners at the battle of Lewes. The king of Almaine, or of the Romans, in 1264, surrendered to him, who then commanded one part of the army for the barons, and was sent prisoner by him to the priory of Lewes, in Suffex. The earl obtained §§ several lands and possessions for himself, and extorted a commission from the king, authorizing himself, with the bishop of Chichester, to nominate nine persons for the administration of public affairs for some time. But after this victory ††, not thinking himself sufficiently rewarded, and the profits and revenues, and half the money for the ransom of prisoners taken at this battle, which by agreement he was to have had, being absolutely refused him; and the earl of Leicester aspiring to the crown, and the sons of that earl growing insolent, he quitted their party, with whom, above all the rest of the barons, he was highly displeas'd; and, ††† with several others, endeavoured to rescue the king's person. He was very active in procuring liberty for prince Edward, but first told him plainly, that he could not promise his assistance unless he would oblige himself, by oath, to use his utmost endeavours to restore the antient laws, and to banish all foreigners from about the king's person. Prince Edward promised and swore to do it in the presence of several barons, and then took the command of the troops raised by this earl, who afterwards assisted the king in the great battle of Evesham, 49° H. 3. wherein he commanded a second brigade of the royal army; and, for his service, obtained a full pardon for all his former offences, and soon after had the castle of Bergavenny for some time. In 1267, joining with some discontented lords |||, probably of the Marches, who with their men had come to him § Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 213. Trevisa's Chron.

† Mon. Anglic.

‡ Weaver's Funeral Monuments, p. 322.

|| Annal. Teux in Mon. Anglic.

* Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 213.

§§ Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 213.

†† Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 213. Rapin's Hist. v. 1, p. 339, &c.

†† Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 748.

||| Rapin, v. 1, p. 344, calls them disinherited. Dugdale in his Baronage says, That he began to make head again in favour of those who were disinherited. Walsingham Upod. Neust. p. 65, That an army being gathered by him in Wales, in favour of the Disinherited, came to London, and John de Civele, with great force of his accomplices meeting him, he seized the city, the citizens favouring him. The earl by messengers commanded the legate, who had the tower to dwell in, without delay to deliver up the same. And that he might hasten to do it, the earl forbid all persons to sell any victuals to him.

for his protection, he seized the city of London, and formally besieged the pope's legate, to whom it was committed, and took the tower at that time, with an army which he raised in his own lands, and in Wales; but the king forgave him and his accomplices, and by the mediation of the king of the Romans was reconciled to them in a few days, the earl having engaged under the penalty of 10000 marks not to make any disturbance for the future. The next year, it is said, the king, at the instance of the prince, received him into his full favour and grace; whereupon he was signed with the sign of the cross, at Northampton; for the expedition to the Holy Land. However, notwithstanding all this, perhaps there was no perfect reconciliation betwixt him and the king 'till 1270, when demanding from prince Edward the expences and costs which he had sustained at the battle of Evesham, wherein he had been instrumental in the king's restoration, with the livery of all his castles and lands which his ancestors had enjoy'd, he obtained them about the feast of Pentecost next following; and from that time became so firm to the royal interest, that in 1272, the king, during his son's absence*, appointed him governor of the realm after his death, and he faithfully executed the great trust reposed in him. When the king died, the earl of Gloucester was the principal of those noblemen who met at the New Temple, in London, and proclaimed prince Edward king, who was then in the Holy Land. At the king's funeral, the earls of Gloucester and Warren, the clergy, and the people, went up to the altar, at Westminster, and there swore fealty to the prince, as their king, by the name of Edward the First. Moreover, upon his arrival in England, the earl of Gloucester entertained him, with his whole retinue, most honourably for many days, in his castle at Tunbridge, in Kent. About the 10th of Edward the First§, he had several encounters with the Welch, and near Lantilawir, or Lantilovawr, obtained a compleat victory over them; but five knights were killed on the earl's side, one of which was William de Valensis, the younger, kinsman to the king. In 1285 †, soon after the birth of prince Edward, (afterwards king Edward the Second) the king went to Snowdon, by West Wales, and came to Glamorgan, which belonged to this earl, and was received by him with the greatest honour, at his own expence. About 13° E. 3. he was divorced from Alice de March, his wife, daughter of Guy earl of Angoulesme, to whom, being very young, he was married in his father's life time, and to whom king Henry the Third, whose niece she was, gave 500 marks for her portion. But tho' the divorce was at her suit, he settled several possessions ‡ upon her. He gave up all his inheritance, 17° E. 1.  to the king and Joan of Acres, or Acon, (so called from a place of that name in the Holy Land, where she was born) the king's second daughter, to whom he was presently afterwards married. On the morrow preceding the kalends of May, the same year, the king restored to him all those lands again, and they were then entailed. The next year, there were great disputes between him and the earl of Hereford, concerning several of their possessions in Wales, and both earls were committed to prison, each paying to the king a fine of 1000 marks, for an atonement. About 19° E. 1. there having been a ditch or trench cast up by the appointment of this earl and his lady, over the crest of Malvern hills, †† Godfrey Giffard, then bishop of Worcester, objected to it, as encroaching upon his territories. But by the mediation of Robert Burnel, bishop of Bath and Wells, and others, this controversy was ended, and the following agreement was made between them, That the earl and his countess should pay yearly to the bishop and his successors, a brace of bucks and a brace of does, out of their chace at Malvern, at his palace at Kemsley; and in the vacancy of the see, the same to be paid to the prior and convent of Worcester, demanding them by their attorney at the castle of Henley. He was a considerable benefactor §§ to Keynsham abbey, and Mr. Speed says he built a nunnery at Markyate, now Market-street, in Bedfordshire, to the honour of St. Giles, 6° E. 1. Dying at his castle at Monmouth, on the 7th of the ides of December, 1295, he was buried in the church of Tewkesbury next his father and grandfather, by Godefred bishop of Worcester, under a plain stone, with an inscription on brass round the edges, now defaced. He left issue by Joan of Acres, his wife, Gilbert his son and heir, and three daughters, Margaret, Isabel, and Elizabeth.

Ralph de Monthermer, or Mortimer, a plain esquire ††, soon after earl Gilbert's death, clandestinely married Joan de Acres, and was sent by her to her father to receive the honour of knight-

* Dug. Bar. vol. 1. p. 214.
 § Walsingham's Hist. p. 10. Ypod. Neust. p. 70. Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 214, 500.
 † Walsingham's Hist. p. 12.
 ‡ Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 213.
 † Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 214. Prinne's Intolerable Usurpations, v. 3, 344, where the possessions are mentioned, in the agreement then made between them
  Dugdale in his Baronage says, That he did it, becoming ambitious to marry in the royal line. But Dr. Holland, in his Inscriptions in the text of Mr. Camden's Britannia, as mentioned by Dr. Gibson, in his edition thereof, observing of this earl, that he powerfully and prudently sway'd much in the baron's wars, as he inclined to the barons or the king, says, That being obnoxious to king Edward the First, surrendered his lands unto him, and received them again by marrying of Joan of Acres, the king's daughter. And Sir Robert Atkyns, p. 92, says, That he was fallen under the king's displeasure for not accompanying him in his arms in Flanders, and all his lands were seized to the king's use. He afterwards took the king's daughter for his second wife, and upon this marriage all his lands were restored to him.

†† Thomas's Survey of Worcester Cathedral.
 §§ Annal. of Teux. in Mon. Anglic. Notes to bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, p. 4.
 †† Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 115. But in the notes to Rapin's Hist. v. 1. p. 386, 'tis said, That he was servant of her first husband, and that the marriage was done in 1296, with the knowledge of her father.

4. The earl, her husband, being dead, she in her marriage was infeoffed of great part of his lands. This Ralph held them for some time; but being thinking Joan had much debased herself by this match, was very much incensed at it, and caused all her lands and castles to be seized, and her husband to be closely imprisoned. But by the mediation of Anthony Beke, bishop of Durham, he was restored, and afterwards beloved of the king, who, in the twenty-fifth year of his reign ||, gave him livery of all the lands belonging to this great earldom, to hold by the service of fifty knights fees, in the war of Flanders, and was summoned to parliament from the 28th to the 35th of E. 1. inclusive, by the title of earl of Gloucester and Hertford; but after the death of his wife, which was 1° E. 2. he was never more summoned by these titles, but had subsequent summons, as a baron only, 'till the eighteenth year of that reign.

Gilbert de Clare, son of the last earl Gilbert and Joan of Acres, was the next who possessed this earldom, being, at his father's death, but about five years old. He, tho' in minority and in ward to the king, had his lands restored * him; and petitioning § to have all his socage rents and franchises in the town of Gloucester, and elsewhere, when he was about eighteen years of age they were delivered to him. Notwithstanding Ralph de Monthermer had been summoned to parliament, and acknowledged as earl of Gloucester, yet when this Gilbert came of age, he claimed and obtained that title, the summons 2° E. 2. being directed to the knight, nephew Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford. In 1307, Robert Bruce †, who was crowned king of Scotland, marched against the earl of Gloucester, who was at the head of another body for king Edward the First, and obliged him to retreat to the castle of Aire, which Robert besieged, tho' without success. In 1311, the great men of the nation ‡ being assembled at Bedford, they made the earl of Gloucester the keeper of England; and 4° E. 2. he was ||| constituted guardian of the whole realm, during the king's abode in the wars with Scotland. In the dispute between the king and the peers concerning some of their antient liberties and privileges, the earl of Gloucester adhered to neither side, and therefore was appointed and acted as a mediator between them. He was also very instrumental in qualifying the great displeasure which the king bore to divers of the nobles on the death of Piers de Gaveston, and earnestly endeavouring to bring about a reconciliation between them, it was chiefly effected by his mediation, tho' several persons of great dignity had before attempted it in vain. The king going to France in 1313, appointed him regent in his absence. He was afterwards one of the ambassadors sent into France, and was a great supporter of the English state, and therefore much valued and esteemed by the nobility. Rushing precipitately upon the Scotch army, at the battle of Bannockburne, where he was captain of the king's vanguard, he was killed June 24, 1314, in the twenty third year of his age, being much lamented, because, says Leland, he was a good man. The king of the Scots generously, and without any price or ransom, sent his body to king Edward, at Berwick , which was buried on the left hand of his father, near his grandfather and great-grandfather, at Tewkesbury, the place of his nativity, in the virgin Mary's chapel, which was near an hundred feet long, then standing at the east end behind the altar, but now demolished, and the scite an orchard. It appears §§ that this earl was a promising young man, and beloved by the whole kingdom. After two years expectance of another son beside John, (who died in his father's life time, and was buried in the Lady's chapel, at Tewkesbury) to be born of Maud, his wife, daughter of John de Burgo, son to Richard earl of Ulster, several manors and possessions were assigned to her. Thus the most noble earldom of Gloucester, which was formerly called the second pillar of the kingdom of England, was divided into three baronies ††, and parted between this earl's three sisters, of whom Eleanor, the eldest, was married to lord Hugh Despencer; the second, named Margaret, to Hugh de Audley, and before that, to Peter, or Piers de Gaveston, sometime earl of Cornwall, king Edward the Second's great favourite, much to the earl's displeasure, and the king's desire; and the third, named Elizabeth, to lord Roger de Damori, or Tamori, and before that to John de Burgo, son and heir of the earl of Ulster, in Ireland. The lady Maud died 1315, and was buried on the left hand of her husband.

Hugh Despencer, or Spencer ‡‡, the younger son of the earl of Winchester, having married Eleanor before mentioned, doing his homage, had livery of her purparty of the lordships and lands which descended to her by the death of her brother; and obtained a confirmation of all those royalties within the territories and lordships of Glamorgan and Morganog, as Gilbert de Clare, earl of Glou-

|| Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 215, Walsingham's Hist. p. 36, calls him Ralph de Moynheimer, and reckons this as done in the year 1. 28, 25 E. 1.

* Walsingham's History, p. 98.

§ Dug. Bar. p. 217.

† Kapin's History, vol. 1. p. 385.

‡ Stow's Chron. p. 215, 216.

||| Dug. Bar. vol. 1. p. 216.

•• Annal. Teux. in Mon. Anglic.

§§ Leland's Itinerary. Walsingham's History, p. 71. And Ypodigma Neustria, p. 99.

†† Mon. Malmesbur. p. 191. Walsingham's Hist. p. 81. Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 217.

‡‡ Mr. Tyrrel, in his History, vol. 3. questions whether Hugh de Spencer was really earl of Gloucester, or only called so by courtesy. Heylin, p. 329, and Sir R. Atkyns, p. 92, omit him among the earls hereof. But Sir Thomas de la Mare, and Dr. Brady affirm that he was earl hereof. And Mr. Camden, in his Britannia, not only reckons him among the earls of this place, but also says he is stiled by writers earl of Gloucester. Sir Robert Atkyns, p. 722, stiles him earl hereof, and says, p. 93, that he was sometimes called earl of Gloucester in right of his wife.

cester and Hertford, lately enjoy'd. But not content with the third part of this earldom ||, tho' then worth 5000 marks, he endeavoured to wrest the other two from his wife's sisters, whose property they were. He was lord Chamberlain * and chief favourite to king Edward the Second, after Gaveston. And, together with his father, being accused § of seducing the king, and oppressing the state, was, by the queen's particular orders, drawn on a hurdle thro' all the streets of Hereford, on St. Andrew's eve, in 1326, hanged on a gallows fifty feet high, beheaded and quartered, and his four quarters were sent to several places in the kingdom, but his head was fixed upon London bridge. At his death he was possessed † of no less than fifty nine lordships, in sundry counties, 28000 sheep, 1000 oxen and steers, 1200 kine with their calves, 40 mares with their colts of two years, 160 draught horses, 2000 hogs, 40 tuns of wine, 600 bacon, 8 carcasses of Martinmas beef, 600 muttens in his larder, 10 tuns of cyder, armour, plate, jewels, and ready money better than 10000 pounds, 36 sacks of wool, and a library of books. He left issue by his wife, three sons, Hugh, Edward and Gilbert. The Despencers arms are, Quarterly, argent and gules, a fret or, over all a bendlet sable, to be seen in the chancel windows at Tewkesbury, and many places about the church.

Hugh de Audley, or Aldithley, the second husband of Margaret de Clare, as before observed, was ‡ by the favour of king Edward the Third, in the eleventh year of his reign, created earl in parliament, being in the wars against the Scots. Neglecting to serve king Edward the Second, and refusing to come to ||| Gloucester, on the third day of April, in the fourteenth year of that reign, in pursuance of the summons requiring him so to do, his castle at Thornbury, in this county, and his other lands, were seized by the king's order; but for some errors in the prosecution against him, they were restored in the first year of the next reign. In the 13th of E. 3. he was, amongst others, assigned to array all the able men of Essex, for the defence of the sea coasts there, against an invasion then apprehended. The same year being with the king in France, and constituted one of the marshals of the English army, he was in that part of it which was drawn up for battle at Vironfosse, and led by king Edward himself. The next year, being sent into Flanders upon the king's service, he was in the memorable sea-fight before Sluyce, between the English and French. Being ambassador beyond sea, 15° E. 3. he had 230 marks allowed him for his expences in that journey. The next year he was one of those gentlemen who then went into Brittany upon the king's service, his troops consisting of 100 men at arms, himself accounted for one, one banneret, twenty knights, seventy-eight esquires, and also 100 archers on horseback. And in the next year he was sent with the earl of Lancaster and divers other great lords into Scotland, to raise the siege of Loughmaban-Castle. He died 21° E. 3. leaving issue only one daughter, called Margaret, the wife of Ralph lord Stafford, and thus the honour of Gloucester came to the lord Stafford's heirs ††. 'Tis remarkable, that the first mention made in a charter of creation of an earl, of some revenue given to him out of the profits of the county, for the better support of his dignity, is that expressly mentioned in the creation charter of this earl; by which he had yearly viginti libratis redditus de exitibus Com. Glocestr, it being in lieu of the tertium denarium de placitis Comitatus. Dr. Holland, in his Insertions in the text of Mr. Camden, as publish'd in the last edition of Camden's Britannia, says, That this earl built a house at Thornbury, which the duke of Buckingham took down when he built the castle there. This earl Hugh was buried at Tewkesbury, on the north side of the high altar. He bore Gules, a fret or, and a bordure argent, to be seen about the church where he was buried.

Thomas of Woodstock, so called by reason of his birth there, the sixth, or according to some the seventh, and youngest son of king Edward the Third, was constituted lieutenant by his father in the twenty-ninth year of his reign, during his absence in France, upon the occasion of an intended expedition into that kingdom. Being earl of Buckingham, he was advanced in the parliament by his nephew king Richard the Second, 9° regni, to the dignity of  duke of Gloucester, and with his title had a grant of 1000*l.* a year, to be paid out of the customs of several ports. Having married Eleanor, the daughter and coheiress of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford, Essex and Northampton, he became possessed of those earldoms. And 'tis generally said, that his father-in-law being constable of England, he also succeeded him in that title. But Dugdale, in his Baronage, affirms, that in the reign of king Edward the Third, he was made constable of England, and others

|| Mon. Angl. v. 2. p. 223.

* Dugdale's Bar. v. 1. p. 392.

§ Ibid. vol. 1. p. 394. Annal. Teux. in Mon. Anglic.

† Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 396.

‡ Camden's Britannia, v. 1. col. 288. Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 751. But Leland's Collect. v. 1 p. 250, says, Audeley was made earl 10. E. 3. Mon. Malmesb. p. 247, 1335, Rex ordinavit Comitem ad Gloucestriam. Sir R. Atkyns says, That upon the death of earl Gilbert, this Hugh de Audley was created earl of Gloucester in parliament, the second year of king Edward the Third. But it may be what Sir R. Atkyns calls creating him earl, was only restoring to him in parliament those possessions which had some time belonged to this earldom, and came to him by the death of his brother-in-law; but were taken away, or seized by king Edward the Second, as mentioned in Dugd. Bar. vol. 1. p. 751. And earl Gilbert's three sisters were, as 'tis said Mon. Malmesb. p. 191, called Comites, because Comitatus Gloucestris was divided between them.

||| Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 751.

†† Dug. Bar. v. 1. p. 751.

 Dugdale's Baronage, vol. 2. p. 169. But the ceremony of his creation was performed at Hosselow Lodge, in Tividale, by girding with a sword and putting a cap with a circle of gold upon his head. The parliament then sitting at London, assenting thereto, at which time the king took his homage.

say, that he was so to continue during the king's pleasure. In all his employments, which were very great, he merited much. In king Richard the Second's reign, he was made knight of the Garter. Knighton says, that in 1394, he assembled a parliament at Westminster, in the king's name. 18° R. 2. being by indenture retained to serve the king in his wars of France, with 100 men at arms, whereof three to be bannerets, and eight knights, he obtained a grant to himself and heirs male of his body, of the fee farm rent of the town of Gloucester, and all fines, forfeitures, and amer-ciements thereto belonging. Afterwards he was by the parliament, † and also by commission from the king, appointed one of the fourteen persons to inspect the affairs of the realm, from the time of his father's death. Thomas Arundel, arch-bishop of Canterbury, being made lord chancellor, is said to have granted to this duke the govern-ment of the realm, by virtue of which he took upon him regal power. ‡ He was also assigned with other commissioners to depose the king. And being of a fierce ||, head-strong, ambitious and un-quiet spirit, was * privately smothered between two feather beds, at Calais, by the privity and pro-curement of the king, who mortally hated him, upon Saturday next after the feast of St. Bartho-lomew, 1397. 'Tis said that he made a confession under his own hand, that he had arrogated too much. But perhaps this was only the schedule wrote by himself, in answer to his accusation §; which schedule †† was seen, and disapproved of by the king, who was determined to destroy him, and commanded the earl of Nottingham to do it, on pain of death. In the articles against the king for his deposition, 'twas objected to him, That notwithstanding he had pardoned this earl in full parliament, and by solemn oath, made of his own accord, in the presence of the dukes of Lancaster and York, and many other lords, at the duke of York's chapel, at Langley, where duke Thomas was also present; yet when he had him afterwards in his power, he caused him to be arrested and im-prisoned, and horribly and cruelly to be mur-dered; damnably incurring the guilt of perjury. This duke at his manor of Plecy ‡‡, or Pleshy, in Essex, 17° R. 2. founded a college, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, for a master and eight secular priests, two clerks, and two choiristers, which was valued at its dissolution at 139*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* clear, and was buried at the church there, ||| or in the chapel at Westminster abbey . After his death, the king gave away a great part of his lands to the dukes and earls which he made. Stowe, p. 317, says, That he was condemned to die after he was dead; by which I suppose he means no more than what Dugdale and Camden have otherwise expressed, That he was attainted of high treason by act of parliament, after he was dead. Pro-vidence seems to have revenged this cruel murder, on the king and the duke of Aumerle; for it was not much more than two years after, that the king was deposed from his government, and murdered in Pomfret castle. The duke of Au-merle, or earl of Rutland, did not die a natural death, but was afterwards slain in battle. Some of the persons concerned in this fact were duly executed, and as for the rest, says Dugdale, I presume they never returned into England, but if they did, they suffered accordingly §§. Thomas Mow-bray then earl of Nottingham, and earl marshal of England, but afterwards duke of Norfolk, had a principal hand in the execrable murder of the duke, and was himself banished for life, by the very king that had caused the duke to be mur-dered, on that day twelvemonth afterwards; which may serve as an example among others to deter all persons from committing murder, how-ever they may fancy themselves covered and pro-ected. The parliament prevailed with king Henry the Fourth to grant a general pardon in the first year of his reign, in which, however, the murderers of the duke of Gloucester were ex-cepted.

Thomas lord Despencer, commonly called Tho-mas Despencer of Glamorgan and Morganog, great grandson to Hugh Despencer the younger, was created earl about the 4th of October, 21° R. 2. He was one of the persecutors of duke Thomas of Woodstock, and of the chief of those peers who formally acted at the deposition of king R. 2. Being attainted ||||| by act of parliament 1° H. 4. he was first ignominiously degraded from his title, and afterwards adjudged as a traitor, and be-headed at Bristol. The lords in parliament, with the king's assent, adjudged and decreed, that he, † Knighton's Chron. p. 2685, 2686. This earl was the patron of and a great benefactor to the priory of Lanthony St. May. For in Prior Chiriton's Register, marked A. 7. is a grant made in the chapter-house of Lanthony, dated on the 28th of September, 1394, wherein 'tis said, that considering the various excellent things done to them and to their priory in their difficult businesses, the priory not being able to repay him in transitory things, lest they should afford a token of ingratitude, they purely, freely, voluntarily, and with their unanimous consent, obliged themselves and their successors, to perform for all times the par-ticulars following, viz. They assigned to him and Alinor his wife, one of their canons in priest orders, to celebrate the mass of Salus Populi, in the chapel of the Holy Trinity, in their priory; and after their death, the mass of Requiem, with the prayers which are used in their choir for the dead, as ought to be done in anni-versaries. And the priory shall have the souls of him and of Alinor, his wife, in special memory recommended.

‡ Knighton's Chron. Tyrel's Hist.

|| Camden's Brit. v. 1. col. 288.

* Dug. Bar. vol. 1. p. 170, 171.

§ Peck's Antiquities of Stamford, B. 12. p. 36.

†† Ibid. ibid.

‡‡ Bishop Tanner's Not. Mon. p. 136.

||| Dug. Bar. vol. 2. p. 171, says, That his body being em-balmed was buried in the church of Pleshey, which he had founded in honour of the Holy Trinity.

 Stowe's Survey of London, B. 6. pp. 14, 24, 26. In the Notes to Rapin's Hist. v. 3. p. 469, 'tis said, That his body was brought over to England soon after his death. But according to some, that it was first buried at his castle of Wadley, in Essex, and removed thence to the college, founded by him, at Pleshy, and afterwards to Westminster abbey, where his tomb is still to be seen.

§§ Walsingham's Hist. p. 394. Dugd. Bar. v. 1. p. 129.

||||| Camd. Brit. v. 1. col. 288. Dugd. Bar. v. 2. p. 397.

who was then present, should lose his dignity for himself and heirs, and all his castles, lordships, manors and lands granted since the arresting of duke Thomas beforementioned. That he should thenceforth give no liveries or cognizances, nor have any retainers, except his domestic servants.

His body was buried in the middle of the choir at Tewkesbury, under a lamp that burned before the host.

He married Constance, daughter of Edmund of Langley, duke of York, fifth son to E. 3. by whom he left one son, Richard, who having married Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Nevil earl of Westmoreland, died October 7, 1414, without issue, and was also buried at Tewkesbury. He had also two daughters, viz. Elizabeth and Isabel. The first died an infant. Isabel married Richard Beauchamp lord Bergavenny, and earl of Worcester, and from her, the present lord Despencer is lineally descended. She afterwards married Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, by whom she had issue also.

Humphry of Lancaster, the fourth and youngest son of king Henry the Fourth, was created † duke of Gloucester in the parliament held at Leicester by the king his brother, in the first year of his reign. And by that title, as also by the title of earl of Pembroke, had summons to the parliament held at Westminster the following year. He behaved very valiantly in several encounters and battles, and was therefore, in recompence of his past services, rewarded with large possessions. He used to stile ‡ himself son, brother, and uncle of kings, duke of Gloucester, earl of Pembroke, and lord high chamberlain of England. He occurs as lieutenant of the kingdom, 5° and 10° H. 5, and was protector || of his nephew king Henry the Sixth, in his minority, governing the kingdom with great prudence for twenty five years. But the king his nephew being very weak, and easy to be guided as those about his person would have him, Margaret, queen to king Henry the Sixth, with his uncle the cardinal, who was also bishop of Winchester, and several others, contrived and effected the duke's ruin. In February, 1447, he was summoned to parliament at St. Edmundsbury in Suffolk, and coming thither, was arrested the first or second day of the sessions, by viscount Beaumont, then high constable of England, accompanied by the duke of Buckingham and some others, and put into close confinement, all his servants being taken from him, and thirty two of the chief of them sent to divers prisons. In the night following he was found dead * in his bed, without any signs of violence on his body, which was soon after shewn to the lords and commons, as tho' he had died with some sudden disease; but people were convinced that he suffered by violent hands.

For his eminent virtues, knowledge and literature, he was beloved by the commons, and greatly respected by all men, truly deserving the name by which he was called, the great duke of Gloucester. As he was a true friend and patron to his country, so he also was to learned men and learning §, whereof he himself had a great share. Bale says of him, that he was Nobilitatis omnis atque eruditionis, Phoenix sane unicus. And Camden in his Britannia, speaking of St. Edmundsbury, says, "If England ever suffered by the loss of any man, it was in this place; for that true father of his country, Humphry duke of Gloucester, (a strict patron of justice, and one who had improved his own excellent natural endowments, by a course of severe studies) after he had governed the kingdom under king Henry the Sixth, for twenty five years together, with so great applause and commendation, that neither the good could find reason for complaints, nor the bad for calumnies, was cut off in this place by the malice of Margaret of Lorain ††, who observing her husband king Henry the Sixth to be of a low and narrow spirit, set about this villainous contrivance, to get the management of the government into her own hands. But in the issue, it was the greatest misfortune that could have befallen either her or the kingdom, for Normandy and Aquitaine were presently lost upon it, and a most lamentable civil war raised in England." In the parliament at Westminster, 33° H. 6. it was openly declared, that this duke was a true subject to the king. This great duke had his herald |||, who was called Pembroke, whom, in 1436 he sent to defy the duke of Burgundy. Duke Humphry was honourably buried in the choir of the abbey of St. Alban's, to which he was a great benefactor ††, and a † Dugd. Bar. v. 2. p. 198.

‡ Camd. Brit. v. 1. col. 288. Doctor Holland, (in his insertions in Camden's Britannia) says, that he had seen an instrument of his with these titles, Humphry, by the grace of God, son, brother, and uncle to kings, duke of Gloucester, earl of Hainault, Holland, Zeeland, and Pembroke, lord of Friesland, great chamberlain of the kingdom of England, protector and defender of the same kingdom and church of England.

|| Stowe's Chron. p. 200.

* Some say he was smothered between two feather beds; others, that he underwent the same fate with king Edward the Second. Rapin's History. Bale affirms that he was pulvinis suffocatus. And Stowe says, that several suspected him to be strangled.

§ This good duke had his education at Baliol college in Oxford, and became a great proficient in learning, especially in astronomy. He also began the foundation of the famous library in Oxford, over the Divinity-School there, by him also built, and gave to that library 129 books, procured by him at a great expence from Italy and France, valued at above 1000*l*. In 1440, he gave 126 volumes more, and in 1443 a much greater number, besides considerable additions at his death. Camden's Brit. v. 1. col. 311. Dugd. Bar. v. 2. p. 200.

†† The outrage exercised on a prince of this character, so universally beloved and esteemed by the people, drew upon the queen and the ministers an almost universal hatred, which time could never efface. The queen especially was publicly charged with the murder, and the respect due to her was not capable of bridling people's tongues. The queen's haughty carriage and partiality in disposing of places, and above all, this duke's murder, had drawn upon her the hatred of the nation to such a degree, that she was every where talked of with very little respect. Rapin's History, v. 1. pp. 570, 571, 573.

||| Stowe's Survey of London, B. 1. p. 143.

†† Particularly, he gave them Monkton priory, in the suburbs of Pembroke, as a cell to their abbey, 21° H. 6. Tanner's Notitia Monastica, p. 719.

noble monument was erected for him there, a draught of which may be seen in Sandford's Genealogical History. At one time, Sir John Beauchamp's tomb in St. Paul's cathedral was commonly mistaken for that of the duke of Gloucester, out of respect to whom, numbers of people went to view it, and sometimes staying longer than they expected, lost their dinner, which gave rise to the saying of dining with duke Humphry.

Richard Plantagenet, younger brother to king Edward the Fourth, was, shortly after the coronation of the king, advanced to the title of duke* of Gloucester, and for the better support of his dignity, he obtained a grant of the fee farm rent of that town, and also several other great and rich offices, lordships, honours, towns, castles, and manors in the counties of Dorset, York, Oxford, Cambridge, Cornwall, Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Bedford, Northampton, Rutland, Kent, Somerset, Wilts, Gloucester, and other parts of England and Wales. He was made constable of England, and justice of North Wales, 9° E. 4. and in the eleventh year of that reign was appointed lord chamberlain for life. But not being satisfied with these and other possessions which he then had, endeavoured to obtain the crown immediately after his brother's death; for notwithstanding his oath and recognition of prince Edward, several persons have judged, that before the death of his brother, he had a design of mounting the throne to the prejudice of his nephews. King Edward the Fourth died April the 9th, 1483, and left his brother, the duke of Gloucester, protector and guardian over the young king and kingdom: And on the 19th of June, in a proclamation then made at York, Richard was stiled brother and uncle of kings, duke of Gloucester, defender, protector, great chamberlain, and admiral of England. But on the 22d, the duke himself was proclaimed king of England, and crowned on the 6th of July following. After his coronation he went his progress; and before he proceeded to York, made some stay at the city of Gloucester, because he would not be too far from London, whilst his orders concerning his nephews were executed. His intimate friend the duke of Buckingham attended him thither, and during the king's stay, sent an express order to the governor of the tower to murder the two nephews. 'Tis probable that 'twas about this time that the community of Gloucester offered the king money, which he refused; and it seems to be about the month of August, in 1483, that king Edward the Fifth and the duke of York were barbarously murdered by the inhuman uncle's command. This merciless fact was committed by smothering them in bed about midnight. But in 1485, he was himself miserably slain by Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards king Henry the Seventh, in a pitched battle at Bosworth field, in Leicestershire; finding, by sad experience, says Camden, That usurped power is never lasting. The same, however, cannot be said of Richard as was of Galba, That he had been thought fit for empire, had he not reigned; for Galba, after he had settled in the empire, deceived all men's expectations; but Richard had been most worthy of a kingdom, had he not aspired to it by wicked ways; so that in the opinion of the wise, he is to be reckoned in the number of bad men, but of good princes. Britannia, col. 290. When he was duke, he obtained two licences § from the king, in the 17th year of his reign, the one to found a college at Middleham in Yorkshire, for one dean, six chaplains, four clerks, six choiristers, and a clergyman to officiate in the parish church; but he never finished it. The other was, to found another college at Bernard's Castle in the county of Durham, for a dean, twelve secular priests, ten clerks, and ten choiristers, in the chapel there; but there is nothing more said of it. After the battle, Richard was carried in a very ignominious manner to Leicester, and buried in St. Mary's chapel, belonging to the Grey Friars there.

Henry of Oatlands, the youngest son of king Charles the First, was born on the 8th of July, 1640, and declared ‡ duke of Gloucester by his royal father, and so always after entitled; but was not created 'till May 13, 1659, by his brother king Charles the Second, whom he accompanied into England at his restoration, and who also made him earl of Cambridge. Lord Clarendon and others, in the histories of the great rebellion, have given us an account of the interview between his father and him, the day before the king was beheaded. The king then taking the duke of Gloucester upon his knee, said, Sweetheart, now they will cut off thy father's head; at which words, the child looked very wishfully upon him; Mark, child, what I say; they will cut off my head, and perhaps make thee a king; but mark what I say, you must not be a king, so long as your brothers Charles and James are alive; for they will cut off your brothers heads as soon as they can catch them, and cut thy head off too at last; and therefore I charge you not to be made a king by them. At which the child sighing, said, I will be torn in pieces first; which falling unexpectedly from a child so young, made the king rejoice exceedingly. After the king was beheaded, the duke of Gloucester was sent with two servants to Dunkirk, with a promise, it is said, of a small exhibition || for his maintenance,

* Dug. Bar. v. 2. p. 165. — Out of respect to the city of Gloucester, from which he had his ducal title, after he was king, he erected a herald king at arms by the name of Gloucester, and submitted all Wales to his jurisdiction.

§ Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monast. pp. 117, 697.

‡ In a second petition of the mayor and burgessees of Gloucester to king Charles the Second, concerning the uniting of the two hundreds of Dudston and King's-barton to the out county, 'tis said, The third sons of the royal family own the title, and are stiled dukes of Gloucester. And in the end of it, Your petitioners and your whole kingdom are in so great hopes of seeing your majesty and themselves also happy in your royal issue, and your third son to be duke of Gloucester.

|| History of England in 2 vol. 8vo, p. 325.

provided he would not come near his brother nor any of his relations. But as soon as he arrived on the other side of the water, he was received according to his birth and quality, and was attended to the princess of Orange at Breda, to the great joy of her and all the royal family. After he had been some time at Breda, he was conducted to Paris by the earl of Lauderdale, to the king his brother, and to his mother the queen, and to his other relations, to whom he was as welcome as one risen from the dead; and was very civilly treated by the king and queen-mother of France. In 1653, when the form of government was to be settled, it is said by Mr. Whitlock, that the soldiers were then for a republic, the lawyers for a mixt monarchy, and many for this duke to be made king. He died of the small pox, September 30, 1660, in the twentieth year of his age, being one of the king's privy council, and a knight of the garter, much lamented by his royal relations and all that knew him, as he is represented to have been wise and accomplished above his years, and a prince of great expectation. As to his religion, he was an invincible asserter of the protestant faith against all the errors of popery; to preserve him from the temptations of which, his sister had for some years parted with one half of her annual income that was left to her own disposal. His body was buried in the royal chapel of king Henry the Seventh, at Westminster, under the tomb of Mary queen of Scotland, his great grandmother, and on his coffin, of black velvet, was this inscription, on a silver plate.

Depositum illustrissimi Principis HENRICI Ducis Gloucestræ,
Comitis Cantabrigiæ, Filij quatuordecim geniti
Serenissimi Regis Caroli (piæ semper memoriæ) defuncti;
Et fratris serenissimi Regis Caroli ejus nominis Secundi.
Qui in Aula Regia apud Whitehall, die Jovis,
Decimo tertio die Septembris, Anno a Christo nato 1660,
In Domino abdormivit, Ætatis suæ vicefimo.

William Henry, only son of George prince of Denmark and the princess Ann his wife, afterwards queen of England, was born at Hampton Court, July 24, 1689, and on the 27th following was christened by Henry bishop of London; king William the Third, and the king of Denmark, by his proxy the earl of Dorset, being god-fathers; and the marchioness of Halifax, god-mother. As soon as he was christened, he was immediately declared * duke of Gloucester by his uncle king William the Third, who was extremely fond of him. And, at a chapter of the garter, held at Kensington January 6, 1695, was elected member thereof, having been first knighted by the king with a sword of state, and was installed on the 24th of July following. He was a prince of a tender constitution, but of incomparable parts, promising whatever a nation could wish or desire. He died in the twelfth year of his age, in the year 1700, being then the only remaining issue of the prince and princess above mentioned. His death in a great measure was occasioned by over heating himself in the observation of his birth-day, (being Wednesday) July 24th, which caused a fever, and soon after a delirium, which lasted with his life.

Frederick Lewis, father to his present majesty king George the Third, was created duke of Gloucester by his royal grandfather, January the 10th, 1718, N. S.

His royal highness William-Henry, third son of his late royal highness Frederick prince of Wales, was born November 25, 1743, N. S. and on the 17th of November, 1764, his present majesty was pleased to grant to him and to his heirs male, the dignities of a duke of the kingdom of Great Britain, and of an earl of the kingdom of Ireland, by the names, stiles, and titles of duke of Gloucester and Edinburgh in Great Britain, and Earl of Connaught, in Ireland.

Of COUNCILS, SYNODS, ROYAL and GRAND ASSEMBLIES, and PARLIAMENTS, at GLOUCESTER.

WHEN Aurelius Ambrosius, king of the Britons, in 489, had opposed himself in a great battle against Hengist, at Masebell, beyond Humber in Yorkshire; the king and his nobility assembled together at Gloucester †, to consult what was to be done with their prisoner. Among others of the nobility, there were at that time of Gloucester, three noble and renowned personages present; Edel, the earl; Eldad, the bishop; and Eldo, the mayor or chief governor; and when the greatest part of the company seemed to favour the life of Hengist, Eldad the bishop spoke with such eloquence and power, that he moved all the company to be of his opinion; and by the common consent of all present, the prisoner was delivered to Eldo § the mayor, who leading him out of the city, put him to death.

In 804, Ethelrick, son of king Ethelmund, at the request of a synod held here, to which he was invited, was himself a great benefactor to the church of St. Peter.

In 896, here was a great meeting of the Mercnemen, when Wenefrid, bishop of Worcester, recovered several laws.

It appears from the Saxon Chronicle, that Lanfrank, archbishop of Canterbury, held two of his councils or synods here, and by his consent, and at the king's command, at one of them, Thomas archbishop of York consecrated William de S. Carilefo to the bishoprick of Durham, in the presence of the king; archbishop Lanfrank, and

* Hist. of England v. 2. 8vo pp. 501, 550. In Heylyn's Help to History, p. 331, 'tis said, That this duke William was nominated in 1689, but died before his creation, July 30, 1700.

† Dr. Hutton's Antiq. Oxford, in Mr. Hearne's Textus Roff. p. 352. M. Westm.

§ In some places 'tis said Eldol the earl killed him, See p. 93.

Wolstan, Osbern, Giso, and Rotbertus, at that time bishops, assisted.

King Edgar, upon innocents-day 964, * in this royal city, as then expressly called, gave to the monks of Worcester certain lands and liberties. This grant was confirmed by the king with the consent of his princesses and archbishops; and signed by the king, the queen, the two archbishops, six bishops, six abbats, six dukes, and twelve ministers.

In 1051, earl Eustace, king Edward the Confessor's brother-in-law, fled for shelter to Gloucester, which is called the court, where the king had abode some considerable time. Leofwine, or Leofric, earl of Mercia, and earl Styward of Northumberland, came to him hither with great forces, where he continued a good while §. And a little after the feast of St. Mary, in September, the king appointed a general assembly for all the nobility to meet here, which was very full. The same king in 1063, kept his court here, and sent hence a body of horse against Griffin prince of South-Wales; and he is frequently mentioned as being at this place.

King William the Conqueror, every year when his affairs would permit him, kept his christmas here; and to render this assembly the more grand, magnificent and sumptuous, and that the ambassadors of foreign nations might admire the appearance of the company; he, by his royal edicts, was attended by all the archbishops, bishops, abbats, earls, thanes, and knights. He wore his crown, and made a grand and delicate fare. The great men appeared in golden, or very splendid robes, which were called festiva indumenta, and the town found much of his entertainment and clothing, as it did for his successors, when at this place. He was at no time more courteous, gentle and kind than at such assemblies, so that those who came might see that his bounty equalled his riches.

In 1076, Lanfrank held his council here, when Wulketul, abbat of Croyland was deposed.

In 1085, at christmas, the king with his nobles held his court here for five days; and afterwards, the archbishop and clergy held a synod for three days, and the king's three chaplains, Maurice of Lundene, [London] William of Northfolc, [Norwich] and Redbeard of Ceasterfcire, [now Litchfield and Coventry] were then made bishops. Sax. Chron. Archbishop Wake's State of the Church, &c. p. 160.

King William Rufus usually kept his christmas here, which Brompton calls the custom of his father, and held it with great pomp. (p. 979.) Falling dangerously sick at Alvestan, in this county, which Dunelm calls the royal vill, in 1093, he removed in great haste to this town, where he continued in a very weak condition during lent; and here he granted the archbishop-rick of Canterbury to Anselm, and the bishoprick of Lincoln to Robert Bloet, his chancellor, and lands to several monasteries, and restored many rights and revenues which he had before detained. Notwithstanding articles of peace had been concluded between this king and Malcolm king of Scotland, some things still remained to be settled between them, wherefore Malcolm came to the English court in this city, and was received in a very imperious manner by Rufus. At his court held here the next year, great complaints and menaces were sent to the king by his brother Robert's ambassadors, concerning the king's misbehaviour towards him. At another of his great councils held here at christmas, he granted some possessions to the archbishop of York, the two archbishops, twelve bishops, eight abbats, eight lords, and others being present.

King Henry the First held his court here at candelmas 1123, and sent his letters all over England, commanding all his bishops, abbats and thanes to come to it for the choosing of an archbishop of Canterbury: William Corbeil was then nominated, and the king confirmed the election.

In 1175, on the feast of St. Peter and Paul, the king summoned hither another great council of his earls and barons, and Rese, and other princes of Wales; when the king issued orders to all his subjects, that if any of the Welch made insurrections in their countries, they should unanimously fall upon them; and the earl of Gloucester and the nobility were sworn to the observance thereof.

In 1190, William Longchamp, the pope's legate, protector of the kingdom in king Richard the Second's absence, and bishop of Ely, held a synod here.

On the eve of St. Simon and Jude 1216, there came to Gloucester, which was then thought the safest place in the realm, in the presence of Walo the pope's legate, the bishops of Winchester, Bath, Litchfield, and Worcester, the earls of Chester, Pembroke, Ferrars, William the marshal, John his brother, Philip of Albani, with abbats, priors, and a great company. On the morrow, the legate, with the bishops, earls, and lords before mentioned, led prince Henry to the abbey-church with solemn procession, where he publicly swore before the great altar, that he would pay due honour and reverence to God and his holy church all his life; administer justice, observe good laws and customs, and abolish all evil ones; and that he would pay one thousand marks yearly to the pope for his kingdoms, according to his father's grant. These things being done, the bishops of Winchester and Bath anointed and solemnly crowned him with the usual ceremonies; after which, the bishops, earls and lords led him, clad in royal vestments, to the table, where all things being set in order, they dined in joyful exultation. On the morrow, the king took the homage and fealty of all present; and continued in this town a considerable time afterwards.

* Mon. Angl. v. 1. p. 141. Homing Cartil. v. 2. p. 521.

§ Dunelm p. 184. Flor. Wigorn. pp. 117, 627.

In 1233 or 1234, on Saturday the morrow after St. Catharine's day, being November 26, there was a provincial council holden here before the archbishops and bishops; and the king sent a writ dated at Hereford, Nov. 23, prohibiting them to treat of any thing prejudicial to his crown, state and dignity.

In 1233, 17^o H. 3. the king kept the feast of whitsuntide here, and girt with the sword of knighthood Thomas earl of Warwick, Roger Bigod, earl of Norfolk, and Hugh de Vere, earl of Oxford; and also issued out his writs to all who held any lands of him by knight-service, commanding them to repair to him at this town, on the morrow after all-saints day, then next ensuing.

In 1234, on the Sunday after ascension-day, a colloquium was held at this place, when the disinherited barons were restored to the king's favour. [Hody.] The same year the king held his court here at christmas. M. Westm.

In 1241 the court was here, when David ap Llewelyn prince of North-Wales came and did the king homage for the principality of Wales. Dr. Fuller has observed that this place was more beloved by king Henry than London itself, because it was strong and loyal, and where he was crowned, and did afterwards often reside.

In 1278 or 1279 king Edward the First, in the octaves of St. John Baptist, held a parliament in the long work-house of the abbey, on which spot is built the house now extending from that belonging to the deanery, on the east, to the gate leading to the miller's green on the west; and summoned to it all persons, to shew by what authority and titles they held their lands or claimed their privileges, according to the statute of Quo Warranto; and to prevent the great mischiefs, damages and disherisons which the people had before suffered thro' the default of the laws, several laws were then enacted, which ever since have gone by the name of the statutes of Gloucester.

In 1301 there was another statute of Quo Warranto dated from this place.

Wednesday, October the 20th, 1378, Richard the Second held a parliament here, in which were great bickerings between the temporal lords and the bishops, each complaining of the others incroachments. It continued twenty eight days, and much business was dispatched therein. On the day of the rising of this parliament, November 16, Simon de Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, held a provincial council in a chamber within the abbey, and made a decree concerning the stipends of priests.

On October 20, 1407, king Henry the Fourth held a parliament here, wherein several laws were made: it continued forty four or fifty four days, and Mr. Prynne affirms, that the members of it husbanded well their time for the king and kingdom's advantage.

In 1420, February 15, king Henry the Fifth held a parliament here, which was adjourned to Westminster in about a fortnight's time.

R. Cole affirms in his roll, now in the custody of the city, "That kyng Harry iiij held a parliament at Glouc. the ix yere of his regne, begynnyng the sayde parliament at alhalontyd and so contynued til midwynt' next fuyng.

Of BATTLES and SIEGES.

ONE of king Edgar's battles against the Danes was fought here. After the king's death, Ethelwulph † his son succeeding in 836, the Danes returning to the kingdom with greater rage and cruelty than they had in the former reign, possessed themselves of this place, and pitching their tents here, lorded it over this part of the country, and made themselves masters not only of the forest of Dean, but likewise of great part of Herefordshire.

In 978 Ethelred was crowned king, and not long after the beginning of his reign, the Danes again entered the kingdom, and began afresh their intermixt cruelties, burning and destroying most of the eminent cities and places in the kingdom. Amongst the rest, this city was the third time ravaged by them, and almost consumed by fire, for they had no respect to places or persons, sacred or civil; but like a tempestuous hurricane, drove the whole kingdom before them, and in the end brought the country into servitude and slavery.

In 1172 ‡, Jorwerth lord of Caerleon upon Uske gathered all his friends and forces together, and without mercy destroyed all the country with fire and sword, even to the gates of Hereford and Gloucester.

In 1263 ||, Sir Maci de Befile, (called also Mathias de Befille) a French knight, was made sheriff of Gloucestershire, and constable of Gloucester-castle by the king. But the barons being greatly displeased at it, set up Sir William Tracy, a knight of this country, in opposition to him. Sir William, as he was holding a county court, was assaulted by a large body of the king's forces, with Maci at their head, who took him, and after using him with great barbarity, led him through the town to the castle, and there cast him into prison. When the barons heard of it, Sir Roger de Clifford and Sir John Giffard came to rescue Sir William, and besieged the castle for four days. Sir Maci, who is characterised to be a stout and bold knight, refused to yield it to them, and continued † Manuscript Coll.

‡ Lloyd's Welch History, p. 233.

|| R. Glouc. Chron. pp. 535, 536, 537. Cont. M. Paris.

Trivet's Chron. M. Westm. Walsingham's Upod. Neust. Daniel's, and several other Histories of England.

to defend it and the town, 'till the first gate leading to it was burnt, as was afterwards the wooden bridge belonging to the castle. Some prisoners were released by the governor in expectation of their assistance, but they treacherously made another entrance or postern for the besiegers, and thereupon Sir Maci and his men flying to the high and strongest tower, defended themselves as well as they could, 'till the three iron gates and locks were broken down, and he himself was taken; and even then with invincible courage he refused to surrender. Sir Roger de Clifford having taken the castle, sent Sir Maci to the marches of Wales, where he was kept prisoner at Erdesley-Castle.

Sir Roger de Clifford afterwards returned to his allegiance, and delivered the town and castle of Gloucester into the king's hands; but Sir John Giffard retired to Brimpsfield, and having assembled many of the most valiant of his neighbours, there were frequent skirmishes between the garrison of that castle and this of Gloucester. The next year the town was taken* by some of the barons, and the following stratagem was used to accomplish it: Sir John Giffard, who is called a knight of wonderful probity and courage, and Sir John de Balun, being cloathed with Welch cloaks, and riding upon two woolpacks, after the manner of chapmen or woolmongers, were let into the town at the west-gate. When it was unlock'd, they both leaped off their horses, and casting away their cloaks, appeared armed from head to foot. At this fight the porters were so terrified as to deliver up the keys; and thereupon, the gates were thrown open to the forces which the two knights had procured, and were ready at hand. Prince Edward followed the barons close at their heels, and having speedily repaired the bridge over Severn, which they had burnt, came hither on Ash-wednesday, and assaulted the town at the west-gate. But the barons within defended themselves so well that he could not conquer them. Forces were sent from the castle, which was still in the king's hands, to assist the prince; but Grimbald Pauncefoot attacking them, turned them back with the loss of some wounded. The prince seeing his condition, turned into the meadows, and was brought by a boat to the castle, where he set up his banner upon the high tower, which, when the barons saw, they were a little surprized. However on the town side they presently besieged the castle, which was stoutly defended by the garrison. But Sir John Giffard coming from Brimpsfield, and burning the castle-bridge which cut off the communication with the country; and the prince seeing Robert Ferrers earl of Derby, coming against him with a great reinforcement, went unarmed and very privately to the barons, and upon oath granted them what they desired, upon which they left the town. But the prince revenged himself on the bur-geses, whom he put in prison 'till they had paid 1000*l.* for their ransom, and then, after very ill treatment, they were set at liberty; but the town was miserably destroyed. A little after this, the prince fortified the town, and about 1264, the earl of Leicester got possession of it; when the prince, the earl of Gloucester, and others besieged it on the north side, and entering at a breach which they had made in the wall leading to St. Oswald's gate, took it from Leicester.

In 1265, Robert de Ros, William de Vesti, and other knights and gentlemen, to the number of three hundred, entered the town to defend themselves in it against the prince, but they were obliged to surrender it, and were suffered to depart, swearing not to bear arms against him for a month.

As soon as the civil war broke out in 1641, this city joined in the parliament interest, and to put themselves in a posture of defence, added one company of voluntiers to the trained bands which assisted them; procured some pieces of ordnance from London and Bristol; provided materials, and at a great expence raised its fortifications. Thereupon, the king, by a letter from Oxford, dated February 12, 1642, sent to the sheriff and justices of Gloucestershire, prohibiting his subjects in that county from having any traffic or commerce with the city, 'till it should return to its obedience; which letter was publicly read in the churches and chapels in the city, that all persons might know his majesty's pleasure, and do their duty accordingly. Prince Rupert on the 3d of the same month, demanded the city for the king. Lieutenant colonel Maffie and the principal officers returned him for answer, That they were resolved with their lives and fortunes to defend the city for the use of the king and parliament, and would by no means surrender at the demand of a foreign prince: The mayor also sent another message, That according to his oath and allegiance, he was resolved to keep the city on his majesty's behalf, and would not deliver it up. Thereupon another summons to the same purpose was sent by the prince, and it had a like effect.

About the middle of this month, lord Herbert, son of the marquis of Worcester, general of South-Wales, with a body of about 1500 foot and 500 horse, well armed, which he had raised with more expedition than was expected, came to reduce the garrison. The horse were put under the command of his brother lord John Somerset, and the foot under Sir Jeremiah Brot, their major general. The last of these soon after demanded the city for the king's service, but the summons from a Welch brigade was received with scorn; whereupon the Welch began to encamp at Highnam, within a mile and a half of the city. The garrison deserting Sudely-Castle and other out garrisons, made good the guard of the bishop's palace on the Vineyard hill, and sometimes made slender sallies; for the governor had not 100 horse, and the Welch forces were double the number of the garrison, 'till 200 foot and dragoons from Bristol, commanded by captain John Fiennes, came to their supply. However the Welch lay still in their camp, and for five weeks together did not so much as attempt the out guards, or any considerable action, but expected that prince Maurice from Cirencester should take equal care to distress the city on the other side, which he did to a great degree; and 'twas thought that prince Rupert would speedily come to their assistance, which, on account of Bristol, he could not possibly do. Mean time, colonel Maffie (by order of Sir William Waller) immediately after the taking of Malmesbury, drew out the garrison forces to Highnam, and kept them to very close play. But Sir William Waller, by the help of some flat bottom boats, crossing the river at Frampton passage, and advancing towards the Welch with a light body of about 2000; the Welch, tho' their works were too strong to be entered by horse and dragoons; their avenues narrow, with cannon planted in all of them; and though their number was near, if not equal to their enemy; without striking a stroke, founded a parley, and surrendered on condition that they might receive quarter, and that the officers might have respect according to their quality, which was granted: So on the 24th or 25th of March, near 1300 foot and three troops of horse were led prisoners into the city, and several of them for some time, were kept under strict confinement in the churches of St. Mary de Load and the Holy Trinity. But many of the parliament garrisons being before filled with such persons, most of the common soldiers were, within ten days, sent back into their own country, having taken an oath never to serve against the parliament; others that offered themselves were entertained in the parliament's service: Several of the gentlemen and officers paid a ransom, and took the same oath with the soldiers; and the rest were sent to Bristol, but delivered at the taking of that city by prince Rupert.

* R. Glouc. p. 537 et sequentes.

This defeat, tho' it seem'd so inconsiderable, with the other preparations that were rendered useless by it, lord Herbert himself affirmed to cost 60,000 l. tho' 'tis called a mushroom army that had not courage to defend itself. About this time a great deal of provision was laid in, and a considerable quantity of money provided by the city, and the king's forces frequently hovered over the hills, and now and then skirted upon the town; but no close siege was laid to it 'till the 10th of August following. This was then said to be the only garrison the parliament had between Bristol and Lancaster on the north of England, which, if the king could have taken, he would have been master of the Severn, and would have needed no forces in Wales.

The king did not himself approve the undertaking of the siege, but as it was a measure strongly recommended by his friends, he came in person against the city, and about two in the afternoon sent the following summons by two heralds, who would have read it openly in the street; but the mayor would not permit them to do it, so it was read in the Tolfey only, by Somersfet herald.

Charles Rex.

Out of our tender compassion to our city of Gloucester, and that it may not receive prejudice by our army, which we cannot prevent if we be compelled to assault it; we are personally come before it to require the same, and are graciously pleased to let all the inhabitants of and all other persons within that city, as well soldiers as others, know, that if they shall immediately submit themselves, and deliver this city to us, we are contented freely and absolutely to pardon every one of them without exception; and do assure them in the word of a king, that they nor any of them shall receive the least damage or prejudice by our army in their persons or estates: But that we will appoint such a governor and a moderate garrison to abide there as shall be both for the ease and security of the city and the whole county. But if they shall neglect this offer of grace and favour, and compel us by the power of our army to reduce that place (which by the help of God we shall easily and shortly be able to doe) they must thank themselves for all the calamities and miseries that shall befall them. To this message we expect a clear and positive answer within two hours after the publishing hereof. And by these presents do give leave to any persons easily to repair to and return from us whom that city shall desire to employ unto us in that business, and we do require all the officers and souldiers of our army quietly to suffer them to pass accordingly.

The king immediately drew a part of his troops into Tredworth field, before the town, and being attended by prince Charles, the duke of York, prince Rupert, and general Ruthen, faced the city with about 6000 horse and foot, not above a quarter of a mile from it, and 2000 horse on the other side within cannon shot, the main of the army being not yet come up. The Governor, with the consent of several others, within less than the time prescribed, sent the following answer to the king by serjeant major Pudsey and Mr. Tobias Jordan; who, it is said, without any circumstance of duty or good manners, told his majesty, That they brought an answer from the godly city of Gloucester, the mayor being first satisfied in some scruples touching the oath of his mayoralty.

THE ANSWER.

August 10, 1643.

We the inhabitants, magistrates, officers and soldiers within the garrison of Gloucester, unto his majesty's gracious message return this humble answer; that we do keep this city, according to our oaths and allegiance, to and for the use of his majesty and his royal royal posterity; and do accordingly conceive ourselves wholly bound to obey the commands of his majesty, signed by both houses of parliament; and are resolved, by God's help, to keep this city accordingly.

DE WISE, mayor §,	John Brewster,	G. Davidson,
Robert Maxwell,	Edw. Massie,	Con. Ferrer,
William Lugge,	My. Singleton,	Thomas Hill,
Thomas Pury,	John Scriven,	Nich. Webb,
Jo. Dorney,	Anth. Edwards,	John Halford,
Toby Jordan,	Hum. Mathews,	Isaac Dobson,
Edward Gray,	Charles Blount,	Peter Crispe,
Rob. Backhouse,	Ja. Marcus,	Tho. Pury, Jun.
Robert Stevenson,	Thomas Blayney.

His majesty received this answer with great temper and mildness, only expressing a kind of wonder at their confidence, saying in the hearing of the messengers, Waller is extinct, and Essex cannot come. And indeed their resolution was wonderful, for at that time there were not in the city more than fourteen or fifteen hundred soldiers, and forty or fifty barrels of powder; they had a slender artillery, and their works were low and unfinished.

Upon the return of the messengers, the governor and council of war judged it absolutely necessary to pull down a few houses, and to set on fire all the rest of the suburbs, in which were many large, handsome houses, well inhabited. By burning of the suburbs, (says Mr. Dorney in his fourth speech, made October 8, 1646) the city is a garment without skirts, which we were willing to part withall, lest our enemies should sit upon them.

The earl of Brentford, the king's general, brought all the battering cannon that could be spared from Oxford; and all things were made ready for the siege. The Rev. Mr. Chillingworth had invented, after the manner of the Romans, testudines cum pluteis, which ran upon cart-wheels, with a blind of planks, musket proof, (each having four holes for musketeers to fire through) placed upon the axle tree, to defend the musketeers and those that thrust forward the engine, the fore-part of which was to serve for a bridge. In using these engines the wheels were to fall into the ditch, and the bridge to rest upon the town breast-works, and so each would become a compleat bridge by which to enter the city.

Sir William Vavasor drew all his forces to the west side, broke down all bridges, and after leaving a strong guard at the Vineyard, joined the Welch at Longford and Kingsholm, on the north-west side of the city, to the forces lately come from Worcester. General Ruthen had placed his men in some grounds behind Lanthony, about a quarter of a mile from the town. And Sir Jacob Ashley was quartered with a strong body in some part of the suburbs on the east side.

Many of the king's commanders were officers of the greatest skill and experience, and his army was increased by the arrival of two regiments out of Ireland, commanded by colonel Myn and Sir William St. Leger.

The king, almost all the time of the siege, quartered at Matson-house, on the east.

The south and south-east sides of the city, tho' really they were the strongest and best fortified, were represented to his majesty as most proper to be attacked, because there only the springs would not annoy the works of the besiegers, and if his majesty's troops could enter at a breach in these parts they would be instantly possessed of the highest ground in the city. These things the garrison were aware of, and to defend themselves raised a sconce, and strengthened all their inward works with earth.

During the siege there were frequent assaults on both sides. The king's troops endeavoured to fill up some part of the moat between the south and west gates; and sunk a mine under the east-gate, but it was countermined. In short, their efforts seem to have been very feeble and altogether unsuccessful. They made about 150 great shot against the wall, which shattered the stonework considerably; but the garrison drew an inward work from the south side all along the friers orchard, southward, and stopt all the passages between that and the east port. They also threw up a strong work across the east-gate-street, which had a large trench before it filled with water. This work they intended to have raised to the height of the eaves of the houses, and to have planted cannon thereon if the siege had continued. And so indefatigable were the citizens, that the very women and children were daily employed in fetching of turf, and placing of cannon-baskets and earth, for repairing of the fortifications during the whole siege, which lasted twenty six days.

On Monday, the 4th of September, at night, the garrison discovered two fires on Wainload-hill, which was the signal for approaching relief, and answered them by lights from the college-tower. On the 5th, which was appointed for a public fast to be kept within the city, the siege was raised.

This great event was brought about by the earl of Essex, who determining to relieve Gloucester, had obtained from the committee for the militia in the city of London, two regiments of trained bands, three regiments of auxiliaries, and a regiment of horse, with eleven pieces of cannon and three drakes, by way of reinforcement to his army. On the 24th of August, the earl mustered his forces upon Hounslow-heath, when they were 10,000 compleat; after which he took up his quarters at Colebrook, and on the 26th marched to Beconsfield, and so forward to Beerton, where he cloathed his army. Upon intelligence of this advance, prince Rupert, with the greatest part of the king's horse, drew off from before Gloucester

§ Reliq. Carolina, p. 212; but in Rushworth's Collections Constance Ferrer is said to be mayor. Lord Clarendon says that the king sent the summons on August 10, 1643, which was to oppose their march, whilst the king carried on the siege. About Bicester 400 of the king's troops skirmished with a part of the parliament-army, but were forced by numbers to retire; and scarce a day passed in the whole march without some small engagement, which obliged Essex's army to proceed with the greatest order and caution. The reinforcement from London, under colonel Manwaring, joined the earl of Essex on the first of September at the general rendezvous on Brackley-heath; after which the whole proceeded on their route for Gloucester, but were attacked on the 4th, at Stow on the Would, by the prince, with about 4000 horse, in which action the loss on either side was nearly equal. On the 5th, Essex advancing to Presbury-hill, drew up his army in view of the city, and discovered the huts in the royal camp on fire, and the siege raised as already related. The general himself marched to Cheltenham, but the king's troops often skirmished with him and beat up his quarters. On the 8th the whole army entered Gloucester, and were joyfully received; and having furnished the city with some necessaries during their stay of two nights, moved to Tewkesbury, and lay there five days, that in the mean time Gloucester might take in more provisions.

Wednesday, but Dorney says the siege was laid on Thursday, August 10, 1643, and raised Tuesday, September 5.

When the siege was raised, the city was reduced to two or three barrels of powder, and other provisions were short in proportion.

The king's army, which is said to have been near 30,000, retreated in the night up Painf-wick-hill. Their loss before Gloucester is computed to have been upwards of 1000 men, whilst that of the garrison did not amount to 50, of which two only were officers.

The raising of this siege gave a greater turn to the king's affairs than his enemies expected, who were then in the lowest condition they had experienced during the war.

In an original letter wrote by bishop Goodman, dated Chedsey, November 23, 1649, directed to the mayor and aldermen of Gloucester, and now in the custody of the corporation, 'tis said, You have better deserved of the parliament than any city of England, not only for the enduring of a great siege, but indeed the turning of the wheel, for ever after the parliament-forces prevailed, which before they did not. And 'tis said in Mr. Dorney's fourth speech, That the standing out of this place in the late siege, made it the vertical point in this civil war; for from that time the enemies [i. e. the king's forces] more and more declined; insomuch as it pleased that reverend judge serjeant Wilde, in his late charge, fitting upon the commission of oyer and terminer here, to stile us of this place the conservators of the parliament of England.*

A letter of thanks, accompanied with a present of 1000*l.* was sent to colonel Maffie as a reward for his services; proper largesses were also sent to the inferior officers, and the private men of the garrison had a month's pay over and above their arrears, by an order of both houses of parliament made on the 15th of September, ten days after the raising of the siege. The 5th of September was ordered by the mayor and common council to be annually observed as a day of thanksgiving for raising the siege. It was called Gloucester-holiday, and kept accordingly 'till the restoration.

Many attempts were afterwards made to recover the city, but none succeeded. After Newbury fight, Sir William Vavasor was sent to Hereford with a strong party, to raise forces in those parts, and was ordered by the king to distress Gloucester on the Welch side. Sir John Wintour, at his entering upon his government of Newnham, plundered the villages near the city; and about the latter end of 1643, upon intelligence of the governor's absence, advanced with a considerable body of men to surprize it; but the governor returning, he defeated and drove them back in great confusion.

After this, a project was formed to get the city by corrupting captain Backhouse, one of the officers of the garrison, in order to which lieutenant-colonel Stanford wrote him a letter §, which was carried by one of Backhouse's particular friends, who told him, that if he would undertake the business he might have 5000*l.* reward. Backhouse shewed a seeming readiness to engage in the affair, but imparted it to the governor, and by his advice returned a complying answer, desiring that a cor-

* The unfortunate siege of this city, says Sir Robert Atkins, gave a stand to the king's victorious army; which being raised as has been related, it turned the state of the war, and the king could never after obtain success; which confirms, that the greatest of kings, and the best of men are not secured from the violence of the wicked. This royal family will always be honoured in the memory of good men, and must have been so throughout the Christian world, had it been as prosperous as it was deserving. King James the First was the most learned king: King Charles the First was the most religious king: King Charles the Second was the best natured king; and king James the Second was the best friend; which virtue was most eminent in his tender love to his children, and in his steady kindness to his servants. This succession of kings has been opposed by their virtues; for peace, religion, good nature, and friendship ruined them. It is remarkable of this royal family, that the witty king was overreached by the Spanish ambassador: That the religious king was murdered by rebellious saints: The voluptuary was conspired against by men of no religion; and the best friend was betrayed and forsaken by them whom he most intirely loved. It does not hence follow that this family will always be unfortunate. Ancient and Present State of Glostershire. pp. 88, 89. — The passages in this note being remarkable will serve as an apology for inserting them, to those who differ in sentiment from the learned historian; to such as agree with him, I am satisfied none will be thought necessary.

§ The letter is as follows: Good Robin, It is not unknown to you that once I loved you, and therefore I send this to advise you, whilst it is in your power, to make use of it, and take my word I am confident as yet you may not only have your pardon, but raise yourself a greater fortune than the condition of those you serve are able to afford you. This you may gain by the delivery—you may guess my meaning of what place, which is not hard for you to do. You know the old saying, fallere fallentem non est fraus. This is the advice of him that, when you shall desert the cause, will ever be

Your loving friend
Edward Stanford.
respondence

respondence might be settled, which was done, and many letters passed between them.

The design being thus far advanced, it was thought necessary that lord Digby should write to captain Backhouse †, to give him a stronger assurance of what had been promised him, and to name several of the king's officers, that Backhouse might approve of one who should assist in the execution of their project. Backhouse chose Sir William Vavafor: Afterwards meeting lieutenant colonel Stanford on Corfe-lawn, he received 200*l.* of him, when it was agreed between them, that on the 15th of January the king's troops should advance to the west-gate, and Backhouse should let them in, provided they came by nine o'clock or half an hour after; and early that evening he sent them the word, which was Bristol.

As soon as this message was dispatched, the governor called a council of war, acquainted them with the whole plot, and ordered both the soldiers and citizens under arms. Four men were placed under Over-bridge, which the king's troops were to pass, with orders upon firing the first gun to cut a large cable, which done, the bridge would have fallen in, and cut off the retreat of the royalists, who, if they could not have conquered, must all have been cut to pieces or made prisoners. But the troops intended for this expedition moved so slowly, that when they came to Lassington-hill, within a mile of the town, it was almost day break, whereupon they retreated to Newent, and Gloucester expected them in vain.

Backhouse endeavoured to draw them on again, but in a few days they had notice of his having discovered the plot, and so desisted from any further correspondence with him.

This city was thought to be a place of such consequence to the king, that Sir William Vavafor was afterwards reinforced to reduce it, who advanced to Painswick with a very strong brigade, which upon lord Hoptoun's defeat by Sir William Waller, was instantly ordered to march to Oxford; otherwise, it is probable that Gloucester might have been blocked up and besieged a second time.

The city suffered greatly by the siege, as appears by the following petition:

To the supreme Authority, the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England.

The humble Petition of the Mayor, Burgeses, and divers Hundreds of Inhabitants of the City of Gloucester, sheweth,

THAT the city of Gloucester being a garrison for the parliament's service, in 1643, and of vast importance to the commonwealth, upon the approach of the late king's army, to besiege the said city, it was resolved by the governour and council of war there, That the said city and garrison could not be preserved against the enemy, unless the whole suburbs of the said city (which was a full third part thereof) were pulled down and demolished.

That in pursuance of the said resolve, two hundred forty and one houses (besides barns, stables, outhouses, gardens, orchards and goods) of the suburbs of the said city, wherein so many families lived, were burned, pulled down, and utterly destroyed, the night before the leaguer was laid to the said city, by the late king's forces; whereby most of your petitioners were reduced to most miserable poverty, and the estates of most of them much impaired, and the said city, in general, very much impoverished.

That it was proved upon oath, to the grand inquest, at an affizes held for the county of the said city, that your petitioners losses, by the burning and destroying their said houses, amounted to the sum of twenty six thousand pounds and upwards; as by the certificate of the grand inquest to the lord chief baron, a copy whereof is hereunto annexed, may appear.

That your petitioners willingly suffered the loss of their houses and goods, for their affections to the parliament service; and it was a great means, under God, to preserve the said city and garrison, and by consequence the whole country, from the power of the enemy: And your petitioners have ever since continued constantly faithful to the commonwealth, and the present government thereof, in the times of greatest danger and tryal unto this day; and have always hoped, that according to the parliament's declarations, their losses and ruins for the commonwealth's service, should be repaired out of the estates of the commonwealth's enemies, who occasioned the same.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray,
That their losses and ruins may be re-

† His lordship's letter runs thus: Sir, You have so far declared your desires to serve his majesty, unto my very good friend Mr Stanford, that I think it fit you should now receive some more authentic assurances of his majesty's gracious acceptance thereof, than perhaps you will think his bare engagement to be; therefore I do hereby solemnly engage my word unto you, both as a minister of state and as a gentleman, that if you shall perform faithfully what you promise there, you shall punctually receive, immediately after, such a pardon as yourself shall desire, and the sum of 2000*l.* As for the 300*l.* which you desire in present, such a confidence I will have in your word, that as soon as ever I shall have received your answer to this, under your hand, it shall be forthwith paid into what place soever you shall appoint, and to what person. As for the particular way of effecting our design, those you propose are very rational, but the choice and disposition of that must be between you and those who are to execute it; with whom, if it were possible, you should procure a meeting at some unsuspected place. I do propose to you your choice of several men, and whom of them you shall like best and think fittest, by reason of the place where his command is, to him alone and no other the business shall be imparted; and whether Sir William Vavafor, commander in chief of the forces now in Gloucestershire; or colonel Mynne, commander of a brigade of English come out of Ireland; or colonel Washington, who is at Evesham; or lastly, whether the governor of Berkeley castle. As soon as you shall send me an answer, you shall receive satisfaction from him, who hopes you will so behave yourself as to make me

Oxford, this 14th of December, 1643.

Your friend

George Digby.
paired,

paired, and their distressed families relieved, out of the estates of such delinquents as shall be appointed to be sold; or in such other way as shall seem best to your wisdom, Justice, and charity.

And they shall be bound to pray, &c.

In 1644, several ordinances were made for recruiting and paying the garrison, by which the county of Gloucester was rated to pay 1000*l.* and the city 100*l.* weekly; besides, the third part of the customs payable upon currants was appropriated to that purpose*. Another ordinance was made about June, that colonel Maffie should have an estate of inheritance of 1000*l.* a year at least, settled upon him by the committee of Gloucester, out of some estates then esteemed to be forfeited †.

Colonel Maffie was appointed deputy-governor by the earl of Stanford, to whom the government of this garrison was committed about 1641; but in 1643, Maffie was made governor himself, and continued so till 1645, when the parliament appointed him lieutenant general of the west, to the great regret of the inhabitants of the place; the whole garrison, city and county unanimously petitioning for his continuance among them.

On the 3d of June, the mayor, alderman Singleton, and colonel Blount had the command given to them, till another governor should come down, or the parliament give further orders. Colonel Thomas Morgan occurs governor August 13, 1645, and December 28, 1647. As does Sir William Constable December 7, 1648, and December 27, 1650.

Major general Maffie had signalized himself in several remarkable actions, and was therefore highly esteemed by the parliament, the army, and the city of London; but things having been carried to greater extremities than he expected, or could approve of, he withdrew himself from their party, and went out of the kingdom in the year 1647; but returning, was made prisoner at St. James's, (being one of the secluded members) whence he escaped January 18, 1648, and went to the prince in Holland. He afterwards formed a design of surprizing Gloucester, which was not then a garrison, and conferred incog. with his friends in that city; but the design took air, and was frustrated. This was probably in 1659, when the keys of the city were ordered to be delivered out of the possession of captain Hill, to the mayor, on account of some matters imparted to the corporation.

The general lay concealed some time in a little house near Simonshall, belonging to Mr. Veal of that place, who was a friend to the royal cause, and Maffie's relation; but at length he was discovered, and taken there by some troopers, who were made drunk before they left the place. However, they put him upon a horse before one of the men, and carried him off; but going down Nimpsfield-hill, which is very steep and woody, Maffie threw himself from the horse, and being a stout man, and his guards a little intoxicated, he made his escape in a dark tempestuous night.

Of the GOVERNMENT and OFFICERS of the CITY.

WHO were the governors in the time of the Britons I cannot tell, nor can I learn who they were when the Romans divided Britain into Britannia Prima and Britannia Secunda, and made the town subject to a president residing at London: But I conjecture that in this and all other changes which they made, the town was always under the dominion of a consul; for 'tis said †, that in the time of the Romans, and some time after, it was governed by persons who had that title: And in the time of the Saxons, and since, it was governed by a portgreve, præfect, or provost ‡.

Morvid was consul in king Arthur's reign, and Wulpin le Rue 5^o regis Canuti. Wihifide is called præfect in 1022, and Osmund was provost 16^o and 22^o H. 2: In the reign of king John, who made it a borough to be governed by two bailiffs, and in that of king H. 3. who made it a corporation, the head officers of the town who were afterwards termed bailiffs, were generally called præpositi or provosti: And though the king appointed another person to be provost of Gloucester, yet it is probable this person did nothing more than receive the king's rents, and other payments due to him; and that till Henry the Third's time, there was not a regular succession of provosts or bailiffs here. The first in king Henry the Third's reign, were Thomas Felde, and John Blound or Blounte. Those which occur afterwards, in the writings which I have seen, will be found in a list at the end of this chapter.

The following persons are by charter or prescription officers in the city.

The mayor, who is also the clerk of the market, and the marshal and steward of the king's household when his majesty is in the city.

The high steward.

The recorder.

The two members of parliament.

The twelve aldermen, out of whom the mayor is chosen. That alderman which was last mayor is generally the coroner, and the president of the hospitals.

* Civ.

§ Sir Robert Atkyns says, that 1000*l.* a year was voted to him out of Sir John Wintour's estate; and in the mean time, 200*l.* were paid him, and a pension of 1000*l.* a year settled on him for life.

|| MS. Collections.—Mag. Brit. Ant. et Nov.—Sir R. Atkyns.
† G. Monmouth.—Mon. Angl.—Queen Mary's Warrants.

The town clerk.

The sheriffs.

The common council.

The treasurer.

The chamberlain.

The sword-bearer.

The twelve constables to the four wards ; viz. for the west-ward four, north-ward four, east-ward two, south-ward two.

The four serjeants at mace.

A cryer, or day-bellman.

A water bailiff.

Four porters.

A night-bellman.

A goaler.

A beadle and provost-marshal.

This city has the highest marks of honour generally granted to magistracy, viz. scarlet gowns, a sword, and cap of maintenance, and four serjeants at mace; but the ordinary robes are a black cloth gown, edged with velvet, and lined with velvet or fur.

The new mayor, when he is elected, wears upon his scarlet gown, a scarlet cloak or mantle, which was given by alderman Thomas Semys, in 1602; and served for this purpose, 'till about 1738, when another was used in its stead.

The mayor hath in his custody three swords, viz. one with the figure of queen Elizabeth, and E. R. 1574, and the arms of the city, as they were then, on it; another, which is covered with black velvet, and has the present arms of the city on it; and lastly, that which is now usually carried before him, and has the city-arms, and Toby Jordan mayor, thereon. He hath also the cap of maintenance, two large silver maces gilt, and several pieces of plate in his possession.

The mayor hath for his hospitality, and for his keeping the sword-bearer, two serjeants, and two porters, 80*l.* a year, beside wheat, capons, two falmons, and other perquisites.

Each of the sheriffs hath in his custody a large silver mace gilt; and maintains a serjeant at mace, and one of the porters.

A List of Provosts, Bailiffs, Mayors and Sheriffs down to the present Time.

- 1241, William le, or de, Somery or Sumery, Egeas Fisher, or Pessoner.
 1245, William or Walter le Sumery. Roger Lenveise, or Danveise.
 1248, William de Chilterham, Herbert le Mercer.
 1249, William Somery, or de Sumery. Richard Francis, or Franceys.
 1252, John Simon, or Fitz Simon. Roger Lenveise.
 1254, Luke Cornubiensis. Ege Piscator.
 1255, John Fitz Simon. William de Chilterham.
 1261, Robert Potel, or Putteley. Robert Sely, or Cely.
 1262, The same.

- 1263, William de Chilterham. Philip Speciare.
 1269, John Payn. Robert le Wife, or Lenweysy, or Lenveise.
 1270, William de Chilterham. John Cornubiensis.

Several other persons were so called and enjoyed the office in or about the reign of king Henry the Third; but as the writings wherein they are mentioned are without date, the precise time when any of them were in this office does not appear; but they were

- | | |
|--|----------------------------------|
| Helias Godman, | William Burgens. |
| Richard Fitz William, | Maurice Paumer, or Palmer. |
| Maurice Fitz Durand, | John Tixtor. |
| or Durant, | |
| The same, | Gilbert Seisor, or le Tailor. |
| Walter Scriptor, | Thomas Oye. |
| The same, | Richard Burgens. |
| * Richard Burgensis, | Thomas Oye. |
| or Burgeys, | |
| The same, | Maurice Fitz Durand. |
| The same, | Adam Croc, or Crok. |
| The same, | Thomas Ovenat. |
| The same, | David Dunning; |
| The same, | Walter Payn. |
| David Dunning, | Thomas Oye. |
| The same, | Walter Hoch, or Hoich. |
| The same, | Walter Pain, |
| John Draper, | William de Sandford, or Stanford |
| The same, | Thomas Oye. |
| The same, | Maurice Durant. |
| The same, | David Dunning. |
| Hugh Scissor, or Tailer, | Walter Kentwin. |
| Walter Hoy, or Hoich, | Jeffery or Walter Cuttestich. |
| The same, | Walter Pain. |
| Walter Pain, | Hugh de Aula Regis, or |
| | Kingshall, or Kingsham. |
| | Richard de Cellario. |
| The same, | |
| Henry Dais, (or William Dais, jun. or Thomas Die,) | John de Gofeditch. |
| Stephen Cornubiensis. | Richard Fitz Walter Fitz Peter. |
| Henry Burgens, | |
| John de Gofeditch, | John de Gofeditch. |
| or Gofdig§, | Richard Fitz Walter Fitz Peter. |
| Richard de Cellario, | Egeas Fisher. |
| Walter Cadomor, | Robert Calvus, or Bald. |
| Adam Wahile or Walensis | John Rufus, or Red. |
| Elias Palmer, | William Ruffel. |
| The same, | Ralph de Tudenham. |
| Hugh le Ceinter, | Alexander de la Broke. |
| or Seirvant, | |
| Hernaldus, | Henry Calvus, or Bald. |
| William de Somery, | Stephen Cornubiensis. |
| The same, | Roger Lacrue. |
| The same, | John Innoud. |
| The same, | John Simund, or Fitz Roger |
| | or Fitz Simund. |
| The same, | Thomas de Evesham. |
| William de Chilterham, | Roger Lenveise. |
| The same, | Philip Apothecary. |
| William, or Robert, de | John Payn. |
| Chilterham, | |
| Roger Lenveise, | William de Chilterham. |
| or le Wife, | |
| Richard le Blund, | Robert de Putteley. |
| Ralph de Andoverc, | Peter Flory. |
| John Payn, | Robert de Honsum. |
| Philip Speciarius, | Robert Honsum. |
| or Lespicer, | |
| The same, | John Pain. |
| Walter de Saundon, | William Chose. |
| Richard Rufus, | John Ruffus. |

The head officers of the town were called Bailiffs during the reign of king Edward the First, and down to the first of king Richard the

* This Robert Burgensis is often called by the title of Mayor, and particularly when William Pain and Richard de Cellario were in the office of provost. He has also this name when Walter Scriptor and Thomas Oye, Walter Pain and Hugh de Kingeshull, and David Dunning had that office. But perhaps some of these were in the reign of king John; and that then it was when Hernaldus was Praetor or Mayor here, and Henry Calvus, his fellow. This Richard Burgeys was High Sheriff of the county of Gloucester twice in the reign of king John. But perhaps by this mayor is meant no more than senior; for Richard Burgeys of Gloucester, the son of Richard Burgeys, is mentioned in two charters in A. 5, fol. 108. And Richard Burgeys of Gloucester is called Antiqui, or Old, A. 5, fol. 256.

§ This ditch extending from the South-gate to the East-gate of the town, was antiently called Gofeditch.

Third, and they were, as they occur in antient records, as follow :

1273,	Alexander de Bikenore,	Robert Clerk.
1274,	Robert Clark,	William Chose.
1277,	John le Draper,	Walter Sevare.
1283,	John de Wigornia,	Ralph Putteley.
1284,	John le Draper,	Richard de Pucteler.
1287,	Walter Sevare,	William Staward.
1288,	The fame,	James de Langeney.
1289,	Robert de Stanedifh,
1290,	John de Gardino,	Robert de Stanedifh.
1291,	Alexander de Bikenore§,	Hugh le Clerk.
2,	John le Draper,	Walter Sevare.
3,	Hugh le Clerk,	Robert de Standifh.
4,	Henry de, or del Oka, or Oke,	Stephen Brown.
5,	John Lucas,	William Croc.
6,	Hugh le Clerk,	Henry le Draper.
7,	Walter Sevare,	William de Wytfield.
8,	Walter de Bikenore,	Roger le Heiberare.
9,	The fame,	The fame.
1300,	Roger le Heiberare,	Roger, or Robert Lespicer.
1,	Robert de Stanedifh,	Robert Lespicer.
2,	The fame,	The fame, or Apothecary.
3,	Alexander de Bikenor,	William de Riouns.
4,	William de Wythfield,	William de Hertford.
5,	John Lucas,	The fame.
6,	John de la Cumbe, or Combe,	John Northwyche.
7,	The fame,	The fame.

Bailiffs in the reign of king Edward the First, of whom the first in the list are without date.

	Henry Draper,	John Chose.
	John Pamiar,	Alexander de Bikenore.
	John Chedworth,	William de Hertford.
	John Draper,	Alexander de Bikenore.
	John Payn,	John le Draper.
	The fame,	John de Wigornia.
	The fame,	Alexander de Bikenore.
	Alexander de Bikenore,	Germanus de Tunebrugg.
	The fame,	Robert Hauel.
	Alexander de Bikenore,	Ralph de Potel, or Putteley.
	The fame,	Walter Sefare.
	Ralph de Potel,	John le Draper.
	John le Draper,	William, or Gylemin Chose.
	The fame,	Randal, or Ralf de Hamdene.
	The fame,	Alexander de Bikenore.
	Philip Apothecary,	John de Wigornia.
	John de Wigornia,	Robert de Sondhurst.
	John, or Walter de Wigornia,	Walter Sevar.
	Robert Apothecary,	Roger de Heyberer.
1308,	Walter le Spicer.	Thomas de Bernewode.
1309,	The fame,	Peter de la Hulle.
1310,	Peter de la Hulle,	Walter Lespicer, or Apothecary.
1,	Walter Lespicer,	Nicholas de Honfum.
2,	Robert de Goldhull,	Robert Pope.
3,	William de Marcle,	William de Astone.
4,	Robert de Goldhull,	John de Northwich.
5,	Andrew de Pendock,	Owen de Wyndefore.
6,	Andrew, or Alexander, de Pendock,	Richard de Astone.
7,	Stephen Brown,	John le Tanner.
8,	Andrew de Pendock,	John le Tanner.
9,	The fame,	The fame.
1320,	John le Tanner,	Randulph le Wheolare.
1,	Adam de la Hulle,	Walter Lespicer.
2,	Alexander, or Andrew Pendock,	Walter le Southern.
3,	John de Boyfield,	Roger Hewed, or Hewet.
4,	John de Chedworth,	Thomas Foxcote.
5,	John de Chedworth,	William Lespicer.

§ The following were chosen to supply vacancies for part of a year.
10 E. 1. Alexander Bikenore, Peter Floy at Michaelmas.
18 E. 1. Hugh, called Clark, and Henry a Deane, Sunday next after Michaelmas.
1294. William Croc, John Bell occur sometimes in this year.
1297. Walter de Bikenore occurs with Sevare October 27.
31 E. 1. Robert Apothecary, Robert de Stanedifh occur.
1306. Robert de Goldhull, William de Hartford occur in July and August.
31 E. 1. William de Wytfield, Roger le Heyberare on Sunday next after St. Kenelm's.

Bailiffs from the first of Edward the Second, to the first of Richard the Third.

	Walter, or William Sevare,	John Sage.
	Alfo
1 E. 2.	Robert Pope, and	Robert de Goldhull, Friday after Epiphany.
9 E. 2.	Andrew de Pendock, and	Tweyn de la Bothalle, occur on St. Andrew's Day; and on the Tuesday next after, this Tweyn is called Audoen de la Bohalle.
6 E. 2.	William de Aston, and	Edmund de Baverton, or Barton, sometime in January.
1327, (1 & 2 E. 3.)	Edward de Leye, Richard de Bromshulf*,
8,	Thomas Sevare, or de Severne,	William Crisp.
9,	John de Boyfield,	Richard le Recevour.
1330,	Andrew de Pendock,	Randulph le Wheolare.
1,	Richard le Recevour,	John de Boyfield.
2,	Roger Heued,	Stephen Broun.
3,	Richard le Recevour,	Edward le Taverner.
4,	The fame,	John le Deyer.
5,	Richard Shot,	William Bruyn, or le Gruyin.
6,	Roger Heued,	John le Walfhe.
7,	Roger de Kingsleone,	John Cluet §.
8,	William Crisp,	Robert Hendy.
9,	William Ragoun,	Henry le Draper.
1340,	Henry le Draper,	Hugh de Chew.
1,	Adam de Hope,	Nicholas Attedoure.
2,	William de Bruyn, or Gruyn,	William de Kingeshaw.
3,	Henry le Draper,	Hugh de Chyw, or Chew.
4,	Roger de Kingseon,	William de Kingeshagh.
5,	The fame,	The fame.
6,	William de Kingeshagh, or Kingeshaw,	Robert le Walour.
7,	Richard Schot,	Henry le Draper.
8,	Thomas Clech,	Edmund de Chedworth.
9,	Henry le Draper,	Walter de Ehnore.
1350,	William de Ledene, or Loudene,	Thomas de Monynnton.
2,	William de Ledene,	Edmund de Chedworth.
3,	The fame,	Thomas Monynnton.
4,	Roger le Heiberare,	Robert Lespicer.
1355,	Edmund de Chedworth,	Robert de Aston.
6,	William de Kingeshaw,	John Cluet.
7,	Robert le Walour,	Hugh le Parker.
8,	William de Kingeshawe,	The fame.
9,	Thomas de Ledebiry,	Thomas de Stoke.
1360,	Hugh le Parkere,	William de Tronesbury, or Trosebury.
1,	William Crocks,	William le Heyberare.
2,	William Heyberare,	Roger Crocks.
3,	William, or Walter le Heyberare,	William Crook.
7,	Thomas de Byseley,	John de Aulep.
8,	Thomas de Byseley,	William Crook.
9,	Thomas Styward,	John de Elmore.
1370,	The fame,	John de Monemouth.
1,	William Heyberare,	Thomas de Byseley.
2,	The fame,	John Pope.
4,	Thomas Byseley,	William Foliot.
5,	Edward le Taverner,	Nicholas, or Richard Bridlep
7,	William Heyberare,	Thomas Byseley.
	John Cheverel,	Robert le Walour.
1378,	John Compton,	Robert Pope.
9,	William Crok,	John Ruffeby.
1310,	Roger Receyvour,	Richard Ashewell.
1,	Richard Barret,	Richard Ashwell.
2,	Richard Barret,	William Wightfield.
3,	John Ruffby,	John Pope.
4,	William Heyberare,	William Crook.
5,	William Crok,	Roger Receyvour.
7,	John Hened,	The fame.
9,	Robert Pope,	William Crook.
1390,	The fame,	John Pope.
1,	John Bannebury,	Robert Pope.
2,	John Roseby, or Riffeby,	Thomas Pope.

* Alfo, 2 E. 3. John King, and William de Lyndefcye, Monday next after St. Barnabas.

6, 7 E. 3. Edward le Taverner sometimes occurs in Broun's place, and 8, 9 E. 3. Richard de Bromshulf occurs with Deyer.

§ Alfo, 12 E. 3. 'Tis said John Cluet, and Roger de Kingseon, were bailiffs on the Thursday next after St. Scholastica's day.

16 E. 3. Walter Lespicer, and Adam Atchull, Monday next after St. Lawrence.

30, 31 E. 3. Thomas de Monynnton, and John de Hatilton, occur at the latter end of the year.

1393,	John Rusby, or-Bisley,	The same.
5,	Richard Ashwele,	William Crook.
6,	John Need,	Robert Recevour.
7,	Roger Balle,	Robert Swayneytey.
8,	William Crook,	Roger Balle.
9,	Robert But,	Simon Brok.
1400,	Richard Barret,	John, or Roger Balle.
1,	John Byeley	Roger Balle.
2,	Robert But,	Thomas Compton.
3,	Robert Butt,	William Brydlep.
4,	Roger Balle,	Simon Brocke.
5,	Simon Brocke,	Thomas Compton.
7,	John Pope,	Simon Brocke.
8,	Thomas Compton,	Thomas Salisbury.
9,	Robert But,	William Brydlep.
1411,	Roger Balle,	Richard Chamberlayn.
12,	Roger Balle,	William Bridlep.
13,	John, or Robert Butte,	Thomas More.
	or Balle,
14,	John Spencer,	Thomas Friville.
16,	John Bifeley, sen.	Roger Balle.
17,	Robert Gilbert,	John Derhurft.
18,	John Streynsham,	Michael Salisbury.
19,	Richard Chamberleyn,	Thomas Hewes.
1422,	Roger Balle,	Thomas Compton.
23,	John Bisley,	Richard Dalby.
24,	Robert Gilbert,	John Hamelyn.
25,	John Byffeley, sen.	Richard Dalby.
26,	Thomas Guldeford,	Henry Salisbury.
27,	William Butteler, or	Thomas Hewis, or Hewes.
	Botiler,
28,	John Streynsham,	Richard Dalby.
29,	Roger Balle,	Thomas Compton.
1430,	Robert Gilbert,	Trustan Power.
31,	John Rede,	William Olyver.
32,	Robert Gilbert,	John Steynsham.
33,	John Hamelin,	John Luke.
34,	John Streynsham,	Thomas Hughes.
36,	William Olyver,	Philip Monger.
40,	Thurston Southern,	Walter Bauknott.
41,	William Eldesfeld,	Walter Chauntrelor Chaunterell
42,	William Oliver,	Walter Bauknott.
44,	John Luke,	John Heydon.
45,	Walter Chauntrell,	William Saunders.
46,	William Oliver,	Henry Dood.
48,	Thomas Hilley,	William Newman.
49,	William Nottingham,	Henry Dood.
1453,	William Eldersfield,	Thomas Bye.
55,	The same,	Richard Skyamore.
56,	Maurice Andrew,	John Kylray.
57,	Thomas Bokeland,	John Hylley.
58,	Maurice Andrew,	John Jeolyf.
1461,	John Grove,	William Francomb.
62,	Richard Barret,	Roger Balle.
63,	William Brokewood,	William Gran, or Gean.
64,	John Chauntrell,	John Pole.
65,	Roger Balle,	Simon Brocke.
66,	Nicholas Hill,	William Perkyns.
74,	John Hartland,	John Farley.
75,	John Barton,	John Caple.
76,	John Farley,	William Poole.
1477,	John Fry.

Since the first of Richard the Third, the title of Bailiff hath ceased, and instead thereof were Mayors and Sheriffs, and they are as follow.

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1483, John Trye.	William Francomb, John Poole.
4, John Caple, esq;	Robert Cuffe, or Coofe, Thomas Hart.
5, William Framcomb.	Robert Rawlins, Philip Pridith.
6, John Poole.	William Cole, Thomas Francford, or Fairford.
7, John Hilley.	James Ivie, John Elliott.

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1488, William Cole, mercer	Walter Rowden, William Cooke,
9, Robert Poole.	Thomas Aspline, Thomas Collins.
1490, Thomas Hart.	Ralph Grafton, John Natton.
1, Walter Rowden, gent	Robert Rawlins, William Grafewell.
2, William Cooke.	Philip Pridith, William Marmion.
3, John Caple.	John Cole, Garret, or Gerard
	Vanecke.
4, William Cole.	John Cooke, Philip Greenowe.
5, Robert Rawlins.	Thomas Studley, William Goldsmith. *
6, Walter Rowden.	James Ivie, William Hanshaw.
7, Philip Pridith.	Garret, or Gerard Vanecke, Thomas Tayloe, or Teylowe.
8, William Cooke .	John Cooke, David Vaughan.
9, Garret, or Gerard	Thomas Aspline, Thomas Lane.
	Vaneck.
1500, John Caple.	Nicholas Elliotts, Richard Rowden
1, John Cooke, † brewer	William Hanshaw, John Hawkins.
2, Walter Rowden.	Thomas Teylowe, David Vaughan
3, William Hanshaw,	John Allen, jun. Thomas Hertland bell-founder.
4, William Cole.	John Natton, Walter Beeche.
5, Garret, or Gerard	Nicholas Elliotts, Robert Playvs.
	Vanecke §.
6, Thomas Telowe, or	John Norwood, or Morewood,
	William Byford.
7, John Cooke.	William Smyth, Ralph Sankey.
8, William Hanshaw.	Richard Rowden, Robert Hawer-dine.
9, William Hanshaw.	Thomas Hertland William Jordan†
1510, John Natton.	John Hawkins, Ralph Halfey.
1, Thomas Porter .	Ralph Sankey, William Greenow.
2, John Cook.	John Allen, jun. Thomas Osborne
3, Thomas Teylowe.	Robert Playvs, William Haffard.
4, Richard Rowden.	William Jordan, John Rowlins.
5, William Hanshaw.	Ralph Halfey, John Fawkener.
6, Ralph Sankey.	William Marmion, William Matthews.
7, Thomas Hartland.	Walter Beeche, John Baffel.
8, Robert Playvs .	Robert Hawerdine, Adam Apowel
9, John Cook.	John Rawlins, Thomas Messinger
1520, William Hanshaw.	John Fawkener, John Semys.
1, William Jordan.	William Haffard, Henry Marmion.
2, Thomas Teylowe.	Thomas Osborne, Jeffry Todde.
3, William Haffard.	John Rastel, Thomas Bell.
4, John Rawlyns.	William Matthews, Henry French.
5, John Fawkener, Cap-	John Chapman, John Semys. per.
6, Thomas Osborne.	Adam Apowel, Robert Pool.
7, John Rastel.	Thomas Maffinger, Thomas Bell.
8, John Semys.	Henry Marmion, Philip Redvyn, or Redvern.
9, William Jordan.	Lewis Ap Rice, Thomas Payne.
1530, William Haffard.	Robert Poole, Thomas Bell.
1, Thomas Maffinger.	Maurice Vaughan, John Uggons.
2, William Matthews.	Philip Redyn, or Redvern, Ralph or Raphael Rawlyns.
3, Henry Marmion.	Lewis Ap Rice, Thomas Browne††
4, John Fawkener.	Thomas Payne, Richard Edwards.
5, John Semys.	Thomas Bell, jun. Leonard Of-borne.
6, Thomas Bell, sen.	Raphael Rawlyns, Thomas Clowterbuck.
7, William Haffard.	Thomas Browne Thomas Loveday
8, William Matthews.	John Uggons, John Rastel.
9, Robert Poole.	Maurice Vaughan, William Trahern.
1540, Thomas Payne.	Richard Edwards, William Michel
1, Henry Marmion §§.	John Todd, Thomas Pury.
2, John Fawkener.	Thomas Loveday, Philip Barker.
3, Thomas Bell, jun.	John Rastel, William Haffard.
4, Thomas Bell ††, sen.	Thomas Clowterbuck, John Sandford.
5, Thomas Clowterbuck	Edmund Allen, William Jenkins.
6, Thomas Loveday.	William Trahern, Robert Moreton

* Thomas Cook occurs sheriff with Goldsmith 20th of April, 1495.
 † 1498, William Cole occurs mayor the 7th and 14th of Nov. Old Book in Custody of the City.
 ‡ Thus John Cooke and William Cooke, John Trye, John Caple, John Poole, and other Gentlemen of Gloucester, are said to be made the first aldermen, justices of the peace, and chief burgeses of the town of Gloucester, and county thereof, by king Richard the Third, in the first year of his reign. And he has founded Crypt school, gave large possessions for other pious and charitable uses.
 § Vanecke, mayor, ob. and was succeeded by Richard Rowden in 1505.

† Thomas Porter occurs sheriff 21st December, 1509.
  Thomas Hartland occurs mayor the 21st of December, 1511.
 †† William Haffard was elected mayor in 1518, Robert Playvs dying the 24th of August.
 ‡ 21st of December, 1533, Brown occurs as eldest sheriff; the other was Edmund Allen, jun.
 §§ Philip Redvyn, or Redvern, succeeded Marmion mayor, who died the 7th of March, 1541.
 †† This Thomas Bell, in 1544, occurs as one of the gentlemen of the king's bed-chamber.

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1547, Raphael Rawlyns †. 8, John Raffel. 9, William Michel, draper.	William Mitchel, William Bonde Thomas Pury, Thomas Maffinger. John Sandford, Lewis Lyfons.
1550, Thomas Pury, mercer 1, John Sandford †, draper. 2, Thomas Payne. 3, Thomas Bell, knight. 4, Thomas Bell, jun. 5, Thomas Loveday. 6, William Bonde. 7, Robert Moreton. 8, Henry Machen. 9, Thomas Hide, tanner	William Haffard, Henry Machen. Edmund Aphowel, John Aprichard Robert Morton, Robert Adams. Thomas Hide, Thomas Heathe. William Jenkins, William Bonde. Henry Machen, Thomas Machen. Lawrence Singleton Richard Cooke John Aprichard, John Woodward Thomas Semys, Henry King. John Kerbie, Humphrey Atkins. Thomas Maffinger, Thomas Weekes, or Wyks.
1560, Thomas Pury. 1, William Bonde. 2, Thomas Maffinger. 3, Lawrence Singleton, draper. 4, Thomas Hide. 5, Thomas Semys, clothier. 6, John Woodward, mercer. 7, Henry King, mercer. 8, John Kerby, clothier. 9, William Maffinger, gent.	Lawrence Singleton, William Wyman. John Woodward, William Maffinger. Thomas Semys, John Webly. Thomas Weekes, or Wykes, Hugh Hide. Luke Garnons, Richard Cugley. William Maffinger, John Kerby. John Webly, William Weale. William Sandford, Peter Rumney. Luke Garnons Thomas Francombe
1570, Luke Garnons, draper 1, Thomas Weekes, or Wykes *. 2, Peter Rumney, clothier. 3, Richard Cugley baker 4, Thomas Francomb, merchant. 5, James Morfe, tanner. 6, John Kerby. 7, Lawrence Singleton. 8, Thomas Semys. 9, Thomas Machen, mercer.	Thomas Lane, James Morfe. Richard Cugley, Guy Symmons. Thomas Machen, John Moor §. John Smith, Henry Horne. James Morfe, John Rastal. John Cowdal, Richard Coxe. Thomas Machen, Thomas Lane. Guy Symmons, Lawrence Holliday John Browne, Robert Walkley. Thomas Best, Maurice Apowel.
1580, Thomas Lane malster 1, John Smith, brewer. 2, Lawrence Holliday, mercer. 3, John Webley, dyer. 4, Thomas Best, gent. 5, William Maffinger sen 6, Luke Garnons. 7, John Cowdale, tanner 8, Thomas Machen. 9, John Browne, mercer	John Cowdale, Richard Webb. Richard Cox, Walter Merry. John Browne, Robert Walkley. Robert Hobbs, Richard Ward. Richard Webb, John Taylor. John Ciely, Grumbald Hutchins. Walter Nurse, Henry Haffard. John Jones, John White. Richard Hands, John Newman. John Dorney, John Walkley.
1590, Richard Webb, baker afterwards brewer. 1, Richard Cox, malster. 2, Robert Walkley, mercer. 3, John Taylor. 4, Henry Haffard malster 5, Richard Webb. 6, Grumbald Hutchins, draper. 7, John Jones, gent. 8, Christopher Caple, mercer. 9, Thomas Semys.	John Taylor, alias Cook, Grumbald Hutchins, Henry Haffard, Thomas Rich. Walter Nurse, John Jones. Rowland Atkinson, John Loathingham, or Luffingham. Christopher Caple, John Brewster. Thomas Rich, John Payne. John Baugh, Nicholas Langford. Henry Darbye, Lawrence Wilshire John Brewster, John Little.
1600, Luke Garnons. 1, Thomas Machen. 2, Richard Cox.	Thomas Barnes, John Maddock. John Thorne, William Hill. Henry Darbye, Lawrence Wilshire Nicholas Langford Thomas Adams

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1603, Thomas Rich, mercer 4, Henry Haffard. 5, Henry Darby, baker. 6, Lawrence Wilshire, clothier. 7, John Baugh, mercer. 8, John Brewster, furrier 9, John Thorne, brewer	John Browne, Thomas Kerbye. Edmund Clements, Robert Pettifer Matthew Price, Nathaniel Bishop. Richard Smith, Jeffry Beale. Thomas Adams, William Lock. Edmund Clements, Robert Pettifer Toby Bullock, Humphry Holman. Richard Smith, Henry Browne. Thomas Field, William Price. John Webb, John Brewster.
1610, John Browne, brewer 1, William Hill, mercer 2, Thomas Adams, clothier. 3, John Taylor. 4, Edmund Clements, mercer. 5, Richard Smith, tanner 6, Matthew Price tanner 7, Jeffry Beale, mercer. 8, John Jones. 9, Christopher Caple.	John Walton, Richard Beard. Thomas Ruffel, Richard Hoar. Thomas Field, John Reynolds. Toby Bullock, Anthony Robinson John Brewster, William Lugg. Robert Bishop, William Singleton William Bubb, William Caple. John Deighton, John Gwilliam. John Hayward, James Powel. Thomas Morfe, John Scriven. Henry Redvyn, or Redverne, Peter Lugg.
1620, John Baugh ††. 1, John Browne. 2, William Hill. 3, Edmund Clements. 4, Richard Smith. 5, John Jones. 6, Matthew Price. 7, Richard Beard mercer 8, Henry Browne. 9, Anthony Robinson esq	John Deighton, Edward Michel. John Gwilliam, John Read. Thomas Hill, Thomas Pury. Richard Keylock, Dennis Wife. Abel Angel, John Price. Richard Green, Nicholas Webb. Luke Nurse, Leonard Tarn. Richard Window, Jasper Clutterbuck. John Woodward, Henry Price. Nathaniel Hodges, Richard Hayward, or Harwood.
1630, William Price. 1, Toby Bullock. 2, John Brewster. 3, John Webb. 4, John Browne. 5, William Hill ††. 6, William Lugg. 7, William Singleton. 8, William Caple. 9, James Powel.	Charles Hoar, Lawrence Singleton. Nicholas Webb, John Nelme. Edward Wagstaffe, James Wood. Anthony Edwards, Richard Grimes †††. John Maddock, Henry Cugley. Richard Cugley, James Stephens. Anthony Hathway Edmund Palmer Edmund Collet, John Wood.
1640, Thomas Hill. 1, John Scriven, ironmonger. 2, Dennis Wife. 3, Nicholas Webb. 4, Luke Nurse. 5, Lawrence Singleton. 6, Jasper Clutterbuck. 7, John Maddock. 8, Henry Cugley. 9, James Stephens.	Edward Wagstaffe, James Wood. James Stephens, Robert Tyther. Toby Jordan, John Edwards. Anthony Edwards, Walter Lane. Thomas Prichard, Henry Ellis . Thomas Pearse, Thomas Lugg. William Clark, Richard Tayler. Robert Tyther, William Fowler. Henry Robins, Daniel Lyfons.
1650, Anthony Edwards. 1, William Singleton. 2, William Caple. 3, Thomas Pury. 4, Edmund Collett. 5, Dennis Wife. 6, Luke Nurse. 7, Lawrence Singleton. 8, Robert Tyther. 9, Toby Jordan, bookseller.	John Purlewent, Thomas Witcomb. William Ruffel, John Singleton. Robert Hill, William Bubb. Thomas Cooke, James Comeline. John Purlewent, Nicholas Webb. Jeffry Beale, John Toms. Thomas Witcomb, William Ruffel John Singleton, Richard Maffinger William Scudamore, Nicholas Snell
1660, Robert Payne. 1, Thomas Peirce. 2, William Ruffel furrier 3, John Powel. 4, Robert Fielding M.D. 5, Thomas Yate. 6, Thomas Price. 7, John Woodward §§.	John Powel, Samuel Brewster. Thomas Yate, Thomas Price. Edward Tyther, Toby Longford. Walter Harris, Clement Dowle. Robert Longden, William Hodges Isaac Williams, John Gythens. Thomas Aram, Richard Stephens John Rogers, John Marston.

† Raphael Rawlyns mayor, ob. 27 July, and was succeeded by Philip Redvyn, or Redvern, and this Redvyn, alias Clerk, mercer, made his Last Will the 7th of June, 1547, and thereby ordained that a yearly obit should be kept for him, and that he should be buried without the choir in St. John's Church, (Regist.) but died the 15th of September, 3 Edw. 6. Civit.

‡ A licence under the king's seal, dated February 4, 1551, was granted to John Sandford of the city of Gloucester, draper, that he, with two of his guests at his table, might eat flesh and white meats during all the Lent, and all other fasting days in the year; and this licence was during his life. Styve's Memor. Vol. 2, p. 32. And I suppose, being an active man in the former reign, was, the 16th of January, 1 Mary, removed from being alderman; the reason of his removal is said to be for certain causes (then) moving.

|| John Aprichard, and Christopher Moore were sheriffs, 17th of March 4 and 5 Philip and Mary. (Regist.)

* 1571, Weekes, mayor, ob. Aug. 15, and was succeeded by Thomas Hill

§ 1572, Moore, sheriff, ob. July 29, and was succeeded by William Wattle, who also dying September the 19th, following, Walter Knight succeeded him.

†† 1620, Baugh, mayor, ob. Christopher Caple elected January the 9th.

††† 1635, Hill, mayor, ob. August the 29th, John Browne elected Aug. 30

||| 1637, Grimes, sheriff, ob. July the 7th, John Woodward succeeded him

July the 10th.

 1646, Ellis, sheriff, ob. and Robert Payne elected July the 6th.

§§ 1667, Woodward, mayor, ob. October the 10th. Anthony Arnold elected November the 4th.

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1668, Henry Ockold †, attorney at law.	John Ewins, George Taylor.
9, John Wagstaff.	Richard Broad, William Maffinger
1670, Henry Fowler.	Edward Tyther, Nicholas Phelps.
1, Henry Fowler.	William Lambe, Samuel Rose.
2, Henry Norwood, esq;	William Jordan, John Price.
3, William Cook, esq;	Richard Stephens, Nicholas Phelps
4, Sir Duncomb Colchester, knight.	John Champion, Walter Veifey.
5, William Selwyn, esq;	William Carsley, Nicholas Lane.
6, William Ruffel.	John Bishop, Richard Bosley †.
7, Thomas Price.	John Marston, Samuel Rose.
8, John Wagstaff,	Benjamin Hyett, Thomas Mills.
9, Henry Fowler.	John Smallwood, John Rodway.
1680, John Gythens, draper	Isaac Williams, William Phelps.
1, John Rogers, brewer and inn-holder.	John Hill, John Wilcox.
2, John Webb.	George Broad, Richard Chandler.
3, John Price.	Gyles Rodway, Josias Randle.
4, William Lamb.	Thomas Wilcox, James Price.
5, William Jordan, apothecary.	John Chapman, Ntahaniel Cooke, alias Castle.
6, John Hill II.	Joseph Phelph, Robert Punter.
7, John Hill.	William Reeves, Isaac Lambard.
8, Anselm Fowler *.	William Reeves, Thomas Longden
9, William Hodges.	Samuel Palmer, Benjamin Rose.
1690, Sir John Guise baronet	Peter Haines, Thomas Webb.
1, Thomas Browne.	Samuel Lye, John Bell.
2, Robert Payne, mercer	Caple Payne, William Nicholls.
3, John Ewins.	Samuel Hayward Samuel Burroughs
4, William Taylor, ironmonger.	Thomas Edwards, William Edwards.
5, Thomas Longden, ironmonger.	Thomas Veifey, Richard Corfnett.
6, John Hyett, mercer.	John Guillim, Edmund Gregory.
7, Gyles Rodway mercer	William Randle, Thomas Farley.
8, Thomas Wilcox.	James Furney, Thomas Field.
9, Thomas Snell.	Henry Plat, Samuel Beale.
1700, Nicholas Webb.	Richard Maffinger, John Cowdale.
1, Thomas Webb, mercer.	Thomas Nicholls, Thomas Lewis.
2, Sir Samuel Eckley, kt.	Richard Partridge, Samuel Browne
3, Robert Payne.	Edmund Gregory, Nicholas Lane.
4, John Hyett.	Richard Cofsley, Thomas Ludlow
5, Samuel Lye, grocer.	Gabriel Harris, John White.
6, John Bell, mercer.	William Branch, John Gammond.
7, Caple Payne, mercer.	Edward Nicholls, Daniel Collick
8, Gyles Rodway.	John King, Daniel Washborne.
9, Edmund Gregory, furrier.	John Rodway, Joshua Worrel.
1710, Caple Payne.	William Haynes, Thomas Carill.
1, Samuel Hayward, grocer.	Thomas Hill, Thomas Coie §.
2, James Furney, ironmonger.	John Watfon, Isaac Wood,
3, Richard Green, malster.	John Green, John Bonner.
4, Samuel Brown, malster.	Daniel Washborne, John Rodway.
5, Thomas Ludlow, draper.	James Gregory, John Hayward.
6, Thomas Nicholls, plumber.	Richard Lewis, William Nicholls.
7, John Bell.	Joshua Worrel, William Ireland †.
8, James Furney.	William Haynes, Edward Machen
9, Richard Cofsley, goldsmith.	Thomas Carill, John Motlow.
1720, John King, dyer.	Edward Stephens, Richard Coffley, jun.
1, Gabriel Harris, bookseller.	Isaac Wood, John Green.
2, Daniel Washborne, malster.	John Hayward, Richard Lewis.
3, John Rodway, mercer	Samuel Worrel, Thomas Rogers.
4, Richard Green.	Thomas Smyth, Richard Finch.
5, Samuel Browne.	Thomas Hill, John Bonner.
6, Thomas Ludlow,	Thomas Payne, Lawrence Crump.

MAYORS.	SHERIFFS.
1727, John Selwyn, esq;	John Small, William Bell.
8, John King.	Richard Finch, John Blackwell.
9, Thomas Carill, hosier	William Nicholls, Thomas Bower
1730, John Small, esq;	Richard Coffley, Samuel Worrel.
1, William Bell.	Edward Machen, Benjamin Saunders.
2, Gabriel Harris, sen.	Thomas Steel, Gabriel Harris, jun.
3, John Selwyn.	Edward Stephens, Michael Bailey.
4, John Hayward mercer	Thomas Smyth, Samuel Farmer.
5, Richard Lewis, goldsmith.	Lawrence Crump, John Blackwell
6, Charles Selwyn, esq;	Benjamin Saunders, James Herbert.
7, Thomas Hill, apothecary.	Thomas Steel, John Knight.
8, William Nicholls, tanner.	James Elly, William Robins.
9, Edward Machen †.	Thomas Ratcliff, Miles Bell.
1740, Samuel Worrel.	Michael Bailey, William Bell, jun.
1, Thomas Hayward, esq	Gabriel Harris, jun. Richard Webb.
2, Richard Finch.	Samuel Farmer, Thomas Branch,
3, Lawrence Crump, upholder.	John Heath, Joseph Cheston.
4, John Blackwell.	John Carrell, George Worrell.
5, Benjamin Saunders.	Jasper Herbert, John Baylis.
6, Gabriel Harris.	John Knight, Edward Baylis.
7, Michael Baily.	William Robbins, William Ashmeade.
8, William Bell.	William Bell, jun. Martin Lloyd.
9, Samuel Farmer.	Richard Webb, John Jefferis.
1750, Lawrence Crump.	Thomas Branch, Thomas Price.
1, Richard Roberts.	William Dimmock William Crump
2, James Herbert.	Joseph Cheston, Cornelius Gardiner
3, Thomas Hill.	Edward Baylis, James Wintle.
4, John Blackwell.	George Worrall, John Baylis
5, Thomas Hayward.	Martin Lloyd, Thomas Vernon.
6, Benjamin Saunders.	John Jefferis, John Webb.
7, Gabriel Harris.	Thomas Price, Daniel Quarrington
8, George Augustus Selwyn.	William Crump, Benjamin Baylis.
9, Joseph Cheston.	James Wintle, Abraham Saunders
1760, Richard Webb.	John Box, James Sadler.
1, John Baylis.	John Webb, William Lane.
2, Edward Baylis.	Daniel Quarrington, Benjamin Baylis.
3, Samuel Farmer.	Abraham Saunders, Moses Randall
4, Thomas Branch.	Richard Crump, William Cowcher
5, George Augustus Selwyn.	Ralph Fletcher, Richard Webb.
6, Joseph Cheston.	John Box, Henry Wintle.
7, Richard Webb.	James Sadler, John Bush.
1768, Edward Baylis.	William Lane, Thomas Weaver.

HIGH STEWARDS.

The Marquis of Winchester occurs 5^o Mariæ 1. William Compton, earl of Northampton, occurs in the reign of king James the First.

Sir Edward Cooke, knight, lord chief justice of England, and one of the king's privy council, was elected the 26th of August, 1615.

Oliver Cromwell, then lord protector, was elected on the 30th of September, 1651.

Henry Lord Cromwell, elected February 16, 1653; and according to some accounts,

Richard Cromwell was elected, and occurs in 1656.

Henry Duke of Gloucester elected June 13, 1660.

Henry Lord Herbert, upon the duke of Glou-† 1668, Ockold, mayor, ob. Robert Fielding M.D. elected Aug. the 26th.

‡ 1676, Bosley, sheriff, ob. May 30. Daniel Lyons elected June 7th.

§ In 1686, 1687, several memorandums and dispensations were sent by king James the Second to the corporation, That Hill should be obliged to take no oath, but that of mayoralty, at his admission into that office; That Anselm Fowler should be made a burgher, and elected an alderman. The mayor and aldermen should not proceed to the election of officers in the city for the year ensuing till his farther pleasure should be known. John Hill should be mayor for 1687; William Reeves and Isaac Lambard then sheriffs, and no oaths should be tendered to them, except those of mayoralty and fealty, respectively. The recorder, three of the aldermen, and ten of the common council should be turned out, and others admitted in their stead without having any oaths administered to them, except that appointed for the recorder, aldermen and common council.

* 1688, Fowler, mayor, resigned November the 29th, William Cook succeeded him in the same year. Reeves, sheriff, resigned, Robert Longden succeeded him then as eldest sheriff, and William Scudamore was then made youngest.

‡ 1711, Cole, sheriff, ob. John King elected April the 8th.

† 1717, Ireland, sheriff, ob. Daniel Collick elected July 4th.

‡ 1739, Machen, mayor, ob. 20 September, John Hayward elected.

cester's death, elected January 14, 1660-1. He was afterwards duke of Beaufort, and being amoved, was succeeded by

Charles earl of Macclesfield, who was elected August 6, 1690, and upon his death

Charles Lord Dursley, afterwards earl of Berkeley, was elected February 11, 1694-5.

James Earl of Berkeley, upon his father's death, was elected September 28, 1710, and was also viscount Dursley and baron Berkeley of Berkeley castle; and some years before, and 'till his death, ranger of Dean forest, lord lieutenant, and custos rotulorum of the county of Gloucester.

Augustus earl of Berkeley, upon his father's death, was elected September 16, 1737, succeeding him in most of his titles, and upon his decease in 1755,

Matthew lord Ducie was elected high steward in his stead, but his lordship resigned this office in favour of Frederick-Augustus earl of Berkeley, who was elected in the year 1766, and is now the high steward.

The High-Steward, at present, receiveth no salary; but in old papers concerning the city, it is said, he receiveth for the acknowledgment of his office, five guineas yearly.

R E C O R D E R S.

Thomas Lane, gent. was recorder in the reign of king H. 8. He was steward of the priory of Stanley, and manor of Standish, belonging to the abbey of Gloucester; and after the dissolution thereof, was made steward to the dean and chapter. He died in the reign of king H. 8. and was buried in the north-cross-isle of the cathedral.

Richard Morgan, serjeant at law, occurs 1° E. 6. and 1552, and afterwards being a judge, uttered several opprobrious words against bishop Hooper.

John Pollard, esq; occurs 1553, and 1555.

Richard Pate, esq; occurs in 1556, and was confirmed by queen Elizabeth's charter, 1561. He was a commissioner to king H. 8. and E. 6. for taking a survey of all religious foundations in Gloucester, Bristol, &c. then suppressed, and the lands belonging to them given to the crown; and he, with Thomas Chamberlayn, esq; purchased of king E. 6. many of those lands in Gloucester and elsewhere. He is frequently termed of Minsterworth, where 'tis probable he sometimes resided; and was a good benefactor to St. Bartholomew's hospital, and this city. He was buried in 1588, near the south wall of the south-cross-isle of the cathedral, where there is a monument erected for him, which has been of late years repaired by Corpus Christi college in Oxford; to which he gave the nomination of a school-master and usher at Cheltenham, in this county; the hospital there, and some other benefactions. Upon the monument is the effigies of an old man in a lawyer's gown, and a boy kneeling behind him; and of a woman, with three girls behind her. Over them is this inscription:

Richardus Pates, Arm. huic nuper Civitati a memoria, qui vixit Annos 73, et ob. 29 Oct. 1588, sibi et conjugi, et natis suis, posuit.

Quid stulti vitæ mortales stamina duci
Longa volunt miseræ, non minus atq; malæ.
Dic quotus est, cujus non siccat cura medullas,
Cui mens non sceleris conscia, dic quotus est.
In cœlis expers curarum et criminis insons
Vita est, hæc vera est, cætera vita necat.

Over the monument is a board or wainscot to keep off the dust, and upon it are these arms; Argent, a cheveron sable, between three pellets: In chief, three crosses patee fitchy of the first. Crest, a lion vaire crowned, sable and argent; and these words at top: Mibi vita Christus, Christus mea spes unica.

William Oldisworth, esq; was elected 29° Eliz.

Nicholas Overbury, esq; afterwards knight, was elected April 15, 1° Jac. 1. upon Oldisworth's death, and confirmed in the charters of king James 1. and king Charles 1.

Sir John Bridgman, knight, chief justice of Chester, was elected March 21, 1626, upon Overbury's resignation.

William Lenthal, esq; master of the benchers of Lincoln's-inn, and reader there, was elected January 23, 13° C. 1. He was afterwards speaker and one of the principal agents of the long parliament, and master of the rolls; and being amoved November 23, 1660, from this office, Evan Selis, serjeant at law, was elected on the same day.

Sir William Morton, knight, serjeant at law, upon Selis's resignation, was elected April 1, 1662; and died one of the justices of the common pleas, in 1672, and was buried in the Temple church in London.

William Gregory, esq; elected October 3, 1672, was afterwards knighted, and made one of the barons of the exchequer; but by a mandate from the king he was amoved, and by another royal mandate dated November 21, 1687,

Charles Trinder, esq; was appointed to succeed him; and by virtue of this nomination was elected December 8, 1687; but he resigned, and thereupon

Sir John Somers, knight, was elected, Aug. 29, 1690, and was afterwards lord high chancellor of England, and baron of Evesham.

Nicholas Lechmere, esq; upon lord Somers's death, was elected, May 18, 1716. He was afterwards chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaster, and baron of Evesham; and upon his death

Thomas Windham, esq; was elected, July 1, 1727.

Philip lord Hardwick, upon Mr. Windham's resignation, was elected December 9, 1734. On February 21, 1736-7, his lordship was appointed lord high chancellor of Great Britain; and on April 2, 1754, his majesty was pleased to advance him him to the titles of viscount Royston, and earl of Hardwick, in the county of Gloucester*.

On his lordship's death, his second son, the honourable Charles York, esq; was elected to this office in the year 1764, and since his decease, lord North has been chosen, who is the present recorder.

The recorder's salary is 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* yearly.

Altho' the title of recorder is not in any charter of the city before that of queen Elizabeth, yet it is certain that several persons were so called, long before that charter, particularly Thomas Lane, in the time of king Henry the Eighth; Richard Morgan, 1 E. 6. and 6 E. 6. John Pollard, esq; 1553; John Pollard, knight, 1555; Richard Pate, esq; 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. and 1 Eliz.

TOWN or COMMON CLERKS.

Christopher White occurs 28 H. 8. and 1557. Humphry Ulton, 1558, 1562.

Thomas Atkins, esq; the queen's attorney in the marches of Wales, 1563.

Richard Bird, esq; upon Atkins's resignation, was elected July 13, 21 Eliz.

Richard Baker, esq; upon Bird's resignation, elected June 20, 37 Eliz. and dying at Abergavenny, October 7, 1598, was there buried.

Thomas Atkins, esq; upon Baker's death, elected October 17, 40 Eliz. He was probably the same with the before-mentioned Thomas Atkins.

Henry Robins, esq; upon the resignation of Atkins, who is said to be then very old and weak, was elected January 18, 45 Eliz. This Robins was buried near alderman Macher's monument in the cathedral, and upon the grave stone was this inscription:

Here lyeth the body of Henry Robins, esq; who departed this life the 11 day of Nov. 1613.

And on a brass plate on the same stone,

Causidicus fueram, dum me mea fata sinebant;
Nunc mea stellifero causa peracta foro est.
Tristis et indignor tu, (cui licet) argue causas:
O quanto mitior fors mea, forte tua est.

William Locksmith, esq; upon Robins's death, was elected January 13, 1613.

William Guys, or Guise, esq; upon Locksmith's death, was elected August 26, 1615; and the same year gave to the corporation a great silver cup, or bowl, and cover, double gilt, to remain with the mayor for the time being, for ever; but they were sold to contribute to the fortifications of the city, 18 C. 1.

John Dorney, esq; upon Guise's death, elected January 11, 1640; but being amoved by the commissioners appointed for the regulation of corporations, he was succeeded by Thomas Williams, esq; elected August 15, 1662.

* For a further account of his

He has the following memorial on a monument erected for him against the wall of the middle chancel of St. Mary de Crypt:

Memoriæ
Thomæ Williams, Armigeri,
Legum Anglicarum peritissimi, Medii Templi apud Londinates
Bancarii, Comitatus Glevensii Irenarchæ regii, Hujus Civitatis Communis Clerici, simul ac Ornamenti;

Viri

Clara stirpe, (Williamforum, sc. de Guerne Knevot, in agro Brecon) probis moribus, candido ingenio, pietate summa,

Quem omnes amarunt,

adhuc desunt,

In posterum desiderabunt.

Crochthruppiæ, in agro Oxon nati, Glocestriæ denati, juxta sepulti, ad tubæ sonitum resurrecturi.

Monumentum hoc, moerens extruxit Elizabetha Williams, delectissima conjux.

Obiit Nov. 27, Anno $\left. \begin{array}{l} \text{Ætatis 50.} \\ \text{Salutis 1667.} \end{array} \right\}$

In a shield are these arms: Argent, a chevron between three fighting cocks gules, on a chief sable, three spears heads of the first; impaling, Argent, a chevron between three squirrels sejant gules. The crest, A cock gules, armed Or.—There are memorials for several of this family in Winchcombe church.

John Dorney, esq; upon Williams's death, was re-elected December 23, 1667.

John Powell, esq; upon Dorney's death, elected March 8, 1674; but being amoved, was succeeded by Robert Price, esq; who was elected September 22, 1685; but soon resigned. He was afterwards baron of the exchequer, and thence removed to be justice of the common pleas.

John Powell, esq; was, upon Price's resignation, re-elected July 5, 1687. Against the north wall in the lady's chapel, is a magnificent monument of white marble, with his effigies at length, in a judge's habit, and this inscription for him underneath it:

H. S. E.

IOHANNES POWELL Eq; Aurat. Generosâ & Antiquâ
Gente oriundus, cum Sedem apud Herefordienses per plurimos
Anos fixisset, inde ad Glocestrienses jam olim Comigravit.
Nobilitatem quam à Majoribus accepit, ipse vitâ Summâ cum Laude transactâ, egregie honestavit.

Legum Patriarum consultissimus Patronus diu, postea per xxii Anos continuos Collegij Iudicum in Foro Londinensi triplicis Sodalis, Integritatis illibatæ, Industriæ indefessæ, Probitatis Fortitudinisq; et in protegendis Inocentibus, et in puniendis Reis Semper Conspicue, nec promissis nec minis unquam dimo-vendæ Famam meruit.

IV. Vir Sclitibus Fisci judicandis nominatus Sub Gul: III^o Cal.
Nov. MDCXCI.

IV. Vir Sclit. Banc. Comûn. judicand. Sub Gul. III^o VII Cal.
Nov. MDCXCV.

IV. Vir Sclit. Banc. Reg. judicand. Sub. Reg. ANNA IX
Cal. Julij MDCCII.

VIX. ANN. LXVIII. DIES XIX OBIIT XVII Cal. Jul.
MDCCXIII.

Iohannes Snell Arm.

Testamento ex Assè Hæres, Gratiitudinis Amoris et Officij sui
Monumentum hoc, Avunculo Optimo, opitimeq; de se merito
P. C.

Nisi utile est quod facimus, Stulta est Gloria.

Over his head are these arms, Party per pale azure and gules, three lioncels rampant argent.—

On a black marble grave-stone underneath, is lordship, see the parish of Hardwick.

H. S. I.

H. S. d.
 Johannes Powell, miles, qui obiit 14 Junii, An. Dom. 1713, Annoque Ætatis 69.
 In cujus Memoriam, Monumentum prope edificatum est.

Thomas Powell, esq; on the resignation of his brother John Powell, was elected September 1, 1692. He was buried in the lady's chapel, but has no memorial.

John Cocks, esq; upon Powell's death, was elected April 22, 1700.

Thomas Stephens, esq; upon Cocks's resignation, was elected January 19, 1719. When he died, he was principal register to the bishop of Gloucester, and clerk of the peace for the county of Gloucester; and dying at Bristol, was buried there, under the communion table of Little St. Augustine's.

Caple Payne, esq; succeeded Mr. Stephens, and died in 1764, to whom William Selwyn, esq; succeeded, and is the present town-clerk.

The yearly salary is 12*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and several other particulars of considerable value.

A LIST of the REPRESENTATIVES of the City in Parliament.

N.B. The Parliaments mark'd thus (*) were held at London.

(§)	at York.
(+)	at Carlisle.
(†)	at Lincoln.
(‡)	at Nottingham.
(*)	at Northampton.
(§§)	at Winchester.
(††)	at Cambridge.
(‡‡)	at New Sarum.
()	at Gloucester.
(§§§)	at Oxford.
(†††)	at Leicester.
()	at Reading.
	at Westminster.

And those which have no mark after the date were holden

Anno Regni
Edw. I.	23 Henry de Chounger, Roger de Heyberere.
	26 § Richard de Bryt-hampton, Robert le Espicer.
	30 * Robert le Espicer, John le Bale.
	33 William de Hartford, John de Comb.
	34 Richard le Clerk, Richard le Blehston.
	35 † Andrew de Pevodock, Thomas de Hannely.
Edw. II.	2 William Hertford, John de Norwich.
	4 Walter le Spicer, John Lucas.
	5 * Walter le Spicer, John King.
	6 William Tidderington, William de Hertford.
	6 Walter de Hertford, John le King.
	7 Walter Lespicer, John King.
	8 John Bury, Thomas Copperich.
	12 § John de Hertford, Andrew de Pentoker.
	12 § Walter Lespicer, Stephen de Maismor.
	15 Walter Lespicer, John King.
	15 Andrew Pendock, Walter le Spicer.
	16 § John Hertford, Richard Kilt.
	19 Andrew de Pendock, John de Coveley.
	20 Andrew Pendock, John de Coveley.
Edw. III.	1 Elias Ailbirton, John Coggeshall.
	1 ‡ John Brayton, John Nichfield.
	2 Thomas Copperych, Walter le Spicer.
	4 Walter le Spicer, Richard Fisher.
	4 The same, Edmund Beverton.
	6 § The same, Richard Coumbe.
	6 The same, William Hertford.
	7 § Robert de Goldhull, Walter Norfolk.
	8 § Robert de Goldhull, Walter de Wawepoll.
	9 William Tidderington, John Walfhe.
	9 § Thomas Gloucester, Walter le Spicer.

Anno Regni
Edw. III.	10 Walter le Spicer, William Cowbrigge.
	12 The same, Stephen Merciber.
	12 John de Coveley, Hugh de Albrighton.
	12  Andrew Pendock, John de Gloucester.
	14 William Kingshagh, Roger Kinglove.
	14 Andrew Pendock, John de Brugge.
	15 William Ringshagh, Robert le Valour.
	17 Andrew Pendock, Richard Gradenstok.
	20 Adam le Hope, Hugh de Aylbrighton.
	21 John Duyerfay, John Wynston.
	22 William Bruyn, John Wynston.
	24 John Coles, The same.
	27 Robert Broun, Richard North.
	29 Thomas Okynton, Nicholas Cricklade.
	31 Robert Waley, Robert Broun.
	33 William Hertford, John Comb.
	34 Thomas Stoke, Thomas Stiwarde.
	34 John Haleson, William Hibberere.
	36 William Hibberere, Hugh Parkere.
	38 William Hibberere, John de Monmouth.
	39 John Butte, John Elianore.
	42 Thomas Stiward, William de Vestare.
	43 The same, William Crooke.
	45 §§ John Heyberere, Thomas Styward.
	46 William Heyberere, John Stiward.
	47 The same, Richard Barret.
	50 John Auleper, John Dowlop.
Ric. II.	1 William de Heyberere, Richard Barret.
	2 John Dulep, William Nightfield.
	3 William Heyberere, John Biseley.
	6 John Haleson, The same.
	7 William Baret, Robert Pope.
	7 †† John Hed, John Pope.
	8 John Compton, The same.
	10 William Crook, The same.
	12 †† Stephen Pope, The same.
	13 William Heyberere, John Bannbery.
	15 Richard Ashewell, John Biseley.
	16 §§ Thomas Pope, Simon Brock.
	18 Roger Ball, William Scevok.
	20 Thomas Pope, Richard Barret.
	21 John Pope, The same.
Hen. IV.	1 Richard Barret, Simon Brook.
	3 William Bridley, The same.
	4 John Biseley, Roger Balle.
	8 The same, The same.
	12 The same, William Bridelep.
Hen. V.	1 John Streynsham, John Clifton.
	2 John Biseley, Thomas Moore.
	3 No Return.
	5 William Bridlep, John Boisley.
	6 The same, John Biseley.
	7 Robert Gilbert, The same.
	8 Thomas Moor, Thomas Stevens.
	9 Robert Gilbert, Richard Dalby.
Hen. VI.	1 The same, Thomas Stevens.
	2 John Streynsham, The same.
	3 Robert Gilbert, Richard Dalby.
	4 ††† Thomas Hewes, John Beisley, jun.
	8 Thomas Biseley, John Edwards.
	9 John Hamelyn, Thomas Stevens.
	11 The same, Thomas Derehurst.
	13 Thomas Hewes, Richard Dalby.
	15 Thomas Derehurst, John Andrew.
	20 Thomas Stephens, William Oliver.
	25 †† Thomas Derehurst, Walter Chaunterell.
	27 The same, John Andreaux.
	28 William Nottingham, Henry Dod.
	29 John Andreaux, Thomas Bokeland.
	31 Robert Bentham, William Eldelsfeld.
	33 John Andreaux, John Dodding.
	38 Nicholas Hert, William Brokwood.
Edw. IV.	7 John Hilloy, John Try.
	12 Alexander Colly, The same.
	17 Alexander Cely, John Farley.
N. B. All the Returns are left out of the Tower from 17 Edw. 4. to 1 Edw. 6.
Edw. VI.	1 Thomas Bell, knight, Rich. Morgan, recorder.
	6 The same, The same.
Marie I.	1 Thomas Payne, Thomas Loveday.
	1555 The same, The same.
P.&M.I. & 2	Thomas Bell, knight, William Massinger.
2 & 3	Arthur Porter, esq; The same.
4 & 5	Richard Pate, esq; Thomas Paine, gent.
Eliz.	1 The same, Nicholas Arnold, kt.
	5 The same, The same.
	13 William Massinger gent. Thomas Atkins, gent.
	14 Thomas

Anno Regni.	14	Tho. Semys, alderman,	Thomas Atkins, the queen's attorney in her council, in the marches of Wales.
	27	Luke Garnons, esq;	Thomas Atkins, gent.
	28	Richard Pate, recorder,	Thomas Atkins, esq;
	31	Luke Garnons, alderm.	Thomas Atkins, esq;
	35	Richard Birde, esq;	The same.
	39	William Oldisworth esq;	Luke Garnons, esq;
	43	The same,	The same.
Jac. I.	1	Nich. Overbury recorder	John Jones, esq; alderm.
	12	The same,	Christopher Caple, ald.
	18	John Browne, esq; ald.	Anthony Robinson, gent
	21	John Browne, esq; ald.	The same.
Car. I.	1	Christ. Caple, esq; ald.	John Browne, esq;
	1	The same,	The same.
	3	John Browne, esq;	John Hanbury, esq;
Car. I.	15	William Singleton,	Henry Brett, esq;
	16	Thomas Pury, alderman	Henry Brett, esq; is mentioned as member of the city, who went to Oxford; and John Lenthall, in 1640, is said to be in his stead probably on the parliament side.
Commonwealth Parliaments.	1654	William Lenthall, esq; master of the rolls,	Thomas Pury, sen. alderman.
	1656	General John Desborough,	Thomas Pury, jun.
	1659	James Stephens,	Lawrence Singleton, ald.
	1660	Edward Maffey,	James Stephens.
Car. II.	12	Edward Maffey, esq;	James Stephens, esq;
	13	Edward Maffey, kt.	Evan Seys, serjeant at law
	31	William Cook, esq;	The same.
	31	Charles Barkley, kt.	The same.
	32§§§	Charles lord Dursley,	Charles Somerset, lord Herbert.
Jac. II.	1	John Wagstaffe, esq;	John Powell, esq;
Will. III. M. II.	1	Duncomb Colchester kt.	William Cook, esq;
	2	William Trye, esq;	The same.
Will. III.	7	The same,	Robert Payne, gent.
	10	William Rich, baronet,	William Selwyn, esq;
	12	John Bridgman, esq;	The same.
	13	James lord Dursley,	John Hanbury, esq;
Anæn	1	Right Honourable John Howe, esq; *	William Trye, esq;
	4	John Hanbury, esq;	William Cook, esq;
Annæ	7	Thomas Webb, esq;	William Cook, esq; §
	9	Thomas Webb, esq;	John Blanch, esq;
	12	John Snell, esq;	Charles Cox, esq;
Geo. I.	1	The same,	The same.
Geo. I.	9	Charles Hyett, esq;	John Snell, esq; and upon his death, John Howe, esq; was elected. He was afterwards created baron of Chedworth, in this county, by king G. 2.
Geo. II.	1	Benjamin Bathurst, esq;	John Selwyn, esq;
	8	John Selwyn, esq;	Benjamin Bathurst, esq;
	15	The same,	The same.
	21	The same,	The same.
	28	Charles Barrow,	Geo. Augustus Selwyn.
Geo. III.	1	The same,	The same.
	8	The same,	The same.

the indenture † for this borough, fixed to the writ of 28^o H. 6. and sealed with the seals of the bailiffs, and of the high sheriff of this county, 'tis said as follows:

Burgeffes elected, { William Nottingham,
Henry Dodd.

The electors of the said burgeffes.

Thomas Hulley, Walter Bauknot, Thomas Barbour,
William Newman, William Benson, William Shepistouk,
Thomas Bisley, Thomas Hest, Richard Bunbury,
William Eldresfeld, Thomas Bye, John Coteler.

The number of burgeffes, or freemen, that might vote in 1741, living

Within the city, about 950,

Out of the city, about 950,

In all — 1900,

In 1623 the inhabitants of the county of the city endeavoured in parliament to have a knight for their in-shire, which the city opposed, and occasioned a proper clause to be inserted in the city charter.

Of the LIBERTIES, PRIVILEGES, and CUSTOMS of the CITY; of the TWELVE COMPANIES in the CORPORATION, the CITY ARMS, its TRADES, MANUFACTURES, &c.

IN the time of king Edward the Confessor, this place was an antient borough, whose inhabitants were stiled the burgeffes of the town of Gloucester, and so they continued to be, 'till king John, by his letters patents, incorporated them; and indeed they were so called in the charters of king Henry the Second and Richard the First.

King Henry the Second granted to his burgeffes of Gloucester the same customs and liberties, through his whole land, of toll and all other things, as the better citizens of London, and they of Westminster enjoyed, in the reign of king Henry the First.

King Richard the First, on the 5th of May, in the 5th year of his reign, granted them the borough with its appurtenances, already mentioned page 84.

And king John granted them, inter alia, That they should be quit of toll, lastage, pontage and stallage, in and out of fair, and thro' all the sea-ports belonging to the king on this side and beyond the seas, the liberties of the city of London reserved.—That the burgeffes may elect two discreet burgeffes to be bailiffs, who may not be amoved from their bailiwick, called also præpositura, as long as they behave well, but by the common council of the borough; and four coroners, to keep the pleas of the crown there.

It was usually to affess the burgesles of the city for the wages of the burgeffes in parliament, who were allowed two sol. per diem each for every day that he sat. Six days were appointed for their going to and returning from parliament every sessions; and six shillings were then paid to the serjeant for his fee.

The election of members of parliament for this city is now very popular and tumultuous; but formerly it seems to have been otherwise, for in

* In the Honourable John Howe's place, John Hanbury, esq; was elected.

§ In the place of William Cook, esq; deceased, Francis Wyndham, esq; was elected. † Prince's Brev. Parl. page 661.

King Henry the Third confirms his father's grants, [p. 84] and granted to them further, that they should have for ever all their prescribed liberties, and that if there were any particulars formerly granted to them which they did not then fully exercise, they might fully use the same.

The kings Edward the * Second and Third confirmed the former grants, and the latter added, That they should be quit of murage, keyage, paviage, gildage, &c. thro' the kingdom.

King Richard the Second also confirmed them, and further granted them the chattels of outlaws, felons and fugitives, and deodands; all issues, fines, redemptions and amerciaments of all the burgeses; and all pleas real and personal within the vill, to be held in Gild-hall, with power and authority, as justices, to hear and determine all offences committed in the vill, except felony, which they were not to determine without special licence from the king: That they might take recognizances according to the statute of Acton Burnel, and attach the body and goods of all persons within the vill, except those of the abbat of St. Peter, his successors, tenants and servants.

King Henry the Fourth, Dec. 4, regni 1°; king Henry the Fifth, Feb. 5, regni 2°; king Henry the Sixth, Oct. 26. regni 2°; and king Edward the Fourth, May 5, regni 2°, confirmed all former grants to them; as did also King Richard the Third, Sept. 2, regni 1°; and added, That 45*l.* of the fee-farm rent should be abated; that on Monday next after Michaelmas then ensuing, a mayor should be elected, and that they be henceforth incorporated by the name of the mayor and burgeses of the town of Gloucester, and by that name to plead or be impleaded; that they of the corporation might choose twelve aldermen to act as the aldermen of London do; that the hundreds of Dudston and King's-Barton should be distinct and separate from the county of Gloucester, and from the Monday aforesaid to be called the county of the town of Gloucester; and that from and after that time the bailiffs of the town should also execute the office of sheriffs, and be sworn as such before the mayor, who should, under the seal of his office, certify their names in chancery when sworn; that the sheriffs should hold a county-court, and all precepts within the town and hundreds aforesaid should be executed by them; and that the mayor should be elected by the twelve aldermen, and twelve of the most discreet burgeses. That there should be four serjeants at mace, two whereof to wait upon the mayor, and two upon the sheriffs. The mayor to be clerk of the market, and steward and marshal of the king's household, and the king's escheator. But that the town of Tewkesbury should be exempted from tolls in Gloucester.

King Henry the Seventh confirmed all former grants and privileges, except the abatement of 45*l.*

out of the fee-farm rent; and the mayor and burgeses petitioning for the said abatement, on account of 300 houses being decayed and other great charges, he granted them an abatement of 5*l.* for ever.

King Henry the Eighth also confirmed them, and September 3, regni 33° erecting a bishoprick here, by a particular clause in his charter, ordered that the whole town be thenceforth and for ever a city, to be called the § city of Gloucester.

King Edward the Sixth, March 1, regni 5° confirmed the former grants as his father had done.

Queen Elizabeth, February 21, regni 3°, also confirmed them, and added, that Richard Pates, esq; should be recorder of the city during the pleasure of the mayor and burgeses, to execute his office by himself, or by his deputy, to be called the town-clerk. That the mayor, recorder, and aldermen be justices of the peace within the city, and no other justice of the peace to intermeddle therein. That the mayor and burgeses, or the majority of them, might choose a recorder, and tax the inhabitants for the safety, necessity, or profit of the city; with several other particulars.

King James the First granted, that they should have a common seal; that the mayor and burgeses might elect sheriffs, escheators, coroners, bailiffs, chamberlains, constables, serjeants at mace, and other inferior officers, as have been accustomed, with many other particulars.

King Charles the First granted, among other things, that they might elect and increase the number of the common council as they thought proper; that on the Monday next after Michaelmas the twenty-four electors shall choose an alderman to be mayor, another to be coroner, two of the common council to be sheriffs, and four of the common council to be stewards, all which should take their personal oaths. The mayor and burgeses to elect a town-clerk, and other officers as formerly.

By an ordinance of parliament, which was made April 3, 1648, all former letters patents, and charters of liberties, tolls, &c. granted to the city, were confirmed under the great seal of England.

On Monday after Michaelmas 1671, in the morning, eight of the aldermen, the oldest sheriffs, and others of the common council to make up the number twenty-four, assembled at Gild-hall, and there elected officers for the year ensuing. In the afternoon of the same day, the mayor, who was not at the election, came to the Gild-hall to elect, and being told that the election was made in the morning, he, one of the aldermen, and sixteen of the council, protested against it, as being contrary to the charter of the city, upon which the charter was thought to be forfeited, and was surrendered.

It has been remarked, that of all the charters of corporations which the king took into his

* The original charter of king Edward the Second, is not now in the custody of the city, but is confirmed by Inspecimus.

§ See the said Charter in Appendix, No. 7.

hands, that of this city, upon the pretence before-mentioned, was the first.

Upon proper application, however, king Charles the Second, April 18, 24^o regni, granted them another, dated at Westminster, which is the present * one, wherein their former privileges are confirmed; but it cost the corporation 679*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* to procure it.

By this charter the corporation must consist of thirty members at least, but cannot exceed forty; of which the mayor and aldermen are twelve, and the rest are the common council.

There are twelve companies in the corporation, who attend on the mayor, with their streamers, upon solemn occasions, viz.

1. Mercers, under which are also included apothecaries, grocers, and chandlers.

2. Weavers, who, 24^o H. 7. were stiled the warden and stewards of the fraternity of St. Anne, and continued proctors of St. Anne's service in St. Michael's church 'till its dissolution; and were afterwards so very considerable, that when Thomas Machen was mayor, 44^o Eliz. a writing or agreement, in behalf of their journeymen was then made, and approved by two justices of assize, at their being in this city.

3. Tanners.

4. Butchers.

5. Bakers.

6. Smiths and hammer-men, among which are also ironmongers, cutlers, sadlers and glaziers.

7. Joiners and coopers.

8. Shoemakers.

9. Metalmen; to which belong goldsmiths, braziers, pewterers, and pin-makers.

10. Taylors.

11. Barbers.

12. Glovers.

Besides these there were formerly the companies of cappers and furriers, shearmen and dyers, which became united 21^o Eliz. and were quite decayed in 1634; of cooks and innholders, which became united 24^o Eliz. and with their companies attended the mayor upon solemn occasions in 1629; of clothiers, of haberdashers, and of brewers.

Borough English, whereby lands and estates descend to the youngest son, and are forfeited to the king for felony but for a year and a day, was an ancient custom and privilege, enjoyed by the town and some part of the county of Gloucester, and confirmed by a statute made 17^o E. 2. And tho' tis now lost through disuse, and not claimed, in any part of the county; the usage, was preserved in the city, as appears by an inquisition taken before the mayor as escheator, and affirmed upon oath 28^o Eliz.

Every son of a burges is free-born, and as such is intituled to his freedom.

Each burges has free common all the year in the Town-ham, and in Portham after the hay is moved and carried away, which were purchased of the abbey of St Peter's 21^o H. 3. Also in Ox-lease, Meanham, and Little-meadow, after the first vesture is taken off. And about June or July yearly, some of the corporation are chosen to be officers of the commons.

On the 14th of February. 43^o E. 3. the abbey of St. Peter's § granted, that the bailiffs and better sort of the burgeses of Gloucester, might fish in their small fishery in the Severn at and near to Gloucester, at all times at their pleasure; but the common fishers, who catch fish to sell, should pay one penny a year to the kitchener of the abbey. The mayor has now this fishery, and a small acknowledgement is paid for it.

A writ of Quo Warranto was brought against the city 1st and 2d Ph. and M. to prove their right to their several liberties; and upon their answer, all the former grants were confirmed. Another Quo Warranto was also brought against it 15^o Jac. 1. and thereupon a Non Pros. was obtained.

The town had a kind of market as long since as the reign of king John, who commanded that all persons coming hither with their wares might peaceably, and without molestation, come, stay, or depart hence. But the markets, as they now are, were granted by king Henry the Third, weekly on Wednesday and Saturday, of which the mayor is clerk.

King Edward the Third, in 1356, granted a fair, yearly to be holden on the eve and feast of St. John Baptist, with five days immediately succeeding. King James the First granted one upon the 25th of March, with two days succeeding; and another on the 17th of November, and two days after. Barton fair, which is on September 17, was obtained in or about 5^o Edw. 4. by St. Peter's abbey, to whom the manor and farm of that name did formerly belong; but after the dissolution, king Henry the Eighth, September 11, 34^o regni, in consideration of 493*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* granted to the corporation some part of the lands of the manor, which they now enjoy, and several other particulars which were soon granted away.

The matters relating to tolls may be learnt from the various charters and other records still remaining in the city treasury, particularly that in the 32d year of Edward the First, the bailiffs of the town paid to the king 100*l.* for the tolls of the borough. And that, 35^o Edw. 1. an agreement was made between Worcester and Gloucester, that the burgeses should each be toll-free to the other. And in the reigns of king Rich. 2. H. 4. H. 5. H. 6. Edw. 4. H. 8. and Edw. 6. certain fines were paid to the bailiffs in the earlier times, and afterwards to the sheriffs of the town, by such as were not free of it. In 1629, fines were paid for the same; and by a decree made in the star-chamber, in the reign of Charles the Second, they were ratified and confirmed. In 1589, Mr. Pain and others had several disputes with the corporation of the city, concerning the market-overt here, and the right of felling and taking toll at any time was determined in the queen's court of the marches, in behalf of the corporation of the city.

* See Appendix No. 6.

§ The original grant in the custody of the city.

The chief employment of the town in and before the reign of king William the Conqueror, was making and forging of iron; and in the times of king Richard the Second and Henry the Fourth, 'twas eminent for its iron manufacture. The ore was brought from Robin-Hood's hill, at the distance of about two miles from the city, where it is said to have been found in great abundance.

Here was a street antiently called Smith-street *, mostly inhabited by persons employ'd in the iron-works, on which account I presume it had its name; but there were many furnaces and forges in other parts of the city. These engines were then worked by hand, which, since the business has been carried on in a larger way, are moved by water; and the town then lost that manufacture which could no longer be carried on there but under great disadvantages.

Some have been of opinion that this city had formerly a greater share of the foreign trade of the nation than it now enjoys, and urge, that several benefactions have been expressly given to the merchant inhabitants; but probably, at that time, every considerable shopkeeper was called merchant, as is the case at present in Scotland, and some other parts of the kingdom. However, without determining this matter, it is certain, that soon after the conquest many of the Jews, who subsisted intirely on trade and usury, and were a sort of wandering merchants, resided here; but what was the nature of their trade in this place I have not been able to discover any further with certainty. At present the foreign imports of the city are confined to the sole article of wines, which are in good repute.

The cloathing business, was formerly very eminent here, and Brook-street, situate upon Fullbrook, was the place of habitation for such as were concerned in that manufacture. As lately as the year 1629, here was a company of clothiers, who with the other companies attended the mayor on solemn occasions.

Cap-making was also a very considerable trade here, and employ'd a great many hands, but that, as well as the clothing, has long since deserted the city.

In the year 1626, at the decline of the clothing trade, that the poor inhabitants might not be destitute of employment, John Tilsley, to his great honour, brought hither the art of pinmaking §, which was so properly encouraged and promoted, that it soon grew to be considerable, and has been gradually increasing ever since. In 1712, this trade is said to have returned 80*l.* a week; but in 1744 the wages in this branch amounted to about the same sum, exclusive of materials, and together made a return of about 300*l.* a week. At present the manufacture returns about 20,000*l.* per ann. from London, besides a very extensive trade with the country.

This place had very antiently its proper signature. On an old seal in the time of king Edward the Third, which is still used for recognizances, on each side of that king's head is a horse-shoe, one horse-nail near it, and three below it, two and one; with the like number above it, placed in the same order. And it is affirmed, that king Richard the Third, when he made this a mayor town, gave it his sword and cap of maintenance; accordingly we find the following arms on the south side of the gate leading into Crypt-school, which was built by alderman Cooke, who died 1529, viz. A sword erect, with a cap of maintenance on the point, on each side an horse-shoe and three horse-nails at length in the base.

On another old seal, used in the reign of king Henry the Third, and in the 38th year of Edward the Third, is a castle, which appears to have had battlements from the turrets at each corner. And on another antient one in the middle is a castle, with a turret on each side, and round it this inscription, SIGILLUM BURGENSEM DE GILDA MERCATORUM GLOUC.

In the reign of queen Elizabeth, the city used a seal which had, in the middle, a sword in bend, the pomel in base, between six horse-shoes, and ten horse-nails; and round it, SIGILLUM MAJORALITATIS GLOUC.

Christopher Barker, esq; garter principal king at arms, October 18, 1538, granted † to the city of Gloucester the following arms, viz. Vert, a pale or, a sword azure besanted, the hilt and pomel gules; upon the point a cap of maintenance purple, lined ermine; upon the field two horse-shoes argent, pierced sable, between six horse-nails in triangle. On a chief, party per pale, or and purple, a boar's head coupee argent; in his mouth a quince apple gules between two roses. These arms were used on the city seal from the time they were granted 'till 1652; but part of the time, with this addition, viz. Over the arms, 1564, and on each side, two maces, the one surmounted of the other; which arms are upon several grave-stones, &c. in the churches within

* In king Henry the Third's time there was a place in smith-street called Colfall, M. S. Frouc. Perhaps the smiths put their coles here. It was generally afterwards called the Bareland; because it was bare or waste ground, not built upon, next to the bridge, and the way into the castle.

§ Pins were first made in England in the year 1543, before which the ladies used skewers, or rather, I suppose, the prickles of thorns, curiously scraped, trimmed and dried; which the poor women in Wales call pin draen, and have served with them for the purpose of pins 'till lately, if they do not even at this time.

† Mr. Chancellor Furney, in his papers, whence this account is taken, says, the original grant is in my custody.

the city, over those who had served the office of mayor.

The present arms of the city assigned by Sir Edward Bish, garter principal king at arms, August 14, 1652, are, Or, three cheverons gules, between ten torteauxes 3, 3, 3, and 1; which are now used upon the city-seal, and the seal of mayoralty. At the same time he adorned the coat with two supporters, viz. On both the dexter and sinister sides, A lion rampant gules, each holding in his dexter gamb a broad-sword erect proper; and added this crest, viz. Out of a mural coronet issuant a lion gardant gules, holding in his dexter gamb a broad-sword erect proper; in the sinister gamb a trowel, and standing upon a scrole, with this motto, FIDES INVICTA TRIUMPHAT. Three cheveronels, were the arms of the Clares, earls of Gloucester, and 'tis said that Gilbert, one of those earls, gave them to the town. The torteauxes are part of the arms of the see of Worcester, out of which this diocese was taken.

Of the BIRTHS, DEATHS, and BURIALS of eminent PERSONS.

BENEDICT, who wrote the life of St. Dubricius, archbishop of Caerleon, printed by Mr. Wharton, was a monk of St. Peter's abbey, and lived about the year 1120.

Osbern, commonly called Osbernus Claudianus, Osbern of Gloucester, flourished about the year 1140, and was also a monk of that abbey. He is said to have been instructed, from his tender years, by the best masters in eloquence, and in good arts; to have been a man more pure and elegant in the latin tongue than any person of his time. He was also skilled in philosophy, and so excellent a divine, that he was worthy to be compared with the antients. The abbey obtained great honour on account of him, who was truly great and illustrious, and he instructed the monks in learning. He spent a great deal of time in writing books, which were esteemed the chief ornament to the abbey; and 'twas apparent from his productions, that he used the most excellent philosophers and divines, both greek and latin. He was very much esteemed by abbat Hameline on account of his great learning, and was intimate with one Nicholas, who seems to have been afterwards abbat of St. Albans, whom he calls a man of sound doctrine and excellent knowledge. Some of his works were wrote by way of dialogue, and some of them in a continued stile: of these he dedicated some to Gilbert, bishop of Hereford, who was his last abbat; others to Hameline, who succeeded him. King Henry the Eighth took all his writings from the abbey library, and placed them in the royal one at London; among which was one dedicated to Hameline, called Panormia, being a kind of vocabulary or dictionary.

Robert of Gloucester, who received his name from being a monk of this place, flourished about 1263, and wrote a history of Britain from Brutus to some time in the reign of king Henry the Third, in the best verse his times would afford. It is printed in black letter by Mr. Hearne, in two volumes octavo, 1724; and as his language, on account of the great distance between the time when he wrote and the present, is unintelligible to the readers of this age, without an interpreter; therefore the editor published a glossary to it.

John Raftel, D.D. who died about 1600; Richard Caple, M.A. who was buried September 21, 1646; and John Corbet, B.D. who died 26th of December, 1680, were natives of this city, and very remarkable in the times in which they lived.

King Arviragus, (mentioned p. 82,) died about the year of Christ 74, in the 31st year of his reign, and was buried in a temple here, which he had dedicated in honour of the emperor Claudius, and wherein he sacrificed every month.

Gildas Cambrius, in the same age with Martial, Horace, Silius, Statius, Stella, Juvenal, and several others, and but little inferior to any of them, seems to have been the son of some nobleman. Having been instructed in greek and latin by the best masters, he became a great proficient in those languages, and was the most excellent mathematician, rhetorician, historian, and poet of the age. He flourished in the year 60, and died here with king Arviragus, to whom he was dear, and at whose intreaty he wrote several books.

King Lucius, who was truly a good man, and commended by his people, died and was buried here, on the 3d day of December, about the 12th year of his government. A monk of the abbey bestowed these verses on him instead of an epitaph:

*Lucius in tenebris prius indola qui coluisti,
Es merito celebris, ex quo baptisma subisti.
Cælestis medici merito curam meruisti,
Omne felici lotus baptisinate Christi,*

Prinne's Usurp. v. 1. p. 38.

Concerning king Osric, queen Kyneburg, queen Eadburg, and queen Eva, see an account of the abbey of St Peter's.

Prince Ethelred and his princess Alfred, sometimes called Æthelfleda, and Elfreda, the founders of St. Oswald's priory, are reported to have been buried in the east porch of St. Peter's church; and afterwards, when the foundations were dug up, to make room for a new one, their bodies were found intire; and 'tis said their looks were then as graceful as when alive. He died in 908; she in 920. Huntingdon made the following verses in praise of this warlike lady:

*O Elfreda potens, & terror virgo virorum,
Vixitrix naturæ, nomine digna viri.
Tu quoque splendidior fieres, natura puellam,
Te probitas fecit nomen habere viri,*

*Te mutare decet, sed solum, nomina sexus,
Tu regina potens, rexq; trophæa parans,
Jam nec Cæsarei tantum meruere triumphis.
Cæsare splendidior, virgo, virago, vale.*

Which Peck *, in his Antiquities of Stanford, thus translates :

O potent Elfleda ! maid ! men's terror !
You who did conquer nature's self, worthy
The name of man ! more beauteous nature form'd
A woman : But your valour shall secure
Man's higher name. For name you only need,
Not sex, to change ; unconquerable queen,
King rather, who such trophies have obtain'd !
O virgin, and virago both, farewell !
No Cæsar yet such triumphs hath deserv'd
As you, than any of the Cæsars more renown'd.

King Athelstan died here 6^o Kal. Nov. 940 or 941 ; but was buried at Malmesbury, Co. Wilts.

Matthias, brother of Jeffry Ridel, the king's chief justice, who was abbat of Peterborough, died and was buried here about the year 1104 or 1105. Perhaps the stone at the north-east end of the body of the cathedral church, lying upon the ground, on the south of Mr. Blackleech's monument, whereon was carved an abbat with his pastoral staff, and which was lately taken away, was designed for his memorial.

Duke Robert Curtois, or Shorthose, eldest son of king William the First, after a long imprisonment of twenty seven years, at Cardiff castle, was honourably buried by the king's order, in the middle of the choir of the conventual church here, in the year 1134, and had a grave-stone over him, upon which was a cross, now lately taken away. Over the grave-stone was his image in armour, carved in Irish oak, lying at length, cross legged, to denote his having been in the holy war, with a ducal coronet on him, and a wire-lattice over the whole to preserve it. This monument was made long since he was buried, and continued intire 'till 1641, when the soldiers broke it in pieces ; but Sir Humphry Tracy, of Stanway, in this county, bought the pieces, and laid them up 'till the restoration, and then at his own charge caused the tomb to be repaired and beautified ; a noble representation of which is published in Sandford's Genealogical History. This duke was a considerable benefactor to the abbey, and his brother king Henry the First gave large possessions to it on his account.

Richard Fitz Gislebert, a noble and amiable person, being killed by the Welch, was brought hither and buried 17^o Kal. Maij, 1136.

Pain, a noble knight of great valour, being earnestly in pursuit of the Welch, was mortally wounded, and brought hither to be buried.

Geofry Falebote, a stout and courageous knight, was killed by those who lay in ambuscade for the earl of Gloucester, in his journey to Bath from this place ; and being conveyed hither in September 1140, was here buried.

Aldred archbishop of York, concerning whom see St. Peter's abbey, is thought to have been buried in the cathedral, and the shelf-monument on the south side of the choir, is generally supposed to have been erected for him.

Ralph de Maydeston, bishop of Hereford, resigned that see in the year 1239, and retiring to St. Peter's abbey, took upon him the monastic habit, and was buried in the abbey church. Willis.

On the north side of the choir lies the unhappy king Edward the Second, who was very barbarously murdered at Berkeley castle, September 22, 1327, and brought hither by the abbat of St. Peter's. The common tradition is, that he was drawn by stags ; for which reason there are several paintings of them round the pillars at each end of his tomb. After his body had been viewed by several persons who were appointed for that purpose, tho' it was done by them only privately and superficially, he was solemnly received by the town and monasteries, and was decently, but privately, and without any funeral pomp , buried by the abbey, to which he had been a great benefactor §. His son king Edward the Third † erected a fine monument of alabaster with his portraiture on it, a crown on his head, a sceptre in his right hand, and a globe or mound in his left ; and founded a chantry in the place where he was buried. There is a noble representation of this monument in Sandford's Genealogical History. 'Tis said that miracles ‡ were wrought for him ; and that therefore king Richard the Second proposed to translate him to some more honourable place : But of this story every one may believe his proportion. Wolstan, bishop of Worcester, kept the anniversary || of this king's death, personally at Gloucester, at the desire of king Edward the Third.

The monument erected for the king was repaired in 1737 by Oriel college, who caused this inscription [E. II. 1327] to be painted on the pillar at the east end, seven stags on the east pillar, and six stags on the pillar at the west end ; inclosed it with iron rails, and put three plates on them. On that at the east end is, Hoc fundatoris sui monumentum, situ vetustatis deformatum, instaurari curaverunt Præpos. et Soc. Coll. Oriel. Oxon. A. D. 1737. On the next, The arms of king Edward the Second, with a crown over them.

* There are some variations in these verses published by Peck, and also by Lloyd, in his History of Wales. In the third line, instead of feres, they have it fecit. For solum in the fifth line, they have solum ; and in the seventh line, Lloyd has mirere triumphis, instead of meruere triumphis.

 It is affirmed in a MS. now in my custody, that the expences of this king's funeral amounted to no more than nineteen shillings and some odd pence.

§ MS. Chron.

† Barnes's life of this king.

‡ Fuller's Ch. Hist. l. 4, p. 110.

|| MS. Frauc. Appendix to Thomas's Survey of Worcester Cathedral, pp. 112, 113.

*Te mutare decet, sed solum, nomina sexus,
Tu regina potens, rexq; trophæa parans,
Jam nec Cæsarei tantum meruere triumphis.
Cæsare splendidior, virgo, virago, vale.*

Which Peck *, in his Antiquities of Stanford, thus translates :

O potent Elfreda! maid! men's terror!
You who did conquer nature's self, worthy
The name of man! more beauteous nature form'd
A woman: But your valour shall secure
Man's higher name. For name you only need,
Not sex, to change; unconquerable queen,
King rather, who such trophies have obtain'd!
O virgin, and virago both, farewell!
No Cæsar yet such triumphs hath deserv'd
As you, than any of the Cæsars more renown'd.

King Athelstan died here 6^o Kal. Nov. 940 or 941; but was buried at Malmesbury, Co. Wilts.

Matthias, brother of Jeffry Ridel, the king's chief justice, who was abbat of Peterborough, died and was buried here about the year 1104 or 1105. Perhaps the stone at the north-east end of the body of the cathedral church, lying upon the ground, on the south of Mr. Blackleech's monument, whereon was carved an abbat with his pastoral staff, and which was lately taken away, was designed for his memorial.

Duke Robert Curtois, or Shorthose, eldest son of king William the First, after a long imprisonment of twenty seven years, at Cardiff castle, was honourably buried by the king's order, in the middle of the choir of the conventual church here, in the year 1134, and had a grave-stone over him, upon which was a cross, now lately taken away. Over the grave-stone was his image in armour, carved in Irish oak, lying at length, cross legged, to denote his having been in the holy war, with a ducal coronet on him, and a wire-lattice over the whole to preserve it. This monument was made long since he was buried, and continued intire 'till 1641, when the soldiers broke it in pieces; but Sir Humphry Tracy, of Stanway, in this county, bought the pieces, and laid them up 'till the restoration, and then at his own charge caused the tomb to be repaired and beautified; a noble representation of which is published in Sandford's Genealogical History. This duke was a considerable benefactor to the abbey, and his brother king Henry the First gave large possessions to it on his account.

Richard Fitz Gislebert, a noble and amiable person, being killed by the Welch, was brought hither and buried 17^o Kal. Maij, 1136.

Pain, a noble knight of great valour, being earnestly in pursuit of the Welch, was mortally wounded, and brought hither to be buried.

Geofry Falebote, a stout and courageous knight, was killed by those who lay in ambuscade for the earl of Gloucester, in his journey to Bath from this place; and being conveyed hither in September 1140, was here buried.

Aldred archbishop of York, concerning whom see St. Peter's abbey, is thought to have been buried in the cathedral, and the shelf-monument on the south side of the choir, is generally supposed to have been erected for him.

Ralph de Maydeston, bishop of Hereford, resigned that see in the year 1239, and retiring to St. Peter's abbey, took upon him the monastic habit, and was buried in the abbey church. Willis.

On the north side of the choir lies the unhappy king Edward the Second, who was very barbarously murdered at Berkeley castle, September 22, 1327, and brought hither by the abbat of St. Peter's. The common tradition is, that he was drawn by stags; for which reason there are several paintings of them round the pillars at each end of his tomb. After his body had been viewed by several persons who were appointed for that purpose, tho' it was done by them only privately and superficially, he was solemnly received by the town and monasteries, and was decently, but privately, and without any funeral pomp , buried by the abbey, to which he had been a great benefactor †. His son king Edward the Third † erected a fine monument of alabaster with his portraiture on it, a crown on his head, a sceptre in his right hand, and a globe or mound in his left; and founded a chantry in the place where he was buried. There is a noble representation of this monument in Sandford's Genealogical History. 'Tis said that miracles ‡ were wrought for him; and that therefore king Richard the Second proposed to translate him to some more honourable place: But of this story every one may believe his proportion. Wolstan, bishop of Worcester, kept the anniversary || of this king's death, personally at Gloucester, at the desire of king Edward the Third.

The monument erected for the king was repaired in 1737 by Oriel college, who caused this inscription [E. II. 1327] to be painted on the pillar at the east end, seven stags on the east pillar, and six stags on the pillar at the west end; inclosed it with iron rails, and put three plates on them. On that at the east end is, Hoc fundatoris sui monumentum, situ vetustatis deformatum, instaurari curaverunt Præpos. et Soc. Coll. Oriel. Oxon. A. D. 1737. On the next, The arms of king Edward the Second, with a crown over them.

* There are some variations in these verses published by Peck, and also by Lloyd, in his History of Wales. In the third line, instead of feres, they have it fecit. For solum in the fifth line, they have solum; and in the seventh line, Lloyd has mirere triumphis, instead of meruere triumphis.

 It is affirmed in a MS. now in my custody, that the expences of this king's funeral amounted to no more than nineteen shillings and some odd pence.

§ MS. Chron.

† Barnes's life of this king.

‡ Fuller's Ch. Hist. l. 4, p. 110.

|| MS. Frauc. Appendix to Thomas's Survey of Worcester Cathedral, pp. 112, 113.

On the third, The arms of Oriel college. This repair cost the college forty pounds.

The following persons, according to Leland, were buried in the abbey chapter house, and most of them had inscriptions for them written on the walls.

Roger de Lacy, earl of Hereford.

Walter de Lacy*.

Roger, earl of Hereford.

Roger the son of Milo, earl of Hereford, took upon him a religious habit in this abbey, and died in 1154.

Richard Strongbow, son of Gilbert earl of Pembroke, who was instrumental in subduing Ireland, died upon the nones of April, in 1176.

Paganus de Cadurcis, or Chaworth, in the reign of king Henry the Third, who married Gundred, the daughter of William Brewere, a great baron of that time.

Adam de Cadurcis, or Chaworth.

Bernard of New Market, or Newmarch.

Philip de Foye, knight.

Hugh de Portu.

Elias Giffard.

The lady Strongbow, countess of Pembroke, was buried in abbat Parker's chapel, where, in making a tomb for him, they found a cross wrapped in a bull's hide.

Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford, Warwick, and Arundel, and one of the twelve who governed the realm in the time of king Henry the Third, lies on the south-side of the cathedral, behind the choir, with his wife. Over them is now to be seen an antient stone mural monument, with their particulars on it.

As to what is said of king Edmund Ironside's dying and being buried here, by Knighton; of Richard, the youngest son of king William the First, being buried here in 1080, by the Memorial of Gloucester; of a tomb near the altar erected for Isabel, queen to king Edward the Second, by Sir Robert Atkyns; much credit cannot be given to any of these relations.

Further accounts of burials and monumental inscriptions may be seen under the following heads, Government and Officers, St. Peter's Abbey, Bishops, Deans, &c. and in the history of the several parish-churches within the city, to which the reader is referred.

Of the PUBLIC SCHOOLS, CHARITIES, WORKHOUSE, &c.

THERE was a grammar-school in old Smith-street, on this account called the School-house-lane, given, as appears by the Mo- nasticon, by king Henry the Second to the priory of Lanthony; the masters whereof antiently received 40 den. per quarter, or 2 sol. for each child. But 11^o H. 4. only 12 den. In 1535, this house lay void. The priory had let it for 13 s. 4 d. a year, and it is said in R. Cole's Roll to have been sometime in the holding of Sir William Chaplain, the schoolmaster, in the reign of Henry the Sixth. 'Tis very probable that one Haymo, a secular priest, whom Bale calls Haymo Glocestrius, was master of this school about 1160, for he was a native of, and chief schoolmaster at Gloucester, and accounted the most learned man of his time. Roger occurs rector of the schools in Gloucester, September 29, 1209. Andrew Horne, who was very studious in the antiquities of this place, and compiled an excellent work intituled, The Chronicle of Gloster, flourished in the reign of king Edward the First, and Bale expressly says he was a scholar of this place.

The free grammar-school of St. Mary de Crypt, standing upon the west part of St. Mary's church-yard, was, in pursuance of the last will of alderman John Cook, dated May 11, 1528, erected by his widow Joan Cook, who is said in an old book in the custody of the city, to have taken the ring and mantle after her husband's death, and thereupon became a lady. She, on the 11th of January, 3^{1o} H. 8. by indenture of three parts, between herself, the mayor and burgeses of Gloucester, and the bailiffs and citizens of Worcester, vested in the said mayor and burgeses, her manor, messuages and lands, &c. in Poddesmede, Hempstead, Elmore, Bageworth and Bentley, with the county of the said town of Gloucester; lands and tenements in Brockworth, Stonehouse, Ebley, Oxlinch, Standysh, Westbury, and Claxhill, Com. Glouc. to provide, with the rents of Poddesmede, Hempstede, and Elmore, an honest and well learned schoolmaster, for this school, to be chosen by the mayor, recorder, and two senior aldermen; the master to receive a yearly stipend of ten pounds, if a priest, and nine pounds, if a layman. The mayor, recorder, the two senior aldermen, the two sheriffs, the town-clerk, the four stewards, the sword-bearer, the four serjeants at mace, and the five porters of the gates, covenant herein to survey the school once every year between Easter and Whitfuntide, and cause the necessary reparations to be made. For the trouble of doing which, the mayor is to have 4 s. the recorder 3 s. 4 d. each alderman 2 s. each sheriff 20 d. the town-clerk 16 d. each of the stewards and the sword-bearer 12 d. every serjeant 8 d. and each porter 4 d.

The rents of the lands and tenements in Gloucester, Badgeworth, Bentham, and Brockworth are to pay to the poor people of the hospital of

* He gave his lands at Dean to the monks of this abbey, and being founder of the church of St. Peter in Hereford, when that work was almost finished, climbing up a ladder there, he fell down, and being killed by the fall, 6 Kal. Apr. 1084, was buried in the chapter-house at Gloucester. And Emeline his wife gave to the church of Gloucester for the health of his soul, five hides of land at Duntelbourne. His son Walter was a monk of the abbey Dug. Bar. v. 1, p. 95.

St. Bartholomew 3*s.* 4*d.* weekly in money, and the overplus to repair this school-house. The rents of the lands and tenements in Stonehouse, Ebley, Oxlinch, Standish, Westbury, and Claxhill, to the yearly value of 5*l.* are to be laid out on the West-bridge and causey, between Gloucester and Over.

Alderman Lawrence Wilshire, in 1611, gave 100*l.* for the establishment of an usher in the school; and George Townsend, esq; in 1683, gave two perpetual exhibitions for the maintenance of two scholars at Pembroke college, in Oxford, for eight years, to be elected by the mayor, six senior aldermen, and the chief schoolmaster.

The rents of the estate given by lady Cook being greatly advanced, the master of the school now receives 30*l.* a year, and the usher 16*l.* The bailiff, aldermen, and chamberlain of the city of Worcester are appointed by the founder as trustees, to see that the mayor and burgesses of Gloucester survey the school, for which they have a small annuity; and if the latter at any time neglect to perform the duties of their trust, they forfeit 10*l.* to the corporation of Worcester for every default.

The corporation of Worcester have visited the school several times, particularly on the 12th of September, 1728, Mr. Weston, (the mayor) with four aldermen, &c. after twenty years absence, made their visitation, and inspected the accounts of what was given to this school, and St. Bartholomew's hospital, by lady Cook.

Mr. William Massinger, to whom with several other persons many feoffments had been made by alderman John Cook, for the purposes before-mentioned, endeavoured to get all the lands and premises for his own use; but by a decree in chancery, made February 12, 5^o E. 6. and exemplified the 7th of May following, Massinger was obliged to deliver up to the corporation all the evidences, &c. belonging thereto.

MASTERS of CRYPT-SCHOOL.

John Distele occurs Nov. 4, 1547, as do
Thomas Bowland 4^o Ed. 6.

Nicholas Oldisworth, rector of St. Michael's, 6^o E. 6.

Richard Hewis, 1^o Mar. 1.

After this there was a vacancy for a considerable time, several persons assisting in this office.

Hugh Walker occurs 5^o Mar. 1. and 17^o Eliz.

Gregory Downehall, or Downer, 20^o Eliz. 1576.

Edmund Cugley, 21^o Eliz.

Alexander Belshire, 23^o Eliz.

Henry Aisgill, afterwards prebendary, (See prebendaries) occurs 25^o and 27^o Eliz.

William Grove, 31, 40^o Eliz. I believe he resigned in 1598, when he made the city lecture. (See St. Mary de Crypt.) — Floyde, amoved Aug. 20, 9^o Jac. 1.

John Bird occurs 4^o Car. 1. amoved May 18, 1641, and thereupon

John Beedle, M. A. was elected the 25th of May following. See his character in A. Wood's Hist. and Antiq. Univ. Oxon. l. 2. Upon his removal

James Allen, M. A. usher of the school, was elected in October, 1645.

John Cooper, confirmed in July, 1647.

Thomas Bevan, said to be elected 1652, upon Cooper's resignation; but Nicholas Tailer occurs May 18, in the same year.

William Rawlins, B. A. elected July, 1653.

Francis Stedman, B. A. elected Aug. 1654.

Abraham Heague, usher, elected October 1658, upon whose death

John Grubb, M. A. was elected October, 1696, and lies buried in the middle chancel of St. Mary de Crypt, under a stone with an * inscription upon it.

William King, elected May, 1697, and upon his death

Philip Collier, B. A. elected June 16, 1711; licensed June 25, 1711, amoved May 12, 1719, and thereupon

Richard Furney, M. A. was elected, and upon his resignation

Daniel Bond, B. A. the usher hereof, was elected March 25, 1724, and was also vicar of Leigh.

U S H E R S.

Edward Barwell, elected September 22, 1613, and occurs afterwards incumbent of the parish-church adjoining.

Jonathan Bullocke, elected July 15, 1628, upon Barwell's resignation, and occurs afterwards incumbent of the parish-church adjoining. He resigned September 18, 1633, whereupon Robert Bird at the same time became elected, and was amoved September 19, 1629.

A vacancy for some time, 'till

John Corbet, B. A. was elected Feb. 8, 1640, and occurs afterwards incumbent of the parish-church adjoining, and one of the city lecturers. See his character in A. Wood's Hist. and Antiq. Univ. Oxon.

John Allen, M. A. elected July 8, 1643.

Thomas Smith, elected June 8, 1648, and upon his resignation

Abraham Heague, elected March 24, 1652, and upon his being made master, Isaac Heague was elected October 10, 1656; afterwards rector of Huntley. He resigned, and William Wood became elected Nov. 16, 1668.

Oliver Gregory, B. A. was elected March 26.

* H. S. I. Johannes Grubb, A. M. natus apud Acton Burnell, in agro Salopiensi, Anno Domini 1645. Cujus variam in linguis notitiam, et foelicem in erudiendis pueris industriam, grata adhuc memoria, testatur Oxonium. Ibi enim, Aedi Christi initiatus, artes excoluit; puerosq; ad eandem mox excolendas accurate formavit. Huc demum unanimi omnium consensu accitus, eandem suscepit provinciam; quam foeliciter adeo absolvit, ut mihi optandum sit, nisi ut diutius nobis interfuisset: Fuit enim propter festivam ingenii suavitatem, simplicem morum candorem, praecipuam erga cognatos, benevolentiam omnibus, desideratissimus. Obiit 2^o die Aprilis, A. D. 1697, Aetatis suae 51.

1670, and being removed to be master of the college-school,

Thomas Tippet, October 3, 1673, was elected; afterwards rector of Knoll-Parva, co. Wilts, and prebendary of Sarum. He resigned to become usher of the college-school, and thereupon

Thomas Merret was elected January 14, 26^o Car. 2. He was likewise perpetual curate of Barnwood, and dying, was succeeded by Daniel Bond, B. A. elected March 3, 1708.

John Gegg was elected March 25, 1724, upon Bond's resignation.

Henry Church, upon Gegg's resignation, was elected June 19, 1727, and being instituted rector of St. Michael's in this city, left this place.

James Comeline, upon Church's resignation, was elected March 25, 1733; and being instituted vicar of Haresfield left this place.

Thomas Gardiner, upon Comeline's resignation, was elected June 24, 1737.

Charity-school and Work-house.

Timothy Nourse, esq; was the founder of this charity, towards which he gave 100*l. per ann.* for ever, which has been applied to the support of it. In the first session of parliament 1^o Annæ, 1702, an act was passed for incorporating the mayor, three aldermen, and twenty-four others, to be called the governors, deputy-governors, and guardians of the poor of the city of Gloucester, for the better providing for, and setting to work the poor of the said city; which act was to take effect from the 7th day of April then next following.

Sometime after this, the corporation of the city granted to Mr. Francis Yate a lease of part of the east-gate for the poor-school, and also the old horse-pool there, at a small rent.

In the Account of Charity-schools in England, in the years 1707, and 1709, particular mention is made of this having been opened at Gloucester, with subscriptions sufficient for the support of sixty children, with a fair allowance for the master and mistress. And in that of 1711, 'tis said, that eighty-five children were taught in this school, and that seventy boys were clothed the last christmas.

Alderman John Hyett died Feb. 27, 1711, and gave 100*l.* to this school, and ordered by his will, if his son Joseph should die before the age of twenty-one years, 1000*l.* more for building a new charity-school and work-house, and 400*l.* for a stipend for the master. This Joseph Hyett died in 1713, in the twenty-first year of his age, and left a further sum of 1500*l.* for the support and maintenance of this charity.

Sir John Powell also gave 20*l.* Mr. William Allen 20*l.* and Mrs. Dorothy Cocks 20*l. per ann.* which are all applied to this use. And the corporation of the city, desirous of promoting a charity which promised so fair for the general good, granted a lease of the New-Bear Inn, which was large and commodious, for forty-one years, to the governor and guardians, reserving a chief-rent of 40*s. per ann.* renewable every fourteen years at a fine certain of 37*l. 10s.* for the erecting of a work-house for all the parishes belonging to the city, the fitting up of which cost about 600*l.*

In the year 1727, an act was obtained for repealing part of the former act, and appointing a governor, a deputy-governor, a treasurer, and six special assistants, who were to continue in their office for two years. The mayor, five senior aldermen, the bishop, the dean, the chancellor, the arch-deacon, the sub-dean, and the treasurer, all respectively for the time being; and thirty-one persons to be chosen out of the several parishes in the city, and the precincts of the college, were to be, and to continue in their office for six years, and with those before-mentioned, and some few others since dead, to be incorporated by the name of the Governor and Guardians of the poor of the city of Gloucester.

But the powers of the governors and guardians were so circumscribed by the fore-mentioned acts, that, together with the interest of the several sums that had been given to the charity, they could not raise money sufficient for the maintenance of the poor, on account of their great increase, and the dearness of provisions; so that they not only spent some of the principal money, but contracted a debt of 830*l. 8s. 3d.* and were obliged, about May, 1757, to shut up the work-house, and send the poor to their respective parishes. But in the year 1764, another act of parliament was procured, by which the mayor, the five senior aldermen, the right reverend the bishop, the reverend the dean, the worshipful the chancellor, the reverend the archdeacon, and the reverend the sub-dean and treasurer of the cathedral church of Gloucester for the time being; the surviving trustees of Mr. Nourse's will; and such as have been, and shall be elected to succeed them; thirty-one persons to be chosen out of the parishes in the city, and precincts of the cathedral, together with such as shall be elected guardians on account of their donations to the poor, shall be one body politick and corporate, by the name aforesaid, with power to make bye-laws. The last mentioned thirty one persons to continue in their office only one year, unless re-elected.

These guardians, or any nine or more of this corporation, shall meet annually on the second Thursday in June, or within seven days afterwards, and elect by vote out of themselves, one governor, one deputy governor, one receiver or treasurer, and six special assistants, who shall continue in their office for one whole year, and until such time as others shall be chosen to succeed them.

The guardians are to ascertain what money will be necessary for the maintenance of the poor, which must be certified to the mayor, and levied by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the respective parishes, &c. which sums may exceed by one third part what the respective parishes paid in any one year of the five last preceding the passing of this act. They are also empowered to ascertain what further sums of money are necessary to be raised by each parish, to discharge the expences of this act, and to pay the said debt of 830*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* and for replacing the principal money spent as aforesaid, and also for erecting of lamps to enlighten the city from the 29th of September to the 21st of March annually.

Benefactors and Benefactions.

John Fawkener, alderman, and thrice mayor of this city, by his will, dated September 18, 1545, besides 50*l.* bequeathed by him for the repairing the highways and bridges near this city, gave to the mayor and burgeses all his lands and tenements, which were very considerable here, and at Wotton and other places in this neighbourhood.

Sir Thomas Bell, besides the 10*l.* per ann. and other charities and gifts, (see bridges) gave to the poor and prisons about the city, 6*l.* 10*s.* per ann.

Rowland Atkinson, sometime sheriff of this city, by his will dated November 20, 1600, gave to the mayor and burgeses all his possessions in the city, which were eight houses.

William Holliday, a native of this city, and afterwards an alderman of London, by his will, dated December 16, 1623, gave 500*l.* wherewith, by the direction of his relict, afterwards countess of Warwick, lands were purchased of the clear yearly value of 30*l.*; which money is now expended in apprenticing out six boys yearly, according to the direction of the lord keeper in 1628.

Leonard Tarne, alderman of this city, by his will, dated November 3, 1632, gave 4*l.* a year issuing out of Monk-leighton, near this city, to be distributed to 40 poor people, half yearly.

Sarah Browne, by her will dated October 8, 1643, gave several houses in this city, worth 20*l.* a year, for apprenticing out three boys, who are to have 4*l.* a piece.

John Powel, alderman of this city, December 13, 1649, gave 100*l.* with the interest of which one boy is annually placed out apprentice.

John Morris gave 10*l.* that 13*s.* 4*d.* as the interest of it, should be yearly bestowed on the poor.

Joan Goldstone, by her will, dated September 8, 1578, gave 20*l.* to remain as a perpetual stock for the provision of fuel for the poor.

Dame Eleanor Fettiplace, in 1625, gave 40*l.* for a stock for them; and now 70*l.* is allowed for a stock to provide them with coal, at 10*s.* a ton.

The following sums of money were given to the city, to be disposed of as the wills and deeds of the donors direct, viz.

Thomas Gloucester, esq; in 1446, gave 500 marks.

Sir Thomas White, Lord mayor of London, in 1554, gave to twenty three places*, whereof Gloucester is one, 100*l.* per ann. clear, to be lent for ten years to poor clothiers, and to continue in the same order of succession for ever. Gloucester began to receive it in 1581, so that 900*l.* has already been paid to this city at nine payments.

John Haydon, alias Holden, alderman, and one of the sheriffs of London, deceasing in the year of his office, 1583, gave to this city 100*l.* to be lent to poor young tradesmen, at the rate of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per ann. which was to be disposed of for the relief of prisoners and poor people. Stow.

Gregory Wilshire, 27^o Eliz. gave 100*l.*

Thomas Poulton, in the year 1608, gave 60*l.*

Alderman Thomas Machen, in the year 1614, gave 100*l.*

Alderman Fettiplace gave 100*l.*

Mr. Giles Cox, in 1620, gave 100*l.*

Henry Ellis, in 1647, gave 50*l.*

John Langley, 1657, gave 20*l.*

Mr. Willis gave 10*l.*

Sarah Wright, in 1669, gave 10*l.*

Bishop Frampton gave 20*l.*

Several donations were but for terms, and upon conditions, which have long since expired; particularly those of Mr. Richard Pates, the recorder, Mr. Robert Pettifer, alderman Jasper Clutterbuck, and alderman Thomas Pury.

Some are quite lost, as Isabel Wytherington's 2*l.* per ann. notwithstanding several of the possessions did, for many generations before, belong to this corporation.

'Tis very probable that the city derived many of the possessions it now enjoys from the gifts of Robert Banks, and alderman William Jordan, in 1545; of Alice Barker, in 1562; of William Golston, in 1569; of William Saunders, in 1570; of Agnes Nevowe, 37^o Eliz. and some others. These possessions, together with the rents of assize, langable or ground rents for purprestures or incroachments; what the corporation have purchased, and what have been granted to, and given them by the crown and other persons, from time to time, with other accidental advantages and acquisitions, have rendered them a very wealthy body; inasmuch that the revenues which are in the disposal of the magistracy, including those which support the government of the city, and the charitable uses, were estimated to be worth 60000*l.* more than half a century ago, and have, since that time, been very considerably improved.

* This donation of 100*l.* clear, and 4*l.* more to be paid on St. Bartholomew's day yearly, at Merchant-tailors hall in London, by the corporation of Bristol, is to be disposed of to the undermentioned places as they succeed each other in the following table:

1577 York	1579 Reading	1581 Gloucester
1578 Canterbury	1580 Merchant Tayl.	1582 Worcester

1583 Exeter	1589 Winchester	1595 Bath
1584 Salisbury	1590 Oxenford	1596 Derby
1585 West Chester	1591 Hereford East	1597 Ipswich
1586 Norwich	1592 Cambridge	1598 Colchester
1587 Southampton	1593 Shrewsbury	1599 New Castle.
1588 Lincoln	1594 Lynn

Of Saint PETER'S ABBEY, and the ABBATS, &c.
of that MONASTERY.

WULPHERE, the first christian king of Mercia, is said to have begun, and Ethelred his brother and successor, who was afterwards monk and abbat of Bardney, to have carried on, and finished, a monastery here, to the honour of St. Peter, about the year of Christ 680^a, 681^b, or 682^c, chiefly by the care of Ofric, sometimes called^d Oshere, Ostric, or Hoftric, his nephew, and at that time his viceroy of the Wiccij, but afterwards king of Northumberland. Ofric having received from the king^e the vill of Gloucester, with several lands, and a large sum of money, to found and endow this monastery, faithfully discharged the trust reposed in him, and by the advice of Bosil, first bishop of Worcester, taking in nuns^f, made his own sister Kyneburg, or Kenburg, the wife^g of Alred, king of Northumberland, the first abbess. Just after her consecration, he vested all the lands which he had received, with very great addition to them, in the monastery, to which he also granted many considerable privileges. Kyneburg continued in her office twenty-nine years; and dying, was buried in St. Petronille's chapel, where her brother Ofric, who died 729, was first interred, but he was afterwards removed into that of Our Lady; and in abbat Parker's time, was laid under a fair monument of free-stone, upon which were his arms, on the north side of the high altar; at the foot of which against the wall the following inscription is now remaining: Ofricus Rex, primus fundator hujus Monasterii, 681.

Eadburg^h, or Eilburg, who had been wife of Wolphere, king of Mercia, was consecrated to succeed Kyneburg; and governing the nunnery prudently and religiously for twenty-five years, was buried by Wilfrid, bishop of Worcester, next to her predecessor. After her came Eva, sometime wife of Ethelred, king of the Mercians; or of Wolphere, son of king Penda; who, after she had increased the income of the monastery, and procured the confirmation of former donations in many synods, died in the thirty-third^k year of her government, anno 768^l; and was buried next her predecessor. With her died the office of abbess; for afterwards, in the wars between king Egbert and the king of Mercia, the nuns were ravished and forced to depart, and the monastery became desolate, and continued so 'till^m 821; when Beornulph, or Bernulph, king of Mercia, repaired it, and bestowed part of the possessions towards the maintenance of secular priests, whom he had here instituted.

King Burgred, in the yearⁿ 862, confirmed to these the lands which the kings Ethelred, Ethelbald, Offa, and Kenwolf, and other persons had given: and by the consent of his great council exempted the monastery, with its appurtenances and dependents, from all secular service. But in the year^o 1022, king Canute, at the instigation of Wolstan, bishop of Worcester, having turned out the seculars, made them give place to monks of the order of Saint Benedict.

The governor and inhabitants of Gloucester were so averse to monks at first, that Wolphin or Ulfine le Rue^p, or Lehue, who was then consul, or chief governor, and a lord of great puissance, slew seven of them, not far from the town, in 1033; but the pope soon afterwards obliged him to atone for his offence by giving Churcham and Highnam for the maintenance of seven monks in Saint Peter's abbey. The establishment of the ^a Tanner's Not. Monast. p. 137.

^b M. S. Chron.

Rot. Cap. Collect. Cl. Wharton in Bibl. Lambeth. Leland

Itin. V. 4. &c.

^c 681, 682, Cl. Willis Hist. of Mit.

Paul. Abbeys, p. 110.

^d Dug. Bar. V. 1, p. 3. Leland's

Collect. V. 1, p. 240.

^e MS. Frouc. V. 1, is king Æthelred's gift to Ofric in 671.

In MS. 'tis said king Ulpher or Wolpher, in 672, laid the foundation of the monastery, and dying, left the finishing thereof to his brother Æthelred, his successor in the kingdom of Mercia, having appointed him to take care of that work. Leland in his Itinerary, V. 4, says, that Ofric built it with licence. And he is ever reputed to be the founder of this great nunnery, and was esteemed as such, as appears by the inscription for him mentioned in this account. According to some, there was a monastery here before the nunnery erected by Ofric; for several scholars upon the interdict made against the Pelagians for their heresy, fled to the monastery here; but 'tis likely the first that was endowed here was founded by him.

^f Rot. Cap. King Burgred's Charter in MS. Frouc. 1. Mon.

Anglic. p. 108, 993.

^g Dr. Tanner thinks it probable, that this monastery at first received religious of both sexes, under the government of an abbess.

^h And doubtless wife before that to one of the king's of Mercia; for abbat Malvern, in his account of the abbey, and Willis in Hist. Mit. Abb. p. 112, say expressly, that the three queens which presided over this nunnery, were queens of Mercia. Mon.

Anglic. p. 108, 109, 933. Collect. Cl. Wharton.

ⁱ Mon. Angl. p. 109, 993.

^k The Memor of Glouc. says, she died in the 30th year of her government, which is agreeable to abbat Malvern's account.

^l After the short continuance of 87 years, or of 88, according to Leland, V. 4, p. 6.

^m Mon. Angl. V. 1, p. 993. Willis, p. 110. Bishop Tanner says it continued so 50 years.

ⁿ MS. Frouc. Part 1. Autograph. in my custody, not 852 as is mistaken in Rot. Cap.

^o Mon. Anglic. p. 992. Collect. Wharton. Willis, p. 110.

Bishop Tanner's Not. Mon. p. 537.

^p Leland's Itin. Le Ride. Rot. Cap.

monks was not fully compleated 'till ^a Aldred, bishop of Worcester, afterwards archbishop of York, in 1058, pulling down the decayed old church, which stood near the infirmary, built a fine new one at some distance from it, nearer the walls of the town, dedicated it to St. Peter, and gave rules to the Benedictines. Aldred took from this church the manors of Lech, Odinton, Standish and Berton, and appropriated them to the church of York; but they were afterwards publicly restored to this monastery by archbishop Thomas, in the chapter-house at Gloucester, in the year 1095, who then striking his breast, blamed himself for having detained them so long.

ABBATS of SAINT PETER'S.

Edric ^c, who before was one of the secular priests, and upon the introduction of monks, took upon him their habit, was, by bishop Wolstan, appointed the first abbat in 1022. By his naming himself abbat in Eldenham, or Ealdanhame, which signifies old place, he seems to allude to that antient monastery pulled down by the bishop; for the abbey was exceedingly decayed 'till Aldred erected a new one; and this of Aldred's was then expressly called Newminster [or Monastery,] in order to distinguish it from the former building; or perhaps, when he so called himself, Aldred's foundation was not then fully established. Edric presiding over the abbey for thirty-seven years, died in 1058, when the church was endowed and fully established by Aldred: and having ^d alienated several of the possessions of the abbey, and departing from it, was not buried ^e therein.

Wilstan ^f, a monk of Worcester, kinsman ^g to bishop Aldred, was the same year, by the king's leave, constituted abbat by bishop ^h Aldred. He died in 1072, in his journey towards Jerusalem, and was at length ⁱ buried under the yew-tree in the plot in the midst of the cloisters, because he had wasted the goods and possessions of the monastery.

Serlo ^j, or Serlus, a monk of Saint Michael's in Normandy, and chaplain to king William the First, 4 kal. September, 1072, was, by the advice and mind of St. Osmond, promoted by the king to the governance of this abbey, which at that time was in great decay, and was then reputed but of little esteem. He was a person of a very eminent character, and by the indefatigable labours of himself and Odo, the cellarer, procured very great donations to the abbey. At his entrance into his office he found here not above three ^k, some say two ^l monks of perfect age, and eight scholars, or youths; tho' at his death he left 100 monks in it. June 29, 1089, he began ^m the foundation of a new church, the first stone whereof was laid by Robert bishop of Hereford; and being finished, was dedicated with great solemnity on the ides of July, 1100, by Sampson bishop of Worcester, Gundulf bishop of Rochester, and Serenus, (called Henricus in the Monasticon) bishop of Bangor. In 1101 ⁿ, or 1102 ^o, the town with the abbey was burnt, and 'tis probable this church escaped better than that, which in 1088 ^p, was burnt with the monastery. King William the Conqueror ^q, in the twentieth year of his reign, keeping his christmas at Gloucester, royally repaired and increased this monastery, being very much decayed. And Serlo having obtained ^r from him and his two sons, king William the Second, and Henry the First, and other noblemen, freedoms, lands, liberties and confirmations of the grants to this abbey, made by their several patents, died ^s the 5th nones of March, 1104, in or about the 68th year of his age; and was buried under a fair marble tomb on the south side of the presbytery. His intimate friend, Godfrey, prior of Winchester, made the following verses for him.

*Ecclesie murus cecidit, Serlone cadente,
Virtutis gladius, buccina justitie;
Vera loquens, en non vanis sermonibus utens,
Et quos corripuit; principibus placuit,
Judicium preceps; contrarius ordinis, error,
Et levitas morum, non placuere sibi.
Tertius a Jano mensis, lux tertia mensis,
Cum nece suppressum, vita levavit eum.*

A great deal is said in praise of him by Malmesbury, from whom Bale has taken his character. Cent. 13, p. 136.

Saint Arild the virgin, martyr'd at Kington, near Thornbury, at whose tomb 'tis said many miracles were wrought, was translated hither in his time. In 1100, Haraldus, lord of Ewyas, gave the church of S. Michael, and other possessions at Ewyas, for the establishment of a priory there; but as the income thereof was insufficient, and this abbey had, for some years, to their great charge, maintained a prior and one or two monks;

^a Mon. Ang. V. 1, p. 993.

^b Mon. Anglic. Wharton's Coll. Willis's Hist. of M. Abbies.

^c MS. Chron. Glouc. in Bibl. Bodl.

^d The following is a declaration under the hand-writing of abbat Edric: "I Edric abbat of Ealdanhame do make known, and declare by this writing under my hand, that I being compelled in my great necessity, did grant to a certain Starmacotto the lands in Hatherly and Badgeworth, belonging to the church, to hold for his life; which I did in consideration of money lent by him, amounting to 15*l*. with which I did redeem all the other farms belonging to the monastery, from that great exaction throughout England, called Lord Gelt. Witnesses hereunto are Wolstan, archbishop of York, Lesley, bishop of Worcester, Aglaff Earl, and the whole society of the antient monastery, and Anna the abbess, and all the brethren of the monastery of St. Oswald; and Wihifide the chief magistrate, and all the citizens of Gloucester, and many more both English men and Danes: Wherefore, if he who holds the land shall any ways be incumbered in the same, let him make amends out of his own; but let the land be discharged, and return again to the monastery after his death".

^e Mon. Anglic. ^f MS. Frouc. 2^d.

^g Wharton. Willis. ^h MS. Chron. Glouc. in Bibl. Bodl.

ⁱ Mon. Anglic. Rot. Cap. Willis. Wharton. Leland's Collect. Malmesbury. ^j Willis Mit. Abb. p. 113.

^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^{aa} ^{ab} ^{ac} ^{ad} ^{ae} ^{af} ^{ag} ^{ah} ^{ai} ^{aj} ^{ak} ^{al} ^{am} ^{an} ^{ao} ^{ap} ^{aq} ^{ar} ^{as} ^{at} ^{au} ^{av} ^{aw} ^{ax} ^{ay} ^{az} ^{ba} ^{bb} ^{bc} ^{bd} ^{be} ^{bf} ^{bg} ^{bh} ^{bi} ^{bj} ^{bk} ^{bl} ^{bm} ^{bn} ^{bo} ^{bp} ^{bq} ^{br} ^{bs} ^{bt} ^{bu} ^{bv} ^{bw} ^{bx} ^{by} ^{bz} ^{ca} ^{cb} ^{cc} ^{cd} ^{ce} ^{cf} ^{cg} ^{ch} ^{ci} ^{cj} ^{ck} ^{cl} ^{cm} ^{cn} ^{co} ^{cp} ^{cq} ^{cr} ^{cs} ^{ct} ^{cu} ^{cv} ^{cw} ^{cx} ^{cy} ^{cz} ^{da} ^{db} ^{dc} ^{dd} ^{de} ^{df} ^{dg} ^{dh} ^{di} ^{dj} ^{dk} ^{dl} ^{dm} ^{dn} ^{do} ^{dp} ^{dq} ^{dr} ^{ds} ^{dt} ^{du} ^{dv} ^{dw} ^{dx} ^{dy} ^{dz} ^{ea} ^{eb} ^{ec} ^{ed} ^{ee} ^{ef} ^{eg} ^{eh} ^{ei} ^{ej} ^{ek} ^{el} ^{em} ^{en} ^{eo} ^{ep} ^{eq} ^{er} ^{es} ^{et} ^{eu} ^{ev} ^{ew} ^{ex} ^{ey} ^{ez} ^{fa} ^{fb} ^{fc} ^{fd} ^{fe} ^{ff} ^{fg} ^{fh} ^{fi} ^{fj} ^{fk} ^{fl} ^{fm} ^{fn} ^{fo} ^{fp} ^{fq} ^{fr} ^{fs} ^{ft} ^{fu} ^{fv} ^{fw} ^{fx} ^{fy} ^{fz} ^{ga} ^{gb} ^{gc} ^{gd} ^{ge} ^{gf} ^{gg} ^{gh} ^{gi} ^{gj} ^{gk} ^{gl} ^{gm} ^{gn} ^{go} ^{gp} ^{gq} ^{gr} ^{gs} ^{gt} ^{gu} ^{gv} ^{gw} ^{gx} ^{gy} ^{gz} ^{ha} ^{hb} ^{hc} ^{hd} ^{he} ^{hf} ^{hg} ^{hh} ^{hi} ^{hj} ^{hk} ^{hl} ^{hm} ^{hn} ^{ho} ^{hp} ^{hq} ^{hr} ^{hs} ^{ht} ^{hu} ^{hv} ^{hw} ^{hx} ^{hy} ^{hz} ^{ia} ^{ib} ^{ic} ^{id} ^{ie} ^{if} ^{ig} ^{ih} ⁱⁱ ^{ij} ^{ik} ^{il} ^{im} ⁱⁿ ^{io} ^{ip} ^{iq} ^{ir} ^{is} ^{it} ^{iu} ^{iv} ^{iw} ^{ix} ^{iy} ^{iz} ^{ja} ^{jb} ^{jc} ^{jd} ^{je} ^{jf} ^{jj} ^{jk} ^{jl} ^{jm} ^{jn} ^{jo} ^{jp} ^{jq} ^{jr} ^{js} ^{jt} ^{ju} ^{jv} ^{jw} ^{jx} ^{ky} ^{kz} ^{la} ^{lb} ^{lc} ^{ld} ^{le} ^{lf} ^{lg} ^{lh} ^{li} ^{lj} ^{lk} ^{ll} ^{lm} ^{ln} ^{lo} ^{lp} ^{lq} ^{lr} ^{ls} ^{lt} ^{lu} ^{lv} ^{lw} ^{lx} ^{ly} ^{lz} ^{ma} ^{mb} ^{mc} ^{md} ^{me} ^{mf} ^{mg} ^{mh} ^{mi} ^{mj} ^{mk} ^{ml} ^{mm} ^{mn} ^{mo} ^{mp} ^{mq} ^{mr} ^{ms} ^{mt} ^{mu} ^{mv} ^{mw} ^{mx} ^{my} ^{mz} ^{na} ^{nb} ^{nc} nd ^{ne} ^{nf} ^{ng} ^{nh} ⁿⁱ ^{nj} ^{nk} ^{nl} ^{nm} ⁿⁿ ^{no} ^{np} ^{nq} ^{nr} ^{ns} ^{nt} ^{nu} ^{nv} ^{nw} ^{nx} ^{ny} ^{nz} ^{oa} ^{ob} ^{oc} ^{od} ^{oe} ^{of} ^{og} ^{oh} ^{oi} ^{oj} ^{ok} ^{ol} ^{om} ^{on} ^{oo} ^{op} ^{oq} ^{or} ^{os} ^{ot} ^{ou} ^{ov} ^{ow} ^{ox} ^{oy} ^{oz} ^{pa} ^{pb} ^{pc} ^{pd} ^{pe} ^{pf} ^{pg} ^{ph} ^{pi} ^{pj} ^{pk} ^{pl} ^{pm} ^{pn} ^{po} ^{pp} ^{pq} ^{pr} ^{ps} ^{pt} ^{pu} ^{pv} ^{pw} ^{px} ^{py} ^{pz} ^{qa} ^{qb} ^{qc} ^{qd} ^{qe} ^{qf} ^{qg} ^{qh} ^{qi} ^{qj} ^{qk} ^{ql} ^{qm} ^{qn} ^{qo} ^{qp} ^{qq} ^{qr} ^{qs} ^{qt} ^{qu} ^{qv} ^{qw} ^{qx} ^{qy} ^{qz} ^{ra} ^{rb} ^{rc} rd ^{re} ^{rf} ^{rg} ^{rh} ^{ri} ^{rj} ^{rk} ^{rl} ^{rm} ^{rn} ^{ro} ^{rp} ^{rq} ^{rr} ^{rs} ^{rt} ^{ru} ^{rv} ^{rw} ^{rx} ^{ry} ^{rz} ^{sa} ^{sb} ^{sc} ^{sd} ^{se} ^{sf} ^{sg} ^{sh} ^{si} ^{sj} ^{sk} ^{sl} sm ^{sn} ^{so} ^{sp} ^{sq} ^{sr} ^{ss} st ^{su} ^{sv} ^{sw} ^{sx} ^{sy} ^{sz} ^{ta} ^{tb} ^{tc} ^{td} ^{te} ^{tf} ^{tg} th ^{ti} ^{tj} ^{tk} ^{tl} tm ^{tn} ^{to} ^{tp} ^{tq} ^{tr} ^{ts} ^{tt} ^{tu} ^{tv} ^{tw} ^{tx} ^{ty} ^{tz} ^{ua} ^{ub} ^{uc} ^{ud} ^{ue} ^{uf} ^{ug} ^{uh} ^{ui} ^{uj} ^{uk} ^{ul} ^{um} ^{un} ^{uo} ^{up} ^{uq} ^{ur} ^{us} ^{ut} ^{uu} ^{uv} ^{uw} ^{ux} ^{uy} ^{uz} ^{va} ^{vb} ^{vc} ^{vd} ^{ve} ^{vf} ^{vg} ^{vh} ^{vi} ^{vj} ^{vk} ^{vl} ^{vm} ^{vn} ^{vo} ^{vp} ^{vq} ^{vr} ^{vs} ^{vt} ^{vu} ^{vv} ^{vw} ^{vx} ^{vy} ^{vz} ^{wa} ^{wb} ^{wc} ^{wd} ^{we} ^{wf} ^{wg} ^{wh} ^{wi} ^{wj} ^{wk} ^{wl} ^{wm} ^{wn} ^{wo} ^{wp} ^{wq} ^{wr} ^{ws} ^{wt} ^{wu} ^{wv} ^{ww} ^{wx} ^{wy} ^{wz} ^{xa} ^{xb} ^{xc} ^{xd} ^{xe} ^{xf} ^{xg} ^{xh} ^{xi} ^{xj} ^{xk} ^{xl} ^{xm} ^{xn} ^{xo} ^{xp} ^{xq} ^{xr} ^{xs} ^{xt} ^{xu} ^{xv} ^{xw} ^{xx} ^{xy} ^{xz} ^{ya} ^{yb} ^{yc} ^{yd} ^{ye} ^{yf} ^{yg} ^{yh} ^{yi} ^{yj} ^{yk} ^{yl} ^{ym} ^{yn} ^{yo} ^{yp} ^{yq} ^{yr} ^{ys} ^{yt} ^{yu} ^{yv} ^{yw} ^{yx} ^{yy} ^{yz} ^{za} ^{zb} ^{zc} ^{zd} ^{ze} ^{zf} ^{zg} ^{zh} ^{zi} ^{zj} ^{zk} ^{zl} ^{zm} ^{zn} ^{zo} ^{zp} ^{zq} ^{zr} ^{zs} ^{zt} ^{zu} ^{zv} ^{zw} ^{zx} ^{zy} ^{zz}

^t Mon. Anglic. ^u Mon. Anglic. ^v MS. Frouc. ^w Willis's Mitr. Abb.

in 1358^k, the bishop of St. David's, with the consent of his chapter, of Roger de la Warre, lord of Ewias, and of Walter de Monmouth, dissolved that priory, and united it to the abbey of Gloucester.

Peter^l, the prior of the abbey, became abbat in the nones of August, 1104. He encompassed the^m abbey with an excellent stone-wall, by the assent and assistance of king Henry the First, and greatly enriched the convent with a collection of valuable books. King Stephenⁿ confirmed by his charter the donations made to the abbey; and this abbat, after seven years and a half's governance, died on the 16th of the kal. of July, or August, 1113. Upon his death

William Godemon^o, or Godemor, the prior, was promoted to the abbey; and having obtained great donations to it, and a licence to appoint his successor, resigned in 1130. Retiring to St. Paternum, in Wales, he died on the 3d nones of March, says Willis; but according to Mr. Wharton, 3d ides of July, the year after his resignation. On the^p 8th ides of March, or May 8, 1122^q, when the monks were singing mass, and the deacon began the gospel, the tower was set on fire by lightning, and the whole monastery was burnt, so that all the valuable things therein were destroyed, except a few books, and three priests vestments.

Walter de Lacy^r, brother to the founder, or according to some, the principal benefactor to Lanthony in Wales, being of the blood-royal of England, was promoted by abbat Godemor, whose chaplain he was, and received the benediction from Simon bishop of Worcester, on the 3d nones of August, 1130. At the petition of himself and some of the nobles, in 1138, king Stephen, by his charter, confirmed the donations made to this abbey. He died on the^s 6th of the ides of February, 1139, and was buried by Reinaldus, abbat of Evelham, and Roger, abbat of Tewkesbury. Hugh Fitz-William^t, the Norman, whose family afterwards assumed the surname of Kilpeck, in 1134, gave to the abbey the priory of Kilpeck, in Herefordshire, dedicated to St. David. It stood from the castle^u above a quarter of a mile.

Gilbert Foliot^v, or Folieth, or Folieth, sometime a Cluniac monk of Burgundy, being prebendary of Newington, in the cathedral of St. Paul's, London, received the benediction^x from Robert bishop of Hereford, on Whitsunday the 3d of the ides of June, 1139, or, as 'tis said, was installed^y on the 11th of the ides of June, 1139. Upon abbat Lacy's death, ^z two of the monks of this abbey were sent to Gilbert, who was designed for abbat; and king Stephen having heard of his excellent probity, at the request of Milo, earl of Hereford, whose kinsman Foliot was, granted the government of the abbey to Foliot. In 1148^a, he was removed to the bishoprick of Hereford; and thence he was translated to that of London, being a very learned man and a great writer, as may be seen in Bale and Godwin^b. Upon Foliot's removal to Hereford, Hameline; the sub-prior was elected the^c 6th of the calends of October, 1148, and received the benediction from Simon bishop of Worcester, on the nones of December. This abbat went to Rome to defend the rights of his monastery against the archbishop of York, who claimed the manors of Leck, Oddington, Standish, and Barton, as pertaining to the archbishoprick, tho' his predecessor Thomas had restored them to the abbey, after the time was expired for which they were mortgaged; and obtained such success in the affair, that the bishops of Chichester and Lincoln^d, to whom this dispute was referred by pope Eugenius, adjudged it on the behalf of the abbey, and king Stephen confirmed it; but in 1157, this abbey, for preventing any future controversy, gave to the archbishoprick of York, Oddington, Condicote, and Shurdington, with certain lands; and the archbishop, with the assent of his chapter, and a general synod, renounced all claim to the other particulars. Pope Alexander III, by his bull dated 4th ides of July, in or about the year 1164, confirmed^e this agreement, and says, The controversy about this matter was agitated before his predecessor Adrian, who appointed the bishops of Salisbury and Bath to act as his delegates in this matter. He died on the^f 6th of the ides of March, 1179; in whose time very considerable donations were made^g to the abbey. On the 5th of the ides of May^h the abbey was again burnt.

Thomas Carbonelⁱ, or Carbonach, prior of St. Cuthlack's, or Guthlac's, near Hereford, was installed the 15th of the cal. of October, 1179, and died the 21st of July, 1205. The abbey and great part of the town was burnt in 1204. After him,

Henry Blont, or Blond, the prior, ^k received the benediction from Maugre bishop of Worcester, September 29, 1205; and was installed the 6th of the ides, or nones, of October. In 1222, he began to rebuild^l the tower of the church, which fell down, and committed the management thereof to Helias the sacrist. And the same year, with the abbat of St. Albans, was^m appointed a president of the chapter of the benedictines at ^k MS. Frouc. ^l Willis's Hist. M. Abbies. Wharton.

^m Rot. Cap. ⁿ MS. Frouc. Vid. Appendix, N^o. 11.
^o Collect. Wharton. Willis's Hist. Mitr. Abb.
^p Ib. Saxon Chron. ^q Gloucester Book in
 CCC. Library Oxon. ^r MS. Frouc. 1. ^s Willis's
 Hist. Mit. Abb. ^t Mon. Anglic. V. 1. ^u Bishop Tanner's Not. Mon. p. 175. ^v Wharton's Collect. ^w Wharton's Collect. ^x Willis's Mit. Abb. ^y Cont.
 of Flor. Wigorn. ^z Wharton's Coll. Willis's Mitr.
 Abbies, p. 114, &c.

^b It is said that he was the first bishop that was translated from one bishoprick to another in this kingdom.
^c Wharton's Coll. Willis's M. A. p. 114, &c.
^d MS. Frouc. 2^o Rot. Cap. ^e Cl. Wilkins's Councils
 V. 2, p. 437. ^f Collect. Wharton. Cl. Willis's Mit.
 Abb. p. 114. ^g Mon. Anglic. ^h Collect. out of MS. book of Glouc. ⁱ Wharton's Collect. Willis's
 Mit. Abb. 114. ^k Collect. Wharton. ^l Willis's Mit. Abb. ^m Reinerus de Congreg. Nigror. Monachor. in Anglia.

Berrmondsey. The abbey was twice destroyed^a by lightning during his government, viz. in 1214, and in 1223. He died the 10th of the kalends of September, 1224, and was succeeded by Thomas de Bredone^o, or Breden, the prior, who received the benediction at Worcester, October 7, 1224. This abbat^p died in 1228.

Henry Foliot^q, or Foleth, or Folet, prior of the cell at Bromfield, succeeding, received the benediction from William de Blois, bishop of Worcester, in 1228. He was a great benefactor to the abbey, and built a handsome tower in 1237; two years after which he made an aqueduct to serve the convent with water; he likewise vaulted part of the church; and sometime before his death began a new tower at the west end. In 1230^r, or 1231^r, he appointed twenty marks yearly out of the church of Newport, in Glamorganshire, for the charity of the abbey, in French wine and wastel. About 1236^r, for 30 marks, he granted to the burgeses of the town, the free common for their cattle, between the bridge of Gloucester and old Leden; and Common in Prestham, and all the meadows of the abbat beyond Severn, on the west side, after the hay was carried off, except the meadows belonging to foreign manors. Ralph de Willington^s, and Olympias, his wife, having at their own charges built our lady's^t chapel, in the church-yard of St. Peter's, for two foreign priests, and a clerk to attend them; and erected a house within the precincts of the abbey for their habitation, the abbey received lands to the yearly value of 8*l.* 7*s.* for their maintenance and support, whereupon the abbat and convent, extolling their extraordinary liberality to the abbey, particularly in this gift, covenant with them to keep all the buildings in good repair, and allow the chaplains a sufficient corrody; that every year on the day of Ralph's death this agreement shall be read before the brethren; and he, Olympias, and all their ancestors and successors, in a full chapter, shall be absolved to be partakers of all the good works done in the abbey, and in the churches pertaining to them; that on the day of his death the service shall be performed as fully as for a monk, and that yearly; and that this agreement might continue inviolable, the convent in full chapter pronounced the blessing of God to all those that keep it; and his curse, as far as they say lay in their power, to the violaters thereof. The abbey, under their common seal, confirmed and gave this agreement to Ralph; and Ralph sealed and gave another part to the abbey, to be kept by them. Tho' this chapel^z, we are told, was finished in 1227, yet the agreement concerning it was made by abbat Foliet and the convent. This abbat died on the ides of July, 1243, And Walter de St. John^y, the prior, received the benediction at Basinger, on the 4th of the nones of October, and dying the same year, upon the day whereon he was to have been installed,

John de Felda^z, or De la Felde, the precentor, received the benediction Dec. 6, 1243, and was installed on the 12th following. He finished the west tower on the south part of the front, and in 1246, pulled down the old refectory, and began a new one. In 1251^z, the abbey became indebted to the value of 3000 marks. The bishop of Worcester, to whom they had applied for relief, excluded and forbade the reception of strangers, and retrenched the hospitality of the abbey. The abbat died the 6th of the kalends of April, 1263, and was succeeded by his chaplain,

Reginald de Homme^b, or Hamme, who was installed the same year on the Sunday after the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul. At his entrance he^c found the abbey in debt 1500 marks, by losses and misfortunes, which he could not repay, tho' he was in some measure relieved by king Edward the First^d, who, in 1272, took the abbey into his protection, and appointed a commissioner that might take care for the observance of his grant, and keep all persons from damaging or molesting the abbey. And afterwards, the same king rebuilt a gate on the south side of the abbey, which is now called by his name, but before was stiled Lichgate. In 1264^e, this abbat, together with the bishop of Worcester, procured a truce to be made between the barons that were in the town of Gloucester, and prince Edward, the king's son, who had taken the castle from the bare is. And in 1274, being proctor of the whole diocese of Worcester, by special order from the pope, the bishop of Worcester being by infirmity detained at home, he was at the council of Lyons, and died on the ides of Sept. 1284. In 1283^f, John Giffard, baron of Brimsfield, built Gloucester college in Oxford for thirteen monks, whom he chose out of this convent, to be improved in learning; and on the feast of St. John the evangelist, in the pre-

^a Mon. Anglic. ^o Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abbies, p. 114. ^p Ib. ^q Ib. ^r Collect. MS. Chron. ^s Annal. Wig. in Angl. Sacra.

^t Orig. in Cust. City.

^z MS. Frouc. 2.

^y In this century the appointment of particular priests to officiate at the Virgin's chapel began to take place in England.

^z Annal. Wig. in Anglia Sacra. ^z Ib. Collect. Wharton. Willis's Account of Mit. Abb. 114. ^z Ib.

^z MS. Frouc. 2^d Part. Collect. Wharton. In the donation of the particulars given to Gloucester abbey, in Manastic. Anglic. 'tis said, That in 1260, John Delfeld purchased of Lawrence de Chandos, knight, 55 acres of arable land in Brockworth, and 40 acres of inclosure, and all his wood in Bockholt, which contained 300 acres; but probably he only contracted for these particulars, and did not pay for them, which made the abbey so much in debt at his death. For in MS. A. 5. is a deed of conveyance to abbat Reginald from the said Sir Lawrence de Chandos, and most of the particulars of Brockworth and Bockholt, which he had granted to abbat John, and another deed to abbat Reginald, whereby he granted and confirmed all the lands, &c. which his predecessor had of the said Sir Lawrence. In this MS. but before these two grants, are several deeds whereby the said Sir Lawrence granted many particulars in Brockworth and Buckholt. And I suppose the seal and payment was not quite finished before the grant and confirmation was made to this Reginald.

^b Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb. ^c Sir R. A. Prinne's Intol. Usurp. V. 3, p. 126. ^d R. of Glouc. p. 343. ^e Mon. Anglic. V. 1, p. 541. Stevens's Addit. V. 1, p. 337, &c. Annal. Wig. in Ang. Sac. MS. Chron. Dr. Hutton's Antiq. Oxf. &c. &c.

fence, and agreeable to the will of Giffard, abbat Homme was introduced into it. Other monasteries of Benedictines afterwards partook of the benefit of this house; and their lodgings were called agreeable to their names. That part called Gloucester lodgings, as appears by the arms of the abbey at the entrance thereof, still remains, and is the habitation of the provost of this house, which has lately changed its name of Gloucester college, afterwards Gloucester-hall, into Worcester college. This abbey was obliged to maintain three or four of their monks here, and allowed each of them 15 marks per ann. The church of Chipping-Norton^h, co. Oxon, was appropriated for their sustenance. This Reginald de Hamme appears to be the first abbat of this church, who was summoned to parliament, and that was, for the first time, according to Dugdale, 49° H. 3.

John Gamages^b, or de Gamages, or Gag, prior of St. Cuthlacks, a person very religious, and of an honourable family, upon de Homme's death, was installed on St. Andrew's day, 1284, and confirmed Nov. the 20th following. In 1303ⁱ, abbat Gamages pulled down the old dormitory, and began a new one, which was finished by his successor in 1313. On July 16, 34° Edw. 1. ^k in consideration of a fine paid to the king, he obtained a charter for regulating the vacancies of the abbey, by which the abbey was granted to the prior and convent, to be the keepers of it 'till the abbat elected had received the temporalities. For every vacancy, whether it continued four months or not, they were to pay 200 marks; and if it continued longer than that time, to pay according to that rate. In 1298^l, on the morrow after St. Barnabas, William de Brok, a monk, afterwards prior of this abbey, was an inceptor in divinity, under the chancellor of Oxford, and was the first Benedictine monk in England who took the degree of doctor in it. At his vespers Lawrence Honsum, S. T. B. a monk of this place, was respondent; and at his inception were the abbat, with his monks, priors, obedientiaries, clerks, esquires, and several noblemen, to the number of 100 in all; the abbats of Westminster, Redynge, Abendon, Evesham, Malmesbury, many priors and monks, with divers rewards and exercises. All other prelates almost of the whole province of Canterbury of this order, who were absent, sent exercises; and so this inception was finished to the honour of this abbey, and of the whole order. About the feast of St. Hillary^m, 1305, this abbat made a sumptuous feast in the great hall in the court of the abbey, when the king's justices sat at Gloucester upon the inquisition of Traylbafton. There were 30 knights, the priors of Lanthony and St. Oswald, with other ecclesiasticks, and many of the more honourable persons of the whole county, at this entertainment, which was so well managed, that the justices and other barons present expressed their highest approbation of it. On Epiphany dayⁿ, 1300, a sudden fire surrounded the monastery, and consumed the cloister, belfry, and the great chamber, with other buildings adjoining. This abbat having, by his frugal management^o, brought the abbey out of debt, and increased their stock of sheep to 10,000, after he had lived^p sixty-two years a monk of the convent, over which he had presided as abbat twenty-three, he died 15 kal. May, 1307, and was buried with great honour, by the bishop of Worcester, being attended by several abbats to his grave, without the choir near the door of the cloisters, where his brother Sir Richard Gamages had been interred.

John Thokey^q, or Toky, or Chokey, the sub-prior, was elected May 1, 1307, received the benediction at Hartlebury, 8 kal. July, says Willis, but some MS. papers in my custody say June, and that he was installed on the 29th of that month. In 1313^r, he was excommunicated for resisting the prior of Worcester's visitation in the vacancy of the see; but an award being made concerning it, the bishop of Worcester, September 2, 1314, absolved the abbey, and required the official of the archdeacon of Worcester to publish it. At or before 14° E. 2. as appears by the king's patent then granted, the abbey had licence to appropriate the church of Haitherope, to find chaplains in the charnel house built by Peter Fox, in the abbey church-yard. (Bishop Tanner's Not. Monast.) During his government^s, king Edward the Second being barbarously murdered at Berkeley castle, this abbat fetched him in his chariot from the castle, the abbats of Kingswood, Bristol and Malmesbury being afraid to do it, and with his convent, solemnly robed, accompanied with a procession of the whole city, honourably received him; which afterwards proved so fortunate to Gloucester, such numbers flocking to see and pay their devotions to his relicks, that a great part of the church was built out of the offerings made on that occasion. Our abbat, in 1318, rebuilt the south aisle, and did several other benefactions; but at length growing old and infirm, he resigned in 1329, and died soon after. February 28, 2° E. 3. ^t the king, with the consent of parliament, in consideration of the expences which the abbey had been at in celebrating his father's funeral, granted, That upon every vacancy of the abbey, they should compound with the king at the rate of 100 marks for the space of a year; but that all knights fees holden of the abbey, escheats and presentations to their churches, which should fall in the time of the vacancy, should belong to the king. The prior, as president, and the convent, should keep

^a MS. Frouc. ^b Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^c Willis's Mit. Abb. p. 115. ^d MS. Frouc. 1.

^e MS. Chron. Glouc. ^f Ib. ^g Antiq. Eccles.

Brit. p. 291. ^h Sir R. A.

ⁱ Willis's Mit. Abb. Annal Wigorn. in Anglia Sacra, V. 1.

^j Willis's Mit. Abb. p. 115. ^k MS. Frouc. 1

^l Willis's Mit. Abb. p. 115. ^m MS. Frouc.

the abbey in safe custody, 'till another person was admitted thereto. The escheator, or the sheriff, upon a vacancy, to make only simple seisin within the abbey, and so to depart.

John Wigmore^u, or Wygmor, the prior, by the procurement of abbat Thokey, was promoted in 1329. He gave an exceeding rich, embroidered garment, to be worn on the festival of the pentecost. While he was prior, he rebuilt the great chamber of the abbat, near the garden of the infirmary. He also built " the great grange at Highnam from the foundation; the chamber of the abbat next the great hall, with a little hall adjoining to it, and a chapel. He was well skilled in mechanicks, and delighted in other arts. He began St. Andrew's aile, which in six years he finished in a beautiful manner, out of the oblations made at the tomb of king Edward the Second, which was so frequented by persons coming hither in devotion, that the city of Gloucester was scarce sufficient to receive them; and their offerings were so great, that 'tis thought they would have been enough to have built the whole church. This abbat obtained " of the king, Oct. 3, 10° E. 3. a grant to the abbey of the hundred of Dudston, co. Gloucester, with all its emoluments and appurtenances, at the fee farm rent of 12*l.* per ann. Dying, the 12th of the kalends of March, 1337, he was buried on the south side, near the entrance of the choir, which he built, with a square stone pulpit over the west door, and which in the year 1718, was demolished to make room for the organ.

Adam de Staunton^v, the prior, succeeded the same year. He built the great vault of the choir, and the stalls on the prior's side of it, as also the vineyard-house, out of the oblations^w made at the tomb of king Edward the Second, by his son king Edward the Third, queen Philippa, prince Edward, and several of the nobility and gentry. The king gave a ship of gold, and another ship, which, at the entreaty of the abbat and convent, was redeemed at the price of 100*l.* The prince offered a cross of gold, having in its composition a part of the great cross, and a ruby. These oblations must have been of great value, for this abbat, notwithstanding his great expences in building, left 1000 marks in the treasury. In 1338^x, he was one of the two presidents of the chapter of the Benedictines at Northampton. June 25, 19° Edw. 3. by exchange, he " obtained for the abbey the manor of King's-Barton, adjoining to Gloucester, with several other particulars. And dying, in 1351, was buried at the altar of St. Thomas, which his brother, John de Staunton, had " rebuilt. February 20, 17° Edw. 3. " the moveables and immoveables of the abbey were valued at 287*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.* and the members of the convent, July 28, 1348, were thirty-six.

Thomas Horton, the sacrist, succeeded, being chosen by way of compromise. He received the benediction at Cheltenham, from the bishop of Hereford, by leave of the bishop of Worcester, Dec. 4, 1351; and had the temporalities granted to him the 12th of the same month. He adorned his church with abundance of vestments, and caused the great altar, and the presbytery, to be made, together with St. Paul's aile, and the great hall wherein the parliament was holden in the year 1378, during the session of which, the king, and his whole court, were lodged in the abbey. In the refectory " there was treating concerning the laws of arms. The common hall was designed for the lords in parliament, and there was a chamber, which for its elegance was antiently called the king's, appointed for the secret council of the nobles: and in the chapter-house was the common council of parliament. After this abbat had governed twenty-six years, being very aged and infirm, he resigned November 8, 1377; and dying seventeen weeks and three days afterwards, was buried under a flat stone in the north part of the transept, or great cross aile. Nov. 20, 1° R. 2. the king confirmed several charters of his progenitors to the abbey; and among the rest, that of king Edward the Third, concerning the vacancy of the abbey. 'Tis probable this was done to preserve good order in the proceedings before the ensuing election of the abbat; for the king, under his great seal, sent a writ to the barons of the exchequer, in the dispute about the sum of money due for the vacancy, prohibiting them to give any molestation to the abbey, in any thing contrary to his charter.

John Boyfield^y, or de Boyfeld, the præcentor, was elected 6 kal. Dec. 1377, and received the benediction from the bishop of Hereford, at Whytebourn, on Sunday before Christmas; was installed December 24, and had the temporalities restored to him on the 31st of the same month. Mr. Wharton says, he obtained from the pope the use of the pontificals for himself and successors; but probably this was done by his successor, Walter Froucester. Dying on the 3d of the kalends of January, 1381, in the fourth year of his government, he was buried in St. Paul's aile, near abbat Horton. In 1380^z, there were fifty-four monks in this convent, with an abbat, and 200 officers or servants; the yearly income was then 1700 marks. The revenue¹ of the abbey being much lessened by extraordinary inundations, pestilences, and other calamities, and being continually fre-

^u Collect. Wharton. Willis's Hist. Mit. Abb.

^v MS. Chron. ^w MS. Frouc.

^x Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

Mit. Abb. MS. Chron. Sir R. A.

Congreg. Nigror. Monachor.

^y MS. Frouc.

^z This altar is mentioned in MS. Frouc. 2, when David Dunning and Walter Heich were præpositi Glouc. also when William Sumery and John Fitz Roger Symon were præpositi thereof. So that this altar, in abbat Staunton's time, was but repaired.

¹ Orig. Papers.

² MS. Chron.

³ MS. Frouc.

⁴ Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

⁵ Original Papers now remaining.

⁶ MS. Frouc.

quented by guests, as well poor foreigners as those of this kingdom, the expences were so very great as to require the appropriation of St. Mary de Lode to defray them.

Walter Froucester^k, or Froucestre, or Froucestor, or Froncester, the chamberlain, was elected in January, and installed the 14th of February, 1381. The abbey was afterwards^l sued for not paying the 200 marks, according to the charter of king Edward the First, but it was determined that they were no longer due on account of the vacancy. He procured from pope^m Urban, by the interest of the duke of Gloucester and others, a grant for himself and the abbats his successors, of the mitre, ring, sandals, and dalmatic: Also, that he might give the solemn benediction at vespers, matins and at table, so that no bishop or legate of the apostolic see were present. He alsoⁿ obtained a dispensation for eating of flesh in the abbey, from septuagesima to quinquagesima Sunday inclusive. He made the^o sumptuous and beautiful great cloisters, concerning which see the account of the cathedral church. He took great care and pains to collect and transcribe the records belonging to this abbey. And dying in 1412, was buried in a chapel at the south-west part of the choir, under the arch of the tower, where his gravestone now remains, which appears to have had his effigy, mitre, &c. on it in brass, which are now torn off. There was an anniversary kept^p for him in the church of Chipping-Norton, co. Oxon, 'till the time of the dissolution; and six cloth gowns were given to six poor men, and some other particulars were then yearly distributed there, as well as in the churches of St. Mary de Lode, and of the Holy Trinity in Gloucester. In his time^q the number of monks was forty-five, with an abbat and two hundred officers or servants, the income being the same as in the time of his predecessor.

Hugh de Morton^r, or Moreton, succeeding, had the temporalities restored to him May 27, 13^o H. 4. on whose death, which happened ann. 1420,

John Morwent^s, Marewent, or Marlwent, called erroneously by Camden, in his Britannia, Nicholas Marwent, chamberlain of the abbey, had the temporalities restored to him July 14, 8^o H. 5. He made the west front, and erected the stately porch and two pillars, one on each side of the body of the church at the west end; intending, if he had lived, to have made the whole body of like work. August 2, 7^o H. 6. a composition was made between the abbey and the town, whereby the lane under the south wall of the abbey was granted to the bailiffs and burgeses. Their serjeants were impowered to carry their maces before the bailiffs in the abbey; and the bailiffs or their serjeants might execute any of the king's writs, summonses, &c. within the abbey, except upon the abbat, monks, their domestick servants, or counsellors. March 2, 9^o H. 6. the king, before he travelled beyond the seas, came to this abbey, and made an oblation. May 10, 1437^x, this abbat occurs as prolocutor for the religious, and exhibited for them a schedule with certain particulars at the convocation: And dying in 1437, had for his successor

Richard Boulars^y, or Boulers, or Bolers, or Butler, who, November 12, 16^o H. 6. had the temporalities restored to him. In 1440, he was offered the bishoprick of Landaff, but refused it. In 1444^z, being appointed by the king to go to Rome, and other places, where his attendance might be required for a considerable time, the prior and convent granted him 400*l.* per ann. out of the profits of the abbey, during his absence. July 20, 25^o H. 6, 1447^{aa}, there was another composition made between the abbey and the bailiffs of the town, by which int. al. the bailiffs and burgeses were to have free common, and dig earth, in the Common Ham; and to have the use of the water of Fulbrook, at the upper north-gate; of the lane under the south wall of the abbey, and of the two water-mills at the west-gate: And the abbey to enjoy the stone wall within fifteen foot of land in breadth within it, from St. John's Church-yard to the blind-gate. After Michaelmas^{bb}, 1450, Richard duke of York, then at variance with king Henry the Sixth, took this abbat, and sent him prisoner to the castle of Ludlow; but the same year^{cc} he was advanced to the see of Hereford, which he held 'till his removal to Litchfield. The motto which he used when abbat, was, MEMENTO, MEMENTO; by some thought propheticall, and interpreted, Remember, remember, this abbey must be dissolved; but says Dr. Fuller^{dd}, I like the text better than the comment, and there is more humility in the motto than solidity in the interpretation. Bowlers^{ee}, when bishop of Litchfield, by his last will, dated March 23, 1458, and proved on the 10th of April following, gave his books to the library of this abbey.

Thomas Sebroke^{ff}, or Seabroke, being elected, after Boulars was advanced to the see of Hereford, had the temporalities restored to him February 16, 29^o H. 6. 1450. He pulled down the old tower, and began the building of that stately one in the ^k Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb. ^l MS. Frouc.

^m Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb. MS. Chron.

ⁿ MS. Chron. ^o Willis's Mit. Abb. Leland's Itin.

In some MS. Collections now in my custody, 'tis said, abbat Froucester began the building of a neat cloister, whose cieling and ornamental workmanship are nowhere surpassed. All the windows along the south cloister are contrived for writing places for the use of the monastery, and at the west end of the north cloister there are many neat washing places near the refectory, for the convenience of the monks before and after their repast.

^p MS. Malv. 2.

^q Orig. Paper. Scac. Cap.

^r Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^s Ib. MS. Chron.

^t See Account of the Cathedral Church.

^u An Antient Copy in the custody of the abbey.

^v Scac. Cap. ^x Synod. Anglic. p. 65.

^y Collect Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb. ^z Scac. Cap.

^{aa} An Old Book in the custody of the city.

^{bb} Speed's Chron. in the year. ^{cc} Willis's Mit. Abb.

^{dd} Ch. Hist. l. 6. p. 334.

^{ee} Willis's Survey of Litchfield, p. 390.

^{ff} Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb. p. 117.

middle of the church ; but he died before it was finished, having first committed the care of it to Robert Tully, a monk of this abbey, who was afterwards bishop of St. David's, as appears by the inscription yet remaining at the bottom of the choir, over the arch of the tower ;

Hoc quod digestum specularis opusque politum, Tullij hæc ex onere Seabroke Abbate jubente.

which is thus rendered in the last edition of Camden's Britannia :

This fabric which you see, exact and neat,
The abbat charged the monk to make compleat.

On the south wall under the tower are his arms, viz. Ermine, a cinquefoil sable. His motto, FIAT VOLUNTAS DOMINI, some persons have interpreted to denote, If this abbey must be dissolved, the will of the Lord be done. But the same may be said of this ^h as was of his predecessor's. His name, motto and arms, which now remain on many bricks beyond the bishop's throne, shew that he paved the choir. He died in 1457, and was buried in a chapel at the south-west end of the choir, where his effigy is placed at length, in white alabaster, in his pontificalibus. In or about abbat Seabroke's time, John Twynning, a monk of this abbey, built from the foundation the great inn, called the New Inn, in the upper north-gate street, to the great profit and advantage of the abbey. This inn, according to tradition, was intended for the reception of pilgrims.

Richard Hanley ⁱ, or Hauley, or Haulaces, received the temporalties March 11, 36° H. 6. He ^k began the rebuilding of our Lady's chapel at the east end of the church, and died in 1472.

William Ferley ^l, or Farley, a monk of the abbey, was confirmed April 22, 1472, received the benediction April 23, and had the temporalties restored to him the 1st of May following. He finished the rebuilding of the chapel, which his predecessor had begun ; and 18° Edw. 4. ^m with the abbats of Malmesbury and Winchcombe, as deputies of the king, received the fealty of Thomas Compton, abbat of Cirencester.

John Malverne ⁿ, or Mulverne, had the temporalties restored to him December 17, 14° H. 7. and died about August ^o 13, 15° H. 7. In the time of the vacancy ^p after his death, the monks were at such variance, and committed such enormities, in making interest for the abbacy, that the king, with his privy council, directed a mandate to the prior, as president of the abbey, commanding him to punish all the offenders, and to keep the abbey in due order during the vacancy. The election to be examined according to law by the king's council. At length

Thomas Branche ^q, or Braunche, a monk of the abbey, was elected August 31, 1500 ; confirmed by Dr. Wodyngton ^r, vicar-general of the bishop of Worcester ; received the benediction September 15, and had the temporalties restored to him October 19, following. He died July 1, 1510. After his death ^s, as after his predecessors, a like mandate was sent to the prior for the government of the monks, who, on the vacancy, had committed many disorders. July 9, the abbey obtained a congé d'elire, and thereupon

John Newton ^t, alias Browne, D.D. the king's chaplain, (who, about the year 1478, took upon him the order of St. Benedict in this abbey, and was at the time of his election prior of St. Cuthlack's near Hereford) was elected on the 30th of July, 1510, confirmed the 22d of November, had the temporalties restored to him on the 28th, and was installed December 6, following, notwithstanding the violent opposition made against his election, when there were forty-eight monks in the abbey and sixteen in the cell, by John Huntley, the cellarer, with sixteen monks of his side, and their appeal against it to the bishop of Worcester. In the year ^u 1512 and 1513, 5° H. 8. there were such great divisions and animosities between the town and abbey, on account of common, which was said to be withholden from the town by the abbey and its tenants, that the townsmen, to near the number of two hundred, assembled themselves, and wounded some of the servants of the abbey ; therefore a letter was sent from the king's privy council on the behalf of the abbey, commanding the mayor, under the penalty of appearing at the star-chamber, of paying 100*l.* and of forfeiting the liberties of the town, to suppress these disturbers, and keep the town and abbey in quiet, 'till the dispute should be determined. October 27, 5° H. 8. ^v an agreement between the town and abbey having been first made, and the mayor first having sent a letter of complaint to the abbey, an award was made by the abbat of Winchcombe, the prior of Lanthony, and several others concerning the matter ; but, it seems, this was insufficient, for in the time of his successor, Feb. 6, 9° H. 8. a composition was made between the abbey and the town about this affair ; and the 20th of March, 10° H. 8. another award was made, relating to the tenants of the abbey at Maismore. This abbat died January 15, 5° H. 8.

William Malvern ^w, alias Parker, B.D. master of the work, called at his predecessor's election ^x, Baccalaureus Opponens, and also Propoens, was elected on the 4th of May, 1514 ; confirmed at Gloucester on the 1st of June following, and had the temporalties restored to him on the 6th of August, 1515. Upon the request of the univerⁱ Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^h Fuller's Ch. Hist. l. 6, p. 334.

^k Willis's Mit. Abb.

^l Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^m MS. ⁿ Collect. Wharton. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^o MS. Br. and N. ^p Ib.

^q Collect. Wharton. Willis's Survey, and his Mit. Abb.

^r MS. Br. and N. ^s Ib.

^t Willis's Mit. Abb. MS. Br. and N. Willis's Survey.

^u An old book in the custody of the city.

^v Collect. Wharton. Willis's Survey, and Hist. of Mit. Abb.

^w MS. N.

sity of Oxford, he took the degree of Doctor in Divinity. In 1524^c, he compiled a compendious history of this abbey, printed in the 2d volume of Robert of Gloucester's Chronicle. In March, 1525, cardinal Wolsey, by his commissary Dr. Allen, exercised a legantine visitation in the abbey, when their yearly revenues, according to common account, amounted to 1022*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.* ob. and the abbey acknowledged themselves indebted to the cardinal in 40*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* 9. The clergy of the kingdom having incurred a premunire for acknowledging and receiving the cardinal's authority from Rome, 22^o H. 8. they compounded with the king for a fine of 200,000*l.* of which this abbey paid 500*l.* as its proportion. This abbat adorned the south, or king Edward's gate, belonging to the abbey; enlarged the gate (demolished since in the beginning of the year 1722) leading to the buildings which now constitute the episcopal palace; repaired, or rebuilt, great part of the palace, then the abbat's house; rebuilt, or repaired, the great house at Prinknersh; built the tower at Barnwood, the neat vestry at the north end of the cross aisle; and erected a handsome chapel on the north side of the choir, just below the tomb of king Edward the Second, wherein is a stately tomb erected for this abbat, and an altar monument, with his effigy in white marble, lying at full length on it, in his pontificalibus, with a mitre and pastoral staff, and his arms, which were, Sable, a bordure engrailed or, charged with eight pellets, a buck passant between three pheons of the second; which arms were 'till lately remaining on the gates, &c. abovementioned. Some persons have expounded this abbat's motto, MERSOS REATU SUSCITA, Raise up those that are drowned in guiltiness, as prophetic, in relation to king Henry the Eighth's raising the abbey into a bishoprick; but Dr. Fuller gives the same answer to this, as he does to the mottos of his predecessors Boulars and Sebroke. In his time, Olberne, the cellarer, made a square tower north-west of the churchyard, part of which is the gate leading to St. Mary de Lode's church; and repaired the old Ram opposite St. John's church, in the upper north-gate-street, over the door of which are the following lines, cut in wood, still remaining:

*En ruinosâ dom^o quôdâ quâ tûc renovavit
Monachus urban^o Osburne John rite vocatus.*

This abbat, Richard Skidmor, and other monks to the number of thirty-four, subscribed to the king's supremacy, and he continued abbat 'till the dissolution, soon after which he died. I have been told that he was a younger brother of the family of the Parkers, of Hasfield, in the county of Gloucester; and that after the dissolution, he retired to them, and there continued for the remainder of his life.

The whole number of abbats was thirty-two, and not thirty-three, as Sir Robert Atkyns makes them, by reckoning Malvern and Parker as two distinct persons, whereas, according to Cl. Wharton, and Anthony Wood, they are only different names for the same man.

The abbey was surrendered the 2d of January^b, 31^o H. 8. by Gabriel Moreton, the prior, and the monks, under the conventual seal, when 'twas valued at 1946*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* per ann. according to Dugdale, but 1550*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* ob. according to Speed. In another account^c is the same value which Speed mentions, and the clear yearly sum 1430*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.* exclusive of its cells, which are valued distinctly. Out of these revenues the king's commissioners assigned the following pensions: To *Gabriel Morton^d, the prior, 20*l.* which was also confirmed to him by patent, dated on the 10th of February following. To Edward Bennet, late receyvoir, 20*l.* Thomas Kingswood 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* William Morwent, Edmund Wotton, John Wigmore, chamberer, Walter Standley, 10*l.* each. *Thomas Hartland, hosteler, *Humphry Barkeley, Richard Anselm, kitchener, 8*l.* each. *William Newport, 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* *William Augusteyn, 6*l.* Thomas Lee, professed and no priest, *William Symes, alias Deane, 100 sol. each. Those before whose names the asterism is prefixed, continued unpreferred, and received their pensions in 1553; and at the same time the following pensions were paid to others who were sometime monks here. To Thomas Saybroke, 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* John Terris, alias Clyfford, 10*l.* William Burford, 8*l.* Christopher Horton, 6*l.* There remained also 32*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in fees, and 69*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in annuities, charged on the revenues of the late abbey.

The arms of the Abbey were Gules, two keys in saltire, surmounted by a sword in pale argent.

Of the monks were, the abbat; the chief prior; the second, or sub-prior; the third prior; the cellarer; the sub-cellarer; the almoner, frequently called the almoner of Standish; the sub-almoner; the præcentor; the sacrist; the keeper of the hospital; the chamberlain; the keeper of the infirmary; the keeper of the refectory; the master of the churches; the master or keeper of St. Mary's chapel; the monk of the vill or town; the kitchener; the master of the work; certain monks called Scholares Oxon, residing in Gloucester college there. All these had particular lands, rents, or profits given to, or assigned for, their several offices.

Of the monks were also, the chaplain of the abbey; the succentor; the sub-sacrist; the third sacrist; the chaplain of the abbat; the sub-chaplain; the batchelor opponent.

Other officers were, the chief steward; the under steward; the receiver general; the physician;

^c M. S. Malvern, V. 1 and 2, wherein are contained several particulars following relating to him.

^d Leland's Itin.

^b Burnet's History of the Reformation.

^c Steven's Suppl. to Mon. Anglic. p. 33. Notes to Tanner's Not. Monast. p. 137.

^d Willis's Hist. Mit. Abb. and Addenda thereto.

the attorney of the abbey; the chief porter; the under porters; the steward of Stanley priory; the steward of Eweny; the steward of the sacrist; the steward of the master of the work; the steward of the almoner; the steward of the chamberlain; the steward of the manor of Standish; the clerk of the exchequer, or treasury, or of the cellarer, and register of the abbey; the auditor of the accounts of the abbey; the serjeant at mace in Gloucester; the master of the choiristers, organ, and the grammar-school; the plumber; the keeper of the pantry; the attorney for the business of the abbey in the king's exchequer; the taylor; the steward of Hinton, Buckland, and Clifford; the keeper of the sealing-axe for marking their trees; the abbat's secretary; the bailiff of the following places, viz. Barton-Regis, Matson, Kylpeck, Froucester, Brockthrop, Ampney, Barnwood, Wotton, Laberton, Upton, Estington, Longford; the barker; the principal or chief shepherd; several other shepherds; several clerks of the abbey and abbot; the bailiff of Dudston and King's-Barton; the valet of the brewhouse; the boy, or helper of the brewhouse; the valet of the vineyard at Over; the auditor of the accounts of the farmers of the lands belonging to the cellarer; the serjeant, or valet, of the refectory; the valet of the horses; the bailiff of Stanley St. Leonard's, Ruddle, Rudge, or Farley; the valet of the hostliar; the keeper, or woodward of Buckholt wood; the keeper of Bird wood; the bailiff of Standish; the hayward of Portham, Poolmead, Oxelesowe and archdeacon's mead, or of all the hay meadows near Gloucester; the woodward of Woolridge; the woodward of Boldonne; the woodward of Standish; the collector of Wotton, Northlech, Churcham, Froucester, Newport, Barnwood, Kylpeck, Linkenholt, Maismore, Ampney, Ullenwike, Buckland, Highneham, Matson, Brompton, Rudford, Duntburne, Longford, Barton-Abbats.

Thus we see how many different offices there were in one of these great monasteries, an account of whom and their respective duties may be seen in Fuller's Church History.

Beside the priory of Ewias, and the priory of Kilpeck, this abbey had four other cells, which were subordinate to it in several respects, viz.

1. The priory of St. Cuthlack^a, or Guthlac, formerly consisting of a provost and secular canons, without Bishopgate-street, in the east suburbs of the city of Hereford. It had a prior, præcentor^b, a sub-prior, and three monks; the ordering, placing, or amoving of whom was at the will of the abbat of St. Peter's. In 1101, this priory, with all the revenues belonging to the collegiate church, was given to the abbey, by Hugh de Lacy. The priory, dedicated to St. Peter, St. Paul, and

St. Guthlac, valued, according to Speed and Dugdale, at 121*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.* ob. or as in another account, 169*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* ob. was granted 34^o H. 8. to John ap Rice.

2. The priory of Eweny^c, or Gwenny, or Wenny, in Glamorganshire. In 1141, Maurice of London gave lands and possessions to the abbey, for the establishment of a priory there. It consisted of a prior and two monks, who were also at the disposal of the abbat. The donations to it were confirmed by William archbishop of Canterbury, in his metropolitical visitation, November 3, 1384; and by king Henry the Eighth, May 5, in the 8th year of his reign. The abbey, in consequence of a letter from the king, on the 28th of Feb. 28^o H. 8. granted this cell, with its appurtenances, except the advowsons and presentations to churches, to Edward Carne, L. L. D. for ninety-nine years, at the yearly rent of 20*l.* 10*s.* and to maintain three monks there, during the life of Edmund Wotton, the prior; afterwards only two monks, one of whom should be prior. It was dedicated to St. Michael, and was valued at its dissolution at 59*l.* 4*s.* clare, or according to other accounts, 71*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* ob. or 78*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* and granted, 37^o H. 8. to Edward Carn.

3. Stanley St. Leonard's^d, in the county of Gloucester, a small monastery of prior and canons, founded in the church of St. Leonard, by Roger de Berkeley, who, with the consent of Sabrith, or Sabrath, the prior, gave it to the abbey in 1146, as their cell for benedictines, wherein was a prior and two monks. king Henry the Eighth^e, in a letter to the abbey, dated on the 10th of June, in the 30th year of his reign, observing that the number of monks in the abbey was diminished, desired that such as were in this cell might be recalled, and that the abbey would grant a lease of the cell, for ninety-nine years, to Sir William Kingston, knight; which was accordingly done^f the 18th of July, at the yearly rent of 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* with some few reservations. 'Twas dedicated to St. Leonard; and at its dissolution^g was valued at 126*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* but clear of all deductions at 106*l.* 17*s.* The scite, as parcel of Gloucester abbey, was granted to Sir Anthony Kingston.

4. Bromfield^h, in Shropshire. In 1155, the canons hereof gave it to this abbey by the hands of Gilbert bishop of Hereford; which donation was confirmed by Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury. There was formerly a little college of prebendaries, or secular canons, in the church of St. Mary, who were turned into Black, or Benedictine monks. It consisted of a prior and two monks. 'Twas valued at its dissolution at 78*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* but clear of deductions at 77*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* or as 'tis inⁱ another account, but 67*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* It was granted to Charles Cox, 4^o & 5^o Ph. & M.

^a Mon. Anglic. MS. Brown and Newton. MS. Malv. 2. Tanner's Not. Mon. p. 174.
^b MS. in the A. office.
^c Mon. Ang. MS. Brown and Newton. MS. Malv. 1 and 2. Tanner's Not. Monast. p. 713.

^d Mon. Anglic. MS. Malv. 2d. ^e Ib.
^f Stevens's Supplement. Tanner's Not. Monast.
^g Mon. Anglic. Tanner's Not. Mon.
^h MS. in the Augmentation Office. ⁱ The

The abbats of this place had also eight sumptuous houses, viz.

1. The Vineyard^k, near the town, at the end of the west causey. 'Twas a large house, built by abbat Staunton, and moated round. It stood pleasantly situated on a rising ground, beyond Over's bridge, near the banks of the Severn, in the parish of St. Mary de Lode. The vineyard and park were given to the bishoprick of Gloucester at it's foundation, and again confirmed 6° E. 6. The bishops of this see frequently resided there before the great rebellion, when 'twas demolished. It was very much plundered in the Christmas holidays, 1641, by lord Stamford, as were all the neighbouring places thereabout, and all the writings taken thence.

2. Hartpury^l, four miles north-west. This manor belonged to the monastery 'till its dissolution, and was given to it by Offa, king of Mercia, in the time of Eva the abbess. Walter Compton, esq;^m died on the 26th of July, 7° Eliz. seized of the manor or demean of Hartpury, and of and in the capital messuage there, called the abbat's place, and fifty yard lands belonging to the manor; all which he obtained from William Harbert, knight of the garter, by his deed, dated on the 20th of February, 4° E. 6.

3. Prinknershⁿ, called also Prinkenesse, or Prinknash, or Prynkenafsh, three miles east of Gloucester. The abbey had a park here, and free warren in all their demean lands in this place, granted by king Edward the Third, on the 3d of December, regni 28° and confirmed by king Richard the Second, the 20th of November, regni primo. 'Tis reputed extraparochial, and adjoins to the parish of Upton St. Leonard's. The manor, which belonged to St. Peter's abbey at its dissolution, was granted to Edward Bridges and Dorothy Praye, 36° H. 8. and the reversion of the house and park, to Sir William Sandys and Thomas Spencer, 3° Jac. 1. It was soon after purchased by Sir John Bridgman, chief Justice of Chester, and was sold out of that family, 1770.

4. Newnham^o, twelve miles south-west. In this parish^p is a hamlet called Ruddle, where the abbey had a manor, lands, tythes, messuages, a water-mill, a fishery, and a passage over Severn 'till its dissolution. Ralph Bluet^q, soon after the conquest, gave Rodele to it. King William the Second, at the petition of abbat Serlo, and of some of his nobles, confirmed this gift in 1096; and 'twas confirmed again by king Henry the First, and others after him. That king expressly gave and confirmed to it the manor of Rudele, to find lights to burn continually before the high altar of St. Peter's, for the soul of duke Robert Curthose, his brother; and a fishery in Severn as far as their lands go; a grove or wood there, called Sudrug, to do as they please with it; and to the fa-crist, common for all his cattle thro' the whole forest of Dean. Henry the Third, by his charter, dated at Newnham, confirmed this fishery to the abbey as fully as Henry the First gave it.

5. Berkeley^r, about fifteen miles south-west.

6. Thornbury^s, about twenty miles south-west.

7. The Manor Place at Froucester^t, where the abbey then had a lordship of 100 marks a year, and where was once a college of prebendaries: And

8. Bromfield Manor Place^u, near Ludlow, in Shropshire.

In a lease of the abbat's lands at Hyneham, is the following reservation: ' And upon reasonable summons^x by the abbat made to the lessee, when the plague shall be at Gloucester or Over, the abbat reserves a convenient part of the mansion-house at Hyneham, for the residence of himself and his men, during the continuance thereof, March 12, 7° H. 8.'

At Standish^y, five miles south of this city, was a building called the Almery, erected for the use of the abbey, which continued possessed of it 'till the dissolution. This place gave denomination to the chief almoner of the abbey, who was generally called the almoner of Standish. Beornulph^z, king of the Mercians, in 821, gave this manor to the monastery, which archbishop Aldred, to whom it was mortgaged, took away, and the archbishops of York claimed it, as belonging to that see; but archbishop Thomas, in 1095, about thirty-nine years after it was taken away, in the monks chapter-house, in the presence of abbat Serlo and many others, restored it to the abbey, much blaming himself for having detained it so long. And king William the Second^z, at the petition of abbat Serlo, and some of his great men, confirmed it by charter to the abbey in 1096. However there were frequent disputes about this affair 'till it was finally concluded by abbat Hameline, who ended it in the manner already mentioned.

After it was in the entire possession of the abbey, it soon became applied to charitable purposes, at the admonition of Mauger, bishop of Worcester. Thomas Carbonel, the abbat, restored to the use of the poor all this manor, with its appurtenances, except to the cellarer, the antient rent paid at the anniversaries of the abbats, and a few other things; and to the abbat two marks yearly at Christmas, and two marks yearly at Easter, for the abbat's private alms. The manor to be converted by no person to any other use, unless in great necessity, and by common counsel of the whole convent. This agreement was made in the chapter, on St. Mary Magdalen's day, 1202. Witnesses were Mauger the said bishop, the abbat ^k Leland's Itin. Willis Mit. Abb. 112. Old papers in the custody of the city.

^l Leland's Itin. Willis's Mit. Abbies.

^m An old book in folio, of Escheator's accounts now in the Bodleian library, Oxon.

ⁿ Leland's Itin. Willis's Mit. Abb.

^o Leland's Itin.

^q Mon. Anglic.

^r Leland's Itin. and Willis's Mit. Abb.

^s Ib.

^t MS. Malv. 1 and 2.

^u Mon. Anglic.

^p MS. Malv. 1 and 2.

^r Ib. and MS. Frouc.

^s Ib.

^t MS. Malv. 1.

^z MS. Frouc. 1.

^y Ib.

^z Sir R. Atkyns.

of Winchcombe, William de Werdon, archdeacon of Gloucester, and others. A decree^b was made by the bishop of Worcester, 1346, that the almoner of the abbey, out of this manor, should pay for the poor a certain proportion weekly for bread, and ninety yards of woollen cloth yearly, at Christmas, for thirty poor people. And if it appears at the bishop of Worcester's visitation, that the almoner has been negligent in delivering, or the sub-almoner in disposing thereof, the abbey shall forfeit 5 lib. A writ was directed to John de Hampton, the king's escheator, in the counties of Gloucester, Worcester, Hereford, &c. 17^o Edw. commanding him to restore again to the abbey the manor of Standish, notwithstanding it was seized into the king's hands, because the abbey had appropriated it to a certain charitable use without the king's leave.

In the year 1516^c, abbat Malvern, alias Parker, agreed with the members of his monastery, That whereas the manor of Standish, being of the value of 16 l. per ann. at least, with other small alms, viz. thirteen frize coats to thirteen poor people, to be provided by the town monk; 2 sol. which the abbey cellarer did yearly distribute to each of them; and a mess called the abbat's dish, worth 8 d. every week, used heretofore to be paid at the manor of Standish in money, and since that in bread; and afterwards the same was distributed within the abbey in corn, which occasioned great inconveniences, therefore there should be thenceforth established a fraternity of thirteen men, called Peter's men, to be appointed by the abbat, in honour of the Holy Cross, one of which should be prior, and wear a black mantle, for distinction. The town monk should provide for them yearly thirteen black cloth gowns, which should be made close before, and with close sleeves, and a mantle, allowing three yards of cloth for each gown and hood, the cloth being not under 20 den. per yard, beside what is for the mantle. And each of them should have 8 den. a week, and the prior 9 den. They should wear continually a large hood, a great pair of beads, the arms of the monastery embroidered on their right shoulders, and a cross of red and blue on their breasts; all to be provided by the town monk. They should diligently attend divine service, and perform the duties required of them devoutly and decently. The sub-prior of the abbey should have the oversight and government of them: and towards the charge of all this, the cellarer should pay 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. for their bread, beer and money, to the almoner; and the almoner should pay all other charges out of the manor of Standish. And all those sums should be paid to the sub-almoner, or pay-master, a month before hand.

The abbat was summoned^d to several parliaments, or great councils, in the reigns of king Henry the Third, Edward the First, Edward the Second, and Edward the Third. And^e was appointed in this last king's reign to be one of the persons who shall constantly attend at those assemblies.

This was one of the twenty-seven mitred abbeys which were in this kingdom. It was under the visitation of the bishop of Worcester, until the time of its dissolution, by the pope's grant, upon an unjust accusation of abbat Boyfield, and his convent. The last visitation that occurs, was made in the chapter-house here, by Hugh Latimer, bishop of Worcester, the 28th of January, 1537.

The abbat^f used to be summoned to the provincial chapters. He held some of his possessions by barony, and therefore attended at parliament as a peer of the realm.

This abbey, and some of their tenants enjoyed several particular privileges, besides those before-mentioned, among which were, 1. The tythe of all the hunting (totius venationis) in the forest of Dean, by the grants of king Henry the First, and Henry the Second.—2. The having of all sturgeons taken in their waters, by the grants of king William the First, and Henry the First.—3. That no person shall fish in their fisheries, nor take any game in any of their manors without their leave, by the grants of king Henry the First, king Steph. and king Henry the Second.—4. That whatsoever, or wheresoever, any thing necessary should be bought, the monks might pass free from toll, by the grants of the kings Henry the First and Second.—5. The abbat had a power of making five publick notaries, and investing them in their office by a pen, pen or quill-case, and paper.—6. The free

^b MS. Frouc. 1.

^c MS. Malv. 1.

^d Particularly 49 H. 3. 3, 9, 12, 17, 18, 23, 25, 27, 30, 32, 34 Edw. 1. 2 to 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 to 20 Edw. 2. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18 to 21, 22, 23 to 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36 to 39, 40, 41, 42 to 44, 46, 47, 49, 50 Edw. 3. These summons are also added to Mr. Stevens's Additions to Mon. Anglic. &c. 1 to 7, 8 to 11, 12 to 18, 20, 21, 23 Rich. 2. 1 to 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 12, 14 Hen. 4. 1 to 7, 8, 9 Hen. 5. 1 to 5, 7, 9 to 11, 13, 15, 18, 20, 23, 25, 27 to 29, 31, 33, 38 Hen. 6. 1, 2, 6, 12, 22, 23 Edw. 4. 19 Hen. 7. 1, 3, 6, 14, 23, 28 Hen. 8.

^e Fuller saith, that 49 Hen. 3. sixty-four abbats and thirty-six priors were called to parliament; but this number being too great, king Edward the Third reduced it to twenty-five abbats and two priors, to whom were afterwards added two abbats, so that there were twenty-nine in all, and no more, that staidly and constantly enjoyed this privilege, viz. The abbat of Tewkesbury, the prior of Coventry, the abbats of Waltham, Cirencester, St. John's at Colchester, Croiland, Shrewsbury, Selby, Bardney, St. Bennets of Hulme, Thorney, Hide, Winchelcomb, Battle, Reading, St. Mary's in York, Ramsey, Peterburg, St. Peter's in Gloucester, Glastonbury, St. Edmund's-bury, St. Austin's in Canterbury, St. Albans, Westminster, Abingdon, Evesham, Malmesbury, and Tavistock, and the prior of St. John's of Jerusalem, who was stiled Primus Angilæ baro, but it was with respect to the lay barons only, for he was the last of the spiritual ones. I have here set down the first twenty-four of these in the order they went to parliament 3 H. 8. Mr. Hearne thinks that they took place in the house of lords according to the seniority of their creation; but John Anstis, esq; Garter king of arms, is of opinion that some of the abbats, like the bishops, had by virtue of their abbies a certain fixed precedence, and that others of them took place according to the priority of their creation. Many have assigned the first place to the abbat of St. Albans, because Saint Alban was the first martyr in this kingdom. Tanner's Not. Mon. fol. prefac.

^f MS. Reg. Malvern.

^g Stevens's Add. p. 178.

customs, liberties, and quietances, which the abbey freely, honourably, in peace, fully and clearly enjoyed, were granted or confirmed to them by the kings Henry the First, Stephen, and Henry the Second.—7. All their lands and possessions were quit of carriage, tallage, summage, passage, pontage, conduct, and king's works; with foca, or focne, and faca, and toll, and theam, and infangetheof, and all the free customs thereof, as formerly granted, by the kings Henry the First, Stephen, and Henry the Second.—All the goods and chattles (pecunia) were quit of all toll and custom by the grants of the kings Stephen, and Henry the Second.

Upon every new election of an abbat, the abbey was obliged to maintain one of the king's clerks whom he thought fit to name; and accordingly corrodies for their lives were granted to them. In the reigns of king Henry the Seventh, and king Henry the Eighth, the value of those corrodies or grants was 5*l.* a year.

When the abbat was confirmed, and received his benediction, he generally made the sacrist of the priory of Worcester some valuable present, usually of costly robes, or vestments, or of materials to make them. In the annals of Worcester, in Anglia Sacra, 'tis said, that in the year 1241, the sacrist of Worcester received the Alb and Cap, as well for Walter, which was not installed, as for John, which was.

Tho' the chief of the lands and possessions of this abbey were in the town and county of Gloucester, yet there were several belonging to it in Buckinghamshire, the city of London, Devonshire, Glamorganshire, Hampshire, Herefordshire, Middlesex, Oxfordshire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, Wiltshire, and Worcestershire.

'Tis said in the notes to bishop Tanner's Not. Monast. preface, p. 15, That all the parliamentary abbats and priors had houses in Westminster, London, or Southwark, to live in, whilst the parliament sat: And 'tis probable, that the abbat of this place then inhabited a house near Saint Martin's Vintry, London; for Radulph Peverell gave to this abbey the church there, and all the lands which belonged to the priest. King William the Second confirmed this grant in the time of abbat Serlo, and 'twas also confirmed by king Henry the First.

In the reign of king William the Conqueror, the possessions of the church of St. Peter, which lay in Gloucestershire, are set down under the tenth head of the General Survey of that county, as may be seen in the copy of Domesday, printed in this book, p. 66.

At that time the church of St. Peter of Gloucester held the manor of Bertune, with the adjacent members, Berneuude, Tuffelege, and Mereuent, in Dudestanes hundred; Frowcestre, in Blacelawes hundred; Boxewelle, in Grimboldestowes hundred; Culne [Coln Rogers] in Brictwoldeberg hundred; Aldeforde, in Begebriges hundred; Bochelande, in Wideles hundred; Hinetune, in Tetboldestanes hundred; Hamme [Highnam] and Prestetune, in Tolangebriges hundred; Ledene, in Botelewes hundred; Hamme and Mortune, [supposed to be Churcham and Linton] in Westberies hundred; Omenie, in Gerfdunes hundred; and Duntefborne in Cirecestre hundred.

Several particular benefactions to this abbey are published in Sir William Dugdale's Monasticon, and have been translated by Sir Robert Atkyns, and inserted in his Ancient and Present State of Glostershire; whence, omitting some redundancies, and making a few necessary corrections, the following Account of Donations is taken. But there is a roll of Benefactions among the records of the dean and chapter of Gloucester, placed in chronological order, down to the year 1263, in which many of the following particulars are omitted.

Donations to the Monastery of St. Peter at Gloucester.

Alre.

Ethelbald, king of the Mercians, gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, and to the nuns there, twenty hides of land in a village called Alre.

Aspertone.

Robert Curtoise gave to God and St. Peter, and to the monks of that place, one hide of land in Herefordshire, called Aspertone, in the tenth year of the reign of king William Rufus, in the twenty-fifth year of the presidency of abbat Serlo.

Alwestone.

Walter the sheriff, gave to God and St. Peter at Gloucester, and to the monks of that place, the church of St. Helene of Alwestone, with one yard land in the same parish, in the seventh year of king Henry the First, the abbey being at that time vacant by the death of Serlo.

Ablode and Paygrave.

King Henry the First gave to God and St. Peter at Gloucester, and to the monks of the same place, Ablode and the grove of Barton called Paygrave, in exchange for the place where now the tower of Gloucester standeth, where was heretofore an orchard belonging to the monks. The same king Henry, in the ninth year of his reign, when Peter was abbat, gave six ridges of land behind Ablodes court. Also Radulph de Wylinton, and Olympias his wife, gave six ridges of land behind Ablodes court, when Thomas Bredone was abbat, in the twelfth year of the reign of king Henry the Second, after the conquest.

Amney.

In the year 1126. I Winebald of Balon, one of the greater barons of king Henry the First, after the conquest, and Roger my son, have granted to St. Peter of Gloucester half an hide in Amney, which Thomas, an Englishman, did hold, quit and discharged from every thing which belongs to the king, except the king's danegelt. And we likewise, I and my son Roger, have granted the said land to God and St. Peter, and to the brothers of Gloucester, free and discharged from any thing relating to us, except the king's danegelt. And I Winebald am a witness that this was done before the monks of Tewkesbury had the manor of Aurenell.

Bache.

Bernard of Newmarket gave to God and to St. Peter of Gloucester, one hide of land called the Bache, lying in the parish of Coverne. This was given in the time when Serlo was abbat.

Barton Abbats.

Aldred governor of Gloucestershire, gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, and to the nuns there, an hundred hides of land, which are now called Barton Abbats. This was done when Eva was abbess.

Berton [King's.]

In the nineteenth year of king Edward the Third after the conquest, this king gave and granted to the monks of Gloucester, the manor of King's Berton, with the fishery in the standing pools within Minsterworth, and half the fishery in Duny, at a rent in fee-farm, in exchange for the church of Wyrardsbury, in the time of Adam of Staunton being abbat.

Bernewood.

William the Conqueror king of England, gave to the monks of Gloucester the manor of Bernewood, with all its appurtenances, in the time of Serlo being abbat.

Bery.

William gave Bery: In lieu of which, his brother Gotelin gave to the monks Selden in Devonshire, whilst Serlo was abbat.

Beverstone.

Anselme de Gorney gave to God and to St. Peter of Gloucester, five quarters of acres of land in Beverstone, with the advowson of the church of that place, in the time of John Gamage being abbat.

Bockholt.

In the year 1121, Helyas Giffard, and Ala his wife, and their son Elias, granted to the monks of Gloucester, by deed which they laid upon the altar, their land in Bockholt, the woods and the plains estimated at half an hide and half a yard land, free from all services to the king, and discharged of all other customs, except danegelt to the king. This was executed whilst William was abbat.

In the year 1096, Helyas Giffard gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, a parcel of wood-ground with three cottages; which grant was confirmed by king William the Second, in the time of abbat Serlo.

Bokeland.

Kynred, king of the Mercians, gave the manor of Bokeland, when Edburg was abbess.

Boytone. [Bitton.]

Helias Boy Giffard, for the soul's health of Berta his wife, and his ancestors, gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, the church of St. Mary de Boyton, and the church of St. George de Orcheston, with the chapel of St. Andrew of Winterborn, with the lands, tithes, meadows, pastures, ways, paths, and whatsoever appertaineth to the said churches, saving the tenure of the church of Finctenay. This was given in the time of abbat Hameline.

Walter Giffard, son of Helias, granted and confirmed the church of Boyton to the monks of Gloucester, with all its appurtenances, with half an hide of land in the same vill, and the tithes of the whole vill, with a building for eight oxen, one beast, and 122 sheep; and all the tithes of the vill, both of the demeane lands and of the tenant lands, and of all things of which good christians ought to pay tithes. This was in the time when Hameline was abbat.

Helias Giffard laid claim to the church of Boytone. Abbat Thomas Carbonell, for peace sake, granted him the church of Orcheston, with the chapel of Winterborne reserving the church of Barton. The lord Goseline bishop of Salisbury, granted and confirmed to the convent of St. Peter of Gloucester, the gift made by Helias Giffard and Walter his son. John bishop of Salisbury confirmed and ordered, by virtue of his episcopal authority, that the church of Barton should pay 40s. a year to the monks of Gloucester to keep hospitality.

Brankamfeld.

Earl Bodehard, the king's lieutenant, gave to God and to St. Peter of Gloucester, and to the nuns there, four messuages in Brankamfeld, in the time when Kyneburg was abbess.

Brockrup.

Adeliza, the wife of Roger de Ivrie, gave Brockrup, with the church thereof, to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, in the time of abbat Serlo.

Roger the first, and Hugh his heir, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, eight acres of land near to Brochthrop court, whilst Hameline was abbat.

Gilbert de Myners confirms the grant of those lands which Roger the first gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, in Brockthrop, and in La Rugge, when Hameline was abbat.

Brockworth.

In the year 1260, John Deffeld, abbat, purchased of Lawrence de Chandos, knight, fifty-five acres of arable land in Brockworth, and forty acres of inclosure; and all his wood in Bockholt, which contained 300 acres.

Bromfeld.

Bromfeld.

In the year 1155, the canons of Bromfeld gave their church and themselves to St. Peter of Gloucester, by the hand of Gilbert bishop of Hereford, and became monks there. This gift was confirmed by Theobald archbishop of York, in the time when Hameline was abbat.

Bromptone.

William the Conqueror gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, the manor of Bromptone, with a fishery in Wye, and the land lying by the bank of Wye, whilst Serlo was abbat.

Burnham.

Robert confirmed the gift of his father Harald, and moreover gave the church of Burnham to the priory of Ewias, that a convent might be settled there, which was agreed to, but never performed. He farther gave unto them the tithes of all his manors, of all things of which christians ought to pay tithes. Theobald, the archbishop, confirmed it; John, bishop of Salisbury, likewise confirmed it.

Castle Godric.

William the Marshal, earl of Pembroke, gave to the monks of Gloucester, in pure alms, one water-mill, with the toll, custom, and grinding of the whole vill of Castle Godric, except the grinding of the castle itself, with the custom of all the vill of Hunston, and with all the appurtenances belonging to the said mill. This was given when Henry Folet was abbat.

Cerney.

Walter, the sheriff of Gloucester, gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, the church of Cerney, with the tithes thereof, which was confirmed by king Henry when Peter was abbat.

Celesworth.

William the Second, king of England, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, two brekes of wood within his fee of Celesworth, with a grove, and some small meads adjoining to them, in free alms. Witness William the chancellor, at Newnham, in the time of abbat Serlo.

King Henry his brother confirms to the monks Odo and Hugh, and to the whole convent of Gloucester, two new plowed grounds, and the wood which grows in the midst of them, with the adjoining little meads, lying in his manor of Celesworth, in free alms, in fee, and as free and quit from all charges, as his brother William had given the same.

Chellerton.

Roger de Oiley, son of Nigel de Oiley, gave the tithes of Cestretone to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, when Serlo was abbat.

Churcham and Highnam.

A certain nobleman, by name Wulfin le Rue, at the time when the monks first inhabited Gloucester, unhappily killed six presbyters between Churcham and Gloucester, who being confounded at that horrid crime, went to the pope to beg ab-olution; his repentance was accepted, and he was absolved, upon condition to maintain six priests, who should sing prayers for him. He returned home chearfully, and gave Chircham and Hynham, with the meadows, plains, woods and pastures extending to the river Severn, unto the church of St. Peter, upon this condition, that seven monks, instead of seven priests, should be for ever maintained, to pray to God on his behalf. This was when Edric was abbat.

King Edward the Third, after the conquest, granted licence to the monks of Gloucester to make a park in Churcham and Uppledene, in the time of John Wigmore abbat.

Clifford

In the year 1099, Roger de Bulley, knight, gave Clifford to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, which was confirmed by king William, when Serlo was abbat.

Coberly.

The manor of Cuburley was given to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, when Edith was abbess.

Coln Alwyns.

In the year 1217, Silvester, bishop of Worcester, gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, the church of Culne St. Ælwin to their own use, for the increase of hospitality, when Henry Blond was abbat. Athelred, governor of Gloucestershire, gave his lands to the same church, that is, he gave sixty messuages of his land lying in Culne St. Ælwins.

Colne Rogers.

In the year 1105, Roger of Gloucester, knight, was grievously wounded at Waleyson, and gave Colne on the hills to the monks of Gloucester, for the good of his soul. It was called Culne Rogers, and the grant was confirmed by king Henry, when the abbey was vacant by the death of abbat Serlo.

Combe.

Bernard de Baskerville, when he took upon him the habit of a monk, gave himself, and one hide of land in Cumbe, to the church of St. Peter at Gloucester; Walter and Robert de Baskerville confirmed the same in the time of abbat Hameline.

Cranham.

Helias Giffard, son of Helias the elder, and Ala his wife, when he became monk, gave Cranham to St. Peter, and to the monks of Gloucester serving God, in the time when Hameline was abbat.

Dene.

In the year 1080, Walter de Lacy gave to St. Peter of Gloucester his lands in Dene; to which king William the First gave his consent, and confirmed the same. It was done at Berkeley, first making an offering to the Lord and to St. Peter. Walter, his son, was then an infant, and Serlo was abbat.

Roger de Staunton gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, the water-course of Dene and of Clinch, to be brought to the mill pond, in the seventh year of king Richard, and in the time when Thomas Breedone was abbat.

King Henry gave and confirmed to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester the tithe of all venison which should be taken in the forest of Gloucestershire. King Stephen confirmed it in the time of abbat Peter.

Duni.

Roger, earl of Hereford, gave half of the fishery of Duni to God and the church of St. Peter of Gloucester. King Henry the Second confirmed the grant, in the time when Hameline was abbat.

Roger de Staunton gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester one yard-land called Duni, and a husbandman with his land. Cecilia Talbot confirmed this with her own grant, in the time of abbat Hameline.

Duntesborn.

In the year 1100, Gilbert de Eskecot, with his wife, and son Robert, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, his lands which he had in Duntesborn, for the good of the soul of Walter de Lacy, and of his own soul, when Serlo was abbat.

In the year 1085, Walter, the founder of St. Peter of Hereford, dying on the 27th day of March, his body was honourably interred in the chapter-house of Gloucester. His wife Ermeline then gave to the church the village of Duntesburn, consisting of five hides, for the redemption of the soul of her husband: Serlo was then abbat.

Edmundeston.

In the year 1095, Odo, the son of Gamaliel, gave to St. Peter of Gloucester Plinctru in Devonshire, for which Nicholas de la Parle gave Edmundeston in Warwickshire. King William the Second confirmed it in the time of abbat Serlo.

Estlech.

Estlech [Martin] was given to the abbey of St. Peter by Walter de Clifford, in exchange for the manor of Glasbury.

Ewenny.

In the year 1141, Maurice of London, the son of William of London, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, the church of St. Michael of Ewenny, and the church of St. Bridgid, with the chapel of Ugmore of Lansey, and the church of St. Michael of Colveston, with the lands, meadows, and all other things belonging to the same, free and quit, in pure alms, on condition that there shall be a convent of monks in that place. He moreover gave the church of Ostrenewe in Goer, and the church of Penbray, and the church of St. Ismael, with the lands and tithes belonging to the same; which was confirmed by Theobald archbishop of Canterbury, when Gilbert was abbat.

Ewias.

In the year 1100, Herald, lord of Ewias, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of St. Michael, with the chapel of St. Nicholas of the castle, and the chapel of St. James of Ewias, and the chapel of St. Kaene, with the chapel of Caneros, in pure and perpetual alms, on condition that there shall be always a convent at Ewias serving God. He further granted the tithes of all corn, of venison and honey, and of all things whereof good christians ought to pay tithes. He also granted the church of Foy, with one plow's tillage, and the tithes of the fisheries in Foy. He gave a water-mill, and the church of Hidred, with all its appurtenances, and the church of Alyngestone, and the church of Burnham. Moreover he gave the tithes of his demans throughout all his lands, to their own use, and the tithes of all his mills, and of Eelles. Theobald, the archbishop, confirmed this grant, which was in the time when Hameline was abbat.

Robert confirmed the gift of his father Herald, and moreover gave the church of Burnham to the priory of Ewias, that a convent might be settled in that place; this was agreed, but not performed. He further gave the tithes of all his manors as fully as any christians ought to pay them. Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury, confirmed this grant when Hameline was abbat.

Fairford.

Burgred, king of the Wixes, gave to God and to St. Peter of Gloucester, and to the nuns of that place, two hides of land in Fayreford, when Eva was abbess.

Forde [in Temple Guiting.]

Robert, consul of Gloucester, gave to God and to St. Peter of Gloucester a water-mill in Forde, when William was abbat.

Framelode.

In the year 1126, Winebald of Balon, with the consent of Roger his son, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester a water-mill in Framelode, and half an hide of land in Amney, which Thomas, an Englishman, held free and quit from all charges except danegelt to the king.

Froncestre.

Raban, the Englishman, Revenwert, and a famous brother of king Beornulph, gave Froncestre to God and the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, in the time when the conons secular possessed the monastery.

In the year 1225, William de Bloys, bishop of Worcester, at the desire of John de Columna, cardinal of the church of Rome, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Froncestre, with the chapel of Nimpsfield, provided that a sufficient vicar be there assigned. This was in the time of abbat Breden.

Frythmore.

Walter Giffard gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester his share which he had in Frythmore. In the time when Thomas Carbonell was abbat, there was a treaty between the monks and the said Walter Giffard, in which it was agreed, that two parts in three of all the land in Wylingwiche should remain to the monastery, and that the third part part, and the advowson of the church, and the mansion-house should belong to the said Walter.

Gare.

Alexander de Cormell gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester one water-mill in Gare, with all its appurtenances. King Henry the Second confirmed it, when Thomas Carbonel was abbat.

Glasebury.

In the year 1088, when Serlo was abbat, Bernard of Newmarket gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, Glasebury, with all its appurtenances, free and clear, and all the tithes of his demesns which he had in Brekeneyham, viz. of all corn, cattle, cheefe, venison and honey; he also gave the church of great Covere, with all the tithes of that parish, and the lands belonging to that church, and one hide called Bache; king William the Second consented to it, and confirmed it in the second year of his reign. This year, by means of the wars between the great men in England, the city of Gloucester, and the church of St. Peter, were destroyed.

Abbat Gilbert changed the manor of Glasebury with the lord Walter de Clifford for the manor of Estleche, whereby Walter had Glasebury, excepting the advowson of the church, which was reserved to the monks of Gloucester, and the monks of Gloucester had Estleche, with its appurtenances, in the best manner that the said Walter ever enjoy'd the same. This was confirmed by earl Roger, in the year 1144; it was in the same year confirmed by king Stephen.

Gloucester.

In the year 1109, Robert de Baskeville, after his return from Jerusalem, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester one hide of land, without the walls of the city, where now is the orchard belonging to the monks. King Henry confirmed it when Peter was abbat.

In the year 1125, Adeliza, the shreifeffe, mother of Walter of Gloucester, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester her houses and rents which she had in Gloucester, to wit, fourteen tenements, as they are mentioned in a grant, made when William was abbat.

Guyting.

In the year 1090, Gunuld de Loges gave to the monks of Gloucester, for the good of the soul of her husband Jurie, two hides of land in Guyting; which was confirmed both by king William the Second, and by king Henry, in the time of abbat Serlo.

Hampton.

William Revel gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester one hide of land in Hamptone, with the consent of Bernard of Newmarket. King Henry the first confirmed it when Peter was abbat.

Hugh Talemach, when he took upon him the monks habit at Gloucester, gave one moiety of the town of Hamptone, with the church thereof. His son Peter confirmed it: King Henry the Second also confirmed it when Hameline was abbat.

Harsfield.

Roger earl of Hereford, when he became monk of Gloucester, gave to the church 100 ferdingals of land in Herefordshire; for which his brother Walter, constable of Hereford, gave six yard-lands in the time of Hameline, free and discharged from all earthly service: he also gave two yard-lands against Bristol highway, near the park.

Hartpury.

Offa, king of the Mercians, gave the manor of Hardpury to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, when Eva was abbess.

King Henry the First gave to the monks of Gloucester, the new plowed grounds in Hardpury, in the twenty-third year of his reign, when William was abbat.

Hereford.

King William the First granted and confirmed to the church of St. Peter of Hereford, so many of the lands which Walter de Lacy had given to that church which he himself had built, as related to four plow's tillage, and ten vills with ten villaines, one villaine belonging to Stoke in Herefordshire, one in Staunton in Shropshire, one in Stoke in the same county, one in Webley in Herefordshire, one in Brick Marisfrome in the same county; and five villaines and five villages in Gloucestershire, one in Guyting, one in Quennington, one in Stratone, one in Wyk in Duntelborn, and one in Ham. Walter de Lacy gave two parts of the tithes of these ten vills to the said church of Hereford. Hugh his son confirmed this grant; king Henry the First also confirmed it. Walter de Lacy likewise granted the church of St. Owen in Hereford, to which one tything and an house did belong, and gave the whole mansion-house. He commanded that all these lands should be made free for ever from all customs. This was performed when Serlo was abbat.

In the year 1101, Hugh de Lacy gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of St. Peter of Hereford, which his father had built from the ground, with the prebends, and whatsoever belonged to that church. Serlo was abbat at this time.

Heycot.

Robert de Beckesford gave to the monks of Gloucester certain tithes in Heycote, in the time of abbat Peter.

Heythrope.

Ernulph de Hefding gave the church of Heythrope, Linkholt, and a water-mill, with the lands belonging to the priest and the church of Kempford, with the lands belonging to the priest; and also all other lands, pasture grounds, and privileges which the monks in Gloucester have in that place. Patrick of Chaworth, and Maud his wife, testified and confirmed by their deed, all donations made by their children. Pagan, the son of Patrick, of his own gift, granted that he and his heirs after him, shall with his own workmen, and at his his own charges, mow and make the tithes of his demans at Kempford. King Henry the First confirmed this, and of his own gift, gave to the monks of Gloucester four marks yearly out of the church of Kempford, when Serlo was abbat.

Hide.

Helewife the widow of William de Ebroys, gave to God and the church of St. Peter of Gloucester a piece of land called Hide, lying in Herefordshire, which Walter de Lacy gave to her on marriage. King Henry the First confirmed the grant, when William was abbat.

Hinton.

In the year 981, Elfred, sister of king Ethelred, gave Hynetone to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, to pray for her soul. She was then barren, and in a low condition; and when five men were required for the king's wars out of this small estate, they could not be had; then did the priests, who presided in the church, go to her, and entreat her to speak to the king on their behalf, which she did on the nativity of our Lord, when the king was at a feast, she fell down on her knees, and obtained that those lands should for ever after be quit and free from all charges.

In the year 1156, it was adjudged in the county court of Gloucestershire, that the manor of Hynetone being, time out of mind, free from all charges, therefore it ought to be free from and quit from fines for murther. This was done when Hameline was abbat.

Hope Maleysfel.

In the year 1102, William de Pomerey gave to the monks at Gloucester the village called Bery in Devonshire, for which his brother Gosline gave Seldene, for which we now have Hopemaleysfel, King Henry the First agreeing to it, and confirming it, when Serlo was abbat.

Horcot.

Patrick of Chaworth gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, a water-mill in Horcote, in the time of abbat William.

Hyneledene.

In the year 1239, Richard de Wigmore gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester his lands in Hyneledene, and one hide, with the groves, pastures, meadows, and all appurtenances which Jeoffry de le Dene did enjoy. This was done when Henry Folet was abbat.

Janefworth.

Earl Robert de Bertone gave twenty shillings yearly out of his rents in Gloucestershire, to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, to wit, ten shillings out of Janefworth, and ten shillings out of Chedworth; in the time when Walter de Lacy was abbat.

Radulph de Zouch gave Janefworth to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, free and quit of all services. King Henry confirmed it when Gilbert was abbat: king Stephen also confirmed it.

Reginald Thucks gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, and to the monks serving God, in pure and perpetual alms, his village of Janeworth, free and quit from all services and customs which did any ways belong to him or his heirs, to be enjoyed by them in perpetual right of inheritance. King Stephen confirmed this when Walter de Lacy was abbat.

Kempford.

Patrick of Chaworth, the son of Patrick, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, in pure alms, one water-mill, called Horcot, in the village of Kynemaresford, with the lands adjoining and belonging to the said mill, and the tithes of the meadows of the said village; king Henry the First confirming it in the time when William was abbat.

Patrick de Chaworth gave to the monks of Gloucester three mills in Kynemeresford, which king William the Second confirmed in the time of abbat Serlo.

John bishop of Worcester decreed, and of his own free will confirmed unto abbat Breedone, and to the convent of St. Peter of Gloucester, two sheaves of tithes of the church of Kynemeresforde, with the lands and the other appurtenances which they did hitherto enjoy, to hold for ever to their own proper uses. The same bishop, John, did grant to the monks four marks of silver yearly, issuing out of four yard-lands in Kynemeresforde, to be received by the vicar.

Keteringham.

Radulph, the son of Walter, gave to the monks the tithes of Keteringham, and thirty acres of land. William de Curam gave the tithes of his demans in the same village, in the time when Serlo was abbat.

Kylpec.

In the year 1134, Hugh, the son of William Norman, gave to God and to St. Peter, and to the monks of Gloucester, the church of St. David of Kylpec, with the chapel of the blessed Mary of the castle, and all these churches and chapels, and the lands which did belong to them, and all tithes of all his lands, of corn, hay, flax, wool, cheese, colts, calves, lambs, pigs, and of all other things of which christians ought to pay tithes. He granted also that the pigs of the prior might go intermixt with his, and eat the malt; moreover he granted the joint benefit of his woods for the use of the monastery. This was done when Walter de Lacy was abbat.

Lancarvan.

Robert, the son of Hamon, gave the church of St. Cadoc of Lancarvan to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, and gave Penham with fifteen hides of land. King William the First confirmed it when Serlo was abbat.

Lech.

In the year 1094, on Palm Sunday, Thomas archbishop of York restored to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, Lech, Odington, Standish and and Barton, much blaming himself, and beating his breast that he had detained them so long. This was done when Serlo was abbat.

Littleton.

In the year 1096, Hugh of the Port was made monk at Winchester: he then gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, Littleton in Hampshire, which was confirmed by king William the Second. Henry, son of Hugh of the Port, confirmed his father's gift: Adam of the Port likewise confirmed it in the time of abbat Serlo.

Lynkeholt.

Ernulph de Hefding gave Lynkeholt to God and St. Peter, on the day of the purification of the Virgin Mary, in the year 1081, at Salisbury. King William the First gave his consent, and confirmed it in the time when Serlo was abbat.

St. Martin's, in London.

Radulph Peverell gave the church of St. Martin to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester. Peverell also gave all the lands which belonged to the priest. King William the Second confirmed it when Serlo was abbat.

Maysemore.

King Henry the First, in the year 1101, gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, the manor of Maysemore, with all the woods and plains thereunto belonging, as fully as ever he held the same, with all things appertaining to the said land. The king confirmed this when Serlo was abbat.

Newberg.

King William the Second being grievously sick at Gloucester, gave to God and to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of St. Gundeley of Newberg, with fifteen hides.

Nimpsfield.

In the year 1093, Eustace de Berkeley restored Nimpsfield to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, when Serlo was abbat.

King William the First gave lands in Nimpsfield to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, and to abbat Wulstan, to hold in as full and free manner as ever it had been formerly; and as in the reign of king Edward his kinsman, with the privilege of hearing judicial causes in all places, and forbade all invasions on their rights.

Northlech.

In the year 1220, king Henry, the son of king John, granted to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester the market of Northlech, with suit of court. This was granted on the festival of the apostles Peter and Paul, when Henry Blont was abbat.

Northwich.

King William the Conqueror gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of St. Peter of Northwich, which stands in the market place there. Thomas the archbishop confirmed the same to their own uses, and desired William bishop of Norwich to confirm it likewise. This was done when Serlo was abbat. Walo of St.

Peter gave the church of St. Peter, which stands in the market place at Norwich, and himself, to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, in the time of abbat Serlo.

Norton.

In the year 1126, Robert, son of Walter, and Aveline his wife, gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Norton, with the lands, tithes, and all other things belonging to the said church, as fully as Emeline, the mother of Aveline, some years since had given the same, to be free, peaceable and quiet from all charges. King Henry the First confirmed this grant in the time of abbat William.

William Briton, in the time when William was abbat, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Norton, with the five yard lands. King Henry the First confirmed it.

Oleney.

Ranulph, earl of Chester, gave to God and to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, forty shillings yearly rent of a water-mill in Oleney, which descended to him by right of inheritance. He also confirmed a former grant of a mill in Toddewell, which Alice, his sister, had given for the good of the soul of her husband, Richard, the son of Gilbert, when Hameline was abbat.

Ofelworth.

Roger de Berkeley gave the church of Ofelworth to the priory of Stanley; and the church of Cowelege, and the church of Erlingham, and the church of Slimbridge, and the church of Uleye, with the tithes and lands, and whatsoever did belong to it.

Over.

In the year 804, Ethelrick, son of king Ethelmund, with the consent of a synod, upon an invitation to the synod, granted thirty messuages in Over to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, and confirmed the grant of his father in the time when the canons secular resided there.

Paterne, (St.) in Wales.

In the year 1111, Gilbert, the son of Richard, one of the chief noblemen of England, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the land and church of Paterne in Wales, and all its appurtenances, as it is bounded by the sea and two rivers; and half of the great fishery which he had made, and the tithes of all things belonging to the demeanes of the castle of Penwedith.

Passage. (free)

John, earl of Moreton, confirms to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, and the church of the apostles Peter and Paul, and St. Guthlac of Hereford, and to the monks there serving God, that they, their men and servants, shall be for ever free and quit from all toll, passage, loaden horses, carriages, driving swine, money and bridge money, throughout all his lands, to wit, Bristol, Keyrdiffe, Newburg, and all other his lands, for all manner of their own proper goods which they shall either sell or buy.

Paygrave.

Robert the consul of Gloucester, confirmed the gift of Richard, the son of Nigelle, of land in Paygrave, and four farendells of land in the orchard of the almoner; and he gave the water-mill of Ford, and all his tithes in Wotton, and six acres of land by deed, when William was abbat.

Penycombe.

Agnes, the widow of Turstin of Flanders, and his son Eustace, a knight, lord of Witteney, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, one hide of land in Penycombe and Sudenehale, free and quit from all charges, when Reginald was abbat.

Petfwell.

In the year 1117, Wysbert, of the king's household, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, for the good of the soul of his wife Hawise, his lands in Petfwell, and laid the grant on the altar; and in the same chapter, Wybert restored the land which the abbat Serlo had conveyed to him, near to the king's house where the barton is. This was done when William was abbat.

Quenington.

Hugh de Lacy gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Quenington, and the church of Wyke, at the same time when he gave ten villis and ten villains. Thomas bishop of Worcester confirmed the grant in the time of abbat Serlo.

Rodesford.

King William the Second gave Rodesford to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, when Serlo was abbat.

Ruddle.

Radulph Bluet gave Rodele [in Newnham] to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, in pure and perpetual alms, which was confirmed by king William the Second, in the time of abbat Serlo.

King Henry the First gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester his manor of Rodele, [in Westbury] with a wood and a fishery, to find a light at the high altar, which should be continually burning for the good of the soul of Robert Curtoise, his brother, who was buried there in the time of abbat William.

Rugge.

In the year 1112, Thomas of St. Joanne gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester his lands in Rugge, which lye in Standish, in pure and perpetual alms, free and quit from gold, money, and all other services and things which belonged to the king. King Henry the First confirmed this grant when Peter was abbat.

Seldene.

Henry de Pomeray gave Seldene to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, reserving to himself two shillings as an acknowledgement. His heirs confirmed this grant, and released the two shillings.

Sexlingham.

John, son of Richard, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the tithes of Sexlingham.

Eustace, the son of John, gave twenty shillings yearly rent out of the same vill, in the time of abbat Serlo.

Shoteshore.

Roger de Berkeley the elder, on the festival of St. Sebastian, was made a monk under the lord abbat Serlo. He restored Shoteshore to God and St. Peter of Gloucester, free and discharged, as he had unjustly withheld it. King William the Second confirmed it. This was done in the year 1091, 4° W. 2.

Slimbridge.

In the year 1224, there was a suit between Thomas of Berkeley and the lord abbat of Bredon, and the convent of Gloucester, concerning the church of Slimburgge; it was ended by this means, Thomas Berkeley gave the place of Lorynge, with all its appurtenances, to the church of Stanley, from him and his heirs, and the lord abbat Thomas released to him the church of Slimbrugge.

Standish.

Beornulph, king of the Mercians, in the year 821, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester fifteen hides of land in Standish, under Ezimbury. He was slain in battle by king Egbrit, in the year 823, when the canons secular resided there.

Stanley.

In the year 1146, Roger de Berkeley gave to God, and to the convent of St. Peter of Gloucester, the church of St. Leonard Stanley, with all its appurtenances, with the consent of Sabritus the prior, and of the brethren of that place, by the hands of lord Symon, bishop of Worcester. The same Roger gave the church of Ozleworth to the priory of Stanley, and the church of Cowly, and the church of Arlingham, and the church of Slimbridge, and the church of Uley, with the tithes, lands, and all things belonging to the same. This was done when Gilbert was abbat.

Robert de Berkeley, son of Maurice, gave to the church of Stanley a mill in Cowly, and a messuage with lands belonging to the mill. The same Roger de Berkeley, in the year 1156, gave the church of Camme, with the appurtenances, to the church of St. Leonard Stanley. King Henry the Third confirmed it; it was also confirmed by John, bishop of Worcester. The same Roger gave to the said priory a grove called Fisacre, in the time of abbat Hameline.

Teynton.

Hugh, son of Norman, gave to the priory of Kylpec the church of Teyntone, and the chapel of Sylva, with a yard-land, when Walter de Lacy was abbat. Maud of Teyntone gave to God and St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Teyntone, to find lights in the church, and Radulph Avenel confirmed it with an hermitage in that same place, and one villain with his family. Gilbert Foliot, bishop of Hereford, confirmed it in the time of abbat Hameline.

Tolls.

The charter of William, earl of Gloucester, whereby he exempted the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, and their men, from payment of tolls in the vill of Bristol; and another charter of his, whereby they are exempted from payment of tolls in Bristol, Kardiff, Newburg, and all other his lands. He moreover exempted the church of St. Guthlac of Hereford from payment of any tolls throughout all his lands in Wales.

Treygoffe.

Robert, earl of Gloucester, gave Treygoffe to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester. The same Robert, earl of Gloucester, the king's son, gave to the monks of St. Peter of Gloucester, Treygos and Penhore, with other appurtenances. He moreover made them and their men, and also the priory of Ewenny, free from paying toll throughout his lands. This was done when Walter de Lacy was abbat.

Tuffely.

Osborne, bishop of Exeter, gave Tuffely to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, when Serlo was abbat. King Henry the Second confirmed it by his charter, and that the grove of Tuffely should be free, and that nobody should commit waste there.

Tythes.

Wido of Flanders gave all his tithes, and the churches of all his lands, and the tithes of the fishing, and a place to land the fish, and to build an house for the fisher-man, for the conveniency of the fishing, near to his castle of Elys. He also gave the land called Mount St. Mary, and the wood called Gengod.

Willingwyke.

In the year 1167, when Hameline was abbat, Helias Giffard, the younger, and Berta, his mother, gave to God and St. Peter, eight libratas of land in Willingwyke, and the abbat restored to them Cranham, which his father gave to them when he was made monk. Helias, their son, confirmed the same. Berta, the wife of Helias Giffard, gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, certain lands in Willingwyke, on which he had built at his own charges. This was done when Hameline was abbat.

Wynterburne.

In the year 1112, Robert Gernoun gave to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester the church of Wynterbourne, and the church of Laverstoke, and half the water-mill, and half the land which did belong to it. King Henry the First confirmed it when Peter was abbat.

Of the BISHOPRICK and BISHOPS.

GLOUCESTER was antiently the seat of a British bishop, whose title sometimes occurs in the synodal acts by the name of Cluve, or Cluviensis, derived from Clevum, or Glevum, or perhaps from Gloyw, the British name of the city.

We read in the Memorial of Gloucester, that a bishop and preachers were settled here in the year of Christ 189, by king Lucius, concerning whom it is agreed, that he was called Lever Mawr, or Great Light, tho' the learned differ as to the precise time when he lived, and to some particulars attributed to him. However we have the testimony of the learned bishop Usher, that this king built here ecclesiam primæ sedis, a church of the first seat. Some antient writers also affirm, that this was one of the archbishopricks erected by him in the place or seat of one of the arch-flamens, or heathen chief-priests; and that afterwards, on account of the extraordinary sanctity of St. David, this archbishoprick was translated to Menevia, which, in honour of that saint, was afterwards called St. David's.

Bishop Usher, Sir William Dugdale, and other laborious searchers into matters of antiquity, affirm, that Eldad, Eldadym, or Eldall, was bishop here about the year 489. This is the same person whom Rous calls Sanctus Aldatus, a prelate of remarkable courage, wisdom and virtue, whose name appears in an inscription now over the bishop's seat in the cathedra, thus written:

EDEL DVX
ELDADVS EPS GLOVC:
ELDO MAJOR
A: 490.

It is said that Theonus, called also Cernus, succeeded Eldad, and that he was translated to London in the year 553.

There is no further account to be found of the antient bishops and their succession, because the bishoprick probably ended, according to the opinion of bishop Tanner, when the heathen Saxons overrun this country, about the year 570. In succeeding ages, when the Saxon kings were converted to christianity, Oswy, king of Northumberland, having subdued Mercia, erected the bishoprick of Litchfield in the year 657, when Gloucestershire was made subject to Dwina, first bishop of that diocese. But in the year 679, this vast bishoprick was divided into five smaller ones, by the decree of Theodore, archbishop of Canterbury, and out of it sprung the bishopricks of Litchfield, field, Dorchester, Leicester, Hereford, and Worcester, of which last Bosil was the first bishop, and then Gloucestershire was a part of his diocese.

A suffragan bishop was fixed at Gloucester by act of parliament, in the year 1534; but even as early as 1273, Reginald occurs by that name, who was substituted by the bishop of Lincoln to visit the churches in Oxfordshire; and probably other appointments to that office may have taken place since that time.

After the dissolution of St. Peter's abbey, king Henry the Eighth obtained an act of parliament, under which he erected the city of Gloucester, and the county of that city, and all the county of Gloucester into a bishoprick*, with a dean and chapter, by the name of the diocese of Gloucester; and ordained that such part of the then vill and county of Bristol, as formerly was in the diocese of Worcester, should be from thenceforward in the diocese of Gloucester for ever.

The king's letters patents, dated the 3d of September, 1541, are printed in the Appendix, No. 7; and those for the endowment of the bishoprick are also inserted in the Appendix, No. 8, where the particulars may be seen at large, of which the following is a summary account.

In the letters of endowment it is ordered, that the abbat's lodgings, with the buildings, chapels, grounds and other premisses; his stable, and the garden at the end of the church-yard, all within the precincts of the abbey; the house called the wood-barton, two stables, two slaughter-houses, and a dog-kennel, in the parish of St. Mary de Lode, are to be called the palace of the bishop of Gloucester.

The bishoprick is endowed with the following manors, lands, rectories, tythes, advowsons, &c.

The manors of Maismore, Brokethorp, Harfcomb, Preston, Longford, Droiscourt, Rudge and Farley, and part of the manor of Lassington, in the county of Gloucester; and those of Hope Maleshal, Dewchurch and Kilpeck, in the county of Hereford; and all the lands, profits, &c. in the fields of Brokethorp, Harescomb, Preston, and Brockworth.—The vineyard-house and park, containing fifteen acres and three roods; Portham-meadow, containing sixty-seven acres, and the first shoot of it; a moiety of the wood at Woolridge, and a moiety of the wood called Le Perch, containing sixteen acres, all in the parish of St. Mary de Lode.

The rectories of Hartpury, Maismore, Upton St. Leonard, Cam, Northleach, Kempford, Welford, South Cerney, and Standish, in Gloucestershire; and those of Dewchurch, Kilpeck, Glasbury, Devennock, Cowern and Ewias Harold, in the county of Hereford; and of Newport, in the county of Wenlock in Wales, [now Monmouthshire.]

The tithes or portions of tithes in Standish, Caldrop, Hardwick, Over-Oxlinch, Nether-Oxlinch, Little Runwike, Harfcomb, Sall, Putley, Farley, Holyrood-Ampney, Aldesworth, Linton, and Shipton-Solers, in Gloucestershire; and in Devennock, Wentworth, Talgarth, Ash-Leomyfter, Ferm or Venne, Barn or Verne, Bunches or Burch, Strood and Lake, in the county of Hereford.

The following pensions, viz. 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* out of Kempford rectory; 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* from Teynton; 9*s.* from Rendcombe; 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* from Nympsfield; and 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* from Newport.

The advowson, presentation, and right of patronage of the vicarages of Hartpury, Maismore, Upton St. Leonard, Cam, Northleach, Kempford, Welford or Welford, South Cerney, and Standish, in the county of Gloucester; of Dewchurch, Kilpeck, Glasbury, Devennock, Cowern, and Ewias Harold, in the county of Hereford; of Newport, in the county of Wenlock [Monmouthshire]; of the chapels of Maismore, Cam, and Stinchcomb, in Gloucestershire; and Piperton, in Herefordshire. All which manors, lands, rectories, tithes, pensions, and right of presentation belonged to the abbey of St. Peter at Gloucester.

The bishoprick is subject to the following payments, viz.

To the king at his court of Aug- mentation, — — —	£.	S.	D.
— — —	33	16	4
Bailiff of Maismore, — — —	2	0	0
Woodward of Woolridge, — — —	0	11	0
Woodward of the Perch, — — —	0	6	8
Bailiff of Brookthorp and Hascomb, — — —	1	6	8
Bailiff of Preston, — — —	0	11	8
Bailiff of Longford, — — —	0	6	8
Bailiff of Rudge and Farley, — — —	0	8	4
Vicar of Cam, and to the chaplain of Stinchcombe, — — —	13	6	8
Vicar of Standish, — — —	15	5	0
Collector of the pensions of Kempford, Teynton, Rende- combe, and Nympsfield, — — —	0	13	4
Bailiff of Hope Maleshal, — — —	0	14	1
Bailiff of Dewchurch, and Kilpeck, Chancell' of Hereford, for procur- ations of Dewchurch & Kilpeck, — — —	0	5	0
Archdeacon of Brecknock, for pro- curations and synodals, — — —	0	2	2
Glasbury church, — — —	0	0	10
Devennock church, — — —	0	0	5
Farmer of the rectory of Devennock and Glasbury, for his livery, — — —	0	13	4
Vicar of York, for a portion of tithes out of Cowern rectory, — — —	0	2	0
Collector of portions in Ash- Leomyfter, Ferm, Farm, Briches, Strode and Lake, — — —	0	3	4
Bailiff of Droiscourt, — — —	0	6	8

* He had, says Sir Robert Atkyns, at the same time an intention of erecting eighteen bishopricks, tho' he actually founded but five, besides Westminster, which last continued but few years. A greater number might very well have been expected, and the extent and populousness of the nation requires it, and king Henry the Eighth might well have afforded it; for the constant yearly revenues of the dissolved monasteries which came to the crown, were 140,000*l.* and the true yearly value must be estimated at ten times as much. p. 43, 44.

The bishoprick has not suffered much by alienations; but in the years 1647, 1648, and 1649, the following particulars were sold, viz the manor of Reculver, and other lands in Kent and elsewhere, belonging to the sees of Canterbury, Norwich, and Gloucester, to John Blackwell, for 3382*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*—Gloucester palace and other lands, to Thomas Hodges, for 913*l.*—Messuages in the manor of Longford, to W. Mollins, for 24*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*—Maifemore, Preston, Longford and Ashchurch, which last belonged to the see of Bristol, to alderman Fowke, for 3819*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.*—Droiscourt, in the county of Gloucester, and Macknage, in that of Northampton, belonging to the sees of Winton and Gloucester, to Robert Gale, for 176*l.* 10*s.*—The manor of Dewchurch, to Sylvanus Taylor, for 181*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*—The manor of Hope Maleshall, to Robert Thayer, for 130*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*—The manor of Rudge, to William Mollins, for 976*l.* 1*s.* 1*d.* The total of which sales amount to 9917*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* but such of those lands as were granted to this bishoprick at the foundation, reverted to the see at the restoration.

The value of the endowment, as it is now rated for first fruits, is 315*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* but the real value is estimated at about 900*l.* a year.

The arms of the see are, Azure, two keys in saltire, or.

There is only one archdeaconry in the diocese, which is divided into ten deaneries, with their proper rural deans, viz.

1. CAMPDEN DEANERY,

Containing the following Parishes and Places.

Alderton,	Moreton Henmarsh,
Ashton Underhill,	Pebworth,
Aston Somerville,	Pinnock,
Aston Subedge,	Preston on Stour,
Batsford,	Queinton,
Beckford,	Saintbury,
Bourton on the Hill,	Seifencot,
Buckland,	Shenington,
Chipping Campden,	Snowhill,
Clifford Chambers,	Stanly Pont Larch chapel.
Cowhonibourn,	Stanway,
Didbrook,	Staunton,
Dorlington,	Toddenham,
Dumbleton,	Toddington,
Ebberton,	Washbourn (Great)
Hailes, a chapel.	Welford,
Hinton,	Weston Subedge,
Kemerton,	Weston upon Avon,
Lemington,	Wickham (Child's)
Marston Sicca,	Willersey,
Mickleton,	Wormington.

2. CIRENCESTER DEANERY.

Ampney Crucis,	Bagendon,
Ampney Mary,	Baunton,
Ampney Peter,	Chedworth,

Cirencester,	Harnhill,
Coates,	North Cerney,
Coln Deans, or Dennis,	Northleach,
Coln Rogers,	Preston,
Compton Abdale,	Rendcomb,
Daglingworth,	South Cerney,
Driffield,	Stowel,
Duntsborn Abbats,	Stratton,
Duntsborn Militis,	Siddington Mary,
Farmington,	Siddington Peter.
Hampnet,

3. DURSLEY DEANERY.

Berkeley,	Oldbury, a chapel.
Beverstone,	North Nibley,
Cam,	Olpen, a chapel.
Cowley,	Ozleworth.
Dursley,	Rockhampton,
Falfield, a chapel.	Slimbridge,
Frampton on Severn,	Stinchcomb, a chapel.
Hill, chapel.	Stone, a chapel.
Kingscot, a chapel.	Thornbury,
Kingswood,	Uley,
Laiborough,	Wottonunderedge.
Newington Bagpath,

4. FAIRFORD DEANERY.

Aldefworth,	Hatherop,
Barnsley,	Kempsford,
Bibury,	Leachlade,
Coln Aldwins,	Marston, a chapel.
Down Ampney,	Meyfey Hampton,
Eastlech Martin,	Quenington,
Eastlech Turville,	Southrop.
Fairford,	Winson, chapel.

5. FOREST DEANERY.

Abenhall,	Lea, a chapel.
Ailberton, a chapel.	Lidney,
Alvington,	Longhope,
Awre,	Minsterworth,
Bicknor (English)	Newent,
Blackeney, a chapel.	Newland, a chapel.
Blaisdon,	Newnham,
Breeme, a chapel.	Oxenhall,
Bromsborow,	Pauntley,
Bully, a chapel.	Preston,
Churcham, a chapel.	Rudford,
Colford, a chapel.	Ruerdean, a chapel.
Dean Magna,	Staunton,
Dean Parva,	St. Briavel's, a chapel.
Dymock,	Tainton,
Flaxley,	Tibberton,
Hewelsfield, a chapel.	Tidenham, a chapel.
Huntley,	Upleaden,
Kempley,	Westbury,
Lancaut, a chapel.	Woolaston.

6. GLOUCESTER DEANERY.

Arlingham,	Barnwood,
Ashleworth,	Brookthrop,
	Churchdown,

Churchdown,	Moreton Valence,
Elmore,	Norton,
Frethern,	Pitchcomb,
Hardwick, a chapel.	Quedgley,
Harscombe,	Rundwick, a chapel.
Harsfield,	Sandhurst,
Hartpury,	Saul, a chapel.
Hempstead,	Standish,
Laffington,	Upton St. Leonard's
Longney,	Whaddon,
Maisemore,	Wheatenhurst,
Matson,	Witcomb Magna.

In the City and Liberties.

St. Aldate,	St. Mary de Grace,
St. Bartholomew, chapel.	St. Mary de Lode,
St. Catherine,	St. Michael,
St. John Baptist,	St. Nicholas,
St. Magdalen,	St. Owen,
St. Mary de Cript,	Trinity.

7. HAWKESBURY DEANERY.

Abson, a chapel.	Littleton, a chapel.
Aeton Turville,	Marshfield,
Alderley,	Oldbury on the Hill,
Badminton Great,	Oldland, a chapel.
Badminton Little,	Puclechurch,
Bitton,	Rangeworthy, a chapel.
Boxwell,	Sifton,
Charfield,	Sodbury Chipping,
Cold Ashon,	Sodbury Little,
Cromhall,	Sodbury Old,
Deinton,	Titherington,
Didmarton,	Tormarton,
Dodington,	Tortworth,
Dyrham,	Tresham, a chapel.
Frampton Cotterel,	Wapley,
Hanham, a chapel.	Westerleigh, a chapel.
Hawkesbury,	Westonbirt,
Horton,	Wickwar,
Iron Acton,	Yate.
Leiterton, a chapel.

8. STONEHOUSE DEANERY.

Avening,	Miserden,
Bisley,	Nimpsfield,
Brimpsfield,	Painswick,
Chalford, a chapel.	Radmarton,
Cherington,	Rodborrow, a chapel.
Colebourn,	Saperton,
Cowley,	Shipton Moign,
Cranham,	Stanley St. Leonard,
Cubberley,	Stanley Regis,
Eastington,	Stonehouse,
Edgworth,	Stroud,
Elkstone,	Syde,
Frowcester,	Tetbury,
Horsley,	Winston,
Minchin Hampton,	Woodchester.

9. STOW DEANERY.

Addlestrop,	Barrington (Great)
Afton Blank,	Barrington (Little)

Bledington,	Riffington (Wick)
Bourton on the Water,	Seifencot,
Broadwell,	Salperton,
Clapton, a chapel.	Sherbourn,
Compton (Little)	Shipton Oliffe,
Condicot,	Shipton Solers,
Farmcot, a chapel.	Slaughter (Upper)
Guiting (Power)	Slaughter (Lower)
Guiting (Temple)	Sutton under Brayles,
Hasleton,	Stow on the Would,
Hawling,	Swell (Upper)
Longborow,	Swell (Lower)
Naunton,	Turk Dean,
Notgrove,	Westcote,
Oddington,	Widford,
Riffington (Great)	Windrush,
Riffington (Little)	Yanworth, a chapel.

10. WINCHCOMB DEANERY.

Ashchurch,	Seven Hampton,
Badgworth,	Shipton Olive,
Bishop's Cleeve,	Shurdington,
Brokworth,	Stoke Archer, a chapel.
Charleton Abbat's,	Sudely,
Charleton King's,	Swindon,
Cheltenham,	Tewkesbury,
Dowdswell,	Tredington,
Down Hatherly,	Twining,
Elmston,	Walton Cardiff, a chapel.
Gretton, a chapel.	Whittington,
Leckhampton,	Winchcomb,
Oxenton,	Withington.
Presbury,	Wolfon,

PECULIARS in this Diocese.

The following churches are Peculiars, the jurisdiction of which is particularly laid down under the heads of the respective parishes, viz.

Bibury, with Aldesworth, Barnsley and Winfon. Cleeve, with Stoke-Archer.

Deerhurst, with Boddington, Corse, Forthampton, Hasfield, Leigh, Staverton and Tirley.

Wickham, or Wickwane, or Child's-Wickham. Withington, with Dowdswell.

Before this bishoprick was erected, the following places were in the diocese of York, viz. Churchdown, Laffington, Norton, Compton-Abdale, Sainthurst, Saint Catherine, in Gloucester; and to these, perhaps, may be added Oddington and Witcombe-Magna.

The deanery of the Forest belonged to the bishop of Hereford 'till this see was erected; but being part of the county of Gloucester, the bishop of Gloucester, soon after the foundation, instituted, visited, and performed many other episcopal functions therein; however the archdeacon of Hereford still retains his jurisdiction in it, and under the bishop of Gloucester, visits there in the summer every year, and receives the procurations; but the bishop of Gloucester's chancellor visits the the other half year. All the other deaneries in this diocese are under the jurisdiction of the archdeacon of Gloucester, together with the deanery of Bristol, and a few churches within the diocese of Worcester.

BRISTOL DEANERY contains,

Almondesbury,	Mangotsfield,
Clifton,	Olveston, with Alveston.
Compton Greenville,	Saint George,
Elberton,	Stapleton,
Filton,	Stoke Giffard,
Henbury, with Aust.	Westbury,
Horfield,	Winterbourne.
Littleton,

Bishop Cheiney certified to queen Elizabeth, in 1562, 'That at the foundation of the bishoprick of Bristol, the city and deanery of Bristol were appointed and limited to the bishop of Bristol, and his successors, as they heretofore have alledged.' But yet no mention is made, in the charter of erection of the see of Bristol, that it shall have any part or parcel of the county of Gloucester.

The following churches are within the archdeaconry of Gloucester, tho' in the diocese of Worcester, viz. Blockley vicarage, and the rectories of Dailsford, Ditchfield, Evenlode, Icombe, and Stratton upon the Foss.

This archdeaconry is valued at about 120*l.* per annum. In the twenty-sixth year of Henry the Eighth, the full value of it, distinct from the rectory of Dursley, was 64*l.* 10*s.*

The account of the archdeacons follows that of the deans and chancellors.

BISHOPS of GLOUCESTER.

John Wakeman^a, (alias Wich) B.D. the last abbat of Tewkesbury, being the king's chaplain, was appointed September 3, 1541, to be the first bishop of this foundation, who accordingly was consecrated September the 25th, or according to Le Neve, the 20th, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London and Westminster; and thereupon the pension of 266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* allowed him at the dissolution of his abbey, ceased. He was appointed to inspect the English translation of part of the New Testament; and dying at^b Forthampton, in the co. of Gloucester, where he had an house and little chapel, in the beginning of November, 1549, was there buried. There is an effigy in memory of him, lying on a tomb behind the high altar at Tewkesbury, which he had provided while he was abbat. Upon bishop Wakeman's death, archbishop Cranmer sent a commission to prebendary Williams to be his commissary, to visit this church, and to be the keeper of the spiritualities of the city and diocese.

John Hooper, or Hoper, D.D. an exemplary, zealous, pious and learned man, who in his younger years had been a monk of Cleeve, in Somersetshire, was nominated on the 15th of May, appointed bishop on the 3d of July, 1550, consecrated on the 8th of March following; and installed by proxy by archbishop Cranmer, assisted by the bishops of London and Rochester, the 22d of the same month. He was very active in the visitation of the diocese, then remarkably abounding with popery, and greatly promoted the reformation. With the consent of the dean and chapter, he surrendered the bishoprick of Gloucester to the king, the 26th of April, 1552, and, on the 12th of May, made a deed of gift of all the lands and annuities which he enjoyed by means of his bishoprick. Upon Dr. Heath's being deprived of the see of Worcester, by virtue of an act of parliament, by the king's letters patents, dated May the 20th, in the same year, the bishoprick of Gloucester was dissolved, and converted into an archdeaconry, dependent on Worcester, as it had been formerly; but the dignities of the dean and chapter thereof continued. The king then gave Dr. Hooper the bishoprick of Worcester, with power and authority to appoint all the prebendaries of both cathedrals. In September, another patent was granted him for the discharge of his first fruits. This year a letter was sent him for the surrender of the bishoprick of Worcester, in order that there might be a new collation, or presentation thereto: and on the 8th of December following, the bishopricks of Worcester and Gloucester were united into one, and thenceforth to be one diocese, as Bath and Wells, Litchfield and Coventry: the bishop to be called the bishop of Gloucester and Worcester, and was to live one year in Worcestershire, and the next in Gloucestershire; and to have the power of appointing archdeacons and prebendaries as before. To this bishop and his successors likewise were given a few manors, belonging to the bishoprick of Worcester, and all the lands, &c. granted to the bishoprick of Gloucester at its foundation, as fully as he had surrendered them to the king; which then extended to the clear yearly value of 100 marks, besides tenths and yearly rents. The tenths of the bishoprick formerly came to 136*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* ob. but he was to pay only 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in lieu of them, and to be discharged of first fruits; and he and his successors to be for ever discharged of 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid to Mr. John Taylor for keeping the register of the bishop of Gloucester. Some time after he was discharged of all his first fruits, and all persons were forbidden to demand a fee of him. But this union continued no longer than the life of king Edward the Sixth, by whom it was granted. As bishop Hooper had strenuously opposed Gardiner and Bonner, they had a peculiar enmity against him, and when the king died, it was resolved to make him the first sacrifice. Accordingly, on the 1st of September, soon after queen Mary's accession to the crown, he was sent to prison, by an order from the queen, ^d dated March 15, 1553-4, and on the 18th, his bishoprick was declared void. January the 28th, 1554-5, ^e he was brought before Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, and several others, at St. Mary Overy's church, in Southwark, and there condemned as an heretick. In February, he was degraded of his priesthood ^f by bishop Bonner, in Newgate, where he had been severely used for several months; and afterwards sent from London to Gloucester, where he had been most active, to be burnt. After a journey of three days, attended by six of the queen's guards, he was brought to this city, and lodged in the house of Robert Ingram, opposite St. Nicholas church. Jenkins and Bond, the sheriffs, would have put him into the north-gate prison, but were dissuaded from it by the queen's guards. He had one day's interval, and on Saturday, the 9th of February, being market-day, was led by the sheriffs, attended by the mayor, lord Chandois, Sir Edmund Bridges, Sir Anthony Kingston, and others, from Ingram's house, to a place near the elm tree, without the gate, on the north-west side of the lower church-yard; where, not being permitted to speak to the people, who were about 7000, as he was going, nor at the place of execution; and refusing all offers of pardon, they chained him to a stake, and burnt him with three successive fires, made of green wood. The good man supported himself, it is said, with all imaginable firmness for above three quarters of an hour, and then expired, about the 60th year of his age. The queen sent an order, that persons of reputation in the county should be called to assist the mayor and sheriffs on this occasion; and after the execution, a dinner was provided ^g, at the expence of the corporation, for those who were ordered by the queen to attend at it.—Thus bigots in power have practised every species of cruelty, under pretence of serving that religion, the spirit of which is meekness and charity; and many men, otherwise thought of sound judgment and integrity, have promoted those persecuting measures, which in succeeding times have been condemned by the concurrent judgments of all.

^a Willis's Survey of Glo. Cathedral. Memoriale Glouc. being a MS. Mutæo Ashmoleano Oxon.

^b Willis's Hist. M. Abbies.

^c Willis's Survey of Gloucester Cathedral. Collier's Hist. Burnet's Ref. Fox's Martyrs. Strype's Cranmer. Thomas's Survey of Worc. Cath. Godwin de Præful. and other Historians.

James Brookes ^h, D.D. sometime fellow of Corpus Christi College, and afterwards master of Baliol College, in Oxford, upon bishop Hooper's deprivation, was elected March 26, 1554; had restitution of the temporalities May the 8th; and was consecrated in the church of Saint Saviour, Southwark, the 1st of April following. The commissions he exercised as delegate, or sub-delegate, against archbishop Cranmer, bishop Ridley, bishop Latimer; and in visiting the university of Oxford, prove him to have been a very zealous man in those times, who is observed by Dr. Fuller to have spent his fury mostly out of his diocese. He died September the 7th, 1558, according to Le Neve, and was buried in a strong coffin, under abbat Parker's monument, without any inscription over him. It seems that he collated at first to the prebends of this church, a privilege granted to his predecessors. Upon his death, queen Mary issued out a writ ⁱ, dated the 25th day of October, for the keeping of the temporalities, to John Bowsher, B.D. who was nominated to the bishoprick; but the queen's death prevented his having it.

A vacancy for above three years.

Richard Cheiney, B.D. sometime of Pembroke-hall, in the university of Cambridge; the archdeacon of Hereford, who opposed transubstantiation in the year 1555, in convocation, and was deprived in the reign of queen Mary; but was afterwards rector of Maydesnorton, in the diocese of Lincoln; of Bishop's-Hampton, in that of Worcester; prebendary of Westminster, and also of this church; was elected bishop, March the 9th, 1561; the temporalities were restored to him on the 15th of April, in the same year; he was consecrated in the archbishop's chapel at Lambeth, on the 19th; and in ten days after, had the bishoprick of Bristol given to him to hold in commendam with it. He died April 25, 1579, according to Le Neve, and was buried near his predecessor, under abbat Parker's monument, without any inscription.

A vacancy for above two years, the reason of which, according to Mr. Strype, was that the queen might satisfy her debt of 500*l.* owing to her for the tenths of the clergy out of the revenues of the see.

John Bullingham, D.D. prebendary of Worcester and Lincoln; sometime rector of Boxwell, and of Withington, in Gloucestershire, was elected on the 15th of August, confirmed the 1st of September, and consecrated on the 3d, 1581, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London and Rochester, in the chapel of Croydon. April 21, 1585, he was instituted to the vicarage of Painswick, in this county, which he held in commendam with his bishoprick for some time; as he did the bishoprick of Bristol, from the time of his consecration 'till 1589, when Dr

^d Strype's Memorial.

^e Ibid. Fox's Mart. Burnet's Reform. Wood's Athen. Ox. &c.

^f Bishop Hooper was degraded only of priesthood, and not of his episcopal office; for it seems that the bishop of London, and others of his persuasion, did not think it necessary to degrade him of any higher order; for they reputed him, and the other bishops made in the reign of king Edward the Sixth, as nothing more than priests.

^g From an old book of orders and agreements belonging to the city.

^h Willis's Survey of Glouc. Cath. Wood's Athen. Ox. &c.

ⁱ Rymer's Fœdera.

Fletcher was consecrated thereto; and that bishoprick being taken from him, the rectory of Kilmington, alias Culmington, in the deanery of Carey, and diocese of Wells, was conferred on him, in July, 1596. He died at Kenfington, May 20, 1598, and was buried in this cathedral, without any memorial; and, the same year, he was succeeded by

Godfrey Goldsborough, D.D. formerly fellow of Trinity college in Cambridge, archdeacon of Worcester, sometime rector of Stockton, archdeacon of Salop, in the church of Litchfield, prebendary of London, Hereford, and Worcester; who was elected the 2d of August, and consecrated November the 12th, 1598, by the archbishop of Caterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Litchfield and Coventry, and of Chichester, at the archbishop's palace at Lambeth; installed the 20th of December, and had license to hold the prebend of Worcester in commendam with it. He died on the 26th of May, 1604, at his palace at the Vineyard, and was buried in this cathedral, in a little chapel on the north side of the lady's. Over his grave, according to his desire, there is an handsome altar monument erected for him by his executors, with his effigy in his episcopal habit, and at the head of it this inscription in capitals:

IN OBITVM REVERENDI PRÆSVLIS GODFRIDI,
QVONDAM GLOUCESTRIENSIS EPISCOPI, QVI
XXVI MAII, MDCIV. EX HAC VITA MIGRAVIT.

Aureus, et fulvo nomen fortitus ab auro,
Hic Goldisburgus nunc requiescit humo,
Scilicet orta solo pretiosa metalla parente,
In matrem redeunt inveterata suam.

SEDI ANNOS SEX.

Over it are the arms intended for those of the same see, viz. Or, three cheverons gules, the middle one charged with a mitre with labels argent, impaled with his own arms; viz. Quarterly, 1. argent, a cross flory sable; 2. argent, three cheverons, sable: in the middle a mullet, gules: the 3d as the 2d, the 4th as the 1st; a mirte for the crest.—After bishop Goldsborough's death, William Tooker, or Tucker, D.D. dean of Litchfield, was nominated by king James the First, to that see; and the congéd d'elire, or letter patent, issued out^b for his election; but it was revoked, tho' 'tis not said on what account.

Thomas Ravis, D.D. rector of Bredon in Worcestershire, dean of Christ-church in Oxford, a man of eminent learning, gravity, and approved prudence, was elected on the 17th of December, 1604, and consecrated the 19th of March following, at Lambeth, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of Durham and Chichester. Whilst he was bishop here^c he was at a very considerable expence in repairing his palace at Gloucester, made several water-courses there, and repaired the vineyard house. In 1607, he was translated to London, and succeeded by Henry Parry, D.D. dean of Chester, who was consecrated by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Rochester, and Chichester, at Lambeth, July 12, 1607; and whilst he presided here, made the pulpit in the body of the cathedral, at his own charge, and gave very liberally to the poor of this city. He was translated to Worcester in the end of September, 1610.

Gyles Thompson, D.D. sometime rector of Pembridge, in the county of Hereford, dean of Windsor, and canon of Hereford, was elected on the 15th of March, 1611, confirmed on the 9th of June, had restitution of the temporalties on the 27th of the same month, and was consecrated at Lambeth, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of Oxford, Ely, Bath and Wells, and Litchfield and Coventry; having liberty to hold his deanery in commendam only for one year. He never came into his diocese, but died June 14, 1612, to the great grief of all that knew his piety or learning, after he had taken great pains, by the command of king James the First, in translating part of the New Testament; and lies buried in a chapel on the north side of Windsor collegiate church, where is on his monument the bust of a bishop, and this inscription:

Individuæ Trinitati per omnia secula gloria, per quam sui, ero. Hic situs est Ægidius Tomson, hujus capellæ quondam decanus, cujus mens sincera, lingua docta, manus munda. Fuit Londini natus, educatus Oxoniæ, in collegio omnium bonorum indigentium eruditissimorum amantissimus semper vixit, cujus corpus quamvis mortalitas terræ subjecit, illius tamen animam pietas cœlis inferuit. Hunc virum, moribus gravem, prudentiâ insignem, pietate summum, hæc regia capella per annos 10 decanum habuit. Inde a serenissimo rege Jacobo, in episcopatum Gloucestr. commendatum, mors intempestiva, anno decurso, præfulem rapuit. Obijt 14 Junij Ann. Domini 1612, Ætatis suæ 59.

On the right hand is the figure of time, over whose head is an angel, holding a scroll thus inscribed;

In memoria æterna erit justus.

On the left hand, on a scroll held by another angel:

Justorum animæ in manu Dei sunt.

His will was dated February the 12th, 1605, and proved July the 7th, 1612.

Miles Smith, D.D. succeeded, being elected July 15, 1612, and consecrated at Croydon, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Litchfield and Coventry, and of Rochester, on the 19th or 20th of September following. He was rector of Hartlebury and Upton-upon-Severn, in the county of Worcester, prebendary of Exeter, and canon residentiary of Hereford; was appointed by king James the First, May the 8th, 1610, one of the first fellows of Chelsea-college, being a man of such eminent learning, as to occasion him to be called a walking library. He is said to have disliked the hot proceedings of some very zealous persons, especially after doctor Laud was made dean: and having composed the preface^d that is now before our church bibles, and translated the four major and the twelve minor prophets, he died at his palace at Gloucester on the 19th of October, 1624, much lamented by the poor of the city, to whom he had been very charitable, and was buried November the 9th, in the lady's chapel. Over his grave was laid a white stone, without any inscription, and only his arms impaled with those of the see.— Upon his death, Dr. John Preston was offered the bishoprick, but waved it on account of his lecture, which he preferred to it.

^a Epist. Cl. Willis ad me.
^b Willis, Le Neve, Wood, &c. &c.

^c Epist. Cl. Willis's ad me.

Godfrey Goodman, D.D. prebendary of Westminster, rector of West-Ildestley, in Berkshire, and of Kemerton in this diocese, (the advowson of which he gave to the corporation of Gloucester) and dean of Rochester, was elected on the 26th of November, confirmed March the 5th, consecrated the next day at Lambeth, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of Lincoln, London, Rochester, and Landaff, and installed April the 4th following. He held in commendam with his bishoprick his canonry of Windsor, and rectory of West-Ildestley. In 1640, he was sequestrated^e from the bishoprick, first committed to a purfivant, and afterwards to a gate-house, on account of some notions favouring the church of Rome, to which he was reconciled^f before his death, which happened January the 19th, 1655, in St. Margaret's parish, Westminster; in which parish church he was^g buried, near the font in the west part, without any memorial.

A vacancy till after the restoration.—John Hacket, D.D.^h in 1660, was offered this bishoprick, but refused it, and the next year accepted that of Litchfield; whereupon

William Nicholson, D.D. archdeacon of Brecknock, canon residentiary of St. David's, vicar of Llandilovawr, in the county of Carmarthen; and afterwards rector of Bishop's-Cleeve, in the county of Gloucester, was elected on the 26th of November, 1660; consecrated in king Henry the Seventh's chapel at Westminster, by the archbishop of York, assisted by the bishops of Durham, Chichester, Lincoln, and Peterborough, by commission from the archbishop of Canterbury, January 6, 1660; installed the 11th of January, and had the temporalities restored to him on the 5th of February following. He, says Mr. Wood, being a man of great erudition, prudent, modest, and of a moderate mind, died February the 5th, 1671; and was buried in a little chapel on the south side of the lady's, where is a monument against the east wall erected for him, with this inscription on it, composed by his great friend Mr. Bull, afterwards the very learned and pious bishop of St. David's:

Æternitati S. in spe beatæ resurrectionis, hic reverendas exuvias deposuit Theologus insignis, episcopus vere primitivus, Gulielmus Nicholson. In agro Suffolciano natus, apud Magdalenensibus educatus, obsidem regi et ecclesiæ afflictæ præstitam, ad sedem Gloucestrensem merito promotus anno MDCLX. In concionibus frequens, in scriptis nervosus, legenda scribens, et faciens scribenda, gravitas episcopalis in fronte emicuit; pauperibus quotidiana charitate beneficus; comitate erga clerum et literatos, admirandus. Gloriæ ac dierum satur, in palatio suo, ut vixit, pie decessit, Feb. 5^o anno Ætatis LXXXII. Dom. MDCLXXI.

Elizabetha conjux prævit in hoc sacello, sepulta Apr. xx. An. Dom: MDCLXIII. Owenus Brightock, de Lechdenny, in comitatu Caermarthen, armiger, prædictæ Elizabethæ nepos, hoc grati animi monumentum (executore recusante) propriis sumptibus erexit, ann. M. DC. LXXIX.

Over it his arms, impaled with those designed for the see of Gloucester, viz. Azure, a key argent, surmounted of another key, Or, for the see. Azure, in chief three leopards heads caboshed, gules; two bars ermin, for his own arms. On the same monument are likewise, 1. Parted per pale counter-changed, Or and sable, three escallops counter-changed of the field. 2. Or, a cheveron sable, between three ravens proper.

John Prichard, or Prichet, D.D. vicar of St. Gyles's Cripplegate, London; rector of Harlington, in the county of Middlesex, and prebendary of Mora, in the church of St. Paul's; was elected on the 10th of October, 1672; consecrated at Lambeth by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Ely, Rochester, and Chester, November the 3d; and had the temporalities restored to him the 29th of January following. He held the three preferments before-mentioned in commendam with his bishoprick, and died January the 1st, 1680; and was buried at Harlington, with this inscription on a copartment affixed to a pillar on the north side near his grave, which was under the pulpit:

In memoriam Johannis Domini episcopi Gloucester, filii Walteri Pricket de prædio Cowlensi, vulgo Cowley-hall, in agro Middlesexiæ, armigeri, qui e Katherina uxore, castissima fæmina, sex liberos progenuit, viz. Georgium, Wilhelmum, Walterum, Thomam, Johannem & Susannam, quorum Johannes et Susanna jam supersunt. Hoc loco ministerium sacrum, et felici omine, exercuit, nec non Aliciæ Comitissæ Derbiæ, viduæ, aliquando a sacris domesticis, dein in ædem sancti Andreæ Undershaff, apud Londinenses promovebatur; ubi pastoris boni fidelisque labores alacriter sustinens, grassante jam intestino & diro bello, regniq; partibus depressis, ipse tum in regem, tum in ecclesiam pius, illic depulsus est, perque totum id tempus, quo Carolus Secundus rex in exilio erat, fidelis; ergo graviora passus. Tandem restaurato fideliter principe, in res suas restituebatur, inque prædictum post episcopatum inauguratus, cui Sacro-Sancto muneri ubi quum novem annos invigilaverat, obiit cal. Januarii ann. Dom. 1680; annoque Ætatis 75. Hocce subtus rostrum monumentum suum quidem optimum, pro jussu suo, corpus jacet sepultum.

Robert Frampton, D.D.ⁱ dean of this church, rector of Fontmill, in Dorsetshire, born at Pimper, in that county, was elected on the 28th of January, 1680; and consecrated^k in the chapel of All-Souls college in Oxford, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Rochester, Ely, Exeter, and Lincoln, March the 27th, 1681; having license to hold Fontmill in commendam. In 1684, he resigned Fontmill for Avening, in the county of Gloucester; in 1685, he resigned Avening for Standish vicarage in the same county. And February the 1st, 1690, was ^d Le Neve's Lives of protestant archbishops. A. Wood, &c. &c.

^e Lord Clarendon's History.
^f Walker's sufferings. Wood's Athen. Ox.
^g Strype's Edition of Stowe's Survey of London.

^h Willis's Survey of Cov. and Litchf. p. 894.
ⁱ Cl. Willis's Survey of Gloucester Cathedral.
^k Le Neve's lives of protestant Archbishops.

deprived, for refusing the oaths then appointed. After his deprivation, he continued at Standish, and, by connivance, had the profits thereof 'till he died; which was on the 25th of May, 1708. He is buried in the chancel of that church, within the communion rails, and had a black marble grave-stone laid over him with this inscription on it :

Robertus Frampton Episcopus Gloucestrensis. Cætera quis nescit. Obiit 8 Cal. Junii An. Ætatis suæ 86, Consecrationis 28, Æræ Christianæ 1708.

His will was dated in February, 1702, and proved in November, 1708, by which he bequeathed, amongst other things, 100*l.* for each of the following purposes, to promote the gospel in foreign parts; to deprived ministers; to poor servitors in CCC. Oxford.

Edward Fowler, D.D. born at Westerleigh, in Gloucestershire, prebendary of this church, rector of Northill, in the county of Bedford, and All-hallows, Breadstreet, London; upon bishop Frampton's deprivation, was nominated, April the 23d, 1691; elected the 8th of June, confirmed the 2d, and consecrated the 5th of July, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of Winchester, Salisbury, Worcester, Bristol and Ely, in the church of St. Mary le Bow, London; holding his vicarage in commendam with his bishoprick. He died at Chelsea, August 26, 1714, and was buried in a vault, on the north side of Hendon church-yard, near Hampstead, in Middlesex. Within the chancel is set up a handsome marble copartment, with columns and arms at top, which bears this inscription :

To the pious memory of the Right Reverend Edward Fowler, late Lord Bishop of Gloucester; to which station he was advanced by king William, in the year 1691, for his known steadiness to the true interest of the church of England, and of his country, in times of danger. He approved himself worthy of that dignity, by a faithful and diligent discharge of his pastoral office; 'till disabled by age and bodily infirmities, he rested from his labours in the 82d year of his age, admitted to partake of his reward. He departed this life August 26, 1714, and was interred in the grave of his first wife, in this church; leaving behind him, in the excellent Treatises, published by himself, lasting monuments of learning, judgment, piety and christian temper of mind. He was twice married, first to Ann, daughter of Arthur Bernardston, of the Inner Temple, esq; one of the masters of chancery. She departed this life December 19, 1696. He had by her three sons, Nathaniel, Edward, and Richard; and five daughters, Anne, Anne, Susannah, Elizabeth, and Mary, survived him. His second wife Elizabeth, who likewise survived him, was Elizabeth, widow of the Reverend Dr. Ezekiah Burton, and daughter of Ralph Trevor, of London, merchant.

Underneath is as follows :

This monument was erected at the cost of Richard Fowler, LLB. the younger son above-mentioned, who married Susannah, daughter of John Pyke, of Downsey, in the Isle of Purbeck, gent. by whom he had one daughter Anne, both which dying many years before him, were buried in this church, near his mother, and his father's youngest sister Susanna, the first wife of Meshack Smith, A.M. then vicar of this church. The said Richard Fowler died November 9, 1716, and did by his last will direct his executors, viz. his brother Edward, and his sister Susanna, to cause a vault to be made, which for want of room in the church was made in the church-yard, at the west corner of this wall, wherein is deposited his body, and into which are removed the remains of his wife and daughter, with those of his father and mother; all rest there together. An. Dom. 1717, in hope of a joyful resurrection.

His successor was

Richard Willis, D.D. born at Bewdley, in Worcestershire, sometime fellow of All-Souls college, the king's chaplain, chaplain-general of the army; sub-preceptor to the duke of Gloucester, prebendary of Westminster, and dean of Lincoln. He was elected December the 10th, 1714, confirmed January the 15th, consecrated January the 16th, in Lambeth chapel, by the bishops of Salisbury, Litchfield and Coventry, and of Bangor, by commission from the archbishop of Canterbury, and installed the 13th of April following; and had licence to hold his deanery in commendam with it: But was translated to the see of Salisbury in 1721, and thence, in 1725, to Winchester; where he was buried towards the south side of the body of the church, and has a fine monument in marble erected for him against the south wall, being at length, in a recumbent posture, attired in his episcopal habit, with the George hanging on his breast, as prelate of the order of Saint George, and this inscription and character, which he very justly deserved :

In Memoriam Reverendi admodum in Christo Patris RICHARDI WILLIS, Episcopi Wintoniensis; viri ea morum simplicitate, ea animi integritate, et verborum fide, ut qui illum optimè noverint, si maxime æstimaverint, propensissimè dilexerint. Patriam, principem, et libertatem publicam, unicè amavit. Religionem interea vere christianam sanctissime coluit, acerrime vindicavit. Nulla temporum varietate debilitari, aut frangi, potuit. In republica, in ecclesia, fidelis; constans, et sui similis. Egregiis hinc virtutibus instructus, in mediis, quos abundè meruit, honoribus felicissimè consenuit; donec annorum plenus, obiit 10 die Augusti, Anno Domini 1734, Ætatis 71. JOHANNES WILLIS, armiger, filius ejus et Heres, pie memor posuit.

John Wilcocks, D.D. born at Bristol, sometime fellow of Magdalen college in Oxford, upon bishop Willis's translation to Salisbury, was elected November 25, 1721, consecrated December the 2d, installed the 22d of the same month, and held a prebend of Westminster in commendam with his bishoprick; but being translated to the see of Rochester, and having the deanery of Westminster along with it, he was succeeded by Elias Sydall, D.D. sometime fellow of Bennet, alias Corpus Christi college in Cambridge, and afterwards prebendary of Canterbury, who was translated hither from the bishoprick of Saint David's November the 4th, 1731; being then also dean of Canterbury, which office, together with this bishoprick, he held 'till his death, on December the 24th, 1737.

Martin Benson, D.D. succeeded, whose character is admirably drawn in the following inscription, on a fine marble monument, erected for him in the cathedral at Gloucester :

Reader be admonished by this marble, to imitate Martin Benson, late bishop of this diocese. A rational piety raised the views of this excellent man above the world, and formed his whole temper into a truly christian spirit of resignation. An uncommon warmth of benevolence made it the business and pleasure of his life to go about doing good, by instruction in righteousness, and by works of charity. He watched the flock of Christ as a faithful shepherd, from a sense of his own duty, and a disinterested concern for their common welfare: And he maintained the dignity of his authority, by the meekness with which he exercised it. He felt a deep compassion for the vicious; and shewed it, even whilst he was exposing the folly and wickedness of vice, with a strength and turn of language peculiar to himself. His reproofs being dictated by friendship, qualified by candour, and delivered delivered with a natural delicacy of manners, were sincere without roughness, and endearing without dissimulation. He was by constitution liable to a depression of spirits, but innocence of heart enlivened his mind, and his conversation, with a cheerfulness that created a more affectionate regard for his superior worth, by rendering it more familiar and amiable. Under the most acute pains of his last illness he possessed his soul in patience, and with a firm trust in his redeemer, calmly resigned his spirit to the father of mercies.

That such an example might be perpetuated, Gabriel Hanger erected this monument in memory of his ever honoured friend.

Another decent monument is fixed by his executor against the west wall of the nave of this church, near the place of his interment; which, at the request of this amiable and good prelate, is as near the door as conveniently might be.

William Johnson, D. D. succeeded bishop Benson, and was translated from this see to that of Worcester, November the 9th, 1759, upon which William Warburton, D. D. was elected. His writings shew him to be a person of great learning, and he is the present bishop of this diocese.

Of the DEANERY, DEANS, CHAPTER, &c.

IN the charter of foundation of the bishoprick of Gloucester, the king established a dean and six prebendaries in the place of the abbats and monks, and endowed them by his letters patents, with

The Manors of Tuffley, Ablode, and Saint-hurst, Barnwood and Croneham, Matson, Wotton, Churcham, Rudford, Coln-Rogers, Ablington, Coln-Aldwyns, Eastlech-Martin, alias Burthroppe, Cotes, Tyberton, Tayneton and Bulley, in the county of Gloucester; Willingifwike and Monkhide, in the county of Hereford; Tregosse and Pennon, in the county of Glamorgan; Linkynholt, Littleton, and Wallop, in the county of Southampton.

The White Hart inn in Holborn, together with the rent of eight shillings, which used to be paid for the said inn, or tenement, to the late monastery of Carthusians, near the city of London.—The first herbage of Meneham meadow, containing thirty-nine acres, and of Archdeacon's meadow, containing eighteen acres, both in the county of Gloucester.—A moiety of the wood called Wolridge, containing by estimation five hundred acres, and a moiety of the wood called Le Perch, containing by estimation sixteen acres; both lying in the parish of Saint Mary de Lode; Barnwood grove, containing ten acres; the wood called Buckholt, containing two hundred acres; the wood called Byrd-wood, containing one hundred acres; all lying in the county of Gloucester; the wood called West-woods, in Lynkynholte, in the county of Southampton, containing sixty acres; the wood called Littleton-Coppice, in the said county, containing forty-eight acres.

A fee-farm rent of 4*l.* a year out of the manor of Wallop, in the county of Southampton; and all the houses, market, fairs, toll, and all profits whatsoever, lying or being in the city of Gloucester, or suburbs thereof, which belonged to the late monastery of Saint Peter there.

The rectories of Barnwood, Brokethrop, Churcham, Colne-Alwyn, Fairford, and Eastlech-Martyn, in the county of Gloucester; of Saint Mary de Lode, and the rectory and church, or chapel of Gracelane, in the city of Gloucester; the rectories and churches of Sherston and Aldrington, in the county of Wilts; Great-Marlow, in the county of Bucks; Chippingnorton, in the county of Oxford; Lancarnan, Lantwit, Lamblethian, Lantrissam, Senmarke and Cardiffe, with the chapel of Saint Donats, in the county of Glamorgan.

Portions of tithes in Barton-Abbats, in the parish of Saint Mary de Lode; and in Senebrug, both in the county of the city of Gloucester; in Fairford, Upleaden, Hynleaden, Ablode, Saint-hurst, Wotton, Ewrendyefield, Kings-Furlong, and Innysworth, in the county of Gloucester; in Hilmerton, in the county of Wilts; and Okeborne, in the county of Bucks.

Pensions yearly to be taken out of the following rectories, &c. viz. 20*s.* out of St. John Baptist, and 13*s.* 4*d.* out of St. Nicholas, both in the city of Gloucester; 10*s.* out of Mattifden, in the county of Gloucester; 53*s.* 4*d.* out of Alcanynge, and 20*s.* out of Lydyard Tregoz, both in the county of Wilts; 4*l.* out of St. Peter de Mancroft, in the city of Norwich; 40*s.* out of St. Martin in Vintry, in the city of London; and 10*s.* to be paid by the guardians of Braze-nose college, Oxon.

Advowsons, and rights of patronage, to the rectories of Mattifden, Rudford, Coln-Rogers, Ablington and Taynton, in the county of Gloucester; and Lynkynholte, in the county of Southampton;—And to the vicarages of Fairford, Brookthrop, Churcham, Lyncham and Colne-Alwyns, in the county of Gloucester; of the Holy Trinity, in the city of Gloucester; of Sherston, and Aldrington, in the county of Wilts; of Great Marlow, in the county of Bucks; of Lantwitt, Lamblethian, Lantrissam, Penmarke, and Cardiffe, with the chapel of St. Donats, in the county of Glamorgan. The chapter present also to Chipping-Norton, in Oxfordshire.

The dean and chapter are subject to a rent-charge, at first reserved to the crown of 90*l.* 14*s.* 0*d.* but which was granted away from it by king Charles the the Second, and is now, or at least was lately, paid to a person of the name of Da Costa. They are also subject to other annual payments to the amount of 44*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.* 9. which may be seen more particularly in the Charter of Endowment printed in the Appendix No. 9.

The manors of Linkynholt and Littleton, were given by the dean and chapter, under their common seal, to king Henry the Eighth, the 20th of May, 37^o regni; and probably Wallop was granted to him about the same time, since which there have been but few alienations from the first endowment.

It was affirmed in parliament, June the 15th, 1641, that upon a survey of the lands, &c. of this deanery, 'it then appeared to have above twelve rectories of great value; about thirty vicarages; pensions, and portions of tythes; almost the third part of the houses of the city of Gloucester, of which the old rent was about 175*l.* besides the yearly revenues of eighteen goodly manors, divers other lands, tenements and hereditaments, manor-houses, and premisses; the old rent of assize of one of the eight manors, being 80*l.* a year.'

The dean's house seems to have belonged to the prior of the abbey; and it is said in an old book in the custody of the corporation, that on the 8th of July, 1648, a lease for seven years was granted of the deanery, by the mayor and burgesses, to Thomas Pury, jun. at 40*s.* per ann. in consideration of his having laid out 80*l.* to repair it.

The letters patent for the foundation of the deanery are printed in the Appendix No. 7; and the statutes of the cathedral, which are the same with those of Bristol, and other new foundations, are printed in the Appendix No. 28. They were compiled by Dr. Heath, then bishop of Worcester, in whose diocese Gloucestershire was, 'till erected into a distinct bishoprick; he was afterwards archbishop of York and lord chancellor of England; by Dr. Day, then bishop of Chester; and archdeacon Cox, who was afterwards preceptor and almoner to king Edward the Sixth, chancellor of the university of Oxford, and dean of Christ-church, from whence he was removed to the deanery of Westminster. He was a great maintainer of the English liturgy and rights, at Frankfort, against Knox and the Puritans, when he was exiled in the reign of queen Mary; and was preferred by queen Elizabeth to the bishoprick of Ely.

The arms of the dean and chapter, appointed by Christopher Barker, esq; principal king at arms, March 28, 1542, are, Azure, a fess Or, charged with three crosses formy, fitchy, of the first. In chief a canton gules charged with a demy rose with beams of the third, between two demy fleurs de lis of the first.

DEANS of GLOUCESTER.

William Jenings, B. D. (the last prior of St. Oswald's, a monk of St. Peter's abbey) being the king's chaplain, was appointed the first dean by the charter of foundation, dated September 3, 1541. Whilst he was dean, he was incumbent of St. John's, in Gloucester, and of Swindon, Beverstone, and Cromhall, in this diocese. He died November the 4th, 1565, and was buried in the middle of the choir, opposite the choristers seat; and had a large stone laid over him, which was removed, in the year 1718, to the east cloister, before the old chapter-house door; at each corner of which stone his arms are engraved on a brass plate; viz. 1. On a fess three roundels. 2. A bull's head caboshed. 3. On two bars six martlets. 4. as the first. On another plate is the following inscription:

Hic Gulielme jaces Jeninges, quem sex quater annos
Edes decanum viderat ista tuum.
Milleni, a Christo, quinginti bisque triceni
Et quinti, quarta luce Novembris, obis.
Clarus avo fueras, clarus patre, clarus et ipse;
Doctrina clarus, clarus et ingenio.
Non tam pane tuo, quam Christi pane replesti
Christicolae, ergo vivis et astra tenes.

John Man, A. M. master, or keeper, of St. Bartholomew's hospital in this city, warden of Merton college in Oxford, and prebendary of Biggleswade in Lincoln cathedral, being presented by queen Elizabeth on the 10th of December, was instituted by proxy, in the person of Mr. Walter Jones, February 2, 1565. It appears by the books in the custody of the register, that the queen granted him a dispensation that he might keep all his preferments, and receive all the profits of them, without being obliged to take any other degree, which is said to have been done, to enable him to perform an embassy the more honourably, on which the queen intended to send him. He died March the 18th, 1568, and was buried in the church of St. Anne, Aldersgate, London, without any memorial; and was succeeded by Thomas Cooper, or Cowper, D. D. who was instituted on the 5th of July, 1569. He was removed to the bishoprick of Lincoln in 1570, and thence to Winchester in 1584.

Lawrence Humfry, or Humphrey, D. D. regius professor of divinity, and president of Magdalen college, in Oxford, was instituted on the 13th of March, 1570. In 1574, he occurs one of the ecclesiastical commissioners for the queen; as he does in 1576, to the archbishop of Canterbury, for metropolitanical visitation. Being afterwards preferred to the deanery of Winchester, he was succeeded by Anthony Rud, D. D. who was instituted the 10th of January, 1584; and on the 9th of June, 1594, was preferred to the bishoprick of St. David.

Griffith, or Jeffry, or Griffin, Lewis, D. D. rector of Kingsland, was installed the same year. In his will, dated February 5, 1606, and proved July the 16th, he desires to be buried in one of the cathedrals of Gloucester, Worcester, or Hereford, or Westminster abbey, in all which he was a dignitary; and accordingly was interred in the cathedral church of Hereford, June the 6th, 1607; but there is no memorial of him.

Thomas Moreton, D. D. succeed him on the 22d of June, 1607. In 1609, he was removed hence to the deanery of Winchester; and thence, in 1616, to the bishoprick of Chester; thence also, in 1618, to the bishoprick of Litchfield and Coventry; and lastly, was promoted to that of Durham in 1632.

Richard Field, D. D. chaplain to queen Elizabeth and king James the First, canon of Windsor, rector of Burg (or Borough) Clere, in Hampshire, was promoted to this deanery in 1609. In the year 1610, the king appointed him one of the fellows of Chelsea college, who were a body of very eminent divines. He died on the 21st of November, 1616, and was buried at Windsor, with this inscription on his grave-stone:

Richardus Field hujus olim coll. canonicus, et ecclesie Gloucest. Decanus, vere Doctor Theologiae, et author librorum V. De ecclesia; una cum Elizabetha Hariffia, sanctissima et charissima conjuge, ex qua sex reliquit filios, et filiam unicam; hic, sub communi marmore, expectant Christi reditum, qui felicitatem quam ingressi sunt adventu suo perficiat ac consummet. Obierunt in Domino, hic, anno salutis 1616, Aetatis suae 55: haec, anno salutis 1614, Aetatis suae 41.

Mr. A. Wood, in his Athenae, tells us, that he was a principal maintainer of protestancy, a powerful preacher, a profound school-man, and an exact disputant.

William Laud, D. D. succeeded, and was installed December the 20th, 1616; promoted to the see of St. David in 1621; thence removed to Bath and Wells, afterwards to London, thence to Canterbury, and was beheaded on the 10th of January, 1644.

Richard Senhouse, D. D. fellow of St. John's college, in Cambridge, and chaplain to prince Charles, was installed the 13th of December, 1621, and, in 1624, was made bishop of Carlisle; whereupon Thomas Winniff, D. D. chaplain to the king, and some time to prince Henry, and prince Charles, was installed November the 10th, 1624, and afterwards made dean of St. Paul's; and thence removed to the see of London.

George Warburton, M. A. the king's chaplain, was installed on the 11th of June, 1631; but in August following was removed to the deanery of Wells.

Accepted Frewen, D. D. the king's chaplain, president of Magdalen college, and vice-chancellor of Oxford, was installed September the 13th, 1631. In 1644, he was advanced to the bishoprick of Litchfield and Coventry; and in 1660, was translated to the archbishoprick of York.

William Brough, D. D. was nominated by the king August the 17th, 1643, and installed the 20th of November, 1644. He died July the 5th, 1671, and was buried at Windsor, of which he had been one of the canons, with this short inscription on his grave-stone:

Dr. William Brough, dean of Gloucester, and prebendary of Windsor, was buried here.

Thomas Viner, D. D. prebendary of this cathedral, and canon of Windsor, was installed the 23d of July, 1671. He died April 11, 1673, and was buried in the lady's chapel in this cathedral, on the 18th, with the following inscription on his gravestone:

Thomas Viner, D. D. hujus ecclesie decanus, et Winforianae prebendarius; illustris genere, pietate in Deum, venustate, ingenio, comitate, morum integritate vitae illibatae longe illustrior, qui summo amicorum luctu & moerore decessit, April. 11, A. D. 1673, Aetatis 44.

Robert Frampton, M. A. prebendary of this cathedral, was installed on the 6th of May, 1673, and promoted to the bishoprick in 1680-1.

Thomas Marshal, D. D. rector of Lincoln college in Oxford, a noted critic, and, according to Mr. Wood, every way worthy of his station in the church, was installed April the 30th, 1681; and dying, April 19, 1685, was buried in All-Saints church, in Oxford, with this epitaph:

P. M. S. Tho. Marshal, S. T. D. quem in agro Leicest. Barkbega genuit; Oxonium educavit; ex pastore mercator. Dordrech. Lincoln Collegium primo socium, deinde rectorem, fecit. Gloucestriae decanus impiger, concionibus potens, & creber pietate, insignis doctrina linguarum orientalium & occidentalium, aquila perspicax, Aegyptiae phaenix unicus. Ex museo instructissimo academiae libros in B. P. desideratos, collegio reliquos, et pecunias amplas, legavit: sui depositum heic reliquit 18 Aprilis, 1685.

William Jane, D. D. regius professor of divinity in Oxford, prebendary of Exeter, was installed June the 6th, 1685; and dying at Christ's-church college, in Oxford, where he was one of the canons, was buried in the cathedral there, without any memorial.

Knightley Chetwood, or Chetwode, D. D. arch-deacon of York, rector of Risington Magna, and Risington Parva, in this diocese, was installed the 6th of April, 1707. And dying about March, 1719, was buried at Tempsford, co. Bedford, (where he had an estate) with this inscription:

Knightly Chetwoode, egregius sane et singularis vir, ingenio adeo sublimi et venusto, adeo divinis et humanis literis excolto, ut nihil supra. Ecclesiae et patriae amicissimus, catholicae fidei rigidus servator. Immortalitatem adivit, annum exigens sexagesimum octavum, tertio nonas Aprilis, MDCCXX.

Τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐνδύσθηται ἀδελφεοί.

John Waugh, D. D. rector of St. Peter's, Cornhill, London, and prebendary of Lincoln, was instituted August the 4th, 1720, and installed on the morrow. In August, 1723, he was made bishop of Carlisle, and had his deanery in commendam 'till christmas following. In his time the common seal of the dean and chapter, which had been used all along from the foundation thereof, was altered, being the old picture of the Trinity, and a new one appointed to be used instead of it. On the old one was represented an old man sitting under an arch, with a long beard and a great beam of light over his head, intended for God the Father: he had between his knees a cross, with our Saviour on it, held by his hands at each of the cross ends, designed for God the Son; and a dove at the upper end of the cross, intended for God the Holy Ghost. Below were the arms of dean Jeninges, and on the sides the initial letters of his his name, W. J.—Round it was SIGILLV̄ COMVNE DECANI ET CAPITVLI ECCLESIE CATHEDRAL. S̄CTE ET INDIVIDVÆ TRINITAT. GLOU. The seal now made use of by the dean and chapter has the arms of the dean and chapter, and under them the arms of dean Waugh, viz. On a chevron three roundlets; and on the sides of his arms the initial letters of his name, I. W.

John Frankland, D.D. rector of St. Stephen's, Bristol, upon dean Waugh's promotion, was appointed to succeed him; and left this deanery for that of Ely, and the mastership of Sidney college, in Cambridge.

Peter Alix, D.D. rector of Castle-Camps, in the county of Cambridge, upon Dr. Frankland's exchange, was promoted in the year 1729, and exchanged it for the deanery of Ely.

Daniel Newcombe, D.D. rector of Whimple in the county of Devon, upon Dr. Alix's exchange, was admitted in 1730.

Josiah Tucker, D.D. succeeded July 13, 1758, who was one of the prebendaries of Bristol, and rector of St. Stephen's in that city. He resigned his prebend, but holds the rectory, and is the present dean. Beside the great learning and abilities which distinguish him in his profession, he is eminent for his extensive charity, and for his great knowledge in the true principles of trade and commerce, and other matters respecting the police of a country.

CHANCELLORS, OR VICARS GENERAL.

John Williams, LL. B. (afterwards LL. D.) and Richard Brown, LL. B. took upon them jointly the office of chancellor, on the 28th of November, 1541. How long they enjoyed it together does not appear; but probably it might be 'till about the year 1545, when a commission was granted to Hugh Whittington, LL. B. for exercising a part of the vicar-general's office in some deaneries of this diocese, only during the bishop's pleasure. This Williams, in king Henry the Eighth's reign, appears very zealous in the execution of the six articles. In the next reign, he was a sudden convert to protestantism; and he began queen Mary's with depriving several clergymen of their livings for their marriage. In 1555, he condemned Henry Hicks, a carpenter or joiner of this city, to carry a faggot in Berkeley church, and in this cathedral; and delivered over to the secular power Thomas Croker, a bricklayer, and Thomas Drowry, a blind boy, who were both burnt in May, 1556. It is affirmed, that in 1558, when the ecclesiastical commissioners appointed by queen Elizabeth were coming to Gloucester, and dean Jeninges (with whom he dined that day) intreating him to meet the commissioners, he declared he never would see them, and was as good as his word, for he died on the same day. He was sometime incumbent of the Holy Trinity in Gloucester, of Rockhampton, Bever-stone, Painswick, Siddington St. Mary, Coln St. Dennis, and Welford, in this county; and a prebendary in Gloucester cathedral.

After Dr. Williams's death, during the vacancy of this see, Dr. Powel is mentioned as dean, who was then vicar-general to the archbishop of Canterbury for this diocese, and keeper of its spiritualities, and was afterwards chancellor.

John Louth, LL. B. was advanced on the 4th of November, 1562, to continue during the bishop's pleasure. And, November the 26th, 1565, was removed to give place to

Thomas Powel, LL. D. who was soon after promoted; but, January the 12th, 1570, the bishop recalling his letters commissional for this office, granted them to

Richard Green, LL. B. auditor, or commissioner, to the bishop in his court. He occurs a commissioner for ecclesiastical causes, appointed by queen Elizabeth in 1574, 1575, and 1577. But about the beginning of the year 1576, was removed in order to restore

Dr. Powel, who occurs in this office April the 10th, 1576, as also a commissioner for ecclesiastical causes, appointed by the queen. He seems to have been sometime vicar of Barrington Magna, and rector of Kemmerton. In 1579, he was suspended by the queen's commissioners from this office during his life, and excommunicated.

William Blackleach, LL. B. was promoted in 1581. In 1588, the bishop recalled his commission; and on the 13th of March, in the same year, granted it to Gilbert Borne, LL. B. yet Blackleach notwithstanding continued by force the exercise of this office. And refusing to withdraw from the consistory court, the bishop excommunicated him on the 8th of July. From this sentence he appealed to the archbishop of Canterbury, and at length, by an injunction from the lord high chancellor, was restored to his office by the bishop on the 6th of October, 1590. After this, great animosities and contradictions continued between the bishop and Blackleach, concerning their several jurisdictions, but nothing more material ensued.

John Seaman, LL. D. was promoted about the 2d of October, 1600; and Thomas Edwards, LL. D. occurs with him in this office August the 10th, 1608; but upon what account it does not appear. He died in 1623, and was buried in the chancel of Painswick, where there was a handsome monument of alabaster and black marble erected for him, with the following inscription:

Hic iacent Cineres Domini (summe venerabilis) Johannis Seaman LL Do^{is} Dioceseos Glouc' Cancell: tum Virtutis, tum Fortunæ dotibus spectatissimi.

Ingenio, ratione vigen, pietate, fideq;

Vixit: at effractus corp' re mille malis.

Hæc patet ad cœlos via consopita fatigat

Corda stupor: sapiunt faucia corda Deum.

Ille bonis merito charus, charum caput: acer

Ille malis censor: iustitiæq; tenax.

Posuit charissimæ olim nutricis: fidiſsimæq; semper coniugio cura piissima. Labores clausit annis Salutis, 1623, Ætatis 59.

William

William Sutton, M. A. (afterwards D. D.) was confirmed by the chapter July the 16th, 1623. In 1627, this office was granted by patent to him and Dr. Baber jointly and severally; but soon after, articles were exhibited against Sutton in the high commission court, and tho' he moved for a prohibition to stop the proceedings, it was not granted, and he was deprived. See Godolphin's Repert. Eccles.

Francis Baber, LL. D. was chancellor in the year 1631, as appears by the books in the office of the register. He died in 1669, and was buried in abbat Seabroke's chapel, at the west end of which, against a pillar, is a monument erected for him, with this inscription :

Hic situs est Vir dum Vixit Venerabilis, Franciscus Baber, Armiger, natus ex Antiqua Familia Baberieni in Comitatu Somerset, vtriusque Juris Dr. Cancellarius Dioceſeôs Glouceſtriensis per triginta novem annos, quod munus integre executus mira cum omniū Laude Probatus fuit tum litteris tum moribus. Vixit ſuis Charus obiit omnibus deſideratus Junij 17.

Anno { Domini 1669
Ætatis ſuæ 69.

Elizabetha Conjux filia Jo: Adderley in Com. Middleſex Arm: Obijt 14 Jan :

Anno { Ætatis 63
Dom: 1673.

Over it were his arms, Gules, a lion couchant in feſſe, between ſix croſs croſſets, three in chief, and as many in baſe, Or.

John Nicholſon, LL. D. (the biſhop's brother) was advanced in the beginning of July, 1669, and upon his death

Richard Parſons, LL. B. (afterwards LL. D.) was preſented on the 4th, confirmed on the 7th, and admitted on the 24th of April, 1677. He died in 1711, and was buried in the lady's chapel, and on the grave-ſtone is the following inſcription :

Rich. Parſons, DLL. fellow of the new college in Oxon, vicar of Dryfield, and chancellor of this dioceſe, in which ſtation he lived thirty-four years, diligent in the execution of his office, and eminent as well for hoſpitality to ſtrangers, as charity to the poor. He died June 12, 1711, aged 68.

Henry Penrice, LL. D. ſucceeded him on the 18th of June, 1711. And in the year 1715, was advanced to be judge of the high court of admiralty, and to the honour of knighthood.

James Benſon, M. A. now LL. D. was appointed in the year 1752, and is the preſent chancellor of the dioceſe.

Of the ARCHDEACONRY and ARCHDEACONS.

Archdeacons were antiently inferior to rural deans, and were originally appointed to inſpect the diligence of deacons in the collecting and diſtributing of alms; but by their personal attendance on biſhops, engroſſed their favour, and gradually grew to be more conſiderable than rural deans.

The places ſubject to the archdeacon of this dioceſe, are ſet down in pp. 153, 154, 155. It remains only to obſerve, that John Carpenter, biſhop of Worceſter, appropriated the rectory of Durſley to the archdeaconry of Glouceſter, in the year 1475, which rectory belonged to St. Peter's abbey, and was given in exchange for the archdeacon's houſe in Glouceſter.

Nicholas Wotton, LL. D. the king's chaplain, who was the laſt archdeacon of Glouceſter in the church of Worceſter, was appointed archdeacon by the charter of foundation, September the 3d, 1541. About the ſame time he was made dean of Canterbury, and in the year 1544, was alſo made dean of York, and then he reſigned this archdeaconry.

Guy Eaton, B. D. was poſſeſſed of it about 1545; and in the year 1553, he left it, with his other preferments, and quitted the kingdom.

John Williams, LL. D. chancellor of the dioceſe, and one of the prebendaries of this church, in queen Mary's reign, concerning whom ſee chancellors, occurs September the 15th, 1554; but upon queen Elizabeth's acceſſion to the crown

Guy Eaton was again made one of the prebendaries of this church, in the year 1559; but afterwards reſigning,

George Savage, LL. B. rector of Saintbury in this county, was inſtituted February the 1ſt, 1574, by the chancellor, in the chapel of the church of Stow; having firſt ſworn, as appears by the book in the biſhop's register, to pay a yearly penſion of 25 l. to Guy Eaton, for his life. In 1575, he occurs commiſſioner for eccleſiaſtical cauſes; and in the year 1580, the archbiſhop of Canterbury made him his commiſſioner for a metropolitical viſitation.

Robert Hill, B. D. was collated September the 1ſt, 1602, who, it is ſuppoſed, either died about the year 1604, being rector of Tredington, in Warwickſhire, or quitted this office, for

Samuel Burton, M. A. rector of Long Marſton, or Marſton Sicca, in this county, occurs in 1606; and dying on the 14th of June, 1634, was buried at Long Marſton before-mentioned, and has this inſcription on a braſs plate on his tomb, on the ſouth ſide of the chancel :

Cineres reverendi viri magiſtri Sam. Burton ſub hoc lapide quieſcunt, quem Staffordiensiſ ager eduxit, Ædes Chriſti, Oxon, in re literaria educavit, et academia novit theologum eruditum, quem incolæ hujus loci per 36 plus minus annos habuerunt doctum perſpicuum et aſſiduum præconem, pium etiam et pacificum rectorem; quem quinque Glouceſtrienses epiſcopi probarunt oculum vigilantem; dioceſis expertus fuit prudentem archidiaconum, comitatus peritum juſtitarium. Hic poſt laborum 66 annos in ergaſtulo humanæ carnis fortiter exantlatos et emenſos, terrena reſſquit, et in Domino placidè obdormivit 14 Junii anni poſt Chriſtum natum 1634.

Hugh Robinſon, D. D. canon of Wells, ſucceeded him, who died April the 6th, 1755.

John Middleton was inſtalled Auguſt the 7th, 1660, having been preſented July the 19th to this dignity by the crown, to which it was laſed after Dr. Robinſon's death. He was rector of Hanwell in Middleſex, where probably he was buried.

Edward Pope, M. A. was collated November the 2d, 1662, and was buried at Walton on the Hill, in the county of Surry, within the communion rails, with this epitaph on his grave-ſtone :

Here is interred the body of Edward Pope, archdeacon of Glouceſter, and rector of this pariſh; honoured for piety and pains in preaching and catechiſing; learned in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and the arts; beloved for his courteous demeanour to all perſons; charitable to blind and lame, to ſick, to ſore, to poor. Now rewarded piety, charity, and works of hoſpitality, reſteth here. Quod claudi potuit hic jacet. To eternize his memory this is here erected. He died the 26th of December, 1671.

John Gregory, M.A. was collated December the 31st, 1671, and dying December the 10th, 1678, was buried in the chancel of Hempsted church, near Gloucester, with this inscription upon him.

John Gregory second rector of this church, and archdeacon of Gloucester, died December 10, 1678, in the 50th year of his age.

Ἀμαρτωλῶν ἄριστος, ἀγίων ἐλαχιστότερος.

Thomas Hyde, M.A. was collated the 10th of December, and installed the 12th of January, 1678. He died February the 12th, 1702, and was buried at Hanborough, near Oxford.

Robert Parsons, M.A. was installed March the 10th, 1702, and dying July the 18th, 1714, was buried at Oddington, in this county, whereof he was rector.

Nathaniel Lye, D.D. prebendary of Bristol, and rector of Kemmerton, in this county, was collated on the 29th of July, and installed the 1st of August, 1714; being also one of the prebendaries of this cathedral. He died on the 31st of October, 1737, and was buried in St. Michael's church in this city, under the seats over against the pulpit, and has a small monument against the north wall, with this inscription:

Near this place is interred the body of NATHANIEL LYE, D.D. archdeacon and prebendary of GLOUCESTER, and rector of the parishes of KEMERTON, and DURSLEY, in this county. He married BRIDGET, the daughter of RICHARD GODDARD, of SWINDON, in the county of WILTS, Esq; who also lies buried here, by whom he left issue one daughter, now the wife of RICHARD SOUTHBY, of CARSWELL, in BERKSHIRE, Esq; He died 31st of October, 1737, aged 89.

William Geekie, D.D. prebendary of Canterbury and of Allhallows, Barking, London, upon Dr. Lye's death, was admitted (by an option granted to the late archbishop of Canterbury upon bishop Benson's consecration) on the 4th of November, 1737. Upon whose death, Richard Hurd, B.D. now D.D. was collated August the 27th, 1767; and is the present archdeacon. He is the author of Moral and Political Dialogues, 8vo. and of several other writings which have been well received by the public.

PREBENDS and PREBENDARIES.

When the Norman monarchy was first settled, prebendaries and priests in England were not obliged to celibacy; and it was grown into a custom, for ecclesiastical benefices to descend hereditarily to the next of blood, which occasioned a great contest between the heirs of the prebends of the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul at Shrewsbury, and the monks of the same place, who claimed the prebends after the death of the first prebendaries. Camden, col. 656.

Formerly lay-men might have been prebendaries of our cathedrals, except of those erected by king Henry the Eighth. It is said, that the duke of Somerset, in the reign of king Edward the Sixth, had engrossed to himself fifty prebends. But the laity are now excluded by the act of uniformity, made after the restoration of king Charles the Second, which requires the reading of the whole divine service within two months after being admitted.

There are six prebends in this church, five of which are in the gift of the king, and one is annexed to the mastership of Pembroke college in Oxford, by 12^o Annæ, ft. 2. c. 6. f. 7. None of the prebends are charged with the payment of first fruits or tenths. Though there are no fixed stalls kept here since the restoration, and the custom is to install the junior prebendary always in the sixth, or lowest stall, the series seems to stand in the following order.

First Stall.

Richard Browne, LL. B. the king's chaplain, was appointed at the foundation, September the 3d, 1541; and on the 2d of April, 1554, was deprived of his prebend, and the rectory of Great Rington, in this county, because he was married.

Robert Morwent, M.A. was thereupon collated by bishop Brookes, on the 11th of June following; and dying August the 26th, 1558, was buried at Corpus Christi college in Oxford, where he was president.

John Woodward, M.A. was presented on the 2d of September, installed on the 10th, 1558, and resigned in 1571.

Thomas Perry, or Pury, M.A. who afterwards took the degree of B.D. was installed January the 30th, 1571, upon Woodward's resignation. He was rector of Beverstone, in this county, and resigned his prebend about the year 1610.

Thomas Prior, M.A. afterwards B.D. and lecturer to the corporation of this city, was installed the 21st of September, 1612. He was also curate of St. Nicholas, in this city, and rector of Cowley, and of Seisincote, in the county of Gloucester; and dying about August, 1632, was succeeded by George Palmer, B.D. who was installed on the 25th of October, 1632. He was sequester'd from this dignity, and from his vicarage of Northall, in the county of Middlesex, in the year 1642, and was buried at Hays, near Uxbridge, September the 28th, 1658.

Walter Blandford, D.D. was presented August the 6th, and installed the 22d, 1660. In the year 1665, he was made bishop of Oxford, and was succeeded by Henry Savage, D.D. master of Baliol college in Oxford, who was installed on the 12th of January, 1665. He died in January 1672, and was buried in Baliol college chapel, without any memorial.

Robert Frampton, M.A. was installed on the 23d of July, 1672, who being made dean,

Nathaniel Hodges, M.A. was installed on the 20th of May, 1673. He died the 28th of August, in the year 1700, and was buried in Norwich cathedral, where he was also a prebendary, with this inscription on his grave-stone:

Reliquiæ Nath. Hodges, A. M. viri doctrina & sapientia ornatissimi; probi & bene moralis, qui Ædis primum Christi apud Oxonienses Oxonienſes ſocius, in eadem academia procuratoris, & moraliſ philoſophiæ prælectoris, officium ſumma cum laude præſtitit. Eccleſiæ tandem Norwicenſis, & Glouceſtrenſis, canonicus, cujus omnis religio quum vere cœleſtis fuit (virtus ſcilicet omnimodum animi Deo conjunxit) juſtitiam bonitatemque divinam imitando coluit pietatem non cavendo pius. Annos natus LXVI, denatus eſt Aug. XXVIII, anno Domini MDCC.

Benjamin King, M.A. afterwards D.D. ſucceeded, and was installed on the 26th of September, 1700. He was ſometime vicar of All-Saints, in the town of Northampton, and of St. Mary de Lode in this city, on the ſouth ſide of the chancel of which church he was buried, but has no memorial.

Henry Galley, D.D. was installed in 1728, and again, upon his being made prebendary of Norwich, alſo in 1731; to whom,

Edward Wilſon, A.M. ſucceeded September the 1ſt, 1769.

Second Stall.

Henry Willis, B.D. vicar of Toddington, in this county, was appointed at the foundation on the 3d of September, 1541, and was deprived of his prebend, of the rectory of Uly, and of the vicarage of Sherburn, in this county, the 2d of April, 1544, upon account of his marriage.

William Collynge, B.D. was thereupon preſented the ſame day; and collated by biſhop Brookes, June the 11th, 1554. Upon his death,

John Tomſon, B.D. was collated, October the 3d, 1556.

John Smith, LL.D. upon Tomſon's removal, was preſented by queen Elizabeth, 1559, and was alſo archdeacon of Landaff. Dying about February, or March, 1563-4, he was ſucceeded by Robert Jones, in the year 1564, who reſigning in 1573, was alſo ſucceeded by Richard Shippar, or Sheppard, M.A. inſtituted November the 26th, 1573. Probably, he was buried at Wantage, in Berkhſhire, where he was vicar.

Elias Wrench, M.A. was inſtituted on the 22d of March, 1598, and afterwards rector of Laſſington, and of Rudford, both in Glouceſterſhire, which he held to the time of his death; which happening in 1633, he was buried in the cathedral, near the entrance into the choir, and had this inſcription on braſs over him; but the ſtone to which the braſs was fixed is now taken away. The ſtone ('tis probable) was removed ſome years paſt to the weſt cloiſter.

Hic quod reliquum eſt de corpore Eliæ Wrench hujus eccleſiæ per annos 34 prebendarii, Chriſtum morte ſuſcitaturum expectat.

Nuntius æterni verbi ſincerus Elias,
Æquo ſervavit tramite pacis iter.
Cœleſtem conſtante viam pietate ſecutus,
Speq; fideq; ratis, amplior ardet amor.

Obiit ætatis 71, Octo: 4^{to}, anno ſalutis 1633.

John Engliſh, D.D. ſucceeded him here and in the rectory of Rudford. He was preſented the 4th of November, 1633, installed the 22d of April following, and died before the reſtoration. At the eaſt end of the chancel of the church of Cheltenham, in this county, is the following epitaph, on a table of free-ſtone, for his wife and daughter:

The ſad memorial of John Engliſh, D^r. In divinitie, to Jane, his moſt deare wife, daughter to the H^{lc}. Elizth. Lady Sandys, baroneſſe de la Vine, comit. Southton, from whom he was divorced by eighteen months cloſe imprifonm^t. which ſoon after cauſed her death, on Augst. 8th, 1643: and to Marie, his 2^d daughter, who decaſed Oct^r. 25 following.

John Engliſh S ^{acri} ^{anctæ} } V { ^{erbi} ^{eritatis} } ſtudioſus.
empiternæ } itæ }

J. E.

Thomas Warmſtry, D.D. rector of Minchin-Hampton, in this county, was preſented July the 27th, and installed Auguſt the 19th, 1660; and dying October the 30th, 1665, being about ſixty years old, was buried in the cathedral of Worcester, of which he was dean.

Memoriæ dicatum, Thomæ Warmſtrej, S. S. Theol. Dr. decani olim Wigorn. Strenuus hic eccleſ. Anglic. hyperaſpites, pietatis æmulandæ, fidelitatis indelibatæ, Deo ſuum Cæſarique donavit. Cujus hospitalitatem ad majorum munificentiam compositam ſenſerunt pauperes, coluerunt peregrini, humanitatem ſtupuit quicquid humanum eſt, charitatem quicquid in homine divinum eſt Paulinum illum etiam etiamnum inculcat, Imitatores mei eſtote. I Cor. xi. 1.

Hujus poſthumæ concionis vixit ad exemplar, et ſublimato poſt ſæcula pulvere, redintegratum corporis ſumet amictum, iterum concionaturus vel in obſequium tui, vel in judicium viator. 30^{mo} 8^{bris} die deceſſit, anno ſalutis noſtræ 1665. Ætatis ſuæ circa ſexageſſimum.

Thomas Vyner, B.D. rector of Staunton, in this county, was installed November the 20th, 1665, and being promoted to the deanery of this church,

Abraham Gregory, M.A. afterwards D.D. one of the king's chaplains, rector of Cowley, and vicar of Churcham, both in the county of Glouceſter, and præcentor of Landaff, was installed July the 31ſt, 1671; and dying, was buried in the eaſt cloiſter of this cathedral, near the old chapter-house door, with this inſcription on his grave-ſtone:

Hic ad terram reverſum eſt quicquid Terreſtre fuit ABRAHAMI GREGORY, S. T. P. qui cathedralem hanc eccleſiam per 19 annos canonicus digniſſimus, eruditione ſumma ac moribus ſpectatiſſimis ornavit. Vir eximia ac minime ſucata in Deum pietate, et inviſta erga eccleſiam anglicanam (hinc illæ lacrymæ) conſtantia: Aſſiduam magis in paſtorali munere diligentiam, propenſiorem in egenos animum, apertioſorem manum, ſinceriorem in colendis amicitiis fidem, in collegii hujusce commodis promovendis impenſius ſtudium, ſtrictiorem erga omnes juſtitiam charitate melius temperatam, inter ſibi ſuperſtites vix reliquit: Talis cum eſſet, indigno huic ſæculo, tam immatura morte ereptum, minus mirabere ſed magis dolebis. Obiit Julij 29, anno Domini 1690, Ætatis ſuæ 47.

At the upper part of the ſtone are theſe arms. Two bars, in chief a lion paſſant.

John Newton, M.A. ſucceeding, was installed on the 24th of September, 1690; and dying, was buried in the chancel of St. Nicholas's church in this city, on the ſouth ſide of which is a ſmall monument erected for him, with this inſcription:

Hic jacet R. vir JOHANNES NEWTON, A.M. eccleſiæ Anglicanæ preſbyter, olim aulae de Clare, apud Cantabr. ſocius, et eccleſiæ S^t Martini apud Leiceſtrenſes, vicarius; deinde eccleſiæ cathedralis Glouceſt. prebendarius, et eccleſiæ de Taynton, in agro Glouc. rector digniſſimus. Vir, dum vixit, erga Deum pius, erga homines benevolus et beneficus: Amicus fidus, vicinus utilis et innocuus, paſtor ſedulus, maritus et pater amantiffimus, et ſuis chariſſimus: Qui demum, LXXIII annorum pondere, variſq; infirmitatibus gravatus, deſideratus obiit, Sept. XX, MDCCXI.

And

And these arms. Argent, on a cheveron azure, three garbs Or, impaling per fefs sable, and argent, three elephants heads with their proboscides.

Richard Blechindon, LL. D. the first provost of Worcester college in Oxford, (called before Gloucester hall) was installed September the 28, 1711.

Joseph Atwell, D. D. rector of Exeter college, Oxford, upon Dr. Blechindon's death, was admitted in the year 1736. He was also prebendary of York, and Southwell, and chancellor of Norwich, rector of Oddington, and vicar of Fairford, both in this county. He died in the year 1768, and was succeeded by George Smythe, A. M. October 14, the same year; who resigning, John Sleech, A. M. was instituted August the 26th, 1769.

Third Stall.

John Rodley, B. D. was admitted at the foundation, the 3d of September, 1541; but dying, or being amoved soon after his nomination, Thomas Kingswood^a, who had been a monk of the abbey, occurs March the 28th, 1542. He died about August, 1559, and was buried in this cathedral, being then vicar of Churcham and rector of Taynton, in this county.

Richard Cheiney, B. D. was made prebendary in 1559, and was advanced to the bishoprick in the year 1562.

Robert Johnson, M. A. was instituted June the 3d, 1562, and died the same year, possessed also of Churcham vicarage, in this county.

Arthur Saule, M. A. sometime fellow of Magdalen college in Oxford, and prebendary of Bristol, was instituted on the 3d of June, 1562; and dying in 1585, possessed of this dignity, of a prebend in the church of Bristol, of the prebend of Bedmynster and Redclive in the church of Salisbury; of the vicarage of Berkeley, and rectory of Deinton, in this county, was buried in Bristol cathedral, near the steps to the communion table, with an inscription on his grave-stone, in part defaced, as follows:

Here lyeth buried Arthur Sawle, sometye prebendary of this church, from his youth up zealous in the gospel. In the days of heresie he left his contry for confessing of the trueth. In this blessed tyme of her majesty he did long preache the word ——— Passed the age of ——— years, he departed this miserable world very constantly, yielding his body to the yerthe, from whence he came, and commytting his fowle to God who gaue it; wyth whom he liveth everlastingly.

Lawrence Bridger, M. A. succeeded about the year 1586, and resigning his stall five years before his death, was buried at Slimbridge, in this county, where the following inscription is on his grave-stone:

Here lyeth the body of Lawrence Bridger, who was above 40 years rector of this parish. He was buried the 18th day of October 1630.

John Wood, M. A. afterwards B. D. was installed November 23, 1625, and by his will, dated September the 6th, 1639, gave to the mayor and burgeses of Gloucester, a yearly rent charge of 10*l.* 13*l.* 4*d.* for ever out of his lands in Dimmock, in this county, to pay 10*l.* of it to the minister of Alstone in the parish of Overbury, in Worcestershire, for a lecture sermon there, and to keep the remaining 13*s.* 4*d.* for their care and trouble.

Gilbert Osborne, B. D. rector of Withington, in this county, was installed March the 10th, 1639, and was buried at Withington, with this inscription on his monument, on the south side of the chancel.

M. S. viri reverendi Gilberti Osborne, S. T. B. prebendarii ecclesie cathedralis Gloucestr. necnon rectoris de Withington; qui cum in temporibus plusquam difficillimis, egregium charitatis exemplar, grandeque fidei specimen dedisset, et in omnibus vitam ασπιλον η ανεπιτητον egisset; in beatorum consortium lubens secessit. Anna, domini Richardi Osborne, baronetti de Knocknam, Hibernie, filia, moestissima relicta, amoris erga defunctum conjugem, et moestitie pignus, hoc, lachrimis humidum, erexit marmor. Obijt Feb. 16, Aetatis 56, A. D. 1656.

Εἰς ἐμὲ ὄρων οὐσεως ἔστο.

Disce ab hoc uno esse mori beatum,
Vita cujus mors erat, et sepultus
Prædicet; vivens, moriens, vocetur
Jure sacerdos.
Norma vivebat pietatis; hoc stet
Marmor, ut postea, homines futuri
Sciverint, hæc pessima secula ferre Ecclesiastem.

Thomas Washbourne, M. A. (afterwards D. D.) rector of Dumbleton, in this county, was nominated to succeed Gilbert Osborne in 1643, who resigned. But his installation being thought irregular, he was presented again on the 23d of July, and installed the 7th of August, 1660. Dying on the 6th of May, 1687, he was buried in the Lady's chapel in this cathedral, near the north wall; against which there is a small monument for him with the following inscription:

Charissimis necnon fraternis, immiscet cineres, eheu! theologus vere christianus, vere primitivus, Thomas Washbourne, S. T. P. eccl. cath. Glouc. per annos 44 prebendarius. Suum hoc humili titulo inscribens monumentum, Primus peccatorum, minimus ministrorum Dei: Plenus dierum, liberorum, curarum, non ita (semper enim calcavit) divitiarum, anno salutis 1687, Aetatis 80, spiritum in manus creatoris tradidit, gloriosam in Christo expectans resurrectionem.

At the top of the monument are these arms: Argent, a fefs gules, charged with three cinque foils of the first, between six martlets of the second. Impaled with Or, between two bars sable, three crosses fitchy of the first.

Luke Beaulieu, B. D. on Dr. Washbourne's death, was installed on the 21st of May, 1687. He died about the end of May, 1723, and was buried at Whitchurch, co. Oxon, where he was rector, as he was also prebendary of St. Paul's, London. His successor was Nathaniel Lye, D. D. archdeacon of Gloucester; who taking this in exchange for a prebend of Bristol, was installed July the 3d, 1723; and upon his death

^a Kingswode, by his last will, dated August the 30th, 1559, desires that his body may be buried in the cathedral, and among other things bequeathed to the maintenance of the west bridge 10*l.* to the poor of the Margarets 40*s.* to the poor of St. Bartholomews 5*l.* to the poor of the city 4*l.*

Samuel Salter, M. A. succeeded him in the year 1737; and resigning, Samuel Woolley, A. M. was instituted February the 8th, 1744; who dying, was succeeded by Charles Bertie, A. M. November 28, 1764.

Fourth Stall.

James Vaughan, M. A. appointed at the foundation on the 3d of September, 1541. Upon his death, May 8, 1546, John Williams, LL.D. chancellor of the diocese, succeeded him, and died in the year 1558.

Christopher Yaxley was probably the next in succession; for he occurs in 1560. In his will dated February 26, 1569, he appoints to be buried at White-chapel in London, in the chancel of his parish; having, three years before his death, resigned this dignity to Griffith Williams, who was instituted June the 16th, 1567.

William Shingleton, M. A. vicar of Thornbury in this county, upon the death of Mr. Williams, was instituted December the 21st, 1573, and occurs in the beginning of the year 1594.

John Robinson also occurs about the end of the year 1594.

Edward Muns, M. A. of Peter-house, Cambridge, was presented July the 15th, 1597, and upon his resignation, Edmund Bracegirdle, rector of Stowel, and vicar of Chedworth, in this county, was instituted November the 13th, 1600, and died in 1601-2.

Peter Cocks, M. A. of Magdalen college, Oxon, rector of Cleeve, in this county, was instituted in 1603, and in 1612, was buried at Cleeve.

Thomas Anian, M. A. afterwards D. D. and president of Corpus Christi college in Oxford, was presented in 1612. In 1613, he resigned the rectory of Deinton, in this county, and dying, was buried on the 17th of July, 1632, in the cathedral of Canterbury, where he was prebendary; upon whose death,

Gilbert Sheldon, B. D. was installed the 26th of February following; and being made bishop of London, in 1660, Richard Harwood, D. D. son of Richard Harwood of this city, where he received his grammar learning, was installed on the 11th of November, 1660, and died in 1669, being rector of Wick Rington, and of Rudford. He was buried at St. Michael's in this city, without any memorial.

William Washbourn, M. A. was installed May the 8th, 1669, and dying on the 28th of November, 1675, was buried in the Lady's chapel, by the north wall near his brother Dr. Washborne, and has a monument erected for him, with this inscription:

Sacrum memoriz viri admodum reverendi, Gulielmi Washborne, A. M. eccl. cath. Glouc. dignissimi prebendarii, coll. Oriensis, Oxon. focii et ornamenti. Qui post vitam summa cum animi erga Deum pietate, ecclesiam Anglicanam fideinque catholicam constantia, amicos fidelitate, egenos minime mendicantes charitate, omnes candore, transactam; precibus magis quam morbis laborans, genibus flexis, Deo spiritum emisit, Novemb. 28, ann. Ætatis 60, Salutis 1675.

Over it are these arms. Argent, a fess gules charged with three cinque foils of the first, between six martlets of the second; a mullet sable in chief, for difference.

Edward Fowler, M. A. afterwards D. D. was installed February the 19th, 1675; and upon his being promoted to the bishoprick, Benjamin Barnet, M. A. afterwards D. D. was installed July the 19th, 1691; and dying, was buried at Plumsted, in Kent, where he had been vicar.

Robert Cook, M. A. rector of Little Wittenham, in the county of Berks, was installed on the 27th of November, 1707. He was also installed archdeacon of Oxford, April the 24th, 1724; and dying about the beginning of August, following, was buried in the little chapel of Highnam, without any monument. He was succeeded here by

Anthony Ellis, M. A. afterwards D. D. in the year 1724. He was incumbent of a church in the old jury London; vicar of Great Marlow, Bucks; and afterwards bishop of St. Davids. He is buried near bishop Benson, and a neat small monument is erected to his memory against the south wall, on the left hand of the great porch at the entrance of the church. To him succeeded Alexander Malet, A. M. February 26, 1761.

Fifth Stall.

Edward Bennet, a monk, and the receiver of the abbey, was appointed at the foundation September 3, 1541. He died in the year 1546, being also vicar of Badgworth, in this county.

Richard Mounslow*, the king's chaplain, and last abbat of Winchcombe, in this county, was presented November the 14th, 1546. Upon the dissolution of his abbey, a yearly pension of ^b 140*l.* and forty loads of fire-wood out of Depewood were assigned him by the king's commissioners 21st December, 31^o H. 8. and in 1553, occurs only with an abatement of 40*l.* on account of some preferment from the king. He was sometime rector of Notgrove, in this county; a commissioner to cardinal Pool, for visiting the diocese and chapter of Gloucester, 1554, 1556, 1557; and dying in 1558, was probably buried in the cathedral, according to his will.

Walter Jones, M. A. afterwards D. D. archdeacon of Brecknock, and prebendary of Westminster, was presented January the 15th, 1559. He was sometime rector of St. John's in this city, vicar of Painswick, in Gloucestershire, and pre-

* A MS. now in my custody affirms, that his pension was 140*l.* not 160*l.* as Mr. Willis says, by patent dated the 21st of January, 31^o H. 8. Whilst he was lord abbat he was frequently called Ancelm, alias Mounslow, but after the dissolution of that abbey, he occurs only by the name of Mounslow.

^b Richard Mounslowe, priest and prebendary of Gloucester, by his last will dated the 13th of August, and proved the 27th of the same month, 1558, desires that his body may be buried in the cathedral there, and bequeaths to Mr. Turbet, parson of Halleton, his furred gown, to Mr. Alfyld, schoolmaster, 20*s.* and his second gown, to the petty canons 40*d.* a piece, to every single man 20*d.* to every chorister 8*d.*

centor of Hereford; and dying in the year 1573, was buried in that cathedral, without any memorial.

Thomas Philips, upon Dr. Jones's death, was instituted July the 18th, 1573, and occurs in 1579.

Roger Green, rector of Dowdeswell, occurs in 1585, and upon his resignation,

Samuel Proctor, M.A. was instituted August the 3d, 1586, but he also resigning,

William Loe, M.A. afterwards D.D. the king's chaplain, and vicar of Churcham, in the county of Gloucester, was instituted on the 30th of September, 1602, and died at Pultney in Surry, in the year 1648.

Hugh Naish, M.A. afterward D.D. was installed on the 10th of September, 1660; and upon his death, being rector of Harlaxton, in the county of Lincoln, Afahel King, M.A. was installed April the 1st, 1676, and died about two years afterwards, being rector of Deinton, in the county of Gloucester.

Ralph Cudworth, D.D. was instituted on the 22d, and installed the 25th of May, 1678, and was buried in Christ college chapel, Cambridge; where is this inscription for him:

Here lyeth the body of Dr. Ralph Cudworth, late master of Christ college; about thirty-four years Hebrew professor, and a prebendary of Gloucester. He died June 26, 1688, in the 71st year of his age.

Richard Duke, M.A. was installed on the 7th of July, 1688, and died in 1710. He was rector of Witney in Oxfordshire, and chaplain in ordinary to queen Anne; and was succeeded in his prebend, by Christopher Baynes, M.A. rector of Farmington, who was installed March the 25th, 1711. He was buried in the chancel at Farmington, where is this inscription for him.

C. B. hujus ecclesie rector, obiit 23 die Septembris, Ann. Dom. 1718. Ætatis suæ 53.

Matthew Pantling, D.D. master of Pembroke college in Oxford, was installed on the 18th of November, 1718. By virtue of the act of parliament before mentioned, and this being the first stall that became vacant after that act, it was therefore annexed to Pembroke college. He also succeeded Mr. Baynes in the rectory of Colne-Rogers, in the county of Gloucester.

John Ratcliff, B.D. afterwards D.D. on Dr. Pantling's death, succeeded him in the places before mentioned in 1738.

Sixth Stall.

John Huntley, last prior of Tanridge, in Surrey, was appointed at the foundation September the 3d, 1541.

Richard Ramsey, alias Hawling, M.A. rector of Shenington, in the county of Gloucester, occurs in the year 1558, and was deprived in 1559.

Guy Eaton, or Heton, formerly chaplain to bishop Hooper, and archdeacon of Gloucester, was installed in the year 1559, and resigned in 1571. He was sometime vicar of Great Barrington, and rector of Horton, in this county; and upon his resignation,

John Angel, M.A. was instituted the 28th of November, 1571. He was vicar of Wroughton, in Wilts; and dying in 1577, was succeeded by

Anthony Higgins, who was instituted June the 30th, 1577. He was sometime rector of Sutton under Brailes, and of Lechampton, and vicar of Campden, and of Painswick in this county; and dying in 1578, was succeeded by Thomas Cooke, M.A. who was instituted the 21st of March, 1578; and upon his death

Robert Alfield, or Aufield, M.A. was instituted February the 18th, 1579, who died in the year 1583, being rector of Bourton on the water, and of Barnsley, in this county.

Ralph Cooke, alias Eaton, occurs in the year 1585, and died in 1587, being rector of Kemerton, and of Wick Rifington, in this county.

William Wingfield, rector of Buckland, in this county, was instituted July the 5th, 1587.

Adrian Saravia, D.D. was presented August the 22d, 1591. He was afterwards made prebendary of Canterbury, and resigned this. Whereupon, Henry Aisgill, M.A. was instituted November the 19th, 1599. He died on the 18th of June, 1622, and was buried in the church-yard of Down Hatherly, in this county, with this inscription on his monument.

Hic jacet sepultus venerabilis vir Henricus Aisgill, ecclesie cathedr. Menevensis cancellarius, Gloucestr. prebendarius, necnon hujus parochie vicarius, qui obiit in domino Junii 18, A. D. 1622.

Est decus hic tumulo, non hic se jactat Apelles,

Nam magnum jacet hic pauperis auxilium.

Se sua rostra carent, diserta hunc pulpita lugent,

Tam pius et constans concionator erat.

Non sibi mors tristis, animo maturus et annis,

Fatalem falcem non timuit, petiit.

Nec tandem moritur, sed victa morte resurget,

Et sua, magna licet, gloria major erit.

Thomas Isles, D.D. was instituted on the 13th of July, 1622; and dying in 1649, was buried without any memorial, at Christ church college in Oxford, where he was canon.

Robert Harris, M.A. was installed September the 24th, 1660.

Francis Jacob was admitted January the 17th, 1662.

Anthony Andrews, M.A. vicar of Standish, in this county, was installed the 20th of November, 1665, and dying in the year 1678, was buried at Harsfield, in the county of Gloucester, where he was vicar, under a stone, just without the rails of the altar, with this inscription:

Hic jacet Antonius Andrews, cler. qui obiit 4 die Septembris, 1678.

George Bull, M.A. rector of Siddington St. Mary, and vicar of Siddington St. Peter, in this county, was installed October the 9th, 1678. He was afterwards presented to the degree of D.D. by the university of Oxford, and being at length preferred to the see of St. David's, resigned his prebend to his son, Robert Bull, B.A. who was installed on the 27th of December, 1705. He was afterwards rector of Tortworth, vicar of Churcham, in this county, and D. D.

Nathaniel Templeman, M.A. upon his death succeeded him in 1729.

These six presbyter prebendaries and canons have each of them a house allotted to him out of the monastery; and yearly on the 30th of November one of them is chosen sub-dean, another the receiver, and a third the treasurer. The yearly salary of each of them is 20*l.* and by other accidental profits about 100*l.* more.

Beside a dean and six prebendaries, king Henry the Eighth appointed six minor-canons; out of whom were chosen, The precentor, the sacrist, the deacon, and the sub-deacon. The king also appointed the chief school-master, the under school-master, or usher; the organist, or master of the choristers; six lay-clerks, or singing men; eight choristers, four alms men, two door-keepers, or virgerers; one butler, one cook, and one under cook.

The six minor-canons, at the restoration, were reduced to four; and have each of them a house, and a salary of 20*l.* per annum.

The six lay-clerks, or singing men, have now each of them a house, and 10*l.* per annum.

The eight choristers have each 5*l.* per annum.

As the great refectory is now quite demolished, and the uses in which 'twas employ'd are laid aside, the places of butler, cook, and under cook have not been filled for several years. But, beside the offices before named, they now choose an auditor, a chapter-clerk, and two sub-sacrist.

PRINCIPAL REGISTERS.

John Tayler, alias Barker, occurs soon after the foundation of the bishoprick, and August the 31st, 1569.

Richard Hands*, was appointed for sixty-one years on the 21st of February, 12^o Eliz. but he conveyed his right to John Jones, who (as 'tis on his monument) was register to eight several bishops of this diocese, who must have been the bishops Cheiney, Bullingham, Goldsborough, Ravis, Parry, Tompson, Smith, and Goodman. He died in 1630.

Henry Jones, and Edward (called also Gabriel) Goodman, held the office together, before

Owen Brigstock, and William Brigstock had a patent granted them the 29th of January, 1660, for their lives. Owen Brigstock dying, his son William resigned; and thereupon Richard Fowler, LL. B. son of bishop Fowler, had a patent granted him the 5th of April, and confirmed the 7th, 1698. Upon his resignation,

Thomas Stephens, esq; and Edward Stephens, his son, had a grant of this office the 21st of March, 1712, which was confirmed the 25th of March, 1713; and upon their deaths

William Mount was presented to this office October 19, 1736. But the Reverend John Benfon, A.M. was admitted joint patentee with him in 1759; the survivor to enjoy the whole. In 1770, Mr. Mount died, and left Mr. Benfon sole patentee; but in the same year, Ralph Warburton Allen, esq; son to the bishop, was made joint patentee with him, and they now enjoy this office together.

The SCHOOL of the CATHEDRAL, commonly called the COLLEGE SCHOOL.

There was antiently a grammar-school in the abbey, and upon the foundation of the chapter, the abbey library was converted to a school. Elizabeth Wilshire, widow, repaired it, and made it more convenient for that purpose, which was gratefully expressed in an inscription set up in the year 1587, that remained for many years afterwards.

The master of this school has the yearly stipend of 20*l.* and a house; and the usher has 10*l.* a year and a house. Mr. Wheeler, in 1686, began the establishing a library in it for the use of the scholars, who also enjoy part of the common orchard of the abbey.

MASTERS.

Robert Aufield occurs 1558, 1563.

Tobias Sandford occurs 1576.

Thomas Wastel, or Wastal, occurs 1580.

Elias Wrench, M.A. occurs 1588, 1594.

William Loe.

Thomas Potter occurs 1605, 1610.

John Clark occurs 1612, 1613.

John Langley, M.A. admitted March 9, 1617, and occurs 1635.

Thomas Widdows occurs 1636, but he might then be an assistant to Langley. For Mr. Walker, in his Sufferings of the Clergy, says, that Thomas Widdows, A.M. was made master of this school in 1640, and was soon turned out for his loyalty.

William Ruffel lies buried in St. Michael's church in this city, where, upon a small monument is the following inscription:

Justæ memoriæ Gulielmi Ruffel, scholæ collegialis in hac civitate archidiaconi; eruditione et pietate, necnon singulari aptitudine ad pueros in iis instituendos, insignissimi: Cujus reliquiæ, non sine magno reip. literariæ damno, et communi, tam totius agri et civit. Gloucestrensis, quam uxoris, liberorum, et scholarium, merore et planctu, hic reconduntur, Julii 9^o, anno Ætat. 42, Salut. 1659. in spe gloriolæ resurrectionis.

Benjamin Master, elected 1659.

John Gregory, elected April 9, 1660, occurs 1673. and Oliver Gregory, M.A. elected August 29, 1673.

* Hands, formerly register to the bishop, lived an alderman of the city of Gloucester only twenty-one days, dying of the plague on the 24th of August, 35^o Eliz. (1593).

Maurice Wheeler, M. A. September 11, 1684, was afterwards prebendary of Milton manor, in the cathedral of Lincoln; and dying on the 6th of October, 1727, aged 79, being then rector of Thorp Mandevill, in the county of Northampton, was buried at Warpenham, in that county, of which also he had been rector.

Benjamin Newton, M. A. upon Wheeler's resignation, was appointed.

William Alexander, M. A. rector of Colebourn, removed from the grammar-school at Cheltenham, was admitted September the 22d, 1718. He was vicar of Hartpury, and dying on the 1st of May, 1742, was buried in the church of St. Mary de Crypt, when Edward Sparkes, B. A. late usher of this school, and fellow of Trinity college in Cambridge, succeeded him, both in this school and the vicarage, and is the present master.

USHERS.

John Lightfoot occurs 1563, and was instituted into Bisley vicarage June 11, 14^o Eliz. 1572.

Francis Peerson occurs 1576.

Francis Arnold occurs 1594.

Thomas Wood occurs 1605.

Thomas Loyd occurs 1607, 1610, and was instituted into Harescomb and Pitchcomb rectory October 31, 1612.

Christopher Prichard occurs 1612, 1613.

Daniel Williams, admitted October 14, 1618.

Thomas Daniel, elected October 8, 1621.

Gyles Workman, B. A. elected June 23, 1628.

Thomas Widdows, M. A. elected November 3, 1635.

Christopher Prior, B. A. elected November 13, 1635.

John Graile occurs 1635.

Richard Lovel, B. A. elected March 7, 1637.

William Collins occurs 1638.

William Elbridge, B. A. elected May 21, 1639, and was licenced to Cirencester curacy March 29, 1644, and instituted in Winston rectory, 1648.

— Batten, who resigned, whereupon

— Bays was elected in 1659.

Abraham Gregory occurs 1661, and 1665.

Nathaniel Lye, M. A. admitted August 7, 1671.

Thomas Trippet, LL. B. elected January 4, 1674, occurs 1679.

John Hilton, M. A. curate of St. Nicholas, but being instituted into Stonchouse vicarage March the 6th, 1707, resigned the school.

Henry Abbot, M. A. upon Hilton's resignation, was appointed. He was afterwards vicar of Longney.

Jeremiah Butt, usher of the grammar-school at Cheltenham, was installed (or admitted) September 22, 1718; and being made vicar of Sherston, in the county of Wilts, left this place.

Joseph Gegg, B. A. upon Butt's resignation, was admitted in 1727.

Edward Sparkes, B. A. upon Gegg's removal, was admitted in 1739.

John Palmer, B. A. upon Sparkes's resignation, was admitted in 1742.

Charles Bishop, M. A. succeeded John Palmer, and is the present usher.

Of the CATHEDRAL CHURCH.

AN account has been already given of the original building, and gradual increase of this noble edifice, which was the antient abbey-church of Saint Peter; but it will be convenient to recapitulate some of the particulars.

Aldred, bishop of Worcester, pulled down the old church, which was decay'd, and building a fine new one, dedicated it to St. Peter in the year 1058, which was intirely burnt down in 1088. The next year abbat Serlo rebuilt it from the foundation. Several times afterwards it suffered from fire, but perhaps was never totally destroyed. Henry Foliot, the twelfth abbat, built a handsome tower in 1237, and vaulted part of the church; and sometime before his death, began a new tower at the west end, on the south part of the front, which John de Felde, one of his successors, finished.

But we must date the origin of this noble edifice, in the form we now see it, from the death of king

Edward the Second, who was buried here, at whose tomb such vast offerings were made, as enabled the succeeding abbats to raise a more magnificent pile. This they did at several times with the contribution and assistance of the gentlemen in the neighbouring country, as the Cliffords, Throckmortons, Despencers, Pauncefoots, Boters of Sudely, and others, whose arms, together with those who had formerly been friends to the abbey, were painted on the glass windows for a memorial of their benefactions.

This great work was begun by abbat Thokey, who rebuilt the south aisle in 1318, and his successor John Wigmore rebuilt St. Andrew's, supposed to be the north transept or cross aisle. Adam de Staunton new vaulted the choir, and built the stalls on the prior's side, and his brother John rebuilt St. Thomas's altar. Thomas Horton succeeding, made the high altar, and presbytery, above the choir; and Walter Frowcester, a succeeding abbat,

Maurice Wheeler, M. A. September 11, 1684, was afterwards prebendary of Milton manor, in the cathedral of Lincoln; and dying on the 6th of October, 1727, aged 79, being then rector of Thorp Mandevill, in the county of Northampton, was buried at Warpenham, in that county, of which also he had been rector.

Benjamin Newton, M. A. upon Wheeler's resignation, was appointed.

William Alexander, M. A. rector of Colebourn, removed from the grammar-school at Cheltenham, was admitted September the 22d, 1718. He was vicar of Hartpury, and dying on the 1st of May, 1742, was buried in the church of St. Mary de Crypt, when Edward Sparkes, B. A. late usher of this school, and fellow of Trinity college in Cambridge, succeeded him, both in this school and the vicarage, and is the present master.

USHERS.

John Lightfoot occurs 1563, and was instituted into Bisley vicarage June 11, 14^o Eliz. 1572.

Francis Peerson occurs 1576.

Francis Arnold occurs 1594.

Thomas Wood occurs 1605.

Thomas Loyd occurs 1607, 1610, and was instituted into Harescomb and Pitchcomb rectory October 31, 1612.

Christopher Prichard occurs 1612, 1613.

Daniel Williams, admitted October 14, 1618.

Thomas Daniel, elected October 8, 1621.

Gyles Workman, B. A. elected June 23, 1628.

Thomas Widdows, M. A. elected November 3, 1635.

Christopher Prior, B. A. elected November 13, 1635.

John Graile occurs 1635.

Richard Lovel, B. A. elected March 7, 1637.

William Collins occurs 1638.

William Elbridge, B. A. elected May 21, 1639, and was licenced to Cirencester curacy March 29, 1644, and instituted in Winston rectory, 1648.

— Batten, who resigned, whereupon

— Bays was elected in 1659.

Abraham Gregory occurs 1661, and 1665.

Nathaniel Lye, M. A. admitted August 7, 1671.

Thomas Trippet, LL. B. elected January 4, 1674, occurs 1679.

John Hilton, M. A. curate of St. Nicholas, but being instituted into Stonchouse vicarage March the 6th, 1707, resigned the school.

Henry Abbot, M. A. upon Hilton's resignation, was appointed. He was afterwards vicar of Longney.

Jeremiah Butt, usher of the grammar-school at Cheltenham, was installed (or admitted) September 22, 1718; and being made vicar of Sherston, in the county of Wilts, left this place.

Joseph Gegg, B. A. upon Butt's resignation, was admitted in 1727.

Edward Sparkes, B. A. upon Gegg's removal, was admitted in 1739.

John Palmer, B. A. upon Sparkes's resignation, was admitted in 1742.

Charles Bishop, M. A. succeeded John Palmer, and is the present usher.

Of the CATHEDRAL CHURCH.

AN account has been already given of the original building, and gradual increase of this noble edifice, which was the antient abbey-church of Saint Peter; but it will be convenient to recapitulate some of the particulars.

Aldred, bishop of Worcester, pulled down the old church, which was decay'd, and building a fine new one, dedicated it to St. Peter in the year 1058, which was intirely burnt down in 1088.

The next year abbat Serlo rebuilt it from the foundation. Several times afterwards it suffered from fire, but perhaps was never totally destroyed. Henry Foliot, the twelfth abbat, built a handsome tower in 1237, and vaulted part of the church; and sometime before his death, began a new tower at the west end, on the south part of the front, which John de Felde, one of his successors, finished.

But we must date the origin of this noble edifice, in the form we now see it, from the death of king

Edward the Second, who was buried here, at whose tomb such vast offerings were made, as enabled the succeeding abbats to raise a more magnificent pile. This they did at several times with the contribution and assistance of the gentlemen in the neighbouring country, as the Cliffords, Throckmortons, Despencers, Pauncefoots, Boters of Sudely, and others, whose arms, together with those who had formerly been friends to the abbey, were painted on the glass windows for a memorial of their benefactions.

This great work was begun by abbat Thokey, who rebuilt the south aisle in 1318, and his successor John Wigmore rebuilt St. Andrew's, supposed to be the north transept or cross aisle. Adam de Staunton new vaulted the choir, and built the stalls on the prior's side, and his brother John rebuilt St. Thomas's altar. Thomas Horton succeeding, made the high altar, and presbytery, above the choir; and Walter Frowcester, a succeeding abbat, abbat, built the cloister, which is reputed the finest in England. John Morwent made the fine porch, and west end; Thomas Seabroke built the stately tower, and the abbats Richard Hanley and William Farley built the Lady's chapel.

Most of these abbats, with some others, lie under grave-stones in the church, which I shall take occasion to speak of hereafter.

The length of the cathedral from east to west is 420 feet, and from north to south 144 feet. The breadth of the body and side ailes 84 feet, which is the height of the vaulting of the choir; but that of the cross aile is only 66 feet. The tower, which stands in the middle, is 222 feet.

At the dissolution of the abbey, when this church was converted into a cathedral, it had the good fortune to be so intirely preserved, that no conventual church in the kingdom, except that of Westminster, escaped so well. But by the books and papers in the custody of the bishop's register, it appears, that in the year 1576, it greatly wanted reparation, which being neglected from time to time, 'till the year 1616, when doctor Laud was appointed dean of it, there was scarcely a church in England so much in decay; therefore the doctor procured an act of the chapter, by which sixty pounds a year were allowed for repairing it.

During the siege and civil wars, it sustained less damage than could have been expected; but it was afterwards in danger of total destruction, from the plots and contrivances of some persons, who are said to have agreed amongst themselves for their several proportions of the plunder expected out of it.

In the year 1657, this church was granted to the mayor and burgeses of the city, at their own request; and Oliver Cromwel, under his broad seal, gave them an exemplification of it; but it is probable that before this time they had interested themselves in its preservation; for Mr. Dorney, in his 10th speech, about the year 1653, commends to the officers of the city then elected, that they would, together with others, join their shoulders to hold up the stately fabrick of the college church, the great ornament of this city, which some do say is now in danger of falling.

The Lady's Chapel has been used for early morning prayers, ever since the seats were brought hither from the choir, when that was beautified. At the east end of it was a very fine lofty altar, to which there was an ascent by three steps, whence the west end of the church might be seen without any thing to interrupt the view. Here is a large east window, the glass of which was curiously painted, but the figures are now defaced. This chapel, on the south side of which were three confessionals, as it is now certainly one of the largest in the kingdom, so at the dissolution is said to have been one of the richest, and a tradition goes that a great part of it was then gilt, and gloriously ornamented. There were battlements upon it 'till they were pulled down in the civil wars.

Several eminent persons have been buried in it, viz. Bishop Goldesborough in a little chapel on the north side. The inscription for him is to be found in p. 157.

On a grave-stone also is the following epitaph:

Hic conditur quod reliquum est Hesteræ Goldsborough
 Disce viator verum si supra fidem
 Hic jacet lectissima virgo mater matrona
 Tribus expedita viris potita tribus
 Civibus hic summis summo illo antistite
 Ecclesie quis singulis apprime vixit chara
 Rara in pietate modestia modestia pietas
 Nosce quæ non videns videns non admireris
 Munificentiam in pauperes sine arrogantia
 Non imitandam vivas dotes non æquandæ
 Fœminæ octodenas liberisque utriusque
 Tam numerosi: Sexus sobolem sine numero
 Filios egregios filias tantum non matri pares
 Hosce felices unam feliciter Aviam
 Inter amplexus omnium et pia vota omnium
 In senectute ultimâ senectam non languidam
 Et fidem spirantem & expirantem in fide
 Serviit quæ Christo in Christo obdormientem.
 An. 1622. Ætatis 80.

Bishop Nicholson's tomb is in a little chapel on the south side. For the inscription see p. 158.

In the same chapel is a raised monument of stone, and on one side of it a scroll on which is written,

O Lord into thy hands I commit my spirit.

On the other side a large coat of arms, and a man kneeling in a lawyer's gown, and over his head, Misericordias Domini in æternum cantabo.

And underneath,

Tho. Fitzwilliams late of this City, Esq; departed this Life 26. November. A. D. 1579. whose body lyeth buried under this small monument of Stone.

Robert Wise late of this City Gent. (now deceased) married with Elenor one of the Daughters of the said Thomas Fitzwilliams, by whom he had three Sons and three Daughters, viz. Thomas, Urian, Dennis; Alice, Jane and Margaret; and the said Robert Wise had also by a former Wife fifteen Sons and Daughters more, which in all were in Number one and twenty Sons and Daughters.

The said Dennis Wise, one of the Aldermen of this City, being the twentieth Child of his said Father, and sole Survivor at this Time of all the rest of his said Brethren and Sisters; He did in An. Dom. 1648. repair and amend this antient small Monument to the farther Continuance of the laudable Memory of the said Thomas Fitzwilliams his Grandfather; and the rather, for that the Monument of the said Robert Wise and the said Elenor his Wife, being detac'd and ruined by the dissolving and taking down of the Parish Church of St. Ewens, without the South Gate of this City, in the late unhappy Wars and Divisions of this Kingdom, in which Parish Church both the said Robert and Elenor, with many more of their Children and Children's Children lieth buried.

O Lord into thy Hands I commend my Spirit, O God of Truth which hast redeemed me, judge me not according to thy Righteousness, but after thy great Mercy and pity.

Against the north wall of the lady's chapel is a magnificent white marble monument for judge Powel. For the inscription see p. 119.

And against the same wall was a monument for major-general Lawrence Crawford, killed at the siege of Hereford, being commander of the Scotch army. He was buried here September the 5th, 1645. Mr. Willis observes, that the inscription, which is printed in Le Neve, justifying the rebel cause, the monument was defaced, and intirely taken down after the restoration.

On dean Viner's grave-stone is an inscription, as in p. 162.

Dr. Parsons, chancellor of the diocese, was buried in this chapel. The inscription on his grave-stone is under his name p. 164.

Dr. Thomas Washbourne was also buried here, and against the north wall is a small monument for him, with an inscription as in p. 167.

Here is a monument also for his brother William Washbourne, A. M. See p. 168.

On a grave-stone is the following inscription :

Hic jacet Jervasius Smith, Art. Magister, et reverendi in Christo patris Milonis EPI. nuper Gloucestrensis, filius natu maximus.

Doctus et infœlix juvenis matrisque patrisque
Spes equidem votis maxima forte brevi
Cæpta sub adversis dubie matura juvenus
Obtinuit bustis juncta parenta suis.
Obiit 17 Januarii 1625. Ætatis suæ 31.

Against the south wall of the Lady's chapel is the figure of a woman, in white marble, in a kneeling posture, leaning her head on her hand, and underneath this inscription :

Memoriæ sacrum.

In obitum Margeriæ Clent, Jac. Clent, generosi conjugis charissimæ, reverendique in Christo Patris Dom. Milonis Gloucestrensis Episcopi Filiarum alterius, quæ cursum in terris pie ac placide consummavit 8 die April. A. D. 1623. ætatis suæ 21.

Obsequiosa viro fuit, obsequiosa Parenti,
Et patuit miseris dextera, corque Deo.
Cætera continuos virtus rediviva per annos
Claruit ad celsum subsequiturque Polum.
Subsequiturque infans uteri sub nocte reluctans
Nec potuit lucem visere mors vetuit.

Tam illam hanc quasi pignus amoris Brigida conjux Gulielmi Clent, nuper de hac Civitate Glevensi posuit in memoriam ejus, qui obiit Octob. 10. 1655.

On the opposite side is a monument of the sister of the above person, bearing this inscription :

Elizabetha Loquitur.

Conjugis effigiem sculpsisti in marmore conjux,
Sic me immortalem te statuissè putas.
Sed Christus fuerat viventi spesque fideique :
Sic me mortalem non finit esse Deus.

Jul. 4. A. D. 1622.

Pie ac Placide ad Dominum migravit Elizabetha Williams, Joannis Williams, armigeri conjux amantissima, Doctissimi reverendique in Christo Patris D. D. Milonis Gloucest. Episcopi Filia natu minima. Annos nata XVII.

Hic jacet Carolus Sutton infans 7 dierum septimus filius Wilhelmi Sutton, cancellarii dioc. Gloucest. qui extremum clausit diem Junii 5. 1626.

Parve nec invidio sine me puer ibis ad astra
Parve nec invidias lætus ad astra sequar.

Sacred to the memory of Thomas Sutton, and also of William Sutton, Gent. whose bodies were buried Aug. 21. 1636.

Could youthful Vigor, ought that is in Man,
Have conquer'd Death, these had been victors then :
Could learned Art, or Parents Tears have given Them longer Life, they had still living been :
But God decrees ; 'tis not in human Power,
Longer to live than he hath set their hour.

Here resteth the body of Ann, late wife to Isaac Bromwich, of Framton, Esq; sole daughter of Edward Trotman, of this city, councillor of Law ; she departed this life May 26, 1628.

Here lyeth the body of Thomas Varnam, of this city, Gent. who departed this life Nov. 24, 1634.

Sacrum Memoria: Thomæ Dobbes, Generosi, unius clericorum de Banco regis, qui de vita hac migravit, 21 Feb. An. salutis humane 1635.

Sat scio justificat nullum lex tradita Mofi
Nec mea me justum jura dedere virum.
Unum Causidicum cælis habeamus Iesum.
Unus non multi sunt ibi causidici,

Causidicus Christus ; sunt causidicique fideles
Cælo, sed summi sanguine causidici.

Hic jacet Francisca, Jacobi Clent, ex hac civitate gener. Gen. conjux.

Dum pario perii, partus enixa labore
Languo, per dubias inde soluta moras
Chara meis vixi : morior natisque viroque
Chara, quibus vivis mox rediviva fruatur.
Obiit Julii 28, Anno salutis 1630. Ætatis 29.

Also here lyeth the body of William Clent, the son of James Clent, of this city, Gent. who departed this life Oct. 15, 1635.

Johannes Cholmleius mærens April 29, 1635.

Hic Audleia jacet conjux selecta Johannis
Cholmleii, lachrimis parcite ; terra gravis
Tantum corpus habet, cælum mens sanior altum
Incolit, & Christus cum redit illa redit.

Here lyeth the body of John Merro, who deceased March 23, 1636.

I once did sing in this,
Now in the Choir of Blifs.

Here lyeth Elizabeth, the wife of John Merro, who departed this life Nov. 13, 1615.

Here lyeth the body of Ann Massinger, who was wife and widow of Arthur Massinger, of this city, Gent. aged 52 years. She departed this life Oct. 21, 1636. Ætatis suæ 70.

Annæ filia Franc. Baber, LL. D. Corpusculum hic jacet in spe pene triennis ; obiit ad Dominum Aprilis 3, 1639.

Francis, second son of Francis Baber, Dr. of Laws, and Elizabeth his wife, departed this life Sept. 3, 1640, aged 22 years and 5 months : whose body resteth under this stone in hopes of a future blessed resurrection.

Exuvia hic ponuntur Eliz. filia Franc. Baber, LL. doctoris, biennis & Bimestris quas anima deposuit March 19, 1641.

Here lyeth the body of Arthur Brett, Esq; Groom of the bed-chamber unto King James ; who died July 2, 1642.

Here lyeth interred Mary Kenn, the daughter of George Kenn, Esq; who departed this life May 22, in the year of our Lord 1649, being but Nine days old.

Here lyeth the body of Francis, son of George Watson, of York, Gent. late Secretary to the honourable Col. Morgan, Governor of this City ; who departed this Life Oct. 3, A. D. 1646.

Here lyeth the body of Mary, the Daughter of Michael Straunge, Esq; first Wife of Samuel Coxwell, Gent. and afterwards of James Kyrle, Esq; who died Aug. 13, 1645.

Quem neque mœsta Calamitas, nec fallax
Rerum Terrestrium adulatio elevaret, nec
Mortis horrenda facies exterritat.

Hic jacet Jacob. Clent, Gen. qui post 70 plus minus annos laboriose pieque transactos, longo tamen fatigatus itinere immortalitatem anhelans placide occubuit An. nato Christo 1645, Sept. 5.

Depositum Jacobi Powel, generos. extincti 26 Nov. A. D. 1645, ætatis 31. hic inhumatur.

Sic ubi fata vocant nam sic quoque fata vocabunt tendimus in tumulum.

Over it his arms. Per pale, three lions rampant.

An acrostick for one William White, who died An. 1646.

W hat Man more valiant was than he that lies,
I ntombed here after his Victories :
L et such as his undaunted Courage knew,
L ive to report, and witness what is true.
I n famous Berkeley Castle he was known
A s Governor, tho' aged but twenty-one :
M aintaining still the Cause with much renown
W hich he at first for Right and Just did own.
H is Name and House since conquering William's Days,
I s registered, his Life's deserving Praise :
T ill Death at Ragland Castle, by a Wound,
E nded his Days, that so he might be crown'd.
An. 1646.

Here lyes the body of Samuel Bridger, Gent. who departed this life upon the 21st day of July, An. 1650.

Receiver of this College Rents, he paid
His Debt to Nature, and beneath he's laid,
To rest until his Summons to remove,
At the last Audit, to the Choir above.

Depositum hic Ægidii Gilby, Stemmata quem decorant Integritas, candor: Invaletudo terens quem maceravit, sic corpore deficiens temnere mundana prædidicit, requiem percipere æternam, discubiat domino. Hunc Deus adducet cum domino: Vigila, vive memor Lethi.

Obiit 26 Septembris A. D. 1650, Ætatis 29.

Here lyeth the body of Frances, daughter of John Clent, of this city, Gent. she departed this life April 4, 1652.

Here lyeth the body of Henry Robins, of this city, Gent. he departed this life in the true faith, May 8, An. 1653.

Elizabeth, third daughter of Miles Clent, Gent. and of Dorothy, his dear wife; who departed this life Jan. 15, 1654.

Within this Urne an Infant nine Months old
Is laid in Dust, God takes his purest Gold
First to himself, we all are but as Flowers
That spring and grow, and fade in a few Hours.

This stone belongeth unto William Hoar; he died Feb. 1654, aged 76.

O mortal Man that lives by Breath,
Consider thou must come to death;
And after Death all must appear,
Before God's Judgment Seat both far and near;
To give Account for what they've done,
Before of this there's none can shun.
Then whilst thou livest cry and call,
To Christ thy Saviour to pardon all;
Lest after Death it be too late,
To enter in at Peter's Gate.

Richardus filiolus Thomæ & Mariæ Browne, qui Aug. natus
6, obiit 3. annis 1654.

May 27, 1657. Hic jacet juxta fratrem Amia Browne, sex mensium Infantula. Heu quanto pro viribus sub pondere, sed est qui saxum revolvit.

Quod terrenum Johannis Futter filii Henrici Futter, Londinen-sis, Dec. 21, 1655.

Elizabetha, chara, modesta, casta, pia conjux Tho. Harvey de Larford, generosi, hic jacet deposita 15 Dec. 1657. — sic tamem alloquitur, post fata Refurgam — posuit cum lachrymis mœstissimus maritus.

Hic jacet Henricus Shaftow, Gen. natus in vico de Bramley in
Com. Surrey, denatus Gloucestræ, sepultus 13 April. ætatis suz 8, Anno Salutis nostræ 1658. Ultima dies, prima quies.

Miles, the second son of Miles Clent, of this city Gent. lyeth interred here; who died June 7, 1658.

No sooner peep'd i'th World, came out o'th Womb
Of my dear Mother, but hurried to my Tomb;
Death was my Harbinger, my Nurse the Grave,
My Life no Life, till now my God I have,
And do enjoy: Farewel fond worldly Blis
Your Joys to mine are a Parenthesis.

Reliquiæ Thomæ Browne, generosi, qui 2 die Martii, An.
salutis 1662, Ætatis suæ 45, obiit, hic sunt depositæ, sub spe non dubiæ resurrectionis ad vitam die novissimo.

Hic fuit veri microcosmus, amplis
Qui bonis cunctis placide picque
Vixit, & tandem, domino vocante, —— Exit ad illum.

Elizabeth, sole daughter of Thomas Harvey, Gent. first wife to James Powell, and second wife to Edward Harvey, Esq; lies here deposited Feb. 1662.

Twice married, once buried, here lies,
Her Body, whose sweet Soul above the Skies,
Immortalized doth rest with longing Eyes,
Expecting when the Body shall arise;
That reunited they may sympathise,
In endless Joys to all Eternities.

Memoriæ sacrum domini Johannis Vaulx, generosi episc.
Gloucestr. proregistrarrii, quod reliquum, hic inhumatur Dec.
9, 1663.

Corde vir hic patiens, vitâ probus, ore modestus,
Moribus ingenuis ingeniosus erat.
Postque moras longas, ac tardia multa,
Morte cadit corpus, cætera salva manent.

Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth, daughter of Arthur Messenger, of this city, Gent. who departed this life A. D. 1665, ætatis suz 73.

Here lyeth John, the son of Owen Brigstock, Esq; who died
Sept. 17, 1665, aged near six Years.

Uxor Georgii Wall, Rectoris de Hempsted, hic jacet cum priori conjuge Richard Marwood, hujus eccl. precentoris consepult: Dec. 23, 1665. In resurrectionem ut ἀγγελοι Luc. 20, 39.

In a chapel on the north side of the Lady's, upon the upper part of the altar, were the following arms in two rows, viz. Azure, a cross Or.
—Ermine, a cross azure.—Checky, gules and Or,
a cheveron vert within a bordure of the latter.—
France and England quarterly.—The Trinity represented by a triangle, with lines drawn from each angle to a point in the middle.—A cheveron gules.—Vert, on a canton a rose.—Or, a fess azure, in chief three roundlets of the second.—Azure, a cross
Or.—Vert, a buck's head caboshed gules.—Gules, a fess compony Or and azure.—Throckmorton.—
Checky gules and argent, a cheveron ermine.—Gules, a fess between six mullets Or.—Despencer.—Edward the Confessor.—The see of London.—Quarterly 1st and 4th England, 2d and 3d Checky Or and azure.—Montacute, earl of Sarum.—Argent, a fleur de luce between three bulls heads caboshed sable.
—Azure, a cheveron gules, between three griffins heads erased Or.—Parted per fess indented Or and azure.
—Veel.—Argent, on a cross sable a leopard's head
caboshed.—Sable, a bordure and two bars argent.— Azure, a cross Or.—On the bricks in this chapel, a fret.—A fess between six crosses crosslets, 3, 2, 1.

King James, during the time he was at Gloucester, resided at the deanery, and in the afternoon of the next day after his arrival, touched one hundred and three persons in the Lady's chapel for the king's evil. I mention this as an historical fact, and not from any persuasion of the efficacy of the royal touch, of which I leave every person to judge as may seem most reasonable.

This chapel is thirty yards long, and about ten broad.

The Choir is one hundred and forty feet long.
The high altar, to which there is an ascent of three steps, has been lately very much repaired.
On the north side are four confessionals, and on many of the bricks are the arms of king Edward the Confessor, of the abbey, and of Bridges, quartered with others.

On the bishop's seat it is thus written:

EDEL DVX
ELDADVS EFS GLOVC.
ELDO MAIOR
A : 490.

Over against the bishop's is the archdeacon's seat, where the mayor now sits on Sundays, which has no inscription over it. There are thirty-one stalls on each side, built in the time of the monastery, very regular and lofty, with Allelujab written in gold letters on each of them.

The great East Window, which is the largest in England, was finely painted, but at this time the figures are not to be distinguished. However now, or not long since, the following arms remained in it; Gules, a cheveron ermine between ten crosses

crosses patee argent.—Gules, a lion rampant, Or.—Berkley.—Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Gules, a bend Or, and argent. 2d and 3d, Azure, five diamonds Or.—Gules, a cheveron between ten cross crosslets Or.—Gules, a fess between six cross crosslets, Or.—Despencer.—Azure, on a chief two mullets Or.—Montacute.—Earl of Clare.—Earl of Oxford.—Argent, six crosses fitchee on a chief between two mullets Or.—Mortimer.—Vairy gules and Or.—Fretty, impaled with England.

In a little chapel on the south side, on the bricks are these arms, A cheveron charged with a rose flower and two lillies, between five trees, 2 and 3.—A fret.—Clare, earl of Gloucester.—Within a bordure charged with ten roundlets, a lion rampant.—A fess between six cross crosslets, 3, 2 and 1.

On the north side, even with the rails of the altar, is the effigy in free-stone of Ofric king of Northumberland, with a crown on his head, and against the wall is written, Ofricus Rex primus fundator hujus Monasterii. 681.

Robert, the eldest son of William the Conqueror, and Richard, his youngest son, were both buried in this church. Richard died in the year 1080, Robert in 1134, who having been deprived of his lands and liberty by Henry the First, a cruel and tyrannical brother, and shut up in a close prison at Cardiff, after a confinement of twenty-six years, being broke with grief and age, he resigned a miserable life for a long expected death; and his body being brought to this church, to which in his life time he had been a munificent benefactor, it was buried in the middle of the choir, where a monument was erected for him, which was lately moved into one of the little chapels on the north side of the choir, where it still continues. See p. 126.

On the south side is a shelf monument for Aldred bishop of Worcester, who built the old church. His effigy is carved in free-stone on the tomb; but whether, says Mr. Willis, this was a cœnotaph I cannot say.

On the north side opposite to bishop Aldred's, between two pillars, is a monument for abbat Parker, in the time of whose government the abbey was dissolved. His effigy, in his Pontificalibus, curiously carved in white marble, is lying along on the tomb, which was provided for him in his life time, but he was not buried in this church. See p. 139.

Above the abbat's, between two other pillars, is the tomb of king Edward the Second, who having incurred the hatred of the nation, by his blind attachment to Piers Gaveston and the two Spencers, his favourites, was taken prisoner by an army which the queen, the prince, and the nobles raised against him, and confined in Berkely castle, where he was murdered, whence his body was brought to Gloucester, and buried in the choir of the abbey church. His effigy curiously cut in alabaster lies under a very elegant canopy of free-stone. Further particulars are related in p. 126.

In a window opposite to king Edward's tomb, the letters W. P. A. are painted on the glass in many places; where also are to be seen the remains of the pictures of two bishops, or mitred abbats, and two monks; and over one of the latter is written S. T. Cant. [Sanctus Thomas Cantuar.] and E. R. [Edwardus Rex.]

Abbat Staunton was buried under a grave-stone before St. Thomas's altar.

Abbat Frowcester was buried on the south side of the choir, in a chapel at the lower end. See abbats.

On the south side of the entrance to the choir, between two pillars, is the fine tomb of abbat Seabroke, on which is his effigy in white alabaster, in his Pontificalibus; but his tomb has been moved, and the part which at first stood to the east is now placed to the north.

A little to the south of the above, under an arch, are two effigies in free-stone of Humphry Bohun, earl of Hereford, and his lady. He died 1367. and lies in armour.

Just below the ascent into the choir, on each side of it, was a fine stone skreen-work, erected by one of the abbats; and directly opposite to the entrance of the choir was a large door and an arch over it, which had a chapel with a fine altar upon it, supported by two pillars. These were taken down in the year 1741, and there is now in the room a handsome skreen of carved stonework, supported by three arches, which stand on fluted pillars four at each abutment. On a table in the middle of the skreen is this inscription: MARTINUS EPISCOPUS FECIT AN. DOM. MDCCXLI. ET CONSECRAT^s. SVE VII^{mo}.

When the workmen were making the above alteration they found in the passage three abbats, buried near the surface of the ground, in stone coffins, in their Pontificalibus, part of their gloves and apparel remaining. And another stone coffin, with a sword, a little pewter chalice, a staff and two skulls in it, which, I suppose, belonged to Sir Nicholas Gamage and his wife, who were buried near their brother abbat Gamage, who was laid near the door opening to the cloisters; and probably this abbat was one of the three above mentioned, who were all of them buried again where they were found.

Before this alteration there were five other large grave-stones found, to which brass plates were fixed, long since torn off, three of which belonged to some of the abbats.

On the south side of the choir, in the chapel belonging to the Boteler family, the letters I. B. are written on the north and south walls, the I passing thro' the B, with a crown over them; and not many years since here was a large escutcheon in wood, on which were three golden cups, the family arms.

The

The altar is much defaced, on the upper part of which was the following inscription :

HOC BAPTISTA TYROU GLOUCESTRE fecit honore
Fac hunc ergo frui Celi sine fine decore ;
Hic etiam cultor precibus memorare tuorum
Et Rex Celorum semper sit tutor eorum
Hoc Pater et flamen concordat jugiter Amen.

On a stone at the west end of the chapel it is written :

Kurie Eleison Aie
Fratris Johis Tyrou.

On a stone on the outside wall, in black letter, ✚ Hic jacet Willhelmus Pippardus vicecomes Gloucestr.

On a brass plate near the pulpit, in black letter,
Here lieth under this Stone in the Mercy of God, the body of Henry Machen, late Alderman of the City of Glostre, which died March 5, 1568,

Whose Body and Soul we wish as Love doth bynd
In Heaven with Christ a Place to find.

Near it round a free-stone,

Here lieth ——— Daughter to Henry Machen, and first married to Peter Romney, and last Wife to Thomas Best, who died May 7, 1587.

On another,

Gloriæ fundamentum Labor.

Here lieth buried the body of Peter Gouch, Gent. first Customier in the Queen's Majesty's Port of Gloucester; who deceased August 25, 1585. And Jane his Wife deceased February 4, following.

In the great Cross Aile, in St. Anthony's chapel, under the tower, is St. Anthony with his pig, and the bell painted on it. On the north side of this aile is a handsome vestry, which seems to have been built by abbat Parker, since his arms were placed on it, but now destroyed.

Here is an antient grave-stone, with the following inscription in Old Black character :

Hic jacet Robertus Stanford quondam serviens hujus Monasterii, ac specialis ac munificus Benefactor ejusdem Monasterii, qui obiit viceffimo secundo _____ Upon Stanford's grave-stone is a little brass plate with the following memorial for Mr. William Lisle, who has a monument erected for him.

Near this place lieth the body of William Lisle, Gent. who by his will gave fifty pounds a year for ever, in lands at Epney, in charity, to the parishes of St. Nicholas in Glouc. and St. Werburgh in Bristol. He died Dec. 2, 1723, aged 25.

Next to Stanford's is a grave-stone, round the verge of which it appears there have been several capital letters, long since worn out. Perhaps this stone belonged to one of the abbats Horton or Boyfield, who are said to have been buried under a flat stone in the north part of the transept, or cross aile. Abbat Wigmore also was buried in that part called St. Andrew's aile, on the south side next the choir.

At the east end of the north transept, near the door leading to the choir, was some time since a pedestal, with a large image on it, and the following inscription, lately destroy'd.—Orate pro Anima Magistri Johannis Schelton.

In this aile were buried, Thomas Lane esq; sometime recorder of this city.—Charles Hyett, esq; sometime member of parliament for it.—Richard Corsley, sometime mayor, buried Sept. 2, 1742, Ætat. 77.

Against the west wall is a tomb, with this inscription,

Memento mori.

Vayne, Vanity, witness Solomon, all is but vayne. Richard, Guy, Giles, Thomas, Thomas, Kingston, Peter, John, John, Anna, Margaret, Dorothea, Eliz. Nanfan, Catherine, Joan, John Boyer had nine sons and seven daughters by his wife Ann Boyer. John Boyer departed this life the 28 day of January, A. D. 1615. Ann Boyer departed this life upon the first day of December, An. 1613.

On a grave-stone it is thus written in black letter,

Cum Fex cum Limus cum res vilissima finus
Unde superbimus ad Terram Terra redimus.

Here lieth buried the body of John Smith, Alderman, and once mayor of this city, whose soul doth rest in the Lord, and was separated from the body July 18, 1586.

Here lieth buried Alice Woodward, widow, daughter to Thomas Winsore. She lived eighty odd years, departed this life June 5, and was buried the ninth of the same month, 1593.

Here lieth the body of John Long, Millard and Milwright, who departed this life April 16, 1596.

Here lieth buried under this stone Thomas Snead of the city of Gloucester, Mercer, who deceased October 10, Anno Dom. 1597.

On a brass plate is the following,

Here lieth interred the body of Lawrence Wilfire, Gent. sometime mayor of this city; by his vocation a clothier, wherein he did much good to the poor, and employed many poor people at work. He departed this life in the true faith of Christ A. D. 1612.

Here lieth the body of William Blackleach, Batchelor of the civil laws, Chancellor of this Diocese, for the space of 25 years, Esq; who departed this life March 24, 1617. p. 343.

For the inscription on Henry Robins, esq; see p. 119.

Here lieth buried Thomas, the Son of William B—— in Glamorganshire, near Cardiff, who died at school in this city, Oct. 15, in the year of Christ 1613. ætatis 15.

Hic jacet Egidius Coxe, Generosus, qui 17 die Octobris A. D. 1620, et ætatis suæ 55 obiit cœlebs, collatis prius per testamentum tam in hanc eccles. cathedralem quam eccles. parochialem de Santhurst, ad instituendam ibid. sacram concionem, in egenos, vias publicas, aliosque pios usus, quam in amicos et cognatos, opibus suis amplissimis.

Hic jacet corpus Gulielmi Lane, ex hac civitate, armiger. Obiit die 11 Martii, An. salutis 1620. ætatis _____

Also here lieth the Body of Ellen, the Wife of William Lane, Esq; and afterwards Wife of Christopher Capell, and William Price, both Aldermen of this city; who departed this Life Dec. 16, An. 1652.

In the south great cross aile is Mr. Richard Pates's monument, and inscription, which see in p. 118.

Over the door leading into the chapel near the present chapter-house is T. C. [Thomas Cantuariensis] and near this door was an oratory, not long since demolished.

On a little chapel behind the confessionals, are T. O. T. O. but the ragged staff which was also upon it is much defaced.

The nave or body of the church, in length 171 feet, in breadth 84, consists of a middle aile, and two side ailes, separated from the middle by two rows of pillars, eight on each side, seven of which, about seven yards in circumference each, are round, with four pillasters over them; the eighth was handsomely fluted by abbat Morwent, who built the west part of the church where these stand.

There were places for lamps in the third and fourth pillars on the north side; a handsome wooden chapel, or burying place, between the second and third pillars from the east end, on the same side; and a handsome pulpit with the letters H. G. 1609, erected by bishop Parry; but these are lately demolished.

Against the east wall, behind the wainscot, adjoining to which the dean and prebendaries had a seat, when the sermons were preached in the body of the church, was found in the year 1718 a fine old painting on oak, representing the general judgment. This picture is supposed to have lain there ever since the year 1541, and is now kept in the south cross aisle. Opposite to the above mentioned seat were others erected for the mayor and corporation; but they are now all taken down. The little chapel, commonly called the mayor's, which was inclosed with a wall or skreen, is now also laid open. In this chapel was a grave-stone with an abbat carved on it, but the stone is removed.

In the south aisle is the consistory court, railed in, on which are the arms of bishop Fowler, and chancellor Penrice.

Between the court and the great porch, against the south wall, is a neat little marble monument for doctor Ellys, (see p. 168) on which is the following inscription:

Near this place lies the body of Anthony Ellys, D.D. minister of the united parishes of St. Olaves Old Jury, and St. Martin's, Ironmonger-lane, in the city of London; 38 years prebendary in this church, 37 years consecrated bishop of St. David's, 28 Feb. 1753, who departed this life 17 Jan. 1761, aged 68 years. A person truly excellent, learned, just, benevolent, pious: To whose rare virtues and abilities adulation cannot add, envy cannot deservedly take from. He married Ann the eldest daughter of Sir Stephen Anderson, of Eyworth in the county of Bedford, Bar. whom he left with only one daughter, to lament the common loss of one of the best of mankind.

In a chapel at the upper end of the south aisle, on a white marble table supported by two Ionic pillars, this inscription:

Siste viator & a me discito quam vanæ spes sint, quam fluxa hominum gaudia: Jacet heu Catherina mea uxorum scilicet lectissima, optima; tam venusta, tam casta, tam pia, ut nihil supra; si ætas, si forma deflenda sit, si corporis animique dotes, Luctui hic nullus erit modus; marmor hoc dicavit Gulielmus Pembruge, Gen. Memorizæ suavissimæ Conjugis, quæ fato defuncta est 15 Junii, An. Ætatis 24, salutis 1690.

Against the west wall of the body of the church, is the figure of a man to the waist, with a book in his hand, and round him, I heard a voice from Heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord.

Underneath him on a tablet of black marble,

John Jones, Alderman, thrice Mayor of this City, Burgess of the Parliament at the Time of the Gunpowder-Treason; Register to eight several Bishops of this Diocese.

On a gravestone beneath,

Here lieth the Body of John Jones, Alderman, Esq; thrice Mayor of this City; who departed this Life June 1. in the sixth Year of the Reign of King Charles, 1630.

This monument which was originally inclosed in a skreen of wood, now taken down, was finished in the alderman's life time, who made some alteration in it.

Against the same wall is a marble monument for bishop Benson. But there is another elegant monument and inscription for him, as in p. 159.

On the north side of the nave, near the cross aisle, inclosed with iron palisadoes, an elegant monument of white marble, with the effigies of a man and his wife lying at length; and at their feet this inscription:

To the happy Memory of Abraham Blackleach, Gent. Son of William Blackleach, Esq; a Man not only generally beloved in his Life, but deservedly endeared to Posterity by rare Examples of seldom pattern'd Piety, exercised in his Bounty to St. Paul's in London, to this Church, to the High-Ways about, and to the Poor of this City; who laying aside the vileness of Mortality, was admitted to the Glory of Eternity Nov. 30. 1639. — Gertrude his Wife, Daughter of Ambrose Elton Esq; and Anne, Sister to Walter Lord Aston, hath erected this Monument as a Testimony of his fame, and her Observance.

On a scroll, All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field; Is. xl. 6.

Over all, these arms, Barry of six, sable and Or.

Near the above was a raised monument of stone, and the effigies of a man and woman kneeling before a desk, with their seven sons and six daughters, and this inscription:

Here lieth the Bodie of Thomas Machen Esq; late Alderman of the City of Gloucester, and thrice Mayor of the same; who departed this Life Oct. 18. 1614. in the 74th Year of his Age; and of Christian his Wife, with whom he liv'd in the State of Marriage 50 Years, and had Issue seven Sons and six Daughters; she departed this Life June 29. 1615. in the 70th Year of her Age.

Res redit, huc morimur, mors ultima linea Rerum.

Near this also on a copartment, against the wall,

In Charissimam memoriam Samuelis Browning, è Famil. de Cowley, Gen. qui obiit 3. Feb. 1676. Ætatis suæ 57. Juxta etiam defuncti jacent Liberi ejus tres per dilectissimam Uxorem Margaretam, filiam Gulielmi Selwyn de Matton, arm. viz. Margaret, Sam. Ann. Browning. In tenerimâ Ætate mortui omnes.

Near the door leading into the cloisters, on a marble copartment affixed to the wall,

To the virtuous Memory of Anne, the most entirely beloved and beloved Wife of John Hilton, Clerk, Usher of the College School; who died Feb. 26. 1691-2. Ætatis An. 30.

Meek was her Temper, Modest was her Life;

A Chast and Humble Virgin, Loyal Wife:

Her Manners graceful, pregnant was her Wit,

Her Nature amiable, her Behaviour sweet:

Her Soul adorn'd with Dove-like Innocence,

To gain a heavenly Mansion hasted hence;

And bids surviving Walkers o'er her Grave,

Love the World less, and strive their Souls to save.

Eccles. vii. 36. Remember thy End and thou shalt never do amiss.

On the same wall, a monument of marble on a tablet, between two black twisted pillars this inscription:

M. S. Juxta obdormiscit in Christo Edwardus Wright, Medicinæ Doctor, vere christianus; quippe qui naturam investigans, naturæ Deum & agnovit & veneratus est: Vir doctus, pius, severe justus; qui agris non funerandis sed sanandis nomen et sanam conciliavit. Nec tam ægrotantium crumenis, quam bonæ inhiavit valetudini. Unde nulli inimicus, inimicum non habuit præter ignorantem. In egenos usque adeo fuit beneficus, ut concilium, opem, medicamina, liberaliter et gratis suppeditavit. Dum autem aliorum sedulo curavit salutem, propriam amisit; immatura nimirum morte præreptus tristissimum hic reliquit desiderium Julii 24, A. D. 1701, ætatis 36.

Conjux superstes Memoriz viri optimi meriti hoc qualecunque Monumentum, amoris ergo, lugens mœrensque poni curavit.

In the north aisle, not far from the west end, was a painting of the twelve apostles, but this is destroyed. Underneath is an escutcheon containing the following rebus: The capital letter T, on the right of which a sword pendant, piercing a heart, conjoined with the wing of a dove in the base of the shield; on the left side of the letter, a palm-branch joined to another wing. This rebus is in another part of the church, with several figures not now understood.

Against the north wall is a monument for Mrs. Lucy Stokes, (only daughter of doctor Harwood, a prebendary of this cathedral) ob. Jan. 11, 1732, ætat. 73.

Thomas Browne, esq; sometime mayor, was buried Nov. 15, 1730. ætat. 84.

A memorial for Edmund Gregory, sometime mayor, ob. Sept. 23, 1720, ætat. 80.—Edward Machen, sometime mayor, ob. 20 Sept. 1740, ætat. 61.

Against a pillar in the middle of the nave, on a copartment,

To the happy Memory of Thomas Batherne, the only Son of Richard Batherne of Penhow, in the County of Monmouth, Gentleman; he departed this Life Sept. 25. 1652, aged 22. leaving behind him his sorrowful Mother, who out of her dear Affection to him, erected this Monument.

On a grave-stone beneath,

Here lieth the Body of Mary Batherne, the Wife of Richard Batherne of Penhow, in the County of Monmouth, Gent. who departed this Life March 29, 1665, aged 74.

Near abbat Seabroke's monument, against a pillar is an inscription for Francis Baber, esq; as in p. 164. but to that I shall add the following, Elizabetha conjux, filia Johannis Adderley, in com. Middlesex, arm. obiit 14 Januarii, Ætatis 63, A. D. 1673.

On their grave-stones, on which are the family arms, viz. On a fess gules, three falcons heads erased, are the following inscriptions:

Corpus Francisci Baber, Legum Doctoris, sub hoc saxo est conditum Junii 21, 1669.

Hic jacet Elizabetha Baber, Januarii 14, A. D. 1673.

The renowned Whispering Place is a long gallery, extending from one side of the choir to the other, built in the form of an octagon, with three sides taken off, as in the margin; and contrived so as not to darken the great east window of the choir, behind which it stands.

Between the two lines, represented in the figure, is the passage. If a person whisper at A, every syllable may be heard distinctly at B, which is twenty-five yards distant, tho' the passage is open in the middle, and there are large openings in the wall for a door and window. C denotes a door into a chapel, which is in the outward wall.

Some impute this wonderful effect to the close cement of the wall, which, as one intire stone, conveys the voice like a tube; others attribute it to the repercussion of the voice on the several angles; whilst a third opinion is, that the chapel and open places contribute to the sound; but lord Bacon gives his sentiments of this matter as follows: "I suppose there is some vault or hallow, or isle behind the wall, and some passage to it towards the farther end of that wall against which you speak, so as the voice of him that speaketh slideth along the wall, and then entereth at some passage, and communicateth with the air of the hollow; for it is preserved somewhat by the plain wall; but that it is too weak to give a sound audible, 'till it has communicated with the back air."

Most people are of opinion that this effect was not produced by the art and design of the builder, but was merely accidental, especially as on surveying the outside of the church, it may be seen, that two parts of the gallery were tacked on, merely as passages into a chapel erected there. In this chapel are the following arms upon bricks;—England.—A Fret.—A fess between six cross crosslets, 3, 2, 1.—A lion rampant. In the window over the west end, Argent, a bend between two bendlets dancette gules. At the east end are the remains of an altar of unhewn stone, on each side of which the lord abbat and others were used, it is said, to stand to see divine service performed in the Lady's chapel, into which it looks.

In the middle of the whispering place are these verses:

*Doubt not but God, who sits on high,
Thy secret Prayers can hear;
When a dead wall thus cunningly
Conveys soft whispers to the ear.*

The great Cloisters lie on the north side of the church, between the transept or cross aisle and west end. They were built by abbat Walter Frowceter in the stile of King's college, Cambridge, and are so curious and beautiful as to be esteemed the finest in England. They make a square, one side of which is 150 feet long. The idea of the roof is taken from a walk of trees whose branching heads are curiously imitated in the arching.

In one of the windows was a draught of the old church, and several verses intimating the original of the convent; but these were all destroyed in the civil wars.

In the east cloister, in the wall at the south end, is an old mural monument, without any inscription, or arms, only a cross cut on it; and near it is an old door, which led into a long room, perhaps the abbey workhouse.

Not far from that, is a little door and stair-case leading to the abbey library, now used for the college-school; and there is a large wainscot door leading into the present college library, which was formerly the abbey chapter-house, where Leland informs us several persons of great eminence have been buried, whose names, in the time of that great great antiquary, were painted on the wall, near their grave-stones, in black letter, as follow:

Hic jacet Rogerus, Comes de Hereford.

Hic jacet Richard Strongbowe, filius Gilberti comitis de Pembroke.

Hic jacet Gualterus de Lacy.

Hic jacet Philipus de Foye, Miles.

Hic jacet Bernardus de Novo Mercato.

Hic jacet Paganus de Cadurcis.

Thomas Pury, jun. esq; whose arms are on the north side of the east window, assisted by Mr. Sheppard, captain Heming and others, made this library at a great expence in the year 1648, and, as Sir Robert Atkyns has observed, encouraged literature to assist reason, in the midst of times deluded with imaginary inspiration. In 1656 this library was settled upon the mayor and burgesse, who made themselves guardians of it; but Mr. Pury, Sir Matthew Hale, and the officers of the garrison were the principal benefactors to it. It is above twenty-four yards long, and eleven wide within the walls. Mr. Wheeler began to stock the library with books in the year 1686, but the collection is even now by much too scanty.

Before the library door is buried William Lambe, sometime mayor, who died Oct. 21, 1705; and not far from him lies Mr. Abraham Rudhall, a very noted bell-founder of this city.

Here is a door that leads into the common orchard, where, or near to it, by the infirmary, stood archbishop Aldred's church, the scite of which is called the grove, because Mr. Wheeler, formerly master of the school, planted it with trees; so that what Camden says of the present cathedral being the same which Aldred built, is a mistake.

On the bricks in the pavement are the following arms: France and England quarterly.—A cheveron between three crosses crosslets fitchy.—A fess charged with a crescent between six crosses crosslets.—Checky, a fess fretty.—Berkely.—Within a bordure a lion rampant.—Three bendlets the middle one charged with an escallop.

In the North Cloister, towards the west end, is the lavatory, consisting of eight arches, and directly opposite is the sudatory, or place to hang up towels, consisting of two arches.

In the West Cloister, at the north end, is a door which led into the abbey refectory, or great hall, now a considerable time since demolished. About the middle is a door leading to the house now assigned to the dean, but formerly belonging to the chief prior of the abbey. At the south end is a little room where the glass belonging to the church was kept, and where the glaziers did their work.

In the South Cloister, on the north side of it, are twenty distinct places or seats, according to tradition, for the monks to write in, before the invention of printing. Several persons have been buried, and have grave-stones and inscriptions on them here; and near the east end is an old mural monument without any inscription or arms, only a cross and the letters W. B. on it.

The little cloisters seem to have been made by archbishop Aldred, near the church which he built. Some part of them was pulled down in the civil wars.

The beautiful Tower, as bishop Gibson says in his additions to Camden's Britannia, is so neat and curious, that travellers have affirmed it to be one of the best pieces of architecture in England. Abbat Seabroke, the first designer of it, dying, left it to be finished by Robert Tully, one of the monks of the abbey, which is intimated in two Latin lines written under the arch of the tower, as in p. 138. It is 222 feet high, supported by a strong wall at each of the four corners, by a slender arch from the east to the west side, and a small pillar in the middle. It has a peal of eight large bells in it, some of them very antient. In a loft under these is a very large one, weighing about 6500 pounds, with this inscription on it, ME FECIT FIERI MVNCVTVS NOMINE PETRI; whence some have concluded that it was given by Peter, the fourth abbat, for between the words of the inscription are the arms of the abbey, with a coronet of four flowers de luce over them. The coronet may serve to shew that it was cast in the time of the dukes of Gloucester. The diameter of this bell is five feet ten inches, and that of the star-hole in the arch but five feet, whence it may be concluded, that the bell was put into the tower before the arch under it, which is over the choir, was finished.

It is said, that round about the choir are twelve chapels, some over, some under others, in memory of the twelve apostles, whose names they are affirmed to bear, and perhaps they are as follow: In the south passage from the Lady's chapel one, one over it, and one under it; more westerly in that passage one, one over and one under it; in the north passage from the Lady's chapel one, one over and one under it; going into the chapter-house one, one over and one under it. There were several other chapels dispersed over many parts of the church, particularly one in the Lady's chapel on the south side, and one over it; one on the north side, and one over it; one over the west end of it, one over the door leading to the great south cross aisle, one under the tower on the south side, one dedicated to St. Anthony on the north side of it, one at the east end of the body of the church, taken down to make room for the organ, one for abbat Seabroke, one for king Edward the Second, and one for abbat Parker.

On the outside of the body of the church are six buttresses, which support as many statues for principal benefactors to the abbey. The first figure at the east end hath a sceptre in the left hand, and a church in the right, and under it a charter with three three seals appendant to it upon his breast. The second hath a sceptre in the right hand, and in the left a church resting on his breast. The others are much defaced.

Part of the buildings which belonged to the abbey are still remaining. The infirmary is converted into a house for one of the prebendaries, and for others belonging to the church. There was a chapel in it dedicated to St. Bridget, and endowed in the time of Henry the Third.

The number of householders in the college precincts are not mentioned by Sir Robert Atkyns, but in the year 1743 they were fifty-one, and of inhabitants two hundred and twenty-seven. Out of these precincts two persons are elected guardians of the workhouse.

Sir Robert Atkyns was mistaken in saying that there were inscriptions in this church for the abbats Seabroke and Parker, and the bishops Cheyney and Smith, as there were never any; nor any tomb, as he says, for queen Isabel, wife of king Edward the Second, who was buried in the Grey Friars, London, and had nothing erected here to her memory. Willis.

In describing the abbey church, I cannot but observe how perfectly it corresponds with the ancient form of churches, which I find in a scarce and valuable book, intituled The Fardle of Facions, translated into English by William Watreman, and printed in the year 1555, where it is said, 'Their oratories temples, or places of praier (whiche we calle churches) might not be built without the good will of the Bishoppe of the Diocese. And when the Timbre was redy to be framed, and the foundation digged: it behoved them to sende for the Bishoppe, to halow the firste corner stone of the foundation, and to make the signe of the crosse therupon, and to laie it, and directe it juste Easte and west. And then mighte the Masons sette upon the reste, but not afore. This Church did thei use to builde, aftre the facion of a Crosse, and not unlike the shape of a manne. The Chauncelle (in the whiche is contained the highe Altare and the Quiere) directe fulle into the Easte, representeth the heade. And therefore ought to be made somewhat rounde, and muche shorter then the Body of the Church. And yet upon respecte that the heade is the place for the eyes, it ought to be of more lighte, and to be seperate with a particion, in the steade of a necke, from the body of the Church. This particion the Latine calleth Cancelli: and out of that cometh our terme Chauncelle. On eche side of this chauncelle peradventure (for so fitteth it beste) should stand a Turret; as it were for two ears. And in these the Belles to be hanged, to calle the people to Service, by daie and by night. Undre one of these Turrettes, is there commonly a vaulte, whose Doore openeth into the quiere. And in this are laid up, the hallowed vesselles and ornamentes, and other utensiles of the Church.

' we calle it a vestrie. The other parte oughte to be fitted, that having as it ware on eche side an arme, the reste maye resemble the bodye with the fete stretched in breadthe, and in lengthe. On eche side of the bodye the pillers to stonde. Upon whose coronettes or heades the vaulte or rophe of the Church maye reste. And to the foote beneth, aulters to be joyned. Those aulters to be orderly alway covered with two aulter clothes, and garnished with the crosse of Christe, or some litle cofre of reliques. At eche ende a candelsticke: and a Booke towarde the middes. The walls to be parieted without, and within, and diversly paineted. That thei also should have in every parishe a faire rounde Stone, made howe, and fitte to holde water: in the whiche the water consecrate for baptisme, may be kept for the christening of children. Upon the right hande of the highe aulter, that ther should be an almorie, either cutte into the walle, or framed upon it: in the whiche thei woulde have the Sacrament of the Lordes bodye; the holy oyle for the sicke, and Chrismatorie, alwaie to be locked. Furthermore thei woulde that ther should be a pulpite in the middes of the Church, wherein the Prieste may stonde upon Sondaies and holidayes, to teache the people those things that it behoveth them to knowe. The Chauncelle to serve only for the priestes, and clerkes. The rest of the temporalle multitude to be in the body of the church. Seperate notwithstanding, the men on the ryghte side, and the women, on the left. And eche of them to be sobre and honeste in apparelle and behaviour. Whatsoever is contrary to good facion or christiane religion, with greate diligence to shoune it. It was the maner in the firste church, both amonge men and women to let their heare growe, to shewe out their naked skinne, and very litle or nothing to diffre in apparelle. Sainct Peter put first order, that Women should cover their heades, and men rounde their heare, and either of them to go in severalle and sondry apparelle. Moreover that to every church, should be laide out a Churchyarde of the Grounde adjoining, in the whiche all christen mennes bodies mighte indifferently be bewried. The same to be consecrate, or halowed by the Bishoppe, and to enjoye all the privilegies that the church may enjoye.

' The funeralle for the deade, thei kepe not in every place ylike. Some mourne and kepe dirige and Masse seven daies continuall together, some ix. some xxx. or fourtye, some fivetie, and a Hundred, and other a whole yere, wrapped up in blacke. The counseile of Toledo ordeined that the corps beinge firste washed and then wrapped up in a shiete, should be caried forthe with singing by menne of his owne condicion or sorte, clerkes by clerkes, and lay menne of lay menne. And aftre what time the priest hath sensed the corps, throwen holy water upon it, & said certain prayers, to laye it into the grave with the face upward, and the heade into the Weaste. Then to throwe in the earth again, and in token that there is a christian ther bewried, to sette up a crosse of wodde, garnished with yvie, cipres, or laurelle. These be the orders and facions of the Christiane religion.

Notwithstanding I have inserted the above abstract, because I thought some of my readers might be pleased to see it, 'tis not my present purpose to discuss the point what form would be most convenient for our churches, according to the present established method of divine service. Wise men have differed in their judgment, and will still continue to differ, concerning modes of worship; and it is probable they will not better agree as to the most eligible form for a place of worship; therefore I dismiss the subject, without offering my opinion concerning it.

Of the severall PARISHES within the City of GLOUCESTER.

St. ALDATE's.

THIS was a low spired church, covered with shingles. It consisted of one aisle, and stood not far from the city wall, near the upper North-gate, where the hall belonging to the fraternity of smiths, &c. and other adjacent buildings now are. It was dedicated to Saint Aldate, Aldact, or Eldad, and was a rectory formerly belonging to the priory of Deorhurst, the prior of which was taxed at half a mark in this church 19° E. 1. The rectory was valued at 3*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

The commissioners appointed to make a return of the value of livings 26° H. 8. certified as follows:

Rectoria Sancti Aldati valet clare in decimis et oblationibus, ultra 12 denarios solutos pro Senagio, 5 solidos archidiacono pro procuratione, 8 den. episcopo pro visitatione, 77 sol. 3 den.

In this church were a chantry, dedicated to St. Mary, a chantry or fraternity, dedicated to St. John, the light of St Katherine, and the light of the Holy Cross.

In 1648, by an ordinance of parliament, this parish was united to St. Michael's, and the church and its appurtenances were given to the corporation of the city, who made an order that the church-wardens of St. Michael's should take it down, and sell the materials, to defray the expence of building a brick wall round their own church-yard; accordingly, in 1653, St. Aldate's was demolished, and St. Michael's was repaired with part of the materials. But the ordinance of parliament being annulled at the restoration, the parishes became separate.

Incumbents.

William occurs rector in the reign of H. 3.
Geffry att Birch, 31° E. 3.
Thomas Billey, 1424.
John Dayly, 1472.
John Keyble, or Kebul, sometime a gray frier, 1547.
Richard Burnel, sometime a chantry priest of St. Ann's service in Saint Michael's, occurs curate 1551.
Ralph Salmon, curate of St. Owen's, 1562.
John Mery, sometime curate of St. Mary de Grace, occurs curate 1569, having been formerly a chantry-priest of St. Mary's service, in the church of St. Mary de Lode.
Evan Williams, rector of St. Mary de Crypt, occurs in 1572.
Richard Taylers, B. A. rector of St. Michael's, 1576.
William Best obtained the sequestration, April 15, 1579, and was curate.
Nicholas Fayrere, alias Pitt, vicar of St. Owen's, obtained the sequestration, and was curate June 11, 1580.
Richard Jones, curate of All Saints, occurs 1587.
William Evans, 1593.
Thomas Wood, rector of St. John's, 1594.
Richard Jones, curate of All Saints, 1594-5, 1599.
Robert Provis, alias Charlion, curate of St. John's, seems to have resigned the curacy of St. Katherine's for this, 1600, and occurs 1625.
Edward Williams, curate of All Saints, occurs 1628, 1635, being a minor-canon, and to that office he was again restored by king C. 2.
Daniel Remington.
Benjamin Newton, A. M. is the present incumbent.

N. B. Those who are mentioned as curates of this church, or of any other in the city, were the only incumbents; for as the income of those livings are but small, they were generally held by sequestration, and the incumbents of them were really no more than curates.

Benefactions.

Mrs. Elizabeth Aram, who was buried in the nave or body of the cathedral in 1741, by her will bequeathed 500*l.* to rebuild the church, and accordingly a chapel has been built, on or near the spot where the church stood; and the living was augmented by lot in the year 1746, and returned.

Sir Thomas Bell gave a house to the parish towards keeping the church in repair, &c.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 30*s.* per ann. to the poor for bread.

Baptisms.			Burials.
males	females		males	females
1759	7	3	5	5	3
1760	7	7	10		4
1761	8	9	2		1
1762	6	5	5		1
1763	6	7	8		2
1764	16	9	4		4
1765	10	5	5		5
1766	6	10	6		3
1767	5	11	4		5
1768	6	2	5		1
Total	145		Total	83

In the year 1562, there were 50 householders in this parish; in 1712, there were 62 houses and about 350 inhabitants, according to Sir Robert Atkyns; and in 1743, the exact number of householders were 92, of inhabitants 401.

	l.	s.	d.
Royal Aid in 1692, —	302	8	0
Poll Tax — 1694, —	090	5	0
Land Tax — 1694, —	314	9	3
The same in 1770, for St. Michael's, St. Aldate's, and St. Mary de Grace, at 3 s. in the pound.	224	3	6

One guardian is chosen out of this parish for the work-house, towards which it paid quarterly in 1770 10*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* and 3*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* towards the lamps.

ALL SAINTS, or ALL HALLOWS.

THIS was a small church consisting of one aisle, with a chancel. At the time of the conquest, the see of Exeter had possessions in Gloucester, as appears by Domesday book, where it is said, "Osbernus the bishop holds the land and mansions which Edmarus held. They pay 10*s.* with other custom." This church might probably be a part of those possessions, for Robert Chichester, bishop of Exeter, granted it as a chapel to the priory of Lanthony, which received a pension of 2*s.* out of it, now paid to the crown. In the 19th year of king Edward the First, that priory was taxed eight marks in this church.

By an ordinance of parliament in 1648, this parish was united to that of St. Mary de Crypt, and in the year 1664, bishop Nicholson not only united it to, but incorporated it with that parish in all respects, the church having been converted into the Tolfey, or place of public judicature, where the mayor and sheriffs hold their courts, &c. on which account the corporation pay 2*l.* 13*s.* towards repairing the church of St. Mary de Crypt, the minister of which performs all the duties of the parish priest. See p. 89, under Tolfey.

In the valuation 26° H. 8. are the following particulars: Rectoria Omnium Sanctorum valet clare in decimis et oblationibus, ultra 12 den. pro senagio, 2 sol. pensionem priori et conventui Lanthoniae, 8 den. episcopo pro visitatione, 12 sol. pro vino, cera, et pane, annuatim solutos, 6 l. 13 s. 6 d. ch.

There was a chantry dedicated to St. Mary, and another service called the feoffees service.

The lot fell on this parish to augment the living with queen Ann's bounty, in the year 1739, but the governors would not allow of the augmentation on account of the union of the parishes.

A part of the church has been converted into a chapel, for the use of the corporation; but the whole building hath been since taken down and rebuilt, and now forms a large and commodious court for the administration of public justice; together with an elegant chamber over it, for the private business of the corporation; who now attend divine service at the cathedral church. On the front, in an escutcheon, are the arms of the city cut in free-stone.

	l.	s.	d.		l.	s.	d.
First fruits,	7	1	8	Pentecostals,	0	0	6
Tenths, —	0	8	0	Synodals, —	0	1	0
Procurations,	0	5	0

Incumbents and Patrons.

Robert occurs rector 29° E. 1.
 John Benet, rector, 12° E. 3.
 Thomas Watton, rector, exchanged with Roger Harry, for the vicarage of Brockworth, in 1371, and the said Roger Harry was presented July 10, 1371, by Simon the prior and the convent of Lanthony.
 John Gregory, occurs rector 1° E. 4.
 Thomas Monmouth, upon Gregory's resignation, was presented by Henry Deane the prior, and the convent of Lanthony.
 Thomas Woddeward, sometime rector of St. Mary de Crypt, presented 1491, by the same.
 Christopher Woodwell occurs 34° H. 8.
 John Henbury, occurs curate in 1562.
 John Merrey, occurs curate 1572.
 Richard Jones, sometime a minor-canon, occurs 1580, 1590.
 John Johnson, one of the minor-canons, 1600, 1619.
 Philip Hosier, sometime curate of St. Mary de Crypt, and of St. John's, occurs curate 1622, 1625.
 Edward Williams, sometime curate of St. Aldate's, 1628.
 Thomas Thache, A. M. nominated by the corporation, but licenced by the bishop.

Benefactions.

Mr. Richard Hoar, in 1607, gave a perpetual annuity of 2*l.* 13*s.* for the use of this parish, which is what the corporation pay to St. Mary de Crypt.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 20*s.* per ann. in bread to the poor.

The number of householders in 1562, was 15. In Sir Robert Atkyns's account of householders this parish is taken in with St. Mary de Crypt, and so cannot be distinguished; but in 1743, the householders were 21, and the number of inhabitants 80.

St. JOHN BAPTIST.

THIS parish extends a little on the north side of the lower North-gate, and takes in all the lower North-gate street.

The church is a rectory, depending upon the benevolence of the parishioners. The lord chancellor is patron, but before the dissolution it belonged to the abbey of St. Peter, to which it had been confirmed by the kings Henry the First, and Stephen; and it was appropriated by abbat Hameline to the precentor, for maintaining the feast of St. Oswald. The church was taxed 19° E. 1. at ten marks, and the abbey received a yearly pension of 20s. out of it, which at the dissolution was granted to the dean and chapter.

The present church is a new building, on the west side of the street, just within the upper North-gate. The old church, affirmed to have been built by king Ethelstan, and taken down about forty years since, consisted of a large nave, and south aisle of the same length, a chancel, a slender steeple at the west end of the aisle, and a large porch on the north side. It was a stone building 80 feet long and 50 broad, the estimate of the charge of rebuilding of which was 2310l. and upwards. A brief was obtained for this purpose, and 435l. 8s. 10d. collected upon it, which being insufficient, a further sum was raised by taxation on the parishioners, and by private contributions from well disposed persons, for building the present church, the foundation of which was laid on the first day of June, 1732. The new church, which was first preached in on August 4, 1734, consists of three aisles, of which the middle one is the widest. The old steeple is left standing, with five bells in peal, and a saint's bell.

In the old church were the several chapels, chantries, and services following:

1. A chapel dedicated to St. Bridget, on account of which, and some other particulars, St. Peter's abbey was adjudged by the pope's delegates, in 1222, to pay 20s. per ann. to St. Oswald's priory.

2. A chapel dedicated to St. Thomas, wherein abbat Thokey, with the consent of the rector, in 1390, ordained, that the rectors of the church should say mass every week, and receive a certain corrody for that service of the sub-almoner of the abbey.

3. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary, several of the possessions of which, and of many others in Gloucester, were granted to Thomas Chamberlain, knight, and Richard Pates, esq;

4. A chantry dedicated to St. Ann.

5. A chantry dedicated to the Holy Rood, in the patronage of St. Peter's abbey. Richard Boyden, the last incumbent of it, was allowed a pension of 4l. at its dissolution.

6. The light of St. Nicholas.

7. The light of St. Catherine, which Maud Browd, before the year 1393, endowed with certain lands near Alvingate.

'Tis also said that a chantry was erected in this church in 1340, and annexed to the church of the Holy Trinity, but whether it was either of the above it does not appear.

At the visitation of this church, 26° H. 8. the commissioners certified as follows: Rectoria Sancti Johannis valet clare in decimis et oblationibus, ultra 20 sol. solutos abbati et conventui Glouc. pro quadam pensione annuali, 12 den. pro senagio, 6s. 8d. archidiacono pro procuratione, 13 den. episcopo pro visitatione, 14l. 0s. 10d. ob.

By an order of parliament in 1648, Saint Katherine's being united to this parish, the perpetual patronage was granted to the mayor and burgesses. An annuity of 60l. and one of the prebendal houses were settled upon this rectory, and the incumbent was to pay first fruits and tenths according to the rate of 8l. a year; but the parishes became distinct at the restoration.

The living has been augmented by Mr. Hodges's legacy, and the queen's bounty; besides which, three pounds a year are left for the minister to read prayers on Wednesdays, and ten shillings for a sermon. There was no house for the minister 'till lately, but these donations will more particularly appear in the list of benefactions.

	l.	s.	d.		l.	s.	d.
First fruits,	14	0	10	Synodals,	0	2	0
Tenths,	01	8	01	Pentecostals,	0	1	2
Procurations,	00	6	08

After the battle of Bosworth-field, in 1485, wherein king Richard the Third was slain, Francis viscount Lovel and the lord Stafford fled to this church for sanctuary.

* Having now first mentioned this pension of a chantry-priest, I shall here take occasion to observe, that tho' it may at first appear to have been a very trifling allowance to a clergyman for his maintenance; yet the matter will be seen in a very different light, if we compare the prices of things now, with what they were formerly; for which purpose Mr. Willis, in his first volume of History of Several Parliamentary Abbies, p. 11, has produced an item from the farmer's account of the impropriation of Ravenston, in Buckinghamshire, with Christ Church college, Oxford, in the reign of king Henry the Eighth; wherein the farmer, by way of discount out of his rent, reckons only 11. 6s. 8d. for the vicar's diet for the whole year; so that five pounds a year then, says the same author, would maintain any one in great honour and credit.

Incumbents and Patrons.

Edward Frowcester, D. D. occurs rector 11^o H. 7. being also rector of Clifford Chambers. He was afterwards preferred to the deanery of Hereford. William Malvern the abbat, and the convent of St. Peter's Gloucester, Patrons.

William Jennings, B. D. dean of Gloucester, instituted October 6, 1546, and resigned August 30, 1547.

William Sheldon occurs 1547.

Hugh Whittington, LL. B. sometime rector of St. Mary de Crypt, occurs rector 1551, and was promoted to the vicarage of Staverton.

Walter Jones, on Whittington's resignation, was instituted June 21, 1553.

Thomas Partidge, rector of Deinton, occurs curate in 1562, as does Maurice Williams, curate of St. Katherine's, in 1569.

The church vacant in 1571.

Thomas Woodcock, afterwards rector of St. Mary de Crypt, 1572.

Thomas Richardson, one of the minor-canons, sometime vicar of Kempley, and rector of Stratton, occurs curate 1580.

Thomas Wood, rector of Pinnock, instituted Feb. 3, 1583.

Robert Provis, alias Charlion, sometime curate of St. Aldate's and St. Katherine's, obtained the sequestration and was curate March 5, 1593.

Edward Kyste, occurs 1628.

Philip Holicer, sometime curate of St. Mary de Crypt and All Saints, 1534.

—— Hinman, 1642.

—— Frier, 1642.

Thomas Jennings was presented September 15, 1648.

Thomas Walmough, M. A. rector of St. Michael's, 1664.

Amos Jones, M. A. rector of St. Michael's, 1675, but resigned in 1677.

George Vernon, M. A. succeed both to this and St. Michael's curacy, but was amoved from both in 1687.

John Abbat, M. A. rector of Witcomb, supply'd the cure, and dying was buried in the vestry, at the east end of the north aile.

William Elliot, M. A. was presented by the king, and instituted June 27, 1733. He was also perpetual curate of Barn wood, and dying, was buried in the north aile of the church of St. Mary de Lode.

Daniel Remmington, B. A. upon Elliot's death, was presented by the king, and instituted, 1761.

Benjamin Newton, A. M. succeeded, and is the present incumbent.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Upon a large grave-stone in grey marble, which was in the chancel before the old church was demolished, but now altered, or taken away, was a plate of brass, on which the effigy of a man at length between two wives and several children, was engraven, and the following inscription, in old black character.

Here under buried John Semys lyeth,
Which had two wives, the first Elizabeth,
And by her vi. soones, and daughters five;
Then astur by Agnes, his secund wive,
Eight soones, seven daughters, goddes plente,
The full numbre in all of six and twentie.
He passed to God in the moneth of August,
The thousand five hundred and fortie yere just.
(24 Aug.)

Round the verge of the stone, on the south side,

Plaude poli patria, plaude et paradise colonum,
Altri chorus plaudat, plaudat hic aftra petenis;
Plausus culmen opes; p'cul ite valete mag'ri,
Laus et fama, vale decor: caro putreat opto.

On the west side,

Scripta legas tumuli moritus nunc reperat hic qui Laudis erat dignus, prudens, sapiensque, benignus.

On the north side,

Mitis, item lenis, discretus, largus egenis,
Hic quasi fundator, miseris fuit et miserator.
Plangit Conventus pastorem Religionis,
Regula tutorem: plangito, plange domus.

On the east side,

Patria plange patrem, dominum vos plangite sui
Plange potens paup----- natio plange sua.

On each of the four corners, without the inscription, was a scroll with writing on it, but one of the brasses long since torn off. On the others it is thus written:

Siste gradus, Ora, Cogita, Reminiscere, Plora.

Sic redis in cineres, hujus es, et ejus es.

Gloria divicie fugiunt te, mors, manet et te.

Within the verge, at the south-west corner, are the old arms of the city, and no other arms upon it.

Upon an antient stone, engraved on brass, the effigies of a man in armour, and a woman attired in her proper habit. The man has a sword by his side, his spurs on, and at his feet a greyhound couchant. There are also the following arms, and inscription: Quarterly. 1. A cheveron. 2. a pile. 3. Cbecky, on a bend three lions passant. 4. a cross charged with a leopard's head caboshed.

John a Brigges, Gentilman, lyeth buried here,
Sometye of this contrey, Worshipful Squyer,
The XIX day of April flesh and bone dyede he,
In the yere of grace M^o CCCC four score and three.
And Agnes his Wife, good gentilwoman was she.
They ben returned into erth, and so shall ye.
Of erth we were made and fourmed,
And into erth we be returned.
Have this in mynd and parfite memorie,
Ye that liven here leiveth to dye;
And beholdeth here youre owne destene,
For as ye ben now somtyme were we.
Ihu wth thi moder Mary, maiden fre,
Have mercy on us for your grete pite.
God yeve them ioy and everlasting life
That prayen for John Brigges and Agnes his wife,
That our paynes lessed may be:
For cherite feith Pater noster and Ave.

Not many years ago there was a griffin's head, which was their crest, above the effigies.

The following persons, the first seven of whom were mayors of the city, were buried here:

Thomas Rich, father of the pious founder of the blue-coat Hospital, ob. July 1, 1607.

Thomas Adams ob. 1621.

Richard Smith, ob. July 1, 1637.

Edmund Collet.

William Ruffel, ob. January 14, 1681.

Giles Rodway, ob. September 2, 1729, aged 80.

Samuel Brown, ob. September 7, 1738.

Richard Keylock, sheriff, ob. 1636.

Richard Broad, sheriff, ob. 1670.

Richard Bosley, sheriff, ob. 1677.

Thomas Price, gent. ob. 1654.

Robert Lawrence, son of Robert Lawrence of Sevenhampton, gent. ob. 1670.

Robert Nicholls, M. A. vicar of Sandhurst, ob. March 28, 1702.

Abel Wantner, who compiled a History of Gloucestershire, and published proposals for printing it a little before his death. The manuscript is now in the Bodleian library at Oxford. He died July 8, 1714.

Benefactions.

Benefactions.

John Wyman, in 1556, gave a tenement between the two North-gates, for the reparation of the church.

Hugh Aphowel, gent. in 1558, gave two tenements in the lower North-gate street, for the use of the parish.

Alderman Thomas Semys, in 1662, gave the yearly rent of a stable and garden in Oxbody-lane, part for a sermon yearly on the Sunday after the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, and part for the use of the poor.

Alderman John Hayward, who died June 8, 1641, gave 20*l.* to ciel the chancel, and several tenements in St. Aldate's parish, for the maintenance of two widows, allowing each 6*d.* a week, and a little house near the church-door.

Mr. Richard Keylock gave 3*l.* per ann. for prayers to be read in this parish church weekly, which is now done on Wednesdays in the morning.

Sir Thomas Rich gave eight pieces of gilt plate, and a considerable quantity of crimson velvet and linen, for the service of the church.

Mr. Daniel Lyfons gave 30*s.* yearly for bread for the poor.

Mrs. Sarah Wright gave 10*s.* yearly for bread, and 16*s.* every second year to cloath poor widows and orphans.

Mr. John Cromwell gave two acres and a half of land lying in Corn-mead, Walham, and Windmill-field, the rent to be distributed in coals to the poor of the parish.

Benjamin Bathurst, and John Selwyn, esqrs. Mr. Richard Price, Mrs. Bridget Price, and several others, were great benefactors towards the erecting and ornamenting of the new church.

Mr. Samuel Pawling gave an inn, which lets at 13*l.* a year, to the minister of this parish for ever, out of which 40*s.* a year is paid to a parish in Herefordshire. He also gave a house in this parish to provide cloth gowns for poor people.

Alderman Samuel Brown, whose daughter Hester had given 10*l.* that the interest of it might be given to the poor in bread, gave also 10*s.* yearly for the same purpose; and 10*s.* yearly more to the two widows who dwell in alderman Haywood's houses.

Baptisms.				Burials.
1759	males	12	females	7	males	4	females	6
1760	—	17	—	8	—	16	—	19
1761	—	23	—	14	—	12	—	9
1762	—	12	—	8	—	8	—	10
1763	—	11	—	9	—	10	—	14
1764	—	13	—	9	—	12	—	16
1765	—	13	—	8	—	11	—	15
1766	—	10	—	11	—	10	—	17
1767	—	11	—	7	—	22	—	16
1768	—	10	—	9	—	10	—	12
Total	—	222			Total	—	249

The number of householders in this parish, in the year 1562, was 76; Sir Robert Atkyns's account, about 1712, is 103 houses, and about 500 inhabitants; in 1743, there were 172 houses, and 699 inhabitants.

This parish paid quarterly 29*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* to the workhouse, and 12*l.* 2*s.* 4*d.* for lamps in 1770.

To the Royal Aid, in 1693,	£. 91 : 04 : 00
Poll tax, — 1694,	47 : 09 : 00
Land tax, — 1694,	123 : 07 : 11
The same, — 1670,	100 : 19 : 06

In this parish stands

SAINT MARGARET'S HOSPITAL.

This hospital was built in honour of the sepulture of our Lord, and of St. Margaret. It was called The Hospital, or House of the lepers of St. Sepulcher's and St. Margaret's; also, The lower House of Dudstan.

There were formerly houses of this kind in most cities and considerable towns in England, Ireland, the Low Countries, Germany, &c. and no longer than a century or two ago, there was indeed too much occasion for them. It seems no difficult matter to account for the leprosy being so rife formerly, and so little known at present. That loathsome disease is occasioned by bad air, but more especially by unwholsome diet. The causes of bad air are now in a great measure removed among us, by cutting down our large forests, draining our marshes, and cultivating our lands; and it cannot be denied but we live better than our forefathers.

No longer ago than Cromwell's time, the leprosy was very common in Ireland. It was occasioned by the people's living so much upon salmon and other fish, which every river and brook abounded with, and the poor people had for catching. The English getting possession of the country, limited the use of such unwholsome food, and forbad it at a certain season of the year. They introduced the planting of coleworts, and other gardenstuff, in consequence of which the poor people were cured, and the many hospitals expressly built to receive the lepers are now gone to ruin.

I am told that formerly it was almost a standing condition in the indentures of apprenticeship at Gloucester, that the servant should not be obliged to eat salmon more than thrice a week; which was undoubtedly intended as a precaution against this grievous disorder.

The founder of this hospital and the time of its foundation are equally unknown. It consisted of a master or supervisor, a prior, a chaplain, and brethren and sisters. Alured, bishop of Worcester, the king's chaplain, who, according to Mr. Willis, was enthronized April 13, 1158, granted to these lepers liberty to bury in their own churchyard, which evidences the foundation to have been of great antiquity.

The patronage of the house belonged to the abbey of St. Peter, which prescribed rules for it; therefore,

B b b

therefore, when Thomas (perhaps Horton) was abbat, they called it nostrum hospitale apud Newlond, our hospital at Newlond; and it is so called in a deed witnessed by the abbey's hundred, or court, held there; but the town of Gloucester, soon after the dissolution of the abbey, had the sole government of it.

According to the certificate of the commissioners appointed 37° H. 8. a copy of which is now among the city records, the yearly value of this hospital was then 11*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* of which the brethren and sisters received 8*l.* 12*s.* the priest had for his salary 2*l.* and the out-rents, which came to 15*s.* The goods, plate, ornaments, &c. belonging to it were valued at 24*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

At a metropolitanical visitation held in St. Bartholomew's hospital, November 8, 1580, John Fenner, alias Spring, being then governor, or supervisor of the Margaret's hospital, it appeared, that the foundation of the house, by which was meant the charter of the foundation, was delivered to Mr. Rumney, then deceased, who had been mayor of the city in the year 1572, and was not returned; but that by the foundation six poor people were to be fed [or maintained] therein; that John Povey, alias Shepherde, Alice Cooke, Katherine Bryan, William Sprynge, son of the governor afore said; Agnes —, and Grace Sprynge, alias Fenner, wife of the said governor, were then maintained in it. But according to bishop Cheney's account of the diocese in 1562, a reader and ten men were belonging to it. Since that time the number varied, 'till it was fixed, as it now is, to eight men, a reader, and some other officers. Each of the poor persons now receives 2*s.* a week, and the remainder of the income is expended in fees and other charges.

On the S. W. side of the hospital stands a small chapel, which, in the certificate above-mentioned, is said to be a parish church, at which prayers are read every Saturday morning.

At the east end were the prior's lodgings, upon the site of the adjacent house. The old hall was converted into a barn the thirty-first year of queen Elizabeth; and at the siege of the city, in 1643, some of the king's forces took up their quarters in the hospital, which seems to have been then very much damaged.

Benefactors to the Hospital.

Henry le Locker, Roger Toli, Maurice Niger, Henry le Mercer, Richard Burgens, Luke Cornwaleys, Hugh de Winchcomb, alias Pouctele, John Tinctor [or Dyer], John Gosedike, John Ingolf, Roger de Bosco, Renilda Thurstan, Richard Fitz Ernys, all in the reign of king Henry the Third; Maurice Faber, Henry le Cnuser, William Bruyn, Thomas le Sporener, all in the reign of Edward the First; Simon de Alre, in Edward the Second's reign; John Walton, Peter Hardeley, both in the reign of Henry the Fifth; John Richemon, 32° H. 6. Thomas and Agnes Andreux, 38° H. 6. Elias Giffard, Aylgena de Bernwode, Richard de Pancefot, Helena de Wigorn, Henry de Hasfield, William de la Hakton, Richard de Aston, Richard de Hida, Henry Mercer, Philip de Kinemeresbury, Alexander de Telbrug, Simon de Elbrug, Anselm Niger. These last are without date.

Masters of the Hospital.

Frier Lewin occurs, when John Simond and William de Cheltenham were Præpositi Glouc. (probably in 1255.)

Helias occurs about 15° E. 1.

John de Dumbleton occurs 2° and 16° E. 2.

Edward Taverner 17° and 23° R. 2. and was formerly bailiff of the town.

Robert Burdon 3° and 4° H. 4.

Roger Balle 5° H. 4. being sometime bailiff of Gloucester.

John Byleley 8° and 26° H. 6. being sometime bailiff of Gloucester.

Richard Dalby, 9° H. 6. being sometime bailiff of Gloucester.

Richard Manchester, probably in king Henry the Sixth's reign.

Thomas Berston, 32° and 35° H. 6.

John Asplyn, 4° E. 4.

John Hillery, 5° E. 4.

John Natton, 1497, being afterwards mayor of Gloucester.

Ralph Halcy, 1518, being then alderman of Gloucester.

Thomas Bell, jun. 26° and 27° H. 8. He, and all the succeeding masters enjoyed the office, after they had been sheriffs of the city, and before they were mayors.

Thomas Payne, 27° 28° H. 8.

Maurice Vaughan, 28° 29° H. 8.

John Uggons, 29° 30° H. 8.

Raphael Rawlins, 30, 31 H. 8.

Edmund Allen, 31, 32 H. 8.

Thomas Clouterbuck, 32, 33 H. 8.

Richard Edwards, 33, 34, H. 8.

John Raffel, 34, 35 H. 8.

Thomas Loveday, 35, 36 H. 8.

William Traheron, 36, 37 H. 8.

William Michel, 37, 38 H. 8.

John Sandford, 38 H. 8. 1 E. 6.

Thomas Pury, 1, 2 E. 6.

John Todd, 2, 3, 4 E. 6.

Robert Moreton, 4, 5 E. 6.

William Jenkins, 5, 6 E. 6.

William Bonde, 6 E. 6. 1. M. 1.

Thomas Massinger, 1, 2 M. 1.

Lewis Leyfaunce, 2, 3 M. 1.

Edmund, or, as it is in some accounts Hugh, Aphowel 3, 4 M. 1.

Henry Machyn, 4, 5 M. 1.

Robert Adams, 5, 6 M. 1.

Thomas Hide, 6 M. 1. 1 Eliz.

Laurence Singleton, 1, 2 Eliz.

John Woodward, 2, 3 Eliz.

Thomas Semys, 3, 4 Eliz.

Henry Kyng, 4, 5 Eliz.

Thomas Heath, 5, 6 Eliz. with whom the office expired; for the corporation having obtained St. Bartholomew's hospital, 6 Eliz. the same governors became thenceforth appointed for the Margaret's and Magdalen's also.

Priors.

Gilbert de Siffore occurs, when Hugh Siffor and Walter Kentwin were Præpositi Glouc.

Walter occurs, when John Pain and Robert le Wiſe were Præpositi Glouc. probably in 1269.

William de Sloultre occurs, when Walter Severe and Will. Wyghtfield were bailiffs of Gloucester, probably in 1297.

William Conſelard, 14 E. 3.

Walter de Dumbleton, occurs 14, 15 E. 3.

William —, occurs 29 E. 3. I know not whether he was William Brouning, who occurs 44 E. 3. 4 R. 2.

Henry Palmer, 17 R. 2.

John Attewode, 3 H. 4.

John Aldeford, 11 H. 4.

Stephen Rich, 2, 5 H. 4. He obtained from the king, for himself and the brethren and sisters, a pardon for all offences committed before December 8, 1414.

John Cookes, or Cokes, or Cocks, 5, 6 H. 5.

Thomas Bokeland, occurs 2, 13 H. 6.

Richard Athelard, 19 H. 6.

John Morfe, 26 H. 6.
Richard Athelard, 32 H. 6.
John Fermor, 4, 5 E. 4.
Richard Paafe, or Payle, 5 H. 7.
Robert Clouterboke, 9 H. 7.

William Organ, husbandman, was admitted a brother, and his wife Emmote, a sifter, of the hospital in 1518, by the mayor and all the burgesies of Gloucester, with the master of the house: He was then by the same persons advanced to the priorship, which he was to enjoy for his life, upon payment of 10*l.* yearly to the brethren and sisters, and employing the lands in husbandry. In his time the grant of Helias Giffard (long enjoyed by the hospital) of the full carriage of one horse-load of wood every day in the winter, and three waynloads every week in the summer, to be had from Brimpsfield wood, being detained by the king's officers; he, in behalf of himself and the hospital, petitioned the king that their right might be restored to them, but with what success is uncertain. He occurs April 4, 11 H. 8.

Thomas Peers, or Perce, occurs 25, 38 H. 8.

Robert Hobbes, September 23, 6 E. 6.

Thomas Wisse, of Dimmock, husbandman, admitted a brother of the hospital October 24, 6 E. 6. was at the same time advanced by the master, with the consent of the brethren and sisters, to the office of prior; but to admit no brother or sifter, without leave of the mayor and three of the eldest aldermen. The value of the goods belonging to the hospital then was 59*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* 1 Mary 1. he occurs in the office; but the next year was disposseffed of it whether by resignation or removal doth not appear. After him no other person occurs in this office; but a father and a matron are appointed for this house by the governors of the Bartholomew's hospital, where, as at the principal house, courts are occasionally holden, and the poor people of the Margaret's are obliged to attend them.

In this parish also is

SAINT MARY MAGDALEN'S, OR KING JAMES'S HOSPITAL.

This house is situate northward of St. Margaret's, and was therefore called the Upper House, or Hospital of Dufestan. The priory of Lanthony is acknowledged as the founder, and used to supply it weekly with a certain quantity of bread.

This hospital, as appears by the Monasticon, seems to have been in part sustained with a moiety of the lordship of Bernystone, [Barrington] in this county, which was given to the priory of Lanthony, by earl Milo, the constable, for thirteen lepers. It appears by a manuscript now in C.C.C. college, Oxon, that the brethren received yearly to the value of 12*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for providing certain loaves, called the loaves of Dufestan, and for other necessaries, from the priory of Lanthony; to the monks of which the cure of this house was the usual title for obtaining of holy orders.

It is said in the register book of Henry Deene, prior of Lanthony, that the poor people of this hospital assigned two loaves a day, a load of hay, and a tree for fewel yearly, with the pasturage of a cow, and some other lands, for the maintenance of their priest.

John Carrell, esq; Richard Pate, and Edward Gostroyke, gentlemen, were commissioners appointed by the king, 37^o H. 8. who certified, That this hospital was founded for a master and certain poor people, who were to enjoy the income of all the lands, amounting to 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly. The goods, plate, and ornaments belonging to it were valued at 6*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*

The priory of Lanthony being dissolved, this hospital was so poor, and the buildings so miserably decayed, that queen Elizabeth, December 4, in the 41st year of her reign, granted the patronage and power of placing a supervisor or governor over it, to the mayor and burgeses of Gloucester, in consideration of their rebuilding it, at which time there were only four persons in it of the old foundation. And afterwards, on account of the great expence the corporation had been at in this building, king James the Firft, in the 14th year of his reign, by his charter granted, That the hospital should be under the government of the city, and that thenceforth it should be called by his name: That whereas the kings of England paid an annual pension of 13*l.* to this hospital, that pension, with all the former gifts, grants, and lands, should be applied for the maintenance of nineteen poor people and a minister.

In 1562, according to bishop Cheiney's account of the diocese, there were then one reader and six poor people only maintained in it.

It appears by original writings in the custody of the corporation, that an annuity of 20*l.* payable out of the manors of Newland and Ruredean, in the county of Gloucester, was sold to the mayor and burgeses in the year 1650, and at that time king James's pension of 13*l.* before-mentioned was assigned to the hospital.

At some distance from the hospital, on the west side next the highway, is a neat chapel, which in the before-mentioned certificate is called a parish church; and there was a messuage near the hospital called the old parsonage house.

Priors.

Thomas Tully occurs 9 H. 7.

William Malvern, who died sometime after the 25th of June, 1551.

Thomas Povey, alias Shepherd, who died between April and October, 1571.

John Fenner, alias Spring, was presented by the queen, March 26, 15 Eliz. His will is dated June 13, 1603, and was proved in May following; on the back of which is an inventory of the household goods, &c. which came to him as prior of the hospital, and are to remain to it for ever. First, one cornewayne and one dungwayne, with one pair of iron-bound wheels.—Item two yokes for oxen and two iron stringes, one plow with a shear and coulter, one sow, one cock with three hens.—Item, four brasse potts, two great potts and two little potts.—Item, three brasse pans and one brasse kettle.—Item, one little brasse posnet.—Item, one pewter candlestick.—Item, a challis or communion cup of silver.—Item, in the church, one table cloth and a surplis.

Alderman Thomas Machen, upon Fenner's death, was elected by the corporation, September 5, 1 J. 1. He placed thirteen persons in the hospital, which he governed with great prudence, and gave to it the yearly sum of 3*l.* 15*s.* for ever. No other prior occurs after him, but ever since this hospital has been subject to the same governors as the Margaret's, and the poor people attend the courts held at the Bartholomew's.

St. KATHERINE'S, alias St. OSWALD'S.

THIS parish is situate partly in the city, and partly in the liberties.—St. Oswald, king of Northumberland in the year 634, a devout and religious prince, was killed by the Danes, and his relicks first carried to the abbey of Bardney, in Lincolnshire;

Lincolnshire; whence, upon the approach of the Danes afterwards to those parts, they were removed to this place, by Ethelred and the famous princess Ethelfleda, who built a college here for secular priests, which was dedicated to the honour of St. Oswald, and afterwards converted into a priory of regular canons, of which more particularly hereafter.

This priory had antiently a free chapel with a spire steeple, standing upon the bank of the old river Severn, dedicated to St. Katherine, which afterwards became the parish church of which I am now about to give a further account.

Thurstan, archbishop of York^a, pulled down the old church, which was very spacious, built a new one at great expence, and enlarged and repaired St. Oswald's tomb. He also granted to the heirs of the crown two thirds of the yearly income of the canonry, and appropriated the other share for the reparation of the church.

In the taxation made in the 19th year of king Edward the first, this church, with its chapels of Churchdown, Norton, Sainthurst and Compton, was valued at sixty marks. The rectory and advowson of the above church and chapels belonged to the priory of St. Oswald's till it was dissolved; when the king, on the 18th of November, 34^o H. 8. granted all, except Sainthurst, to the dean and chapter of Bristol, who now pay 10*l.* a year to the curate of this parish; besides which, the living was augmented with the queen's bounty in the year 1747.

By an ordinance of parliament in the year 1648, the parish was united to St. John's, the church with its materials given to the corporation of the city, and in 1665, the roof and some other parts of it were used in building the Barley-market-house, in the East-gate-street. This ordinance became null at the restoration, and the parish was again separate, and is at present supply'd by its own curate in the church of St. Mary de Lode; but they bury in their own church-yard.

There was a chantry in this church dedicated to St. Katherine, and another called the charnel service, which the commissioners, in their certificate made 1. E. 6. say, was founded, and its lands put in feoffment for a priest, at the yearly pension of 3*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* and the value of its jewels, ornaments, and other goods, was 2*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*

Pentecostals, 0*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*

Incumbents.

Nicholas Newland occurs in 1541.

Henry, or Harry Francomb, sometime of St. Bartholomew's hospital, occurs in 1558, as doth Thomas Wastal, sometime curate of St. Mary de Lode, and master of the college school, May 26, 1594.

Thomas Tomkins, vicar of St. Mary de Lode, in 1594.

Francis Arnold, before curate of St. Nicholas, but then of St. Mary de Crypt, occurs June 28, 1597.

Robert Charlion, alias Provis, seems to resign this curacy for that of St. Aldate's in 1599.

Giles Knowles occurs in 1600.

Barnabas Morrice, a minor canon, in 1605.

John Phelps, afterwards vicar of the Holy Trinity, occurs 1607.

—— Martrevis occurs 1616.

Richard Brodgate, 1622, 1635.

No curate in 1666.

George Evans, licenced July 24, 1674, occurs 1678, being also a minor canon.

John Price, vicar of St. Mary de Lode.

Daniel Bond, B. A. usher of Crypt School, admitted in 1716.

Thomas Gardiner, M. A. licenced December 24, 1731.

John Warren, LL.D.

The Reverend Mr. Robert Rickards.

Hugh Price, A. M. is the present incumbent.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the church-yard is a raised tomb with the following inscription:

Here lyeth old Mr. Richard Tully,
Who lived C a d 3 years fully.
He did the sword of the city beare
Before the mayor Thirty-one years.
Four wives he had, and here they lye
All waiting Heaven's eternity.
He died ----- March, 1619.

There is a memorial for Mr. Bridges Pateshall, late owner of the adjacent priory, who died April 11, 1720, aged near 40.

Benefactors, &c.

Alderman Thomas Machen gave 24*s.* a year to twelve poor persons of this parish; and

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 40*s.* a year in bread for the poor.

The number of householders in 1562 was 102; about 1712, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, there were 100 houses and about 500 inhabitants; but in 1743, there were 119 households and 406 inhabitants.

The baptisms and burials of this parish are registered at St. Mary de Lode, and included in the account of them there.

In this parish is the site of

The PRIORY of St. OSWALD.

This house stood N. N. W. of St. Peter's abbey, upon the bank of the Severn, near the old key or wharf, which, on occasion of a dispute between the town and the priory, was removed. Some of the legendary writers report^b, that Merwald, viceroy of the western part of Mercia, and his wife Domneva, about the year 660, built a stately monastery here in honour of St. Oswald, the king and martyr, which from the abundance of ornaments about it, was vulgarly called the golden one. But the better and more certain account, is that which has been just touched on at the beginning of the short history of the parish of the same name, taken from the Saxon Chronicle, and from bishop Tanner's Monasticon. These great authorities say that Ethelred, earl of Mercia, and the famous Elfreda his princess, translating the remains of St. Oswald from Bardney in Lincolnshire, in the year 909, richly entombed him here, built a college in honour of that saint, and filled it with prebendaries. In the wars with the Danes, the monks were driven away, and from that time it became a college of secular priests, and was accounted a free chapel royal, exempt from the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury, and the bishop of Worcester, and subject only to the archbishop of York.

^a Godwin in Præful. in vit. — Doleworth's Collections in the Bodleian Library.

^b Ireland's Collect. v. 2, p. 170. E libro Gotcelini de Vita S. Milburgæ.

Having refused to acknowledge the authority of the archbishop of Canterbury, in the year 1083, that prelate^b, for their contumacy, excommunicated the prior, and several of the principal officers, and sent his mandate to the bishop of the diocese to execute the sentence publickly in all his churches, which he did with bells ringing, and lighted candles; but this dispute was afterwards settled in favour of the college.

In the reign of king William the Second, according to bishop Tanner, the secular priests were changed into canons regular of the order of St. Augustine, of which Leland gives the following account. A certain bishop of Lincoln, who was also the chancellor, and highly in favour with the king, intreated the king to intercede with the archbishop of York for some lands in Lindsey and Moteham, which belonged to that see. The archbishop granted the king's request, but on condition that this house, which was the king's free chapel, should ever afterwards be appropriate to the see of York, which the king readily complied with. And this accounts for the churches under the patronage of St. Oswald's, being in the diocese of York.

When the archbishop had got the house into his hands, he treated with the possessors of it about a new foundation of regular canons. Some of them complied, but others at first refused: however at length prevailing, he appropriated benefices to them, but reserved several of their lands for the church of York. Geofry of Malmesbury says that the archbishop drove out the possessors by force of hostility, but preserved several of their lands, and bestowed them upon his own monks.

Rudburn accounts^c differently for this priory being appropriated to the church of York, and Sir William Dugdale agrees in part with both accounts, viz. that the king gave this house and the monastery of Selby, at his own charge, in satisfaction for the claim which the archbishop had in Lincoln and Lindsey.

After the king's grant had been confirmed by the popes^d Honorius, Paschal, Alexander, and Innocent, the priory again denied the jurisdiction of the see of Canterbury, whereupon the members of this priory, the clerks and officials of the see of York, were summoned to the visitation of the archbishop of Canterbury, and not attending, were suspended. They appealed to the pope, and Brompton and Hoveden both relate that the next year, a cardinal of the name of Hugezun, or Hugh, was dispatched from Rome to settle the difference, which was done at a council at Winchester, where it was agreed that the archbishop of Canterbury should quit his claim to this priory, being esteemed the king's chapel, and should absolve those whom before he had excommunicated.

At a provincial council held at Lambeth in 1280, archbishop Peckham^e pronounced his sentence against the prior and convent, by which he commanded, that no person should presume to sell them any bread, wine, or victuals, for their sustenance; to pay them any tithes; to buy any thing of them, or to have any commerce with them. It was also put under a like severe sentence by Godfrey Giffard, bishop of Worcester, which was afterwards ratified by Robert Winchelsey, archbishop of Canterbury; but the king, by his writs, commanded these proud prelates to revoke their decrees; and the archbishop was afterwards attached to answer the prior in the king's bench, in the octaves of Candlemas, for excommunicating of him and his canons, to the contempt of the king, and prejudice of his majesty, and in the damage of 200*l.* to the priory. Notwithstanding all this, the archbishop still refused to absolve the prior, therefore the king issued his mandate to the keeper of his spiritualities of that province to have him absolved, which had its proper effect. Another mandate was sent in November following to William de Geynesborough^f, then bishop of Worcester, and his official, prohibiting them from exercising any ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the priory; and in 1318, a general prohibition was issued against making any kind of incroachments on its liberties and privileges, which put a stop to them intirely.

The donations to the priory were confirmed by the kings Henry the First, and Richard the Second.

In the grant of the tenths of the clergy to the king, 2^o H. 7. the prior is rated at 46 sol. 4 den. ob. for temporalities. The priory was valued at the dissolution at 90*l.* 10*s.* 2*d. ob.*

The king, July 7, 31^o H. 8. in consideration of 100*l.* and of former services, granted to John Jennings, esq; the site of the priory, with all its houses and lands in the city and suburbs of Gloucester, and some other particulars, at the twentieth part of a knight's-fee, and the yearly tenths of 1*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* Several other lands, tithes, &c. in Longford, Churchdown, Norton, Sainthurst, Compton Abdale, and other parts of the county of Gloucester, were granted to the bishop and to the dean and chapter of Bristol, upon the erecting of that see; and a fishery which had belonged to this priory, was granted to the chapter of Gloucester, 38^o H. 8.

^b Thomas's Antiqu. Maj. Malvern, p. 47, 48.—Leland's Itin. v. 4, p. 78.

^c Hist. Mon. Winton in Anglia Sacra.

^d Mon. Anglic. v. 3, p. 131, 132, 143, 260.

^e Brompton's Chronicle, p. 1000, 1007. Antiq. Eccles. Angl. in Vita.

^f Prinne's Usurpations.

The site of the priory afterwards descended to Agnes Wright, daughter of Joan Kemp, who was daughter of — Jennings, son and heir of Sir John Jennings, who had the original grant before he was knighted. The husband of Agnes Wright had livery granted him 5^o Marie, and their son Richard had livery 17^o Eliz. but it is now the property of the Reverend Mr. John Newton, who resides here.

Most of the priory has been long since demolished; but by the buildings yet remaining, it seems to have been a small quadrangle, with a gate on the south side, and another on the north, leading to the church adjoining.

Priors, collected out of the register books of York and Worcester, and other authorities.

Humphry, a man of eminent learning and piety, of the priory of Lanthony, was, in 1153, made the first prior after the introduction of regular canons, as we learn from Hagustaldensis, in his Continuation of Simon Dunelm.

William occurs when Geoffry Cuttstich and Walter Hoich were prepositi of Gloucester.

Richard occurs in the reign of king Henry the Third.

Richard de Freynges occurs about 1260.

Richard de Buckampton or Buchampton was elected 1281.

Guydo died in 1289, and was succeeded by Peter de Malbern, or Malburn, who resigned 1301, and was succeeded by Walter de Bingham, who resigned also in 1310.

Humphrey Lavynnton succeeded, and resigned also in 1312.

John Aythwell succeeded, and resigned the same year, to Richard Kidderminster, who was amoved in 1314, and John Aythwell restored.

William Heved occurs 1352, as does

Thomas Duk 1398, and John Players 1404, to whom

John Shiptyn, or de Shipton, succeeded in 1408.

John Suclely was elected 1433, as was John Higin, canon of Wigmore co. Hereford, 1434, who resigning, was succeeded by John Mylis, canon of Cirencester, co. Gloucester, collated by the archbishop of York, 1447.

Richard ——— occurs 1458.

John Beke, or Beche, was collated by the archbishop of York (quamdiu nobis placuerit) in 1464, but resigning, William Newland was collated, 1474.

Nicholas Fawkener, or Falkner, a canon of Lanthony, was collated by the archbishop of York, 1491. How long he continued doth not appear, nor does the election of William Giffard, alias Jenings, who occurs June 24, 21^o H. 8. and obtained from St. Peter's abbey a presentation to the rectory of Rudford, August 4, 1533, with which he held the priory in commendam till 1536, when he resigned that rectory. After his priory was dissolved, he became a monk of St. Peter's, and in 1541, was made the first dean of the cathedral.

In this parish is the site of the monastery of

THE WHITE FRIERS, OR COLLEGE OF CARMELITES.

This house stood without the lower North-gate, not far from Brook-street, towards the west end of the meadow which is still called the friers ground.

According to Mr. Speed, from whom Sir Robert Atkyns takes his short account, and to whom bishop Tanner refers, it was founded by queen Eleanor, Sir Thomas Giffard, and Sir Thomas Berkeley; but some MS. collections of Mr. Stow make Sir Thomas Berkeley the sole founder. William Giffard, archbishop of York^a, granted the friers leave to build an oratory in Brook-street, without Gloucester, 15 kal. Feb. 1269. It was surrendered^b July 28, 1538, to Richard, suffragan bishop of Dover, in the presence of the mayor and three of the aldermen, when it was said to be but a small house in decay. It had no rents, except 2s. a year for land on lease for twenty years. Thomas Knight, William Pleasans, and Henry Birchwood, who were friers of it, had then permission to change^c their habits.

After it was dissolved, the house, and two acres of land called Elmrow, belonging^k to the friery, were granted July the 4th, 35^o H. 8. to Richard Andrews, and Nicholas Temple, who sold them soon after to Sir Thomas Bell, by whom the house and meadow adjacent, granted to Alexander and Daniel Perte, 7^o E. 6. were applied towards the support of St. Kimbro's, or Kineburg's hospital, of which hereafter. Other lands in the parish of Leigh, belonging to the friery, were granted to Sir Thomas Bell, 36^o H. 8.

Great part of the friery seems to have been destroyed about the year 1567, yet in the reign of queen Elizabeth several of the buildings belonging to it remained, and the house of correction for the county of the city was appointed to be kept in some part of them. The last and total destruction of this house was reserved for the time of the civil wars, when some of the materials were used in the fortification of the city. Some of the buildings, called the founder's lodgings, were converted into a barn, which proved very serviceable to the city at the siege.

The corporation have now the land whereon the friery stood, for which they pay yearly to the crown a quit rent of 1s. 3d.

Nicholas Cantelupe, or Cantelow, D.D.^l but called from the place of his nativity and residence Nicholas of Gloucester, was of the same family with a canonized bishop of Hereford, and being a Carmelite, presided over the convent of his order here. He was intimately and familiarly acquainted with Humphry the good duke of Gloucester. Being chosen prior at Northampton, he continued there till his death, in 1441, leaving behind him several monuments of literature, in divinity and history.

David Boys, called sometimes Boschus, and Boethius, D. D.^m a Carmelite here, visited most of the foreign universities for improvement, and was also a familiar friend to duke Humphry. After he had been for some time governor of this monastery, he died in that office about 1450, or 1451, and was buried among his brethren here, having led a religious life, and left several learned works behind him.

^a Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, p. 151.

^b MS. in Cotton library. ———^c Ibid.

^k It is so said in a MS. wrote about 1653, which belonged to Thomas Pury, esq; who was general receiver of Gloucestershire and Wiltshire; but Sir Robert Atkyns says, p. 125, that Elmrow belonged to Studley priory, in Warwickshire.

^l Stevens's Supplement to the Monasticon. ———^m Ibid.

St. MARY de CRYPT,

Called also Christ-Church, and St. Mary in the South.

THIS is a handsome church situate on the east side of the South-gate street, consisting of a low aisle on each side of the nave, a cross aisle, and a neat tower with eight small but very musical bells in it; a chapel on each side of the chancel, a large porch against the south aisle, and a smaller one at the west end. It seems to have received the name of Crypt, which signifies a vault or charnel house, from the vaults under it, of which there are two; that under part of the south and middle chancel is thirteen yards long, ten broad, and about three deep; the other at the west end, into which there is a descent out of the street, seems to be larger.

The rectory, now in the patronage of the lord chancellor, is worth, besides voluntary contributions, about 26*l.* a year, including the rent of three houses, and money paid for sermons. It was given to the priory of Lanthony in 1137, by Robert Chichester, bishop of Exon, who built the church, together with all its profits, except a pension of 20*s.* to the nunnery of Godstow, in the county of Oxford.

In the taxation of ecclesiastical preferments made 19° E. 1. it is thus expressed: *Rectoria Sanctæ Mariæ in austro villæ Glouc. alias ecclesia Christi, valet clare in redditu una cum decimis et oblationibus ibidem per annum ultra 6*s.* 8*d.* solutos archidiacono pro procuratione, 20*s.* pro sinagio, 20*s.* abbatissæ de Godstow pro pensione, 3*s.* sacristæ Lanthoniæ pro quadam annua pensione, 4*d.* ob. coquinario Lanthon. pro capitali redditu, 8*d.* comiti Gloucestricæ pro longabulo, 3*s.* 4*d.* senescallis Gloucestricæ pro quodam quieto redditu, 13*d.* episcopo pro visitatione, 14*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.

The dean and chapter of Gloucester now pay the rector 1*s.* 6*d.*

By an ordinance of parliament, All Saints and St. Owen's were united to this church, and one of the prebendal houses, with an annuity of 80*l.* was settled for the rectory; the rectory to pay for first fruits and tenths according to the rate of 8*l.* a year; and the patronage was given to the corporation.

In this church were the following particulars:

1. A chantry, dedicated to St. Mary, to which Richard Manchester was a great benefactor in 1454.
2. A chantry on the south part of the church, dedicated to St. John Baptist, to which Manchester likewise contributed.
3. A chantry dedicated to St. Katherine, the lands of which lying in Lidney in Gloucestershire, and Ripple and Naunton in Worcestershire, were sold to Sir Thomas Bell, and Richard Duke, esq; August 17, 2° E. 6.
4. A fraternity dedicated to St. Thomas.
5. An anniversary, some of the possessions of which were sold to the two last mentioned persons.

6. A yearly obit on September 13, for alderman John Cook, his father, mother, wife, and others, mentioned in the will of lady Cook, 1544, by whom it was founded.

Great part of the Black-Horse inn was formerly the parsonage house, which is the only one now remaining to any of the parishes in the city, and at this time it pays a considerable chief-rent to the rector. There certainly were parsonage houses antiently belonging to all those rectories or livings, the incumbents of which did not live in the religious houses to which their churches were appropriated; Saint Mary de Grace, and the Holy Trinity had them, and the parsonage-houses of All Saints, St. Aldate, St. Mary de Lode, and St. Michael, all occur in the old records. How they came to be lost does not appear; perhaps they might be taken away under pretence of concealed lands, or of forfeiture.

Upon several bricks now remaining in the church and chancel, are the following arms: A fess between six cross crosslets.—The arms of archbishop Deene.—The arms of the Berkeley family.

First fruits, £.14 : 7 : 1 Synodals, — £.0 : 2 : 0
Tenths, — 1 : 8 : 9 Pentecostals, 0 : 1 : 2
Procurations, 0 : 6 : 8

Incumbents.

- John Butterley occurs rector before 25° H. 3.
Alexander occurs in the same reign, as do
Walter de Elbrugge in that of king Edward the First.
Simon Tangard, 14 E. 3.
William le Heyberare, 31 E. 3.
John Burgeys occurs rector in 1433.
Thomas Stuard, or Styward, 1455. He was afterwards batchelor of degrees, and had a grant of the perpetual curacy of Hempsted. He was inrolled in the obituary of the priory of Lanthony, where one of the canons officiated daily for him for two years, and having done good services to the priory, there was the same yearly commemoration for him as for a canon.
Thomas Oldbury, rector of Rockhampton, in exchange with Stuard, was presented 1468, by the prior and convent of Lanthony, who continued to present till John Tolson, by their grant, presented Thomas Young, as under.
William Friser occurs rector 1472.
William Jones, 1 R. 3.
John Adam, 1492, and resigning,
Thomas Nuland was presented in 1496.
Thomas Woodward, sometime rector of All Souls, dying,
Thomas Newman was presented 1499.
Robert Stinchcomb, batchelor in degrees, occurs, 1528.
Thomas Greenwood, D. D. occurs rector 34 H. 8. and was also vicar of Standish.
Thomas Young, M. A. instituted March 1, 1542, by John Tolson as above-mentioned.
Hugh Whittington, who resigned in 1548.
Henry Hawkes, instituted 1548.
Evan Williams, instituted 14 Eliz. by the queen.
Thomas Woodcocke, curate of St. John's, 1575. He was instituted to Haresfield, March 1, 1577.
Alexander Borun, upon a vacancy, obtained the sequestration, and was curate, 1579.
Thomas Ditley, upon deprivation, was instituted by queen Elizabeth in 1584.
Thomas Wrenche occurs curate in 1594.
Francis Arnold, before curate of St. Nicholas's, then of St. Katherine's, in 1597.
William Grove, M. A. sometime master of Crypt school, and the city lecturer, 1599; but being collated to Hartpury, in 1603, Thomas Elliotts probably succeeded, for he occurs in 1619.
Edward, or Edmund Barwell, usher of Crypt-school, 1620.
Philip Hoyer, curate of All Saints, and St. John's, 1628.
Jonathan Bullock, M. A. 1632.
John Allibond, curate of St. Nicholas's, 1634.
John Massinger, 1638.
John Corbet, usher of Crypt-school, 1641.
Samuel Kenrick, M. A. 1648, Corporation patrons.

Clement Barksdale, elected in 1657, by the same.

William Jones, presented in 1658, by the same.

Edmund Hall, M. A. sometime rector of Great Risington, instituted in 1662, by king Charles the Second.

John Gregory, M. A. upon Hall's resignation, was instituted in 1664. He was afterwards rector of Hempsted, and archdeacon of Gloucester.

Richard Littleton, vicar of Longney, occurs curate in 1671.

Dennis Huntingdon was curate in 1675, and the same year instituted into the vicarage of Preston.

Abraham Gregory, M. A. was instituted 1675, and was afterwards a prebendary of Gloucester cathedral. King C. 2. patron.

William Whittington, M. A. a minor-canon of the cathedral, and rector of Rudford, was instituted, 1679, upon Gregory's resignation, and dying in 1684, was buried in the middle chancel, under a stone with an inscription for him.

Matthew Yate, M. A. occurs 1697. He was instituted into the rectory of Matson, and dying June 5, 1717, aged 53, was buried under a tomb erected for him near the east end of the church-yard. Upon whose death, John Nourse, M. A. was instituted. King G. 1. patron.

Edward Robinson Payne, M. A. upon Nourse's cession, 1723. Same patron.

Edward Niccolls, M. A. upon Payne's being instituted into the rectory of Cowling, in the deanery of Rochester, was instituted in 1733. G. 2. patron.

Richard Rogers, LL. B. is the present incumbent.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the south chancel, or St. Mary's chapel, against the south wall, is a raised tomb, on which are painted the old arms of the city, and Argent, on a cheveron gules two bars gemels sable, between three hawk's-bells Or; on a chief of the second a lure, and two martlets of the first. Crest. A dexter arm armed, holding a battle-ax erect, argent. Upon the upper part of the tomb, in the old character,

The Tombe of Syr Thomas Bell, knight, and of dame Joane, his wyfe.

Lower on the tomb is a painting of Sir Thomas Bell, kneeling, in a scarlet gown, with a chain of gold about his neck. Also his wife kneeling, with a scutcheon of their arms between them, and the following inscription in black character.

Bereffe this lyfe, here lyeth under stone
Syr Thomas Bell, whylom a knyght of fame;
Who lyuing here, gaue foode to many a one,
And eke behynde prouision for the same
Hathe leste in store for euer to be hadd,
Amonge the pore that here in towne shall dwell.
Off lyme and stone an Almeshowse hath he made
For fixe pore folkes, and buylt the same full well,
Here in this streat fast by the southerne yate:
And hath the same with lyuelyhoode endewede,
That aye shall last, and neuer shall abate.
Thricke w' free uoyce eke hath this towne allowde
This worthy man a mayors rome to wealde,
And thryese him cald in parlement to sytt,
Forre wealthe of them in rest at home that dwelde.
And nowe hath deathe his worthy trayuayle'quyte,
When he had runne of fowercore yeres the race
Whose spryte in May, as pleasyd GOD presyxe,
The lyxe and twentie daye, and yere of grace.
A thousand syue hundred threscore and syxe,
This ayer fled into the heauenly skye
Where he, God graunt, an euerlastyng tyme
In ioye may lyue, and neuer more to dye.

Below on the outside of the tomb,

Dame Joone Bell, the Wydowe of Syr Thomas Bell, knyght, hath caused this tombe to be made, and fynished the same, the xiiii day of Iune, in the yere of ower LORD GOD 1567.

Within the same wall, a mural monument, the inscription and crosses on brasse torn off, supposed to be for the founder of this chapel.

John Cook, esq; who died September 14, 1529, with lady Joan Cook his wife, the pious founder of Crypt-school, were buried near St. John Baptist's altar. Their effigies and the inscription, which were on brasse, laid in a grey marble, are now torn off and lost.

A monument for Mr. Daniel Lysons, with the following inscription.

Siste viator, et paulo attentius imaginem meditare DANIELIS LYSONS, viri, ad cuius exemplar integri Christiani simulachrum potes effingere: Fuit enim, inter mercatores justus, inter literatos eruditus, inter doctores theologus, inter liberales munificus: Linguarum non solum Latinæ, sed Grecæ et Hebraicæ, exquisita cognitione insignis; et literarum, quam lucri amantior, ad sacras literas se totum applicuit, earumque plenitudinem adeo submisce adoravit, ut raro aut nunquam, in museolo, nisi flexis genibus, sacras paginas evolveret. In cumulandis opibus promptus, sed beneficus, et eleemosynis largiendis tam propensus, ut quotannis, decimam partem reddituum pauperibus erogaret. Tam flagranti sanctimonia vitam degit, quali alii e vivis discedunt; tot tantisque claruit virtutibus, quot vel natura mortalis recipit, vel industria perficit. Denique, animam lætitia spirituali repletam, et firmiter de divina misericordia persuasam, Deo reddidit, Decembris 13, 1681, Ætat. 38.

Against the same wall, a little to the right, is a handsome blue and white marble monument for John Snell, esq; who had been one of the members for the city, with the following inscription:

H. S. E. Johannes Snell, Armiger, honesta stirpe natus; forma elegans & conspicuus; ingenio facundus & suavis; moribus gravis & urbanus; vitæ integerrimus; senatu celeberrimus; numerosa prole felicissimus; conjugii præmerenti, et patriæ similiter orbatæ, desideratissimus. Animam Deo reddidit die Septembris IX, MDCCXXVI. Vixit annos XLIII, menses tres. Monumentum hoc, virtutibus viri optimi sacrum, poni curavit uxor mœtissima.

To the right of the above, a beautiful marble monument representing Piety in a fitting posture, before her a bust in high relief of Mrs. Dorothy Snell, and underneath, upon a table, the following inscription.

To the Memory of Dorothy Snell, Daughter of Charles and Elizabeth Yate, of Coulthorpe, in the County of Gloucester. Born the 20th day of February 1709-10; Married May the 21st, 1737, to Powell Snell, Esq; of Lower Guiting. She exchanged this Life for a better, on the 30th Day of March, 1746, survived by two Sons and one Daughter. In her Conduct to her Parents, Husband, and Children, obedient, faithful, affectionate; to her Friends, Neighbours, and all Mankind, sincere, benevolent, charitable. In Health, an engaging affability and innocent Cheerfulness rendered her the Delight of all who knew her. In Sickness, she sustained a tedious and painful Distemper, and felt the approaches of Death with a Resignation and Fortitude which Christian Piety could alone inspire. This Monument, in Gratitude to so valuable a Wife, Powell Snell hath caused to be erected.

Powell Snell, esq; of Lower Guiting, who died in the year 1770, is buried here, but as yet there is no monument erected for him.

Many persons who have been mayors of the city are buried here, viz. John Cook, as above.

Thomas Pury, esq; (twice mayor) who died in April, 1580.

Lawrence Holliday, who died June 30, 1587.

Luke Garnons, esq; thrice mayor, who died February 12, 1614.

Richard Lane, who died 1667. His daughter Sarah Wright, gave several charities to the city.

Robert Payne, mayor, buried January 5, 1670.

William Hill, who died August 29, 1636.

John Scriven, who died June 23, 1645.

Thomas Hill, who died in October, 1652.

Thomas Pury, who died August 23, 1660.

John Ewins, who died April 30, 1696.

Thomas Longden, who died April 25, 1702.

Thomas

Thomas Snell.

Sir Samuel Eckly, knight, sometime high sheriff of this county, who died August 7, 1706.

Robert Payne, esq; twice mayor and parliament man for the city, who died February 20, 1712, aged 82.

John Bell.

John Radway, who died May 17, 1736.

Many other persons of note have also been buried here, viz.

James Kyrle, esq; who died February 1, 1645. and Ann, his wife, who died September 19, 1642.

John Tomes, sheriff, who died April 17, 1658, aged 37.

Anthony Nourse, M. D. who died Aug. 14, 1659.

John Partridge, of Mitchel-Dean, gent. who died April 12, 1667.

Thomas Williams, esq; bencher of the Inner Temple, who died 1667.

Sarah Gough, who died February 18, 1669.

John Bell, who died February 20, 1672.

John Purlewent, sheriff, who died March 19, 1678. John his son died January 5, 1686.

Samuel Rose, sheriff, who died 1680.

William Alexander, M. A. master of the college-school, and vicar of Hartpury, who died May 1, 1742.

Benefactions.

Mr. Walter Pury, in 1506, gave 20s. a year, half to the church, the remainder to ten poor widows.

Sir Thomas Bell gave 10l.

John Tunks gave 10l.

Mr. John Hill, gave 10l.

Mrs. Margaret Norton gave 80l.

Mrs. Sarah Wright gave two houses.

Alice Whitfield gave 3l. a year for a term of years.

Philip Lewis gave 40l. to this parish and St. Owen's, and 10l. more to this.

Mrs. Eleanor Weaver gave 100l.

Mr. Josias Randle 50l.

Mr. Samuel Burroughs 40l.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 4l. 5s. yearly for ever, 2l. of which for two sermons, the one on Good Friday, the other on Holy Thursday; 2l. a year to the poor for bread on Good Friday; and 5s. for bread and wine at the sacrament that day.

Alderman Robert Payne gave 1l. 3s. yearly to the poor of this parish and St. Owen's, for bread, and 6s. 8d. for reading prayers on Candlemas-day.

Mrs. Mary Shail, in 1734, gave 50l.

Mrs. Ann Pitt gave 10l. for a sermon on Easter Monday.

And according to Sir Robert Atkyns, Mr. Richard Hoar gave 53s. yearly to the poor, of which my other accounts take no notice.

Baptisms.			Burials.
males	females		males	females
1759	5	7	10	12
1760	14	10	17	20
1761	14	10	28	11
1762	5	6	21	23

1763	12	12	22	23
1764	10	13	19	23
1765	11	9	35	37
1766	6	11	30	20
1767	5	16	27	28
1768	10	12	24	23
1769	21	11	23	21
Total	230		Total	497

N. B. The baptisms and burials of the parish of All Saints are included in this account.

There were 71 householders in this parish in the year 1562; by Sir Robert Atkyns's account about 1710 there were 155 houses and about 700 inhabitants, in this parish, and those of All Saints and St. Owen's; but in the year 1743, there were in this parish, separate from the other two, 109 households, and 495 inhabitants.

The particulars of the free-school have been already given p. 127.

	l.	s.	d.
The Royal Aid in 1692,	184	0	0
Poll Tax — 1694,	82	1	0
Land Tax — 1694,	272	2	0
The same in 1770,

In 1770, this parish paid quarterly to the work-house 32l. 4s. 6d. and 19l. 19s. towards lamps.

The FRIERY, called the BLACK FRIERS, or the House, or College of Friars Preachers.

This stood within the town, says Leland, not far from the castle-garth, or court-yard. It was founded by king Henry the Third and Stephen lord of Harneshull, about the year 1239. King Edward the Third, in the 39th year of his reign, as we learn from bishop Tanner, gave licence to the prior and brethren of this friery to enlarge their mansion-house.

A manuscript in the Cotton library mentions the surrender of this monastery on the 28th of July, 1538, to Richard, (perhaps Richard Yngworth) suffragan bishop of Dover, in the presence of the mayor and three of the aldermen. They had no rents, but their gardens were in lease for a long term of years. Thomas Bell then kept 300 men at work in the friery, for which reason the bishop desired he might continue in it.

John Rainolds, B. D. the prior; John Hooper, Richard Byland, William Swan, afterwards rector of Shipton Solers; William Walton, Ralph Howel, or Powel, Thomas Mekins, afterwards curate of Upton St. Leonard's, and vicar of Ashelworth, were the friers at the time of the surrender, and were permitted to change their habit.

The site of this friery, with some other lands, were granted to Sir Thomas Bell July the 12th, 31st H. 8. in consideration of 240l. 5s. 4d. and soon afterwards this house was improved into a handsome mansion, called Bell's Place, where the manufacture of cap-making was carried on. From Bell it descended to one of his wife's relations, tions, married to Thomas Dennis, esq; whose descendants sold it to Mr. Samuel Cockerell, of whose family Mr. John Bush purchased the capital building for a dwelling-house, in the year 1768.

Dr. Stukeley has given a draught of this priory in his Itinera Curiosa, as it stood in 1721, and one of the plates in Buck's collection of the remains of English religious houses, is of this monastery and of Lanthony together. A good part of the church is still remaining.

Upon a broken stone dug up in 1716, was the effigy of a frier, and on another Ossa Johannis Biseley.

There were lately upon some bricks in the floor of one of the houses, made out of the ruins of the friery, the arms of archbishop Dene, of the bishoprick of Durham, of St. Peter's abbey, and a bend cotised, between six trees; and in a missal found in the friery, in the year 1714, were the names of Walter Bowden, Agnes his wife, Richard Warminster, John Brigge, Robert Durnel, and Julian his wife, who probably were benefactors to it. Thomas lord Berkeley, about the reign of Edward the First, relieved the brethren of this house very liberally out of his granaries.

There was formerly in this parish, a priory of Black Canons, founded by king Athelstan, which seems to be different from the house of Dominicans, or Black Friars, just spoken of, for that order was not in being 'till some hundreds of years after the time of Athelstan; but the accounts of these houses are so confused, that there is not much to be learnt concerning the latter distinct from the other.

In this parish stood also

The GREY FRIERS, or, The House or College of Friars Minors, or Franciscans.

This house, according to the undoubted authority of Leland, stood within the city, eastward of the church of St. Mary de Crypt, and was founded by one of the lords of Berkeley. William Gerard gave the monks of this house a supply of water from Matson, or Robin-Hood's hill, the quantity of which, on account of a dispute between the friery and St. Peter's abbey, was settled by Edward the Black Prince, in 1350.

Thomas lord Berkeley, about 35° E. 3. gave them some adjacent lands and tenements; and it is said in Dugdale's Baronage, that William, marquis of Berkeley, by his will, dated February 5, 1491, ordered that a frier should perpetually officiate for himself and relations in this house, towards the rebuilding of which, Leland says, he gave 20*l.* We have it also on Dugdale's authority, that the lady of James lord Berkeley was buried in the choir of this monastery, in the year 1452. She had been unjustly imprisoned in the castle of Gloucester, by Margaret countess of Shrewsbury, on account of some violent contests at law, which for a great number of years subsisted between those two families, and there kept 'till she died, which was on Saturday before the feast of St. Michael.

It is said that this friery was in some measure under the direction of the warden of the Grey Friars in Lewinsmead, Bristol, but how far I cannot learn.

This house was surrendered July 28, 1538, to Richard, suffragan bishop of Dover, in the presence of the mayor and three aldermen, when it was said to be "a goodly house, much of it newly builded, especially the church, choir, and dorture, the rest small lodgings".

William Lightfoot, afterwards vicar of Tetbury, John Beacheley, or Berklay, Henry Tacket, George Cooper, and John Kebut, afterwards rector of St. Aldate's, friars of this house, were permitted to change their habit.

After the dissolution, the king, April 2, 33° H. 8. granted it with a close of pasture ground on the east side, the church-yard, a garden in the south-gate street, and all other particulars belonging to the site of the monastery, to Sir John Jennings, for twenty-one years, at 33*s.* a year, reserving all the buildings to be thrown down and carried away, as he by his commissioners shall think fit; but the same year he convey'd the fee to the same person. From Jennings it passed to Hugh Gethyn, and thro' several hands 'till Mr. Thomas Pury granted it, in 1630, to the corporation of the city.

Great damage was done to the buildings of this house at the siege, by the king's artillery; but there are still considerable remains of the monastery; the walls of the church, which was large, are entire. It is now formed into three tenements, which, together with others, a bowling-green, orchard and gardens, all belonging to the said monastery, are now the property of Powell Snell, esq; who has a lease of them from the corporation for a long term, at a small chief-rent.

Dr. Stukeley, in his Itinera Curiosa, has given a plate of this also, as it stood August 24, 1721, but he was mistaken in calling it the White Friars.

Mr. Justice Powell, one of the judges of the king's bench, was a native of this city, and resided in this house, whose solid judgment in the municipal laws, and moderation in behaviour, deservedly placed him on the bench of the highest courts of judicature in the nation. He died in the year 1713, and was buried in the Lady's chapel, in the cathedral church, where is a magnificent monument for him, as in p. 119.

Littleworth, and several of the South Hamlets lie in this parish, but they will all be considered at the conclusion of the account of the city, under Suburbs.

St. MARY de GRACE, or GRACE-LANE; called also St. Mary in the Market.

THIS church consisted of one aisle, with a spire steeple, and stood on the place now called the knap, where the herb and fish market is kept, east of the site of the king's board. It is is a rectory, but was antiently a chapel to the Holy Trinity. The abbey of St. Peter granted the oblations and profits of it to a chaplain, at the yearly rent of 10*s.*

In the valuation or certificate 19° E. 1. it is thus expressed: Exitus Capellæ, viz. de decimis personalibus ad Pascha 49 sol. 11 den. oblationibus 39 sol. oblationibus ad imaginem Beatæ Mariæ ibidem 4 sol. 4 den. in purificationibus, anniversariis obsequiis, et aliis consimilibus 22 sol. 10 den. quæ omnia et singula curatus ibidem percipit pro salario suo, præter 10 sol. nomine cujusdam pensionis, annuatim solutos abbati. Valet clare cxvi. sol. i. den.

The value of this living has been twice augmented by lot, with queen Ann's bounty, and returned.

This church was united to that of St. Michael by an ordinance of parliament in 1648, and the building was granted to the corporation in consideration of their keeping powder and ammunition for the defence of the city. In 1653, it was intirely taken down by order of the corporation, and part of the materials were used in repairing St. Michael's; but ever since the restoration, the parishes have been separate and distinct, though the inhabitants go to St. Michael's church, the minister of which is generally licenced to this curacy.

In this church was a chantry dedicated to St. Mary, and in Grace-lane a messuage called Grace-lane college, or priest's college, belonging to this chantry, which being purchased of the crown, at the dissolution, by Richard Pate, esq; he gave it to Corpus Christi college, in Oxford, towards the maintenance of a school and hospital at Cheltenham.

Incumbents.

John Hamelyr occurs in 1344.

John Playsted 1509, 1512, whose successor was William Slekeborn, but the time of his admission does not appear.

John Fishpoole, presented May 25, 1531.

Richard Lawiens occurs in 1548.

John More in 1551 and 1552, afterwards vicar of Standish.

John Mery, or Merrie, sometime a chantry priest of St. Mary's service in St. Mary de Lode, occurs in 1556, afterwards curate of St. Aldate's.

Thomas Sebroke, sometime curate of the Holy Trinity, occurs in 1558.

Roger Stiche, one of the minor-canon, 1562. He had been reader of the gospel in the cathedral.

Thomas Leipfe, 1569.

William Pielton, in 1572, sometime curate of St. Michael's and St. Nicholas's.

William Fortie, vicar of Minsterworth, was licenced May 29, 1575, and occurs in 1576.

William Webster, vicar of St. Mary de Lode, occurs 1580.

Nicholas Dismyll, 1594.

Robert Haverd, or Haverd, curate of St. Owen's, 1597, 1628.

William Hulet, curate of St. Owen's, 1634, 1635, minor canon, deprived with the other members of the cathedral.

John Palmer, A. M. is the present incumbent.

Benefactions.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 2*s.* a year to the poor of this parish for bread.

The baptisms and burials are registered in the book at St. Michael's, and included in the account of them in that parish.

The number of householders in this parish in 1562 was 29; about the year 1710, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, there were 42 houses, and 240 inhabitants; but in the year 1743, there were 45 houses, and only 137 inhabitants.

Before the workhouse was erected, this parish had paid 6*l.* towards the maintenance of the poor of other parishes, having none of its own; but in the year 1770 it paid quarterly to the workhouse 7*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.* and towards lamps 6*l.* 19*s.*

St. MARY de LODE;

Called also St. Mary before the Gate of St. Peter's, St. Mary Broad-Gate, and St. Mary de Port.

THE church is very old, but handsome, with two side ailes, and a vestry at the end of that on the south, and a cross aile at the end of that on the north. In the middle is a low square tower, with six bells, and it is said there was antiently a lofty spire upon it, which was demolished by a storm. The first name seems to have been given it on account of its situation, for the river Severn formerly ran near it.

Gilbert Foliot, when he was abbat of St. Peter's, with the advice and consent of his convent, assigned this church, with its chapels of St. Giles at Maifmore, St. Lawrence at Barnwood, and St. Leonard at Upton, to the maintenance of a light at the altar of St. Peter.

This vicarage was taxed at thirty marks 19° E. 1. John de Rodberow had a pension in it of twenty-three marks, the sacrist of St. Peter's had five, and the prior of Lanthony, in great tithes, two marks. The rector of this church had five shillings out of that of Matson. The portion of John de Rodberow was a share of the tithes, which for some time was reputed a distinct and independent rectory, enjoyed before him by William de Berners, to which the abbey presented. Reginald de Schipton resigned this portion on the 19th of February, 1301, and on the 15th of April following, it was annexed to the vicarage by the authority of the archbishop of Canterbury.

In 1304, by a composition between the vicar and the abbey, the former and his successors were granted a certain corrody, as formerly received, with a yearly pension of five marks, pay for one horse, and entertainment for himself, a chaplain, a deacon, and two clerks at the abbey table, on certain festivals. All persons belonging to the abbey, tho' parishioners, might be interred in the abbey church-yard; the vicar to have the first mass, and all oblations arising from it; and the abbey to pay no tithes for things privileged within the parish.

In 1313, the vicarage of this church was assigned, by the king's licence, for sustaining and repairing the Virgin Mary's chapel in the abbey.

Pope Urban the Sixth, and Boniface the Ninth also appropriated the revenues of this church, which were then forty marks, to the service of the abbey, and in 1394, the appropriation was acknowledged and ratified by the bishop of Worcester; and again, at a metropolitanical visitation, on the 3d of September, 1534.

In 1398, the abbey granted an annual pension of 6*s.* 8*d.* for all episcopal dues.

On the 3d of April, 1403, the bishop of Worcester, with the consent of the abbey, ordained, that instead of all former pensions, &c. the vicar shall have only the care of the vicarage, and enjoy a yearly pension of 16*l.* with the vicarage house; the abbey to pay 26*s.* 8*d.* to the poor of the parish; and, receiving all the oblations and profits arising in the church, to provide at their charge what other chaplains shall be necessary, or used to be, in the church and the chapels belonging to it.

Some of these particulars are taken from abbat Fraucester's register, which contains many things relating to this vicarage; the presentation to which, together with the rectory, coming to the crown at the dissolution of the abbey, they were granted by king H. 8. to the dean and chapter at their foundation, who were appointed to pay the vicar 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* In the year 1666, they paid him 53*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and continued so to do for twenty-one years; but it appears by the bishop's visitation book, that since the expiration of that term, they have paid only 40*l.* which, it is there said, will be continued to a resident vicar; the privy tithes of part of the parish, easter offerings, and surplus fees may amount to 30*l.* more.

Certain portions of tithes, and a moiety of the wood at Woolridge and of another at Le Perche, all said to be in this parish, are also granted by the king to the dean and chapter, in their charter of endowment.

Lands in St. Mary de Lode, lately belonging to St. Peter's abbey, were granted to Richard Andrews and Nicholas Temple 35° H. 8.

The hermitage of Sendbridge, or Senbrugge, or Sondbrugge, or Sandbrug is in this parish. The abbey of St. Peter granted it by the name of the chapel or hermitage of Sendbridge, with the oblations, &c. to Humphry Wilkins, clerk, September 29, 23° H. 8.

William Nottingham, esq; the king's attorney general, gave to St. Peter's abbey certain lands at Senbrugge, to maintain a chantry in the abbey for two monks.

In the ordinance of parliament 1648, for uniting certain churches in the city, this is wholly omitted; but in the year 1650, the corporation petitioned the parliament to unite the cathedral with this parish, and to appoint a preaching minister in the college church: And in 1654 they petitioned again that the cathedral might be made the parish church, and that St. Mary's and St. Katherine's might be united with it.

There were in this church,

1. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary, whereof John Mery, the last incumbent, obtained a pension of 4*l.* Sir Thomas Bell, and Richard Duke, esq; purchased certain possessions belonging to this chantry 2° E. 6. The houses at the north-west end of the church, adjoining to the church-yard, belonged to the chantry priests.

2. A fraternity dedicated to the Holy Trinity, whereof William Taylor, the last incumbent, obtained an annuity of 2*l.* 10*s.* I suppose this is the guild of which it is said, the masters were yearly elected by the corporation out of their own body.

This is a large parish, and antiently was much larger than it is at present. Tuffley and Kingholm, with some part of Lassington, Longford, Twigworth, Down Hatherley, and Wotton, and other lands without the west-gate are reputed to belong to it; and it is said that Lawford's-gate, with forty-eight houses on this side of it, adjoining to the city of Bristol, also belonged to it, and had a proper officer assigned for receiving the dues, and for other necessary purposes. Lands in Stow on the Wold are likewise said to have belonged to this parish. The chapelries which were formerly dependent on it, are now become separate and independent parishes; and the hamlets just mentioned will be considered distinctly under the title Suburbs.

First Fruits, £. 10 : 13 : 4 Synodals, £. 0 : 4 : 0
Tenths, ——— 1 : 1 : 4 Pentecostals, 0 : 1 : 4
Procurations, 0 : 11 : 0

Incumbents.

William de Chamberlayn, presented March 29, 1302; and John de Bristol, presented March 10, 1304; both by John Gamages the abbot, and convent of St. Peter's, patrons.

John Fyich, instituted February 6, 1389, and resigned August 24, 1390; whereupon the abbey enjoyed the impropriation, the abbat being put into the possession thereof. King R. 2. patron.

John Osborne, LL. B. succeeded next, and resigning upon his presentation to the vicarage of Standish, George Teylowe, M. A. was presented April 1, 1501, and upon his death,

Robert, and in some accounts, Walter Walker, presented October 7, 1507; and upon his death,

Thomas, and in other accounts, John Bodelych, was presented September 8, 1508. John Bodelych was made keeper of the pantry of the abbey 1505; and the same year Thomas Bodelych instituted into Froucester vicarage.

Thomas Barker succeeded, and dying,

Thomas Greenow, LL. B. was presented February 2, 1514, and upon his resignation, Humphry Wilkins was presented in March 1521.

N. B. The seven last were presented by the abbat and convent of St. Peter's.

John Jannys, or Yannes, sometime a stipendiary priest in this church, perhaps belonging to the guild of the Holy Trinity, occurs curate in 1542, 1543, as do

William Taylor, sometime of the Holy Trinity guild in this city, 1545.

Humphry Wilkinon, vicar in 1545.

John Jannys, curate, deprived and degraded April 2, 1554, on account of marriage. On the 15th of October in the same year, he was collated to Standish; and in 1559 instituted into Taynton.

William Taylor occurs as vicar April 16, 1556, then making his last will.

Richard Warret, minor canon, and sometime rector of Shenington, occurs curate in 1562, being presented to the vicarage November 27, 1563, which he held with the curacy of St. Nicholas, by the dean and chapter of Gloucester.

Thomas Wastal, or Westal, occurs curate in 1580, being afterward curate of St. Katherine's.

William

William Webfter instituted January 18, 1580, upon a lapse, and in the same year occurs curate of St. Mary de Grace. Upon his presentation to this vicarage 'tis said, Stipendium vicariæ est admodum exiguum. Summa scilicet 10l. 13s. 4d. in pecuniis numeratis. Queen Elizabeth patron.

Thomas Thomkins, minor canon, and curate of St. Katherine's, was instituted March 25, 1596, upon the resignation, or, as other accounts say, the deprivation of Webfter. Dean and chapter of Gloucester patron.

Peter Brooks, minor canon, instituted March 29, 1627, upon Thomkins's death, occurs in 1641. Being deprived of his minor canonry, he lived not to be restored with others of the cathedral.

Francis Hanslape, M. A. instituted February 25, 1660, and was one of the minor canons. King Ch. 2. patron by a lapse.

Thomas Washborne, D. D. instituted June 6, 1668, upon Hanslape's resignation. He was one of the prebendaries. vide p. 167. Dean and chapter of Gloucester patrons.

John Deighton, minor canon, instituted December 5, 1670, upon Dr. Washborne's resignation. He lies buried in the body of the cathedral, with this inscription over him, Johannes Deighton, Cler. obiit 17^o Die Januarii, MDCLXXXV, Ætat. suæ 53.

John Price, B. A. instituted October 6, 1697. King William and queen Mary patrons, by a lapse.

Benjamin King, D. D. one of the prebendaries, upon Price's death, was instituted November 15, 1716; and dying, was buried on the south side of the chancel here, and as yet has no memorial over him. Dean and chapter of Gloucester patrons.

William Tyndale, M. A. rector of Cotes, was instituted June 11, 1722, upon Doctor King's resignation.

John Warren, LL. D.

Robert Rickards, M. A.

Hugh Price, M. A. is the present incumbent.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the north wall of the chancel, opposite the outward door, is an antient mural tomb, with the effigy of a man lying on it, said to have been erected in memory of Lucius, the first christian king, who is reported to have been buried here. Collier's Historical Dictionary. This figure is attired like archbishop Aldred in the cathedral, and was probably intended for some benefactor to the church. The tomb was broken open in the time of the last civil war, in hopes of finding valuable treasure, but the persons engaged in this business were disappointed.

In the cross aisle below the chancel are several antient stones, but the inscriptions are mostly gone. Upon the verge of one of them, in old English letters, may be read,

Orate pro anima dmni Philipi Hoggas - - - - - CCC
- - - - - picietur dn amen.

On the next stone is a cross. Round the verge Claudii. tuba Spenser Ion sic et X Iohanna - - - - -
Part of both the above are covered with seats.

Almost at the west end of the south aisle, is a stone with a cross at top, about the middle of it is this inscription in old black letter :

Hic jacet Ioannes Benha quonda Herimita de Senbrige Cm'
- - - - - de - - - - -

Upon some bricks within the west door and in the south aisle, is written Katherina Koke, probably a benefactor to this church.

Benefactions.

Mr. Thomas Singleton, in 1656, gave 3l. a year to the poor for ever.

Edward Nourse, esq; gave 50l. to purchase land, the rent to be applied as follows, 10s. for a sermon on the 25th of March yearly, the rest for the poor.

George Coulstance gave 20s. to be distributed yearly to the poor in Easter week.

Mrs. Alice Whitfield gave four tenements to the poor during the term of her leases, and 20s. a year for the poor on Holy Thursday.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 40s. a year, to be distributed to the poor in bread, one half on Christmas day, the other on Good Friday.

Timothy Nourse, esq; in 1698, gave to this parish and that of St. Katherine 12l. 10s. a year for apprenticing of five boys; and gave also three gowns for three poor persons, at the discretion of the minister of this parish, and the officers of both.

Mr. James Sayer, in 1712, gave 40s. a year to forty widows.

Baptisms.				Burials.
Year	males	females	Total	Year	males	females	Total
1759	26	26	52	1759	38	22	60
1760	19	36	55	1760	24	28	52
1761	26	31	57	1761	16	23	39
1762	22	19	41	1762	17	17	34
1763	25	30	55	1763	24	19	43
1764	21	36	57	1764	21	23	44
1765	42	36	78	1765	36	60	96
1766	29	34	63	1766	35	31	66
1767	40	30	70	1767	36	35	71
1768	27	16	43	1768	18	9	27
1769	28	30	58	1769	23	17	40
Total	629			Total	572

In the year 1562, there were 156 householders in this parish; in 1712 there were about 106 houses and 500 inhabitants, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, in that part of the parish which is within the city; and in 1743 the exact number of households in the parish were 123, of inhabitants 482.

Land Tax in 1770, at 3s. in the pound, 45 : 6 : 8
The same for the college precincts, 64 : 11 : 4

Two guardians over the workhouse are annually chosen out of this parish, towards the support of which, in the above year, the parish and the precincts of the college paid 24l. 5s. 10d. a quarter, and 5l. 8s. towards lamps.

St. MICHAEL'S.

THE church is large, consisting of two aisles of equal dimensions, and a square tower at the west end, with six bells in it. It was antiently part of the possessions of the see of Exeter. Peter, one of the bishops of that see, sold it with its chapel of St. Martin, to St. Peter's abbey, in the year 1285. At the dissolution of the abbey, the patronage devolving to the crown, the lord chancellor is now patron. It is a rectory, worth about 15l. a year in tithes, besides surplus fees and voluntary contributions. Robert Cole informs us, that the church of St. Martyn stood where that of St. Michael now is.

The church and chapel were valued at seven marks 16° E. 1. and three years afterwards at nine; but in the sixth year of the next reign they were valued at ten marks. In the commissioners certificate, 26° H. 8. it is thus expressed, Rectoria Sancti Michaelis valet in decimis et oblationibus, ultra 20 den. solutos episcopo pro visitatione, 6s. 8d. archidiacono pro procuracionibus, 2s. pro sinagio, et 2 den. seneschallis villæ Gloucestricæ, 21l. 5s. 9d. ob. The first fruits of this rectory, which before the year 1624 were 21l. 5s. 9d. halfpenny, were then reduced by a decree of the barons of the exchequer, to 8l. 16s. 4d. on the appeal of Mr. Woodruffe, the rector.

In 1366, the parishioners, who before were interred in the church-yard of the abbey, acquired the right of sepulture in their own, paying 20s. yearly to St. Peter's; but their church-yard having been consecrated without the approbation of the bishop of Worcester, was continued under an interdict till November 1368.

By an ordinance of parliament in 1646, the parishes of St. Aldate and St. Mary de Grace were annexed to this, and 80l. a year with a prebendal house were settled upon the rectory, the patronage of which was given to the mayor and burgessees. This church being at that time much out of repair, both the others were taken down, and many of the materials used on St. Michael's in the year 1653, when it was under built with three new pillars. At the restoration the parishes became separate, and have continued so ever since.

In this church were the following particulars.

1. A chantry dedicated to St. Ann, of which the fraternity of weavers were patrons, and Richard Burnell the last incumbent. Lands in Nailsworth, in the parish of Avening, belonged to it.
2. A chantry dedicated to St. John Baptist, whereof Stephen Pool, the last incumbent, obtained a yearly pension of 4l.
3. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary, of which Hugh Fisherpole, the last incumbent, obtained a pension of 4l. a year.
4. A fraternity of brethren and sisters, dedicated to St. John Baptist, who inhabited a house in the East-gate street, called Brethren-hall.
5. Our Lady's chapel.
6. The Rood light.
7. St. Katherine's light.

Here was also a very solemn anniversary kept, and attended by the sheriffs and stewards of the town, in memory of master Thomas Whytefeld, who ordained by his last will that 30s. should be expended on it.

Abbat Malvern gave several rich vestments to the church in 1499, for establishing a yearly obit on the 18th of July, for John Hertland, one of the monks of St. Peter's, and his parents.

In abbat Fraucester's MS. a great deal is said relating to this rectory, and there are now some ancient papers in the chest on the same subject.

In a window of the north aisle, east of the pulpit, is the following coat; Gules, a crescent between six escallops, 3, 2, 1, argent. Near it another escutcheon, the field gules, but the bearing not intelligible.

The east end of the fourth side of this church was rebuilt in 1736.

First fruits, £.8 : 16 : 4 Synodals, - £.0 : 2 : 0
Tenths, — 0 : 17 : 8 ob. Pentecostals, 0 : 1 : 4
Procurations, 0 : 6 : 8

Incumbents.

John Nelm, M. A. was presented by the mayor and burgessees of Gloucester in 1648.

Thomas Woolnough, M. A. instituted 1664. Ch. 2. patron.

Amos Jones, M. A. 1675.

George Vernon, M. A. 1677.

Thomas Thache, M. A. 1687.

Samuel Lawrence, M. A. 1721.

Henry Church, M. A. 1727. The two last were buried near the north door of the chancel.

Thomas Woore, M. A. 1732, buried near Mr. Lawrence.

John Palmer, M. A. 1741, who is the present incumbent.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There are several monuments and memorials in this church, among others, for John Webb, once mayor, who died August 17, 1643.

John Nelme, sometime sheriff, who died May 9, 1645.

Ensign Jonathan Cracker, who died 1646.

William Ruffel, master of the college school, who died in 1659. See his inscription p. 170.

Alderman William Corsley, who died 1691.

John Hyett, esq; alderman and twice mayor, who died Feb. 27, 1711.

Mr. Joseph Hyett, his son, who died Jan. 22, 1713. For a further account of both these persons, see p. 129.

Of the BLUE-COAT HOSPITAL.

Sir Thomas Rich, of Sunning, in the county of Berks, baronet, who was a native of this city, by his last will, dated May 16, 1666, gave to the mayor and burgessees, his house, lying on the north side of the East-gate street, and 6000l. to buy lands of the value of 300l. a year, or upwards, for the following uses, viz. That 160l. be employed for the yearly maintenance of twenty boys with diet, lodging, washing, cloathing, and other necessaries; their dress to be blue coats and caps, according to the usage of Christ-church hospital in London, none of whom to be admitted under ten years of age, nor to continue after the age of sixteen. That 20l. be for ever paid to an able schoolmaster, to live in that house, and to teach the boys to write and read. That 60l. be paid for putting out six of the poor boys apprentices. That 30l. be annually laid out in blue gowns, shoes, stockings, and linnen cloth for ten men and ten women. That on St. Thomas's day annually, the corporation shall meet and make up the accounts of this charity, and twenty nobles are allowed for their dinner. That after the above

above dispositions are made, and necessary repairs done to the house, if any money remains, to be given to young beginners, and maid servants who have lived in any place faithfully for three years, and to decayed housekeepers.

The corporation purchased the manor of Awre and Blakeney with Sir Thomas Rich's money, worth about 200*l.* a year; which being insufficient for the above purposes, several additions have been since made to the charity.

Lady Napier's gift of 50*l.* to the city, was applied to it in 1715.

Mr. Amity Clutterbuck, who had been one of the twenty boys brought up in this hospital, gave 1000*l.* to it in 1722.

Alderman Thomas Brown also gave 400*l.* to it.

Mr. Richard Elly, by his will in 1755, gave, after the decease of his sister, 1000*l.* the one half to be applied to the benefit and improvement of this hospital, the other half to the improvement of St. Bartholomew's, in this city. He also gave, after his sister's decease, 200*l.* to the society for promoting christian knowledge; 200*l.* to the society for propagating the gospel in foreign parts; and the residue of his estate, which is considerable, to be disposed of in charity, as his executors shall think proper.

Benefactions.

Alderman John Fawkener, in 1545, gave 40*l.* to be lent out to some of the poor tradesmen of this parish.

Mr. William Drinkwater gave 40*s.* a year towards establishing a lecture sermon.

Mrs. Margaret Cartwright gave 10*l.*

Edward Nourse, esq; gave 50*l.* to buy land, 10*s.* of the produce whereof to be paid to the minister for a sermon on Michaelmas day; the remainder to be given to the poor.

Alderman John Webb gave 20*s.* per ann.

Mr. Nicholas Webb gave 30*s.* per ann.

Mr. Henry Redvern, 20*s.* per ann. for a sermon on new-year's day.

Joseph Horner, 4*l.* per ann.

Mr. Daniel Lysons, 2*l.* per ann. in bread.

Mr. Thomas Barns gave 100*l.* in the year 1702, the interest of which to be given to four poor widows for their lives.

Phillis Lewis, widow, gave 20*l.*

Mr. John Coulstance 20*s.* a year to the poor, and 20*s.* for the repair of the highways.

Mr. John Brown gave 10*l.* for a sermon yearly on Good Friday.

Mr. Charles Trippet, prebendary of Sarum, having given 200*l.* to the chamber of the city of Gloucester, the place of his nativity, the corporation applied the interest of that sum to the use of the minister, for reading prayers in this church twice every day, which commenced at Michaelmas 1708. And

Mr. Francis Yate gave 200*l.* to be applied to the same use.

Mrs. Sarah Marden, in 1727, gave 10*l.* for the minister to preach a sermon yearly, upon the Sunday of every Lent assize.

Mr. Giles Marden, in 1728, gave 11*l.* 10*s.* for a sermon yearly on the Sunday of the summer assize.

Thomas Webb, esq; in 1734, gave 50*l.*

Mrs. Mary Shail gave 50*l.* the same year.

Mr. Richard Elly dying in February 1755, gave by his last will, immediately after his decease, to the rector for the time being, and his successors for ever, a very good house and garden; and a good house to the parish clerk, and his successors for ever. He also gave the interest of 500*l.* to be paid to the rector (except 20*s.* to the sexton) for reading divine service every Sunday morning in this church.

Part of this parish is without the city, very separately dispersed, and is called Barton St. Michael, to distinguish it from that part which is within the liberties of the city.

Baptisms.				Burials.
1759	males	12	females	11	males	11	females	10
1760	—	10	—	9	—	10	—	12
1761	—	9	—	12	—	8	—	13
1762	—	10	—	10	—	7	—	14
1763	—	11	—	11	—	8	—	3
1764	—	9	—	10	—	9	—	13
1765	—	9	—	6	—	19	—	15
1766	—	13	—	13	—	9	—	15
1767	—	9	—	12	—	10	—	7
1768	—	10	—	15	—	7	—	4
1769	—	9	—	8	—	9	—	10
Total	—	228			Total	—	223

The number of households in this parish in the year 1562, was 106; about 1712, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, there were 105 houses and near 600 inhabitants; in 1743 there were 137 households, and 605 inhabitants.

St. NICHOLAS'S.

THE church stands on the north side in the West-gate street. It consists of a handsome nave, with an aisle on each side of it, and a vestry at the east end of the north aisle. At the west end of the nave is a lofty spire with six bells, beside a faint's-bell. On the spire is a mural coronet, whence it has been conjectured, that the church was built by king John, who had been earl of Gloucester. It is dedicated to St. Nicholas, bishop of the city of Myra, in Lycia.

The advowson of the church was granted to Nicholas Ragnel, in the fourth year of the reign of king John; and William Coxnell held it as incumbent 5^o H. 3. for the repairing of the West-bridge.

King

King Henry the Third, at the request of his queen, gave it to St. Bartholomew's hospital, in the 13th year of his reign; and pope Gregory, (perhaps the 11th of that name, 'tho it be not expressly said which of them) by his bull, confirmed it to the hospital; but recites that it was given by a bishop of Worcester, with the consent of his chapter.

After the dissolution, it was granted with the said hospital, by queen Elizabeth, to the mayor and burgeses of Gloucester, subject to a pension of 13s. 4d. granted out of it to the dean and chapter, by their charter of foundation, being part of the revenues of the late dissolved abbey there.

This church was valued at 40 marks 19° E. 1. but the clear yearly value of it, in tythes and oblations, 26° H. 8. was 9l. 18s. The certificate runs thus: Ecclesia Sancti Nicholai Glouc. valet clare in decimis et oblationibus per annum, ultra 2s. per annum solutos episcopo Wigorniae, 6s. 8d. pro procuracione archidiaconi Glouc. 13s. 4d. pro visitacione episcopi Glouc. juxta ratam cujuslibet tertii anni 40s. et 104s. singulis diebus dominicis per totum annum inter pauperes et mulieres dicti hospitalis [St. Bartholomei] distribut. ratione appropriationis dictae ecclesiae ex fundacione Henrici 3. nuper regis Angliae, 9l. 18s. The voluntary contributions are worth about 50l. a year. This living has been twice chosen by lot to be augmented by queen Anne's bounty, and was returned. There is no parsonage-house, but the minister has a lodging in Bartholomew hospital.

The church of the Holy Trinity was united to this, by an ordinance of parliament in 1648, and an annuity of 80l. annexed to the curacy, with one of the prebendal houses; the incumbent to pay first fruits and tenths after the rate of 8l. a year. But the parishes are now distinct.

There were in this church the following particulars: 1. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary. 2. Another chantry dedicated to St. Katherine, at which a light was provided for William Sanford and Owen Windsor, by the prior of St. Bartholomew's. This William Sanford, about the middle of the reign of Henry the 3d, gave to that hospital all his lands and possessions in and about the town of Gloucester, for the honourable maintenance of a secular priest, to officiate daily in this church, and for providing 2s. weekly to be given to the poor of the hospital. The priest to have 20s. a year to buy him cloathes, and to receive his victuals and have his lodging in the hospital more honourable than any of the brethren, next to the prior. 3. A chantry for one priest, founded by the will of Thomas of Gloucester, dated May 18, 1446. 4. An altar dedicated to St. Thomas, at which the prior, or one of the brethren of the said hospital, officiated for the souls of Sanford and Windsor; and a light burning for them from sun-rising to sun-setting, at the high altar; and another taper burning before the cross. 5. An obit on December 28, in memory of William Francomb, and Alice his wife, for which the said Alice gave certain lands in 1491. In the reign of queen Elizabeth, the rent of the land was detained by the crown; but the churchwardens have received 6s. 8d. a year ever since on that account.

Incumbents.

Hugh Fishpoole, sometime a chantry-priest of St. John's (see vice in St. Michael's, was curate at his death.

John Henbury occurs in 1562.

Richard Warret, or Warrant, a minor canon, 1569.

William Preston, 1583.

Henry Aisgill, M. A. 1587, one of the prebendaries.

Giles Randle, 1587.

John Ward, 1594, afterwards rector of Farmington.

Francis Arnola occurs Dec. 31, in the same year.

Elias Wrench, B. A. 1597, afterwards a prebendary.

Evan Vaughan, B. A. 1609.

Thomas Prior, M. A. 1613, one of the prebendaries.

John Workman, 1622. On his tomb in the churchyard is this inscription:—In Memory of that pious worthy divine, Mr. John Workman, once minister of this Parish, who was buried the 12th of January, 1640, aged 50.

John Foordham occurs in 1628.

John Holford occurs in 1634. He lies buried in the chancel, and on the stone is a memorial for him, his wife and several relations. Over the first pillar on the north side of the church, above the pulpit, upon a table is the following inscription: To the happy memory of John Holford, sometime minister of this Parish, who died August 17, 1653.

Quid loquar, aut quorsum Lachrimæ, nec Carmina possunt

Sat dare pro meritis, Ter venerande. Vale.

John Allibond, M. A. 1635.

Help-on-high Fox, M. A. was elected June 12, 1645. The corporation of Gloucester patron.

Thomas Singleton, 1679.

John Hilton, 1686, afterwards vicar of Stonehouse.

Benjamin Newton, M. A. 1708.

Samuel Gwinnet, LL B. 1735, who is the present curate.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Amongst many others, here are monuments for Nicholas Sankey, esq; who died in 1589. John Walton, alderman, who died in 1626. Walter Taynton, mercer, who died in 1646. Robert Holford, who died in 1654. William Window, gent. who died in 1659. Jasper Clutterbuck, who died in 1659. Robert Tuther, once mayor, who died in 1660. William Singleton, esq; twice mayor, and member of parliament for the city, who died in 1667. John Deighton, who died in 1676. Thomas Lugg, alderman, who died in 1679. John James Belveze, late French advocate at Montaubon in France, who died in 1708. Richard Massinger, once sheriff, who died 1721. Richard Green, who died in 1729. Thomas Ludlow, who died in 1734.

Benefactions.

Thomas Gutter, alias White, gave three houses and a garden for the support of the service of the altar.

Alderman John Thorn, in 1617, gave 13s. 4d. yearly for a sermon on Ashwednesday, and 6s. 8d. to the poor.

John Window gave 50s. yearly, to be given in coals to the poor.

William Window gave 2s. a week to buy bread, and 20s. a year for a sermon on St. John's day.

Thomas

Thomas Singleton, of the city of London, mercer, in 1656, gave 5*l.* for the repair of the church, and 3*l.* to the poor, and 20*s.* a year for a sermon on Good Friday.

Alderman John Woodward gave two houses for a term of years.

Daniel Lysons gave 2*l.* a year for bread.

Elizabeth Morris gave 50*l.* the interest whereof to be distributed among twenty housekeepers.

Mrs. Weaver gave the interest of 100*l.* for five widows.

Richard Green gave the interest of 50*l.* to be distributed in bread.

Thomas Whithenbury, in 1722, gave a piece of garden-ground to provide 40*s.* for bread, and 10*s.* for a sermon yearly.

Thomas Mee, in 1722, gave 50*l.*

Joseph Reeve gave 85*l.*

William Lisle gave 25*l.* a year. He is buried in the cathedral; see his memorial p. 176.

Baptisms.			Burials.
Year	Males	Females	Year	Males	Females
1759	28	28	1759	19	12
1760	26	24	1760	40	27
1761	22	21	1761	27	34
1762	24	23	1762	12	24
1763	20	28	1763	24	20
1764	22	29	1764	20	34
1765	25	19	1765	32	50
1766	16	25	1766	25	38
1767	33	18	1767	36	38
1768	18	24	1768	29	23
1769	27	29	1769	37	25
Total	529		Total	626

There were 146 householders in this parish in the year 1562. Sir Robert Atkyns's account about the year 1710, is 196 houses, and about 1000 inhabitants; but in the year 1743 there were 282 houses, and 1309 inhabitants.

To the Royal Aid, in 1692, £. 248 : 0 : 0

Poll tax, in 1694, — 90 : 7 : 0

Land tax, in 1694, — 341 : 6 : 0

The same, in 1770, at 3*s.* 274 : 13 : 0

In the year 1770, this parish paid quarterly 52*l.* 10*s.* to the workhouse, and 24*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* towards lamps.

In this parish is

St. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL.

This hospital is situate between the bridges on the north side of the west-gate street. In an inquisition taken upon oath before William the prior of Lanthony, and William de Chilterham, 30^o E. 3. it is said to owe its original to William Myparty, a burges of Gloucester; who, when Nicholas Walred, clerk, began to build the west bridge, in the reign of king H. 2. gave him a piece of land, whereon the hospital now stands, built a house upon it for the convenience of Walred and his workmen, and retiring to them himself, with several other persons of both sexes, they all lived there together, in hermitical habit, under the government of a priest, upon the charity of well disposed persons. But king H. 3. on the twenty sixth of June, in the thirteenth year of his reign, being at Gloucester, gave them the church of St. Nicholas; and from that time the house was called the Hospital of St. Bartholomew the apostle. Soon after, the same king, upon their petition, granted them liberty to choose a prior; and on the 12th of September, in the forty ninth year of his reign, gave them sixteen ells of land in length, and five in breadth, to be taken out of the street, for the enlargement of their chancel.

Leland says this hospital was founded by one of the bishops of Worcester, but by which of them is not known. Others attribute it to Bosil, the first bishop of that see. However that be, it was found upon the inquisition mentioned at the beginning of this account, that after St. Nicholas's was granted to the hospital, the bishop of Worcester claimed a right of visiting it. According to bishop Tanner, king E. 3. order'd the state of this hospital to be survey'd; and we learn from Mr. Prynne, in his Animadversions on Coke's Institutes, that king R. 2. issued out a commission for visiting it. But on the nineteenth day of November, 9^o H. 4. the king granted the prior and brethren a new charter, which is now in the custody of the corporation, and the translation of it may be seen in the Appendix. N^o. 12.

The hospital consisted of a master, or prior, or guardian, and three fellows, besides the poor people. Andrew Whitmay the master, John Henbury, John Harsfield, and Henry or Harry Francum, the three brethren, subscribed to the king's supremacy, Sept. 4, 1534.

There was formerly a chapel in this hospital, dedicated to St. Urfula. A chantry in Newent church-yard, dedicated to St. James and St. Anne, belonged also to this hospital, till its dissolution.

In the fifth year of king Henry the seventh, this hospital was valued at 23*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* About the time of its dissolution, the accounts are exceedingly various. The profits were computed at 33*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* clear of all reprisals 26^o H. 8. The next year the whole rent was said to be 74*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.* and the clear income 44*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.* ob. which was increased the year afterwards to 65*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* ob.

The commissioners appointed 37^o H. 8. certified, that this hospital was founded for a master, who was to have a salary of 20*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* q. for five priests, [perhaps the three brethren and two others to officiate here and at St. Nicholas's] whose salary was 29*l.* for thirty two poor people, who receive 30*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.* and for finding a lamp and two tapers in the above church, at the yearly expence of 14*s.* 6*d.* Besides the above payments, there were 6*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* for out rents; 4*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* ob. for tenths; 1*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* synodals and pen-tecostals for the churches belonging to it; and 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for fees. The value of the ornaments, plate, goods, &c. then belonging to it was 20*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*

The commissioners, 1° E. 6. certified, that the clear yearly value was 25*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.* and that the several possessions of the poor people belonging to the hospital were worth 25*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* I suppose before the outgoings were deducted. And that valuation being approved, 9 February, 3° E. 6. the masters were to pay first fruits to the crown accordingly for it. In archbishop Sancroft's MS. Valor. it is 25*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* toto, 4*l.* 10*s.* 11*d.* ob. clare. Thirty-four poor persons were then in the hospital. The full income of the lands belonging to it was 78*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.* when it was granted from the crown.

By the interest of Mr. Pates, recorder of the city, queen Elizabeth, by letters patents, dated July 14, regni 6° granted this hospital to the mayor and burgeses of Gloucester, with the patronage of the office of master, &c. when the same should become void by the death of John Man, esq; and also the revenues of it, for the maintenance of a minister, a physician, a surgeon, and forty poor people. This grant was obtained on condition that the mayor, &c. would release an antient annual pension of 9*l.* 2*s.* paid by the crown to the hospital, which was done on the 17th of the same month. The mayor, &c. covenanted with the queen, that the whole clear yearly profits should be expended in the manner mentioned.

The hospital was in a deplorable condition when it came into the hands of the corporation. The church was ruinous, and the house so decay'd, that they rebuilt twenty-one chambers, and were at great expences in other repairs.

Soon after the corporation obtained the grant of this hospital, they elected a president or provost, a treasurer, two surveyors, two almoners, and two scrutineers yearly, as they now continue to do, to manage the affairs of this hospital, who have also the superintendency over those of St. Margaret, and the Magdalen or king James's. The statutes for their government were composed, it is said, by archbishop Laud, about the year 1636.

The queen's grant has since been confirmed by act of parliament, which provides, that the bishop of Gloucester, or other ordinary of the diocese, shall freely visit the hospital every third year to see if the above covenant be truly observed.

In Leland's time there were fifty-two poor persons in the hospital; but 26° & 27° H. 8. there were only twenty-four. In Sternhold's and Man's masterships were thirty-two, at four pence half penny or three farthings a week. Soon after the grant, it was increased to six-pence each. In the time of king Charles the first, it came to two shillings each, and then from time to time, additional chambers were added, so that at present there are twenty-six men and thirty women in so many chambers, who receive two shillings and six-pence each weekly.

I have a large folio book of abstracts from the original grants to this hospital, which exhibits the names of near a hundred benefactors to it.

Priors or Masters.

Adam Garon, or de Garne, was the first prior or master. About the time of his government, Osbert Giffard gave lands in Brimpsfield for the maintenance of a chaplain, to officiate for himself and ancestors. A perpetual chaplain was appointed for Philip and Margery Apothecary. And Adam de Ardern gave a certain sum of money for establishing a chantry in the hospital.

John de Monumeta occurs in the reign of H. 3.

Adam Reyner.

John de Bosco.

William Abenhalle, or Abbehal occurs temp. E. 1.

John de Wode.

John de Oke, del Oks, or de Oka, occurs 29 E. 1. In 1318, a perpetual anniversary was erected here for John Thormerton. This prior dying in 1326,

John de Bykenor was advanced to the priorship.

Nicholas Hardewyke occurs 5°, & 28° E. 3. William de Bohun earl of Northampton, July 15, 17° E. 3. gave to him and the hospital the advowson of the church of Newnham, and chapel of Little Dean, co. Glouc. And in 1374, a perpetual chantry was erected here for Ralph Baron.

Walter Gibbes occurs 36° E. 3.

John Bilmulle succeeding, occurs 12° & 21° R. 2.

John Prentys succeeded. He resigned in 1401, whereupon

John Arundel was elected the same year.

Thomas Carpenter occurs 1°, & 6° H. 5.

William Wircestre occurs 2° H. 6. upon whose resignation,

Stephen Myle succeeded Mar. 8. 1425, and dying 1454,

William Sobbrory, called also John Sodbury, alias Holwey, was elected.

John Hassfeld was advanced July 12, 1476. He had a dispute with the prior of Lanthony about ten loaves which that priory had engaged to furnish every day to the poor people of this hospital, in consideration of 220 marks given to the said priory, upon that condition, by Richard the priest of Heytherleia, about the time of king H. 3. and which the priory had refused or neglected to furnish. The bishop of Worcester made a definitive sentence for the hospital against the priory Aug. 18, 1477; but the latter often failed in performance, and the prior and convent were several times summoned and cited before different authorities, particularly 4° H. 7. by the archbishop of Canterbury, to shew cause why they did not perform their covenant with Richard de Hatherley.

Richard Baker occurs 8° & 11° H. 7.

Thomas Aphowel occurs 14° H. 7. About the time of his government, one Pauncefote is said to have been a great benefactor. He was buried in the chapel of the hospital. The raised tomb, under an arch between the church and the little south aisle, was probably erected for him.

Andrew Whitmay, supposed to be born at Wheatenhurst, occurs as prior 4° H. 8. He raised the house, subject before to the frequent inundations of the Severn, and built a handsome lodging for himself, in the windows of which the initial letters of his name are still remaining. He was archdeacon of St. David's, and a suffragan bishop of the diocese of Worcester. He subscribed to the king's supremacy, and held the government of the hospital till his death, about 1546.

Thomas Sternhold, esq; groom of the king's wardrobe, had the mastership conferred upon him Sept. 25, 1° E. 6. for from the time of the dissolution the title of prior ceased.

John Man, esq; was presented to it Oct. 29, 3° E. 6. Upon queen Elizabeth's grant of the reversion of this office to the corporation, he resigned it to them, who paid him a pension of 38*l.* a year. He was instituted to the deanery of this cathedral, and died 1568. See Deans.

Many lands and possessions in this city, and the counties of Gloucester and Worcester, belong to this hospital. Among others are, the perpetual curacy of St. Nicholas; the perpetual curacy of Newnham; the perpetual curacy of Little Dean; the rectory of Kemmerton, given by bishop Goodman, all in this county; and thirty pounds a year paid out of the improved rent of Bentham-farm, given to the corporation by John Cook; so that the whole revenues of the hospital, according to bishop Tanner, are about 500*l.* a year.

No person can be admitted into this, nor the hospitals of St. Margaret, and Mary Magdalen, under the age of fifty two years, unless on account of some irrecoverable infirmity. The governors hold a court, at least once a month, for these hospitals, at which all the poor people attend.

St. O W E N 's.

THE church, which stood on the west side, a little without the South-gate, was burnt down by the citizens, with the rest of the suburbs, at the siege, after the messengers from the city had returned their answer to the king's summons, on the tenth of August, 1643. It was founded by Walter the constable of Gloucester, and dedicated, and made parochial, by episcopal authority.

In the year 1137, earl Milo gave it and its appurtenances to the priory of Lanthony. The appurtenances were, a chapel within the castle; a small piece of land upon the bank of the Severn, to find a light to the said chapel; all the offerings of the keepers of the tower of the castle, and the barons residing there; half the oblations of himself and family, if his chaplain was present, and the whole if absent; St. Kyneburgh's chapel, and the whole parochial land of the constable of the castle, within the South-gate and without; and all the land which Roger de Tocheham and Richard the chaplain possessed within and without that gate. Earl Milo, at the same time, gave to the said priory several rural churches or chapels, particularly Hempsted, Elmore, and Quedgly, and many other things expressly set down in earl Milo's charter to the priory of Lanthony.

When Walter de Cantelupe was bishop of Worcester, the value of the several particulars belonging to this vicarage, was as follows; the alterage, small tythes, and other obventions of St. Owen's, 3*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the alterage, &c. of Hechamsted, 60*s.* and other tythes 21*s.* i. e. 4*l.* 1*s.* the alterage and small tythes of Quedresse [Quedgley] and other obventions, four marks, and tythe of other lands, 5*s.* 9*d.* in all 2*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* the small tythes of Elmore, and other obventions, five marks, other tythes 6*s.* 7*d.* and tythes of villainage 20*s.* in all 4*l.* 13*s.* 3*d.* So that one vill and three contiguous country cures, were served for 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which the bishop ratified at the appointment of the vicarage.

The vicar complaining afterwards, to the prior and convent of Worcester, who were guardians of the spiritualties, that his vicarage was insufficient, and that if he was obliged to live upon it, the prior and convent of Lanthony were bound, by an antient agreement, to build an habitable for him; it was agreed, that the vicar should have six marks of silver, three and a half of which to be expended in building a house at Heyamstede, for the use of the vicarage of St. Owen's.

The vicarage was taxed at thirteen marks, 19° E. 1. The abbey of Lyra, in Normandy, had 20*s.* out of it; and in 1398, the pope appropriated it to the priory of Lanthony, which paid, by composition with the bishop of Worcester, a pension of 3*s.* 4*d.* for all episcopal demands on account of this church, in which the prior and convent held their halimot court.

In this church were, 1. A gild dedicated to St. John Baptist, whereof Thomas Bristol was the last incumbent. 2. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary, whereof Richard Stanley, the last incumbent, upon its dissolution, obtained a pension of 4*l.* a year. Sir Thomas Bell, and Richard Duke, esq; had a grant of several of the possessions belonging hereto, 2° E. 6. 3. An altar dedicated to St. Katherine. 4. The rood-light.

By an ordinance of parliament in 1646, this parish was united to St. Mary de Crypt; but that being null, they are now separate, notwithstanding the rector of St. Mary's parish performs parochial duties, as curate, to the parishioners of this. In the year 1740, bishop Benson procured 200*l.* of queen Anne's bounty to augment the vicarage. The church stood on or near the place whereon a new meeting-house was erected in 1730. This parish has one churchwarden and one overseer.

For benefactions see St. Mary de Crypt.

The number of households in 1562, was 93. Sir Robert Atkyns joins this parish with that of St. Mary de Crypt. In 1743, the exact number of households was 65, of inhabitants 186. The baptisms and burials are included in the account of those of the last mentioned parish.

St. Owen's pays to the workhouse quarterly 5*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* and 2*l.* 14*s.* towards lamps.

In this parish are Kyneburgh's Hospital, and another charitable institution, called Mr. Hill's House. And first

OF KINEBURGH'S HOSPITAL.

We have already shewn that the chapel of St. Kyneburg, as an appurtenant to the church of St. Owen, was given by earl Milo to the priory of Lanthony, at its foundation. It stood on part of the town wall. Upon the dissolution of Lanthony, this chapel was sold by the crown to Thomas Bell, gent. Aug. 1, 34° H. 8. who being afterwards knighted, gave five tenements, which he built on part of the site of the old chapel, and another chamber at the west end of it, of antient building, with some lands belonging to the late dissolved monasteries in this county, for the maintenance of six poor people; and queen Elizabeth confirmed the donation in the forty-first year of her reign. In the year 1608, Mr. Thomas Hobbes gave 2*l.* a year; and Mrs. Margaret Norton gave the interest of 50*l.* to the poor people of this hospital, each of whom now receives 1*s.* 6*d.* weekly, and some money quarterly. The government government of this charity is vested in the corporation.

A portion of the west part of the old chapel, given by the founder for the poor people to perform their public devotions in, was granted, in the year 1671, to the fraternity of cordwainers, for their common hall. On the south-west side of it is a raised stone monument, whereon lies the effigy of a young lady, with a coronet on her head. The common tradition is, that it is the tomb of one Maud Kimbros, who is said to have been drowned in a well on the north part of the chapel, where are visible remains of a door, supposed to lead to that well.

Mr. Hill's House, on the west side adjoining to the South-gate, was designed for an almshouse by the proprietor, who had been thrice mayor of the city; and by his will, bequeathed 80*l.* to erect a house for the habitation of six poor people of the south ward, which has been since done by the corporation.

There were formerly several other almshouses belonging to the city. Mr. Pates's house, and alderman Thomas Semys's houses occur in 1643. And it is said that Mr. Richard Keylock erected two houses for two poor people in St. John's parish. But probably they were not endowed with revenues to support them, and so falling to decay, they are now undistinguishable.

T R I N I T Y.

THE church of the Holy Trinity stood in the middle of the West-gate-street, and consisted of one aisle, with a beautiful tower at the west end of it.

It was antiently a rectory, but in the year 1391, it became a vicarage, and was appropriated to St. Peter's abbey. The appropriation of this vicarage, with it's chapel of St. Mary de Grace, was ratified and confirmed by the bishop of Worcester, Oct. 14, 1394, and afterwards by other authorities. The dean and chapter of Gloucester are patrons. The vicarage was augmented by lot, and returned, in the year 1743.

By an ordinance of parliament in 1648, this parish was united to that of St. Nicholas, and the church granted to the corporation to be converted to a school-house, which was done accordingly, the bells, seats, and other particulars, being removed to the chapel of St. Bartholomew's hospital, to Teynton, St. Nicholas's, and other places. At the restoration, the ordinance was annulled, and the parish became distinct and separate; but by a faculty, obtained in 1698, the church, which for a long time had been in a ruinous condition, was taken down, except part of the walls towards the west end, which, with some addition, were converted to a house for keeping the fire-engines, and other necessaries for the use of the city. The beautiful tower was also suffered to remain, because, according to the notion of those times, it was of public use as well as ornament to the city; and beneath it a conduit was erected in 1702. But how fluctuating and uncertain are all human affairs! In a few years afterwards, this beautiful tower, and the more beautiful high cross, were considered as mere public nuisances, and accordingly were taken down by virtue of an act of 23^o G. 2. and the materials purchased and used in rebuilding the parish church of Upton upon Severn.

“The site of this church, Sir Robert Atkyns observes, is turned into a market; but the market is so well regulated, that it gives no disturbance to the many worthy magistrates of this city who lye buried underneath.”

In this church were the following particulars: 1. A chantry dedicated to the Holy Jesus, whereof Matthew Walker, the last incumbent, upon its dissolution, obtained a pension of 4*l.* a year. 2. A chantry dedicated to St. Mary, whereof George Cooper, the last incumbent, obtained an annuity of 4*l.* 3. A fraternity dedicated to St. Thomas a Becket; for the augmentation of which, and finding a chaplain to officiate at the altar there, for his own soul, and for the souls of all the faithful deceased, Thomas Pope gave certain lands, rents and reversions, by his will dated Sept. 18, 1400.

A house in Gore-lane, given by Richard Pate, esq; to Corpus Christi college, towards the maintenance of a school and hospital at Cheltenham, was antiently called Trinity-college, where all the priests of this church inhabited.

First fruits, £. 9 : 0 : 0 Synodals, - £. 0 : 1 : 0
Tenths, — 9 : 18 : 0 Pentecostals, 0 : 1 : 0
Procurations, 0 : 5 : 0

Richard Morwood, one of the minor-canons, was instituted to the vicarage in 1617, and occurs in 1636. He was the last incumbent of this church, and was buried in the south part of the transept of the cathedral, of which he was precentor.

The minister of St. Nicholas now performs most of the parochial duties.

Benefactions.

Mr. Peach gave four houses to four poor people, rent free.

Mr. Samuel Willet gave 10*l.* the interest of which to buy bread for the poor.

Mrs. Mary Broad gave 40*s.* per ann. for the same purpose.

Mr. Daniel Lysons gave 20*s.* per ann. for the same use.

The baptisms and burials are included in those of the parish of St. Nicholas.

The number of households in this parish in 1562, was 60; about 1710, according to Sir Robert

Robert Atkyns, there were 134 houfes, and about 600 inhabitants; but in 1743, there were 119 houfholds, and 491 inhabitants.

The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 92 : 0 : 0
Poll Tax — 1694,	— 43 : 13 : 0
Land Tax — 1694,	- 121 : 4 : 0
The fame — 1771,	- 101 : 17 : 6

In 1770, this parifh paid quarterly to the work-houfe 19*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* and 12*l.* 11*s.* towards lamps.

S U B U R B S.

THE fuburbs are not at prefent fo large as they were before the fiege, in the year 1643, when they were fet on fire by the governor, and are faid, in the petition of the mayor and burgefles to parliament, for relief on that account, to have been a full third part of the city. They certified that two hundred forty and one houfes, befides barns, ftables, and out-buildings, were then burnt and destroyed; and it appears by good evidence, that they even exceeded that number.

The houfes joined on both fides, almoft all the way from without the lower North-gate to St. Margaret's hofpital. On the weft fide were houfes from the gate to Feate-lane, which had feveral good buidings in it; and beyond that lane, and at the weft end of it, were many others.

There was a ftreet which led from the South-gate to Rignor's-ftile; and without the gate were houfes on both fides, called lower South-gate, and Sudbrook-ftreet; on the weft fide were St. Owen's lane, and Severn-ftreet. It is very certain that antiently there were houfes without the Weft-gate alfo; but Leland in his Itinerary takes no notice of them.

Within the liberties of the city, but without the walls, which extended no farther than the four gates, (of which the upper North-gate was one) on the eaft fide is Fullbrook, running from Morin's mill, under the North-gate, through the antient abbey, to which it was given by king W. 1. and after confirmed by charter in feveral fucceeding reigns. Many particulars concerning it are related in abbat Froucefter's manufeript.

Without the upper North-gate on the weft fide, was the caftle of Croydon, ftanding in Hairlane, otherwife Herlon, Harelane, and Boundlane, where the countefs of Stafford had lands; and where was a houfe called Dunning's Place, belonging to the abbey.

The lower North-gate belongs to the mayor's porter. It ftands on the fouth bank of the brook Wyver, which begins at the poftern, and runs beyond Alvingate into the Severn. All the land on each fide of it, without the gate, has been called Neulond, or Newland, for many ages paff, and extended nearly to St. Margaret's hofpital.

At the north end of the lower North-gate-ftreet ftood Alvingate, which was frequently repaired by the corporation, and had a particular porter belonging to it. This was probably destroyed at the fiege. Juft without the gate was Kingefham or Kingefhome-ftreet, which occurs in 1269. A little diftant from the road, ftood a chapel dedicated to St. Thomas, and occurs in 1273. It was new built by Philip Monger, in 1454; and tho' long fince demolished, there is a houfe belonging to Bartholomew's hofpital, built on the fite of it, which is now called the Chapel Houfe.

The place called Le Hurft in antient writings, was very probably a wood, about the time of the conqueft, as the name fignifies. It extended from Hairlane before-mentioned, to Bridelane, called alfo Farther Harelane; and reached to the eaft corner of Wood-garden, and near Hangman's-pits, oppofite to the wall of the cathedral, next the orchard belonging to the prebendary of the third ftall.

Watering-ftreet, or Water-ftreet, commonly called Katherine-ftreet, was from St. Oswald's-ftreet, which was directly oppofite to the church of that name.

The White Friery is now intirely demolished. The ground on which it ftood is ftill called the Frier's-ground.

Featlane, Feetlane, Feytlane, or Featlone, is now alfo destroy'd. It ftood northward of the above, and the archbifhop of York had tenements in it: Lady-croft, or Lendy-croft, which occurs in the reigns of H. 3. E. 1. and E. 2. was very near it.

Brook-ftreet, juft without the poftern-gate, extended to Morin's mill, given by John de Thor-merton to the abbey 11^o E. 2. which enjoy'd it 'till the diffolution. Afterwards Sir Thomas Bell being poffeffed of it, gave it with other things for the maintenance of Kimbro's hofpital. The greateft part of the fouth fide of this ftreet is in the parifh of St. Michael, the north fide is in that of St. Katherine. It was destroyed at the fiege, but fome few of the houfes have been fince rebuilt.

Leland in his Itinerary, fpeaking of Gloucefter, obferves, that there were divers pretty ftreets that now be clean decay'd, as St. Bride's-ftreet, and Silver-girdle-ftreet. Several others occur in antient records, that have been long fince destroy'd. Antiently the town extended northwards and fouthwards, with few buildings on the eaftern and weftern fides. The more noble part of it ftood where now the Kingfholm houfe is. It had handfome, fpacious ftreets of the following names: White-ftreet gave entrance into the town from the London road, thro' Pedmark's field; King's-ftreet led from Kingfholm to Gloucefter; Queen-ftreet, Silver-ftreet, Long-ftreet, towards Longford; Milk-ftreet; Caftle-ftreet, which led from the Old-Bear to the caftle. Befides thefe, there were fome others of lefs note. Many of thefe ftreets were very fubject to floods from the Severn, Severn, which made the inhabitants desert them by degrees, to build on a higher and more secure situation.

Without the East-gate, Barton-street extended, with houses joining almost all the way on both sides, to a place called the World's-end; and on the north side of it, near the gate, were many houses along Gawdy-green. Part of it is within the liberties of the city, and part not. All within the liberties is in the parish of St. Michael; and what is beyond them, lies in the parishes of St. Michael, and St. Mary de Load. In the reign of king E. 1. there was, in the north part of this street, a place called the King's ditch, and Law-day ditch, intended perhaps to separate the liberties of the town from the county.

There were antiently two distinct manors here, King's-barton and Abbat's-barton. The first was so called, because it was a farm in the king's hands, to subsist the castle of Gloucester. It was a considerable manor, of which Domesday book gives the following account:

' In Bertune king Edward had nine hides, of ' which seven were in demean. And there were ' three plow tillages, and fourteen villeins, and
' ten bordars, with nine plow tillages. There ' were seven servi. Two free men held two hides
' of this manor, and have there nine plow tillages.
' They cannot separate themselves nor the land
' from the manor. There is a mill of 4 s. [value]
' King William's bailiff [prepositus] added eight
' bordars, two mills, and one plow tillage. In ' king Edward's reign it paid 9 l. 5 s. and 3000
' loaves for the dogs. It now pays 20 l. 20 cows,
' 20 hogs, and 16 s. in lieu of the bread.

' Ældred the archbishop claimed Brewere, one ' member of this manor. There are three yard
' lands and three men. Milo Crispin holds it.

' Optune, another member, Aluui the sheriff
' claimed. There is one hide of land and four ' men. Hunfridus holds it.

' The same Aluui claimed Merwen, a third ' member. There are three yard lands. Nigellus
' the physician holds it.

This manor continued in the crown 'till 2 H. 3. when Jeffry Lucy was seized of it. Robert le Savage was seized of Barton-court 45th H. 3. Walter Wither held it 54th H. 3. John Musgrofs was seized of this place 3rd E. 1. Ralph de Walefworth held it 8th E. 1. The rent of the castle, and the Bertone and Tyne of Gloucester, which was 110 l. a year, was settled on queen Margaret, in part of her dower, 27th E. 1.

The abbey of Gloucester was seized of the manor of Berton and of six plow tillages, in the 17th year of the reign of king Edward the third, who, two years afterwards, by his charter dated June 25, granted to the abbey this manor with its appurtenances, and a pool at Minsterworth, a moiety of the pool at Dunyc, with its appurtenances, and the privilege of having twigs out of the forest of Dean to repair the pool, in fee for ever. The abbey to pay 48 l. per ann. into the king's exchequer, for the advowson of the church of Wywardesbury, in the county of Bucks; but to be discharged, out of the said 48 l. of a pension of 5 l. a year, which they used to pay to that church. This charter was confirmed by king Richard the second.

But Elizabeth, the widow of Thomas duke of Norfolk, and daughter of Richard earl of Arundel, was seized of the manor of King's-Barton 3rd H. 6.

Robert Maell, and Cicely his wife, were seized of a mill, and of one acre and a half of arable land, and two acres of meadow in Barton near Gloucester.

There was a house in the South-gate-street, which, in a lease from the priory of Lanthorn, dated March 27, 47th E. 3. is said to be in the liberty of the King's Barton.

Abbat's Barton was so called, because it belonged to St. Peter's abbey. Aldred, under-king of the Wicces, gave an hundred hides to this monastery, when Eva was abbess. In Domesday book it is said,

' In the time of king Edward, Saint Peter of ' Glowecestre held Bertune, in Dudeftanes hun' dred, with its adjacent members, Berneuede,
' Tuffelege, Mercuent. There are twenty-two
' hides, lets one yard land. In demean nine plow
' tillages, and forty-two villeins, and twenty-one
' bordars, with forty-five plow tillages. There ' are twelve servi, and a mill of 5 s. and 120 acres
' of meadow, and a wood five furlongs long and ' three broad. It was worth 8 l. and is now
' worth 24 l. This manor was always exempt
' from geld, and from all royal service".

It has been already shewn, under the account of abbat Hameline, that archbishop Aldred took this manor, and some other estates from the monastery, to repay himself the great expences he had been at in rebuilding the abbey, and that afterwards they were restored by his successor; from which time this manor continued in the possession of the abbey 'till its dissolution; when it came to the crown. A lease of the site of it, with several lands belonging to it, was granted 31st H. 8. for twenty-one years, to John Ap-Rice, at the yearly rent of 14 l. 4 s. 4 d. And the reversions of all these, and many other lands here and elsewhere, were sold to the city* on the 11th of September, in the 34th year of the same reign. But the crown resumed its claim, for the manor of Barton Abbat's was granted to Anne Fortescue, widow of Sir Adrian Fortescue, and to his heirs male, 5th Mariae. And according to Sir Robert Atkyns, it did again belong to the crown, in the year 1608. But it is now the property of the corporation of the city of Gloucester.

* Civ.

Lands in Barton Abbat's, and the first feeding of the meadow called Pully-mead, and the tythes of the same, lately belonging to the priory of Lanthony, were granted to Arthur Porter 32^o H. 8.

A portion of tythes in St. Mary de Load, in Barton, formerly belonging to the abbey of Gloucester, were granted to the chapter of Gloucester, 33^o H. 8. And other tythes in Barton Abbat's, formerly belonging to the priory of St. Oswald, were granted to John Fernham 22^o Eliz.

The bord-lands, parcel of the manor of Barton-Abbat's, and other lands in the same manor, were granted in trust, to Richard Andrews and Nicholas Temple 35^o H. 8. And Robert Thornhill and Leonard Warcop had a grant of other lands there 38^o H. 8.

Here is a fair on the 28th day of September, which used to be so famous for large quantities of cheese, as to set the price of that article for the whole year, in all the neighbouring parts; but since the factors^b have made a practice of buying it up at the dairy-houses, all the cheese-fairs and markets in this country are sunk to nothing; and that necessary article of provisions advanced to more than double the price it bore about twenty or thirty years since.

The manors of King's-barton and Abbat's-barton, by a long unity of possession, are so confused with each other, as not to be every where distinguished.

King James the first, in the 8th year of his reign, granted the hundreds of Dudston^c and King's-barton to Sir William Cook, knight, for twenty-one years. The next year, the same king granted them for ever to George and Thomas Whitmore, and ——— Whitmore, esq; of Slaughter, son of general Whitmore, who died in the year 1771, is the present proprietor of them.

The places in the hundreds of Dudston and King's-barton are set down p. 41, of which the following owe suit and service to the court-leet of King's-barton. The hamlet of St. Michael, Barton-street, Upton St. Leonard, Pitchcombe, Harecombe, South-gate and Woolstrop, Saint-hurst, Twigworth, Matson, and Kingholm.

In the year 1770, when the land-tax was at 3s. in the pound, Barton St. Michael paid 27l. 9s. Barton St. Mary 113l. 14s.

^b The modern cheese-factor is a dealer on his own stock, and at his own risque; it is therefore an abuse of the term to call him factor. He buys whole dairies together, which are carried from the farm-houses to his warehouse, and not a cheese of them appears in the market, except what he rejects on account of some imperfection. The dairy-man sells none of his best cheese from the dealer, unless he be tempted by an extravagant price, or induced by some particular circumstance or connexion. Some factors are either in actual possession, or in assurance of forty or fifty dairies each; how then can it be difficult to account, even in a time of plenty, for the exorbitant price of cheese?

Our forefathers were of opinion that commerce in the great necessaries of life should be restrained, and provided laws to prevent a monopoly of them; but we have lately experienced the insufficiency of those laws. If it be necessary in large cities and towns, that cheese-mongers be provided with a sufficient stock for the inhabitants of such places; yet no person I believe, will think it equally necessary that the whole produce of the dairy be drawn into the dealers warehouses, or shut up in the cheese-lofts, in order at length to pass through their hands to the consumers. I insist not that the cheese-factor and meal-man are unlawful dealers; but it is an error in the police to suffer them to conduct their business after the present method.

^c It is not absolutely certain where Dudston lay; but it was probably without the lower North-gate, beyond the New-land. It was also called Dudestan, Dodeltan, &c. perhaps from the Saxon words Dyd dead, and Stan stone. It might be the common burying place in the time of the Romans. Bertachia, from Bergenne a grave, is mentioned in antient writings, in the reign of E. 2. and might lie adjacent to Dudston.

O F T H E

P A R I S H E S

I N

Gloucestershire.

ABBENHALL.

THIS is a small parish, full of little hills and dingles, within the hundred of St. Briavel's; twelve statute miles west from Gloucester, and three north from Newnham. It is bounded on the north-west by Mitchel Dean, on the south-east by Flaxley, with Blaisdon to the north-eastward, and Little Dean to the westward of it.

The abbat of Flaxley had antiently a house here, whence the place obtained the name of Abbenhall. It was not particularly specified in Domesday-book, when the general survey was made; and as late as the ninth year of king Edward the First, the sheriff, in his account of all the villis in the county of Gloucester, returned Mitchel Deane, Parva Deane, and Abbenhalle as one vill.

The stones in this parish are of a rusty colour, with shining particles of iron in their composition. The greatest part of the land is pasturage, with a considerable portion of commonable places, over-run with fern and bushes.

There is a place called Gun's Mills, where was formerly an iron furnace, but the machinery is now converted to the use of a paper-mill, which is driven by a fine spring of water rising out of a rock in the forest, on the side of a hill just above the mill. The forest is extraparochial, wherefore I shall take notice of the spring in this place. It is called St. Anthony's Well. At the head, the water runs into a square bason (with steps on one side) made for the purpose of bathing. I have been told by people of credit and judgment in the neighbourhood, that bathing in this water is an infallible cure for the itch, and other cutaneous disorders; and a gentleman of Little Dean assured me, that his dogs were cured of the mange by being thrown into it two or three times. The water is extremely cold; but whether on that account only it is capable of producing those salutary effects, I shall not determine.

Maynard Colchester, of Westbury, esq; has a good house here, called the Wilderness, situate on the brow of a hill, which gives it a very extensive prospect.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

The manor of Abbenhall belonged antiently to a family who took their name from this place. John de Abbenhalle was possessed of it when the sheriff made his return to the king's writ 9 E. 1. Ralph de Abbenhall died seized of it in the 29th year of the same reign. John his son and heir died seized of the manor, and of the advowson of the church, 10 E. 2. Reginald his son and next heir died seized of this manor 15 E. 3. Sir Ralph de Abbenhall, son of Reginald, died seized of it, and of the custody of a wood in the forest of Data of E. 3. since whose time I find no more of this name here. It is probable that the heirs of this family married into that of the Talbots, for they quarter the arms of Abbenhall, viz. Or, a fess gules, and had at that time great estates in the neighbourhood.

The Genders were the next possessors of this estate; John Gender was seized thereof 5 H. 4. in which year, and also in the last of that reign, he was high sheriff of this county. Robert his son died seized of this manor 26 H. 6. leaving Elizabeth his only daughter and heirs, married to John Tiptot earl of Worcester, who, after the death of his wife, held this estate by the courtesy of England during his life. He was a firm adherent to the house of York, and on the restoration of king Henry the Sixth, lost his head on Tower-hill, and was buried in the Black Friars, London. He left no issue, wherefore the manor descended to John Gender, alias Greyndour, the next heir to the preceding Robert.

— Walwyn (son of William Walwyn, who had been high sheriff of Gloucestershire 10 H. 4.) married the daughter and heirs of the last-mentioned John Gender, by whom he had the manor of Abbenhall, which descended to his son William Walwyn.

Thomas Baynham, of Clowerwall, married Alice, daughter and heirs of William Walwyn, with whom he had this estate. Sir Christopher Baynham, their son and heir, died seized of it 32 H. 8. His son, sir George Baynham, died seized thereof 38 H. 8. whose son Christopher had livery of this manor 3 E. 6. His son Thomas had also livery thereof 23 Eliz. and continued seized of it 6 Jac.

Marshall Brydges, of Worcester-shire, esq; related to the family of the lord Chandois, was lord of this manor in the year 1711, but John Howell, esq; is the present proprietor.

Of the other estates, the records shew, that Margaret the widow of — Huntley died seized of lands within this manor, and of a rent issuing out of Little Dean 49 E. 3. Robert Pyrke died seized of lands in Abbenhall 9 Car. and left Richard his son fifteen years old.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the Forest deanery, worth about 70*l.* a year. John Howell, esq; is patron, and Mr. Hoskyns is the present incumbent.

There are thirty acres of glebe, and all the lands are subject to tithe; but there is no parsonage house, and even the place where it stood is forgotten.

The church, dedicated to St. Michael, hath an aisle on the south side, which was rebuilt in 1749, and a small tower at the west end, covered with tiles.

First fruits £. 6 6 8 Proc. & Syn. £. 10 6 6
Tithes — 0 12 8 Pentecostals — 0 1 4

Monuments and Inscriptions.

On a flat stone of grey marble in the chancel, are memorials for Richard Pyrke, of Mitchel Dean, who died in 1609, and Johan his wife, daughter of John Aylway. And beneath are the effigies of Thomas and Robert their sons; and of Duncombe Pyrke, second son of Nathaniel Pyrke, esq; who died in 1725.

Against the north wall is a monument, with these arms, Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Argent, a fess sable, charged with three mullets of the field. 2. Gules, a chevron between three estoiles Or. And under, on a table of white marble, this inscription:

Near unto lies interred the Body of Nath. Pyrke of Michel-deane, Esq; who was descended of an ancient Family who had their chiefe Seat of Residence in this Neighbourhood ever since the Conquest. He married Mary the daughter of Duncombe Colchester, kn. and by her had issue three sons and two daughters. Thomas the eldest married Dorothy the daughter of Richard Yate, of Arlingham, esq; Duncombe the second married Elizabeth the daughter of William Guillam of Longstone in the county of Hereford, esq; and Jane married Rowles Walter son and heir of Thomas Walter of Stapleton in the county of Glouc. esq; Nath. and Deborah died infants and lies interred near this place. He was a faithful subject to his prince, a good father to his children, charitable to the poor, and just in his dealings. He left behind him an inconsolable widow, who erected this monument in remembrance of the tender and loving a husband. He died the 28th of October, 1715, in the sixtyeth Year of his Age.

Also in Memory of Deborah the Mother of the said Nath. Pyrke, and Wife of Thomas Pyrke, Esq; She was a pious good christian, and lies interred near this place. She died the 9th of February 1662. But Thomas Pyrke her Husband, and Father of the said Nath: lies buried in the Parish Church of Little Deane.

Also here lieth Dorothy the Daughter of Thomas Pyrke, esq; grand-daughter of the said Nath. She was buried June the 21st, 1715.

Also in Memory of Mary Pyrke, the Widow and Relict of the above-named Nathaniel Pyrke who departed this life the 22d of November Anno Dom. 1738. Ætatis 76. And of Nath. Son of Duncombe and of Elizabeth Pyrke who died January the 10th 1748, aged 31 Years.

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 163 14 0
	Poll-tax — 1694, — 28 1 0
	Land-tax — 1694, — 166 14 0
	The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 50 0 0

When sir Robert Atkyns compiled his account of Gloucestershire, there were, according to him, 22 houses, and about 88 inhabitants in this parish, of whom 6 were freeholders; yearly births 3, and burials 3. But examining the register, I find that in ten years, beginning with 1700, the whole number of baptisms was 24, and of burials 34. And that in the like period of time, beginning with the year 1760, the baptisms were 37, and the burials 21. The inhabitants were then about 158, from which the situation appears to be very healthy, and that the people are increasing.

A B S T O N and W I C K

IS a parish in the hundred of Pucklechurch, five miles west from Marshfield, seven south from Sodbury, seven east from Bristol, and seven north west from Bath. It is bounded on the north by Puckle Pucklechurch, on the east by Dointon and Cold Aston, on the west by Siston, and on the south-east by part of Somersetshire. The houses lie chiefly under the west side of that ridge of hills which runs from north-east to south-west through the county.

The great post and turnpike-road from London to Bristol leads through Wick, and there is beside, a turnpike-road from Bath, by the monument on Lansdown, which communicates with the Bristol road at this place.

Abston is probably a contraction of Abbat's-town; for this manor formerly belonged to the abbat of Glastonbury. Wick signifies a hamlet dependent on a place of better note; for in antient grants and charters of townships, after the name, it commonly follows, cum suis berwicis, which favours the above conjecture.

The parish consists chiefly of good pasture and meadow ground. Three distinct streams, i. e. the Filtham, rising in Pucklechurch; a brook from Dyrham, and another from Tog-hill, empty themselves into the river Boyd; and in the street at Wick, the old bridge having lately been taken down, a more commodious one of four arches hath been erected in its room, at the charge of the commissioners of the Bristol turnpikes.

Between this parish and that of Dointon, is a deep, narrow glyn, formed by rocks of a stupendous height, rising almost perpendicularly from the bottom, where the river Boyd runs. On the Dointon side are large fortifications and intrenchments opposed by others on the side of the glyn, in this parish. The stone of the rocks I am speaking of, is of a compact texture, of which the inhabitants burn great quantities into excellent white lime. And there is in the neighbourhood, a blue kind of stone, which makes a brown lime, that hardens under water, and answers the purpose of foreign terras.

They dig coal in this parish, and burn large quantities of it into coak, for making of malt, and other purposes. Here is also lead ore, but the proprietors have not hitherto raised enough of it to answer the working. Belemnites, astroites, and serpentine stones are likewise found here, and some of the rocks have a sparry substance upon them, which sir Robert Atkyns calls rock-diamonds; but this spar is not so beautifully brilliant as that commonly called Bristol stones, found in the rocks about Clifton.

This village deservedly stands one of the foremost in the neighbourhood on account of its antiquities, as well as its natural productions. Sir Robert Atkyns, in the four last lines of his account of it, mentions, "that great quantities of Roman or British brick have been dug up in an adjacent field, where appear also the extended ruins of considerable buildings".

Since the publication of sir Robert Atkyns's History, other antiquities have been found in a field called Beach, in the hamlet of Wick, by people at plough, in the year 1743, who turned up with the foil a quantity of brick, very hard and ponderous, and much superior in fineness to what we now make. Mr. Haynes, the proprietor of the ground, caused the surface, for a considerable space, to be laid open, and presently found that these were parts of a brick pillar. There were three foundations of such pillars standing in a line, each twenty-one inches square. The intervals were thirteen inches. The third pillar stood against the middle of an abutment, or foundation of rough stone-work, measuring five feet and a half in front, which being carried on in the same direction with the pillars, about twenty-two inches, then spread itself outwards on each side in a concave sweep.

Between the pillars, in beds of mortar, were parts of several urns of fine red pottery, but of different shapes and dimensions, some pieces of wood burnt to a coal, a crooked sacrificing knife, about six inches long, and the jaw bone of a sheep or goat. And some time afterwards, the capital, or head of a pillar of freestone, about two feet square, with the cornice, was turned up by the plough in the same field. From these remains, and from a great number of Roman coins found there, which are in Mr. Haynes's possession, there can be no doubt of this having been a Roman work. For as the Romans had possessed themselves of Bath, to which they gave the name of Aqua Solis, where they formed a station; and had also made incursions and conquests on the other side of the Severn, in the country of the Silures, it was necessary to preserve a free intercourse between those places. The route by land from Aqua Solis to the passage over the Severn, leading to that country, lay in a straight line through this parish; and from these fields where the ruins were found, is a full view of the country towards the passage, or Trajectus of Antoninus. This therefore was a proper situation for a garrison, by which intelligence might be communicated from one station to another.

The late Mr. Richard Haynes, who was lord of the manor, and resided here, contended very strongly that this was the Abone of Antoninus, which he endeavoured to make out by supposing mistakes in the distances, and that the stations are transposed in Antoninus's Itinerary. But he was certainly mistaken, as may be seen under Lidney, where the subject of the Abone is discussed more at large.

There is a field in this parish called the Cbeßles, or Castles, where are three large stones about five feet high from the ground, drawn thither from the cliffs below, and placed upright pretty near together, in a triangular form. They are without inscriptions, but one of them having been taken down, at the foot of it were found some old coins, a circumstance more especially denoting them to be monumental; but to what age or people they are to be attributed, is not easy to determine.

determine. It is supposed, however, that they were placed there after the time of the Romans, as a memorial for some chiefs who fell in battle in this part of the country; and their number, and nearness to Dyrham, an adjoining village, lead me to conjecture that they stand for the three British princes whom Ceaulin the Saxon slew in a bloody battle, as mentioned under that place, in the year 577. But what could induce Mr. Donn to call these druidical stones, in his accurate map of the environs of the city of Bristol, is to me unaccountable, since neither history nor tradition favours that notion.

I must not omit to mention a memorable battle fought in the time of the civil war, on the 5th of July, 1643. Lord Hopton, prince Maurice, and the earl of Carnarvon drew up the king's forces upon Tog-hill, part of which is in this parish, to engage the parliament's forces on Lansdown, under the command of sir William Waller. The fight lasted from two in the afternoon 'till one the next morning, when the latter quitted the field, leaving lighted matches on the hedges to secure their retreat. But an accident prevented the king's army from improving the victory, for their powder blew up and wounded many officers, among whom was lord Hopton himself. Sir Bevil Grenvil was mortally wounded, which occasioned the titles of earl of Bath and viscount Lansdown being conferred on his son, by king Charles the Second, after the restoration. That earl built the monument on Lansdown, on which is an inscription, now much obliterated, but it may be seen in lord Clarendon's history of that war, giving some particulars of this battle.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book the manor of Abston and Wick is not distinguished by any particular name, but included in the account of the large parish of Pucklechurch, to which it belonged, and which was then held by the abbey of Glastonbury, having been given to it by king Edward the Confessor. But when king Richard the First was prisoner at Vienna, the emperor Leopold obliged him to annex that abbey to the see of Bath and Wells, and to give that bishoprick to Savaricus the emperor's kinsman. And in the year 1205, the monks of Glastonbury quitted their right in the manors of Pucklechurch, Abston, and Westerleigh, and in the patronage of several churches, to that bishoprick, upon condition that Joceline the bishop would restore to them the election of their own abbat.

The successive bishops of Bath and Wells held Abston and Wick, without interruption, above two hundred and fifty years; but the records shew, that Hugh Dennis levied a fine thereof 11 H. 7. However this manor belonged to the same bishoprick 37 H. 8. when the king purchased it, together with the advowson of the rectory, and Friers wood in Abston, of William, then bishop of Bath and Wells; and granted it the same year to John Wintour, with all rights of court leet, and court of the manor, which have been kept in use to this time from the possession of the Wintour family, under the stile, as specified in the court rolls, of the court leet and court of the manor of Wick and Abston.

Maurice Dennis died seized of this manor 5 Eliz. and was succeeded by Walter Dennis his brother and heir, who was at that time sixty years old, as appears by the escheator's inquisition.

Sir Edward Wintour was lord of this manor in the year 1608. Sir John Wintour, son of sir Edward, granted it away 8 C. 1. and by divers mesne conveyances it was assigned to Mr. Thomas Haynes, in the year 1665.

Richard Haynes, esq; son of Thomas, was lord of this manor when sir Robert Atkyns compiled his History. He was succeeded by his son Thomas Haynes, whose son, Richard Haynes, esq; is the present proprietor. The ancestors of this family, many generations past, were seized of Southmead in the parish of Westbury upon Trim, but after purchasing Wick and Abston in the last century, they have resided here.

Lands in Nether Wyke and Over Wyke, which belonged to Cript hospital near Bristol, and other lands which belonged to Westbury college, were all granted to sir Ralph Sadler, 35 H. 8.

The hamlets in this parish are,

1. Berdwic, now written Wick.
2. Holy Brook, so called from a spring dedicated to the holy virgin.
3. Churchley, which obtained that name from an antient chapel, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, now intirely ruined. John de Button was seized of Churchley 7 E. 2. Robert Grinder was seized of it 22 H. 6. when it was reputed a manor; and sir John Bar was seized of it 22 E. 4.
4. Bridge-Yate. 5. Tog-bill.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Hawkesbury. It is annexed to Pucklechurch. It pays 1 s. 6 d. for pentecostals.

All corn tithes are paid in kind, all others by modus. Sir Robert Atkyns mentions, "that the tithes of hay in Wyke did belong to the priory of Bradenstoke in Wiltshire," and that "these tithes were granted to the dean and chapter of Bristol, 34 H. 8." But the grant he refers to, relates to Wick in Berkeley, and not to this parish.

The church, which is dedicated to St. James, stands in Abston. It consists of one aisle, handsomely pewed, with a neat gallery at the west end, where the tower stands, adorned with pinnacles.

Clerk and patron the same as at Pucklechurch.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

On a flat stone in the church. In a lozenge Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Argent, on fess gules three bezants, between as many demy bend azure, for Haynes. 2. Obliterated. Beneath, this inscription :

Here lieth the body of Mrs. Mary Haines, the widdow and relict of Mr. Thomas Haynes of the city of Bristol, lord of this manor, who deceased the XVIII day of May, A. Dni. MDCCIX, aged LXXX years.

On another flat stone is an inscription for Samuel Woodward, gent. who died July 2, 1648. Under, a scutcheon bearing three chevrons, but the colours, &c. are not expressed. And beneath the scutcheon, a memorial for Mrs. Mary Seede, widow, formerly wife of the said Mr. Woodward. She died Sept. 14, 1695.

In the church-yard, on a head-stone,

Here lieth the body of Robert Collins of this parish, mathematician, who died the 21st of Jan. 1733, in the 62d year of his age.

On a flat stone, for Edward Strange, of Deinton, the following lines, which I have inserted on account of their merit :

Vain king of Terrors, boast no more
Thine ancient, wide extended pow'r ;
Each saint in life, with Christ his head,
Shall reign, when thou thyself art dead.

Benefactions.

Christopher Cadle, by his will dated 1662, devised money to purchase lands, and erect a house for four poor people ; and a ground and house at Holy-Brook were provided and settled according to the will.

William Hart, clerk, has given 20s. yearly for two sermons.

John Hathway hath given a rent-charge of 10s. yearly, to the use of poor housekeepers.

Beloved Wilks, who died in the year 1727, left a part of his house in Wick, for the habitation of two clergymen's widows, to be chosen by the ministers of Pucklechurch, Deinton, and Dyrham, with 10l. a year, and half a load of coal to each. With the overplus of his estate, a lad, to be chosen out of the above mentioned parishes, is to be maintained at the university 'till he takes the degree of bachelor of arts. He has given 15s. a year to be spent at the annual meeting of the trustees and widows.

Mr. Thomas Stephens, sometime alderman of Bristol, hath endowed two hospitals in Bristol, with lands in this parish. And other lands have been purchased with Mr. Langton's money for the use of the poor of Dyrham and Deinton. See Dyrham.

In a series of ten years from 1700 to 1709, both inclusive, there are registered 76 baptisms and 56 burials. In a like series from 1760 to 1769, there are also registered 92 baptisms and 86 burials. About the year 1710, when sir Robert Atkyns was compiling his history, it is said this parish contained 50 families, and about 230 inhabitants, whereof 8 were freeholders. There are now (1772) about 400 inhabitants ; so that the people have considerably increased here since the beginning of this century.

ACTON, or IRON-ACTON,

LIES in the vale, the greater part of it in the hundred of Thornbury ; but the hamlet in this parish distinguished by the additional name of Ilger, is in the hundred of Grumbald's-ash. The church stands three miles W. from Chipping-Sodbury, seven southward from Thornbury, nine north-eastward from Bristol, and about twenty-nine south-westward from Gloucester.

The forest of Kingswood extended over a large tract of land in this country, and the place of which I am writing is said to have been much over-run with the oak-tree, whence it is supposed to derive its name ; for Acton, from the Saxon word Ac, is the same in signification with Oak-town. The great quantities of iron-cinders, lying about in several places, shew that here were formerly iron-works, which probably ceased for want of wood to carry them on, for here is still great plenty of ore ; hence it has sometimes been called Iron-Acton, to distinguish it from Acton-Turville, in the hundred of Grumbald's-ash. There is also a coal-pit now in work. The parish consists almost equally of pasturage and of arable ground. It lies on the verge of that country which is one vast continued bed of coal ; but I cannot learn that it is remarkable for any other natural productions beside the fossils already mentioned. The river Froome, rising at Dodington, receives the brook Laden at this place, and runs to Bristol, where it forms the key of that port.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Before the Norman conquest this parish consisted of two manors. Sir Robert Atkyns erroneously prefixed an abstract of the Domesday account of Cold Aston to this place, which he has adapted to it by writing the name Actune, instead of Essetone, as I read it in my copy of that record. And other writers, following him, have been equally mistaken in saying that the church of St. Peter at Bath held this manor in the reigns of the confessor and conqueror. Sir Robert Atkyns has indeed, added a paraphrastic account of some of the particulars of the manor of Actune from Domesday-book ; but the following is a literal translation, referring, by the figures at the end, to the page of this book where the Domesday account is printed, in the language, and as nearly as could be done with common printing types, after the manner of the original.

' Hunfridus the chamberlain holds Actune in ' Bacheftanes hundred. Heroldus a [free] man
' of Aluui of Hereford held it, who could go
' where he would. There are two hides and a ' half. In demean is one plow-tillage, and three
' villeins, and three bordars, with half a plow-
' tillage. There are two serui, and a mill and a ' half of sixty-four pence, and five acres of ' meadow. It is worth, and was worth 40
' shillings. Domesday-book, p. 79.

Leland says, 'the erles of Heriford were once lords of Acton lordshippe.' John de Acton was probably descended from them, and took his surname from this place of his residence, according to the custom of early times. He was seized of the manor of Actune at the beginning of the reign of H. 3. and it appears by a record 15° E. 1. that he and his ancestors had enjoyed it time immemorial. His grandson John de Acton was seized of Iron-Acton, with court-leet, gallows and tumbrel 15° E. 1. which privileges were allowed him in a writ of Quo warranto brought against him that year. The statute of Quo warranto, in this, and some of the subsequent reigns, proved an excellent instrument by which to extort money from the subject; for the king being chief lord of many manors and possessions, of which the deeds, charters, and other evidences were frequently lost or destroyed in those days, by civil wars, length of time, or other casualties; it became a common practice, under colour of promoting the good purposes of that law, to put men upon the most rigorous proof of their right to their estates, in which if they failed by any accident, their lands were resumed by the crown, or very heavy fines exacted from the owners for permission to enjoy them. This accounts for the many writs of Quo warranto occasionally mentioned in the subsequent parts of this work.

John de Acton, son of the last mentioned John, was high-sheriff of Gloucestershire 4° E. 2. and dying seized of this manor in the eighth year of that reign, was succeeded by George de Acton; who forfeited his estate in the rebellion against king Edward the Second to expel the Spencers. Hugh le Despencer obtained a grant, and levied a fine of this manor 18° E. 2. but John de Acton, (son of George) was restored to all his father's lands 1° E. 3. being then under age.

Richard de Bellers held Iron-Acton 3° E. 3. probably in right of guardianship, for he was then also seized of the manor of Elkstone, which belonged to the Actons. The last mentioned John de Acton was knighted, and dying seized of those manors without issue, 17° E. 3. his cousin and heirs Maud, by marrying with sir Nicholas Poyntz, brought them into that name and family; for sir John Poyntz, son of sir Nicholas and Maud his wife, succeeded to those estates as heir to his mother.

This family of Poyntz, or Ponz, descended from Drogo, son of de Ponz, an antient family of Normandy. Three brothers, Walter, Drogo or Drew, and Richard, assisted the conqueror in his invasion of England. Walter, grandson of Drogo, resided at Clifford castle in Herefordshire, and thence took the name of Clifford; but the younger branch of Gloucestershire still retained the name of Poyntz.

Robert Poyntz held the manor of Iron-Acton of Hugh earl of Stafford, as of his manor of Thornbury, by one knight's-fee 10° R. 2. He married Catherine daughter and coheir of Thomas Fitz Nicholas, a branch of the Berkeley family.

Nicholas Poyntz, son of Robert, married, first, Elizabeth daughter of Henry Hasley of Sussex; and secondly Elizabeth daughter of sir Edward Mills of Harcombe, and dying 29° H. 6. was succeeded by

John Poyntz, his son by the second wife, who married Alice daughter of — Cox of Skynvraith, in Monmouthshire; and dying 5° E. 4. was also succeeded by his son

Sir Robert Poyntz, who married Margaret the natural daughter of Anthony Woodvil, earl of Rivers, and died in the year 1519.

Sir Anthony Poyntz, his son, married Elizabeth daughter and coheirs of sir William Hudfield of Devonshire.

Sir Nicholas Poyntz, son of sir Anthony, married Joan daughter of Thomas lord Berkeley, and dying seized of Iron-Acton 4° Mar. was succeeded by his son

Sir Nicholas Poyntz, who had to his first wife Anne daughter of sir Ralph Verney, of Penley in Hertfordshire; but she dying, he married, secondly, Margaret daughter of Henry earl of Derby.

Sir John Poyntz (son of the last sir Nicholas by his first wife) succeeded his father, and married Urfula daughter of John Sidenham, of Brampton in Somersetshire. He was seized of this manor in the year 1608. His son

Sir Robert Poyntz was made one of the knights of the Bath, at the coronation of king Charles the First. He wrote a treatise in vindication of monarchy, and dying in the year 1665, was buried with his ancestors in Acton church. He had two wives, but no male issue by the first. His second wife was Cicely daughter of Mr. Smith, by whom he had his son and successor,

Sir John Poyntz, who married Anne daughter of Mr. Caesar of Hampshire. He died in the year 1680, and left Acton to his widow, of whom it was purchased by William Player, esq; after it had continued in the family near six hundred years; for it passed by descent from the Actons to the Poyntzs, who were very eminent in Gloucestershire, where they have many times served the office of high sheriff, as may be seen by the list in the former part of this book. The arms of Poyntz are, Barry of eight, Or and gules.

Sir Samuel Astry bought the manor of Iron-Acton of Mr. Player, and left the inheritance of it by will to his widow, who was afterwards married to Simon Harcourt, esq. It came afterwards to sir Philip Parker, from whom it descended to Walter Long, of South Wraxall, in the county of Wilts, esq; who is the present lord of the manor.

Mr. King is possessed of Acton-lodge, a considerable estate of the Poyntz's in this parish; and the late Mr. Liston, his uncle, used to hold a court-baron, as I am informed, but it was discontinued before his death.

Other lands in Iron-Acton belonged to various persons, of which the following account is drawn from the records. Thomas Brook and Joan his wife levied a fine of lands in Iron-Acton to Ralph Purceval and Edmund Pine 15° R. 2. He died 25° H. 5. seized of other lands here; and Joan his widow died 15° H. 6. seized also of three yard-lands, twelve acres of meadow, and ten acres of pasture in Iron-Acton.

Thomas Cheddre was seized of divers messuages in Iron-Acton 21° H. 6. And Joan his daughter, widow of John Talbot viscount Lisle, died seized of those lands 7° E. 4. and sir Humphry Talbot levied a fine of them 15° E. 4.

William earl marshal and of Nottingham levied a fine of lands in Iron-Acton and Acton-Ilger to Edward Willoughby and Robert Legg 3° H. 7.

A messuage in Iron-Acton belonged to the Magdalen hospital in Bristol, and was granted to Edward Brain and John Marsh 37° H. 8.

H A M L E T S. There are two hamlets in this parish.

1. Acton-Ilger, which lies in the hundred of Grumbald's-ash, and has a distinct tything-man. The cognomen was taken from Ilger or Algar, who held this as a manor in the reign of William the conqueror, as I find it in the record, of which the following is a translation:

'The bishop of St. Laud [in Constance] holds Actane in Bacheftanes hundred, and Ilgerus [holds it] of him. There are two hides and a half. In demean is one plow-tillage; and four villeins and five bordars, and one servus, and two ancilla with one plow-tillage and a half. There is [the] half [share of] a mill of sixteen pence, and ten acres of meadow, and one furlong of wood. It is worth and was worth 40s. Ebbe, a [free] man of Brictric the son of Algar, held this manor. Domesday-book, p. 70.

This tything lies very much intermixed with Iron-Acton. Close to the church-yard westward lies the parsonage, in Iron-Acton; and close to it also eastward stands an antient house called the old inn, which is in Acton-Ilger. It is observable that Iron-Acton and Acton-Ilger both lay in Bacheftanes hundred, as recorded in Domesday-book. But Thornbury hundred being erected since that time, was taken out of the old hundreds of Bacheftanes and Ederestan, more especially where the lords of Thornbury had property.

Osbert Giffard and Alice Mordack were seized of this manor 31° H. 3.

Maurice, son of Thomas de Berkeley held Acton-Ilger 42° E. 3. and sir Thomas de Berkeley and Margaret his wife were seized of this manor 5° H. 5. Richard de Beauchamp earl of Warwick married Elizabeth the only daughter and heiress of that sir Thomas de Berkeley, lord Berkeley, and in her right died seized of this manor 17° H. 6. Thomas Cheddre was seized of it 21° H. 6. Joan one of his daughters, and widow of John Talbot viscount Lisle, died seized hereof

7° E. 4. And Margaret countess of Shrewsbury was seized of Acton-Ilger the same year.

2. Lateridge or Ladenridge, so called on account of its lying on a high ridge of land on the north-west of the brook Laden, over which, a few years since, a bridge was built at the expence of the county.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth about 200*l.* a year. The patronage is in the dean and chapter of Christchurch, Oxford. Joseph Jane, B. D. is the present incumbent. Forty acres belong to the glebe. The church is dedicated to St. James. It hath a south-aisle, and a tower at the west end, remarkably large and massy. It seems not to have been raised nearly to the height intended, as may be concluded from the smallness of the pinnacles, the sudden contraction of the upper story, and the disproportion of the height to the bulk. On the south side of the chancel is a vault belonging to the manor-house, where some of the family of Poyntz are buried.

First fruits, £. 16 : 10 : 0 Synodals, - £. 0 : 2 : 0
Tenths, — 1 : 13 : 0 Pentecostals, 0 : 0 : 8
Procurations, 0 : 6 : 8

Benefactions.

Mr. Humphry Brown of Bristol, merchant, has given 10*s.* yearly to the minister, for a sermon on the festival of St. John Baptist; and 40*s.* yearly to the poor, payable by the mayor of Bristol. He also gave a pulpit-cloth, cushion, silver flaggon, and chalice. Mr. Edward Brinkworth gave 20*l.* to the poor. Mr. John Brinkworth gave 20*l.* Mr. John Mortimer, (who died in 1701) rector of this church, gave 20*l.* and Mr. Simon Sloper gave 10*l.* to the poor.

In the year 1761 the parish paid to the poor 187*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* and from that time the poor-tax hath been gradually encreasing, so that in 1767 it came to 232*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.*

Iron-Acton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 119 : 0 : 0
		Poll-tax — 1694, — 27 : 13 : 0
		Land-tax — 1694, — 157 : 18 : 0
		The same — 1770, — 105 : 13 : 6

Acton-Ilger.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 25 : 13 : 4
		Poll-tax — 1694, — 8 : 4 : 0
		Land-tax — 1694, — 25 : 16 : 0
		The same — 1770, — 20 : 6 : 9

According to sir Robert Atkyns, when he compiled his account of this parish, there were 60 houses and about 240 inhabitants, whereof 24 were freeholders; the yearly births were 10, and the burials 8. But upon examining the parish-register, I find that in a series of ten years from 1700 to 1709 both inclusive, there were registered 112 baptisms and 80 burials; and in a like series from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were entered 205 baptisms, and 115 burials: And upon a calculation that one in forty dies annually, the whole number of people will be found to be 460; so that the inhabitants are increasing very fast in this parish.

ACTON-TURVILLE.

THIS is a small village in the hill country, within the hundred of Grumbald's-ash. It is bounded on the south-eastward by Wiltshire, and lies about five miles E. from Chipping-sodbury, five N. from Marshfield, and about twenty-eight S. from Gloucester. The lands are chiefly arable, with some pasture. Consistent with the etymology of the preceding parish, it may be supposed that the oak-tree grew so plentifully here as to give the place the name of Acton; but it received the additional name of Turville from the family of the Turbervilles, who were the ancient lords of the manor.

In the middle of the place stands a small stone building, remarkable not only for its antiquity, but for its having been a sanctuary, as it is said, dedicated to the virgin Mary, supposed to have been built by one of our Saxon kings. Churches were sanctuaries very antiently in England. The fifth law of king Ina enacted, that If any one be guilty of a capital crime, and flee to the church, let him have his life; but let him make satisfaction, as right directs. If any one forfeit his byde, and flee to the church, let his lashes be forgiven him. The clergy of the church to which the criminal fled were bound to provide victuals for him while in sanctuary. He had liberty of going thirty paces from the church, and forty if it were a cathedral. All but clerks, here in England, who took the privilege of sanctuary for greater crimes, were bound to swear that they would leave the kingdom, and not return without royal licence. After taking this oath, they were to go by the direct road to the next port, and embark by the first opportunity, and while they were in that road they were deemed to be in sanctuary. But the reader may see more of these matters in the 13th page of this book.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Among the particulars belonging to Ernulfus de Hesding, in the hundred of Grimboldstou in Gloucestershire, Achetone is one set down in the record, which may be thus translated:

' The same Ernulfus holds Achetone. There are five hides taxed. Edricus held it. In demean are three plow-tillages; and four villeins, and three bordars, with four plow-tillages. There are fifteen acres of meadow. It is worth, and was worth 100s. Domesday-book, p. 77.

Richard Turberville was seized of this manor 12° and 15° E. 1. and it had then obtained the name of Turberville, so that it must have been in that family soon after the conquest.

Richard earl of Arundel held Acton-Turberville 30° E. 1. John de la Rivere was seized thereof 8° E. 2. And it was held by knight-service of Edward earl of Kent 4° E. 3. Sir John Drayton died seized of this manor 5° H. 5. and William St. Loe had livery thereof granted to him 2° Eliz.

The earl of Shrewsbury was lord of the manor in the year 1608. It came afterwards to Henry Cavendish, duke of Newcastle, who granted it to sir John Top, from whom it descended to sir John Top, late of Tormarton. He had two daughters, one of them married to — Hungerford, esq; whose son John Hungerford, of Dingley-hall in Northamptonshire, esq; is the present lord of the manor.

Richard Verney had livery of divers lands in this parish, 2° Eilz.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Hawkesbury. It was united to Tormarton in the year 1344, and the rector of Tormarton had the presentation, but it is now in the crown, by lapse. The glebe lands are worth about 15*l.* a year, and the vicar has the small tithes. Mrs. Adey of Old Sodbury is the impropriator. Philip Blifs, M. A. incumbent.

The church is small, with a low tower in the middle.

First fruits, £	6 : 13 : 4	Synodals £.	0 : 2 : 0
Tenths, —	13 : 4	Pentecostals,	0 : 0 : 10
Procurations -	6 : 8

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	42 : 17 : 4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	4 : 17 : 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	35 : 0 : 0
		The same, at 3 s. -- 1770, —	27 : 18 : 3

According to sir Robert Atkyns, when he compiled his account of this parish, there were 20 houses and about 80 inhabitants, and the yearly births were 2, and burials 2. About the year 1747 there were 85 inhabitants; and in a series of ten years from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, the registered baptisms are 43, burials 20; so that population increases, and the number of souls is about 90.

ADLESTROP, or AEDELSTHORP,

IS a village in the hundred of Slaughter, pleasantly situated on the gentle slope of a hill, with a south aspect; three miles north-eastward from Stow, ten S. E. from Campden, and twenty-eight N. E. from Gloucester. It is bounded on the east by Oxfordshire, with the parish of Evenlode in Worcestershire, to the northward; and the river of

of the same name divides it from Broadwell on the west, and Oddington on the south. It was antiently written Eadlesthorp, Tadlestrop, Tedestrop, and in some old writings Castlethorp; and it is said that in the charter of Egwine, bishop of Worcester, who founded the abbey of Evesham in the year 700, to which this manor belonged, the name is written Tiddlestrop. The diversity of writing the name occasions some doubt as to the etymology of it; but it is the common received opinion, that as in the Anglo-Saxon language Ædel signifies a nobleman, and þopp a village or habitation, it was so called because it had been the place of residence of some noble Saxon; and that the others are corrupt modes of writing the same name. But as to Castlethorp, it was probably so called from a round fortification, supposed to be Danish, called Castlebarrow, upon Castleton-hill, near the boundaries of this parish.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

As the church of Evesham was originally endowed with this manor, so at the time of the general survey, in the reign of William the First, it belonged to that abbey, as appears by the record, where, under Salemones hundred, it is thus said:

'The same church [St. Mary of Evesham] holds Tedestrop. There are seven hides. In demean are two plow-tillages; and ten villeins, and two bordars, with three plow-tillages. There are four servi, and one knight with two plow-tillages. There is a little meadow. It was worth 4*l.* now 100*s.* Domesday-book, p. 72.

The church of Evesham continued in possession of this manor 'till the time of the dissolution of monasteries. That abbey was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and valued at 1268*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

After the dissolution, the manor and the tithes were granted to sir Thomas Leigh, 7^o E. 6.

The ancestors of this family assumed their name from the town of High-leigh in Cheshire, where they were seated before the Norman invasion. Collins deduces their pedigree, with many particulars, which, for want of room, are not admisible in this place, from Hamon, lord of the mediety of High-leigh, whose son William was father of Richard, who had for his son another Richard, who had a daughter Agnes.

This Agnes, by her second husband, William Venables of Bradwell, had issue John, who took the name of Leigh after his mother, but bore his father's arms, and died in 1322; leaving, by Ellen his wife, three sons, John, Robert, and Peter; and according to some accounts, he had another son William by a second wife.

Robert, the second son, was of Adlington in Cheshire, whose eldest son was sir Robert Leigh, and his second son sir Peter Leigh, of Maxfield, who by his wife Margaret, daughter and heir of sir Thomas Dangers, had a son sir Peter Leigh, who was made a knight banneret, and was slain at the battle of Agincourt, 1415.

This sir Peter Leigh, knight banneret, married Cecilie daughter of John del Hagh, and had by her a son John, and two daughters. John was escheator of Cheshire in the reign of H. 6. and marrying Alice daughter and heir of Thomas Alcock, had three sons, Roger, Richard, and John.

Richard the second son left issue Roger, who had two sons; William the eldest was seated at Wollington in Shropshire, and at Rushall in Staffordshire, but Thomas the younger brother of William was bred up under sir Rowland Hill, a rich merchant and lord mayor of London, who having no child, gave him in marriage his favourite niece Alice Barker, on whose issue he entailed the greatest part of his estate.

This Thomas Leigh was one of the sheriffs of London in the year 1555, and lord mayor of that city at the death of queen Mary, and during his mayoralty was knighted. He had by his lady three sons, Rowland, Thomas, and William; and four daughters. Thomas the second son is the ancestor of the present Edward Leigh, lord Leigh of Stoneley. William was father of lord Dunmore, afterward raised by king C. 1. to the higher dignity of earl of Chichester, which title, for want of a male heir, became extinct at his death in the year 1653.

Rowland the eldest son was largely provided for at Longborough in this county, and other places, by sir Rowland Hill his god-father. He married a daughter of sir Richard Berkeley of Stoke-Gifford, by whom he had issue sir William Leigh, who died in the year 1631, and was succeeded by his son William Leigh, esq; of Adlestrop, who dying in the year 1690, was succeeded by his son Theophilus Leigh, esq; who married a daughter of — Craven. His second wife was Mary daughter of James lord Chandois, by whom he had William Leigh, esq; who was succeeded in this estate by his eldest son James Leigh, esq; the present lord of the manor of Adlestrop. He married Caroline the only daughter of his grace the late duke of Chandois. He hath greatly repaired and enlarged the old family seat, in the Gothick taste, and resides here. His arms are, Gules, a cross engrailed argent, a lozenge in the dexter chief of the second.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, annexed to Broadwell, in the deanery of Stow. They are worth together about 350*l.* a year. Dr. Johnson, who was rector of this church, built a parsonage-house in the year 1670, on which he expended 1500*l.* James Leigh, esq; is patron; his brother, Mr. Thomas Leigh, incumbent.

The advowson of the chapel of Adlestrop was formerly in the abbat of Evesham, who by an antient reservation in the year 1450, received 6*l.* yearly of the rector, which is now paid to the patron. After the dissolution of religious houses, the advowson of the chapel of Adlestrop was granted to Richard Andrews, 37 H. 8. Two of the same name divides it from Broadwell on the west, and Oddington on the south. It was antiently written Eadlesthorp, Tadlestrop, Tedestrop, and in some old writings Castlethorp; and it is said that in the charter of Egwine, bishop of Worcester, who founded the abbey of Evesham in the year 700, to which this manor belonged, the name is written Tiddlestrop. The diversity of writing the name occasions some doubt as to the etymology of it; but it is the common received opinion, that as in the Anglo-Saxon language Ædel signifies a nobleman, and þopp a village or habitation, it was so called because it had been the place of residence of some noble Saxon; and that the others are corrupt modes of writing the same name. But as to Castlethorp, it was probably so called from a round fortification, supposed to be Danish, called Castlebarrow, upon Castleton-hill, near the boundaries of this parish.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

As the church of Evesham was originally endowed with this manor, so at the time of the general survey, in the reign of William the First, it belonged to that abbey, as appears by the record, where, under Salemones hundred, it is thus said:

'The same church [St. Mary of Evesham] holds Tedestrop. There are seven hides. In demean are two plow-tillages; and ten villeins, and two bordars, with three plow-tillages. There are four servi, and one knight with two plow-tillages. There is a little meadow. It was worth 4*l.* now 100*s.* Domesday-book, p. 72.

The church of Evesham continued in possession of this manor 'till the time of the dissolution of monasteries. That abbey was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and valued at 1268*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

After the dissolution, the manor and the tithes were granted to sir Thomas Leigh, 7^o E. 6.

The ancestors of this family assumed their name from the town of High-leigh in Cheshire, where they were seated before the Norman invasion. Collins deduces their pedigree, with many particulars, which, for want of room, are not admisible in this place, from Hamon, lord of the mediety of High-leigh, whose son William was father of Richard, who had for his son another Richard, who had a daughter Agnes.

This Agnes, by her second husband, William Venables of Bradwell, had issue John, who took the name of Leigh after his mother, but bore his father's arms, and died in 1322; leaving, by Ellen his wife, three sons, John, Robert, and Peter; and according to some accounts, he had another son William by a second wife.

Robert, the second son, was of Adlington in Cheshire, whose eldest son was sir Robert Leigh, and his second son sir Peter Leigh, of Maxfield, who by his wife Margaret, daughter and heir of sir Thomas Dangers, had a son sir Peter Leigh, who was made a knight banneret, and was slain at the battle of Agincourt, 1415.

This sir Peter Leigh, knight banneret, married Cecilie daughter of John del Hagh, and had by her a son John, and two daughters. John was escheator of Cheshire in the reign of H. 6. and marrying Alice daughter and heir of Thomas Alcock, had three sons, Roger, Richard, and John.

Richard the second son left issue Roger, who had two sons; William the eldest was seated at Wollington in Shropshire, and at Rushall in Staffordshire, but Thomas the younger brother of William was bred up under sir Rowland Hill, a rich merchant and lord mayor of London, who having no child, gave him in marriage his favourite niece Alice Barker, on whose issue he entailed the greatest part of his estate.

This Thomas Leigh was one of the sheriffs of London in the year 1555, and lord mayor of that city at the death of queen Mary, and during his mayoralty was knighted. He had by his lady three sons, Rowland, Thomas, and William; and four daughters. Thomas the second son is the ancestor of the present Edward Leigh, lord Leigh of Stoneley. William was father of lord Dunmore, afterward raised by king C. 1. to the higher dignity of earl of Chichester, which title, for want of a male heir, became extinct at his death in the year 1653.

Rowland the eldest son was largely provided for at Longborough in this county, and other places, by sir Rowland Hill his god-father. He married a daughter of sir Richard Berkeley of Stoke-Gifford, by whom he had issue sir William Leigh, who died in the year 1631, and was succeeded by his son William Leigh, esq; of Adlestrop, who dying in the year 1690, was succeeded by his son Theophilus Leigh, esq; who married a daughter of — Craven. His second wife was Mary daughter of James lord Chandois, by whom he had William Leigh, esq; who was succeeded in this estate by his eldest son James Leigh, esq; the present lord of the manor of Adlestrop. He married Caroline the only daughter of his grace the late duke of Chandois. He hath greatly repaired and enlarged the old family seat, in the Gothick taste, and resides here. His arms are, Gules, a cross engrailed argent, a lozenge in the dexter chief of the second.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, annexed to Broadwell, in the deanery of Stow. They are worth together about 350*l.* a year. Dr. Johnson, who was rector of this church, built a parsonage-house in the year 1670, on which he expended 1500*l.* James Leigh, esq; is patron; his brother, Mr. Thomas Leigh, incumbent.

The advowson of the chapel of Adlestrop was formerly in the abbat of Evesham, who by an antient reservation in the year 1450, received 6*l.* yearly of the rector, which is now paid to the patron. After the dissolution of religious houses, the advowson of the chapel of Adlestrop was granted to Richard Andrews, 37 H. 8. Two yard-lands belong to the glebe. The demesns pay no tithe of hay.

The church hath been twice rebuilt in the space of a few years, owing to the unskilfulness of the workmen employed in the first rebuilding. The inhabitants formerly buried at Broadwell, but in the year 1590, the ancestors of Mr. Leigh gave land for a church-yard, and procured it to be consecrated. In the chancel are memorials for several persons of Mr. Leigh's family.

Benefactions.

Mr. Thomas Barker, who formerly resided here, gave 20*l.* a year to the use of the poor.

Lady Turner, sister of the present lord of the manor, by her will in the year 1770, amongst other legacies of the same kind, gave 50*l.* to the poor of this place.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	79	11	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	32	3	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	93	16	8
		The same — — 1770, —	57	3	9

When sir Robert Atkyns compiled his history, there were 34 houses, and about 200 inhabitants, which is nearly the present state of this parish.

A L D E R L E Y,

IS a small parish in the hundred of Grumbald's-ash, seated on a rising ground, yet sheltered every way by the hills that surround it, except on the west and south-west sides; whence it commands a fine prospect of the village of Kingswood, and other parts of the vale. It lies three miles south from Wotton-under-edge, eleven westward from Tetbury, and about twenty-two southward from Gloucester. It was antiently the utmost bounds of the forest of Kingswood.

To investigate the signification of the name is no less difficult than to fix, with certainty, the most antient and original manner of writing it. For some centuries back it hath been written Aldersley, and Alderleigh, differing very little from the modern orthography; all which seem to be composed of the Anglo-saxon words Ealder or Aldeop, older, and Ley, a pasture ground. But I offer this as a mere conjecture, as it may be objected, that more antiently, in Domesday-book, the name is written Alrelic, which doth not favour this etymology.

Upon the hill, eastward and south-eastward of the village, are found petrifications of several marine substances, as the oyster and cockle, in great abundance; but this parish produces nothing remarkable, or rare, in the vegetable world.

It hath been matter of doubt with some persons, how so many shell-fish, and other productions of the great deep, should be intermixt with the materials of our highest hills, at such a distance from the sea; but it is now generally allowed to have been the effect of the universal deluge, and to furnish the strongest arguments for that great event that can be drawn from nature. This subject hath been largely handled by Dr. Woodward, Mr. Catcott, and other eminent persons, to whose writings the curious are referred.

This parish is hilly, and the lands are pretty equally divided into pasture and arable. The soil is good, in some parts naturally, in others 'tis made so by cultivation, and the air is healthy. Two small brooks bound the parish on the north and south, and joining, are called in antient evidences the Avon, and run from this place to Berkeley.

The clothing business hath been settled here some hundreds of years since. Leland, in his Itinerary, calls Aldersley a clothing village; but that business hath lately been declining in the whole neighbourhood. The same author, among the memorable things taken notice of by him, informs us, that in the year 1225, a man of Adderlay, which I take to be intended for this place, feigned himself to be Christ, and for his most infamous presumption was carried to Oxford, and there crucified.

But Alderley is most remarkable for being the birth place of that great and solid lawyer, sir Matthew Hale, lord chief justice of the king's bench. He was (saith a learned author, who hath nearly thus drawn his character) a person eminent for his piety, learning, and justice. His piety was manifest by his excellent Private Contemplations, published at the importunity of others, and by his constant attendance on public divine service on sundays, from which he was not once absent in thirty-six years. His learning is evident by his laborious works, some of which are deposited in Lincoln's-inn library. His justice and integrity could never be warped by private interest, nor attachments, which often prove too powerful for human nature to withstand. He lived in the time of the greatest civil commotion this country ever knew, when envy and inveteracy sullied the most respectable characters; yet he carried himself so uprightly as to be equally admired and esteemed by all ranks and conditions of men. If Gloucestershire hath not produced so many eminent persons as some other counties, yet this great man may well go for many, Quantum instar in ipso est!

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Milo Crispin held several estates in Gloucestershire at the time of the general survey, for in Domesday-book it is thus recorded:

'The same Milo [Crispin] holds Alrelic in Grimboldestou hundred. Wigot held it. There is one hide. In demean are two plow-tillages; and seven villeins, and five bordars, with seven plow-tillages. There are four servi and a mill of 10*s.* [value,] and twelve acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 100*s.*' Domesday-book, p. 78.

Leland speaking of this manor, says, 'the Chanseys were sumtyme lords of it, as in Edward the Third's days.' Itin. vol. 7. p. 90.

Robert Stanshaw, esq; was seized of the manor of Alderleigh 12 E. 4. Joan the widow of Robert Stanshaw being married to John Bodifaunt, they both joined in a fine of the manor and advowson of Alderleigh, to Richard Becket and others 14 H. 7.

John Poyntz, son of sir Robert Poyntz, and younger brother of sir Anthony Poyntz of Acton, became lord of the manor of Alderley. He married Catherine, daughter of sir Matthew Browne of Surrey, and dying 36 H. 8. was succeeded by his son Matthew Poyntz, who married Winnifred, one of the daughters and coheirs of Henry Wild, of Camberwell. Robert Poyntz, his younger brother, was a learned author, and a great zealot for the Roman catholic religion.

Nicholas Poyntz, son of Matthew, was lord of this manor in the year 1608. He married Anne, daughter of sir Maurice Berkeley, of Bruton in Somersetshire. From him it descended to his son Robert Poyntz, who sold it to one Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Barker, of Fairford, purchased this manor of Mr. Rogers, and conveyed it to sir Matthew Hale, in exchange for Meisey-Hampton.

Matthew Hale, esq; descended from sir Matthew Hale, lord chief justice of the king's bench, is the present proprietor of this manor, and hath a handsome seat near the church. His arms are, Argent, a fess sable, in chief three mullets of the second. This family is of antient standing in the county, and hath always been esteemed for their probity and charity.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth 70*l.* a year. Mr. Hale is patron, Mr. Draper the incumbent.

The church is small but neat, and hath a tower at the west end, with pinnacles, and an aile on the north side, and a small aile on the north side of the chancel, belonging to Mr. Hale.

On the left of a window, in the south wall of the church, is a small effigy, with a crown on its head; and the figure of a bishop, with his mitre, stands on the other side of the window, in the same wall. These are supposed to represent the antient founders of the church; but tradition doth not say who they were.

First fruits, l.	11	4	6	Synodals, l.	0	1	0
Tiths, —	1	2	5	Pentecostals,	0	0	10
Procurations,	0	6	8

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Lord chief justice Hale was buried in the church-yard, for whom there is a neat monument of black and white marble, with this memorial :

Hic inhumatur corpus Mathæi Hale, militis, (Roberti Hale, Joannæ uxoris ejus, filii unici) nati in hac parochia de Alderley 1^o Nov. 1609, denati vero ibidem 25 Dec. 1676, ætat. suæ 67.

There are also several other tombs and memorials for persons of this family.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	l.	65	0	0
		Poll-tax — — — 1694,	—	20	1	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694,	—	72	12	0
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770,	—	44	15	0

There are about 157 inhabitants in this parish.

ALDERTON and DIXTON.

ALDERTON is a parish in the upper part of the hundred of Tewkesbury, and Dixton is a hamlet within it. Alderton lies seven miles east of Tewkesbury, four miles north-west from Winchcombe, and about fifteen north-eastward from Gloucester. It seems to have been so called from the Saxon word Alðor, older, and the common termination ton, because, in respect to Dixton, it is the more antient place. It is a small village in the vale part of the county, consisting chiefly of rich tillage land, with some pasture, and affords nothing remarkable, except only, that on the top of Dixton hill, which stands singly in the vale, are intrenchments thrown up, not unlikely in the time of the Saxon wars.

It is mentioned by sir Robert Atkyns, that 'near the west end of a wood belonging to Mr. Higford, a great quantity of wood and trees, from the top of a hill, parted and slipt away out of this county into Worcestershire.' But upon inquiry, I find that sir Robert had been misinformed in respect of the trees resting in that county.

This parish is reputed to be within the jurisdiction of the honour of Gloucester. A brook runs through it into the Carant below Beckford, and the turnpike-road from Tewkesbury to London leads through the parish.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book, under the head Terra Regis, it is thus recorded :

' Dunning held six hides and a half in Aldritone, and four hides and a half in Drieddone, and a thane held one hide in Hundeuuic. Hundfridus held these lands of the king, and he had there four plow-tillages in demean; and five villeins and eight bordars with three plow-tillages, and one radchenister with one plow-tillage, and one burges in Wi'combe, and there were twelve acres of meadow. The whole was worth 11*l.* in the time of king Edward, and is now worth 6*l.* Domesday-book, p. 68.

Brietric the son of Algar was a great thane, and held the manor of Tedekesberie, in the reign of king Edward the confessor, and was the chief lord of this estate at Aldritone, and many others thereabout.

But the abbey of Winchcombe had an estate in this parish soon after the conquest, for among the possessions of that abbey in Gretestanes hundred, it is thus recorded :

' The

' The same church [St. Mary de Wincelcumbe] holds Aldritone, and a certain knight [holds it] of the abbat. There are two hides and a half, and two plow-tillages in demean; and one villen with one plow-tillage, and there may be three besides. There are four servi. It was worth and is worth 30s. Domesday-book, p. 71.

Thus the record shews that this place was then in so rude a state, that lands sufficient for three plow-tillages were uncultivated; and immediately after, under Niwetone in the parish of Ashchurch, it is said, that six other plow-tillages might be made there; so that the country must have been very thinly inhabited, to suffer so fine a part of it to remain neglected.

This manor antiently belonged to the Dicklestons, who took their name from Dickleston, or Dickleston, or Dixton, the place of their residence. William Dickleston held the manors of Dickleston and Aldrington in the reign of E. 3. John Dickleston held the same 12 H. 4. Margaret the widow of John Dickleston, and Thomas their son, were seized of the manor of Dickleston, and of the advowson of the church of Aldrington 6 H. 5. Sir John Dickleston, brother to Thomas, succeeded him, and died seized thereof 1 H. 6 leaving only female issue. John Hugford, esq; married Elizabeth one of his daughters, and had with her the manor of Dickleston.

The manor of Aldrington came afterwards into the family of the Tracies. Sir William Tracy, of Todington, was seized thereof in the reign of H. 7. William Tracy his son died seized of Aldrington 20 H. 8. But this estate did not remain long with the Tracies, for John Hugford had livery of the manors of Dickston and Alurinton 3 E. 6. and they have continued in the same name ever since, so that the reverend Mr. Henry Higford is the present lord thereof.

The Higfords are a very antient family in Shropshire, and were formerly called Hugford. Robert Hugford was controller to Thomas Beauchamp earl of Warwick, and much in his favour, which brought him out of Shropshire, to settle at Empscot in Warwickshire, which he purchased of Richard Revel 9 H. 4. John Hugford, son of Robert, married Elizabeth, daughter and coheirefs of sir John Dickleston, and was succeeded by his son John, who married the daughter of Norman Washborn. Thomas Hugford, son of the last John, married Isabel, daughter of sir Thomas Hungerford of Down-Ampney. William Hugford, son of Thomas, married Margaret, daughter of — Horgan of Selrin in Somersetshire, and dying 37 H. 8. was succeeded by John Hugford his son, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Fetiplace of Beshesley in Berkshire, and was succeeded by his son John, who married Dorothy, daughter of William Rogers of Dowdeswell, and was lord of this manor in the year 1608. William his son (who wrote his name Higford) married Mary, daughter of John Meulx of the isle of Wight, and had a son John, born in the year 1607. James Higford was lord of this manor in the year 1712, who was succeeded by his brother Henry, rector of this parish; to whom succeeded William, father of the late William Higford, M. D. who was succeeded by his brother the reverend Mr. Henry Higford, the present rector of this parish, and lord of the manors of Alderton and Dixton. His arms are, Vert, on a chevron between three bucks heads caboshed Or, as many mullets gules. By this account it appears, that the manor of Dixton has continued in the same family upwards of four hundred years, whereof it has been more than three hundred in the name of Hugford, or Higford.

William de Ditchford levied a fine of a moiety of lands in Aldrington, to Joan the widow of John Newington, and others, 5 E. 2.

Two messuages in Aldrington and Dixton, formerly belonging to the abbey of Tewkesbury, were granted to Richard Gunter 36 H. 8.

H A M L E T. Dickleston, or Dixton, is a hamlet in this parish, the same, I apprehend, which in Domesday-book is written Drieddone, as in the beginning of this account. It stands about a mile westward from the church, on the side of a hill, and was formerly called Castle-hill, from the intrenchments there.

Mr. Higford has a large, handsome house here, built of stone. In the hall windows are the following arms painted on the glafs, viz.

1. Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Hugford as before, 2d and 3d, Sable, a pile argent. These are impaled with, 1st and 4th, Argent, two chevrons gules, for Fetiplace. 2d and 3d quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent, three besants. 2d and 3d, Sable, a lion passant argent. And beneath is written HUGFORD AND FETIPLACE.

2. Argent, two bars gules; in chief three cinquefoils sable, in the fess point a mullet for difference for Denton;—impaled with, quarterly of six, 1st Argent, a chevron between three estoiles of eight point sable, for Mordaunt. 2d, Gules, a cross patons Or. 3d, Or, an eagle displayed argent. 4th, Argent, on a bend sable the bearing obliterated. 5th Quarterly per pale indented, Or and gules, in the first and fourth quarter a mullet of the second. 6th Mordaunt. Beneath the scutcheon, in antient letters, DENTON AND MORDAUNT.

3. Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Hugford. 2d and 3d, Sable, a pile argent;—impaling, quarterly 1st and 4th, Or, a greyhound courant sable, between three leopards heads caboshed azure, for Hennege 2d and 3d, Gules, three garbs Or.

There is a chapel near the house dedicated to All Saints, but now disused, and fallen to decay.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Campden, worth about 120*l.* a year. Th reverend reverend Mr. Henry Higford is patron and incumbent. The rectory pays 20s. yearly to the crown. In Willis's edition of Eaton's Thesaurus it is said, Abb. Tewksbury xxs. Patrono liiis. iv d. Abb. Winchcomb ivs. viii d.

The church is small, and hath an aisle on the south side, and a low tower, with battlements, at the west end, and six bells in it. It is dedicated to St. Margaret. The Higfords arms are painted in the chancel window.

William Higford, esq; a very ingenious poet, died 1657, and lies buried in the chancel. He had his education in the university of Oxford, and left behind him a large manuscript of Institutions to his grandson, which were epitomised and published by Clement Barkfdale.

The family of the Higfords are buried in the chancel, without any monuments or inscriptions.

In the year 1373, this parish had a licence granted to bury Villanos tantum apud Alerington, et quod rector habeat omnes oblationes funerales, pro quibus solvat 2s. sacristo de Winchcombe, in festo Sti. Kenelmi, salva sepultura mortuorum in villa Dixon abbat. Winchcombe.

First fruits, £.	22	2	9	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths,	—	2	4	2	Pentecostals,	0	0
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefactions.

William Higford, esq; in the reign of H. 8. gave 6l. 3s. 1d. yearly, charged on his estate, to repair the utensils and ornaments of the church. The church-wardens, in memory of this charity, are to pay annually at Michaelmas, a couple of capons to the heirs of Mr. Higford. — Henry Tovey gave by will 40s. to the poor for ever. — John Page, in the year 1610, gave 12l. to the use of the poor for ever.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	178	0	0
		Poll-tax — — — 1694, —	19	10	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694, —	95	4	0
		———— at 3s. — 1770, —	49	19	0
		———— for Dixon 1770, —	30	9	0

There are about 172 inhabitants in this parish.

A L D S W O R T H.

THIS parish lies in the Cotswold country, on the turnpike-road from Bath, through Cirencester, to Oxford, ten miles north-eastward from Cirencester, seven south-westward from Burford in Oxfordshire, about twenty-three east from Gloucester, through Northleach, from which it is distant four miles. The houses stand near together, on the north side of the turnpike-road, on a gentle rising ground.

In Domesday-book the name is written Aldeforde, and Aldeforde, and comes either from Alb, old, and porð, a village, street, croft, farm, court, or place; or else, the former part of the word is the name of some antient proprietor of the manor; and, in that sense, it is the same as Alde's court, or place: For, as villa among the Romans implied the house of a nobleman, within his own estate, so did gucopð, or worth, among the Saxons.

The lands are chiefly arable, with some pasture. This village affords nothing worthy the notice of the naturalist, or traveller; but the downs in the neighbourhood, part of which are in this parish, afford excellent sport to those that delight in hunting.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it thus expressed:

'Elward the son of Reinbald holds Aldefwrde in Becheberie hundred. Balchi held it. There are two hides taxed. In demean is one plow-tillage; and four villeins, and two bordars, with two plow-tillages, and one servus. It was worth 40s. now 30s.' Domesday-book, p. 71.

But the church of Gloucester held a larger estate in this parish, for in the same record, under the head Terra S. Petri de Glowec. in Begebriges hundred, it is said:

'The same church holds Aldeforde. There are eleven hides, and three plow-tillages in demean; and twenty-one villeins, and five bordars, and two francigeni, with fifteen plow-tillages. There are six servi. It was worth 100s. now 8l.' Domesday-book, p. 79.

This manor belonged to the abbey of Gloucester 17 E. 3. It was in the crown in the year 1608; but James Lenox Dutton, esq; who resides at Sherborne in this county, is the present lord thereof.

Divers lands in Aldsworth, with common for 300 sheep, and a portion of tithes lately belonging to the abbey of Cirencester, were granted to Richard Andrews, and Nicholas Temple, in trust for others, 34 H. 8.

William Coley died seized of a farm called Wall, in Aldsworth, with tithes of lamb and wool, 4 Mar. Escheator's inquisition.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the peculiar of Bibury. The rectory, and advowson of the vicarage, belonged to the monastery of Osney, and were granted to the chapter of Oxford, 34 H. 8. who are the impropiators. There are about 250 acres of glebe. Portions of the tithe of Aldsworth, formerly belonging to the abbey of Gloucester, were granted to the bishoprick of Gloucester 33 H. 8. and were confirmed by another grant 6 E. 6. The curacy is worth 20l. a year, besides the tithe of cows and calves, Easter-offerings, garden-pence, and the rent of two little houses. The impropiation pays 6s. 8d. a year to the crown.

The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and hath a handsome spire, which shews itself to advantage, standing standing upon high ground. There are three cottages given to repair the church.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	58	6	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	11	2	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	75	7	0
		The same at 3s. — 1770, —	56	7	3

About the year 1710, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 30 houses, and about 120 inhabitants in this parish; yearly births 4, burials 3. Upon examining the register, I find that in ten years, from 1701 to 1710, there were entered 53 baptisms, and 31 burials; and from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were 49 baptisms, and 34 burials, so that population continues in the same state nearly, as it was in the beginning of this century.

ALMONDSBURY.

THIS is a large parish, in the vale part of the county, consisting of four tithings, of which only the tithing of Almondsbury lies in the lower part of the hundred of Berkeley. The other three lie in other hundreds, as will be shewn hereafter. The church stands in the tithing of Almondsbury, eight miles north from Bristol, ten west from Chipping-Sodbury, and twenty-nine south-westward from Gloucester.

It is said to derive its name from Almond, a West-Saxon prince, father of Egbert, the first sole monarch of England, (who is supposed to be buried in the church;) and from a fortification of a rampire and double ditch, at Knole in this parish; for such our ancestors called Burghs, and we, by frequent use, have softened the word into borough and bury.

This camp is situated upon the brow of a hill, next the Severn, so as to command an extensive view of that river, and every thing passing upon it. 'Tis supposed to be Saxon, but no mention is made of it in the Chronicle, nor by any of the antient writers. Tradition will have it to be the work of Offa, king of the Mercians, whose coffin the common people think was dug out of a tumulus, at Over, in this parish, in the year 1650, but Florilegius affirms, that he was buried at Bedford, whose authority, in this matter, ought to be preferred to vulgar opinion. It is however related in Mr. Wantner's papers, that at the time and place above mentioned, there were found the intire bones of two men. One of the skeletons was of an uncommon size, inclosed in a vast stone coffin, so artificially cemented together, that the joint was not discernible. The stone that covered the coffin was very ponderous, of a greyish colour without, but reddish, and studded with a shining sparry substance within. Two coins were found in the coffin, one of which bore the impression of a falcon, as the writer expresseth himself; on the other was a head, which he supposes to be that of Claudius Cæsar, but makes no mention of any inscription. I have no doubt as to the facts, but cannot determine, from the circumstances related, to whom the remains belong. If to a Roman, why were the bones unburnt, and no inscription cut on the stone? If to a Saxon, how shall we account for the Roman coins found in the sepulchre itself? But this is certain, says the writer of those papers, the bones were those of a man, whose height exceeded the ordinary stature by more than three feet. The corps was buried sitting, which Drexelius saith was the customary manner of burying kings and princes, as an emblem of eternity.

Knole, the antient seat of the family of Chester, stands upon the brow of a hill, about two miles from the Severn, surrounded by the fortifications already mentioned, from whence there is a most extensive and agreeable prospect, over the Severn, into Monmouthshire.

In so large a parish the soils must be various; There is more pasture than arable land, and a great deal of marshy ground towards the river Severn. The proprietors have given an account to the commissioners of sewers, that 1342 acres are more particularly liable to be overflowed by that river. See p. 26.

Tockington marsh-lands lie in this tithing.

It is observable, that neither Camden, nor his learned editor, hath taken any notice of this place.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is said, that two hides in Almodesbury (as it is there written) did then belong to the manor of Berchelai. Dom. B. p. 68.

This estate continued the property of the lords of Berkeley, 'till Robert Fitz-Harding, in the year 1148, founded the abbey of St. Augustin in Bristol, and endowed it, among other very considerable estates, with the manor of Almondsbury. The same abbey held Almondsbury, with court leet, 13 and 15 E. 1. and had a charter for fairs and markets, and free-warren within it. The fair to be on Whit-monday, and to continue for six days; the weekly market on wednesday. Many of the charters of markets and fairs, in this and some of the subsequent reigns, were granted only with a view of aggrandising the seignorie of those manors which belonged to very eminent proprietors, and this passage, Quantum in nobis est, was always inserted in the original grant. So that when it came to be discussed afterwards, before the judges itinerant, at the general assizes, Quo warranto they were held, that is to say, what authority there was to support them, if they were found convenient and necessary, they were ratified and continued; but on the contrary, if they were deemed unnecessary and superfluous, they were, by the power of the law then vested in the judges, vacated and taken away.

This manor continued in the abbey of St. Augustin till that house was dissolved. It was afterwards granted, with a reservation of 8*l.* 10*s.* rent, to Miles Partrige, 36 H. 8. who conveyed it to Arthur Darcy 7 E. 6. Henry Darcy had livery of it 1 Eliz. and afterwards sold it to Thomas Chester.

William Chester, father of Thomas, was a younger branch of the Chesters of Huntingdonshire, and gentleman of the horse to the duke of Buckingham, who was beheaded in the year 1522. He married Jane, the daughter of John Wear, and was mayor of Bristol 1539.

Thomas Chester, who purchased this manor, was also mayor of Bristol 1569, and was succeeded in this estate by his son William Chester, who married Catherine, the daughter of Richard Dennis, of Dyrham.

Thomas Chester was son and heir of William. He married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of John Backhouse, of Swallow-field in Berkshire; secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of sir George Speke, of Somersetshire, and was seized of this manor in the year 1608. By his second wife he had Thomas Chester, his son and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of sir John Howe, of Compton, and died 1686.

Thomas Chester, son of the last Thomas, married Anne, daughter of sir Samuel Astry, of Henbury, and was succeeded in this estate by his son

Thomas Chester, born in the year 1696, who having represented this county in five successive parliaments, died at Knole, Oct. 1, 1763, without issue, bequeathing his estate to the daughter and only child of his brother Richard Howe Chester; who marrying William Bromley, of ——— in the county of Warwick, esq; he, by virtue of the king's mandate to the earl marshal of England, assumes the name and arms of Chester. Other particulars of the last mentioned Thomas Chester, esq; are largely expressed in the well written memorial for him, printed in the course of this account. It remains only to be observed, that his relict is the present possessor of Almondsbury and Knole.

William de Gale held the manor of Knowl, of Brimpsfield castle, 7 E. 3. John St. Loe, esq; was seized of it, and of Barton hundred, of the forest of Kingswood, and of the fishing in Stapleton, 5 H. 6.

Thomas Hill died seized of lands in Almondsbury 6 Car. and left Edward his son fourteen years old.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

The other tithings are 1. Over. 2. Hempton and Patchway. 3. Gaunt's Urcot. of which in their order.

1. Over lies in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, about a mile and a half westward from the church, and has a distinct peace officer.

What sir Robert Atkyns says of Ethelric granting thirty messuages in Overe to St. Peter of Gloucester, should be understood of Over near that city, and not of this place.

This tithing is not expressly named in Domesday-book, but it is probable that the following particulars relate to the tithings in this large parish.

' Roger the son of Ralph holds a manor in ' Sineshoved hundred, which Seuvin the mayor ' of Bristou held of king Edward, and he could ' go with his land wherever he pleased, and he ' gave no farm [rent] for it. There are three ' hides, and six plow-tillages in demean; and ' six villeins, and six bordars, with two plow- ' tillages. There are three servi, and eight acres ' of meadow. It was worth 100*s.* and is now ' [worth] 60*s.*

' Roger hath a manor of one hide of land in ' Sineshovedes hundred, and he hath there two ' servi. There was no person who could answer ' concerning this land.

' Walter hath one manor of one yard-land. ' It was worth 20*den.* and is now worth 2*s.*' Domesday-book, p. 79.

Maurice de Gaunt died seized of Oure 14 H. 3. which afterwards came to Robert de Gourney, his sister's son, who died seized of it in the fifty-third year of that reign. Anselm de Gourney held Over 14 E. 1. and John de Gourney died seized thereof 19 E. 1. From him it went to John ap Adam, who had married Elizabeth, the daughter and heir of John de Gourney. Thomas ap Adam, his son, sold it to Thomas lord Berkeley, and Margaret his wife, 4 E. 3.

Catherine, the widow of Thomas de Berkeley, of Beverstone, was seized of the manor of Overe, and of the advowson of the chantry 9 R. 2. in which family it continued to sir William Berkeley, who was attainted of treason, and the manor of Over was granted to Thomas Brian, and his heirs male, 2 R. 3.

From Brian the manor was conveyed to John Poyntz, whose grand-daughter Alice married sir Edward Berkeley, and brought this manor again into that family. John Berkeley, grandson of sir Edward, was seized of Over 1 H. 8. From him it passed in a lineal descent to John Berkeley, who had livery thereof 20 Eliz. and sold the manor to John Dowel, who was the son of James Dowel, a wealthy merchant of Bristol. From him it passed in a lineal descent to John Bridges Baker Dowel, esq; who died unmarried in the year 1743, and was buried in Almondsbury church, where there is a very handsome monument, and a memorial for him, and for several of his family, which is inserted at the end of this account.

Mr. Dowel bequeathed his whole estate to the reverend Mr. Degge, who had travelled with him as a tutor; and Mr. Degge dying in the year 1766, this manor, with several other large estates in the county, devolved to his sister Mrs. Wilmott, the present proprietor. The manor-house is large and and handsome, with a park adjoining, in which are the traces of a large round camp, still visible.

Easter Compton is a small hamlet in this tithing.

2. Hempton and Patchway lies in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, about a mile and a half distant southward from the church. This tithing is not mentioned by name in Domesday-book; but it is likely that the two small estates described in that record, and placed at the head of this account, belonged to this tithing. However that may be, it appears by the records, that Margaret, the widow of Nicholas Stanshaw, was seized of the manor of Hempton 14 H. 6. but Alice, the widow of William Chedder, held it in the 34th year of that reign. John Baker was seized of Hempton and Patchway 1608. Mrs. Wilmott has a good estate at Hempton; but Mr. Chester has the chief estate at Patchway.

Woodland is a hamlet in this tithing, where Mrs. Tace has a good house.

3. Gaunt's Urcot, so called from the family of Gaunt, lies in the hundred of Thornbury, near three measured miles eastward from the church. This is said to be within the jurisdiction of the court of the honour of Gloucester. In Domesday-book it is thus expressed:

'The same bishop [of St. Laud in Constance] holds Herdicote, in Langelie hundred, and Robert holds it of him. Cuulf held it in the time of king Edward. There are two hides taxed, and two plow-tillages in demean, and two bordars, and four servi, and four villeins, and ten acres of meadow, and a wood. It is worth and was worth 40s.' Domesday-book, p. 71.

This manor antiently belonged to Gilbert de Gaunt, whose sister's son and heir, Richard de Gourney, founded an hospital in his manor-house called Bilswick, and gave this manor to it; which hospital being dissolved, the manor of Gaunt's Urcot was granted to the city of Bristol, for public uses, 33 H. 8. and the mayor and commonalty of that city are the present lords of this manor. The Gaunt's hospital was originally founded for a hundred poor people. It stands within the liberties of the city of Bristol, was refounded in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and now entertains the blue-coat-boys.

Within this manor is a farm called St. Swithin's chapel, surrounded with a moat. The body of the chapel and the chancel were lately standing, but the cross building which was at the west end, supposed to have been the priest's lodging, hath been long since taken down, and the foundation new built upon. The inhabitants hereabout talk of an abbey dedicated to St. Swithin, that stood not far from it, but there are no traces of it to be found. Mr. Edgar is the present proprietor of the farm.

Brokenborow is a place within this tithing, where a chantry was erected in the same year as the abbey of St. Augustin was founded, and the patronage of it given to that abbey. John Harold was the last incumbent, and had a pension of 4*l.* according to Mr. Willis. Lands lying in Almondsbury, formerly belonging to this chantry, were granted to Richard Moor, and Thomas Monford, 6 Jac. Brokenborow was a reputed manor, for William Turner, and Alice his wife, and her ancestors, were found by an inquisition, 9 H. 6. to have been seized, time out of mind, of the manor of Brokenborow, with the alternate presentation to the chantry, which they settled on Thomas his younger son. This manor passed to Thomas Ivy, who was seized of it 4 H. 8. Thomas lord Berkeley had livery of it 24 H. 8. and Henry lord Berkeley sold the fourth part of it to John Hollister, and others, 6 Eliz.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Bristol, worth about 70*l.* a year. It is one of the discharged livings, valued in the king's book 40*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* The bishop of Bristol is patron Mr. Taswell incumbent. The rectory, and advowson of the vicarage of Almondsbury, belonged to the abbey of St. Augustin, in Bristol, and the house being dissolved, were granted to Paul, bishop of Bristol, and his successors, 34 H. 8. In a survey about that time, they were valued at 18*l.* 15*s.* Willis. This was the mother-church to Filton and Elberton.

The church is large, and handsome, with an aisle on each side, of the same height and length with the body. It hath a spire in the middle with cross ailes on each side, and is dedicated to the virgin Mary. The church and spire are covered with lead. The chancel is handsomely wainscotted six feet high, with an altar-piece of Dutch oak, ornamented with fluted pillars and capital of the Corinthian order, and enriched with carvings and inlaid work, by a good hand. The communion-table is of grey marble, about six feet long. In the steeple are eight bells, and a clock.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the north cross aisle, upon a raised tomb, is the effigy, as it is supposed, of one of the abbots of St. Augustin, without any inscription.

In the same aisle, which belongs to the Chester family, against the wall, is a very elegant pyramidal monument of Egyptian marble. In front stands a beautiful female figure, in a loose robe leaning her arm on a vase, in whose countenance the passion of grief is excellently expressed. Above, a drawn curtain discovers the arms of the deceased, Gules, a lion passant ermine, between three lures argent. In the fess point a scutcheon of pretence, Gules, on a fess argent, a lion passant azure, between three boars heads coupé Or. Motte POST FUNERA VIRTUS. And below, upon a large table, is the following inscription:

To the Memory of Thomas Chester Esq; and in Record of his Ancestry.

- Arthur Chester, Gent. was buried June 17, 1603.
- William Chester, Esq; - - - - Oct. 13, 1607.
- William Chester, Gent. - - - - Oct. 18, 1638.
- Thomas Chester, Esq; - - - - Nov. 24, 1653.
- Dominick Chester, Gent. - - - - Mar. 19, 1669.
- William Chester, Gent. - - - - Oct. 6, 1675.
- George Chester, Gent. - - - - Sept. 22, 1685.
- Thomas Chester, Esq; - - - - Feb. 26, 1686.
- Thomas Chester, Esq; - - - - Feb. 26, 1703.

The Succession of this Lineage was closed in the Death of THOMAS CHESTER, Esq; late of Knole, Son of the last recorded of this Name. He was by unanimous Suffrage of his County called up to be KNIGHT of the SHIRE in five successive Parliaments; and on his own Part did the Honour that became him to their Choice, by the most inflexible Attachment to what he thought the true Interests of his Country. From these he could never be prevailed on to swerve, nor during so long a Service by one Vote, or conniving Absence, to desert, or disappoint the Expectations of his Constituents.

His Country must long ago lament in Him the Loss of a most upright and useful Magistrate. Justice was his constant Object, temper'd only with Compassion, as Occasion called it forth; which his benevolent Heart would never suffer Him to estrange himself from; but never was he to be biased by any sinister View, or private Interest, from the Execution of his proper Duty.

Nor was He less amiable in his private Character, than respectable in his public; Under every Connection in which He stood, answering with his best Powers to its respective Duties, and sustaining in Character, as in the different Scenes of Life they arose upon Him, the Neighbour, the Friend, the Brother, the Husband, with no less Esteem, Honour and Virtue — than the MAGISTRATE and SENATOR: a Truth, which cannot better be evinced, than by the great and heart-impress'd Grief that not only attended his Loss, but has faithfully adhered to his Memory; and which, as long as any Traces of it shall remain with Those who had the Happiness to know Him, will more than answer This, or any Other Record that can be given of Him.

His first Wife was the Right Honourable SARAH HENRIETTA, the only Daughter of HENRY Earl of SUFFOLK and BINDON, by PENELOPE, Daughter of the Earl of THOMOND, who was buried April 6, 1722. In 1735 He married MARY, the Widow of GEORGE GUINNET, Esq; of Shurdington in this County, and Daughter and Heiress of JEREMY — Esq; of London.

He died on the 1st of October, 1763, and having no Issue, left his Estate to his Niece ELIZABETH LUCY CHESTER, Wife of WILLIAM BROMLEY CHESTER, Esq; and only Child of his Brother RICHARD CHESTER, Esq; who died on the 15th of July, 1760, and lies also near Him.

MARY CHESTER, his surviving Widow, deeply afflicted for his Loss, and venerating his Memory and Virtues, took upon herself the Care and Direction of this Monument.

In the same aisle are inscriptions for others of this family, but nothing very observable in them.

In the south cross aisle, upon a large raised tomb, lie the effigies, in full proportion, of a man in armour, with spurs on, and of a woman, in the dress of the age in which they lived. There is a canopy of stone-work over them, supported by six fluted pillars and two pilasters, about five feet high; and against the wall, on a table, it is thus written, in capital letters:

HERE LYETH THE BODIES OF EDWARD VEELE ESQUIER WHO WAS BVRIED THE 9 OF SEP. 1577. AND OF KATHERINE HYS WYFE WHO DEPARTED THYS LYFE THE 7 OF NOVEM: 1575:

MAKAPIOI OI NEKPOI.

QUIS VIR ITA VIVAT VT NON VIDEAT MORTEM.

ALL FLESH YS GRASS.

Over all, on a scutcheon, Argent, on a bend table, three calves Or, for Veel, quartered with a great many other arms of families who have married with the Veels. This Edward was of the family of the Veels of Tortworth, who were sometime lords of the manor of Over, in this parish.

In the same aisle stands a very large pyramidal marble monument, with this inscription:

To the Memory of JOHN BAKER DOWELL, Esq; and ELIZABETH his Wife, whose Bodys are deposited in a new Vault made for them under the middle Isle of this Church; together with three of their Children that dyed Infants. The said JOHN BAKER DOWELL, Esq; was the Son of JOHN DOWELL, Esq; Lord of the Mannour of Over in this Parish, by MARY his Wife, one of the four Daughters and Coheiresses of Sir JOHN BAKER, Baronet, the last of his Family, Lord of the Mannours of Siffingherste, Compton, Comden, Stone, Stapleberste, and Blythcourt, all in the County of Kent, and departed this Life the twentieth Day of October MDCCXXXVIII. The said ELIZABETH DOWELL was the Daughter and sole Heiress of JOHN BROWNING of Coley, Esq; by ELIZABETH his Wife, Sister and Coheiress of ROBERT BRIDGES of Woodchester, Esq; both in the County of Gloucester; and departed this Life the thirty-first Day of December MDCCXXXV.

To his well-deserving Parents, JOHN BRIDGES BAKER DOWELL, Esq; caused this Monument to be erected.

The Family of the DOWELLS, Aunceltors by the Father's Side of the said JOHN BAKER DOWELL, Esq; are deposited in their Vault underneath this Monument. The Body of JOHN BRIDGES BAKER DOWELL, Esq; who erected this Monument, and departed this Life March the XXXI. MDCCXXXIII, is also deposited in the same Vault with his Parents.

Upon the Monument are the following arms: Argent, within a bordure, a lion rampant, sable; for Dowell. — Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Dowell, as before; 2d and 3d, On a fess ingrailed, three roses, between as many lures, (the colours not distinguishable) for Baker. Over all, on a scutcheon of pretence, Argent, three bars wavy, azure, for Browning. — On a separate scutcheon, the arms of Baker, as before.

On a stone in the church-yard is this inscription:

Here lies alas! long to be lamented, BENJAMIN DOBINS, Gent. who left his Friends sorrowing, Feb: 2, 1760. Aged 42.

The costly Marble may, perhaps, express,
In lying Lines, th' Unworthy's Worthiness:
Thy humble Stone shall this sad Truth convey,
The best belov'd is soonest call'd away.
Full short, but full of Honour, was thy Span,
Thou tender Husband, and thou honest Man.

First fruits, £	20	0	0	Synodals, £.	0	1	0
Tenths, —	2	0	0	Pentecostals, 0	1	6
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Lands of the yearly Value of 60*l.* are given to the church, and about 6*l.* yearly are given to the poor.

Almondsbury.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	129	18	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	25	8	0
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	103	8	0
	The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	77	11	0

Over.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	70	14	8
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	13	7	0
	Land-tax — - 1694, —	62	12	0
	The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	52	3	0

Hempton and Patchway.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	122	16	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	16	13	8
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	152	4	0
	The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	114	3	0

M m m

Gaunt's

Gaunt's Urcot.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid, in 1692, £.	45	12	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	9	1	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	53	1	0
		The same, at 3s. - 1770, —	40	1	9

According to sir Robert Atkyns, when he published his account of this parish, there were 132 houses, and about 530 inhabitants. The present state of population was not received when this account went to the press, wherefore it must be given in the Addenda.

ALVESTON, vulgarly ALLISTON.

THIS parish lies in the vale, in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, eight miles and a half north-east from Bristol, two miles and a half south-west from Thornbury, and about twenty-eight southward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the west by Almondsbury.

There is a steep descent, as from a hill, on the side next the Severn. On the top is a large, round camp, called the Old Abbey, over-looking that river, but how it obtained the name is uncertain. There are many camps in this neighbourhood, and many engagements must have happened hereabout, in early times, betwixt our ancestors and their enemies; for the effects of them are still visible in the barrows thrown up in different places. About a hundred years ago, several stone coffins were dug out of one of those barrows, near the above fortifications, in which were the bones of the chief persons, perhaps, who fell in some battle. There is an account, in the preceding parish, of stone coffins, with bones, having been taken out of a tumulus at Over. In short, there are few parishes in this county that do not exhibit some vestiges of camps and barrows, but history is silent concerning most of them.

The houses in this village stand a mile distant from the church. A turnpike-road from Gloucester to Bristol, leads thro' the parish.

In Domesday-book the name is written Alwestan, and Alvestone. It is now generally pronounced Alliston. The etymology is difficult, and uncertain. If Alji's town, or Alve's town, (as being the property of some person of that name) be not the true explanation, I cannot give a better.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

When William the First caused a general inquisition to be made concerning landed property, this place was shared between two proprietors, of which the record gives the following account:

'Earl Herald held Alwestan, in Langelei hundred. There were ten hides. In demean is one plow-tillage; and twenty-three villeins, and five bordars, with twenty-two plow-tillages, and

'two servi. The steward [prepositus] added two plow-tillages, and five servi there. It paid 12*l.* by weight.' Domesday-book. p. 67.

All the lands which were king Harold's, at the time of the conquest, William seized for his own, and accordingly we find the above in the list of the king's lands. The abbey of Bath was the other proprietor.

'Saint Peter of Bath held Alvestone, in Langelei hundred. There are five hides. Three pay taxes, [but] two of them are exempt from tax, by the grant of king Edward and king William. In demean are two plow-tillages, and nine villeins, and six bordars, and a priest, and one radchenister, with ten plow-tillages. There are seven servi, and meadow and wood for the support of the manor. It was worth 100*s.* now 4*l.* The same church holds it now.' Domesday-book, p. 71.

It doth not appear when this manor was alienated from the abbey of Bath, but it was in the crown in the reign of king H. 3. who reserved his park in Alveston when the forest of Kingiwood was disafforested.

It soon after passed from the crown to the family of the Fitz-Warrens; for Fulk Fitz-Warren died seized thereof, and left it in dower to Constantia de Todei, his widow, who was also seized of it, with court-leet, view of frankpledge, and waifs, and also of the hundred of Langley, 15 E. 1. Fulk Fitz-Warren, son of Fulk, died seized of Alveston 16 E. 2. having given it to Walter of Gloucester, one of his sons. This Walter was succeeded by his son Walter of Gloucester, in Alveston and Urcot, 14 E. 3. who settled them in remainder, after the death of Peter his son, on Peter Corbet, of Sifton, who had married his daughter. By virtue of which settlement, they came to Margaret, daughter and coheirefs of Peter Corbet, who was married to sir Gilbert Dennis, and settled these manors on her husband and his heirs, whereby they came into the family of Dennis.

Sir Gilbert Dennis died seized of the manors of Alveston and Urcot, and of Langley hundred, 10 H. 5. from whom they passed, in a lineal descent, to Richard Dennis, who sold them to Maurice Shepard 19 Eliz.

Richard Haughton married the daughter and heir of Maurice Shepard, and joined with his wife in the sale of Alveston, to Robert Webb, 22 Eliz.

Webb sold it to Nicholas Veel, from whose grandson, Nicholas, it passed by purchase to Edward Hill, esq; who was lord of the manor in the year 1712. But Miss Jefferis, sister of the late Mr. Cann Jefferis, is the present proprietor thereof.

Walter the sheriff gave one yard-land in Alveston to the abbey of Gloucester 7 H. 1.

William Wiryot, and Margaret his wife, held lands within the manor of Alveston and Urcot, 2 R. 2.

HAMLETS. 1. Row Urcot, which hath been often mentioned in the account of the descent of the manor of Alveston, is a hamlet containing fourteen houses.

2. Grovesend, or Grovening, lies about three miles north-east from the church, and consists of about seven families.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Bristol, and is annexed to Olveston, from whence it is distant about three miles. The building is small, dedicated to St. Helen, and hath a low tower at the west end.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There are no monuments or inscriptions worthy particular notice. Colonel Thomas Veel, who died 1663, and Nicholas Veele, esq; who died 1703, lie buried in the chancel. And some of doctor Clayton's descendants are also buried there.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	135	3	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	34	7	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	214	16	0
		The same at 3s - 1770, —	162	3	0

About the year 1712, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 42 houses in this parish, and about 240 inhabitants, whereof 8 were freeholders. The yearly baptisms were 6, and burials 6. Having examined the parish register, I find that in a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were enter'd 63 baptisms, and 44 burials; and the number of inhabitants are at this time about 198.

ALVINGTON,

IS a small parish, in the hundred of Blidesloe, in the forest-division of the county; nine miles south-east from Monmouth, six north-east from Chepstow, and twenty-two south-west from Gloucester. It is bounded on the north-eastward by Lidney, from which it is separated by the brook Coln; on the south-westward by Woolaston, and has the river Severn on the south-east of it.

Mr. Camden calls it Aventone; and since Avon, or Afon, in the British language signifies a river, thinks it not improbable that it took its name from thence, because it is stretched along the banks of the Severn. He was also of opinion that this place was the Abone of Antoninus, as well on account of the resemblance of the names, as because it lies exactly nine miles distant from Caer Went, or the Venta Silurum of the Romans; which is the distance Abone is said to be from the last mentioned place, in the fourteenth Iter.

But I see no great resemblance between the names Abo, or, as some will have it, Abone, and Alvington, as the latter ought to be, or at least has been written, for the last five hundred years; and unless the learned historian had a precedent in higher antiquity, I think he hath taken an unwarrantable liberty in deviating so widely from that manner of writing it. As to the distance from Caer Went, it may answer well enough; but that from Abo to the Trajectus, being nine miles according to the Itinerary, is very different from the true distance between this place and Oldbury, the supposed Trajectus, which is not more than four miles at farthest. Indeed there is a manifest mistake in the Iter, as to the distances, for at the beginning it is said, Ab Ifca Callevam m. p. ciii, sic; from Caerleion to Calleva, one hundred and three miles, thus: and then the intermediate distances between the various places are set down, which make together only ninety-eight miles, i. e. five miles short of the gross account.

But the greatest objection seems to be, that, supposing the Abo to have been situated in the country of the Silures, (a people that gave the Romans more trouble than any of our countrymen) it must have been well fortified, garrisoned, and secured against the attacks of so hardy and active a people; and being in so important a situation, one might expect to find ruins of antient buildings, chequer'd pavements, hypocausts, and such other works as have been discovered in those places where the Romans had stations; but none of all these have been found at Alvington; for which reason, among others, I am of opinion that this was not the Abo of Antoninus; and that, if Mr. Camden had seen the ruins in Lidney park, two or three miles higher up the river, he would rather have fixed on that place for the Roman station in question. See Lidney.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book are many particulars of villages and lands on the forest side of the Severn, and in Wales, as it was then reputed to be, agreeable to the division of the two countries at that time; for antiently all on the north-west of that river was called Wales; but afterwards the Wye became the boundary between them, according to Alexander Neckham:

Inde vagos Vaga Cambrenses, hinc respicit Anglos.

On this side, Wye the English views,
On that, the wandering Welch pursues.

Those villages and estates are not described by their respective names, nor is this place any where mentioned therein; so that it is impossible to shew whose property it was at the time of the antient survey. But the priory of Lanthony held the manor of Alvington, with markets and fairs, 49 H. 3. and had court-leet and waifs therein, 15 E. 1. which they proved in their answer to a writ of Quo warranto brought against them that year; and the church of Lanthony were proprietors of of it, 'till that house was dissolved; for tho' it appears by the records, that Edward Blount, and Margaret his wife, were seized of it, 4 R. 2. it was probably either in trust, or by usurpation; for the priory was seized of it again in the 18th and 19th years of the same reign.

At the dissolution of monasteries, this manor was vested in the crown, and the site of it, with divers lands, was granted, 32 H. 8. to Arthur Porter, who was a considerable purchaser of abbey-lands at that time.

But sir William Herbert had a grant of the manor 4 E. 6. and certain tithes in Alvington were also granted to him in the first year of the same reign.

From him it passed thro' various hands, 'till it came to William Compton, esq; who was lord of this manor in the year 1608.

It came afterwards into the name of Higford, for William Higford, of Dixton, esq; was lord of the manor in the year 1712, and from him it hath passed, in regular descent, to the reverend Mr. Henry Higford, of the same place, who is the present proprietor, and hath a good estate here. See Alderton and Dixton.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is called the chapel of Alvington. It is in the deanery of the forest, and annexed to Woollaston.

The church is small, with a tower at the west end, and an aisle on the south side, belonging to the lord of the manor. John Higford, esq; died in the year 1706, and was buried in this church.

Proc. and Syn. £. 0 1 6 Pentecost. £. 0 1 4

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 89 4 0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, — 17 18 0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, — 83 8 0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 61 13 0

The state of population must be given in the Addenda, as it was not received early enough to be printed with the above.

A M N E Y C R U C I S.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Crowthorn and Minety, two miles distant east from Cirencester, six north from Cricklade in Wiltshire, and nineteen south-east from Gloucester.

The name was antiently written Omenie, and Omenel, and afterwards Amney, which sir Robert Atkyns derives from annis, the Latin word for a river; but this etymology seems to be suggested by the modern, rather than by the antient manner of writing the name; however, as I have no better to offer, I shall govern myself by Horace's rule. The cognomen was given it on account of a large cross erected in this parish, which served to distinguish it from two other adjoining parishes of the same name. And because our Saxon ancestors called the cross the halig rode, this parish hath sometimes also been called Holy Rood Amney.

The turnpike-road from Cirencester to London, and another turnpike-road from Bath to Oxford, lead through this parish, which hath lately been inclosed, by act of parliament.

As the workmen were digging stone on the side of the last mentioned road, about two years ago they found an earthen urn, containing burnt bones and ashes, and some Roman coins of the latter empire. There was a small silver coin of Honorius, with this inscription round the head D N HONORIVS P F AVG. On the reverse: a Roman soldier holding a spear in one hand, and victory in the other; and round the figures VIRTUS ROMANORVM. This Honorius was son of Theodosius, whom he succeeded in the government of the western part of the empire, when he was a boy of ten years old. When he grew up, he was active and diligent, and secured Britain against the ravages of Picts, Scots, and Saxons, but at last fell a victim to his ambitious views, and made a miserable end, about the time of the expiration of the Roman empire in Britain.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

As the parishes of Amney Crucis, Amney St Mary, and Down Amney were not distinguished by different names in the antient survey, it is impossible, with any certainty, to select the particulars from Domesday-book, proper to each place; therefore, respecting this parish, I have implicitly followed sir Robert Atkyns.

' Turstin the son of Rolf holds Omenie of the king. There are seven hides. Tovi held it of king Edward. In demcan are three plow-tillages, and eight villeins, and a priest, with eight plow-tillages. There are eight servi. Of this estate Tovi held the land of two villeins, and a certain knight held the land of four villeins. Half a hide and four acres of meadow belonged to the church. It was worth 8l. now 6l. This Turstin holds one hide there which Ului held for a manor, and could go where he would. In demcan are two plow-tillages, with one bordar. It was worth 40s.' Domesday-book, p. 78.

Under Terra Hunfridi Camerarii, it is thus expressed:

' The same Hunfridus holds one hide in Omenie. Æluui held it for a manor of king Edward. In demcan are two plow-tillages, and four servi, and one bordar, and a mill of 5s. rent. It is worth and was worth 25s.' Domesday-book, p. 79.

' Baldwin holds of the king three yard-lands in Omenie, in Gersdones hundred. Aluwin held it in the time of king Edward. There is one plow-tillage, with two bordars. It is worth and was worth 10s.' Domesday-book, p. 79.

The abbey of Tewkesbury held one hide at Amney, which king H. 1. confirmed to it, reciting that it did belong to Humphry the cook, which, I apprehend, should have been Humphry the chamberlain. He also confirmed to it the church of Amney, which belonged to Robert the chamberlain. And it was seized of court-leet, waifs, and felons goods in Amney Holy-rood, by the grant of W. 2. which privileges were allowed in a writ of Quo warranto, 15 E. 1.

From this time the monks of Tewkesbury gradually improved their estate here, for Isabel, daughter of Gilbert de Clare, granted to them one messuage and one plow-tillage in Holy Rood Amney, 1 E. 2. And the abbat purchased seven other messuages, four cottages, two hundred twenty-six acres of arable, five acres of meadow, and a rent of ten pence half-penny in Amney, of John de Boteler, 20 E. 2.

The abbey of Tewkesbury continued seized of the manor and rectory of Amney Holy Rood, till by the dissolution of that house they were vested in the crown, by which they were granted to John Playdell, or Pleydell, of Westcot in Berkshire, in the fourth year of the reign of queen Elizabeth. He was descended from the Playdells, antiently of Colehill, in Berkshire.

Robert Playdell, fourth son of John, and heir to him by the death of his elder brothers without issue, removed from Westcot to Holy Rood Amney, and was lord of the manor in 1608. He married Susanna, daughter of Edward Saunders, of Brixworth, in Northamptonshire, esq; and dying in 1642, was succeeded by his son and heir John Playdell, who dying without issue, was succeeded by his brother

Robert Playdell, or Pleydell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Saunders, M. D. and dying in 1673, was also succeeded in this estate by his son and heir

Robert Pleydell, who married Sarah, daughter of Philip Sheppard, of Minchin-hampton, esq; by whom he had a son and two daughters. The son and one of the daughters dying without issue, the manor of Amney Crucis, and several large estates in other places, as well as in this parish and neighbourhood, descended to his youngest daughter Charlotte-Louisa; with whom they went, by marriage, in 1724, to the honourable John Dawnay, eldest son of Henry lord viscount Downe. In this name and family they continued, till about the year 1765, when John lord viscount Downe sold the manor and estate of Amney Crucis, amongst other particulars, to Samuel Blackwell, esq; who is the present proprietor, and has a large estate in this parish, and several other parts of the county. He married Anne, eldest daughter of James Lenox Dutton, of Sherborne, esq; by whom he has issue several children. His arms are, Argent, a greyhound rampant sable, collared, compony, Or and gules; on chief inucated of the second, three besants.

Hugh le Despencer had an estate in this parish, for Eubulo l'Estrange, and Aleria his wife, levied a fine thereof to him 18 E. 2. And divers messuages in Holy Rood Amney, in the tenure of Richard Bye, belonged to the priory of Bradenstoke, in Wiltshire, which was founded by Walter earl of Salisbury, for black canons, in the reign of king Stephen. It was dedicated to the blessed Virgin, and valued, at the dissolution, at 270*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* yearly. These messuages were granted to James Gunter, and William Lewis, 37 H. 8.

An estate called the Sheep-House, &c. in Amney, which belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, was granted to James Woodford, and Thomas Ludwell, 2 Eliz.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Cirencester. It is a vicarage, improved since the inclosing of the common fields in the year 1769, to about 70*l.* a year. The advowson of the vicarage formerly belonged to the nunnery of Clerkenwell, in Middlesex, and was granted to sir William Herbert, 4 E. 6. The lord chancellor has the presentation. William Sandeford, D. D. is the present incumbent.

I have shewn that the patronage of the church, and the impropriation, formerly belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, and were confirmed to that church by king H. 2. But part of the tithes and glebe belonged to the abbey of Gloucester, and, after the dissolution, were granted to the bishoprick, 33 H. 8. and confirmed 6 E. 6. Other tithes of corn and hay belonged to the abbey of Cirencester, and were granted to Peter Osborn, and others, 3 Eliz. The impropriation of the corn tithes was vested in the lord of the manor; but by the bill for inclosing the common fields in this parish, all the lands are exonerated from tithe, and the bishop, impropriator, and vicar had lands allotted to them in lieu thereof.

The bishop's allotment lies on beggar-hill.

The vicar's portion is 110 acres in the upper-field. He hath Easter-offerings, and surplus fees, as before.

The church is built in the form of a cross, with a tower at the west end. In the window at the east end, are the arms of the Clares, originally placed there by the abbey of Tewkesbury, in grateful remembrance of Isabel Clare, their benefactress.

Benefactions.

Robert Pleydell, esq; hath endowed a free-school for the educating, cloathing, and apprenticing of poor children in this parish, with 80*l.* a year, charged on Ranbury-farm. See his epitaph.

There are cottages of 50*s.* a year given to the use of the church. And four acres of arable land, newly inclosed, near Meurstals, to other charitable uses.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a free-stone monument in the north aisle, upon which are the figures of a man and woman, and twelve children, without any inscription; but by the coat of arms upon it, 'tis supposed to have been erected for one of the Lloyds, formerly owner of this manor, and ancestor of the Lloyds, late lords of the manor of Wheatenhurst, in this county.

In the chancel is a white marble monument, with this inscription:

ROBERTUS PLEYDELL, ROBERTI juxta siti Filius Unicus, natus 23 Julij 1687. Mortuus est Mar. 22, 1719. En! Virum Serenissimæ Frontis, Mitissimi Ingenij, Optimarum Artium Studiis liberaliter eruditum, Prudentem, Pium, Justum, Abstemium: Qui Filij, Fratris, Amici, Officia omnia diligenter sancteq; explevit.

Si ei etiam quæ Maritum, quæ Patrem decerent, experiri per Fata licuisset; Quàm Beata fuisset Uxor! Progenies quàm Proba! Quam autem Curam in Suâ Prole instituendâ impendi vetuit Deus, Eam omnem in Alienâ educandâ (Laigo ad id negotij annuo sumptu in omne ævum dato) Adhibuit, sic seræ Posteritatis factus Pater. O Quot ex illo Pauperioris Juventutis Seminario, Benevoli hujus Viri Munificentia extracto, in lætiora sola quotannis transferantur, HUIUS NOMINI Prosperitatem suam acceptam relaturi; et veluti illæ Arboris quas, animi recreandi gratiâ, Ipse Suâ Manu serere solebat, Præsenti et Futuris Sæculis prodesse possint.

Vale Anima pura et candida, Sequere Patris Tui vestigia Per obscuram Mortis Umbram, Donec in æternam Lucem perveneris: Ubi studio pari, et junctis precibus Orabis, Ut Pia Mater Charæq; Sorores Virtuti Tuæ gratulantes, Te in cælum recepto, in Fide, in Innocentia, in Operibus bonis Perseverent; Usq; dum isto Tuo dilectissimo Consortio, Quod Vehementer desiderant, In perpetuum Fruantur.

Under, upon the same monument:

He hath Endowed a CHARITY-SCHOOL in this Parish with a Rent charge of Eighty Pound per An. for ever, for the Yearly Apprenticing of Two Poor Boys or Girls, and for the Cloathing and Instructing in Writing, Reading, and in Christian Knowledge as many more as the Residue of that Sum will be sufficient for.

Against the south wall of the chancel, is a marble table, with the following inscription:

This STONE is erected to the MEMORY of St. HENRY PLEYDELL DAWNAY, Baronett, Lord Viscount DOWNE, Whose Remains lie buried at MEURS near WEZEL, on the Banks of the LOWER RHINE. He was Lord of the Bed Chamber to GEORGE the third, both when KING and PRINCE of WALES; was twice elected Knight of the Shire for the County of YORK; Colonel by Brevet; Colonel of the Southern Battalion of Militia of the West Riding of the County of YORK; and Lieutenant Colonel of the Twenty fifth Regiment of Foot, which he Commanded at the Battle of MINDEN, August 1st 1759. And again at the Battle of CAMPEN, Octob. 16, 1760, where being Mortally wounded he died the Ninth of December following, in the Thirty third Year of his Age.

There is a handsome pyramidal marble monument, on the west wall of the north aisle, for Anne, the wife of Robert Berkeley Freeman, gent. and near it, another for Thomas Powell, M. A. vicar of this parish, who died Dec. 29, 1764, aged 62.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 81 4 0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 36 1 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 62 16 0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 48 1 6

About the year 1712, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 100 houses, and about 350 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 25 were freeholders. The yearly births were 8, and burials 7. Upon examining the parish register, I find, that in a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were entered 103 baptisms, and 76 burials; and there are now, by actual numeration, 357 inhabitants.

A M N E Y St. M A R Y, or E A S T B R O O K.

THIS parish is situated in the hundred of Crowthorne and Minety, about three miles eastward from Cirencester, six north from Cricklade in Wiltshire, and about twenty-one eastward from Gloucester. The etymology of Eastbrook is easy, the principal part of the parish lying on the east side of the brook which runs from Amney Crucis into the Thames or Isis.

Ten or twelve houses which belong to Amney Crucis lie intermixt with this parish, which is small, and seems, in early times, to have been taken out of Amney Crucis. It consists mostly of meadow ground. The turnpike-road from Cirencester to London leads thro' this parish.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book, it is thus expressed:

'Reinbaldus holds Omenie, in Gerfdones hundred, of the king. Godric held it in the time of king Edward. There are four hides and one yard-land. In demean are two plow-tillages, and eight villeins, and one bordar, with six plow-tillages, and a priest. There are eight servi, and two mills of 10s. and twenty acres of meadow. It was worth and is worth 100s. Domesday-book, p. 73.

This Reinbald, or Reimbald, or Rumbald, was dean of the college of Cirencester at that time, and had been chancellor of England in the reign of Edward the Confessor. There were two other small estates, according to the record:

'Durand [of Gloucester] holds one hide in Estbroc, and one of his knights holds it of him. In demean is one plow-tillage, and one bordar, and one servus. It is worth and was worth 10s.' Domesday-book, p. 76.

Humphry the chamberlain had also an estate here, for it is thus expressed:

'The same Hunfry holds one virgate of land in Estbroce, and William holds it of him. Aluine held it for a manor. There is one villein. It was worth and is worth 2s.' Dom. Book, p. 79.

It appears by an Inspeimus of the grants to the abbey of Cirencester, that king H. 1. granted four hides and one yard-land in Amney to that church, which had formerly been the estate of Reimbald the priest. But the records shew also that a manor in Estbrook belonged to Roger de Hore, 8 E. 1. which was probably that which Aluine held. Other records shew, that Ashbrook was held of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, and of Joan his wife, 46 E. 3. But

But I do not understand this to be the manor granted to the abbey of Cirencester.

Sir Robert Atkyns hath not shewn to whom this manor was granted by the crown, after the dissolution of the abbey; but John Partridge, esq; was lord of it in the year 1608. It came afterwards into the family of the Pleydells, of Holy Rood Amney, for Robert Pleydell was lord of this manor in the year 1712; from which time, it hath passed in the same manner, and acknowledged the same proprietors as Holy Rood Amney, so that Samuel Blackwell, esq; is the present lord of it.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Cirencester. It is an impropriation. The tithes of hay and corn in Amney St. Mary, which formerly belonged to the abbey of Cirencester, were granted to Peter Osborn, and others, 3 Eliz. but the tithes of the demesns were granted to John Playdel, 5 Eliz. The incumbent received 13s. 4d. of the impropriator, besides about 8l. in privy tithes. But since the year 1769, when the common fields and commonable places in the parish were inclosed, lands have been allotted to the impropriator and to the vicar, and the whole parish is exonerated from tithe.

The living has been twice augmented by queen Anne's bounty. Mr. Blackwell is patron; William Sandeford, D. D. is the present incumbent.

The church is small, without any steeple, and is dedicated to the virgin Mary.

Procurations, £. 0 6 8 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
Pentecostals, — 0 0 8

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 45 2 0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, — 8 10 0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, — 45 6 0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 25 8 1

About the year 1712, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 20 houses, and about 80 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 8 were freeholders. The yearly births 2, burials 2. But examining the parish register, I find, that in a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there are entered 38 baptisms, and 17 burials, and the inhabitants being numbered, are found to be 118.

AMNEY St. PETER,
or EASTINGTON,

LIES in the hundred of Crowthorne and Minety, four miles distant east from Cirencester, six north from Cricklade in Wiltshire, and twenty-one south-eastward from Gloucester. It is a small parish, consisting chiefly of meadow and pasture land. Lying to the eastward of the other Amneys, occasioned its being distinguished by the name of Eastington.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book, in the account of lands belonging to the church of St. Peter of Gloucester, it is thus exprest:

' The brother of Reinbald holds two hides in Omenie, in Gerfdunes hundred. There are two plow-tillages, and five villeins with three plow-tillages, and four servi, and twenty-four acres of meadow, and a mill of 5s. rent. It was worth 40s. now scarce 20s.' D. B. p. 71.

' Hernulf [de Hefding] holds four hides and two virgates and a half of land in Omenie, in Gerfdones hundred. Elric and Godric held them for two manors. In demean are three plow-tillages, and seven villeins, and two bordars, with two plow-tillages. There are four servi. The whole was worth and is worth 6l.' Domesday-book, p. 77.

In the account of the donations to the abbey of St. Peter at Gloucester, p. 143, it is said, that in the year 1126, Winebald de Balon, one of the great barons of the realm, and Roger his son, granted to that monastery half a hide in Amney, which Thomas an Englishman held, free from all payments, except the king's dane-gelt.

Now it will be difficult to prove that the above estates lay in this parish, and not in one of the others of the same name; but it is probable that the first and last of them did, because the records shew, that in the seventeenth year of king E. 3. this manor, and the impropriation, belonged to the abbey of Gloucester. And they continued to be a part of the possessions of that abbey till it was dissolved. After the dissolution, the manor and tithes were granted to Richard Knight, 1 Mariæ; and Robert Knight, his son and heir, had livery of the manor 15 Eliz.

From him it went to George Gascoign, esq; who was lord thereof in the year 1608. And then passing to Robert Pleydell, esq; it hath ever since been the property of the owners of Amney Crucis, so that Samuel Blackwell, esq; is the present lord of this manor.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Cirencester. It is a curacy, in the gift of the bishop of Gloucester. In the thirteenth year of C. 1. it was instituted to as a vicarage. The reverend Mr. Thomas Smith is the present incumbent, who receives 1l. 6s. 8d. from the lessee of the appropriation. There is no house for the minister. The living has been thrice augmented by the queen's bounty, with which, lands of 14l. 10s. a year have been purchased, in the parish of South Cerney.

A portion of tithes in Farley, near Amney, antiently belonging to the abbey of Gloucester, was granted to the bishoprick 33 H. 8. and it hath been already shewn, that other tithes in this parish, belonging to the same abbey, were granted to Richard Knight, 1 Mariæ.

Ranbury farm, which is given to support the charity school at Amney Crucis, Kingston meadow, and most of the parish, pay no tithe.

The church is small, without any steeple. It is dedicated to St. Peter. Two acres in each common field, in the parish of Amney St. Mary, and one acre in Mr. Trynder's piece, were given to repair the church, before the fields were inclosed.

	Pentecostals, - -	£. 0 0 6
Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid, in 1692, £. 36 2 0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 6 16 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 36 3 6
		The same, at 3s. - 1770, — 27 2 2

According to sir Robert Atkyns, about the year 1710, there were 22 houses, and about 100 inhabitants in this parish, of whom 10 were freeholders; yearly births 3, burials 2. Examining the parish register, I find, that in a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were entered 39 baptisms, and 22 burials; and the inhabitants are about 105.

A R L I N G H A M.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Berkeley, ten miles north-westward from Stroud, nine north from Dursley, and nine south-westward from Gloucester. It is peninsulated by the river Severn on the east, west, and north sides, and bounded by Frampton on the south-east. A turnpike-road leads from Stroud to a passage over the Severn, in this parish; but the passage-house is at Newnham, exactly opposite to Arlingham. The river, at high water, is about a mile over, or something less. Persons well acquainted with the river, ride, and drive a carriage over the ford at this place, at low water; but some have miscarried in the attempt.

The name, resolved into its parts, and compared with the alphabetical list of words for explaining the names of places, will be found to signify a village, or town, upon the meadows; the letter / serving only for the sake of sound. And this is exactly agreeable to the situation of the place, which lies in the upper level, and has 738 acres of land, more particularly subject to inundations from the Severn.

The air is made very unwholesome by the copious humid exhalations from the river, and from the lands which are so frequently overflowed. This occasions inveterate agues, and all those topical disorders incident to a low, damp situation, in which the poorer sort of people, who live hard, have so manifestly the disadvantage in point of health. In Holland, where agues are very frequent, such as go abroad early in the morning, usually fortify themselves against the moist air, by taking a dram, and a crust of bread, a dish of coffee, some gingerbread, or the like, which is thought to be a good method of preservation.

Notwithstanding the situation of this village upon the Severn, fish is not so commonly the food of its inhabitants as might be imagined, on account of the great price it usually bears. Salmon, in the greatest plenty of the season, commonly sells for three pence half penny or four pence a pound. I took some notice, about two years ago, of an eel, just taken, five feet ten inches long, and twenty-eight pounds weight, which a butcher was stripping at this village, and thought it a great curiosity; but several persons informed me, that there was nothing extraordinary in it, as a man, then living in the place, had taken one which weighed six score pounds. The flesh of this animal was sold to poor people at two pence a pound. It was very white, but of a strong, nasty smell, and must be unwholesome food.

There are no rare plants found here, but large quantities of wood are frequently dug out of the meadows next Frethorn, which, when dry, falls to pieces on touching it. This wood must have been carried thither at a very early period of time, when the ground was in a boggy state, so as to suffer the logs to sink down to the depth whence they are now taken.

There is a good prospect over the Severn, from Barrow-hill, in this parish, so called, perhaps, from the resemblance it bears to a large tumulus, or barrow.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Arlingham was antiently a member of the great lordship of Berkeley. In the list of estates belonging to that lordship, entered in Domesday-book, it is said, that nine hides in Erlingham belong to Berchelai. Hence I conclude, there were other lands beside the nine hides, which belonged to one or more freeholders at that time; and the subsequent records, taking early notice of various proprietors of manors in this parish, serve to justify the conclusion. The following particulars are drawn from the records:

Maurice lord Berkeley died seized of the manor of Erlingham 9 E. 1. and left it to sir Robert Berkeley, his second son; whose son and heir, John Berkeley, died seized thereof, 14 E. 2. leaving four daughters coheiresses.

The abbat of St. Augustin in Bristol was seized of the manor of Erlingham, with court-leet, and of lands called Kern and Bethlea, in Erlingham, 15 E. 1. and his right was allowed in a Quo warranto the same year.

Walter de Thornhall, in the right of Elizabeth his wife, was seized of the third part of the manor of Arlingham, and of a fishery in the Severn. They jointly levied a fine of their estate, and settled it on themselves in fee-tail, the remainder on James, the son of Elizabeth by her former husband, 29 E. 3.

Geoffery le Mareschal held Erlingham 32 E. 3.

John At-Yate was seized of the manor of Erlingham, 41 E. 3. This is the same person who, by by the name of John de Yate, was assigned, with four others, to view and repair the banks and drains of the lands bordering on the Severn, betwixt Bristol and Gloucester, 33 E. 3.

Agnes, widow of sir Thomas Bradestone, was possessed of a manor here, 43 E. 3. And Thomas Bradestone, grandson of Thomas, died seized of it, 48 E. 3. and left Elizabeth his only daughter and heiress, married to sir Walter de la Pool.

Richard Seimour was probably a trustee of the Bradestones, as he was seized of this manor, together with Stinchcombe and Horton, both belonging to the Bradestones, 2 H. 4. which soon after reverted to them again; for Sir Walter de la Pool, and Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heiress of Thomas Bradestone, were seized of one messuage and one yard-land in Erlingham, 12 H. 6. and sir Edward Ingoldsthorp was seized of this manor, and of the other estates mentioned before, as belonging to the Bradestones, 35 H. 6. After this time, I find nothing more of that family in Erlingham.

I now return to the family of the Berkeleys, who were lords of the manor of Erlingham. Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, married Elizabeth, the only child of Thomas lord Berkeley, with whom he had this manor, and died seized of Erlingham 17 H. 6. He had three daughters, of whom, Margaret, the eldest, married to John Talbot, the first earl of Salisbury, died seized of Erlingham, 7 E. 4.

William marquis of Berkeley having no issue, and taking a dislike to his brother Maurice, who should have succeeded him, levied a fine of the manor of Erlingham, and of other lands in that parish, to Edward Willoughby, and Robert Legg, 3 H. 7. and granted them to the king and his heirs male, with remainder to the right heirs of the said marquis; so that at the death of king E. 6. (who was the last male heir of king H. 7.) this manor reverted to Henry lord Berkeley, who had livery thereof 1 & 2 P. & M.

But there was another reputed manor in this parish, part of the possessions of the abbey of Flaxley, and after the dissolution of that house, was granted to sir Anthony Kingston, 36 H. 8. and is mentioned in the grant to be of the clear yearly value of 5*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

The manor of Erlingham came afterwards into the family of the Westwoods; for Robert Westwood, on the death of his father, had livery of it, 1 Eliz.

From them it passed to the family of the Yates, who came into England at the Norman conquest, and have resided in Gloucestershire ever since. They had estates, soon after their coming, at Dursley, Flaxley, Cam, &c. and particularly at Erlingham, as appears by antient deeds, wherein de la Yate grants lands in Erlingham, in the reign of king John; and one of their ancestors gave part of the ground on which the church is built, and the parson, at this time, pays a yearly rent to the proprietor of the manor, in acknowledgement thereof.

John at Yate married Margaret, the youngest daughter of John Berkeley, (who died, as already observed, 14 E. 2.) and in her right became seized of an estate in Erlingham; and dying, was succeeded by his son John. He also left a son John, who died seized of the bailiwick of Abbenhall, in the forest of Dean, and of lands in Walmore, and Littlemore, in the parish of Westbury, and of lands in Dursley, Hatherley, and Erlingham, 41 E. 3. William Yate was his son, who had two sons, Richard and Walter. Richard dying without issue, Walter succeeded his brother, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Wye, esq; by whom he had a son Thomas Yate, whose son was Richard Yate, who had a son Richard, whose son Walter Yate was high-sheriff of Gloucestershire in the year 1696.

Richard Yate succeeded Walter, and married Elizabeth, one of the daughters and coheiresses of Thomas Price, esq; mayor of Gloucester, by whom he had two sons, Charles and John; and three daughters, Elizabeth, Joyce, and Mary, the two last dying infants; which John settled at Colthorp, in the parish of Standish, in this county.

Charles Yate, son and heir of Richard, married Mary, daughter and coheiress of — Hickes, esq; by whom he had issue one only child, John, and died in the year 1738; whereby this manor and estate devolved to his son, who also dying unmarried in the year 1758, the male line of this antient family is extinct. The widow of Charles Yate, esq; is the present proprietor of this manor, who hath a handsome house called the Court, with pleasant gardens, and a park, and a large estate in this parish. The arms of Yate are, Azure, a fess Or, in chief two mullets of the second.

Of the other estates, the records shew, that Elianor, dutchess of Somerset, married to Thomas lord Rouse, was seized of lands in Erlingham, formerly belonging to Thomas lord Berkeley, 7 E. 4. Thomas Baker levied a fine of lands in Erlingham to John Esterfield, John Walch, and others, 9 H. 7. And Thomas Pany, and Catherine his wife, levied a fine of lands in Erlingham, 16 H. 7. William Warner also levied a fine of lands in Erlingham, in the 17th year of the same reign. Lands in Erlingham which belonged to the abbey of St. Augustin in Bristol, were granted to the dean and chapter of that place, 34 H. 8.

H A M L E T S. 1. Overton, which lies a mile from the church.

2. Milton End, of two or three families.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Gloucester, worth 76*l.* a year. Roger lord Berkeley gave this church to the priory of Leonard Stanley. The rectory and church of Erlingham were granted to sir William Rider, 7 Jac. Mr.

O o o

Bridgman

Bridgman hath lately sold the advowson of the vicarage, and the impropriation, to Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers, who hath a good estate in this parish, purchased of the family of Bycke. Mr. Davis is the present incumbent. The impropriation pays 15*l*. a year to the crown. The church is a long building, with a tower at the west end, and six musical bells. It is dedicated to the virgin Mary. Lands let for 40*s*. a year are given to adorn the church.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Against the wall, between the body of the church and the chancel, stands a grey marble monument, in the form of an obelisk, over which are the arms of Yate, with quarterings, pretty much defaced. The motto, QUO VIRTUS VOCAT. There is an urn in front, with festoons, and other decorations, and a table beneath bears the following inscription :

Near this Place lyeth the Body of Charles Yate, Esq; who died the 11th of Nov. 1738, aged 46.

He was one of his Majesties Justices of the Peace, likewise Deputy Lieutenant of this County : He discharged with Justice & Equity to all, and with Honour and Reputation to himself, the Offices of a Magistrate and a Christian : His Authority might have made him respected whilst alive ; but it was the peculiar sweetness and affability of his Manners, his great kindness and humanity to all, his agreeable Chearfulness of Disposition, annexed to a virtuous Mind, which could alone render him so truly regretted when dead.

Against the north wall of the church stands another marble monument, with the coat armour of Yate, and motto, as before. In front, a female figure, kneeling, holds an anchor in her right hand, in her left a heart inflamed. Upon a table it is thus inscribed :

Here lyeth the body of John Yate, Esq; Lord of this Manor, the last Heir Male of his Family, and only Son of Charles Yate, Esq; He was in the Commission of the peace, one of the Deputy Lieutenants of this County, and Deputy Constable of St. Briavell's Castle. Descended from a long Race of worthy Ancestors, He improved his native Virtues with every amiable Qualification that gains the Love and Veneration of Mankind. A lively Sense and uniform Practice of Religion, accompanied with Candor, Affability, and Sweetness of Temper, filled him with Joy and inward Satisfaction. Charity, Compassion, and universal Benevolence, chiefly directed and disposed of his ample Fortune. Of purest Morals, of an irreproachable Life, of filial Affection, of Sincerity in Friendship, of true Honour, of Integrity of Heart, He was an uncommon Example. With this admirable Assemblage of Virtues, joined to a polite Taste of Literature, the Scholar in him perfected the Gentleman, as the Christian perfected the man.

In the Flower of Youth, expecting, but not fearing Death, He willingly resigned his Soul to God on the 24th of May, 1758, aged 27. To whose ever dear and honoured Memory, this Monument is erected, by his most truly affectionate and much afflicted mother, M. Y.

On flat stones are memorials for Richard Yate, esq; who died Nov. 2, 1661, aged 78; for Colonel Richard Yate, who died June 17, 1701, aged 41; for his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of major Price, who died July 14, 1705, aged 40, and two of their daughters, Joyce and Mary, both infants; and for Charles Yate, esq; who died Nov. 11, 1738, aged 46.

First fruits,	£. 19	7	2	Synodals,	£. 0	2	0
Tenths,	—	1	18	8	Pentecostals,	0	0
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Here is a free-school endowed with 40*l*. a year, of which the following inscription, on a table in the front of the school-house, exhibits the particulars :

John Yate, Esq; by Virtue of his Will, endowed this School, which charity was carried on by his parent, who survived him. And in the year 1768, she erected this building at her own Expence for the Benefit of the same. And by the Authority that was invested in her, she completed the Endowment in her Life-Time.

Thomas Liston, merchant, has given 10*s*. a year to the poor, paid out of Woolcroft, in this parish.

The inhabitants of Arlingham, in their turn with other parishes, have a right of sending two persons to a hospital at Warwick, founded 13 Eliz. by Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, of the Berkeley family; who founded the hospital for twelve poor men hurt in the wars, and if no such, then Erlingham to have the benefit.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	188	4	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	31	4	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	141	14	0
		The same, at 3 s . — 1770, —	107	18	6

According to sir Robert Atkins, when he published his account of this parish, there were 80 houses and about 400 inhabitants, of whom 25 were freeholders. The yearly births were 14, burials 11. But in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there appear to be entered in the parish register 161 baptisms and 121 burials, and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, there were entered 116 baptisms and 110 burials. The number of inhabitants is 372, i. e. nearly in the proportion of 34 to 1 of the annual burials; which shews the declining state of population.

A S H C H U R C H.

THIS parish is situate in the vale, in the lower part of the hundred of Tewkesbury, distant two miles eastward from the town which gives name to the hundred; about seven west from Winchcombe, and eleven northward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the east by Teddington in Worcestershire, and by Beckford in this county; on the west by Tewkesbury; on the north by the river Caran, or Carant; and on the south by the parishes of Cleeve and Tredington. It consists of rich meadow and pasture, with a considerable proportion of deep arable land. The turnpike-road from Tewkesbury to London leads thro' it; before the gates were erected it was almost impassable.

This parish was antiently, and still is, divided into tithings, or hamlets, distinguished by the names of Estone, or Ellstone, Pamintonie, Fiten tone, and Natone, something different in ortho-graphy.

graphy from the modern names. In the time of king Edward the Confessor, they were members of the great manor of Tewkesbury. Eitone was so called, because it was situate in the east part of the parish; and the parish obtained the name of Eastchurch, or Eastchurch, because the church lay eastward from the town of Tewkesbury; but in process of time, by a vicious pronunciation, the name hath been corrupted to Ashchurch, as we now write it.

In the tithing of Northway and Newton there is a spring of purgative mineral water, which, about thirty years ago, the town of Tewkesbury endeavoured to improve to its advantage. They erected a pump over the well, and some of the water was used medicinally; but it soon fell into neglect, as being too near to Cheltenham spaw to succeed at the same time. The properties of both waters are said to be nearly alike.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

In the time of king Edward the Confessor, the lands in this parish were held by several tenants, under the great but unfortunate Brietric, the son of Algar, except only a small portion which belonged to the church of Tewkesbury. At the time of the conquest, they were taken from Brietric by W. 1. and given to his queen; and were afterwards possessed by the same proprietors who held the manor of Tewkesbury, down to the reign of king E. 6. But the particulars will best appear under the heads of the several tithings.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Northway and Newton. The records shew that William de Valentia was seized of this manor, by the gift of Robert de Pont de La ch, 36 H. 3. But it reverted afterwards to the lords of Tewkesbury. George duke of Clarence, in right of Isabel his wife, daughter of Anne countess of Warwick, was seized of Northy, 18 E. 4. And Anne countess of Warwick levied a fine of this manor, and of all her estates, to the king, 3 H. 7. The manor of Northy was granted to Robert earl of Leicester, and to John Morley, 23 Eliz. and afterwards in the same reign, Thomas Cox, of Cleeve, esq; became the proprietor of it. His grandson, sir John Cox, had a son and daughter, to whom this estate descended, who dying without issue, it went, by the gift of the daughter, to her mother. She settled it on Elianor, niece of sir John Cox, married to John Stafford, esq; from whom it descended to his son Henry Stafford; from whose family it passed by purchase to Thomas Hayward, of Quedgley, esq; who is the present lord of the manor of Northway and Newton.

Lands in Northy were granted to Francis Maurice, and Francis Philips, in trust for sir William Rider and others, 7 Jac.

2. Pamington, containing about 22 houses. Domesday-book shews that there were eight hides in Pamintonie, belonging to the manor of Tewkesbury, in the reign of king Edward the Confessor.

King W. 2. granted court-leet, waifs, and felons goods in Pamington to the abbey of Tewkesbury, which privileges were allowed them in a writ of Quo warranto, 15 E. 1. but yet notwithstanding, the manor was afterwards in the lords of Tewkesbury. George duke of Clarence was seized of it in right of Isabel his wife. And Anne the great countess of Warwick, levied a fine of it to the king, 3 H. 7. This manor was granted from the crown to Anne Fortescue, widow of sir Adrian Fortescue, and to the heirs male of sir Adrian, 5 Mariae. Lord Craven is the present owner of it.

3. Fiddington, containing about 20 houses. It is said in Domesday-book, that there were six hides in Fitentone belonging to the manor of Teodechesberie. A radechenister held two hides in Fitentone, now Larnard holds them.

'The underwritten lands belong to the church of Teodechesberie. In Fitentone two hides. There is one villein, and two coliberti, with two plow-tillages. It was worth and is worth 10s. One of these hides was quit from tax.' Domesday-book, p. 68.

Fiddington, Ashton in Clifford Chambers, and Porton, were held by knight's service of Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford, 8 E. 2. Roger de Acton held Fiddington 35 E. 3. But the lords of Tewkesbury were afterwards proprietors of this manor, till Anne countess of Warwick levied a fine of it to king H. 7. in the third year of his reign. Sir Thomas Seimour obtained a grant of the manor of Fiddington, lately the earl of Warwick's, 1 E. 6. and this manor and other lands, were granted to John earl of Warwick, in exchange for Warwick-castle, 3 E. 6.

There was another manor in Fiddington, which belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, from before the conquest, till that house was dissolved. And this last mentioned manor was granted to Daniel Perte and Alexander Perte, 7 E. 6.

Robert Ashton levied a fine of the manor of Fiddington to Henry Moody, 2 Mariae. Thomas Cluterbuck, in right of his wife Elizabeth, died seized of the manor of Fiddington, 15 Car. Thomas Kemble, esq; is the present lord of this manor.

The records shew that John Coal died seized of Hall's Court in Fiddington, 16 H. 8. And that James Gunter, and Anne his wife, levied a fine of lands in Fiddington, to Thomas Berew, and Margaret his wife, 1 Mariae.

Natton lies in this tithing. Domesday-book shews, that three hides and a half in Natone were

What sir Robert Atkyns hath said of the abbess of Iswis, the knights Templers, and of John de Berkeley, being seized of this manor, was occasioned by his having mistaken several different places for this, on account of the resemblance of name; as Newington Bagpath, Newington in Winchcombe, and the parish of Naunton.

held of the manor of Tewkesbury. The capital messuage of Natton, with divers lands, meadows, and pastures in Natton, parcel of the possessions of the late monastery of Tewkesbury, were granted to John Bellow, and Robert Biggot, 38 H. 8. Stevens's App. p. 9.

4. Aston, or Aston upon Caran, containing about 22 families. The manor, and capital messuage and lands called Ashchurch, late belonging to Richard earl of Warwick, were granted to sir Ralph Fane, 1 E. 6. but they were afterwards in the crown, for other records shew, that the manor and farm of Ashchurch were granted to William Hawtree, 7 E. 6. John Harrington had livery of this manor, 20 Eliz. Thomas Hughes, esq; was lord of it in the year 1608. But Aston is now the estate of Henry Wakeman, of Beckford, esq; The manor court has been discontinued time out of mind.

John Pullen and Alice his wife were seized of lands in Aston upon Carent, 1 R. 2. And John Karante was likewise seized of lands in Aston Karante, 6 R. 2. A messuage called Caran's Place and Caran's Mill, in Ashchurch, was granted to Dorothy Darel, and to George Tresham, 36 H. 8. Lands in Aston upon Carent, which belonged to the alien priory of Belbeck, and afterwards to the college of Fotheringhay, were granted to sir Edward Lee, 1 E. 6.

Haman's Downs, (so called from Robert Fitz-Haman, lord of Tewkesbury, and proprietor of a vast estate in this country) is a small hamlet in this parish. Livery of the manor of Homeſdown, and Nether Homeſdown, was granted to Thomas Lane, 3 E. 6. Hamand Downs in Ashchurch, lately belonging to Thomas lord Seimour, were granted to Christopher Hatton, in exchange for lands in Hampshire, 18 Eliz.

Each of the four tithings has a distinct overseer, tithing-man, and surveyor.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a curacy, in the deanery of Winchcombe. John Parsons, esq; patron; the reverend Mr. John Dark is the present incumbent, who at visitation is stiled rector of Ashchurch.

Tithes in Ashchurch, Northway, Newton, Cardiff, Pamington, and Ashton, formerly belonging to the abbey of Tewkesbury, were granted to Thomas Stroud, Walter Earl, and James Paget, 36 H. 8.

The rectory of Ashchurch, and tithes of hay in Northy, and tithes in Aston upon Carent, were granted to Daniel Perte, and Alexander Perte, 7 E. 6. And other tithes in Aston upon Carent, which belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, were granted to Francis Maurice, and Francis Philips, in trust for sir William Rider, and others, 7 Jac.

Tithes of hay in the meadows called Tenants Meadow, and Pamington Doles, which belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, were granted to Roger Manners, esq; 18 Eliz.

The tithes which belonged to the college of Fotheringhay were granted to sir Richard Lee 1 E. 6.

The impropiator of Northway and Newton pays 8*l.* a year to the curate. The living has been augmented by queen Anne's bounty, and Mr. William Ferrers, by his will, gave 5*l.* a year to the curate, who shall ordinarily and weekly reside in the parish, and preach; the payment of which is charged on his manor of Shellingthorpe, in Lincolnshire. Mr. Scrimshire has also given 12*l.* a year to the curate, charged on the impropriations of Tredington, and of Fiddington in this parish, of which a more particular account may be seen under Tewkesbury. A small house, and a little piece of pasture ground belong to the curacy.

The church is large, with battlements on the south side. It hath a large aisle on the north side, formerly called St. Thomas's chapel, and a handsome tower at the west end, adorned with pinnacles and battlements, and six small bells in it.

In one of the windows of the north aisle are these arms, Gules, three eschalop shells argent.
— Gules, a chevron ermine.

Pentecostals, - - £. 0 1 3 ob.

There are two church-wardens for this parish.

Benefactions.

A house, and the church-yard, and three ridges of land, worth 3*l.* a year, are given towards the repair of the church.

Mr. William Ferrers hath given 10*l.* a year to the poor, notwithstanding it is said to be 5*l.* a year in the memorial for him.

Thomas Haynes, citizen of London, gave 40*s.* a year to the poor, or the profit of 50*l.* to be laid out in lands.

Charles Parsons, of Breedon, gent. by his will dated 1731, gave 20*s.* a year to the poor, charged on a ground called Butsham, and a little meadow called Kinsham, in Breedon.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Against the south wall is the effigy of William Ferrers, and round it written Live well and die never. Dye well and live ever. Over the figure are his arms, Or, on a bend gules, three horseshoes of the field. And beneath, upon a table, it is thus inscribed:

M E M O R I Æ S A C R V M.

William Ferrers, Citizen of London, second Sonn of Roger Ferrers of Fiddington, gent. had 3 wives, with whom hee lived 50 yeares most lovingly: and by whom hee saw himself a happy Father and Grandfather. All his children died before him. Hee preferred many of his brothers, of his kindred, and of his cowntrymen, and left behind him severall works of Piety. As to the Poore of this place where hee was borne, to a Preacher in this Parish, and to y^e mending of y^e Highwayes about Fiddington, to every one 5*l.* yearly for ever. Moreover hee gave 30*l.* yearly for ever towards a Free Schoole in Tewkesbury, and 5*l.* p. annum to y^e Poore of y^e place wth severall gifts to y^e Poore and other pious uses in and about London. He likewise gave large Legacies both in landes & Monyes to his grandchildren, brothers and kindred. Hee departed this life y^e 26th the 26th day of September 1625, & lyes buried in Allhallowes Church in Lumbar-street London.

Thomas Ferrers his Brother & Part Executor with Love & Care built this small Monument.

On a brass plate, against the same wall, within a scutcheon, five eschalop shells, no colours exprest; and beneath, engraved in capitals, MEMORIÆ ROBERTI BARKER, GENER. QVI PHTHISIS LABORANS & CVPIENS DISSOLVI, VOTI COMPOSUIT 3^{IO} DIE MARTII ANNO DNI 1671. ÆTATIS VERO SVÆ 40.

Then follow ten lines of uncouth English versification.

On a flat stone of white marble, in the chancel, Party per pale, 1. A bend wavy. 2. A chevron between three griffons heads erased. No colours exprest in the sculpture. Under the scutcheon, a memorial for Thomas Smithend, of Tewkesbury, who died in 1717; and for Paulina his wife, who died in 1735.

There is a memorial against the wall of the north aisle, for George Bannister, sen. gent. who died in 1734, aged 57; and for Sarah his wife, who died in 1729, aged 56; and for Sarah and Edmund their infant children. And upon the stone are the following arms Party per pale, 1. Argent, a cross patonce sable. 2. Gules, a fess between three fleurs-de-lis Or.

There is also a memorial, on a flat stone in the chancel, for Nicholas Steight, of Pamington, who died in 1763, aged 80, with his arms, A fess embattled between three lions rampant.

Northway and Newton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 185 16 0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 14 4 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 299 6 0
		The same, at 3s. - 1770, — 172 17 6

Pamington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 82 10 0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 2 12 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 63 4 0
		The same, at 3s. - 1770, — 75 14 7

Fiddington and Natton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 115 6 0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 8 10 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 139 16 0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 105 10 7

Aston upon Caran.

Taxes.	{	The Land-tax in 1694, £. 54 16 0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, — 41 7 7

According to sir Robert Atkyns, about the year 1710, there were 77 houses in this parish, and about 308 inhabitants, whereof 10 were freeholders. The yearly births 14, burials 13. But the following particulars are carefully extracted from the parish register. In a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there are entered 113 baptisms and 94 burials. In a like series from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, are 120 baptisms and 108 burials. And there are about 436 inhabitants, so that the people have been increasing in this parish since the beginning of this century.

A S H E L W O R T H,

IS a small parish in the hundred of Berkeley, though distant ten or twelve miles from any other part of that hundred. This is one of the several instances, occasionally to be taken notice of in the course of this work, of the unnatural and inconvenient allotment of parishes to hundreds, which, by their situation, they have no connexion with. As to Ashelworth, this irregularity arose in very early times, when the parish was first made a member of the great lordship of Berkeley, whose tenants were obliged to attend at the court of that hundred. It is seven miles east from Newent, seven southward from Tewkesbury, and five northward from Gloucester; situate on the west side of a gentle rising ground called Cookhill, which joins to Corfe; is watered by the Severn, on the east; bounded by Hasfield, on the north; and on the south by the parish of Hartpury.

The lands are chiefly meadow and pasture, with much clay in their composition, very suitable to orcharding, for which the parish hath formerly been distinguished; but it is far otherwise at present.

The plantations remaining are old and decayed, and the nature of the tenure, (being leasehold under a fluctuating proprietor) is unfavourable to planting, and every kind of improvement. The cottages and farm-houses are such as might be expected, miserable hovels, generally covered with straw, and in ruinous condition. The course of husbandry, for they have some tillage land, is three crops, i. e. wheat, beans, wheat, and then fallow.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is exprest, that three hides in Esceleuorde belong to Berchelai; and they were part of that lordship in the time of king Edward the Confessor.

Robert Fitz-Harding founded the monastery of St. Augustine, in Bristol, and endowed it with this manor, which continued in that abbey till it was dissolved in the reign of king H. 8. and the lands and possessions belonging to it, among which were the manor, the rectory, and the advowson of the vicarage of Ashelworth, were granted to the bishop of Bristol, at the first erection of that see, 34 H. 8. Thomas Hayward, of Quedgley, esq; is the present lessee under the bishop, of the manor and impropriation; and holds a court-leet here.

HAMLETS. There are places or hamlets in this parish, of the following names. — 1. Longbridge. — 2. Knights Green. — 3. Nupping-end. — 4. White-end. — 5. High Cross. — 6. Wickeridge. — 7. Mare-end.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Gloucester, worth 40*l.* a year. The bishop of Bristol is patron and impropiator, and Mr. Edwards is the present incumbent. The vicar, who has a small portion of the great tithes, repairs one part of the chancel.

The church hath two ailes, and a chancel by the side of the greater chancel, with a spire steeple at the west end. It is dedicated to St. Andrew.

First fruits, £.	11	9	0	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths,	—	1	0	Pentecostals,	0	0	11
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefaction.

Lands in Haresfield and Ashelworth, of the value of about 14*l.* a year, are given to the use of the church and poor.

{	Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.	104	4	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694,	—	19	0	0
		Land-tax — - 1694,	—	88	18	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770,	—	65	9	6

ASTON-BLANK, or COLD ASTON,

IS a small parish in the hundred of Bradley, five miles north from Northleach; six south-westward, upon the turnpike-road, from Stow; and twenty-two eastward, upon the same road, from Gloucester.

Aston, or Easton, is a name very commonly given to parishes and hamlets situated eastward from places which they have some relation to, or dependance upon. Sir Robert Atkyns's notion of its being derived from the ash-trees growing here, is chimerical. The place lies on the eastern extremity of the hundred, and was therefore called Estone, as I find it written in the most antient record of the kingdom. Lying high, and much exposed to the weather, gave rise to the appellation of Cold; but I can render no account how it obtained the additional name of Blank. The air is good and healthy, and the lands are chiefly arable.

In the Camp-field, on the right hand of the road leading to Bourton on the Water, are intrenchments, now pretty much levelled, and a tumulus, or barrow, at a small distance from them, which hath not been opened. I am informed that Roman coins have been found there, which indicate the works to be of that people; and probably served as an advanced post to their stronger fortifications at Bourton.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

At the time of the general survey, 'Drogo' held ten hides in Estone, of the bishop of Worcester. Domesday-book, p. 70.

There is another parish, near Marshfield, called Cold Aston, or Cold Ashton, which, on account of the simularity of name, sir Robert Atkyns hath confounded with this, to which the following extracts from the records undoubtedly belong, as they can have no relation to the other, because the abbey of Eath held that manor from before the Norman conquest, 'till that house was dissolved.

Walter Baskervil was seized of Cold Aston, and dying 16 John, left Ralph Fitz-Nicholas his heir, whose son Robert died seized of it 1 E. 1. Ralph de Pipard was his heir and successor, whose son Robert Pipard died seized of Cold Aston 3 E. 2. And John Pipard levied a fine of the manor of Cold Aston 4 E. 2.

Edmund le Boteler married the heiress of this family of Pipard, and had with her the manor of Cold Aston, which he held, with free warren, 9 E. 2. James Boteler, his son, was created earl of Ormond, and was seized of this manor 2 E. 3. In this name and family it continued down to James Boteler earl of Ormond, who was created earl of Wiltshire, and was seized of the manor of Cold Aston 1 E. 4. but being attainted, the manor was forfeited to the crown, and was granted to sir Walter Devereux, and to his heirs male, the same year.

Sir Walter Devereux had married Anne, daughter and heiress of William lord Ferrers of Chartley, and for his eminent services against the house of Lancaster, was advanced to be lord Ferrers by king E. 4. but was afterwards slain in Bosworth field, fighting for king R. 3.

Following the fortune of the crown, the manor of Cold Aston reverted to the Botelers, on the success of king H. 7. Thomas earl of Ormond, the last of that name who was proprietor of this manor, left no issue male, whereby it descended to his two daughters. Anne, the eldest, was married to sir George St. Leger, and surviving her husband, she and her sister Margaret Boteler had livery of it, 7 H. 8. The lady Anne dying, 24 H. 8. livery of the manor was then granted to sir John St. Leger, her son and heir.

John Carter, esq; was lord of this manor in the year 1608, in whose name and family it continued above a hundred years; but lady Doily is the present proprietor of it.

Lands lying in Aston Little, within the parish of Cold Aston, formerly belonging to the priory of Westwood in Kent, were granted by the crown to Robert Acton and Charles Acton, 30 H. 8.

Little Aston farm, now let for 160*l.* a year, was the property of George Townsend, esq; which he gave to Pembroke college, in Oxford.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Stow. The lord Chancellor is patron. Mr. James is the present incumbent. Edmund Waller, esq; has the impropriation. The vicarage was worth about 30*l.* a year, but Mrs. Dorothy Vernon gave 200*l.* to augment the living, and a few years since, queen Anne's bounty was obtained for it, and the money is laid out on lands in the parish of Bourton on the Water. The vicar hath the tithes of hay, and the lesser tithes.

The priory of Malvern formerly presented to this church, which priory was founded by Aldwin a monk, 11 W. 1. for Benedictine monks, and was valued at the dissolution at 98*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* ob.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and hath a low tower, adorned with battlements, with five bells in it.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a monument in the church against the wall, over which are the following arms: Party per pale, baron and femme. 1. Sable, two lions rampant combatant Or, armed and langued gules. 2. Or, two bendlets azure; between them in the dexter chief an eschalop gules, for Tracy. Upon a table below, it is thus inscribed:

In Memoriam Cl. Viri Ægidij Carter, olim de Swell Interiori in hoc Comitatu Arnigeti, Qui probitate Morum, fide et pietate in divinis, necnon erga principem insignis, inter paucos in senectute vitam claudens, Decessit anno Ætatis suæ octogesimo, vicesimo quarto die Martij Annoq; Dom. 1664.

Et prævit octo ante mensibus charissima ejus uxor Elizabetha, honesta et splendida familia de Tracy orta, quæ una cum illo sexaginta annos matrimonio vixit, uterq; cœlestis regni, ne virius separentur, participes.

Gyles Carter was the eldest Sonn of John Carter, of Netherwell in the County of Gloucester, Esq; his two Brethren being John Carter of Charlton-Abbats, and William Carter of Breefforton, in Oxfordshire. He married Elizabeth the Daughter of Sir Paul Tracy of Stanwell, & died without Issue.

In the chancel is this memorial:

In Memory of Samuel the Son of Joshua Elyott, Clerk, and Elizabeth his Wife, daughter unto Edward Aylworth of Aylworth, in the county of Gloucester, esq; He died Aug. 1st, 1667. She died Jan. 17, 1672.

The Lord hath called Samuel hence,
Who Joshua did succeed.
He feasteth now on Joys divine,
Who here his Flock did feed.

Under the table is a scutcheon, parted per pale, the baron's side blank. On the sinister side, Argent, a fess ingrailed, between six billets gules, for Aylworth.

Within the rails of the chancel, upon a flat stone,

Bernard Winchcombe, Gent. Sub Centurion many Years, loyal to his King and Church, meekly submitted to Death, and came to this Place of Rest Feb. 16, 1683. Æt. 71.

first fruits, l.	6	12	9	Synodals, l.	0	2	0
tithes, —	0	13	10	Pentecostals, 0	0	9
procurements,	0	6	8

Benefaction.

Mr. Goddard Carter gave 5*l.* a year to teach children to read.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	56	0	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	9	16	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	39	10	8
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	33	3	0

About the year 1710, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 25 houses and about 120 inhabitants, whereof 6 were freeholders, in this parish; the yearly births 3, and burials 3. But examining the parish register, I find that in a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, the baptisms were 45, the burials 34; and the inhabitants having been numbered are found to be 171, so that population increases in this place; and the proportion of souls to the average number of yearly burials is as 50 to 1.

ASTON, or COLD ASTON,

IS a village in the hundred of Pucklechurch, bounded on the south by Somersetshire; three miles west from Marshfield, five north from Bath, five south-east from Sodbury, and thirty-four south from Gloucester. That part of the village where the church stands lies high, and much exposed to the violence of the winds. The great road from London, through Marshfield to Bristol, leads thro' this place, at a small distance from the church.

Sir Robert Atkyns's derivation of the name from the ash trees growing here, is not founded on fact. The place is not remarkable for that kind of tree, nor indeed is Alhton the proper name of it. The true and significant name is Easton, or Aston. In Domesday-book it is written Esfetone. It was so called from its situation in the hundred of Pucklechurch, being the most easterly village in that hundred. The prenomèn Cold was given it on account of its exposed situation, and to distinguish it from Easton near Bristol, and another Easton in the neighbourhood of Bath.

The parish is about three miles in length, and a mile and a half in breadth. It consists principally of arable land, with some pasture and woodland, but produces no remarkable plants nor fossils. Part of Lansdown is in this parish. Five springs, viz. Hameswell, Bridewell, Romewell, Clintonswell, and another large spring rising in Monkwood, after joining their waters together, empty themselves into the Avon; but none of them runs into the Boyd, as mentioned by sir Robert Atkyns.

The following account is taken literally from that learned historian. About fourteen years since, [i. e. 1698] in this parish, as a person was plowing with oxen, one of the oxen faultered in a hole, which when the earth was removed from it, appeared like the tun of a chimney, through which several persons have been let down, where they found a cavity in which one might walk above half a mile one way, and it is not known how far the other; and as they walked with candles, candles, they observed several such tunnels ascending towards the surface of the earth.

It is not said what depth or what figure this cavity was of, particulars which might have given some light as to the use of it. Being on the spot, I was informed that the passage was from north-east to south-west, but the holes were all carefully stopt up to prevent accidents, so that I could not descend to view the place myself.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

The particulars of the manor and other estates are as follow.

In Domesday-book, under the head Terra Eccle' de Bade, it is express after this manner:

' The same church holds Escetone, in Polcere hundred. There are five hides, of which two are quit from geld, by the grant of king Edward and king William; but three are taxed. In demean is one plow-tillage, and three villeins, and three bordars, and one radchenister, having amongst them three plow-tillages. There is one colibert, and a mill of fifty pence, and six acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 4*l.* Domesday-book, p. 71.

The abbey of Bath continued to enjoy this manor 'till that house was dissolved; so that neither the Baskervilles, nor any other of those persons mentioned by sir Robert Atkyns as successive lords of it, from the beginning of his account down to the 24th year of king H. 8. had the least property here. The truth is, all that we find in that gentleman's history, concerning this manor, down to the thirty-ninth line of p. 229, relates to Aston Blank, sometimes also called Cold Aston, and was placed to this parish by mistake. This confusion of names led sir Robert into another mistake of the same nature, for in his list of clerks and patrons of this church, four of them belong to Aston Blank.

This manor, with the manor of Tatwick, and several woods in Hameswell, Tatwick, and Cold Aston, and the advowson of the church, were granted, after the dissolution of the abbey of Bath, to sir Walter Dennis, 32 H. 8.

John Stratford, esq; died seized of this manor 7 E. 6. and livery of it was granted to his son Henry Stratford, who soon afterwards conveyed it to Mr. Pipwell, mayor and alderman of Bristol, who died about the 15th year of queen Elizabeth; and his son Michael Pipwell had livery of the manor granted to him. John Pipwell, son of Michael, was lord of it in 1608, and sold it to Mr. Gunning, mayor and alderman of Bristol.

From him it descended to his son sir Robert Gunning, who dying without issue, it came to his sister and heir. She was married to sir Thomas Langton, mayor and alderman of Bristol, whose son Thomas Langton, esq; was lord of this manor in 1712.

William Whittington, esq; is the present proprietor, and has a seat here. He is descended from the Whittingtons of Pauntly, under which head are the arms and pedigree of that family.

H A M L E T. Hameswell is a hamlet in this parish, formerly belonging to the prior of Bath, who had free warren therein 5 E. 1. It was afterwards the property of the Pipwells, and is now the seat of Mr. Whittington, who has a good house there.

Turner's Court is a handsome old house, which had antiently a consecrated chapel, now converted to prophane uses. This seat formerly belonged to the Strouds, and by marriage became the property of Mr. Wyndham, of whom it was purchased by M. Gunning, the present proprietor.

The records shew that William Cheltenham was seized of lands in Abbot Eston 40 E. 3. Sir Robert Atkyns places this abstract under Abston, but I apprehend it should stand under this parish, the true name of which is Easton, and belonged to the abbat of Bath. The same author was also mistaken in representing Tatwick to be in this parish, whereas it is in that of Swanwick, in Somersetshire.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Hawkesbury. The priory of Bath formerly presented to it. It is a rectory, worth 120*l.* a year. Mr. Whittington is patron, Mr. Caswell the present incumbent. The glebe is above a hundred acres.

The church, which hath an aisle on the south side, and a low tower at the west end, is adorned with pinnacles and battlements. It has a flat roof, and was built by Thomas Key, rector thereof, and dean of Durham, who was buried in or near the chancel, where, on a brass plate against the wall, is the following inscription for him:

Egregius Rector Thomas cognomine Keius
Conditur hac celebri pertumulatus humo:
Qui totam hanc sacram propriis ex sumptibus Ædem
Construxit, summi motus Amore Dei.
Obsecro concedat tali pro munere sanctus
Trinus et unus ei celice Regne Deus.

The same person built the present parsonage house in 1509, but it has the appearance of greater antiquity. There is a confessionary in it, and it is said, seven of the friars belonging to the abbey resided there. Sir Bevil Granville, who was mortally wounded at the battle of Lansdown in the civil wars, was carried to the parsonage house of this place, and died there.

First Fruits, £.	17	1	7	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	—	1	14	Pentecostals, 0	0	0	1
Procurations, -	0	6	8

Benefaction.

There is a benefaction of 5*l.* a year, charged on the estate of William Whittington, esq; to support a school; of which charity Mr. Whittington and the minister are trustees.

Taxes

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 129 12 0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, — 30 15 0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, — 135 19 0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 102 10 0

About the year 1710, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 33 houses in this parish, and about 142 inhabitants, whereof 4 were freeholders; yearly births 4, burials 3. But upon examining the parish register, I find that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 both inclusive, there were registered 43 baptisms and 31 burials; and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, were 73 baptisms and 55 burials; and by actual numeration, there are now 38 houses and 213 inhabitants; so that the people are increasing in this parish, and the proportion of the living inhabitants to the average of yearly burials is nearly as 40 to 1.

ASTON SOMERVILE.

THIS parish lies in the lower part of the hundred of Kiftgate, four miles distant south from Evesham in Worcestershire; seven north from Winchcombe, and twenty-four north-east from Gloucester. It is situated in the vale, about two miles west from the Cotswold-hills above Buckland, with Hinton to the north-westward, Child's Wickham to the north-east, and Wormington to the southward of it.

Aston or Estune is a relative name, given to this place from its situation in the old hundred of Gretestan, and Somerville is the name of an antient proprietor of the manor, serving to distinguish the parish from two others of the same name, in this neighbourhood.

Serpentine-stones, Belemnites, petrifications of the nautilus, and of the cockle, with other fossil substances, are commonly plowed and dug up in the fields and other parts of the parish, of which Mr. Reynolds, the late rector, shewed me several curious specimens. And lately a salt-spring broke out here, which in future time may be worked to advantage, but as yet lies neglected. A brook running from this place falls into the Avon, at Hampton, near Evesham.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book are the following particulars: 'The same Hascoit [Mufard] holds Estune in Gretestan hundred. There are six hides taxed. Ernest held it. In demean are three plow-tillages, and twelve villeins with four plow-tillages, and nine servi and ancille. There is a mill of 8s. [value] and twenty acres of meadow. It was worth and is worth 6l.' Domesday-book, p. 78.

The records shew that sir John de Aston Somerville held the manor of Aston Somerville 35 H. 3. that this manor had obtained the name, and belonged to the family of Somerville soon after the Norman conquest.

Ralph Mufard held the manor of Eston, 1 E. 1. and Masculine Mufard, in trust for the abbat of Evesham, was seized of the manor of Aston Somerville, with the advowson of the church, 31 E. 1. But the manor soon reverted to the family who had been the former proprietors; for William Somerville, son of sir John Somerville, gave a hundred marks fine, and was admitted lord of the manor of Somerville Aston, with the advowson of the church, 5 E. 2. and his son sir William Somerville was seized of this manor 1 & 11 E. 3. They resided in a large house moated round, near the south side of the church, which has been long since demolished, and there are scarcely any traces of it remaining.

Sir John Somerville, son and heir of the last sir William, was succeeded by his son Robert, high sheriff of this county in the year 1401. Thomas Somerville, a descendant of Robert, married Joan, daughter and heir of John Alesbury, esq; of Edston in Warwickshire, and died 16 H. 7. and from that time the family resided in Warwickshire.

Robert Somerville, son of Thomas, married Mary, daughter of John Grevil, of Milcot, and dying 29 H. 8. was succeeded by his son John, who married Elizabeth, daughter of William Corbet; and dying 20 Eliz. was also succeeded by his son John Somerville, who was seduced by his confessor to kill queen Elizabeth, and condemned for the attempt, in the twenty-fifth year of that reign, but was found strangled in Newgate before the time appointed for his execution.

Sir William Somerville, brother to John, married Elizabeth, daughter of sir Humphry Ferrers, of Tamworth castle; and dying in 1616, this estate descended to his son sir William Somerville, who married Cicely, daughter and coheir of sir John Shirley, of Isfield in Suffex. He died in 1628, and was succeeded by his son and heir William Somerville, who married Anne, daughter of Robert lord viscount Tracy, of Todington. Robert Somerville was his son and successor, whose son William Somerville, esq; author of that well known and ingenious poem the Chase, sold the reversion of this estate to the late lord Somerville, who became possessed of it in the year 1742. His lordship dying in 1765, was succeeded in honour and estate by his eldest son, now lord Somerville, the present owner of this manor.

Sir Walter de Somerville, an ancestor of this family, was of Norman extract, and came to England with the Conqueror. Roger de Somerville was summoned as a baron to parliament, and died 1 E. 3. Sir Philip de Somerville, son of Roger, was obliged by tenure to give a fitch of bacon, in his hall at Wicknore in Staffordshire, to all who had been married a year, and would make oath that they had not repented of their marriage. He died 29 E. 3. and with him the barony was extinct.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Campden. It was worth 80*l.* a year. The glebe was forty acres; but in the year 1746, the rectory was considerably improved by inclosing the common fields and commonable places, when a rent-charge and a portion of land were set apart for the rector in lieu of tithes, by the common concurrence of the bishop, the lord of the manor, (the only freeholder) and the rector. It is valued at 9*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the king's books. Lord Somerville is patron, Mr. William Somerville is the present incumbent. It antiently belonged to the abbey of Evesham, whereby the demans of the manor paid no tithes; and there was a small impropriation, which belonged to the abbey of Winchcombe, granted to sir Thomas Seimour, 1 E. 6.

The church was rebuilt in 1688, with a tower at the west end, adorned with pinnacles and battlements, and had four bells in it; but three being split, were sold some time since, and a church-clock, and a small library of books for the use of the rector, purchased with the produce of them. Four small parcels of land were given to repair the church. In the chancel window are the Somerviles arms, Argent, on a fess between three annulets gules, as many leopards heads caboshed Or.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

On the south side of the old church was an aile, where the Somerviles had a burying-place, and there is now, in a niche on that side, a very antient figure, in stone, of a knight in armour, as large as life, representing one of that family, who lived about the time of king Edward the Third, as may be judged from the sculpture. This monument has been shamefully violated by the country people, who at sheep-shearing have been suffered to whet their knives and shears against old Somerville's nose, as they used to say, so that almost half the face is whetted away.

In the chancel is a memorial for John Parry, A. M. rector of the church fifty-four years, who died in 1714; and for his wife Rebecca, daughter of Thomas Fullwood, gent. of an antient family in Warwickshire. Over the tablet are their arms, Baron and femme, 1. Argent, a fess between three lozenges sable, for Parry. 2. A chevron between three mullets, for Fullwood.

First fruits, £.	9	3	4	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths,	—	0	18	Pentecostals,	0	0	7
Procurations,	0	6	8

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.	104	6	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694,	—	8	14	0
		Land-tax — — 1694,	—	54	3	0
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770,	—	38	19	9

According to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 12 houses and about 60 inhabitants, whereof 4 were freeholders, in this parish, when he compiled his account of it; yearly births 2, burials 1. But the parish register shews, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were 18 baptisms and 18 burials; and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there are entered 15 baptisms and 10 burials, besides five or six more from Clifford, and other places; and there are 51 inhabitants, so that population appears to be decreasing.

ASTON SUBEDGE.

THIS parish lies in the upper part of the hundred of Kiftsgate, six miles south-eastward from Evesham in Worcestershire, two north-westward from Campden, and thirty-one north-east from Gloucester. It derives its name from being situated east from the neighbouring parish of Weston, and lying under the edge of a hill adjoining to Campden. The parish consists chiefly of arable lands, which were much in common field, 'till about three years ago they were inclosed by act of parliament. It produces no remarkable plants nor fossils.

Mr. Endymion Porter, so much esteemed in the courts of king James and king Charles the First, was born in this parish, and died in the year 1654.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

' The church of St. Mary de Lanheie holds ' Estune in Celfedestorn hundred. Goda the ' countess held it in the time of king Edward. ' There are four hides. In demean are three ' plow-tillages, and six villeins, and one knight ' with three plow-tillages and a half. There are ' six servi and three ancilla. It was worth 100*s.* ' and is now worth 4*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 72.

Subsequent records shew that Margaret de Cormeiles held Eston and Begsoure, 10 H. 3.

Sir Richard Stafford died seized of the manor of Aston-under-edge, and of the advowson of the church, 4 R. 2. and Maud his widow was seized thereof, 1 H. 4. Edward earl of Stafford held Aston, 4 H. 4. Edward Stafford, bishop of Exeter, was seized of the manor of Ashton-under-edge, 7 H. 5.

Sir Christopher Savage died seized of this manor 4 H. 8. and was succeeded by Christopher his son and heir, whose son Francis Savage had livery of it, 37 H. 8.

The manor was in the crown in the year 1608 and was afterwards purchased by Richard Graves esq; and by him sold to William Morgan, one of the six clerks in chancery, who married the daughter of Richard Graves. Richard Morgan the grandson of the said William, by his will bearing date May 29, 1740, bequeathed this manor, and

^b The abstracts from Domesday-book placed by sir Robert Atkyns to this parish, certainly belong to Asbchurch. And what he says of Ralph Musard under this head, as well as under Aston Blank, should have been applied to Aston Somerville. other others in this county to Morgan Graves, of Mickleton, esq; whose son, Walwyn Graves, esq; is the present lord of the manor. See Mickleton.

The hundred court for the upper part of Kiftsgate hundred is held here by Mr. Graves, to whom the royalty of that extensive hundred descended with this manor. The common fines issuing out of each parish, specified in the grant of royalty, are paid by the lord to the crown.

Thomas Freeman and Joan his wife levied a fine of lands in Ashton-under-edge to Nicholas Cowley, 32 H. 6.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Campden, which was worth about 80*l.* a year; but is supposed to be much improved by the inclosing of the common fields a few years ago. It is valued in the king's books at 10*l.* 2*s.* 3½*d.* The reverend Mr. Feild is the present incumbent.

First fruits	£. 10	2	3½	Synodals	£. 0	1	0
Tenths	—	1	0	2	Pentecost.	0	0
Procurations	0	3	0

Benefaction.

Mr. Endymion Canning gave 20*l.* to the poor.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 67	0	0
		Poll-tax — 1694,	— 10	0	8
		Land-tax — 1694,	— 39	0	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770,	— 30	0	0

According to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 24 houses, and about 104 inhabitants, whereof 10 were freeholders, in this parish; yearly births 4, burials 3. But in the last particular his account is erroneous, for in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there are registered only 21 baptisms, and 7 burials. In the year 1751, there were 31 householders, and 80 inhabitants; but the lands are now let into four farms, which made seven before the inclosing, and at this time (1773) there are only 20 householders, and 63 inhabitants.

ASTON-UNDER-HILL, or ASHTON-UNDER-HILL.

ONE part of this parish lies in the hundred of Tibbleston, the other in the upper division of that of Tewkesbury. It is seven miles distant north-westward from Wichcombe, six north-east from Tewkesbury, five south from Evelham, and sixteen north-eastward from Gloucester.

It was antiently a member of the manor of Beckford, and was called Estone, (and by corruption Aston, and so in length of time deviating further from the true reading, Ashton) from its situation to the eastward of that place. The additional name has also a local meaning, too obvious to need an explanation.

The parish consists of a due proportion of pasture and arable land, with some wood-land. It hath lately been inclosed by act of parliament. Here is a spring of water pretty strongly impregnated with iron; but the parish produces no remarkable plants, and only a few fossils of the oyster and muscle kinds.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book, the account of this village stands under the title Terra Regis, and may be thus translated:

'Turbertus, a thane of earl Harold, held Estone in Tetboldestane hundred. There are eight hides, and four plow-tillages in demean, and ten villeins, and four bordars, with six plow-tillages. There are eight Jervi, and three ancilla. Of these two vills [i.e. Beceford and Estone] earl William made one manor, and they were not put to farm 'till Roger de Lurei let them for 30*l.* The same earl gave the tithe and the churches, with two villeins, and three virgates of land to the abbey of Cormeile.' D. B. p. 69.

Sir Robert Atkyns places here, by mistake, some abstracts from the early records concerning Aston Carant, in the parish of Ashchurch.

King Henry the Eighth granted this manor to sir Richard a Lee, who had two daughters co-heiresses, who made a partition of their estates; and the manor of Beckford, of which Aston was a part, was sold to sir Richard Franklyn and Edward Wakeman. Sir Thomas Glover having purchased Franklyn's estate in Ashton-under-hill, he, with Mr. Wakeman, took a fresh grant of the manor from the crown, in the reign of king James the First, and afterwards by deed, reserving to himself and his heirs certain manerial rights over his own lands, conveyed all other manerial rights over the residue of the manor, to Mr. Wakeman. Henry Wakeman, of Beckford, esq; a descendant of that Mr. Wakeman, is the present lord of the manor, from whose son I received this account of the descent of it. See Beckford.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Campden. It is an impropriation, annexed to Beckford. In the bishop's visitation-book it is stiled the chapel of Ashton, or Aston-under-hill. Joseph Biddle, M. A. is patron and incumbent. The impropriation pays 20*s.* a year to the crown.

The church hath a handsome tower, with pinnacles at the west end, and an aisle on the north side.

Benefaction.

Mr. Endymion Canning gave 20*l.* to the poor.

Taxes.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 57 16 0
		Poll-tax — 1694, — 4 0 0
		Land-tax — 1694, — 47 17 0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, — 35 18 0

A V E N I N G.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Longtree, It is three miles south from Hampton, three north from Tetbury, nine west from Cirencester, and fourteen south from Gloucester. A bourn runs through the middle of it, westward and north-westward, towards Horley and Woodchester, and so on 'till it falls into the Froome, or Stroud river, and is carried with it into the Severn. Hence the name of Avening, from Afonig, the British word for a bourn.

The parish consists chiefly of arable, with some wood lands and pasture ground. The clothing business furnishes employment for the lower class of the inhabitants.

Edward Sheppard, esq; has lately built a handsome house at Gatcombe in this parish, where he resides, and has a large estate, and a park, called Gatcombe-park, one part of which lies in this parish, and the other in Hampton.

The antiquities of this place consist of some tumuli, thrown up by the Danes or Saxons, or both, between whom there have certainly been various engagements hereabout, tho' history has not pointed out the precise spots where they happened. Two of those tumuli, called the Barrow Tumps, are not far from Mr. Sheppard's house, and I have been informed that an old sword was taken out of one of them, about twenty years ago. Two other tumuli, or barrows, lie on the road from this place to Hampton, with a stone placed on the top of each of them. The country people call them Long-stone, and Tangle-stone, and suppose them to bear the respective names of two generals who fell in battle in the Danish wars. They are undoubtedly monumental; the latter name seems to be no other than a corruption of Angle's-stone, i.e. the Englishman's stone, or monument; whilst that erected upon the other barrow obtained the present appellation on account of the form of it, and was probably a memorial for the Danish captain. But the reader will observe that Long-stone is in the parish of Hampton.

The timber-wood of this parish and neighbourhood is chiefly beech, intermixt with oak and ash. The beech wood is manufactured into gun-stocks, card-boards, and saddle-trees; and the refuse converted into charcoal, or used for common fire wood. But there is no scarce plant nor remarkable fossil found here.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

At the time of the general survey, soon after the Conquest, this manor belonged to the king, and accordingly in Domesday-book it stands under the title Terra Regis. It was a part of the large possessions of Brietric, who fell under the Conqueror's displeasure, as will be shewn more largely under Tewkesbury. After mentioning some other estates that formerly belonged to that unfortunate nobleman, it is expressed after this manner in the record:

'The same Brietric held Avening in Langetreu hundred: In the reign of king Edward there were ten hides, and eight plow-tillages in demean; and twenty-four villeins, and five bordars, and thirty servi, with sixteen plow-tillages. There were four mills of [the rent of] nineteen shillings and two-pence. The steward hath now added one mill of forty-pence. There is a wood two miles long, and half a mile broad. There is an hawk-aiery. It is worth 27*l.*' D. B. p. 69.

King William the First probably gave this manor to the nuns of the abbey of Caen in Normandy, not long after he gave them Hampton, for they were the antient proprietors of it, and enjoyed it 'till the suppression of alien monasteries, in the second year of the reign of king Henry the Fifth; after which it was given to the abbey of Sion, or Sheen in Middlesex, which was founded by that king for sixty nuns of the order of St. Bridget, thirteen priests, four deacons, and eight lay brethren. It was dedicated to St. Saviour, St. Mary, and St. Bridget, and was the richest nunnery in England, being valued at the dissolution at 1731*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* When king Henry the Seventh built his palace at Sheen, he gave it the name of Richmond, which it has retained ever since.

At the general dissolution of monasteries, Avening fell to the crown, and king Henry the Eighth, in the 34th year of his reign, granted it to Andrew lord Windsor, in exchange for the manor of Stanwell near Windsor, which had been in the family of the Windsors ever since the Norman conquest. Walter their ancestor assumed the name of Windsor on his being constituted constable of the castle of that place, in the reign of king Henry the First. William lord Windsor, son and heir of Andrew, had livery of this manor 35 H. 8. Thomas lord Windsor was proprietor of it in the year 1608. Thomas lord Windsor (grandson to the former by his eldest daughter married to Dixey Hickman) sold it to

Mr. Samuel Sheppard, who was succeeded by his son Philip Sheppard, of Hampton in this county, esq; from whom it descended to his son and heir Samuel Sheppard. Samuel Sheppard, son of the last Samuel, succeeded to this estate, whose son Samuel Sheppard, esq; dying in the year 1770, without male issue, this manor came to his only brother Edward Sheppard, esq; the present proprietor of it His arms are, Ermine, on a chief sable three battle axes argent.

As to other estates, the records shew, that John Hewet levied a fine of lands in Avening to William Webb, 1 E. 6. And some lands in Avening which belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, were granted granted by the crown to Daniel Pert and Alexander Pert, 7 E. 6. in trust for other persons.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Nailsworth, about a mile and a half westward from the church, is a populous tithing containing upwards of 60 houses. Catherine, the widow of Thomas Leach, was seized of the manor of Nailsworth 8 H. 5.

2. Aston, so called on account of its being situated eastward from the church, is a considerable estate, formerly for many generations belonging to a family of the name of Driver. It came afterwards to Richard Breresford, esq; and then by purchase to Mr. Matthew Sloper of Tetbury, who sold it to Thomas Estcourt of Shipton, esq; the present possessor.

Losmore farm is a reputed manor. It was granted by king Henry the Eighth to Andrew lord Windsor. William lord Windsor had livery of it, 35 H. 8. It came afterwards into the Driver family, then to Mr. Richard Breresford; and was purchased by the before-mentioned Mr. Sloper, whose executors are the present proprietors.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the deanery of Stonehouse, worth upwards of 200*l.* a year. There was formerly a chapel at Nailsworth, and another at Aston. Edward Sheppard esq; is patron, — Salusbury Heaton, A. M. the present incumbent. It is said in chancellor Parsons's survey of the diocese of Gloucester, (a manuscript in the Bodleyan library) that the rector pays 250*l.* to the patron, I suppose he means at his presentation, out of this matter I have had no further information. Eight acres of meadow and pasture, and 23 acres of arable land, with ten cottages, belong to the glebe.

The abbess of Caen in Normandy formerly presented to this church, as did the abbess of Sion in the year 1488.

The church stands on the side of a rising piece of ground. It is built in the form of a cross, with a low embattled tower in the middle, having five bells.

Dr. Frampton, rector of this church, was made bishop of Gloucester: and Dr. Bull, also rector of this church, was made bishop of St. David's.

First fruits, £	24	0	0	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tithings, —	2	8	0	Pentecostals, 0	1	3
Procurements, 0	6	8

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the chancel,

Here lieth the Bodye of William Bvshie Rector of the church Avening, who deceased the 1 of December Anno Dn. 1600.

Here resteth the body of William Hall, rector of this church, who departed this life y^e 9th day of Nov. 1683 Æt: 74.

Within the rails of the communion table,

Johannes Swynsen, Staffordiensis, Sacræ Theologiæ Baccalarius, hujus Ecclesiæ ob viginti et duos Annos Rector, Nat. Aug. 15, 1654. Denat. Apr. 29, 1728.

On the same stone is a memorial for Elizabeth his reliēt, who died Apr. 4, 1752, in her 82d year.

On a flat stone, at the top, Party per chevron sable and ermine, in chief two boars heads couped Or. and under, this inscription:

Here lyeth the body of SAMUEL SANDFORD late of London, Merchant, who departed this life the ninth day of April, Anno Dom. 1710, in the sixty eighth year of his age.

Against the south wall of the chancel, a scutcheon, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent, a chevron between three mullets sable. 2d and 3d, Gyronny of six pieces, Or and sable, upon the first, three heads couped of the second. Under, on a marble table, this inscription:

Id quod morti cessit Roberti Browne Pharmacopœi, de Oppido Stroud in agro Glocestriensi, juxta exuvias Elizabethæ matris, Thomæ fratris, Chirurgi, Elizabethæ Clementis fororis, Gulielmi Hall A. M. Avunculi, subtus jacet depositum. Die quinto Julii anno ætatis 59^o, ære Christianæ 1739^o, Animam in manus Dei efflavit.

On the north side, a small marble monument for George Fletcher, clothier, who died Apr. 6, 1762.

Against the wall, on a scutcheon, Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Party per pale indented argent and azure, two lions rampant combatant, counter-changed, for Driver. 2. Argent, a chevron ingraited sable, between three crabs gules, and under, the following inscription:

To the happy Memory of John Driver Gent. who deceased June the 12th 1681, in the 85th year of his age. And also Elizabeth his wife, who deceased Janu. 28th A^o Dni 1675, aged 73 years, they having lived together 52 years. Resurrectionem expectantes gloriosam.

On another monument against the wall, the arms of Driver, and this inscription:

Carolus filius natu maximus Iohannis Driver Gent. obiit xx^o die Januarij Anno Domini 1636, Ætat. 5^o.

Matheus ejusdem Iohannis natu secundus, olim Colleg. Omnium Animarum in Oxon Socius, postea Conciliarius ad legem, obiit xxviii die Januarij Anno Dom. 1661, Ætat. 27. Resurrectionem corporum expectamus gloriosam.

In the south aisle, (which belonged to the Driver family) under an arch, the effigy of a man, at top these arms, Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Driver, as before. 2. Party per chevron, argent and gules, a crescent counterchanged, for Chapman. Under, on a table, this inscription:

M. S. Iohannis Driver Gen. Iohannis Filij tertij, qui, mortuis Carolo et Mattheo fratribus, in paterna hæreditate satis ampla, (sine cujuiquam invidia) successit. Vir omnibus quibus notus erat desideratissimus, utpote Philoxenos Philagathos, nemini inimicus, amicus amicissimus, demum in pauperes et egenos beneficentiæ exemplar illustrissimum. Obijt nonis Januarij A. D. MDCLXXXVII, Ætatis LI. Beati misericordes quoniam ipsi misericordiam consequentur.

Under the effigy it is thus written:

Hoc monumentum in honorem conjugis optimi de se meriti, suiq; immortalis in ipsum amoris qualescunque testimonium, propriis sumptibus erexit Elizabetha vidua.

In the north aisle or chapel is the figure of a man in freestone, in a kneeling posture. Over his head, in a scutcheon, Argent, on a cross sable a leopard's head caboshed Or, for Brydges, and under the figure this inscription:

Here lyeth the Body of Henry Brydgis Esquier, sonn to John Lord Chavndos Baron of Shevdeley, who departed this Life the 24 day of Iannvari Anno Dom. 1615.

Against the wall, the arms of Sandford, already blazoned, and this inscription :

In Memory of Sarah the wife of William Sandford of Stonehouse, Gent. and daughter of Samuel Adams of this parish, Cloth^r. who died the 17th of February Anno Dom. 1722. She gave by consent of her husband the houses, garden, orchard, and a piece of pasture ground adjoining, lying and being in this parish, at a place called the Cross, then in the tenure and possession of one John Harris, who doe hold it by Lease for three lives, paying yearly twenty shillings due at Christmas. And after that lease shall be expired, then the full profits for ever to be apply'd towards the education of poor children belonging to this tithing of Avening, as directed by deede of trust left with her husband.

Against the wall, in a scutcheon, Gules, a cross Or, in the dexter canton an eagle display'd of the second. Under, on a table, this inscription :

In memory of Richard Webb of this parish Clothier, who died Aug. 16, 1712, aged 78. Also of Richard his son who died June 11, 1748, aged 60 years.

Benefactions.

John Driver, esq; of Aston, gave the interest of 50*l.* for ever to bind out poor children apprentices.

Mrs. Elizabeth Coxe gave the interest of 150*l.* for ever, to be thus apply'd, viz. the interest of 100*l.* to bind out poor children apprentices, and the interest of 50*l.* to teach poor children to read, and to provide books for them.

Mr. Ambrose Webb gave the interest of 4*l.* and Mr. Burge of Aston, the interest of 2*l.* to be distributed in small bread every Christmas.

Mr. Samuel Sandford, late of London, gave the interest of 200*l.* for ever, to teach six poor boys to read their primer, and say the catechism, when they are to be cloathed and put away, and to be constantly succeeded by six others.

Mr. Richard Cambridge, of London, merchant, gave the interest of 20*l.* to be annually distributed among the poor of that part of Nailsworth which lies in this parish.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	128	11	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	48	16	0
		Land-tax — - 1694, —	180	5	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	138	19	9

Sir Robert Atkyns, whose History of Gloucestershire was published in the year 1712, reckons 160 houses, and about 600 inhabitants in this parish, and sets down the yearly births at 16, and the burials at 15; but it appears by the parish register, that in a series of ten years, from 1706 to 1715, there were 179 baptisms and 127 burials; and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were register'd 241 baptisms and 214 burials; and reckoning the proportion of the number of living inhabitants to the number of annual burials, as 40 to 1, which will be found to be a moderate computation in healthy situations, the whole number of souls in this parish will then be 856. But this account, drawn from the parish register, falls short of the true number of births and burials, for there are three dissenting meeting-houses in the parish and neighbourhood, at which some of the inhabitants are buried, and at two of them there is administration of baptism. From these circumstances it appears that population is greatly increased here since the beginning of the last century.

A W R E.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Blidestoe, in the forest division, situate on the north-west bank of the Severn; four miles south-westward from Newnham, seven southward from Mitchel-Dean, and sixteen south-westward from Gloucester. It is about four miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth, consisting of arable, pasture, and some woodland. A rivulet separates it on one side from Newnham, and Linch-brook divides it on the other from the parish of Lidney. It lies in the upper level.

The soil in many places is of a reddish yellow, which gave occasion to the name, for Aure in the British language signifies yellow.

At this place the Severn is above two miles over, tho' a little higher not more than half so wide. Opposite the church, lies the bar of sands called the Noose, which formerly rendered the navigation so difficult, that nobody durst attempt it without a pilot. Upon the tide's first approach to these sands, it foams and makes a hideous noise. The air is not very good, because of the frequent irruption of the tides, which have sometimes flowed over the sea-wall three feet perpendicular.

There is a common near the river, called the Old Warth, above a mile long, and about half a mile broad.

This is an antient village, formerly much more considerable than at present, for tradition will have it that there was once a large town of the name of Pomerton within it, of which there is scarce any thing left but the name. Domejday-book mentions Pontune and Peritone, in Blitellau hundred, to which it is said earl William joined the manor of Nest. Now as Pirton and Nafs are contiguous to this parish, it seems not unlikely that Pontune was situated near them, and was very probably the same with the above desolated town of Pomerton, with only a little variation in the name; but more of this matter under the tithing of Blakeney.

Thomas Sternhold, who verified some of the Psalms, was a native of this place. It is said that his posterity turned papists.

The names of Adeane, Bathern, Keddick, and Berkin are of great antiquity in this neighbourhood.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Awre was part of the antient demesnes of the crown. Domejday-book furnishes the following particulars :

wre.]

King Edward held Aure in Bliteslau hundred. There are five hides, and in demean one plow-tillage, and twelve villeins, and eight bordars, with fourteen plow-tillages. There is one servus, and a mill of 30*d.* and a salt-work of [the rent of] thirty seams of salt, and a church with one yard-land.

This manor paid half a night's farm in the time of king Edward, and it does the same now.

Half a hide of this manor lies waste, and so pays only 12*l.* to the sheriff, but nevertheless it pays all the farm.

There are three members separated from the manor, which were, and ought always to be within it, as the men of the county say, i. e. Peritone, Eteslau, Bliteslau. In these are seven hides, and in demean one plow-tillage, and twenty villeins, and three bordars, with thirteen plow-tillages, and two servi, and a fishery.

Peritone is in fee to earl William. Roger de Berchelai holds Etelau. William the son of Baderon holds Bliteslau. Aluui the sheriff put these out of farm.' Domesday-book, p. 67.

It appears by an inquisition 4 E. 1. that the manor of Aure was in the crown in the reign of king Henry the First. But there have been several distinct manors in this parish, of the same name, otherwise the records are contradictory. Henry de Bohun held Awre 1 John, and released all his right therein to the king.

In the fifth year of the same reign, Walter de Awre had a grant of the manor of Awre for his life. This family took their name from the place, and continued possessed of a manor here 'till the end of the reign of Edward the Third.

Yet other records shew, that William earl of Salisbury was seized of Awre 3 H. 3.

Richard Marshal earl of Pembroke had a grant of the inheritance of the hundred of Awre 17 H. 3. by which it should seem that this place gave name to a hundred, nevertheless I suppose it to have been no other than the hundred of Blideslow, which was a member of the manor of Awre.

Philip Baderon was seized of Awre 6 E. 1. and of one yard-land in Awre 15 E. 1. and of one messuage and thirty acres of land 30 E. 1. John Baderon was seized of Awre, and of a fishery in the Severn, 6 E. 3.

In obedience to the king's writ, the sheriff of Gloucestershire returned, that Thomas Berkeley, son Maurice Berkeley, and Margaret Mortimer had the lordship of Awre, 9 E. 1. Roger de Mortimer earl of March died seized of Awre 1 E. 1. William de Valentia, and Joan his wife, and Maud de Mortimer were seized of the manor of Awre, and of the hundred of Blideslowe, with return of writs, 15 E. 1. And their right was then allowed in a writ of Quo warranto. Upon the death of Maud de Mortimer, 29 E. 1. her estate in the manor descended to Edmond, son and heir of earl Roger her husband; but he did not enjoy it long, for he died of a wound given him in battle against the Welch, 31 E. 1. whereupon Margaret his widow, a Spanish lady, near kinswoman to queen Elianor, was seized of Awre.

Sir Maurice, son of Thomas de Berkeley, held the manor of Awre, with its members, Etlowe and Blakeney, and the hundred of Blideslow, 42 E. 3. and Elizabeth the widow of sir Maurice Berkeley, was seized of all those particulars, 13 R. 2. Sir Thomas de Berkeley, and Margaret his wife, were seized of them 5 H. 5. And Richard de Beauchamp earl of Warwick, in right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas lord Berkeley, died seized of Awre, Etloe, Blakeney, and the hundred of Blidesloe, 17 H. 6. leaving three daughters, of whom Elizabeth was married to George Neville lord Latimer, and carried this manor into that family. Richard Neville lord Latimer died seized of the manor of Awre and Purton 22 H. 8. and his son John lord Latimer had livery thereof the same year.

Sir Edward Wintour was lord of the manor of Awre in the year 1608.

Sir Thomas Rich, of Sunning in the county of Berks, baronet, among other things, gave 6000*l.* to the corporation of Gloucester in trust, to be laid out in lands, for the endowment and support of the blue-coat hospital in that city; with which money they purchased the manor of Awre and Blakeney, worth about 200*l.* a year. See p. 198. The corporation are the present lords of this manor, and hold court leet here.

Of the other estates the records shew, that Walter de Awre held one yard-land and six acres in Awre, and a meadow called Hundins, and one yard-land called Haworth, 5 John. Robert de Awre held one messuage and one yard-land in Awre 19 E. 2.

Robert Badderon was seized of a fishery in Awre 36 E. 3.

John Sabin and others, for the abbey of Flaxley, were seized of one messuage, two plow-tillages, and a yearly rent of 100*s.* in Awre 10 R. 2.

Robert Badderon was seized of a tenement called Handomere in Awre 3 H. 4.

John Berew levied a fine of lands in Awre, Etloc, Blakeney, and St. Briavel's, and of a fishery in Severn, to sir Alexander Baynham and others, 10 H. 7. Lands formerly belonging to the abbey of Flaxley, of the value of 4*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* a year, were granted, by the name of the manor of Newnham, Awre, and Poulton, to sir Anthony Kingston 36 H. 8. of which grant I have a copy. Edward Berew died seized of lands in Awre, Etloe, Blakeney, Gatcomb, and Poulton, and of a woodwardship in the forest of Dean, 12 Eliz. and was succeeded by James his son.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Hagloe is a tithing, about a mile from the church, not mentioned in Domesday-book.

2. Blideslow, or Bliteslau, is another distinct tithing, which gives name to the hundred. It appears appears by Domesday-book, that this was a member of the manor of Awre at the time of the general survey, and that it was then in the tenure of William the son of Baderon.

John Tiptot earl of Worcester was seized of Blideslow, 9 & 10 H. 6. He married Elizabeth, the only daughter of Robert Grender, lord of the manor of Abbenhall, in this county; which Robert Grender was seized of Blideslow 22 H. 6. and his daughter the countess of Worcester was also seized thereof 31 H. 6. After whom, this estate descended, like Abbenhall, to John Grender, and was carried by his daughter in marriage into the family of Walwyn. Thomas Baynham of Clowerwall marrying the heiress of the Walwyns, became possessed of this estate; and their son sir Christopher Baynham died seized of it 32 H. 8. and was succeeded by his son sir George Baynham, whose son Christopher died seized of the manor of Blideslow 5 Mariæ. Richard Baynham, his brother, had livery of it the same year; and Thomas Baynham, son of Christopher, had also livery of this manor granted to him 16 Eliz. The Baynhams had antiently a seat here, which has long since been converted to a farm house. This is a reputed manor, belonging to Mr. Robert Boy.

3. Etloe, or Eteslau, lying more than two miles from the church. It is now a distinct tithing, and is mentioned in the abstract from Domesday-book, at the beginning of the account of this parish, to be then a member of the manor of Awre. Patrick de Chaworth was seized of Etloe, which, according to sir William Dugdale, was part of the barony of Kennesford, 11 E. 1. His daughter Maud was married to Henry, nephew to king Edward the First, afterwards earl of Lancaster. Henry his son succeeded him, and was afterwards created duke of Lancaster. Richard Mortyn levied a fine of the manor of Etloe, and of other lands belonging to the duchy of Lancaster, to the king, 15 E. 4. to the use of Richard Mortyn for one month, the remainder to Elizabeth the queen, to the archbishop of Canterbury, and others. This manor was granted in trust to the archbishop of Canterbury, and other great persons, 3 H. 5. Etloe-duchy is a reputed manor, the property of Charles Barrow, esq.

The tithings of Blideslow, Etloe, and Hagloe, (antiently written Bliteslau, &c.) were probably so called from the antient barrows in those tithings. It was usual with the Romans, and with the northern nations after their example, to raise heaps of earth over the corps of those that were slain in the field, when every soldier brought his turf, or turfs, to be placed together in the form of a little hill, as a memorial for the defunct. Those tumuli, in different parts, have obtained different names, as barrows, and lawes, loes, or lows. The latter names are supposed to be derived from the old British word Llebau, which Dr. John Davis explains by locare, collocare: So that lau signifies a little hill made by art, and it is said by sir William Dugdale, in his Antiquities of Warwickshire, that it is used in the same sense by the Scots at this day.

4. Blakeney, a distinct tithing, lying more than two miles from the church. No mention is made of it in Domesday-book, but it is now become the most considerable tithing in the parish, containing above fifty families. The earliest period in which this place is mentioned in the records is 8 R. 2. when Elianor de Haresfield was seized of one messuage and one plow-tillage in Blakeney. This hamlet has two yearly fairs, originally fixed on May-day and All-saints-day, for horned cattle and hogs; but since the alteration of the style, those fairs are kept on the twelfth day of April, and the twelfth day of November. This place is distinguish'd in some maps and topographical books as a market-town, whose market is kept on wednesdays, but at present it has none. The inhabitants of the tithing maintain two bridges over a trout-river, which runs from this place into the Severn at Bream's-pill, where pentagonal stones are found. It is probable that from these bridges Pontune took its name. And why may not that Pontune or Pomerton be the same place which is now called Blakeney, especially as there is no hamlet of the name of Pontune or Pomerton in the parish or neighbourhood; and there are many instances of places losing, by disuse their antient names, and taking others in their room; thus, the antient name of Miserden was Grenhamstede, the present Batsford was Bece shore, and the name of Strigoil gave place to that of Chepstow.

At Blakeney is a chapel of ease, of which the particulars will be given under the account of the church of Awre, on which it is dependant.

5. Hayes is a reputed manor, the property of Mr. Savage.

6. Gatcombe is a place in this parish, situate on a little cove of the river Severn. A small sloop is fitted out for the Irish trade, and some small craft, are fitted out from, and belong to this place, which is said to have been heretofore a port of considerable trade; but I confess, there seems to be little ground for such a notion.

7. Poulton-court is a reputed manor in this parish. Sir Robert Atkyns observes, that Adeliza l'Isle, widow of Reginald de Dunstanville, gave the lordship of Poulton to the abbey of Tewkesbury, in the reign of king H. 1. but I apprehend this is to be understood of some other place than the name of Poulton; for the records shew that John de Willington held Poulton 12 E. 3. with several other estates in this county, particularly Frampton Cotterel, to which head the reader is referred for an account of the descent of this manor, which acknowledged the same proprietor with Frampton down to 20 H. 7. It was afterwards granted to Edward duke of Somerset, upon whose attainder it reverted to the crown. Another grant was made of it to William Bridgman, Rich

Richard Wilson, 5 Mariæ. And within a few years since, it was the property of Samuel Blackwell, esq; who, about the year 1766, sold it to Mr. James Thomas, of Oatfield, the present proprietor. Sir William Poulton seems to have taken his name from this place, whose estate it was in the reign of king Henry the Fourth, by the marriage of an heiress of the family of Wrath, descended by the female line from the Willingtons. Here was antiently a chapel, long since demolished.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the Forest deanery, worth 120*l.* a year, in the gift of the company of haberdashers in London, but valued in the king's books at 10*l.* 5*s.*

Edmund de Mortimer and Margaret his wife were seized of the advowson of Awre 32 E. 1. One of the lords of Berkeley gave the advowson to the priory of Lanthony, and the monks of that house procured the tithes to be appropriated. The rectory of Awre and Purton, with certain tithes and fisheries in the Severn, late belonging to that priory, were granted to Thomas James, in trust for Thomas Erskyn, viscount Fenton, 5 Jac.

Mr. Hammond, who was of the company of haberdashers, purchased the great tithes, which pay 13*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.* to the crown, and divided them between the vicarage of Awre and the curacy of Blakeney. The vicar of Awre has the vicarial tithes of both. Mr. John Sargeaunt is the present incumbent. The chancel of Awre is kept in repair out of the great tithes.

The minister of Blakeney is styled the chaplain or assistant preacher at the chapel of Blakeney. There is no house for the minister, nor any chapel-yard at Blakeney. By Mr. Hammond's will both the ministers must reside, and not be at any time absent more than forty days.

The church of Awre is a large double building, supported by pillars in the middle, with a handsome embattled tower at the west end. It is dedicated to St. Andrew; but the chapel at Blakeney is dedicated to All Saints.

Two tenements in Awre, and a small parcel of land near the Severn, are given towards the repair of the church. The church house is assigned to the use of the poor.

First fruits, l. 10	10	0	Synodals, l. 0	2	0
Tithes, —	1	1	Pentecostals, 0	1	4
Procurations, 0	6	8

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l. 224	12	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, — 63	12	0
	Land-tax — — 1694, — 232	8	0
	The same, at 3 s. — 1770, — 171	3	0

According to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 139 houses and about 700 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 44 were freeholders; yearly births 20, burials 19. But his numbers are too high. In a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there are registered 163 baptisms, and 173 burials.

In a like series, from 1760 to 1769, the baptisms are 247, and burials 236; whence it appears that the inhabitants have increased since the beginning of this century, notwithstanding the burials exceed the baptisms in the first series, occasioned by a great mortality in the year 1700. If we reckon the number of living inhabitants to bear a proportion to the annual burials, as 32 to 1, making allowance for the less healthy situation of this parish on the banks of the Severn, the present number of inhabitants will be 755.

B A D G W O R T H.

THIS parish is situated in the vale, in the hundred of Dudston and King's-barton, three miles south-westward from Cheltenham, twelve south from Tewkesbury, and seven north-eastward from Gloucester. The greatest part of the parish is fine rich pasture ground, and the rest very good arable land; but there are no remarkable vegetables nor fossils, except a few petrifications of the bivalve kind, and of the echinus marinus, or sea-hedge-hog.

There is a spring of mineral water at a place called Cold Pool, in the hamlet of Badgworth, the properties of which are nearly the same with those of Cheltenham water.

It is also worthy observation, amongst the great works of nature, that in the year 1772, Priscilla the wife of Thomas Bullock, the parish clerk, was delivered of three boys, who are all living.

From the hill above Crickley, in this parish, is a most beautiful and extensive prospect over the vale, not to be equalled in many parts of this kingdom.

As to the etymology of the name of this parish, whether we consider the antient or modern way of writing it, there can be little certainty concerning it. It is conjectured, that the former part of the name carries in it that of some antient proprietor; the latter part hath been already explained under Aldsworth.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

From Domesday-book we learn the following particulars:

' The same William [i. e. William de Owe] holds Beiewrde in Dudestanes hundred. Aelftan held it. There are eight hides. In demean are six plow-tillages, and twenty villeins, and fourteen bordars, with twenty-four plow-tillages. There are seventeen servi, and a mill of 12*d.* [rent.] a wood two miles long and one broad. It was worth 15*l.* and is now worth 13*l.*'

Domesday-book, p. 73.

This William de Owe, or de Ewe, was earl of Ewe, in Normandy, and was rewarded by king William, with one hundred and fifteen manors in several parts of the kingdom, of which, eleven were in Gloucestershire, as may be seen by turning to the above page of this book. He took up arms against William the Second, in behalf of Robert Curthoise, the king's elder brother, and very much ravaged Gloucestershire; but was gained over to the king by large promises, and again proved treacherous to him. He was afterwards taken, and demanding to justify himself in a duel, was vanquished, and imprisoned at Salisbury, where he was castrated, and had his eyes put out, 9 W. 2. and all his estates were seized by the crown. He was accused of treason before the constable and marshal of England, before whom the court of Chivalry was held. In this court, judgment was always given against the vanquish'd, whether appellant or defendant; for according to the law of arms, the accuser being overcome, incurred the same punishment that the defendant ought to have done, if he had been vanquished.

It is to be observed, that trial by duel was introduced here by the conqueror, and remained long after the reign of Henry the Third; yet this, as well as ordeal, was forbidden by the popes. The people were led to appeal to the fiery trial and the test of arms, by the same absurd notion which obtained in the dark ages that produced them, that divine providence would miraculously interpose in favour of innocence. Thus duelling, in certain cases relative to war, became a due process of law, and by degrees came into use to terminate little disputes of every nature. And notwithstanding this barbarous practice hath been long since forbidden by our laws, and condemned upon the principles of religion, morality, and good policy; yet, to the opprobrium of the British nation, it prevails at this day as much as ever. A detestation of this foolish, this wicked practice, hath carried me out of my line; but I return.

This manor was afterwards granted to Gilbert Marshal, who was so called from his exercising the office of marshal to the king. To him succeeded John his son, who had likewise John his son and heir, who dying without issue in the last year of king Richard the First, was succeeded by his brother William earl of Pembroke, and hereditary marshal. He died 3 H. 3. and was survived by Isabel his wife, the daughter and heiress of Richard earl of Strigul or Strigoil, now called Chepstow; she had the manor of Badgworth in dower 3 H. 3. which, at her decease, descended successively to William, Richard, Gilbert, Walter, and Anselm, sons of William earl of Pembroke, who all dying without issue, left five sisters their heiresses; Maud, married to Hugh Bigod earl of Norfolk, and afterwards to John de Warren earl of Surry; Joan, the second daughter, married to Warin de Monchenfy; Isabel, the third daughter, married to Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester, and afterwards to Richard earl of Cornwall; Sibil, the fourth daughter, married to William de Ferrers earl of Derby; and Eve, the fifth and youngest daughter, was married to William de Braose.

The manor being divided among so many heiresses will account for the great variety of owners at the same time, who, notwithstanding they are generally said in the records to hold Badgworth, were seized of a part of it only.

Thus the records shew, that Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hertford held it 8 E. 2.

Hugh de Audley the elder was seized of it in the same reign, but taking part with the barons against the king to expel the Spencers, was imprisoned, and his lands seized, and this manor was granted to Hugh le Despencer the younger 15 E. 2. but Isolda, the widow of Hugh de Audley, was restored to the lands of her husband 1 E. 3. Hugh de Audley earl of Gloucester, and Margaret his wife were seized thereof 21 E. 3. as was sir James de Audley, 9 R. 2. Sir Nicholas lord Audley died seized of a fourth part of the manor of Badgworth, 15 R. 2. John lord Audley died seized of one share of this manor 10 H. 4. John, the son of sir James Audley had livery of it 23 H. 5.

John Giffard of Brimpsfield, in right of Maud de Long Espee his wife, was seized of the manor of Badgworth, and obtained free warren therein 9 E. 1. He left two daughters his heiresses, of whom, Elianor was married to — le Strange, descended from Guy, son of the duke of Britain, who came into England in the reign of king Henry the First, and obtained the name of Le-Strange because he was a stranger. John le Strange, son of — le Strange, was seized of a moiety of the manor of Badgworth, in right of his mother, 23 E. 3. and was succeeded by Fulk his eldest son, who left this estate to his brother John, who was also succeeded by Elizabeth his daughter and heir, married to Thomas Mowbray earl of Nottingham; after whose death, this moiety went to Ankaret her aunt and heir, daughter to John lord Strange of Blackmere, who was then married to sir Richard Talbot; which sir Richard had livery of all the lands that descended to her, 7 R. 2.^b Gilbert Talbot died seized of it 7 H. 5.

John Troutbeck and Margaret his wife levied a fine of a moiety of a moiety of Badgworth, to the use of themselves in tail, the remainder to the heirs of Margaret, 23 H. 6. and sir William Troutbeck held it in the thirty-eighth year of the same reign.

John earl of Shrewsbury was seized of this manor 38 H. 6. and of the same and of Hunt-house 13 E. 4. Catherine countess of Shrewsbury was seized in dower of a moiety of the manor of Badgworth, and of a messuage called Hunt-thorns, 15 E. 4. Livery of this manor was granted to John Talbot and Margaret his wife, daughter of Adam Troutbeck of Mobberley in Cheshire, and cousin and heir of sir William Troutbeck, 3 H. 5. and John Talbot had also livery of it 7 Eliz.

Other records shew, that John Musgrove was seized of this manor 3 E. 1. and that John Calew levied a fine of lands in Badgworth to the use of ^b Rot. Fin. 7 R. 2. m. 26.

^c Eich. 7 H. 5. n. 68.

John Maltravers the younger, 4 E. 3. and fir John Maltravers held this estate 38 E. 3. I apprehend these records relate to Little Shurdington in Badgworth, which came afterwards to the Arundels, as did several other estates in this county held by the Musgroves in the reign of king H. 3. and the three first Edwards.

John lord Chandos died seized of Badgworth 4 Mariae; and it appears by the escheator's inquisition, that Edmund lord Chandos died seized of Badgworth, and of the grange and tenements in Badgworth called Crippits, worth 34*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* ob. per ann. 15 Eliz. and that Giles Bridges his son had livery thereof the same year.

Mr. Gwinnet was lord of the manor of Badgworth in the year 1712. Mrs. Chester is the present proprietor. See Almondsbury.

HAMLETS, &c. 1. Badgworth, where the church stands, consists of 20 houses and 113 inhabitants.

2. Little Shurdington, above a mile from the church, is a hamlet of 13 houses and 106 inhabitants. Roger Maltravers was seized of Little Shurdington in the manor of Badgworth, 25 E. 3. as was John Arundel of Arundel 9 H. 5. and John Fitz-Alan earl of Arundel was seized thereof 13 H. 6. It is now the property of Robert Lawrence, esq; who has an elegant seat called the Greenway, in this hamlet, and a fine estate of rich pasture land round it. His arms are, Argent, a cross raguly gules.

Mr. Edwards has also a good house and estate here.

3. Bentham, is a large hamlet, consisting of 8 houses and 160 inhabitants, near two miles from the church. Fulk Fitz-Warren held lands in Bentham of Thomas lord Berkeley of Brimpsfield, by the service of carrying a horn in Brimpsfield park, between the feasts of the Assumption and the nativity of the blessed Virgin, whenever the king should hunt there, 23 E. 3. Fulk Fitz-Warren was also seized of this manor 1, 6, and 15 R. 2. which manor was held of Hugh, Thomas, and William, successive earls of Stafford, by the fifth part of a knight's fee, 10, 16 & 22 R. 2. Edward earl of Stafford was seized of the manor of Bentham 4 H. 4. and Fulk Fitz-Warren was seized of the same 9 H. 4. Fulk Fitz-Warren also held this manor, with divers knight's-fee thereto belonging, 8 H. 5. Sir John Berkeley held forty acres in Bentham 6 H. 6. Maurice Berkeley of Beverstone was seized of the manor of Bentham 38 & 39 H. 6. and 14 E. 4.

Hunt's-court is a capital messuage in this hamlet. Richard Haukeford and Anne his wife were seized of Hunt-court in Bentham 9 H. 6. and Elizabeth, one of his daughters and coheirs, was seized of the same 12 H. 6. A fine was levied of the manor of Bentham called Hunt-court, to the use of William Bircher and Thomasia his wife, and to the heirs of their bodies, the remainder to the right heirs of William, 21 H. 6. Livery of the manor of Hunt's-Court was granted to William earl of Bath 20 Eliz. Mr Hinson was the proprietor of it about the beginning of this century; it was afterwards sold to Charles Hyett, of Gloucester, esq; whose second son Nicholas Hyett, esq; is the present owner of it. His arms are, Argent, a lion rampant sable, a chief of the last surmounted by another indented of the first.

4. Little Witcombe, containing 24 houses and 117 inhabitants.

5. Crickley, is the name of an estate belonging to William Prinne, of Charlton, esq; where was formerly a good house, now occupied by the tenant of the farm.

6. Part of Great Shurdington, containing 11 houses, and 53 inhabitants. Mrs. Chester has a good house and fine estate here; and Thomas Randell, esq; has also a neat house here.

7. Buckland's-place, is an estate which Richard Buckland granted to John Cook, alderman of Gloucester, 3 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Winchcombe, worth about 80*l.* a year. The manor of Badgworth, with the rectory and advowson of the vicarage, belonged to the nunnery of Usk in Monmouthshire, and were granted to James Gunter and Walter Lewis 37 H. 8. Other tithes in Badgworth, belonging also to the same nunnery, were granted to — Bergavenny, 34 H. 8. and again others were granted to John Fernham, 22 Eliz. That nunnery, at the dissolution, was valued at 69*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* The priory of Chepstow, for black monks of the Cluniac order, had tithes and rents in Badgworth 7 R. 2.

The glebe-lands, formerly belonging to the nunnery of Usk, are divided between Mrs. Tracy, daughter and heiress of the late sir William Dodwell, and Mr. Burroughs; 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* a year is paid out of them to the crown.

Jesus College in Oxford hath the greatest part of the impropriation, worth 130*l.* a year, for the maintenance of a school at Abergavenny. The college pays 16*l.* a year out of it to Christ College in Cambridge, in lieu of tithes belonging to them. The rector of Oddington receives 5*l.* a year for great tithes in Great Shurdington. Mrs. Tracy is patroness, the reverend Mr. John Baghot Delabere the present incumbent. The chapel of Shurdington is annexed to this church.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It hath a neat embattled tower at the west end, sixty-nine feet high, with six excellent bells in it, and a chapel on the north side, dedicated to St. Margaret, who, according to the legends, was of noble birth, and being compelled by her parents to marry, escaped from her husband on the wedding night, in man's apparel, became a monk, and afterwards, by order of the monastery, was made governor vernor of a nunnery; one of the nuns of which place proving with child, it was concluded that St. Pelagius (for so St. Margaret called herself) was the father. Upon this she was immured, and did not discover herself 'till just expiring, and after her death was found to be a chaste virgin of the female sex.

First Fruits, £. 20 11 3 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
Tenths, — — 2 1 1 Pentecostals, 0 1 0
Procurations, - 0 6 8

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome monument in the church, with the following memorial:

Near this place is interr'd George Gwinnet Gough, who departed this life the 27th day of May, 1756, descended on his father's side from an ancient family of the Gwinnets in North-Wales, who came to settle in this parish in the beginning of the reign of queen Elizabeth.

His afflicted mother, daughter of Jeremy Gough, of London, esq; erected this monument in memory of her most beloved and truly worthy son.

There is also another handsome monument, whereon is inscribed,

READER! Let this marble be a monitor to the Living, as well as a memorial of the Dead: And when thou readest the name of LYTTLETON LAWRENCE, Esq; be instructed not to place thy confidence in the most perfect corporeal excellencies, which like his must undergo the deformity of corruption. And let his virtues excite thy imitation, particularly his parental affection, inflexible honesty, and christian benevolence, which, through a stedfast faith in thy Redeemer, will advance thee to a life immortal and full of glory.

He died the 5th day of April, 1740, aged 54.

Benefactions.

Mr. Stansby, late vicar of Badgworth, left an estate, which lets at 14*l.* a year, for apprenticing of boys of this parish, Churchdown, and Cheltenham; whereof Badgworth is to receive 5*l.* a year, Churchdown 3*l.* and Cheltenham the remainder. The vicar of the parish for the time being is a trustee to this charity, with power to end all disputes that may arise concerning it.

Giles Cox, of Upton St. Leonard's, gent. gave 6*l.* a year in lands in that place, for the use of the poor of this parish.

William Mills, of this parish, gent. gave four nobles yearly, charged on lands in Little Witcomb, to the use of the poor.

Katherine Talbot, of Droitwich in the county of Worcester, in the year 1698, gave 4*l.* a year, to be paid on the first day of May, to the use of the poor.

Lyttleton Lawrence, esq; of this parish, gave a purple pulpit-cloth and cushion, with a cover of the same for the communion-table.

Benjamin Hyett, esq; of Hunt-court in this parish, in the year 1757, gave the tapestry and two tables of the commandments at the altar; which tapestry was an altar-piece in the cathedral church of Gloucester.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 306 1 4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 36 18 0
		Land-tax — - 1694, — 360 14 0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 266 0 6

The state of population given by sir Robert Atkyns must have been very erroneous. He reckons Badgworth to contain 25 houses, Bentham 24, Little Witcombe 26, part of Great Shurdington 8; which by mistake in casting up he makes 104 in all, and sets the inhabitants down at 500, the yearly births 16, burials 15. — At present there are 109 houses, and 549 inhabitants. In a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there are entered in the parish-register 143 baptisms and 106 burials; in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, 213 baptisms, and 160 burials. Comparing the numbers together, we find that population is greatly increased here since the beginning of this century, and that sir Robert's estimate for the inhabitants was much too high. Perhaps 360 would have been near the truth, as I conclude from the average of yearly burials in the first series, which bear a proportion in this place to the number of the living inhabitants as 1 to 24.

BADMINTON (GREAT.)

LIES in the upper division of the hundred of Grumbald's-ash. It is situate in the hill-country, on the confines next Wiltshire, nine miles south-westward from Tetbury, six north-east from Chipping Sodbury, and twenty-eight southward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the north by Little Badminton, on the south by Acton Turville, on the east by Alderton in Wiltshire, and on the west by Old Sodbury. The air is healthy, and the soil more suitable to corn than pasture. There is no river, nor stream of water running through it.

The etymology of the name is difficult and uncertain, wherefore I decline giving, as my own, an explanation of it. Some people, however, have conjectured, that it is compounded of two Anglo-Saxon words, bedan, to pray, and moign, a monk; and so make it to signify the same as the priest's town; but the ancient manner of writing it [Madminton] as it is in Domesday-book, is an argument against that notion.

It hath been asserted of this village, as of Lindley in Leicestershire, that no adder, snake, nor lizard hath ever been found in it, notwithstanding they are frequent in the neighbouring places; but, as to Badminton at least, this is a vulgar error, yet the inhabitants affirm, that those animals were very rarely seen 'till within these few years. Here are found some fossils of the oolite and periwinkle kinds, and that round stone called the bullet-stone, which doctor Plot seemed so desirous of examining into the nature of, had his intended journey thro' England, in search of natural curiosities, taken place. In my visit to this place I could not procure the sight of one, nor any further account of it, than that it is a round stone of a very compact texture.

But that from which this village derives its greatest consequence, is the fine seat which has been the chief residence of the princely house of Beaufort, ever since the destruction of Ragland-castle in the great civil wars. It is called Badminton-House, and was formerly the seat of the antient family of the Botelers. The front next the grand avenue has two wings; the centre consisting of three stories, of which the second is ornamented with pilasters and capitals of the Corinthian order. At the top of the Attic story are the Beaufort arms, with supporters, well executed in freestone.

This noble structure stands not far from the centre of a large tract of ground, inclosed by a wall about ten miles in circumference, within which are several distinct parks for red and fallow-deer, full of large and beautiful plantations of firs and other forest-trees.

The grand approach is through the park from Worcester-lodge, which stands at the distance of two miles and three quarters from the house, and is itself a fine, lofty freestone building, with iron gates.

It was necessary to give some general account of this noble seat; but it would be difficult by words to convey a tolerable idea of the beautiful plantations belonging to it, which have been raised from time to time at a vast expence, and are continually improving under the direction of the present noble proprietor. Indeed this subject is more proper for the pencil and engraver. I shall however observe, for the information of those who have seen them in their former state, that the labyrinth, and all that profusion of figures in box and yew, which came first into use in this country about the reign of William the Third, are taken away, and give place to the modern taste, and less restrained method of planting.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Domesday-book, under the title Terra Ernulfi de Badminton, gives the following particulars:

'The same Hernulfus holds Madmintune in Grimboldestou hundred. There are four hides taxed. Edricus held it. In demean are two plow-tillages, and six villeins, and eight bordars, with a priest having thirteen plow-tillages. There are nine servi, and eight acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 10 l.' Dom. B. p. 77. Ralph Boteler died seized of Badminton and of the hundred of Grumbald's-ash 3 E. 1. He was descended from Ralph Boteler, or Radulphus Pinna, so called from his bearing the office of steward to Robert earl of Mellent and Leicester, in the reign of king Henry the First.

Thomas Boteler, second son of Ralph, and brother to William, succeeded in Badminton, which descended to his son sir Thomas Boteler. He married a near relation of Edmund Fitz-Alan earl of Arundel, who taking part with the Spencers, was put to death at Hereford with many of his adherents to the cause of the royal favourites.

Alan Boteler, son of sir Thomas, had a son and heir sir Alan, whose son Thomas was seized of this manor 41 E. 3. He was succeeded by his son sir Ralph Boteler, whose son John was knighted, and had a son John; whose son Ralph died before his father. Sir John Boteler, son of Ralph, married Sylvestra, daughter of sir Anselm Guyes, of Elmore, and died 5 E. 6. leaving a son William, who married Theophila, daughter of sir John Newton, of Bar-Court. Nicholas Boteler, son of William, married Margaret, daughter of sir John Young, and was lord of this manor in the year 1608. He left three sons, John, Robert, and Alan.

Thomas Somersset, third son of Edward earl of Worcester, was created viscount Somersset of Cashel in Ireland. He purchased this manor of Nicholas Boteler, the last proprietor of that family, and left an only daughter Elizabeth, who dying unmarried, gave it to Henry Somersset, lord Herbert, afterwards duke of Beaufort. His grace the present duke of Beaufort is lord of this manor, and proprietor of the hundred of Grumbald's-ash.

This noble duke derives his genealogy from Geoffry Plantagenet, earl of Anjou, son of Foulk, king of Jerusalem, by Maud the empress his wife, daughter of Henry the First king of England; being lineally descended from John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who caused all his natural children by Catherine the widow of sir John Swinford, knight, who became afterwards his third wife, to be called Beaufort, from the castle of that name in the county of Anjou, the place of their nativity, and part of the inheritance of the house of Lancaster. By the said Catherine he had three sons, John, Henry, and Thomas; and one daughter, Joan. Thomas was created earl of Dorset, and afterwards duke of Exeter; Henry was made bishop of Winchester, in the year 1405, also one of the cardinals, and lord chancellor of England; John the eldest was created earl of Somersset 20 R. 2.

Which John died in the year 1410, and was buried in the cathedral at Canterbury; having married Margaret, sister and coheir to Edmund Holland earl of Kent, by whom he had issue four sons, Henry, John, Edmund, and Thomas; and two daughters, Joan, married first to James the First king of Scotland, afterwards to sir James Stuart, ancestor to the present duke of Athol; and Margaret, married to Thomas Courtney, the sixth earl of Devonshire of his family. Henry the eldest son dying unmarried, left his inheritance to his brother John, who succeeded him as third earl of Somersset, and was created duke of Somersset 1443. Dying the year following, he was buried at Winbourn-abbey in Dorsetshire, leaving issue by Margaret his wife, daughter of sir John Beauchamp, knight, an only daughter Margaret, married to Edmund of Hadham, called also Edmond Tudor, earl of Richmond, by whom she was mother of king Henry the Seventh.

To him succeeded Edmund his next brother, who was earl of Mortain, or Moreton, in Normandy, of which he was made regent. He was created marquis of Dorset in the year 1443, and duke of Somerset 26 H. 6. He was slain in the battle of St. Albans in 1455, leaving issue by Eleanor, second daughter and coheir to Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, four sons, of whom hereafter, and five daughters, viz. 1. Eleanor, the second wife of James Butler earl of Ormond and Wiltshire; 2. Joan, first married to sir Robert St. Lawrence, baron of Howth in Ireland, and secondly to sir Richard Fry, kn'. 3. Anne, married to sir William Paston, of Paston in Norfolk, kn'. 4. Margaret, married to Humphry Stafford earl of Stafford, and secondly to sir Richard Darrel, kn'. by whom she had a daughter Margaret, wedded to James Touchet lord Audley, ancestor to the present earl of Castlehaven; and 5. Elizabeth, married to sir Henry Lewis, kn'. — The sons of Edmund the second duke of Somerset were Henry, Edmund, John, and Thomas.

Henry, the eldest son, had the title of earl of Moreton in his father's life-time. He was knight of the garter, and third duke of Somerset, and gained great honour in the wars with France. He took the castle of Anjou by assault, and put 300 Scots to the sword, and hanged all the French that were in it. Adhering to the house of Lancaster, he was taken prisoner at the battle of Hexham, by John Nevil marquis of Montacute, and there beheaded, in the year 1463, leaving issue by Joan Hill, or de la Montaign, an only natural son of the name of Charles, who assumed the surname of Somerset; whereby the honour devolved upon Edmund his next brother, who was taken prisoner and beheaded at the battle of Tewkesbury in 1471, without issue; and John and Thomas, his third and fourth brothers, also dying without children, in them terminated the male issue of John of Gaunt.

Which Charles Somerset being a person of great abilities, arrived to high honours and great employments. He was made privy counsellor to king Henry the Seventh, and admiral at sea; created banneret, elected knight of the garter, and made captain of the guards; was sent on several important embassies, and employed by the king on arduous affairs. He married Elizabeth, sole daughter and heir to William Herbert earl of Huntingdon, lord Herbert of Ragland, Chepstow, and Gower; and in her right bore the title of lord Herbert. He was advanced to the dignity of earl of Worcester by patent, 5 H. 8. by reason of his noble descent, and near alliance to the king in blood, as the patent imports. And dying in the year 1526, was privately interred, agreeable to his will, in Beaufort chapel, in the church within the castle of Windsor, leaving issue by his first wife Elizabeth, Henry his heir and successor. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas West lord De-la-War, by whom he had issue sir Charles Somerset, kn'. captain of the tower of Rysebank, in the haven of Calais; and sir George Somerset, of Bedmundesfield in com. Suff. kn'.

Henry the second earl of Worcester, for his signal exploits in the wars of France, had been knighted, during his father's life-time, by Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk; and shortly after his father's death, was appointed one of the commissioners for concluding a peace with the French. He married Elizabeth, daughter to sir Anthony Browne, kn'. and by her had issue four sons, 1. William, his heir and successor; 2. Thomas, who died in 1587, in the tower of London; 3. Sir Charles, who died in 1529; 4. Francis, slain in Muffelborough-field by the Scots: Also four daughters, 1. Eleanor, married to sir Edward Vaughan, of Tretour, in com. Brecon, kn'. 2. Lucy, to John Nevil lord Latimer; 3. Anne, to Thomas Percy earl of Northumberland; and 4. Jane, to sir Edward Mansel, kn'. This earl Henry dying in the year 1549, was buried at Ragland.

Which William, the third earl, was knight of the garter, and one of the peers that sat on the trial of Mary queen of Scots. He married Christian, daughter to Edward North, lord North of Carthlege; by whom he had Edward his only son and heir; and two daughters, Elizabeth married to William Windsor, esq; youngest son of William lord Windsor; and Lucy, to Henry Herbert, esq; son and heir of sir Thomas Herbert of Wynestone in com. Monmouth, kn'.

Edward, the fourth earl, was made master of the horse to queen Elizabeth, being the best horseman and tilter of the times, which were then the manlike and noble recreations of the court, and such as caught the applause of men, and the commendation of the ladies. He continued in that office 'till the 13 J. 1. when he was appointed lord privy seal, of which he had afterwards a grant for life, with the fee of 1500*l.* a year. He was also knight of the garter, and dying in the year 1627-8. was buried in St. Mary's chapel at Windsor, leaving issue by Elizabeth, daughter of Francis earl of Huntingdon, eight sons and seven daughters; viz. 1. William lord Herbert, who died unmarried in his father's life-time;—2. Henry lord Herbert;—3. Thomas, who having been sent, with sir Charles Percy, to notify to king James the demise of queen Elizabeth, and his majesty's being proclaimed her successor, was made knight of the Bath with prince Charles, who being afterwards king, in the second year of his reign, promoted him to the dignity of viscount Somerset, of Cashel in Ireland. He married Eleanor, daughter of David lord Barry, and viscount Buttevant of Ireland, relict of Thomas Butler earl of Ormond, by whom he had issue only one daughter Elizabeth, who died unmarried;—4. Charles; and—5. Francis, both died infants;—6. Charles, made knight of the Bath who married Elizabeth, the daughter and heir of Sir William Powel, of Lanpylt com. Monmouth, by whom he had three daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, and Frances.—7. Christopher, who died young;—8. Sir Edward Somersfet, knight of the Bath, who married Bridget, daughter and heir of Sir William Whitmore, of Leighton com. Cestr. kn'. but died without issue. The daughters were,—1. Elizabeth, married to Sir Henry Guildford, of Hempsted-place in Kent;—2. Catherine, to William lord Petre, of Writtle;—3. Anne, to Sir Edward Winter, of Lidney in Gloucestershire, kn'.—4. Frances, to William Morgan, of Lanternan com. Monmouth, esq;—5. Mary, who died an infant;—6. Blanch, married to Thomas lord Arundel, of Wardour; and—7. another Catherine, married to Thomas lord Windfor. He was succeeded by his eldest surviving son,

Henry, the fifth earl, who was created marquis of Worcester, by patent, in the year 1642. He was a nobleman of great parts and ample fortune, which was much impaired by the large supplies of men and money spent in the royal cause, which he powerfully asserted during the whole course of the civil war, in the reign of King Charles the First. He maintained his castle of Ragland, against the parliament, with a garrison of 800 men, from 1642, to Aug. 19, 1646, without receiving any contribution from the country; and then yielded it to Sir Thomas Fairfax, who besieged it in person, upon honourable terms; but the conditions of capitulation being basely violated, the marquis was taken into the custody of the parliament's black-rod, in which he died in December following, and was buried at Windfor. His castle, after the surrender of it, was demolished, and all the timber in the three parks near the house sold, to the amount of 100,000*l.* Add to this, as large a sum at least lent to the king, and the further expence of supporting the above-mentioned garrison, and of raising and maintaining two several armies, commanded by his son Edward earl of Glamorgan, at his own expence, together with the sequestration from 1646; and lastly, the loss of that whole estate, which was sold by the parliament, amounting, as appears by that year's audit, to about 20,000*l.* a year, which was not restored 'till the year 1660; and then some judgment may be formed of the loss sustained by this noble family in the royal cause. His lordship married Anne, the only child of John lord Russell, and by her had issue nine sons and four daughters. 1. Edward lord Herbert, of whom hereafter;—2. lord John Somersfet, who married Mary, daughter of Thomas lord Arundel, of Wardour;—3. lord William, who died an infant;—4. lord Henry, who died unmarried;—5. lord Thomas, who died at Rome in 1676;—6. lord Charles died a canon of Cambray in Flanders;—7. 8. 9. lords Frederick, Francis, and James, all died young. His lordship's daughters were,—1. lady Elizabeth, who died an infant;—2. lady Anne died a nun;—3. lady Mary died unmarried;—4. lady Elizabeth was wedded to Francis Brown viscount Montague.

Edward Somersfet, lord Herbert, succeeded his father in the year 1646, to whom, in his father's life-time, the king had directed several letters by the title of earl of Glamorgan, which he usually bore. He was a person very highly esteemed by the king, who made him generalissimo of his armies, and granted him, by patent,^d several very extraordinary priveleges, which the peers took so ill, that, on the 18th of August, 1660, they appointed a committee to take that patent into consideration. Accordingly, on the 23d of the same month, they reported, that the marquis was willing to deliver it to his majesty; and it was delivered up on the 3d of September following. His lordship stands in the honourable Mr. Walpole's list of royal and noble authors, for two pieces, the one intituled, A Century of the Names

^d The commission ran as follows:—'Charles, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our right trusty, and right well-beloved cousin, Edward Somersfet, alias Plantaginet, Lord Herbert, Baron Beaufort, of Caldicote, Grismond, Chepstow, Ragland and Gower, Earl of Glamorgan, son and heir apparent of our entirely beloved cousin, Henry Earl and Marquis of Worcester, greeting. Having had good and long experience of your prowess, prudence, and fidelity, do make choice, and by these nominate and appoint you, our right trusty, and right well-beloved cousin, Edward Somersfet, &c. to be our Generalissimo of three armies, English, Irish, and Foreign, and Admiral of a fleet at sea, with power to recommend your Lieutenant-general for our approbation, leaving all other officers to your own election and denomination, and accordingly to receive their commission from you: willing and commanding them, and every of them, you to obey, as their General, and you to receive immediate orders from ourself only. And lest, through distance of place, we may be misinformed, we will and command you to reply unto us, if any of our orders should thwart, or hinder any of your designs for our service. And there being necessary great sums of money, to the carrying on so chargeable an employment, which we have not to furnish you withal, we do by these empower you to contract with any of our loving subjects of England, Ireland, and Dominion of Wales, for wardships, customs, woods, or any our rights and prerogatives; we by these obliging our Selves, our Heirs and Successors, to confirm and make good the same accordingly. And for persons of generosity, for whom Titles of Honour are most desirable, we have entrusted you with several patents under our Great Seal of England, from a Marquis to a Baronet, which we give you full power and authority to date, and dispose of, without knowing our further pleasure; so great is our trust and confidence in you, as that, whatsoever you do contract for, or promise, we will make good the same accordingly, from the date of this our commission forwards; which for the better satisfaction, we give you leave to give them, or any of them, copies thereof, attested under your hand and seal of arms. And for your own encouragement, and in token of our gratitude, we give and allow you henceforward such fees, titles, preeminences, and privileges, as do, and may belong unto your place and command above-mentioned, with promise of our dear daughter Elizabeth to your son Plantaginet in marriage, with three hundred thousand pounds in dower or portion, most part whereof we acknowledge spent and disbursed by your father and you, in our service; and the title of Duke of Somersfet to you and your heirs male for ever; and from henceforward to give the Garter to your Arms, and at your pleasure to put on the George and Blue Ribbon: and for your greater honour, and in testimony of our regality, we have with our own hand affixed our Great Seal of England, unto these our commission and letters, making them patents. Witness our self at Oxford, the first day of April, in the twentieth year of our reign, and the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and forty-four.' Collins's Peerage, V. 1. p. 209. 4th Ed.

and Scantlings of such Inventions, &c. the other, Certamen Religiosum, or a Conference between King Charles 1. and Henry late Marquis of Worcester, concerning Religion. This noble peer married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of sir William Dormer, kn^t. and sister to Robert earl of Carnarvon, by whom he had issue, Henry lord Herbert, of whom hereafter; lady Anne, married to Henry Howard duke of Norfolk, ancestor of the present duke of Norfolk; and lady Elizabeth, married to William Herbert, earl and marquis of Powis. He married, secondly, Margaret, daughter to Henry O'Brien earl of Thomond, by whom he had issue a daughter Mary, who died an infant. His lordship departing this life April 3, 1667, was succeeded by Henry his only son, who, on the restoration of king Charles the Second, was constituted lord lieutenant of Gloucestershire; and in 1672, lord president of the council in Wales, and lord lieutenant of the several counties in that principality; and of the county and city of Bristol, having the same year been installed one of the knights of the garter. He was, by letters patent dated Dec. 2, 1682, advanced to the title of duke of Beaufort, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. His grace exerted himself against the duke of Monmouth in 1685; and afterwards endeavoured to secure Bristol against the adherents of the prince of Orange, upon whose elevation to the throne, refusing to take the oaths, he lived in retirement 'till his death, in the 70th year of his age, 1699. His grace had issue by Mary his wife, daughter of Arthur lord Capel, and widow of Henry lord Beauchamp, five sons, Henry, who died young; Charles, his successor; another Henry, Edward, and Arthur; and four daughters, the ladies Elizabeth, Mary, Henrietta, and Anne. He was buried in Beaufort-chapel, before mentioned, where is the following inscription for him.

Sub hoc Marmore conquiescit, Atmorum & Titulorum Satur, Henricus Somersset, Dux de Beaufort, Marquis & Comes de Vigornia, Baro Herbert de Chesflow, Raglan & Gower, è Nobilissimo ordine Pericellidis Eques. Excellenti Animo ac Virtute vir; qui singularis Prudentiæ Laudem, cum insigni Justitiæ Gloria conjunxit; et illustrissimæ suæ Familiæ non modo Fortunas a Perduellibus everlas in integrum restituit; sed & Antiquos Honores feliciter amplificavit. Neque tamen Rei Privatæ studio intentus, desuit Publicæ: Erat enim idem, regnante Carolo & Jacobo secundo Consilii in Principatu Wallensi Preses; Comitatum Civitatumq; Glocestriæ, Herefordiæ, Bristolii, Monumethiæ, necnon totius Walliæ, Præfectus; Arcis de Briavil Castellanus, et Saltus de Dean Cultos Principalis, Civitatum insuper Glocestriæ & Herefordiæ, Municipiorumq; Malmsburii, Teuxburii & Andoveri Senescallus. Quin & utrisque Carolidum, quibus intemerata semper fide adhefit, a Camera & a Consiliis sanctioribus. Conjugem unicam atq; unicè dilectam habuit, Mariam Honoratissimi Arthuri Domini Capel Filiam natu maximam; ex qua Progeniem satis numerosam suscepit, V. Filios, Henricum Dominum Herbert hic juxta sepultum, Carolum de Vigornia Marchionem; Henricum & Edwardum præmaturâ morte abreptos; Arthurum in Dominum Sommersset. IV. Filias, Elizabetham, tenera Ætate mortuam; Mariam Ormondæ Ducissam; Henriettam Dominam de O'Brien; Annam Coventriæ Comitissam.

H. M.

Carissimo Viro Dominoq; posuit Superstes & mœrens Ducissa: Cui, post Annos XLIII suaviter in Conjugio actos, triste sui desiderium reliquit Senex Suptuagenarius Jan. xxi. A. D. MDCXCIX.

Charles the second son, surviving his elder brother, was stiled marquis of Worcester after his father was created duke of Beaufort. He married Rebecca, daughter of sir Josiah Child. Unhappily leaping out of his coach, to avoid the danger he was exposed to by the horses running down a steep hill, he received a violent bruise, and broke his thigh-bone, of which he died in the 38th year of his age, 1698, during his father's life-time; leaving issue three sons, Henry, Charles, and John; and three daughters, lady Mary, and lady Elizabeth, who died infants; and lady Henrietta, married to Charles duke of Grafton. Lord Charles Somersset died on his travels in 1710; and lord John died in the year 1704.

Henry the eldest son succeeded his grandfather as duke of Beaufort. In the year 1711-2, his grace was constituted captain of the band of pensioners, lord lieutenant of Hampshire and Gloucestershire, and cities of Bristol and Gloucester, and counties of the same. He was installed knight of the garter in 1713, and departing this life on the 24th of May the next year, left issue by his lady, daughter and coheir of the earl of Gainsborough, Henry marquis of Worcester, born in 1707; lord John, who died soon after he was born; and lord Charles-Noel, born in 1709, of whom his mother died in child-bed the next day. His grace had a former wife, lady Mary, only daughter of Charles Sackville earl of Dorset; and also a third wife, lady Mary, youngest daughter to Peregrine Osborne duke of Leeds, but had no issue by either of them.

Henry his eldest son succeeded as third duke of Beaufort. He wedded Frances, only child of sir James Scudamore, of Home-Lacy in Herefordshire, baronet, and viscount Scudamore in the kingdom of Ireland; from whom his grace was divorced in the year 1743-4, upon account of her incontinence. His grace died without issue in 1745-6, and was succeeded in dignity and estate by his brother

Charles-Noel Somersset, fourth duke of Beaufort, who distinguished himself in the senate by a steady opposition to unconstitutional and corrupt measures, and endeared himself to mankind by his social virtues. His grace married Elizabeth, daughter of John Berkeley, of Stoke-Giffard in Gloucestershire, esq; and sister of the late Norborne lord Botetourt, by whom he had issue Henry, now duke of Beaufort, born in the year 1744; and five daughters, viz. lady Anne, married to Charles earl of Northampton; lady Elizabeth, who died in 1760; lady Rachel, who died an infant; lady Henrietta, and lady Isabella.

Henry, the fifth duke of Beaufort, having accomplished his studies at Oxford, where he received the degree of LL. D. embarked in the year 1764, for his travels in foreign parts, whence he returned in 1766, and the same year married Elizabeth, daughter of the late admiral Boscawen, and niece of the viscount Falmouth, by whom

He hath issue, living, two sons and a daughter. His grace's arms are, Quarterly, France and England, within a bordure compone argent and azure. Crest, On a wreath, a portcullis Or, nailed azure, chains pendent thereto of the first. Supporters, on the dexter side, A panther argent, spotted with various colours, fire issuing out of his mouth and ears proper, gorged with a collar and chain pendent Or; on the sinister side, A wyverne vert, holding in his mouth a sinister hand coupé at the wrist proper. Motto, MUTARE VEL TIMERE SPERNO.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth 13*l.* a year. It formerly belonged to the abbey of Pershore. The duke of Beaufort is patron and impropiator. The living is further augmented by two donations from the late patron and his brother, making together 50*l.* a year.

The church joins to the house of the duke of Beaufort, and accommodation is made in it for the inhabitants of Little Badminton, in the parish of Hawkesbury, who, by an agreement and order made in the year 1750, are to be for the future, as to ecclesiastical matters, under the minister of this parish.

The seat belonging to his grace the duke of Beaufort is an aisle on the north side of the chancel, under which is the vestry room. On the south side is another aisle, and under it the vault belonging to that noble family.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the south aisle of the chancel is an elegant raised monument of white marble, with the following arms and inscriptions: In a lozenge, Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Beaufort as before. 2. Gules, a lion rampant between three cross-crosslets fitchy, Or, for Capel.

Mary Widow to HENRY Lord BEAUCHAMP Maryed HENRY Duke of BEAUFORT, & by him had these Children, LIZABETH Buried att RAGLAN, HENRY att WINDSOR, EDWARD att RAGLAN, Another HENRY att RAGLAN, CHARLES Lord Marquis of WORCESTER att RAGLAN, Lord ARTHUR Somersett Maryed MARY daughter to S^r. WILLIAM RUSSELL Barronett. MARY Maryed to JAMES Duke of ORMONDE. HENRIETTA first Maryed to HENRY HORATIO Lord OBRIAN, now HENRY Earle of SUFFOLK and BINDON. ANNE Maryed to THOMAS Earle of COVENTRY.

On the south side:

MARY Eldest Daughter of ARTHUR Lord CAPELL Maryed First to HENRY Lord BEAUCHAMP Son to WILLIAM Duke of Somersett & by him had these Children: FRANCIS, Buried att HADHAM, MARY att BEDWIN, WILLIAM Duke of Somersett att BEDWIN, ELIZABETH Countess of AILESBUURY att AMPHILL.

On the east end the arms of Beaufort. On the west end:

The Most Noble MARY Dutchess of BEAUFORT Relict y^e Most Puissant Prince HENRY Duke of BEAUFORT, daughter to y^e R^t Hon^{ble} ARTHUR Lord CAPELL (who was murder'd by y^e Rebels in y^e year 1648) Departed this life January the 7th 1714 In the 85th year of her Age.

There is a grey marble flat stone, inlaid with brass, upon which are ingraved the figures of two knights; in a scutcheon, a lion rampant, and round the edge, in old black characters, *Radulphus Botiler, Miles dominus * * **

Upon a brass plate, fixed on a flat stone, three lions rampant in a lozenge, and this inscription:

D. O. M.

Sub hoc lapide Resuscitationem Iustorum præstolantur exuviaz MARGARITÆ filiaz secundo-genitæ ARTHURI PROGER de Badminton, Generosi, Ancillæ honorariæ præcellentissimæ Heroinæ ELENÆ Comitissæ Ormondiz et Otioriz; Desponsata fuit EDVARDO MOLLINEVX Vectensi Armigero è clientela nobilissⁱ Dni THOMÆ Vicecomitis SOMERSET.

Sed destinatas vetuit nuptias

In-opinato fatum vulnere

SPONSO fido superstite:

Qui amantem deslens VIRGINEM

Hoc marmor atratus posuit.

Obijt vi^{to} die mensis Augusti anno reparationis humanæ MDCXXXV ætatis suæ XXVI.

On a blue stone:

Hic jacet Carolus Price, Illustrissimo Domino Henrico Duci de Belleforti dum vixit a Secretis, Cui quinquaginta novem annorum spatio pervigili opera et industria in agendo Servum se præbuit perquam fidelem. Obijt ii^o die Februarij, Anno Domini 1703, Ætatis suæ 79. Requiescat in Pace.

First Fruits, £.	5	5	5	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	—	—	—	Pentecostals, 0	1	0	0
Procurations, -	0	8	8

Benefactions.

Mary the first dutchess of Beaufort erected a handsome pile of building in Badminton street, the centre of which is a school-house, and appointed a salary for a master, to teach the children of the parish to read and write. On each side of the school are three almshouses, for three poor men and three poor women, with preference, it seems, to those that have been servants in the family, who have 2*s.* 6*d.* a week each.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	66	13	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	76	0	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	78	1	4
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	58	11	1

BADMINTON (LITTLE,)

IS a small place in the upper division of the hundred of Grumbald's-ash, eight miles south-westward from Tetbury, six north-east from Chip-ping Sodbury, and twenty-seven southward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the south by Great Badminton. The greatest part of it lies within the duke of Beaufort's park.

This was not a distinct vill at the time of the general survey, wherefore no mention is made of it in Domesday-book. It is now considered as a tithing belonging to the parish of Hawkesbury. The air is healthy, and the soil more suitable to tillage than pasture; but the place furnishes nothing remarkable in natural history.

U u u

Of

He hath issue, living, two sons and a daughter. His grace's arms are, Quarterly, France and England, within a bordure compone argent and azure. Crest, On a wreath, a portcullis Or, nailed azure, chains pendent thereto of the first. Supporters, on the dexter side, A panther argent, spotted with various colours, fire issuing out of his mouth and ears proper, gorged with a collar and chain pendent Or; on the sinister side, A wyverne vert, holding in his mouth a sinister hand coupé at the wrist proper. Motto, MUTARE VEL TIMERE SPERNO.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth 13*l.* a year. It formerly belonged to the abbey of Pershore. The duke of Beaufort is patron and impropiator. The living is further augmented by two donations from the late patron and his brother, making together 50*l.* a year.

The church joins to the house of the duke of Beaufort, and accommodation is made in it for the inhabitants of Little Badminton, in the parish of Hawkesbury, who, by an agreement and order made in the year 1750, are to be for the future, as to ecclesiastical matters, under the minister of this parish.

The seat belonging to his grace the duke of Beaufort is an aisle on the north side of the chancel, under which is the vestry room. On the south side is another aisle, and under it the vault belonging to that noble family.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the south aisle of the chancel is an elegant raised monument of white marble, with the following arms and inscriptions: In a lozenge, Party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Beaufort as before. 2. Gules, a lion rampant between three cross-crosslets fitchy, Or, for Capel.

Mary Widow to HENRY Lord BEAUCHAMP Maryed HENRY Duke of BEAUFORT, & by him had these Children, LIZABETH Buried att RAGLAN, HENRY att WINDSOR, EDWARD att RAGLAN, Another HENRY att RAGLAN, CHARLES Lord Marquis of WORCESTER att RAGLAN, Lord ARTHUR Somersett Maryed MARY daughter to S^r. WILLIAM RUSSELL Barronett. MARY Maryed to JAMES Duke of ORMONDE. HENRIETTA first Maryed to HENRY HORATIO Lord OBRIAN, now HENRY Earle of SUFFOLK and BINDON. ANNE Maryed to THOMAS Earle of COVENTRY.

On the south side:

MARY Eldest Daughter of ARTHUR Lord CAPELL Maryed First to HENRY Lord BEAUCHAMP Son to WILLIAM Duke of Somersett & by him had these Children: FRANCIS, Buried att HADHAM, MARY att BEDWIN, WILLIAM Duke of Somersett att BEDWIN, ELIZABETH Countess of AILESBUURY att AMPHILL.

On the east end the arms of Beaufort. On the west end:

The Most Noble MARY Dutchess of BEAUFORT Relict y^e Most Puissant Prince HENRY Duke of BEAUFORT, daughter to y^e R^t Hon^{ble} ARTHUR Lord CAPELL (who was murder'd by y^e Rebels in y^e year 1648) Departed this life January the 7th 1714 In the 85th year of her Age.

There is a grey marble flat stone, inlaid with brass, upon which are ingraved the figures of two knights; in a scutcheon, a lion rampant, and round the edge, in old black characters, *Radulphus Botiler, Miles dominus * * **

Upon a brass plate, fixed on a flat stone, three lions rampant in a lozenge, and this inscription:

D. O. M.

Sub hoc lapide Resuscitationem Iustorum præstolantur exuvie MARGARITÆ filie secundo-genitæ ARTHURI PROGER de Badminton, Generosi, Ancillæ honorariæ præcellentissimæ Heroïnæ ELENÆ Comitissæ Ormondæ et Otioræ; Desponsata fuit EDVARDO MOLLINEVX Vectensi Armigero è clientela nobilissⁱ Dni THOMÆ Vicecomitis SOMERSET.

Sed destinatas vetuit nuptias

In-opinato fatum vulnere

SPONSO fido superstite:

Qui amantem deslens VIRGINEM

Hoc marmor atratus posuit.

Obijt vi^{to} die mensis Augusti anno reparationis humanæ MDCXXXV ætatis suæ XXVI.

On a blue stone:

Hic jacet Carolus Price, Illustrissimo Domino Henrico Duci de Belleforti dum vixit a Secretis, Cui quinquaginta novem annorum spatio pervigili opera et industria in agendo Servum se præbuit perquam fidelem. Obijt ii^o die Februarij, Anno Domini 1703, Ætatis suæ 79. Requiescat in Pace.

First Fruits, £.	5	5	5	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	—	—	0	10	6	Pentecostals, 0	1	0
Procurations, -	0	8	8

Benefactions.

Mary the first dutchess of Beaufort erected a handsome pile of building in Badminton street, the centre of which is a school-house, and appointed a salary for a master, to teach the children of the parish to read and write. On each side of the school are three almshouses, for three poor men and three poor women, with preference, it seems, to those that have been servants in the family, who have 2*s.* 6*d.* a week each.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	66	13	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	76	0	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	78	1	4
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	58	11	1

BADMINTON (LITTLE,)

IS a small place in the upper division of the hundred of Grumbald's-ash, eight miles south-westward from Tetbury, six north-east from Chip-ping Sodbury, and twenty-seven southward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the south by Great Badminton. The greatest part of it lies within the duke of Beaufort's park.

This was not a distinct vill at the time of the general survey, wherefore no mention is made of it in Domesday-book. It is now considered as a tithing belonging to the parish of Hawkesbury. The air is healthy, and the soil more suitable to tillage than pasture; but the place furnishes nothing remarkable in natural history.

U u u

Of

Of the Manor and other Estates.

The manor formerly belonged to the abbey of Pershore, after the dissolution of which, it was granted to John Boteler, 37 H. 8. and hath ever since had the same proprietor as the manor of Great Badminton, so that his grace the duke of Beaufort is the present lord of it.

Richard Urdle levied a fine of lands in Little Badminton to the use of John Young and William Lypiat, 18 R. 2.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth 5*l.* a year to the curate. It formerly belonged to the abbey of Pershore. After the dissolution, the chapel of Badminton Little, with tithes, were granted with the manor, as above, and have descended together down to the present time.

The chapel is gone to decay, and accommodation hath been made for the inhabitants, in the church of Great Badminton, ever since the year 1750, as already observed under that parish.

	Pentecostals, - - - -	£, 0 0	6 ob.
Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.
		Poll-tax — — 1694,	1 12 0
		Land-tax — - 1694,	32 8 0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770,	32 5 3

B A G E N D O N,

IS a small village, about three miles and a half long, and one mile broad, situate in the hundred of Crowthorne and Minety, in the cotswold country, three miles northward from Cirencester, nine south-westward from Northleach, and fourteen south-eastward from Gloucester. The church and houses, for the most part, stand in a narrow dale, through which a little rivulet runs, and falls into the Churn about a mile below the church.

A little south-eastward of the church, in the fields, are two very considerable intrenchments fronting each other, one of which extends for above a quarter of a mile down to a place called Barrow's-bridge in this parish, with the rampire and graff intire in some parts; and two or three large barrows, (near which have been found several spear-heads and other warlike weapons) stand not far distant from them. These bear incontestible evidence of some battle having been fought here.

Now whether this Barrow's-bridge be the same with Bepanbyrig, mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle, where Cinric king of the West-Saxons, and Ceaulin his son, fought a bloody battle against the Britons, with doubtful success, in the year 556, is a matter worthy inquiry. Historians differ in opinion concerning this Bepanbyrig;

Dr. Howell fixing it at Banbury in Oxfordshire, on account of the similarity of the name, and antiquity of the place; but Mr. Camden thinks it improbable that the Saxons could carry their conquest so far as the borders of Northamptonshire by that year; wherefore he gives the preference to Barbury-castle in Wiltshire, as a place more likely on several accounts, such as the large barrows and fortifications found there, the similitude of names, and the course of the time of the Saxon victories. These arguments, I think, are good against Banbury, whilst they point out this place, in the strongest manner, for the scene of that action: for, as to situation, it lies in the country where the Britons and Saxons had frequent skirmishes about that time; the fortifications and barrows shew that a battle was fought here; and lastly, what two names can agree better in sound than that mentioned in the Chronicle, and our Barrow's-bridge? As to the latter being derived either from a bear-herd's killing a woman at this place, or from its being the bearer's way from Bisley, for the inhabitants to bury at Bibury, they seem to be silly conceits, not worth the trouble of confuting. But I would not determine too absolutely in a matter of so uncertain a nature.

The kind of stone called Dagham-down stone is found in the fields of this parish, for the particulars of which see Daglingworth.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Benwedene is a manor set down in Domesday-book, as lying in the hundred of Cirencester. It is probably the same place which was afterwards called Bagendon. Of that manor it is thus recorded:

'The same Hugo [i. e. Hugo Lafne] holds Benwedene in Cirecestre hundred, and Gilbertus holds it of him. There are three hides taxed. Wluuard held it. In demean are three plow-tillages, and five villeins with three plow-tillages, and six fervi, and a mill of 10*s.* and eight acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 4*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 78.

This was a hamlet or portion of some adjoining parish at the time when the sheriff of the county, in obedience to the king's writ, made a return of all the vills therein, 9 E. 1. for there is no mention in his return of any such place as Bagendon, if my copy of it be perfect; and the precise time when it became a distinct parish is uncertain. However it is mentioned in a record of 4 E. 3. by which it appears that Richard de Bagendon and Agnes his wife levied a fine thereof to Reginald Pedewardine, to the use of themselves and the heirs of their bodies. And a fine of the third part of this manor was levied 11 E. 3. by Richard son of Richard de Bagendon, which his widow then held in dower.

This manor was afterwards conveyed to Robert Plain and others 6 R. 2. for the use of the church of the holy Trinity, in the parish church of Cirencester. Trinity-mill in this parish obtained that name because it belonged to that chantry. And a spring of fine water is still known by the name of Trinity-well for the same reason, to which many virtues are attributed, particularly that of curing sore eyes.

After the dissolution of chantries, the manor was granted to sir John Thynn and Christian his wife, 3 E. 6. and it hath continued in that family ever since, so that the lord viscount Weymouth is the present lord of the manor. His lordship's arms are, Barry of ten, Or and sable. Crest, On a wreath, a rein-deer Or. Supporters, on the dexter-side, A rein-deer Or, gorged with a plain collar sable; on the sinister-side, A lion gules. Motto, J'AY BONNE CAUSE.—It is remarkable of his lordship's family, that their antient name was Botevile, descended of sir Geofry Botevile, who came out of Poictou into England in the reign of king John, and settled at Stretton in Shropshire. They lost their original name in the reign of king Edward the Fourth, when John Botevile was first called John of the Inne, from his mansion in Stretton, and thence came the surname of Thynne, as it is now used. Collins's Peerage, V. 6. p. 257.

William Nottingham and Elizabeth his wife conveyed a fine of lands in Bagendon to the use of themselves and the heirs of their bodies 20 H. 6. Other lands in Bagendon belonged to the knights hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, after whose dissolution, they were granted to John Walter and Thomas Carpenter, 1 Mar.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the deanery of Cirencester, worth about 60*l.* a year. Lord viscount Weymouth is patron, Mr. Timothy Meredith the present incumbent. John Young, chaplain to the chantry of St. Trinity and St. Mary, is the church of St. John Baptist in Cirencester, presented to it in the year 1403.

About seventeen acres of meadow and pasture, and forty-seven of arable, belong to the glebe. The church is small, with a very low tower, and some painted glass in the windows, but nothing further worth notice in it.

First fruits, £.	8	4	4	Synodals, £.	0	1	0
Tithes, —	0	16	5	Pentecostals, 0	0	0	6
Procurements, 0	2	0

The	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	21	11	4
	Poll-tax — 1694, —	5	8	0
	Land-tax — 1694, —	17	0	0
	The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	12	15	0

Sir Robert Atkins reckons 13 houses and 60 inhabitants in this parish; yearly births 2, burials 2. I could not get a sight of the register-book in use at the time when he collected those materials; but in a series of ten years from 1760 to 1769, both inclusive, there are registered 67 baptisms, and 24 burials; and the inhabitants having been numbered, are found to be 139, which shews a very great increase in this parish since the beginning of the present century. And the proportion of the whole number of inhabitants to the average of annual burials is nearly as 58 to 1, which accounts for that increase from the great healthiness of the place, hardly to be equalled.

B A G P A T H.

See NEWINGTON-BAGPATH.

B A R N S L E Y.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Britwell's-barrow, four miles north-east from Cirencester, and eighteen miles eastward from Gloucester. The turnpike-road from Cirencester to Oxford runs through it.

The antient name of this place is Barnesleis, as in Domesday-book. Barnwell in Cambridgeshire is explained by Mr. Campden to signify the wells of children or barns; for young men and boys met there once a year upon St. John's eve, for wrestling, and the like youthful exercises, and also to make merry with singing and other musick. And it is possible that Barnsley may have taken its name from young people assembling in like manner, for their diversion, upon the lays or pasture-grounds of this place at stated periods.

The air is healthy, and the soil good. There are large quarries, on the north-east side of the village, adjoining to Bibury, where they raise a very excellent kind of white freestone, almost equal to that of Bath. The pits are fifty or sixty feet deep, out of which they get the blocks of stone by means of a wheel and axis.

About twenty years ago, a vein of coal was found in one of those pits, which gave hopes to the country of being supplied from thence at an easy rate, with that useful fuel, which came so expensive to them by reason of long carriage; but those hopes were soon frustrated, and the proprietor disappointed. Indeed I am told that the matter was never examined into with that diligence and perseverance which the importance of it required.

Miss Perrot has an elegant house in this parish, built of freestone. It stands at a proper distance from the turnpike-road, with a park and plantations about it. The ceilings are done by the best Italian masters.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

At the time of the general survey, the manor of Bibury, on which this of Barnsley depended, was the property of the church of Worcester.

The

The passage in Domesday-book relating to Barnsley may be thus translated :

‘ Durandus holds three hides and one yard-land in Bernesleis [in Becheberie hundred] of the bishop [of Worcester] as a manor depending on Becheberie ; and Eudo holds seven yard-lands there for a manor.’ Domesday-book, p. 70.

Under Bibury may be read other particulars from this record, which are in common to both parishes.

Not long after the conquest, this manor came into the family of the Fitz-Herberts. Peter Fitz-Herbert was seized of it in the reign of king Henry the Third, who married the third daughter and coheir of William de Braos baron of Brecknock, and dying 19 H. 3. was succeeded by his son, called Herbertus fil’ Petri, whose brother Reginald succeeded him as heir, and died seized of this manor 14 E. 1. leaving John his son and heir, the last of that name who were owners of Barnsley ; for Hugh le Dispencer the elder had a charter of free-warren in Barndesly 28 E. 1. which manor he afterwards settled on his son Hugh le Dispencer the younger, who being attainted of high treason, his estate was forfeited to the crown, and granted 1 E. 3. to Edmund earl of Kent, grandson to king Edward the First. He was succeeded by his brother John earl of Kent, who died seized thereof 26 E. 3. without issue ; whereby this manor came to Joan his sister and heir, commonly called the Fair Maid of Kent, at that time married to sir Thomas Holland, who in her right was created earl of Kent by king Edward the Third, and died in the thirty-fourth year of that king’s reign. She was afterwards married to the Black Prince, and by him was mother to king Richard the Second. It is very remarkable that she had been twice married before, and twice divorced. She died in the ninth year of her son’s reign, and the right of the manor of Barnsley descended to Thomas Holland earl of Kent, her son by her first husband, who dying 20 R. 2. was succeeded by her son Thomas Holland earl of Kent and duke of Surry, beheaded at Cirencester 1 H. 4. as will be related more at large under that place. Leaving no issue, he was succeeded by his brother Edmund earl of Kent, who also died without issue. But this manor was held in dower fifty-eight years by Elizabeth, widow of the forementioned John earl of Kent, who died seized thereof 10 H. 4.

After her death the manor descended to Elianor Holland, sister and coheir to the family of the Hollands. She was married to Roger Mortimer earl of March, whereby this estate was carried into that name and family ; for Edmund Mortimer, their son and heir, died seized of it 3 H. 6. without issue ; and Richard duke of York, son of Anne his sister, and heir to the crown of England, became his heir. But this prince was slain at the battle of Wakefield in the last year of king Henry the Sixth, whereupon Cicely dutchess of York, his widow, had the grant of this manor the same year, and a confirmation of it 1 E. 4. She died in the year 1495, and king Henry the Seventh having married the heirefs of the house of York, became heir to this manor in right of his queen.

It was soon after granted to Thomas Moreton, upon whose death it descended to sir Robert Moreton his son, who died seized of it 6 H. 8. William his son succeeded him, and died at thirteen years of age 14 H. 8. whereupon it came to his sister Dorothy, married to Ralph Johnson, who had livery of the manor of Barnsley granted to them 16 H. 8.

From them it passed by purchase to William Bouchier, esq; son of Anthony Bouchier, and of Thomasin, sister of sir Walter Wildmay, and daughter of sir Miles Mildmay ; which William married Susan the daughter of — Brown, and dying 6 Eliz. Thomas Bouchier, his son and heir, had livery of this estate granted to him the same year. He dying, left two daughters coheiresses, whereof Anne was married to Thomas Rich, of North Cerney, esq; but Walter Bouchier, brother to Thomas, succeeded in the manor of Barnsley, of which he had livery 4 Jac. He married Mary the daughter of — Brown, of Shingleton in Kent, and was lord of this manor in the year 1608. William Bouchier, his son and heir, married Martha, daughter of Randall Brereton, esq; and was succeeded in this estate by his son Brereton Bouchier, esq; who married first, Elizabeth, daughter and heirefs of Thomas Hulbert, of Corsham in Wiltshire; secondly, Catherine the youngest daughter of James lord Chandois.

From the Bouchiers this estate went by marriage to Henry Perrot, esq; who left two daughters coheiresses, the younger of whom died unmarried in the year 1773, whereby the manor of Barnsley, and a large estate in this parish, became solely vested in Mrs. Cassandra Perrot, the surviving sister. Her arms are, Gules, three pears Or ; on a chief argent, a demy lion rampant sable.

There were several lands in this parish belonging to the priory of Lanthony near Gloucester, most of which, after the dissolution of that priory, were granted to William earl of Southampton and his heirs male, 31 H. 8. And others of them were granted to John Pope 37 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory within the peculiar of Bibury, worth about 140*l.* a year. Mrs. Perrot is patroness ; Mr. Charles Coxwell the present incumbent. There were fifty acres of arable land belonging to the glebe, but they were exchanged for other lands, when the common fields were inclosed in the year 1762, and the glebe now consists of about twenty computed acres, which are let for 16*l.* a year.

Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, in right of Joan his wife, was seized of the advowson of this church 46 E. 3. which passed in marriage, with Elianor one of their daughters,

Thomas duke of Gloucester; and Elianor surviving her husband died seized of it 1 H. 4. from whom it descended to Anne, one of her daughters and coheireffes, married to Edmond earl of Stafford, who, in her right, died seized of the advowson of this church 4 H. 4.

The church hath an aisle on the north side, and a small tower at the west end. It was built by Sir Giles Tame, who also built the inn at this place for his own accommodation in the road from his house at Fairford to Rendcombe, where he was then building the parish church of that place.

First fruits, £. 13 15 4 Tenths, £. 1 7 6 ob.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the chancel, against the north wall, is a white marble monument with the following inscription :

Hic propè situm est quod mortale fuit Elizabetha Uxoris præstantissimæ Breretonis Bouchier, de Barnesley in Agro Glocestriensi Armigeri, filiae unicæ Thomæ Hulbert de Corsham, in Agro Wiltoniensi Generosi & Annæ Uxoris ejus. Enixa gemellos filiam primogenitam, (qui paucorum tantum dierum luce frueantur, in partu, obitu, & sepulturâ pene individui :) decem eînde mensibus non penitus elapsis, magna imbecillitate corporis tacta, Obijt 2^o Novembris Anno Salutis 1691^o, Ætatis suæ 22^o.

Over this monument is a scutcheon, party per pale, baron and femme, 1. Azure, a chevron Or, between three martlets argent ; a crescent for difference, for Bouchier. 2. Sable, a cross between four leopards heads flory, Or, for Hulbert.

There is also a small marble monument for Sarah, widow of William Bouchier, M. A. late rector of Hatherop in this county; and daughter of Robert Brereton of Cirencester, gent. with the Bouchiers arms, as before, impaling those of Brereton, i. e. Barry of five pieces, argent and sable. He died in 1762, aged 93.

Also a Latin memorial on a flat stone for Richard Payne, M. A. rector of this church forty-two years, who died in 1739. And for Anne his wife, who died in 1742. Their arms are palewise, 1. Azure, three besants ; on a chief embattled argent, as many as in the field, for Payne. 2. The arms of Perrot.

Benefaction.

Mr. William Wise of this place, who died in the year 1774, gave 25*l.* for a stock for the use of the poor of this place for ever.

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	62	12	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	20	9	0
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	71	4	11
	The same, at 3 s. - 1770, —	45	0	0

At the beginning of this century, according to Robert Atkyns, there were 46 houses and about 60 inhabitants in this parish; births 4, burials

In a series of ten years, from 1701 to 1710, there are registered 33 baptisms and 43 burials. In a like series from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, are registered 68 baptisms and 56 burials; there are 4 families, and the number of inhabitants is increased to 217, which is in the proportion of about 40 to 1 of the average number of annual burials.

B A R N W O O D.

THIS is a small parish in the united hundreds of Dudston and King's-Barton. It lies in the vale country, one mile east from Gloucester, upon the turnpike-road from that city to London; and consists of rich pasture, with some arable land. A small brook runs from Prinknash thro' this place to Gloucester.

The name of this village shews that it was antiently over-run with wood, which indeed was the case with two or three other little hamlets adjoining to it, for Wotton is nothing more than the wood town, or woody town; and Hucklecot signifies the high wood, from the British Ukel high, and coed a wood.

The old Roman road from Gloucester to Cirencester runs through this place, but it is so worn out and destroyed as not to be discoverable, by a slight observer.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

It hath been already shewn from Domesday-book, p. 206, that the church of St. Peter of Gloucester held Berneuude in Dufestanes hundred, as a member of the manor of Bertune, in the reign of king Edward the Confessor. See also Domesday-book, p. 71.

This manor, with all its appurtenances, was confirmed to the abbey of Gloucester by William the Conqueror, when Serlo was abbat; and king Edward the Third granted to the abbey free-warren in all their demean lands at Bernewode, in the twenty-eighth year of his reign. In some papers relating to the abbey, are the following particulars concerning this estate in the seventeenth year of the last mentioned reign. The abbey had then four carucates of land of 20*s.* per ann. each; two mills of 30*s.* 6*d.* per ann. and, as it is there expressed, *relaxationem operum et censuum per ann. 13*s.* 4*d. the sum being 6*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*

The abbey continued seized of this manor 'till the dissolution of religious foundations, when it was granted by king Henry the Eighth, in the thirty-third year of his reign, to the chapter of Gloucester, by the charter of endowment, and is part of the revenues of the dean and chapter of that cathedral.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a curacy in the deanery of Gloucester, worth 35*l.* a year. The impropriation pays 12*l.* a year to the curate. The dean and chapter of Gloucester are patrons and impropriators.

The church, which is dedicated to St. Lawrence, hath an aisle on the north side of the nave, and a handsome handsome tower, with battlements, at the west end. It was built by abbat Parker, of St. Peter's in Gloucester.

Synodals, £. 0 2 0 Pentecostals, £. 0 0 7

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 128 10 8
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 13 18 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 129 19 0
		The same, at 3s. - 1770, — 97 15 3

At the beginning of this century there were 40 houses and 180 inhabitants in this parish, according to sir Robert Atkyns. The yearly births were 7, and burials 5. In a series of ten years from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were registered baptisms and burials. In a like series, from 1760 to 1769, there were baptisms and burials; and the present number of inhabitants is

BARRINGTON (GREAT.)

THE principal part of this parish lies in Gloucestershire, in the lower division of the hundred of Slaughter; but there are twenty-three houses in Berkshire, and some lands are reputed to be in the county of Oxford. It is three miles west from Burford in Oxfordshire, six east from Northleach, and twenty-six east from Gloucester; bounded on the north by Bledington, on the south by Little Barrington, and on the east by Tainton in Oxfordshire.

It gave denomination to the hundred of Bernitone, now comprised in that of Slaughter, for that was the antient manner of writing the name of this place, as in Domesday-book. If there had been some Saxon or other antient proprietor of the manor of the name of Bernard or Berni, the etymology would have been easy; but we have no account of the names of the proprietors in those early times.

That part which belongs to Berkshire is many miles distant from the body of that county. In the present state of things, this division of the parish is so unsuitable and inconvenient, that one is at first disposed to think it originally directed by whim and caprice; but it may be far otherwise, for as there are several more instances of the same nature, in this county, and as the abolition of the feudal system hath so materially altered many things concerning the internal government of our country, we have lost sight of the reason of some establishments, under that system, which are continued down to us. Having already touched upon those irregularities in the introductory part of this work, I shall not repeat what is there said of them, as the reader, by turning to the 45th page, may see the most probable conjectures upon them which I have any where met with.

Lady Talbot has a fine seat in this parish, upon an easy elevation on the north side of the river Windrush, which winds its course thro' the meadows in a beautiful manner, about two hundred yards below the house. Her ladyship, according to her accustomed generosity, hath given a plate of her seat, which will convey a better idea of it than verbal description.

The house is in Gloucestershire, but part of the offices in Berkshire.

The air of this place is reckoned healthy, and the soil good, but it produces no scarce plants nor fossils. The river I have mentioned has very fine trout, and other fish of less consequence. Here is also a quarry of freestone remarkable for its durableness, and therefore, it is said, much of the stone hath been used in repairing of Westminster abbey; and Blenheim-house was built with it.

The broad cloth manufacture hath been carried on here, but there is very little done at present.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

The Domesday account of this village may be thus translated:

'Tovi Widenesa, a domestick servant (byscarle) of earl Harold, held Bernitone. There are four hides. In demean are three plow-tillages, and ten villeins, and five bordars with five plow-tillages. There are four servi, and a mill of 5s. [value.] It is worth 8l. and was worth 7l. Elsi de Ferendone holds it in farm of the king. Eilmer held four hides in Bernitone for a manor in the time of king Edward. There is one plow-tillage in demean, and seven villeins, and three bordars, with four plow-tillages. There are six servi, and a mill of 5s. It was worth 100s. now 60s. Godwin de Stantoon holds it in farm of the king.' Dom. Book, p. 69.

This manor afterwards belonged to the prior of Lanthony near Gloucester. The prior purchased a charter of free-warren in Bernitone and several other manors, 21 E. 1.

At the dissolution of that monastery it was vested in the crown, and the manor, with the tithes of the demean, were granted to John Gyse, ancestor of sir William Gyse of Rendcombe, in exchange for Asple-Gyese in Bedfordshire, 32 H. 2.

It was afterwards purchased, with the fishery free warren, and frank-pledge, by Richard Mounnington, esq; who levied a fine thereof 1 Mar. 15.

He had an only child Anne, married to Reginald Bray, esq; and so this estate came into that family, which continued in possession of it two hundred years. About the year 1734, it was purchased, together with the manor of Giffington in this county, and those of Tainton and Fifield in Oxfordshire, of Reginald Mounnington, esq; in the name of the late lord chancellor Talbot.

* This family is of very antient extraction. Le seigneur de Bray, lord of Braye, or Bray, in Normandy, came into England with the Conqueror, of whom mention is made in the Historiarum of Matthew Westminster. Ralph de Braye, lord

Drawn and Engraved by J. W. Turner

(Barrington Park the Seat of the Countess Talbot.)

Talbot, but principally with a part of the fortune of the present Mary countess Talbot, wife of William earl Talbot, lord steward of his majesty's household, and sole daughter and heiress of Adam de Cardonnel, esq; secretary at war in the reign of queen Anne. This purchase was made in her ladyship's minority; but on her coming to age, about six years afterwards, she sold her estates in Hampshire, Suffex, and Yorkshire, and bought the whole of those four manors above-mentioned, and her ladyship is the present proprietor of them. Her coat of arms is, Gules, a lion rampant, within a border engrailed Or; a crescent for difference.—Supporters, On either side a talbot argent, collared with a double tressure flory counter flory gules.—Motto, HUMANI NIHIL ALIENUM.

Other lands in Barrington belonged to the priory of Burton, and were granted to Edmund Hermor 35 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Stow, worth 75*l.* a year. Lady Talbot is patroness, and has the impropriation, which pays 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly to the crown. It formerly belonged to the priory of Lanthony.

The lady of the manor pays one acre of wheat, and another of barley, in lieu of tithe-corn of the demans; and a modus in money for sheep and mills.

Mr. Bradley, sometime vicar of this parish, built a vicarage-house, which stood in Berkshire; but that was exchanged, some years ago, with lord Talbot, for another house which stands in the same county.

The church is dedicated to St. Peter. It is a handsome building, with a tower, adorned with battlements and pinnacles, at the west end, and an aisle on the north side, which was the burying-place of the family of the Brays. There are six bells.

Cumtone, was sheriff of the counties of Northampton, Southampton, Somerset, Dorset, Oxford, Leicester, Bedford, and Bucks, in the reigns of John and Henry the Third. There was a sir James Bray of the county of Northampton, from whom the descent of this family is regularly deduced in Vincent's book in the heralds office.

Thomas Bray was great grandson of sir James; William was son and heir of Thomas, and Edmund Bray, of Eton Bray, in the county of Bedford, was son and heir of William. He had a son Richard, who was privy-counsellor to king Henry the Sixth, and was buried in Worcester cathedral. By his second wife he had issue sir Reginald, and another son, John.

Sir Reginald was receiver-general to sir Henry Stafford, who married Margaret countess of Richmond, mother to king Henry the Seventh. When the duke of Buckingham had concerted, with Morton bishop of Ely, the union of the houses of York and Lancaster, by the marriage of the earl of Richmond with the princess Elizabeth, sir Reginald, by the bishop's recommendation, was employ'd to transact that affair with the countess, and other principal persons, which he managed with great dexterity and success.

King Henry was so sensible of his services, that he made him knight of the Bath at his coronation, and, in the first year of his reign, appointed him joint chief justice with lord Fitz-Walter, of the forests south of Trent, and to be one of the privy-council. He was afterwards appointed high treasurer, chosen knight of the garter, made chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaster, and high steward of the University of Oxford; and he was also made knight banneret. These and many other honours and great monuments are mentioned by our historians to have been conferred upon him by the king, particularly by Hall, Hollinshead, Stow, and Ashmole. He died in the year 1503, without issue, and was buried in the chapel at Windsor. He had a younger son, John, who had three sons, Edmund, Edward, and Reginald.

Edmund, the eldest son, succeeded to a large part of sir Reginald's estate, and in 1530, had summons to parliament as baron of Eton Bray. He married Jane, daughter and heir of sir Richard Haleighwell, who brought many great estates into his family, and had issue by her one son, John, and six daughters. John lord Bray died without issue, whereby his six sisters became his coheiresses.

He returned now to sir Edward Bray, second son of John, who married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Henry Lovell, from whom he was divorced, and afterwards married Beatrice, daughter of Ralph Shirley, of Wiltenton in Suffex, by whom he had two sons, Edward and Owen, and one daughter. She, he married Jane, daughter of sir Matthew Brown, of Chworth castle in Surry, (and widow of Francis Poyntz, esq;) whom he had no issue; which last marriage was a very unfortunate one for his family; for dying, he gave all his fee-simple lands to his wife Jane for life, with all his woods and underwoods, and willed that if his son Edward interrupted her, she should have them in fee.

Sir Edward Bray succeeded his father in the settled estates, but disagreeing with lady Jane, she sold all the lands in her power by her husband's will, whereby the paternal estate was greatly diminished. He married first, Magdalene, daughter of sir Thomas Cotton, by whom he had issue Reginald his son and heir. He had also a second wife Mary, by whom he had three daughters. In the latter part of his life he resided at Shere in Surry, which has been the residence of his descendants ever since.

Reginald Bray, esq; only son of sir Edward, married a daughter of Richard Covert, of Hascomb in Surry, esq; by whom he had three sons and one daughter.

Edward, his eldest son, married Jane, daughter of Edward Covert, of Twynham in Suffex, esq; by whom he had seven children; and by a second wife he had one daughter.

Edward, his eldest son and heir, married Susanna, daughter of William Heath, of Pedinghoe, esq; by whom he had seven children.

Edward, the eldest, married Frances, daughter of Morgan Randyll, of Chilworth in Surry, esq; by whom he had nine children; and by this marriage his descendants have a claim of founder's kin at All Souls college, Oxford.

Randyll, his eldest son, dying without issue, Edward, the second son, became his father's heir. He married Anne, eldest daughter of George Duncombe, rector of Shere, by whom he had four sons, of whom George, his eldest son, succeeded him, and entered into holy orders in the year 1752. — Edward, his second son, was bred a surgeon, and was appointed surgeon to the thirty-fifth regiment of foot. — Charles, the third son, died an infant. — William, the fourth son, was bred an attorney, had an employment at the board of green cloth, and was afterwards appointed, by the lord steward, clerk of the verge. He married Mary, daughter of Henry Stevens, of Witley in Surry, gent. by whom he has issue several children.

But the branch of this family to whom Barrington belonged, sprung from Reginald Bray, third son of John, and youngest nephew of the first sir Reginald. This Reginald the nephew married Anne, daughter and heir of Richard Monnington, of Barrington, esq; and settled there. He was succeeded by Edmond his eldest son, who married Agnes, daughter and heir of Edmond Harman, of Taynton in Oxfordshire, by whom he had Edmond his son and heir, who married Dorothy, daughter of sir John Tracy, of Toddington. He was a captain in queen Elizabeth's time, of whom further mention is made under Monuments and Inscriptions.

Sir Giles, son and heir of the last Edmond, married Anne, daughter of Richard Chetwood, and was succeeded by his son and heir sir Edmond, who was an active royalist, and was forced to compound for 119*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* He died about 1684, and was succeeded by Reginald his son and heir, who also died in 1688. Edmond his fourth son became his heir, and married Frances, daughter and coheir of sir John Morgan, of Lantarnam in Monmouthshire, barl. with whom he had a great estate. Reginald Morgan Bray was his eldest son and heir, who sold Barrington, as above related, and died without issue.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Lord chancellor Talbot is buried in the chancel without any memorial.

There is a handsome marble monument in the church, against the wall of the north aisle, for captain Edmund Bray, with the figures of him and his wife well executed.

And in the same aisle is a handsome freestone monument, without any inscription. It represents a man in armour, lying at length, with his sword girt on the right side, and is said to be for another captain Edmund Bray, father of sir Giles Bray, who had unhappily killed a man, and was pardoned by queen Elizabeth at Tilbury camp. He ever afterwards wore his sword on the right side, and never used his right hand, in token of his true sorrow, and sincere repentance. The arms of the family are in a scutcheon over the monument, viz. Argent, a chevron between three eagles legs erased sable.

There is an inscription for Reginald Bray, esq; who died in the year 1692. And another for James Stephens, esq; who married Barbara, daughter of Reginald Bray, esq; and for James and John two of their children, who died young. The arms of Stephens, impaling those of Bray, are on the monument, viz. Per chevron, azure and argent, in chief two eagles display'd Or.

There is a memorial, on a flat stone in the chancel, for Philip Parsons, M. D. president of Hart-hall in Oxford, who died in 1653, with his arms, Gules, two chevronels, in the dexter canton an eagle display'd.

First fruits, £.	7	6	8	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	0	14	8	Pentecostals, 0	1	1
Procurations, 0	6	8

Benefactions.

The long causeway, between this parish and Little Barrington, was erected by Thomas Strong of London, freemason, who gave 5*l.* the interest of which to be given to the poor on St. Thomas day.

William Matthews, of London, gave 5*l.* the interest of which to be given to the poor at the same time. And John Tailer hath given an annuity of 20*s.* to the poor, charged on lands at Milton.

Taxes.	{ The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 90 8 0 Poll-tax — — — — 1694, — 30 15 6 Land-tax — — — — 1694, — 65 12 0 The same, at 3 s. — 1770, — 47 13 3
--------	--

N. B. The land-tax of Little Barrington is included in the above.

At the beginning of this century there were 43 houses in this parish, whereof 28 were in Gloucestershire, and about 120 inhabitants in the same county. The yearly births were 6, burials 4. Atkyns.—But examining the register, I find, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709, there were 62 baptisms and 57 burials. And in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, the baptisms were 109, the burials 55. And the number of inhabitants is about 393, which is in the proportion of 70 to 1 of the average number of annual burials.

Before I close the account of this parish it is proper to observe, that lady Talbot's paternal coat of arms is Argent, two chevronels azure, between three trefoils vert; and that the arms described in the preceding page, are those of the earl of Talbot, her ladyship's consort.

BARRINGTON (LITTLE,)

IS a small parish in the lower division of the hundred of Slaughter, situate on the banks of the river Windrush, mentioned in the preceding parish, three miles west from Burford in Oxfordshire, and twenty-six east from Gloucester. The common fields were inclosed in the year 1760, and the rents much improved thereby.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Domesday-book, among the lands of William Gozenboded, gives the following particulars:

'The same William holds two hides in Berintone in Berintone hundred, and Radulfus holds them of him. Alwinus held them in the time of king Edward. In demean is one plow-tillage, and one servus, and a mill of 40*d.* [rent] and six acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 40*s.*' Domesday-book, p. 74.

'Walter the son of Roger holds Bernintone in Berninton hundred, of the king. There are eight hides. Turstan and Eduui held them for two manors. In demean are four plow-tillages, and fourteen villeins, and a priest, and two bordars with nine plow-tillages. There are fourteen servi, and a mill of 10*s.* [rent] and twenty acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 8*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 77.

The master of the knights-templars was seized of court-leet, waifs, and felons goods in Little Barrington, by the grant of king Henry the Third.

The prior of Lanthony held another manor in Little Barrington, which had been granted by Maud the Empress, 15 E. 1. and several privileges were allowed the same year in a writ of Quo Warranto.

One of these manors, probably the first, was held of William de Clinton earl of Huntingdon, 28 E. 3.

Other lands in Little Barrington belonged to the abbey of Bruern in Oxfordshire, and were granted to Edward Powell, 36 H. 8.

This manor was the joint property of Thomas Smith, esq; of London, and Mr. Joseph Ellis of Ebley, in the year 1768; but since the death of the latter, his nephew Mr. Thomas Ellis hath purchased purchased Mr. Smith's moiety, and is the present proprietor of the manor.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Stow, worth about 35*l.* a year before the inclosing; which has considerably improved it. The priory of Lanthony near Gloucester had formerly the presentation to this church, which is now in the lord chancellor.

A portion of tithes formerly belonging to Lanthony priory, was granted to Lawrence Baskerville and William Blake, 3 Jac. The impropiator hath now an estate allotted him in lieu of tithes.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and has an aisle on the north side, and a tower at the west end, adorned with battlements.

First Fruits, £. 4 19 1 Synodals, £. 0 1 0
Tithes, — -- 0 9 11 Pentecostals, 0 0 4
Procurements, - 0 0 0

Benefaction.

There is an estate in this parish, which now costs for 22*l.* a year, for the repairs of the church, and relief of the poor.

This parish is rated in the public tax with great Barrington.

At the beginning of this century, according to Robert Atkyns, there were 18 houses, and about 82 inhabitants in this parish. The yearly births 2, and burials 2. In a series of seven years, from 1761 to 1767 inclusive, there were register'd baptisms, and 14 burials; and the present number of inhabitants is 124, exactly in the proportion of 62 to 1 of the average number of annual burials. A remarkable instance of salubrity.

The modern name implies an idea of the place being situated at the ford of some brook or river. The antient name of it was Becesfore, and signifies nearly the same, from bec, a stream of water; accordingly there is a small brook which runs into the Evenlode, which rises near this place.

The great Roman fofs-road, from the north, runs through the parish, and so on to Cirencester, Bath, &c. and there is a small intrenchment, almost intire, supposed to have been thrown up by the Romans.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Soon after the Norman conquest, Ansfrid de Comeliis was possessed of several good estates in Gloucestershire, of which this was one, described in the record in the following manner:

'The same Ansfrid holds Beceshore in Witelai hundred. Brifmer held it. There are three hides. In demean are three plow-tillages, and ten villeins, with six plow-tillages, and sixteen servi, and one man paying six sochs. It was worth 8*l.* and is now worth 6*l.* Dom. B. p. 78.

From Ansfrid it descended to his son and heir Richard de Cormeliis, who dying 23 H. 2. was succeeded by Walter his son, who left three daughters coheiresses, Margaret, Albreda, and Sybil; of whom, the first held Begsoure 10 H. 3.

But Hugh Giffard, a younger brother to Elias Giffard of Brimpsfield, marrying Sybil the youngest daughter, had the manor of Beckshore, with others, assigned to him for her share. He was made constable of the tower of London 20 H. 3. Walter de Giffard was their son and heir, who dying without issue, was succeeded by his brother Golefry, whose son Golefry, or Geofry Giffard, was seized of Beckshore, and purchased a charter of free warren therein, 9 E. 3.

From this time there is a large vacancy in the account of the descent of this manor; for we come next to John Croker, esq; who was lord of it in 1608. He left three daughters coheiresses, from whom were descended sir Christopher Hales, formerly of Coventry, — Pyc, of Farringdon, esq; and a family of the name of Barker, of Berkshire, who enjoyed this manor in the year 1712.

The manor of Batsford, and a great estate in the parish, is now the property of Thomas-Edwards Freeman, esq; descended from an antient family, justly esteemed in their country, which has long resided in this place. John Freeman was seated here in the reign of Henry the Seventh. Thomas Freeman was a descendant from him, whose son Richard Freeman married Margaret, daughter of — Rutter, of Queinton, esq; He was succeeded by his son John, who married Anne, daughter of — Croft, of Sutton; and was also succeeded by his son Richard Freeman, who married Elizabeth, daughter of sir Anthony Keck, one of the lords commissioners of the great seal, in the reign of king William the Third, by whom he had an only child Mary, of whom hereafter. His second wife was Anne, daughter and heir

Y y

BARTON near GLOUCESTER.

see SUBURBS of GLOUCESTER, p. 206.

B A T S F O R D.

PART of this parish is situated on the slope of a hill looking towards the east; the rest in a vale. It lies in the upper division of the hundred of Kiftesgate, four miles southward from Campden, and six north from Stow in this county; eight west from Shipston in Gloucestershire, and twenty-nine north-eastward in Gloucester. It is bounded by Blockley (a detached parish in Worcestershire) on the east and north sides, and by Morton-in-marsh Bourton-on-the-hill on the south, extending to a place where four counties meet, of which there is a particular account under Morton-in-marsh.

The parish is three miles in length and one in breadth; the air healthy, and the soil, for the most part, a fine loam.

heir of Richard Marshall, esq; of Sellaby, in the county of Durham.

He was made lord chief baron of the exchequer in Ireland, in the year 1706, and his eminent merit soon advanced him to be lord high chancellor, and to be one of the lords justices to govern that kingdom in the absence of the lord lieutenant. These great preferments were not his own seeking; his great prudence, integrity, and moderation claimed so high a station. He died in Ireland in the year 1710, having continued in the possession of those high offices to the time of his death.

Richard Freeman, esq; only son of the chancellor, by Anne Marshall, his second wife, succeeded his father in this and his other estates, and married Margaret-Elizabeth Sawyer, daughter of — Sawyer, of Bedfordshire, esq; by whom he left no issue. Walter-Edwards Freeman, esq; (son of Mary, only daughter of chancellor Freeman, married to Walter Edwards, of the county of Gloucester, esq;) succeeded his uncle in this and other estates, and dying unmarried, was succeeded by Thomas-Edwards Freeman, esq; youngest son of the said Mary, already mentioned to be the present lord of this manor. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Reveley, of Newby-Wisk, in the county of York, esq; by whom he has living one son, Thomas, born in 1754. He gives two coats of arms quarterly. 1st and 4th, Azure, three lozenges in fess, Or. 2d and 3d, Party per bend sinister, ermine and erminois, a lion rampant Or.

Mr. Freeman has an elegant seat here, of which he has been pleased to give the annexed engraving.

Of the other estates, the records shew that Richard Thurgreen was seized of divers lands in Beckshore, and left them to Joan his only child, married to Thomas Hoddington, who together levied a fine thereof to themselves in special tail, the remainder to Thomas the son of Alexander de Beckford, 14 R. 2.

Lands called Monk-meadow, or Monken-meadow, in Batesford, belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, and were granted to John Fernham 22 Eliz.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the deanery of Campden, worth 180*l.* a year, of which the glebe only is worth about 100*l.* This land was set out for the rector, when the parish was inclosed, in the reign of queen Elizabeth. Christ-Church college in Oxford is patron, the reverend Edward Smallwell, B. D. the present rector.

Richard Thurgreen was seized of the advowson of this church, which descended from him in the same manner as the lands above mentioned, down to 14 R. 2.

The abbey of Winchcombe was possessed of tithes in Batesford, which, after the dissolution, were granted to sir Thomas Scimour, 1 E. 6.

This parish was under the peculiar jurisdiction of Blockley in Worcestershire, where they formerly buried; and the inhabitants still pay mortuaries to the vicarage of that place.

All the lands in the parish are subject to tithes.

The church is small, and was formerly called the chapel of Beckford.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a monument in the church to the memory of lord chancellor Freeman, his son Richard Freeman, esq; and other branches of the family.

Another monument in memory of the reverend doctor Thomas Burton, prebendary of Durham, and late rector of this parish.

First fruits, £.	13	3	9	Synodals, £.	0	1	0
Tenths, —	1	6	7	Pentecostals, 0	0	0	0
Procurations,	0	2	0

Benefaction.

In the year 1728, Mrs. Anne Freeman gave the interest of 100*l.* by will, for reading prayers, and doing other duties on particular fasts and festivals.

Taxes:	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.	108	4	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694,	—	18	6	0
	Land-tax — — 1694,	—	93	18	0
	The same, at 3 s. - 1770,	—	70	8	0

At the beginning of this century there were 11 houses and about 80 inhabitants in this parish, of whom 6 were freeholders; yearly births and burials 2, Atkyns. In a series of ten years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were registered baptisms and 13 burials; and the number of inhabitants is 87.

B A U N T O N.

THIS is a small village in the hundred of Crowthorn and Minety, one mile distant north from Cirencester, and sixteen southward from Gloucester. It is situated on the side of the river Churn, which runs to Cirencester.

The name of the place was antiently written Baudintone, and Pennington. The latter mode of writing it, more especially carries with it the idea of its situation at the top of the town, i. e. Cirencester; for pen or ben, in the British language, signifies the top of any thing; and in the place seems to have been formerly dependent on that town, where its inhabitants had formerly a right of sepulture.

The place affords nothing observable in its history. The common fields and common places were inclosed and divided, about the year 1768, to the great advantage of the proprietors. The air is healthy, and the soil chiefly employed in tillage.

C. Gandy Pin.

J. Bannock. Sculp.

(Battisford, the Seat of Thomas Edwards, Freeman Esq.)

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book are the following particulars :

' Edric the son of Ketel holds Baudintone, in Cireceſtre hundred, of the king, which his father held in the time of king Edward. There are three hides and three yard-lands taxed. In demean are two plow-tillages, and three villeins with one plow-tillage, and four ſervi, and fifteen arces of meadow. It is worth and was worth 60s.' Domesday-book, p. 79.

' Goisfridus Orleteile holds of the king, in Baudintone, two hides and one yard-land, taxed. Bolli held them. It is not in demean; but there are two villeins, and eight bordars, with three plow tillages. It is worth and was worth 40s. There are eight acres of meadow.' Domesday-book, p. 76.

Sir Robert Atkyns, under this head, afferts, that the manor of Baudintone was held of Hugh de Audley earl of Glouceſter, and Margaret his wife, 21 E. 3. and that it was held of Humphry de Bohun earl of Hereford and Eſſex, and of Joan his wife, 46 E. 3. and of Hugh earl of Stafford, by half a fee, 10 R. 2. of Thomas earl of Stafford, the 16th, and of William his brother, 22 R. 2. But I am of opinion, that the ſeveral records referred to by theſe dates, relate not to this place, but to Boddington, in the hundred of Tewkeſbury, which was held as of the honour of Glouceſter, and is ſaid to be within the juriſdiction of the honour court at this time.

The abbey church of Cirenceſter was very early poſſeſſed of the manor of Baudintone, of which Robert Playne and others, for the uſe of that church, were ſeized 6 R. 2. and it continued to be part of the poſſeſſions of that abbey, 'till the diſſolution of it; upon which event, the family of the Georges became lords of it. They had been long owners of an eſtate in this place, which came to them by the marriage of William George with Catherine, daughter and coheir of Robert de Pennington, 3 E. 2. and it continued in that family four hundred years.

Chriſtopher George married Anne, daughter of Robert Strange, of Cirenceſter. Robert George, his ſon, married Margaret, daughter of Edward Aldſworth, eſq; and was ſucceeded by John George, his brother, eminent for his loyalty in the great civil wars, and who ſerved in parliament as burgeſs of Cirenceſter, in the reigns of king Charles the Firſt, and king Charles the Second. He died in 1675, leaving an only daughter, married to Richard Whitmore, of Slaught, eſq; but ſettled the manor of Baunton on his nephews. William George, his ſurviving nephew, ſold it to Thomas Maſter, of Cirenceſter, eſq; about the end of the laſt century, whoſe deſcendant in a direct line, Thomas Maſter, of Cirenceſter, eſq; the preſent lord of the manor. See Cirenceſter.

Of the other eſtates, the records ſhew, that John de Baudinton, and Alice his wife, levied a fine of lands therein, to the uſe of themſelves in tail ſpecial, 11 E. 3.

William Nottingham levied a fine of lands in Baunton, to the uſe of himſelf in ſpecial tail, 20 H. 6.

Lands in Baunton, formerly belonging to the knights hoſpitaillers, were granted to John Walters and Thomas Carpenter, 1 Mar.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is an impropriation, in the deanery of Cirenceſter, worth 10*l.* a year to the curate. It formerly belonged to the abbey of Cirenceſter. Thomas Maſter, eſq; is patron and impropriator; Mr. Joſeph Chapman the preſent incumbent.

The church is ſmall, without a ſteeple. In the year 1625, Dr. Godfrey Goodman, then biſhop of Glouceſter, conſecrated the burying ground, at the requeſt of John George, eſq; before which time the inhabitants buried at Cirenceſter.

Pentecoſtals, — £. 0 0 4 ob.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	17	4	8
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	5	8	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	21	16	0
		The ſame, at 3 s. — 1770, —	17	2	0

At the beginning of this century there were 18 houſes and about 70 inhabitants in this pariſh; yearly births 2, burials 1. Atkyns. But examining the pariſh register, I find, that in a ſeries of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were 15 baptiſms and 7 burials; and in a like ſeries, from 1760 to 1769, there are regiſtered 30 baptiſms and 21 burials; and the number of inhabitants is 56.

B E C K F O R D.

THIS pariſh is ſituate in the vale. The greater part of it lies in the hundred of Tibbleſtone, but the tithing of Didcot is in the upper part of Tewkeſbury hundred. The pariſh is five miles diſtant north-weſt from Winchcombe, five north-caſt from Tewkeſbury, and fifteen north from Glouceſter. It is about four miles in length, and as many in breadth; bounded on the eaſt by Aſton-under-hill, on the weſt by Kemmerton, on the north by Overbury, in Worceſterſhire, and on the ſouth by Teddington, a detached pariſh belonging to the laſt mentioned county.

This pariſh was incloſed in the year 1773. Part of Breedon hill lies within it, on the ſide of which great numbers of Roman coins have been found, of which further mention will be made under Kemmerton.

The hundred of Tibbleſtone, antiently written Tetboldeſtanc, derives its name from a ſtone in this pariſh, now ſtanding near the turnpike-road from Tewkeſbury to London.

The

The river Caran, or Carant, rises here, and runs into the Avon near Tewkesbury.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Beckford is one of those manors, placed in Domesday-book, under the head Terra Regis, where it is expressed after this manner :

‘ Rotlesc, huscarle of king Edward, held Beckford in Tetboldestane hundred. There were eleven hides, and three plow-tillages in demean, and thirty-four villeins, and seventeen bordars, having thirty plow-tillages. There are twelve servi, and four ancillæ. Earl William gave three hides of this manor to Ansfridus de Cormeliis, in which were twelve villeins with five plow-tillages.’ Domesday-book, p. 69.

‘ Turbertus, a thane of earl Herald, held Estone. There are eight hides, and four plow-tillages in demean, and ten villeins and four bordars with six plow-tillages. There are eight servi, and three ancilla. Of these two villages earl William made one manor, and they were not put to farm till Roger de Lurei let them for 30*l*. The same earl gave the tithe and the churches, with two villeins, and three virgates of land, to the abbey of Cormeile.’ Domesday-book, p. 69.

Robert Fitz-Alan founded a priory of regular canons in this place, which was made a cell to the abbey of St. Martin and St. Barbara in Normandy. For the charters of grants relating thereto, see Appendix, N^o. 28.

The priory was seized of the manor of Beckford, Aston, and Grafton, 56 H. 3.

William de Beauchamp earl of Warwick was seized of a manor in Beckford, with free warren and court-leet, 15 E. 1. But I apprehend it must have been in trust for the priory, for the prior of Beckford held the manor of Beckford, with court-leet and waifs, and his right was allowed the same year, in a writ of Quo warranto.

King Edward the Third, upon his wars with France, had the estates of all the priories in England, that were cells to monasteries in France, granted to him in parliament 10 E. 3. (i. e. 1336.) whereupon he let out those priories to farm, with all their lands and tenements. This priory was afterwards totally suppressed in the year 1414, 2 H. 5. (when all other alien monasteries in England were suppressed by act of parliament) and the manor of Beckford, and the lands belonging to it, were granted to Eton college, by king Henry the Sixth, in the twenty-second and twenty-third years of his reign; and afterwards they were granted to the college of Fotheringhay, 2 E. 4. And in the first year of king Edward the Sixth, when all the religious endowments, which had escaped king Henry the Eighth, were taken away, the manor and park of Beckford, with the advowson of the vicarage, together with the rectory and advowson of the vicarage of Grafton, all which belonged to that college, were granted to sir Richard Lee.

John Wakeman was lord of this manor in the year 1608; and Henry Wakeman, esq; is the present lord thereof, and of the hundred of Tibblestone, of which he holds court-leet and court-baron at Beckford. He is descended from the antient family of the Wakemans, of Rippon in Yorkshire. His arms are, Vert, a saltire wavy ermine. Mr. Wakeman has a very large, handsome seat near the church.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

There are four tithings in this parish.

1. Beckford.

2. Grafton.

3. Bengrove. Adam de Ardeen held lands in Bengrave 56 H. 3. and Thomas Roberts died seized of lands in Bengrove 11 C. 1. which descended to Thomas his son.

4. Didcot, or Didcot Pastures. Lands in Didcot formerly belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, and were granted to Richard Tracy 36 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Campden. Joseph Biddle, M. A. is the present patron and incumbent. The church and advowson were given to the abbey of Cormeile by king H. 1. and having accompanied the manor, were granted, at the dissolution of the college of Fotheringhay, to sir Richard Lee. Mr. Wakeman, the impropiator, has the tithes of Beckford, Grafton, and Didcot; and Mr. Morris has part of the tithes of Bengrove. The tithes of Bengrove pay 40*s*. a year to the crown.

The impropiator formerly paid the vicar eight quarters of wheat, four quarters of barley, six quarters of oats, and eight pounds in money yearly; but the bill for inclosing the common fields, &c. in the parish, empowered the commissioners to set out land for the vicar in lieu thereof. The vicarage was estimated at 80*l*. a year; but it hath been lately much improved.

The church is dedicated to St. Barbara, (martyred in the reign of the emperor Maxentius) and hath a handsome high tower in the middle, with pinnacles, and a vestry on the north side of the chancel.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Against the north wall of the chancel is a plain marble monument, with a scutcheon, on which are the arms of Wakeman impaling the following, Argent, on a chevron between three lions beads erased sable, an estoile proper, for Hall. Upon the table it is thus inscribed :

D. O. M.

Mortale Spolium Richardi Wakeman Armig. Insigne genere et Pietate Parentibus Odoardo et Maria oriundi legit saxum. Qui Sacramento fideli ad extremam belli Alca Strenuus dura perituri Regis secutus fata, domum tandem redidit an relegatus? Recussis in Rastra et Ligones (Romanorum consulum exemplo) Gramineam facile colat omnibus Fœlici rei rusticanae peritiâ Coronam præripuit.

Sed eheu! brevis paterni Agri hæres, prid. Kal. sept. A. a part. virg. CIO. DC. LXII. ex ipsâ Ætatis meridie præceps in occasum ruit. Ægre perquam Extincti tulere desiderium Amici, Propinqui, Sorores, Fratres, Liberi, sed omnium ægerrime Anna conjux mœrentissima, quæ perenni viri desideratissimi, memoriæ Aureis hæc incisis marmori characteribus, (Pullam ipsa nunquam mutatura) Parentavit.

Spiritus ut Cælum subeat novus Incola, numen Primævâ supplex devenerare Fide.

On a blue stone, a scutcheon, party per fefs, baron and femme, 1. Argent, a chevron sable, between three hawthorn leaves proper, for Thornton. 2. Party per chevron, three lions passant, (no colours expressed) for Lunn. And under, this inscription:

En quo secundam D. Iesu expectat epiphaniam, Pulchra, modesta, chara, Elizabetha Thornton, quæ Parentes Lebbeum Lunn, ecclesiæ hujus Pastorem, fidelissimam uxoremq; ipsius Elizabetham, Et conjugem Robertum Thornton, A. M. de Staunton in agro Wigorniensis, tristes reliquit, et infelices, Sept. 4^o Anno Dom. 1706, Ætat. suæ 29.

First fruits	£	16	18	10	Synodals	£.	0	4	0
Tenths	—	1	13	8	Pentecost.	0	1	1
Procurations	0	6	8

Benefaction.

The land called the Church Land, worth about 9l. a year, is given to the use of the poor.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.	93	14	0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, —		28	2	0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, —		130	12	0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, —		98	9	6

At the beginning of this century, there were 56 houses, and about 250 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 10 were freeholders; yearly births 7, burials 5. Atkyns. But in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there are entered in the parish register 84 baptisms, and 60 burials. In a like series, from 1760 to 1769, there are registered 109 baptisms, and 94 burials: So that the inhabitants being 403, are very much increased, and the average of annual burials, is to the whole number of living, nearly as 1 to 37.

B E R K E L E Y

IS a very large parish, in the lower level of the Vale of Gloucestershire. It lies within the hundred of the same name, which took denomination from the town or borough of Berkeley, situate about the middle of the parish, five miles distant west from Dursley, seven north from Thornbury, and eighteen south-westward from Gloucester. The parish is bounded on the north-west by the great river Severn.

In Domesday-book the name is written Berchelai, whereas the Saxons wrote it Beorcenlau. It is supposed to have been so called from Beorce, the beech-tree, because it grew very plentifully there. Some persons, however, may object to this etymology, since at present there is no beech wood in the parish; but it is evident that there was a wood in Berkeley, from an inquisition taken by the king's escheator, 15 E. 2. wherein it is said, There are forty acres of high wood, the pannage of which is worth half a mark, and no more. And furthure, to obviate the objection, it may be added, that there are many places which took denomination from antient woods, which being affarted, have no traces of them left but in the names of such places only.

The town is one of those antient boroughs, of which there were five in Gloucestershire in the time of king Edward the First, (p. 43.) It is situated on the Avon, a small river rising in two heads at Boxwell and Kilcot, and receiving the contributions of two or three brooks in its course, falls into the Severn a little below the town, which, on this account, as I find it in Willis's Notitia Parliamentaria, hath been also called Aveney.

King Edward the Third granted to William lord Berkeley and his heirs, the privileges of a mintage for coining, and the return of writs within the town and hundred of Berkeley; so that no sheriff, bailiff, or other of the king's officers, should exercise any authority there; but those privileges have been long since disused, because the expence of passing accounts in the exchequer exceeded the profits arising from them.

What the town was above two centuries back, may be seen by Leland's description of it: 'The Towne of Berkeley,' says he, 'is no great Thing, but it standythe well, and in a very good Soyle. It hathe very much occupied, and yet some what dothe, Clothinge. The churchestondithe on an Hille at the South Ende of the Towne. And the Castle stonidithe at the South West End of the Church. It is no great Thing. Divers Towres be in the Compase of it. The Warde of the first Gate is mitely stronge, and a Bridge over a Dyche to it. There is a square Dongeon Towre in the Castle, sed non stat in mole ægestæ Terræ. There longe to Berkeley 4 Parks, 2 Chaces. Okely Parke hard by. Whitwike. New Parke. Hawlle Parke. Miche Wood Chace.' Leland's Itin. v. 7. p. 96.

The town is honoured by giving both name and title to the earls of Berkeley. I come now to treat of the present state of it. It is called a borough, tho' it sends no members to parliament, and has a mayor annually chosen at the court-leet, who has the tolls of the town, and wheelage of all goods landed from the vessels in the river, at 2d. a load; but the authority and privilege of his office seem to extend no further. The borough consists principally of one street of mean buildings, through which there is little or no travelling, the turnpike-road from Gloucester to Bristol running about a mile to the south of it. Several old accounts mention the clothing trade having flourished in this place, but it hath long since deserted it, and is not succeeded by any other kind of manufacture. Tuesday is the day of the market, which is so little frequented that it scarcely deserves to be called one. Since the alteration of the style, the fair, which used to be on the third, is held on the fourteenth of May, for hogs and other cattle.

It hath been observed that this borough gives name to one of the hundreds of the county, which is very large, consisting of thirty-three parishes and tithings, beside the borough, (p. 40). There were 2064 able men returned out of the hundred, upon a general muster taken 6 Jac. and soon after the new militia law took place, 30 G. 2. the hundred of Berkeley was appointed to raise 85 men for its proportion towards the county militia; which was found to be the twenty-ninth part of the whole number of able men, between the ages of eighteen and fifty, that were then resident within it, and liable to that service; so that the whole number upon the lists must then be 2465. There were formerly twelve parks, and two chaces in this hundred: Castle-park, Whitley-park, New-park, Okely-park, Shepnash-park, Hampark, Beverstone-park, Hill-park, Ozleworth-park, Almondesbury-park, Cromhall-park, and Uley-park: The two chaces were Micklewood and Redwood. This hundred is famous for producing the best cheefe in the kingdom.

Berkeley-castle is one of the few buildings of that sort which is still preserved from ruins. It is said that Roger de Berkeley began it in the seventeenth year of king Henry the First, and that it was finished by Roger the Third, in the reign of king Stephen. It is certainly of very great antiquity, and received its present form from Robert Fitz-Harding, who repaired and enlarged it in the reign of king Henry the Second, when it was called the honour of Berkeley. Leland has given a short description of it in the preceding quotation; but a considerable part of it was beaten down since his time, in the great civil war of king Charles the First. The annexed plate exhibits the south-west view of it. The Hall in the castle is exceeding large, and very much admired for its antient ornaments; and on the left hand at the entrance is the stuffed skin of an animal, which the old women of the town and neighbourhood believe to be that of a monstrous toad, found in the dungeon of the castle; but it appears to be a seal skin, or something much like it.

King Edward the Second having been thought to shew too great favour to the Spencers, his queen and the prince of Wales headed a party against him, took him prisoner, and carried him from place to place, 'till at length he was brought to this castle, and murdered Sept. 22, 1327. On the road from Bristol to Berkeley, the guard made the king walk on foot whilst they rode, and otherwise used him with contempt and derision. Adam Orlton, bishop of Hereford, is said designedly to have promoted the king's death, by writing the following sentence to his keeper:

Edwardum occidere nolite timere bonum est.

yet the sense is so ambiguous, according to the stops in reading of it, as to bear a contrary meaning. It is thus translated in the last edition of the Britannia, where the ambiguity is preserved

To seek to shed king Edward's blood Refuse to fear I think it good.

But the author of the Survey of the city of Worcester pronounces the bishop innocent of that heinous crime, by shewing that he was beyond sea all the time of the unfortunate king's confinement in the castle.

As the parish is large, so the soils are various; but a red kind of earth or clay enters into the composition of most of them. There are some orchards that produce good cider. The oak thrives well here, but 'tis no where less cultivated. It is shocking to see almost all the trees wantonly lopt and headed for firing, a practice the more inexcusable, as the forest-coal is rendered cheap by means of the navigation up the river.

There is plenty of iron ore in this parish, but not a sufficiency of wood to work it. However it appears by the great quantities of rich cinders which have been lately found at Peddington, and carried to the furnaces in the forest of Dean, that our ancestors had iron-works here.

The lands lying near the Severn are very subject to floods from that river, which sometimes do great damage. In a printed account of the dreadful effects of a great wind, which happened on the 26th of November, 1703, is the following passage: 'At Berkeley, the overflowing of the river Severn beat down and tore to pieces the sea wall whereby the waters flowed above a mile over a part of the parish, and did great damage to the land: It carried away one house which was on the sea side, and a gentleman's stable, where was a horse, into the next ground. Twenty sheets of lead were blown off from the middle of the church, and taken up all joined together, as they were on the roof, the sheets weighing three hundred and a half one with another.'

Those who would see the long story of the witch of Berkeley, may find it in Haywood's History.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

There was an antient, famous nunnery in this place, in the time of the Saxons, to which the large manor belonged. Who was the founder of it, and when it was founded, are circumstances equally unknown; but the following account of its dissolution, taken from Walter Mapes, who lived above five hundred years since, is not unworthy the reader's perusal:

Berkeley is a village near Severn, of the value of five hundred pounds, in which was a nunnery govern'd by an abbess, that was both noble and beautiful. Earl Godwyn, a notable subtle man, was sitting her but her's, as he passed by, left his nephew young, proper, handsome spark, (under pretence of being seized with sickness) 'till he should return back and instructed him to counterfeit an indisposition, so he had got all who came to visit him, both lady

BERKELEY CASTLE.

T. Bonner delin. et sculp.

To the Right Hon.^{ble} the Earl of Berkeley, Viscount
This Plate is Inscribed by his Lordships

Dursley, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Gloucester, &c. &c.
most Obliged humble Servant S. Rudder.

and as many of the nuns as he could, with child. And to carry on the intrigue more plausibly, and more effectually to obtain the favour of their visits, the earl furnished him with rings and girdles, that by those presents he might the more readily corrupt and gain their inclinations. There needed no great intreaty to persuade this young gallant to undertake an employment so amorous and pleasing. The way to destruction was easy, and quickly learnt; he seem'd wonderful cunning to himself, but all his cunning was but folly. In him were concentered all those accomplishments that might captivate foolish and unthinking virgins; beauty, wit, riches, and obliging mein: and he was mighty solicitous to have a private apartment to himself. The devil therefore expelled Pallas, and brought in Venus; and converted the church of our Saviour and his saints into an accursed pantheon, the temple into a stew, and the lambs into wolves. When many of them proved with child, and the youth began to languish, being overcome with the excess and variety of pleasure, he hasten'd home with the reports of his conquests (worthy to have the reward of iniquity) to his expecting lord. The earl immediately addresses the king, and acquaints him, that the abbess and the nuns were gotten with child, and had render'd themselves prostitutes to all comers; all which, upon inquisition, was found true. Upon the expulsion of the nuns, he gave Berkeley, and had it granted him by the king, and settled it upon his wife Gueda; but (as Domesday-book hath it) she refused to eat any thing that came out of this manor, because of the destruction of the abbey: And therefore he bought Udecester for her maintenance, whilst she lived at Berkeley: Thus an unscrupulous mind can never relish ill gotten possessions. But the wickedness of this earl did not long prosper, for the large, fruitful isle, since known by the name of the Godwin Sands, being part of his possessions, was irrecoverably swallowed up in the sea; and it was not long after, that he and his whole family were banished out of the kingdom.

William the Norman, about this time, obtained the crown of England, and rewarded Roger, one of his own countrymen, with this manor, who therefore assumed the name of Roger de Berkeley. It is one of the largest manors in England. In the time of Roger lord Dursley, who was also lord of the manor, it paid a fee-farm rent to the king of 10*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.* The extent of it will appear by the following abstract from Domesday-book.

'In Berchelai king Edward had five hides, and in demean five plow-tillages, and twenty villeins, and five bordars with eleven plow-tillages, and nine servi, and two mills of 12*s.* rent. There are ten radchenisters having seven hides and seven plow-tillages. There is a market-town, where seventeen [free] men reside, and pay a tax in farm.

'These hamlets belong to Berchelai. In Hilla four hides; in Almintune four hides; in Hine-tune four hides; in Camma six hides, and eleven other hides; in Gosintune four hides; in Derfilege three hides; in Couelege four hides;

'in Euuelege two hides; in Nimdesfelle three hides; in Uutune fifteen hides, and half a yard-land; in Simondeshale half a hide; in Chingef-cote four hides and a half; in Beurestane ten hides; in Osleuorde half a hide; in Almodef-berie two hides; in Horefelle eight hides; in Westone seven hides; in Cromale two hides; in Erlingeham nine hides; in Esceleuorde three hides. The above are members all belonging to Berchelai.

'There were in these hamlets, in the time of king Edward, forty-nine plow-tillages and a half in demean, and two hundred and forty-two villeins, and one hundred and forty-two bordars with one hundred and twenty-six plow-tillages. There are one hundred and twenty-seven servi.

'There are nineteen free men, radchenisters, having forty-eight plow-tillages with their men. There are twenty-two coliberti, and fifteen ancilla. There are eight mills of 57*s.* 6*d.* [rent.]

'In this manor, two brothers, in the time of king Edward, held five hides in Cromhal, having in demean two plow-tillages, and six villeins, and five bordars having six plow-tillages. These two brothers might dispose of themselves, with their land, as they pleased, which was then worth 4*l.* now 3*l.* Earl William commended them to the steward of Berchelai, that he might have their service, as Roger says.

'For this manor, with all its appurtenances, Roger pays a farm [rent of] 170*l.* in weight, of lawful money.

'The same Roger hath (belonging to this manor) two hides in Hislinbruge, one hide at Claenhangare, one hide at Hirslege, [Hurst] seven hides at Neuetone, [Newington Bagpath]. There are in demean ten plow-tillages, and thir-teen villeins, and twenty-one bordars with twenty-two plow-tillages. There are sixteen servi, and a mill of 5*s.* The whole, in the time of king Edward, was worth 9*l.* now 11*l.* 10*s.*

'The same Roger holds five hides, the land of Bernard the priest. He hath there three plow-tillages, and two villeins, and six bordars with five plow tillages. It was worth and is worth 60*s.*

'There are five hides in Nesse belonging to Berchelai, which earl William set apart to make a little castle, as Roger reports.' Domesday-book, p. 68.

The above particulars amount to the sum of one hundred and forty-four hides and a half, and there are two hundred and ninety-four plow-tillages and a half, a prodigious estate for one manor.

Roger de Berkeley, the proprietor of it, was a nobleman in the court of king William, who also held the manors of Coberley, Dodington, and Siston, in this county. He was a great benefactor to the priory of Stanley St. Leonard, and in the year 1091, became a shorn monk therein; and having no issue, this manor of Berkeley descended to William de Berkeley, his nephew and heir, who, in the year 1139, founded the monastery of of Kingswood in Wiltshire. William was succeeded by Roger de Berkeley, his son and heir, who was also baron of Dursley, and taking part with king Stephen against Henry the Second, was violently dispossessed of his castle of Berkeley, by Walter, brother of Milo earl of Hereford, and his whole estate confiscated.

King Henry had been assisted, in those wars, with great supplies of money, by Robert Fitz-Harding, a powerful man in those times, (mayor and governor of Bristol) whom, therefore, the king rewarded with a grant of the castle of Berkeley, with the manor of Berthone, in the county of Gloucester, as also 100*l.* a year in lands in Berkeley, and afterwards with the whole lordship of Berkeley, and Berkeley-herneffe, thereunto belonging, of which Roger de Berkeley had been divested. He was surnamed Fitz-Harding, because he was the son of Harding, mayor and governor of Bristol, descended, according to Leland, from the kings of Denmark; which Harding accompanied William duke of Normandy into England, and was with him at that memorable battle against king Harold, at Hastings. In Domesday-book he is called Hardinc, where it is said he held Witenhert, [now Whitenhurst] in Gloucestershire, in mortgage of Brictric. Newland, abbat of St. Augustine's in Bristol, wrote a pedigree of the Berkeley family, and proves that they are lineally descended from this Harding, who died at Bristol, Nov. 6, 1115, 16 H. 1.

Robert Fitz-Harding, whom we shall now call Robert lord Berkeley, took his seat in the house of peers 1 H. 2. Roger, the former lord of this place, at the intercession of friends, was restored to the barony of Dursley; but he bore a violent hatred against Robert lord Berkeley, for depriving him of his inheritance, until the king interposed, and in the presence of many noblemen made a counter-match in the two families; that is, between Maurice, son of the lord Berkeley, and Alice, daughter of the lord Dursley; and between the heir of the lord Dursley, and Helena, daughter of the lord Berkeley; and by the original writings, still extant in the family, it appears, that Alice was to have 20*l.* a year in land, of the fee of Berkeley, for her dower; and Helena, the manor of Siston for hers; whereupon all right in the barony of Berkeley was voluntarily released by the lord Dursley. This Robert lord Berkeley founded the abbey of St. Augustine's in Bristol, and dying in the year 1170-71, was buried in the quire thereof. Being stiled canonicus, he is supposed to have been a canon in that abbey, whose yearly revenues, at the dissolution, were valued at 767*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* and are the present maintenance of the bishop and prebendaries of Bristol. He married Eva, daughter of Godiva, sister to William the conqueror. She founded a religious house called the Magdales, near Bristol, and was prioress thereof. By her he had issue five sons, Henry, Maurice, Robert, Nicholas, and Thomas; and two daughters, Helena, of whom already, and Aldena, married to Kingscot of Kingscot. But Henry dying young,

Maurice de Berkeley, the second son, succeeded his father, and gave a fine of 1000 marks to the king, for a confirmation of his title to Berkeley and Berkeley-herneffe. He was the first of them who dwelt at Berkeley. He fortified the castle, and founded two hospitals, one at Lorwing, between Berkeley and Dursley, and that at Longbridge, to the north of Berkeley, dedicated to the holy Trinity. By his wife Alice, daughter of lord Dursley, he had issue six sons, Robert, Thomas, Maurice, William, Henry, and Richard. The two last accompanying William king of Scotland into that country, when he returned from being a prisoner in England, became the ancestors of many eminent families in Scotland, France, and Ireland. He had also an only daughter, married to — Giffard. And dying, according to abbat Newland, in the year 1190, was interred in the church of Brentford, com. Middlesex, towards the building of which he had been a great benefactor.

Robert his eldest son succeeded his father, and 3 R. 1. gave the king 1000*l.* for livery of his inheritance. And again 1 John, he paid 60 marks for a confirmation^b thereof, and for a charter of fairs in his manor of Berkeley. The king had oppressed his subjects with large demands for the renewal of charters, for escuage, and other services, wherefore this lord, with others, took up arms against him. He made his peace^h 15 John; yet two years afterwards fell again from his duty, and with others, invited Lewis, the French king's son, into England, and swore allegiance to him, for which this lord was excommunicated by the pope, and his castle of Berkeley, and all his lands seized,ⁱ and the profits of the same ordered for the maintenance of the castle of Bristol. But 18 John, he obtained letters of safe conduct to come to the king, then at Berkeley-castle; where, upon his submission, he got a grant of his manor of Came, in the county of Gloucester, for the support of Juliana his wife, daughter of William de Pontlarch, and niece to the great earl of Pembroke, earl marshal of England, and afterwards protector to king H. 3. at whose accession to the crown, in 1216, lord Robert, for a fine of^k 966*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* was restored^l to all his lands, except the castle and town of Berkeley. He was a great benefactor to St. Augustine's at Bristol, Bradenstoke in Wilts, Stanley priory in Gloucestershire, as also to the canons of Hereford, and built the hospital of St. Catherine's, at Bedminster near Bristol. He had two wives, (the latter was Luci, who afterwards married Hugh de Gournay) ⁱ Ex Autographo, in Castro de Berkeley.

^h Rot. pip. 3 R. 1. Glouc.

^k Rot. fin. 15 J. m. 5.

^l Claus. 18 Joh. m. 4, & 9.

^m Claus. 1 H. 3. m. 1. & m. 12.

ⁿ Rot. pip. 1 H. 3. Salop.

but died without issue by either, 1219, and was buried in a monk's cowl, in the north aisle of St. Augustine's abbey aforesaid.

Whereupon, Thomas his brother and heir had livery of his lands, and afterwards had restitution of Berkeley-castle 8 H. 3. He was as remarkable as his father for piety and benefactions to the church, and departing this life Nov. 29, 1243, was buried in the south aisle of St. Augustine's abbey; leaving issue by Joan, daughter of Ralph de Somery, lord of Campden, in com. Glouc. six sons, Maurice, Thomas, Robert, Henry, William, and Richard; also a daughter Margaret, wife of Sir Anselme Basset, of Basset's-court, in Uley, Gloucestershire.

Maurice the eldest son succeeded his father, and paying 100*l.* for his relief, had livery of his inheritance. He accompanied his father^m in the wars of France, and 41 H. 3. was in that expedition with prince Edward against the Welch. In 42, 43, 44, and 47 H. 3. he was summonedⁿ to attend the king against the magnanimous Llewellyn ap Gryffyth, prince of Wales, then in arms. He married Isabel, daughter of Maurice de Creoun (a great baron in Lincolnshire) by Isabel his wife, sister to William de Valence, earl of Pembroke, uterine sister and brother to king Henry the Third; notwithstanding which, this lord afterwards adhered to the rebellious barons, for which his lands were seized; but the king having a respect for the lady Isabel, whom he calls his beloved niece, assigned the manors of Heritsham and Tottescluffe for her maintenance. However this lord obtained pardon 55 H. 3. He died seized of the barony of Berkeley, which he held by the service of three knight's fees, April 4, 1281, having given divers lands in Berkeley, Bevington, Wolgaston, and Erlingham to the abbey of St. Augustine's in Bristol, in the north aisle of which he was buried. He had issue by his said wife, Maurice, (slain at Ingst, in a tournament whilst his father was living) Thomas, and Robert; and according to some accounts, one daughter Maud. He was succeeded by Thomas, the second, but eldest surviving son, a very wise and provident person, keeping exact accounts with all his bailiffs and stewards. He had two hundred attendants in his family, of knights, esquires, yeomen, grooms, and pages, beside husbandmen. The wages of an esquire was three-pence half-penny a day, a horse and two suits of furred cloaths were provided for him, and three half-pence a day was given for a boy to wait on him. This lord, in obedience to the king's summons, appeared, at different times, at Worcester, at Montgomery, at Shrewsbury, and at Gloucester, to oppose the Welch; and for those services had a special grant for hunting with his own dogs in the king's forest of Mendip, and the chase of Kingswood, and was acquitted of an hundred marks, the then relief of his barony. In short, he was in most of the battles fought in Wales, Scotland, and France, during the reign of king Edward the First; and in the twenty-fourth year of that king's reign, was one of the commissioners to treat of peace between England and France; and the next year was made constable of England. He was sent ambassador to Rome, 35 E. 1. with Dr. Gaynelburg, bishop of Worcester, about affairs in France, and his two sons accompanied him. He went into the field twenty-eight several times, and being taken prisoner at the fatal battle of Bannockburne, paid a large fine for his redemption. He was a benefactor to the canons of St. Augustine's in Bristol, where he was buried; to the monks of Kingswood, and to the Bartholomews, and Minorites at Gloucester, as appears by antient books in the castle at Berkeley. Dying in the year 1321, he left issue by Jane his wife, daughter of William de Ferrers earl of Derby, three sons, Maurice, John, of Wymundham in com. Leic. and James, who was rector of Slimbridge, and, in the year 1326, consecrated bishop of Exeter: he had also two daughters, Isabel and Margaret, who both died unmarried. He was succeeded by his eldest son,

Maurice, who in his father's life time, on June 23, 23 E. 1. had summons to parliament as lord Berkeley of Berkeley-castle. He delighted from his youth in military actions, and was in several tournaments held at Worcester, Dunstable, Stamford, Blythe, and Winchester. He had been many years in the wars with his father in Scotland and Wales, and, in 1312, was made governor of Gloucester, and in 1314, governor of the town and castle of Berwick upon Tweed, and the next year was appointed justice of South Wales, and had the custody of all the castles there. The year following he raised 1000 foot in those parts, 200 more out of the forest of Dean, and 100 out of Gowerland in Wales, for the king's service in the north; and in 1319 he was made steward of the dutchy of Aquitaine. In 1321 he joined with the earl of Lancaster and other barons against the two Spencers, laid waste their estates, and took from the father 28,000 sheep, 2,200 beasts, 2,000 swine, &c. 40 tuns of wine, and 600 muttons in the larder; from the son they carried off 60 breeding mares, and 1,000 beasts, beside their young. The Spencers were banished by an act of the ensuing parliament, but were recalled, within a year, by the same authority, and their opponents declared traitors. This lord Berkeley neglecting, upon special summons, to submit to the king, his castles and lands were seized, and he was afterwards sent prisoner to Wallingford-castle, where,

^m Rot. pip. 28 H. 3. Glouc. ⁿ Claus. 42, 43, 44 & 47 H. 3. in dorf.
^o Claus. 48 H. 3. in dorf. m. 4.

^p Rot. Scutag. de ann. 5 & 10 E. 1. ^q Rot. Wall. 10 E. 1. in dorf.
^r Pat. 11 E. 1. m. 23. ^s Claus. 12 E. 1. m. 10.

^t Rymer, tom. 4. p. 783. ^u Comput. Ballivi de Wotton, de ann. 10 E. 2. in castro de Berkeley. ^v Pat. 6 E. 2. p. 1. m. 24.

^w Rot. Scoc. 8 E. 2. m. 4. ^x Rot. Vasc. 13 E. 2. m. 12.
^y Claus. 15 E. 2. in dorf.

according to Walsingham, he died on May 31, 1326, and was buried in St. Augustine's abbey, Bristol. He built a friery at Holmes, an island in the Severn. He married two wives, 1. Eve, daughter of Eudo la Zouch, lord Zouch; 2. Isabel, daughter of Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, who died without issue by him; but he left issue by his first wife, 1. sir Thomas, who succeeded him; 2. sir Maurice, from whom the Berkeleys of Stoke Giffard, and lord Berkeley of Stratton, with their several descendants; 3. John, from whom the Berkeleys of Shropshire are descended; 4. Eudo, rector of Llanbeder, com. Caernarvon; 5. Peter, a dignitary in the church of Wells; also a daughter Isabel, married to Robert lord Clifford, and afterwards to Thomas lord Musgrave.

Sir Thomas, second lord Berkeley, succeeded his father. He had joined the earl of Lancaster and his followers, in opposing the Spencers, and was first committed to the tower of London, whence he escaped; but being retaken, was sent to Berkhamsted castle, and afterwards to Pevensey in Suffex. On the queen and prince of Wales's returning from France, with a great force, the scene was changed, and this lord was set at liberty, and his castle of Berkeley delivered up to him, whereof Hugh le Despencer the younger had possessed himself. The queen's party having afterwards made the king prisoner, Nov. 16, 1326, he was received by this lord Berkeley, according to Leland, by indenture from Henry Plantagenet, earl of Lancaster, having an allowance of 5*l.* per diem for his expences. But he was not long entrusted with the care of him, for being thought to treat him with too much lenity, he was commanded to deliver the king, together with the castle, to John lord Maltravers and sir Thomas Gournay, and thereupon he retired to Bradley, one of his manor-houses. But the king being barbarously murdered, as already related, he was indicted as accessary thereto, yet, upon tryal, was honourably acquitted by the jury, and afterwards by the parliament. He had livery of his lands 1 E. 3. and was the same year in commission with John Maltravers the younger, as principal guardians of the peace in com. Glouc. Wilts, Oxon, Berks, Southampton, Somerset, Dorset, and Hereford. He was in all the wars against the Scots, and 19 E. 3. was made warden of the king's forests on the south of Trent; and was with the king at the famous battle of Cressly, 20 E. 3. and the same year appeared at the siege of Calais, with six knights, thirty-two esquires, thirty archers on horseback, and two hundred on foot, of his own retinue. On Sept. 19, 1356, he was one of the chief commanders at the battle of Poictiers, where the English obtained immortal honour, and he there took so many prisoners, that out of their ransoms he rebuilt Beverstone-castle, in Gloucestershire, the lordship of which he purchased, together with that of Over in Almondesbury, about the fifth year of the king's reign. In his domestic retinue, he had no less than twelve knights, and sometimes more, who took wages, with two servants and a page each; and twenty-four esquires, who had each a man and a page. He kept the demesns of sixty or eighty manors in his hands, and had in all about 300 in family, besides bailiffs, hinds, &c. He sheared at Beverstone, with the estates thereabout, 5775 sheep, and a minute account of all his concerns was exactly registered. He gave lands to the church of Portbury, and fifty other acres of land, and 40*s.* rent in Portbury, to a chapel there, for priests to say masses for his ancestors, himself, and his successors; and founded a chantry in the chapel of Newport, near Berkeley, another at Syde, one in the chapel at Wortley, a fourth in the chapel at Cambridge, another at Over, all in the county of Gloucester; another in the chapel of St. Catherine Pulle, near Bristol, one in the abbey of St. Augustine at Bristol, and another chantry at Worcester; and gave lands to the chantry of Sheppardine in Hull, and an annual rent of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to a priest to sing for the soul of his wife Margaret, in St. Austin's church, Bristol, and the like rent to another priest to sing for her in Keinsham monastery, com. Somerset. He married first, Margaret, fourth daughter to Roger Mortimer earl of March, by whom he had issue, sir Maurice, Thomas, Roger, and Alphonfus; and Joan, married to sir Reginald Cobham, kn'. His second wife was Catherine, daughter of sir John Clivedon, of Charfield in the county of Gloucester, widow of sir Peter le Veel, of Tortworth, in the said county, kn'. by whom he had issue, Thomas, Maurice, Edmund, and John, the ancestor of the Berkeleys of Betesham, in Hampshire. She long survived her husband, and founded a free-school and chantry in Wotton-under-edge, and the chantry of St. Andrew in Berkeley church. This lord died Oct. 27, 1361, and was buried in Berkeley church; leaving sir Maurice, by his first wife, his heir.

Which sir Maurice, third lord Berkeley, in 1336, being then seven years old, went with his father into Scotland, and was there knighted; next year he married Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh le Despencer, and four years afterwards went a voyage to Granada in Spain, and continued abroad about five years. He attended the Black Prince into Gascoigne, and on Sept. 19, 1356, received several wounds in the battle of Poictiers, of which he was never cured, but did not die 'till June 8, 1367; leaving issue by his said wife, four sons, viz. Thomas, his successor; sir James, married to the daughter and heir of sir John Bloet, with whom he had the manor of Ragland, and other estates in Monmouthshire and Gloucestershire; sir John,

^c Clauf. 1 E. 3. p. 1. m. 1 & 3. ^d Plac. Cor. in Parl. 4 E. 3. n. 16.
^e Ex Autog. apud Berkeley. ^f Ex compot. apud Berkeley,

38 E. 3.

^g Esch. 42 E. 3.

and Maurice; also three daughters, Catherine, Agnes, and Elizabeth.

Thomas succeeded his father, and was the fourth lord Berkeley. This lord let out most of his lands at a yearly rent, which at this time began to be customary all over England. In 1378, 2 R. 2. he was employ'd by sea and land in the wars with France and Spain; served in France and Britanny the two succeeding years, and afterwards in Scotland. In 10 R. 2. he entertained the king at Berkeley-castle; and being present at Flint-castle in 1399, when the king resigned, he testified it, in the king's presence, in the tower of London; and on the meeting of the three estates in parliament, a bishop, abbat, earl, baron and knight, being the representatives chosen to pronounce his majesty's deposition, he was the baron appointed for that purpose. In 5 H. 4. he was made admiral of the king's fleets, from the mouth of the Thames to the west and south, and sworn of the king's privy council, in open parliament. He burnt fifteen sail of French ships in Milford-haven, part of the fleet sent to the assistance of Owen Glendourdwy, and took fourteen more, on board of which were the seneschal of France, and eight officers of note, whom he made prisoners. In 6 and 7 H. 4. he was chief commander in the Welch wars, and engineer at the siege of Lampader-vaur in Pembroke-shire. In short, he was not only a great soldier, but was distinguished as a lover of learning. John Trevisa, the famous vicar of Berkeley, celebrated by Bale for his learning and eloquence, translated the Old and New Testaments into English, at the request of this lord Berkeley. His lordship married Margaret, daughter and heir to Gerard Warren lord Lisle, by Alice, daughter and heir to Henry lord Teys; and departing this life July 13, 1416, was buried near his lady, (who died before him) in the church of Wotton-under-edge, leaving issue by her only one child Elizabeth, wedded to Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, who, in right of his wife, died seized of many manors and estates in Gloucestershire, as may be seen under their respective heads.

His lordship dying without issue male, his nephew James, son and heir of sir James de Berkeley, his lordship's brother, became his heir, and was the fifth lord Berkeley; for by virtue of a special entail and fine, he enjoy'd the castle and lordship of Berkeley, with other lordships mentioned in the said fine; but not without great interruptions and disturbance from Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, who had married the only daughter of the last lord Berkeley.

Between these two great persons and their posterity was a law-suit for the Berkeley estate, which lasted one hundred and ninety-two years, and was carried on with uncommon violence; during which, Berkeley-castle was besieged and defended many times with great forces on each side. The weight of power and interest was so great against lord Berkeley, that he thought it prudent to give a thousand marks to Humphry duke of Gloucester for his patronage. He married first, a daughter of Humphry Stafford of Hooke, in com. Dorset, by whom he had no issue. 2. Isabel, widow of Henry, son and heir of William lord Ferrers of Groby, and second daughter of Thomas Mowbray, first duke of Norfolk; by whom he had issue, four sons, William; Maurice; James; and Thomas, from whom descended the Berkeleys of Herefordshire, and Worcester-shire; and three daughters, Elizabeth, Isabel, and Alice. Which Isabel lady Berkeley died in prison in the castle of Gloucester, (see p. 194.) His lordship married, to his third wife, Joan, daughter of John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, by whom he had no issue; and dying in 1463, was buried in an alabaster tomb, in a chapel which he built on the south side of the high altar, in the parish church of Berkeley.

William his eldest son, sixth lord Berkeley, was knighted at Calais in 1438; and, after the death of his father, defended himself in the suit at law carried on against him by Thomas Talbot viscount Lisle, whom he afterwards killed in a fight, as related under the parish of Nibley. In 21 E. 4. he was advanced to the honour of viscount Berkeley, and soon after had a grant of 100 marks per annum for life; and 1483 was created earl of Nottingham, a dignity enjoyed by his maternal ancestors the Mowbrays, extinct dukes of Norfolk. When the earl of Richmond acceded to the crown, in 1485, he was appointed earl marshal of England, with limitation to the heirs male of his body, with a fee of 20*l.* per annum; and, in the fourth year of that reign, was further advanced to the dignity of marquis of Berkeley. He married 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Reginald West, lord la Warre, from whom he was divorced without issue by her. 2. Jane, widow of sir William Willoughby, kn'. and daughter of sir Thomas Strangeways, kn'. by whom he had issue Thomas and Catherine, who died young. 3. Anne, daughter of John Fiennes, lord Dacre of the south; but he died, without issue by her, in the year 1491-2, and lies buried in the church of the friers Augustins, near Broad-street, London.

^a Rot. Franc. 2 R. 2. m. 18.

¹ Walf. in eodem anno.

^b Walf. in eodem anno.

¹ Ex vet. script. apud Berkeley.

^m She was married to Thomas Burdet, of Arrow, in the county of Warwick, esq; who incurred the displeasure of king Edward the Fourth, by his attachment to the duke of Clarence, that prince's brother; and hearing that the king, hunting in his park at Arrow, had killed a white buck which he valued, passionately exclaimed, that he wished the deer, horns and all, in the belly of the person who advised his majesty to that action; for which he was convicted of high treason, and suffered death 17 E. 4. tho' that upright judge, sir John Markham, opposed the judgment.

ⁿ Cart. ab ann. 19, usq; 22 E. 4. n. 6.

^o Cart. 1 R. 3. m. 1.

^p Pat. 1 H. 7. p. 5.

¹ Cart. de ann. 4 H. 7.

Maurice, his brother, should have succeeded to the paternal estate, and title of baron of Berkeley; (and, in that case, he would have been the seventh, according to the before recited summons) but the marquis his brother, having taken exception at his conduct, settled the castle of Berkeley, to which the barony is appendant, with those lands and lordships which were the body of that antient barony, upon king Henry the Seventh, and his issue male, in failure of which, to revert to the right heirs of the marquis. But Maurice, by discreet management, obtained possession of his share of the estate that devolved to him in right of his mother Isabel Mowbray. He married Isabel, daughter of Philip Mead, esq; descended from the Meads of Wraxhall, in Somersetshire, by whom he had issue three sons, Maurice, his successor; Thomas, who succeeded Maurice; and James; and one daughter, Joyce, married to William Astley, esq; He resided chiefly at Yate, in Gloucestershire, and dying in the year 1506, was succeeded by Maurice his son and heir, who should have been eighth lord Berkeley. He was made knight of the Bath, at the coronation of king Henry the Eighth, and, in the 7th and 8th years of that king's reign, was high sheriff of Gloucestershire; in the last of which he was also constituted lieutenant of the castle of Calais, and captain of fifty men at arms. In the 14th year of that reign, he was summoned to parliament as a baron, and, the ensuing year, was sent into France with the army under the command of Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk. He married Catherine, daughter of sir William Berkeley, of Stoke-Giffard, kn'. but died at Calais, 1523, without issue by her, and was succeeded by his brother Thomas.

Which Thomas, ninth lord Berkeley, had a command in the English army at the battle of Flodden, in 1519, and, for his signal service there, received the honour of knighthood from Thomas Howard earl of Surrey, the general. He was made constable of Berkeley-castle '24 H. 8. which was then in the crown, and died the same year. He married 1. Eleanor, widow of John Ingleby, esq; and daughter of sir Marmaduke Constable, of Yorkshire, kn'. by whom he had no issue. 2. Cecilie, widow of Richard Rowden, in the county of Gloucester, esq; by whom he had two sons, Thomas, his heir; and Maurice.

Which Thomas, tenth lord Berkeley, married 1. Mary daughter of George Hastings, first earl of Huntingdon, but by her had no issue. 2. Anne, daughter of sir John Savage, of Frodsham, in Cheshire, kn'. by whom he had Henry, a posthumous son and heir; also a daughter Elizabeth, (afterwards married to Thomas Butler, tenth earl of Ormond) scarce three quarters of a year old when his lordship deceased. He was buried at Stone, where he died, in his journey from his house at Yate in Gloucestershire, towards London, on Sept. 19, 1534. It is said that Maurice, this lord's brother, bore a great enmity to his sister-in-law the lady dowager, and came, with several companions, one night to destroy her deer, and intended afterwards to set fire to a hay-rick that stood near the house, with design to burn the house; but another party of deer-stealers happening to be in the park at the same time, who had fled to the hay-rick to hide themselves, they frightened one another, and so the mischief was prevented.

Which Henry, the eleventh lord Berkeley, succeeded his father. King Edward the Sixth dying, who was the last male heir of king Henry the Seventh, he obtained livery of Berkeley-castle, and of all those lordships settled on that king by William marquis of Berkeley, before mentioned, by special warrant from the queen, 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. before he was at full age, at the old rent, which was 687*l.* 5*s.* per annum, not accounting the parks and chases thereunto belonging. His lordship thereupon repossessing the old barony of his ancestors, was summoned by writ to parliament 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. and there placed according to the antient precedence. He was much embroiled in law-suits upon the old title of heir general and heir special; for queen Elizabeth had granted several of those lands, forfeited by the descendants of lord Lisle, to the earls of Warwick and Leicester; who, by great power, and by corruption of juries, and other gross means, faith sir Robert Atkyns, maintained a long chargeable suit against him, which at last was ended by a reference 7 Jac. after having continued 192 years. The earl of Leicester, continues the same author, pretended at first a great kindness to lord Berkeley, and acknowledged the honour to be descended from his family, and desired that he might send an herald to examine the pedigree, and take a survey of his records, and antient writings; and this herald was bribed, by the earl of Leicester, to steal away the most material evidences which concerned the lord Berkeley's estate. His lordship was appointed lord lieutenant of the county of Gloucester "1. Jac. There is an anecdote of this lord,

¹ Ex Autograph. apud Berkeley.

² Pat. 24 H. 8. p. 2.

³ Collins's Peerage, v. 3. p. 460.

⁴ His lordship's commission shews that he enjoyed the utmost confidence of his prince, who invested him with greater powers than, by the laws of this country, any king could give: The commission runs thus: 'James, by the grace of God, king of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. To our right trusty, and well beloved Henry lord Berkeley, greeting. Know ye, that for the great and singular trust and confidence we have in your approved fidelity, wisdom, and circumspection, we have assigned, made, constituted, and ordained, and by these presents do assign, make, constitute, and ordain you to be our lieutenant within our county of Gloucester, and city of Glouc. and county of the same city, and in all other corporate and privileged places, within the limits or precincts of the said county of Glouc. and city of Glouc. and either of them, as well within liberties as without: And do, by these presents, give full power and authority unto you, that you from time to time may levy, gather, and call together all and singular our subjects, of what estate, degree, or dignity, they or any of them be, dwelling or inhabiting within our said county and city, or county of the same city, and within all other places corporate lord, that queen Elizabeth having offered a hundred marks for a lute, his lordship out bid her, and bought it. His first wife was Catherine, third daughter of Henry Howard earl of Surry, by whom he had issue two sons, Thomas, and Ferdinand: Thomas married Elizabeth Carey, only child of sir George Carey, kn'. afterwards lord Hunston, by whom he left issue George and Theophila, and died before his father. Ferdinand died at Yate in Gloucestershire, and was there buried. He had also, by the said Catherine, four daughters, of whom, Mary was married to John Zouch, esq; son and heir to sir John Zouch, of Codnore in com. Derby, kn'. and Frances was married to George Shirley, of Astwell, in com. Northampton, esq; afterwards created a baronet, and ancestor of the present earl Ferrers. Lord Berkeley had to his second wife, Jane, youngest daughter of sir Michael Stanhope, and widow of sir Roger Townsend, by whom he had no issue. He died in the year 1613, and was buried in the family vault, in the chancel at Berkeley, where is a monument and inscription for him.

George, only son of the said Thomas, succeeded his grandfather Henry as twelfth lord Berkeley, according to the summons of 23 E. 1. He was made knight of the Bath, at the creation of Charles prince of Wales, on Nov. 4, 1616. The following inscription, on a monument erected to his memory in Cranford church, in Middlesex, recites his character, marriage, and issue.

Here lyeth the body of GEORGE LORD BERKLEY, Baron of Berkley, Mowbray, Seagrave, and Bruce, and Knight of the Bath, who departed this life the 10th day of August, A. D. 1658. He married ELIZABETH, second daughter and coheir of Sir MICHAEL STANHOPE, of Sudbury in the county of Suffolk, Kn'. by whom he had issue CHARLES, ELIZABETH, and GEORGE. CHARLES, drowned in his passage to France, Jan. 27, 1641. ELIZABETH married to EDWARD COOK, Esq; grand child and heir to Sir EDWARD COOK, Kn'. sometime Lord Chief Justice of both Benches. She died Novemb. the 9th, A. D. 1661, and lieth buried at Higham in Norfolk; and GEORGE Lord Berkley now living: This deceased Lord, besides the nobility of his birth, and the experience he acquired by foreign travels, was very eminent for the great candour and ingenuity of his disposition, his singular bounty and affability towards his inferiours, and his readiness (had it been in his power) to have obliged all mankind.

George, the only surviving son of the last lord George, became, at the death of his father, thirteenth lord Berkeley, and was advanced to the dignity of viscount Dursley, and earl of Berkeley, Sept. 11, 31 C. 2. 1679. His lordship made a present to Sion-college of a valuable library, collected by sir Robert Coke, upon which the governors of that college presented his lordship with their address of thanks. When king James the Second withdrew himself, on Dec. 10, this earl was one of those peers who met at Guildhall, and subscribed a declaration, 'That they would assist his highness the prince of Orange in obtaining a free parliament, &c.' and at the accession of king William and queen Mary, was appointed one of their privy-council; and on July 27, 1689, constituted Custos Rotulorum of the county of Surry. This noble peer departing this life, was buried at Cranford in Middlesex, where a monument is erected to his memory, with this inscription:

Here lyeth the body of GEORGE Earl of Berkeley, Viscount Dursley, Baron of Berkeley, Mowbray, Seagrave, and Bruce, who had the honour to be a Privy-counsellor to K. CHARLES the II. and K. JAMES; eminent for his affability, charity, and generosity. He married ELIZABETH, one of the coheiresses of JOHN MASSINGBEARD, Esq; of the family of the MASSINGBEARDS in Lincolnshire. He departed this life the 14th of October, 1698, Ætat. 71. in hopes of a blessed resurrection; for the merciful shall obtain mercy.

By the lady Elizabeth, his wife, he had two sons, and six daughters; 1. Charles, who succeeded him in honour and estate; 2. George, installed one of the prebendaries of Westminster, June 13, 1687, who married Jane, daughter of George Cole, of the county of Devon, esq; 3. Elizabeth, wedded to William Smith, of the Inner Temple, esq; 4. Theophila, married first to sir Kingsmill Lucy, of Bloxburn, in com. Hertford, bar'. and secondly to the pious and learned Robert Nelson, of London, esq; 5. Arabella, second wife to William Pulteney, esq; 6. Mary, married to Ford lord Grey, of Werk, afterwards earl of Tankerville. 7. Henrietta, who died unmarried; 8. Arthusa, second wife to Charles Boyle, lord Clifford of Laneshorough.

Charles, second earl of Berkeley, was made one of the knights of the Bath, at the coronation of King Charles the Second, and, in 1679 and 1681, and privileged, within the limits and precincts of the same counties, and of either of them, as well within liberties as without, mete and apt for the wars, and them to train, array, and put in a readiness; and them also, and every of them, after their abilities, degrees, and faculties, well and sufficiently to cause to be armed and weaponed, and to take the musters of them from time to time, in places most mete for that purpose, after your good discretion: And also, the same our subjects so arrayed, trained, and armed, as well men of arms, as other horsemen, archers, and footmen, of all kinds and degrees, mete and apt for the wars, to conduct and lead, as well against all and singular our enemies, also against all and singular rebels, traitors, and other offenders, and their adherents, against us, our crown and dignity, within our said county and city, and county of the said city, and all other places corporate and privileged, within the limits and precincts of the same counties, as well within liberties as without, from time to time, as often as need shall require, by your discretion; and with the said enemies, traitors, and rebels to fight, and them to invade, resist, repress, and subdue, slay, kill, and put to execution of death, by all ways and means, by your said good discretion: And to do, fulfil, and execute all and singular other things which shall be requisite for the levying and government of our said subjects,

' for the conservation of our person and peace, so by you, in form
' aforesaid, levyed and to be led: And to do, execute, and use against ' enemies, traitors, rebels, and such other like offenders, and their ' adherents, as necessity shall require, by your discretion, the law called
' the Marshal Law, according to the Law Marshal: And of such ' offenders apprehended, or brought in subjection, to save whom ' you shall think good to be saved, and to slay, destroy, and put to ' execution of death such and as many of them as you shall think mete,
' by your good discretion, to be put to death. And farther, our will
' and pleasure is, and by these presents we do give unto you full
' power and authority, that in case any invasion of enemies,
' insurrection, rebellion, riots, routs, or unlawful assemblies, or ' any like offences shall happen to be moved in any place of this our ' realm, out of the limits of this our commission; that then, and
' as often as you shall perceive any such misdemeanour to arise,
' you, with all the power you can make, shall, with all diligence,
' repair to the place where any such invasion, unlawful assembly,
' or insurrection shall happen to be made, to subdue, repress, and ' reform the same, as well by battle or other kind of force, as otherwise,
' by the laws of our realm, and the Law Marshal, according to your ' discretion.' &c. &c.

* Collins's Peerage, v. 3, p. 461. Ferdinand is not mentioned upon his lordship's monument. See Monuments and Inscriptions.

was returned to parliament for the city of Gloucester. On the accession of king William and queen Mary, he was called up, by writ, to the house of peers, (his father then living) and took his seat as baron Berkeley of Berkeley, on July 11, 1689; and the same year relieved the earl of Pembroke, in quality of envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the states of Holland. On May 25, 1694, he was constituted lord lieutenant of the county of Gloucester; and, in the year 1699, was appointed one of the lords justices of the kingdom of Ireland. On June 7, 1702, his lordship was appointed constable of the castle of St. Briavel, in the forest of Dean, and lord lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the counties of Gloucester and Surry. His lordship died at Berkeley-castle, Sept. 24, 1710, and was interred, in the family vault, in Berkeley church, where is an inscription for him, inserted towards the end of the account of this parish. His lordship married Elizabeth, daughter of Baptist Noel viscount Campden, by whom he had issue four sons, and three daughters; 1. Charles, lord viscount Dursley, who died of the small-pox in May 1699; 2. James, third earl of Berkeley; 3. Henry, who, in his youth, was page of honour to queen Anne; and, in the year 1717, was appointed first commissioner for executing the office of master of the horse, and constituted colonel of the 4th regiment of foot; and, in 1719, was appointed colonel of the 2d troop of grenadier guards. He was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Gloucester, in three succeeding parliaments, and died at Bath, in May 1736, leaving issue by Mary, only daughter to Henry Cornwall, of Bredwardine-castle, in Herefordshire, esq; two sons, Henry, and Lionel-Spenser Berkeley; and three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, and Isabella-Bernardina. 4. George Berkeley, fourth and youngest son, who served in two parliaments for the port of Dover, married Henrietta, daughter of sir Henry Hobart, bar. and died, in 1746, without issue. 5. Lady Mary; 6. lady Elizabeth; 7. lady Penelope.

James, third earl of Berkeley, succeeded his father in the year 1710, and was the same year constituted lord lieutenant of the county of Gloucester, and city of Bristol, warden of the forest of Dean, and high steward of the city of Gloucester. During the reign of queen Anne, he had distinguished himself in many gallant actions at sea, under sir George Rooke, and sir Cloudsley Shovel, and was made vice-admiral of the blue in 1707-8, and vice-admiral of the white in 1709. In the life-time of his father, 1704, he was called, by writ, to the house of peers, by the title of lord Dursley; and, at the accession of George the First, was appointed one of the lords of the bed-chamber. On March 18, 1717-18, he was constituted first lord commissioner of the admiralty, which office he held all that reign, being likewise vice-admiral of Great Britain, &c. and, in 1718, was installed a knight of the most noble order of the garter. In 1727, he was appointed lord lieutenant of the counties of Lincoln, Gloucester, and * Surry, and of the cities and counties of Gloucester and Bristol; constable of the castle of St. Briavel, and keeper of the forest of Dean; also vice-admiral of Great Britain, &c. His lordship married the lady Louie Lennox, eldest daughter to Charles first duke of Richmond, by whom he had issue one son, Augustus, born on Feb. 18, 1715-16; and a daughter lady Elizabeth, married to Anthony Henly, of the Grange, in the county of Southampton, esq; His lordship dying, was buried at Berkeley, and on a plate upon his coffin was the following inscription:

The Most Noble and Puissant James Earl of Berkeley, Viscount Dursley, Baron Berkeley of Berkeley-Castle, Moutrai, Seagrave, and Breaus of Gower, Vice-Admiral of Great Britain, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Gloucester, and Cities and Counties of Bristol and Gloucester; Custos Rotulorum of the Counties of Gloucester and Surry, Warden of the Forest of Dean in the County of Gloucester, and Constable of the Castle of St. Briavel's in the Forest of Dean, one of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, died September 2, 1736, at Aubigny in France, aged 54 Years.

Augustus, fourth earl of Berkeley, upon his father's death, succeeded him in honour and estate. In 1737 he was constituted lord lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Gloucester, and presented to a company of the second regiment of foot guards, with the rank of colonel. In 1739 he was nominated one of the knights of the most antient order of the Thistle, or St. Andrew; and, in 1745, was made colonel of one of the regiments raised to go against the Scotch and English rebels. His lordship married, on May 7, 1744, Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Drax, of Charborough in Dorsetshire, and of Ellerton-abbey in Yorkshire, esq; and by her, who, in July 1745, was appointed one of the ladies of the bed-chamber to her royal highness Augusta, princess of Wales, had issue, 1. Frederick-Augustus, now earl of Berkeley, born May 24, 1745. 2. James, born in 1747, and died the same year. 3, 4, 5. Ladies Louisa, Elizabeth, and Frances, all born July 28, 1748, and lived to be christened, but died soon after. 6. Lady Georgina-Augusta, born Sept. 18, 1749. 7. Lady Elizabeth, born in December 1750, and, on May 10, 1767, married to the honourable Mr. Craven, brother to lord Craven. 8. George-Cranfield, born Aug. 10, 1753. His lordship departed this life on Jan. 9, 1755, and was succeeded in honour and estate by his son Frederick-Augustus, the present and fifth earl of Berkeley, and the twenty-first in descent from Harding the royal Dane. His lordship was constituted lord lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Gloucester, and of the cities of Bristol and Gloucester, constable of the castle of

* Bill. signat. 1 Geo. 2.

St. Briavel, and warden of the forest of Dean, July 2, 1766; and, on Aug. 19 following, was chosen high steward of the city of Gloucester; and was colonel of the militia of the county of Gloucester, and of the cities of Bristol and Gloucester.

His lordship's TITLES are, Earl of Berkeley, Viscount Durtley, Baron Berkeley of Berkeley-castle, Mowbray, [the name of a family] Seagrave, [the name of a family] and Breaus of Gower [the name of a family] in Glamorganshire. The creations are already recited.

ARMS. Gules, a chevron between ten crosses pattee, six above and four below, argent. But, by intermarriages, his lordship has a right of quartering the following coats, Bloet, Brotherton, Mowbray, Breaus, Seagrave, Chancombes, Longespey, Albeney, Fitz-Allen, Blundeville, Warren, Plantagenet, Marshall, Strongbow, Murchard, Mead, Read, and Stanhope. CREST. On a wreath, a mitre gules, garnished Or, charged with the paternal coat. SUPPORTERS. Two lions argent, the sinister having a ducal crown, and plain collar and chain, Or. MOTTO. DIEU AVEC NOUS.

Having traced the descent of the manor down to the present time, I come now to treat of the

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

There are seven very considerable tithings in this parish.

1. The Borough, which has been mentioned at the beginning of this account. Mr. Weston has a handsome house in it, and a good estate in the parish. Lands in the town of Berkeley, which belonged to the chantry of St. Andrew, whereof Thomas Chester was the last incumbent, and had a pension of 5*l.* were granted to William Herick and Arthur Ingram, 5 Jac. and four acres in Short Grove, belonging to the same chantry, were granted, the same year, to Edward Newport and John Crompton.

Lands in Berkeley and Beenham did belong to the archbishop of Canterbury, and were granted to Robert earl of Leicester, and John Morley, in exchange for lands in Montgomery, 23 Eliz. There are two constables belonging to the borough.

2. Ham, in which are included Ham, Clapton, Bevington, Whitley-park, Peddington, and Newport. Thomas Berkeley held the manor of Ham 15 E. 2. Thomas de Berkeley was seized of the manor of Ham 6 R. 2. and Catherine his wife was seized of two messuages, eight acres of arable, two acres of meadow, one acre of wood, and a yearly rent of 7*s.* in Ham, for St. Andrew's chantry in Berkeley, 7 R. 2. The earl of Berkeley now receives from the crown, 5*s.* a year for St. Andrew's chantry.

As to other estates, besides the manor, the records shew, that John Sergeant was seized of lands in Ham, 30, 36, & 47 E. 3. And John Fitz-Nichol (one of the Berkeley family) was seized of Wikestow in Ham, 49 E. 3. John Kendal was seized of Avenicot, [in Alkington tithing] and of the manors of Peddington, and Wyke [in the tithing of Alkington] in the parish of Berkeley, and was attainted of high treason, in the beginning of the reign of Henry the Seventh, and those estates were granted to William Treefree, 4 H. 7. to hold at pleasure. The same were granted to John Pate and John Dingle during pleasure, 2 H. 8. and afterwards to John Dingle, and the heirs of his body, paying a brace of greyhounds, whenever the king should come within two miles of that place, 10 H. 8. He died 33 H. 8. and John Dingle, his son, had livery of them the same year. Thomas Hicke, esq; has a handsome house at Peddington, and a good estate in this tithing. Ham has a distinct tithingman.

3. Hinton, i. e. the old town, from ben, in the British language, which signifies old. This tithing includes Sanager, lying along the river; antiently written Seven-bangar, perhaps a corruption of Severn-ben-gær, i. e. the old wall of the Severn, or sea-wall. Sanager gave name to an antient family, whose property it was, and who resided there; a descendant of that name and family is still living, but the estate, by a late purchase, is now lord Berkeley's. Part of Halmore lies also in this tithing. Hinton has a distinct tithingman.

4. Alkington, including Swanley, Woodford, Rugbag, Micklewood-chase, Wike, and Newport; which last lies in the road between Gloucester and Bristol, and has in it two or three inns of good accommodation. The name of this tithing was antiently written Almintune, as may be seen in the Domesday account of the parish of Berkeley. Maurice de Berkeley held this manor 9 E. 1. Margaret countess of Shrewsbury was seized of the manor of Alkinton 7 E. 2. Thomas de Berkeley held the manor of Alkinton, and granted one quarter of beans, and three ells and a half of woollen cloth yearly, to Ady Tilly, for his life, 17 E. 2. Thomas de Berkeley held the manor of Alkinton 6 R. 2. and ever since that time, it has descended with the barony of Berkeley.

Beside the manor, the records shew that John Sergeant, (mentioned under Ham) was seized of lands in Alkinton, 30, 36, & 46 E. 3. Margaret, the widow of Nicholas Stanhaw, held Wike, 14 H. 6. Thomas de Berkeley had a grant of a fair in Newport, 22 E. 3. There was a chantry in St. Maurice's chapel, at Newport, founded by Thomas lord Berkeley, 17 E. 3. of which John Baker was the last incumbent; who, according to Mr. Willis, had a pension, after the dissolution, of 6*l.* a year. A messuage in Swanley, late belonging to the above chantry, was granted to

^y I have followed sir Robert Atkyns in the date of this record; but I apprehend it should be 47 E. 3. as it stands in Ham, and occurs afterwards in the account of Stone.

Robert earl of Leicester, 23 Eliz. There is a proper tithingman to this division.

5. Stone. This place is inserted in alphabetical order, among the parishes.

6. Hamfallow, in which are Wanswell, Wannifwell, or Wansel; part of Halmore; and Hamfallow. Wanswell was probably so called from the British word gwaun, a meadow. Thorp of Wanswell held his lands to guard a tower in Berkeley-castle, called Thorp's-tower, which was built in the reign of king Edward the Third. Thomas Thorp died seized of the manor of Wanswell, 17 H. 8. Thomas his son had livery thereof 29 H. 8. and Nicholas Thorp had livery of it 1 Eliz. William Butler died seized of this manor without issue, 10 Eliz. whereby it descended to Anne, his sister and heir. Here is a tithingman.

7. Bradstone. Thomas de Bradstone, (a person of eminence, see p. 87) was seized of the manor of Bradstone 34 E. 3. which descended to his son Thomas, who held this manor 48 E. 3. Richard Seimour was probably a trustee of the Bradstones, for he was seized of the manor of Bradstone 2 H. 4. but Ela, widow of Thomas Bradstone, was seized thereof, 11 H. 4. Sir Walter de la Pool, and Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heiress of Thomas Bradstone, were seized of the manor of Bradstone 12 H. 6. and sir Edward Inglesthorp (or Ingoldsthorp) was seized thereof, and of Arlingham, Stinchcombe, and Horton, belonging to the Bradstones, 35 H. 6. There was formerly a chantry at Bradstone, the lands belonging to which were granted to Lewis Williams, by king Edward the Sixth. Bradstone has a tithingman.

Sir William Stourton, of Stourton, held the manor of Veelham, near Berkeley, 17 E. 4. and Robert Grinder, esq; was seized of Stubmarsh-park, in the hundred of Berkeley, 22 H. 6.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Dursley, worth about 170*l.* a year; of which the earl of Berkeley is patron, and Mr. Augustus-Thomas Hupfman incumbent.

The rectories of Berkeley and Hinton, which belonged to St. Austlin's abbey, at Bristol, were granted to the dean and chapter of Bristol, together with the advowson of the vicarages, 34 H. 8. But, in virtue of an act of parliament, they were given, by that body, to the late George lord Berkeley, in exchange for the rectory of St. Michael's, in Sutton Bennington, in Nottinghamshire. The vicar is intituled to a mortuary of 10*s.* from the executor of every person of this parish dying worth 40*l.*

Maurice de Berkeley founded an hospital at Longbridge, in the tithing of Ham, (p. 272) where was a chapel dedicated to the holy Trinity; yearly tenths 1*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* ob. But the estate, with which it was endowed, is now part of the impropriation.

There was a chantry in this church, dedicated to St. Andrew, founded by the lady of Thomas lord Berkeley; and another chantry, dedicated to our Lady, to which Thomas, second lord Berkeley, gave lands in Hamme, 17 E. 3. for an anniversary for his father, for his wife, and himself, after his decease. Collins's Peerage, v. 1. p. 451.

The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is large and handsome, consisting of the nave and two aisles, with a large chancel. On the south side of the chancel is a chapel and vault, belonging to the earl of Berkeley; and on the north side is the vestry room. The tower, with six bells in it, is newly built, and stands distinctly from the church, at the other end of the church-yard, where probably the old church stood.

There was antiently a nunnery in this place, of which the particulars are given in the account of the manor.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the body of the church, inclosed with iron rails, is a very antient raised tomb, with the figures, in alabaster, of a man in armour, at full length, and a woman by his side, designed for Thomas lord Berkeley, and his lady. His lordship died in 1361. At that time the family had no particular burying place here; but three generations afterwards, James lord Berkeley built the chapel and vault on the south side of the chancel.

Under an arch in the wall, between the said chapel and the chancel, upon a raised tomb of white marble, (ornamented on the side, with figures in compartments, of the virgin Mary, St. Peter, St. Christopher, and other figures of soldiers, and ecclesiasticks, some of them bearing scutcheons of the Berkeley arms upon their breasts) is the effigy, in white marble, of James the fifth lord Berkeley, lying along in full proportion, with his coat armour upon his breast, who died in 1463, and was buried in this chapel. And at his left hand is the figure of a youth, designed for Thomas his grandson, bearing also the family arms upon his breast, and a label of three points, to shew that he was the eldest son.

At the east end, upon a raised tomb, are the figures, in alabaster, of lord Henry Berkeley and his lady; his feet resting against a mitre, the family crest, and over their heads are the Berkeley arms, with twelve quarterings, and this inscription in capital letters:

HERE LYETH THE BODY OF SIR HENRY BERKELEY KNIGHT, LORD BERKELEY, MOWBRAY, SEAGRAVE, AND BRUCE. LORD LIEVTENANT OF THE COVNTY OF GLOUCESTER WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 26 DAY OF NOVEMBER IN THE YEARE OF OVR LORD GOD 1613, BEING THE DAY THAT HE ACCOMPLISHED THE AGE OF FOWERSCORE YEARES. HE FIRST MARIED, KATHERINE, SISTER TO THOMAS HOWARD, DUKE OF NORFOLKE, BY WHOM HE HAD YSSVE, THOMAS, MARY, AND FRANCES, THOMAS BEINGE A KNIGHT OF THE BATHE, MARIED ELIZABETH ONLY DAUGHTER AND HEIRE UNTO SIR GEORGE CAREY KNIGHT LORD HUNSDON. MARY THE ELDEST DAUGHTER WAS MARIED UNTO SIR JOHN ZOVCHE KNIGHT: AND FRANCES THE SECOND DAUGHTER, WAS MARIED UNTO SIR GEORGE SHIRLEY BARONET.

HE SECONDLY MARRIED JANE THE WIDOWE OF SIR ROGER TOWNSEND KNIGHT, YET LIVINGE, BY WHOM HE HAD NO ISSUE.

Against the south wall, in a scutcheon, baron and femme, 1. Berkeley. 2. Topaz, fretty ruby, canton ermine, for Noel, and under, upon a black marble table, this inscription :

H. S. E.

CAROLUS Comes de Berkeley, Vice Comes Dursley, Baro BERKELEY de Berkeley Cast. Mowbray, Seagrave, Et Bruce, E Nobilissimo ordine Balnei Eques. VII, ad genus quod spectat, & Proavos, usquequaq; Nobilis, Et longo, si quis alius, Procerum stemmate Editus ; Munij etiam tam illustri stirpe dignis Insignitus. Siquidem, à Gulielm: III^o. ad ordines fœderati Belgij Ablegatus & Plenipotentarius Extraordinarius. Rebus, non Britannia tantum, sed totius ferè Europæ (Tunc temporis presertim arduis) per annos V. incubuit. Quàm felici Diligentia, Fide quàm intemeratâ Ex illo dicas, Lector, quod, Superstite Patre In magnatum ordinem adscisci meruerit. Cui à Sanctioribus consilijs & Regi Guliel: & Annæ Reginae, E proregibus Hiberniæ Secundus, Comitatum Civitatumq; Glocest: & Brist: Locum-tenens. Surriæ & Glocest: Custos Rot: urbis Glocest: magnus Senescallus, Arcis Sancti de Briavell Castellanus, Gardianus Forestæ de Dean. Deniq; ad Turcarum primùm, deinde ad Roman: Imperatorem Cum Legatus Extraordinarius designatus Effet, Quo minus has etiam ornaret provincias, Obstetit adveria Corporis valetudo. Sed restat ad huc, præ quo fordescent cætera, Honos verus, stabilis, & vel morti cedere nescius, Quod veritatem Evangelicam seriò amplexus ; Erga Deum pius, Erga pauperes munificus, Adversus omnes Æquus & Benevolus, In Christo jam placide obdormivit, Cum eodem olim regnaturus una. Natus VIII^o. April: MDCXLIX, denatus XXIV^o. Septem: MDCCX, Ætat: Suiæ LXII.

Against the south wall, is this memorial, in capital letters.

TO THE PERPETVAL MEMORY OF THE MOST VERTVOVS AND IRVVDENT LADY ELIZABETH LADY BERKELEY THE WIDOWE OF ST. THOMAS BERKELEY KNIGHT, SONNE AND HEIRE OF HENRY LORD BERKELEY: GEORGE LORD BERKELEY HER ONLY SONNE, HATH IN THIS CHAPPEL OF HIS ANCESTORS IN A DVTFULL ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF HER PIOUS LIFE AND DEATH, CONSECRATED THIS INSCRIPTION FOR A MEMORIALE OF HER VERTVE: WHO LIVED THIS LIFE AT HER HOUSE AT CRANFORD IN THE COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX, THE 23^d DAY OF APRIL ANNO DOMINI 1635.

WHERE, ACCORDINGE TO THE DIRECTION OF HER WILL, SHE LIETH BVRIED.

In the chancel are several memorials for the Westons, descended from a knightly family, of Weston-hall in Shropshire, with their arms, An eagle display'd, the blazon not exprest. — for the Hoptons of Berkeley and Cam, with their arms, Gules, a lion rampant between nine crosses fretty fitchy, Or. — for Richard Saffyn, M. A. vicar of Berkeley, who died in 1690, with his arms, three estoils issuing out of as many crescents. — for Mr. Henry Head, vicar of Berkeley, and one of the prebendaries of Bristol, who died in 1728, with his arms, field suppoied, Azure, a chevron ermine, between three unicorns heads cabosh'd. — for the Nelmes's of Breadstone, with their arms, three elm trees.

In the body of the church, upon a brass, fixt in a grey marble flat stone, is the figure of a man in a loose robe, holding a heart upon his breast, inscribed with mey, and round the edge of the stone, in ancient characters :

† Hic jacet corpus Willielmi Freme cujus anime propicietur deus, et animarum omnium fidelium defunctorum parentum et suorum Amen. Contende intrare per angustam portam.

Against the wall of the south aisle of the church, a memorial for Thomas Hickes, of Peddington, who died in 1746, with his arms, Gules, a chevron wavy, between three fleurs-de-lis, Or.

Upon flat stones in the church, are memorials for several persons of the name of Jaye, who came from Darking in Surry, but descended from an ancient family of that name in Hampshire. The bearings on the scutcheons are, Three leopards heads crown'd with a ducal coronet. The blazon not expressed.

First fruits, £.	32	14	8	Synodals, £.	0	3	0
Tenths, —	3	5	6	Pentecostals,	0	2	6
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Mr. John Atwood, of Berkeley, gave a meadow called Longbridge, lying in Ham, to the poor of the borough, worth 10*l.* 10*s.* a year.

Mr. Thomas Machin, of this parish, in 1630, gave a ground near Parkham-meadow, of the yearly rent of 3*l.* 10*s.* to the poor.

Mr. John Mallet, of this parish, in 1639, gave a ground near Prior's-wood, of the yearly value of 5*l.* 10*s.* to the poor.

The bridewell-house, and the town-house, of the yearly value together of 7*l.* 10*s.* were given to the poor by an unknown benefactor, and have been enjoy'd time immemorial.

The tithing-barn of Ham is charged with the annual payment of 7*s.* to the poor.

Mr. Thomas Bayley, of this parish, charged a ground in Halmer, called Stunings, with the payment of 15*s.* a year to the poor.

Richard Everett, of this parish, gave the interest of 10*l.* for ever, to the poor house-keepers of Ham.

Samuel Thurner, M. B. of Magdalen Hall, Oxon, in 1696, gave lands in Thornbury and Rockhampton, let together at 16*l.* 5*s.* a year, for teaching twenty-six boys of Berkeley town to read, write, &c.

John Smith, M. A. of Magdalen College, Oxon, in 1717, gave a sum of money, which, with 40*l.* given by the right honourable the countess dowager of Berkeley, was laid out in lands in this parish, worth 10*l.* 10*s.* a year, for teaching twelve boys to read and write.

Thomas Hopton, esq; in 1718, gave 1*l.* 10*s.* a year to the minister of this parish, for a sermon on Good Friday, and another on November 5; and 2*l.* 10*s.* a year to the poor in bread, charged on his estate at Littleton upon Severn.

Mrs. Bridget Vick, in 1724, gave a ground in Hinton, called the Tining, of 3*l.* a year, to be distributed in bread to the poor.

Thomas Pearce, in 1728, charged his estate in Wick with the payment of 12s. a year, to be given, at Christmas, to six poor men of Alkington tithing.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beaven, in 1728, gave 120l. which her executor laid out in lands, and, pursuant to her will, charged an estate called the Acktrees, near Berkeley heath, with the payment of 3l. a year to the minister, for reading prayers, and 3l. a year to be given to the poor in bread.

Sir Robert Atkyns mentions the following donations, which I have otherwise no account of: Thomas Baldwin gave 6l. a year, to be distributed to six poor widows at Easter.—Mary Hort gave a tenement to the poor.—Mr. Boucher gave another to the same use.—The borough of Berkeley has purchased a ground called Priest's-Croft, lying in Ham, for the benefit of the poor.

Borough of Berkeley.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	22	0	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	33	12	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	14	8	8
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	11	2	0

Ham and Hamfallow.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	506	0	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	55	17	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	478	9	8
		— at 3s. (Ham) 1770, —	232	6	9
		— (Hamfallow) — — — 122	14	9

Alkington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	152	8	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	28	10	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	213	9	0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	158	9	6

Bradstone.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	34	4	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	8	12	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	41	2	0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, —	30	18	0

Stone. See Stone as a parish.

Hinton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	107	12	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	16	2	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	106	12	0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	79	19	0

At the beginning of this century, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, there were 500 houses in this parish, and about 2500 inhabitants, whereof 140 were freeholders; yearly births 67, burials 58. And I understand the tithing of Stone is not included in these particulars, except as to births and burials. But certainly Sir Robert's estimate was too high; for in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there appear to be entered in the parish register 473 baptisms, and 399 burials; and from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, 551 baptisms, and 502 burials. By which it appears that the inhabitants have increased during the last seventy years, and are now about 1854 in number, which is nearly in the proportion of 33 to 1 of the annual burials.

B E V E R S T O N E.

THIS parish lies in the upper division of the hundred of Berkeley, in a healthy country, upon the Cotswold hills, scarce two miles north-westward from Tetbury, five from Minchinhampton, and twenty southward from Gloucester. The land is chiefly arable, with some good pasturage, but no meadow ground.

Leland says there is a quarre of good stone at Beverstane, unde nomen, ex conjectura; but Sir Robert Atkyns goes still further, in pronouncing that it was antiently called Burestan, from the blue stones found in this place. The name, in Domesday-book, is written Beurestan; and tho' the termination, in the Saxon language, signifies stone, yet the whole word, taken together, is so difficult and abstruse, that I confess myself totally ignorant of its original and signification.

There are considerable remains of an antient castle in this place, said to have been originally built in the time of the Saxon heptarchy; but by whom is not certainly known. Godwin earl of Kent, in the time of Edward the Confessor, having offended the king by refusing to punish the chief actors of a disorder which happened in Canterbury, without their being first brought to trial; the king called an assembly of all the nobility at Gloucester, that the matter might be debated; but Godwin and his sons, instead of appearing there, raised a great force, and took up their quarters at Beverstan; and some accounts expressly say, that they seized the castle, which shews it to be of older standing than the Norman conquest. Maurice lord Berkeley repaired and fortified this castle in the reign of king Henry the Third, and Thomas lord Berkeley afterwards greatly beautified and enlarged it, by the spoils and ransom of prisoners which he took at the battle of Poictiers, in the reign of king Edward the Third. It was built square, moated on all sides, and had a tower at every corner; but a great part of the castle having been destroyed by fire, there is only one of the towers now remaining. The dining room was where a part of the farmhouse now stands, as appears by the remains of a magnificent window, adjoining to the eastern part of the castle, and the noble fire-place yet remaining.

It was garrisoned by the king's forces in the great civil war, and attacked by colonel Malley, with three hundred foot and fourscore horse, without success; but afterwards, the governor, captain

Captain Oglethorpe, being taken prisoner, and carried to Gloucester, by the parliament's party, Colonel Massey learnt from him where the castle might be attacked with the greatest advantage; and advancing with a body of horse and foot before it, summoned it to surrender. The lieutenant, who had the command, immediately complied, and it was thought, he might have held it with ease. The garrison, leaving their arms, ammunition, and baggage, had liberty to retire where they pleased. Of so great simplicity was the king's officer, as to ask where was the next destination of the parliament's forces, expressing his fears, if the garrison should go to Malmesbury, of their being taken a second time; and going there, it happened to them as they apprehended, the next day after their arrival.

This place had antiently a market and fair, as appears by the subsequent account of the manor, but they have been long since disused.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

This manor was antiently parcel of the manor of Berkeley, and belonged to the nunnery there: And, at the time of the general survey, there were ten hides in Beurestan belonging to Berkeley.

See Berkeley.

King Henry the Second gave the manor of Beverstan to Robert Fitz-Harding, ancestor of the Berkeley family, who settled it on Robert his second son, in marriage with Alice, the daughter and heiress of Robert de Gant, and of Alice, the daughter of William Paganell; which Robert de Gant was son of Gilbert de Gant, who came into England with William the conqueror, and had married Alice, the daughter of Hugh de Montfort. His wife being thus descended, Robert de Berkeley obtained, by that marriage, the great lordship of Were, in com. Somerset, whence he took the name of Robert de Were. He founded the hospital of St. Mark at Billeswike, near Bristol, and left issue a son named Maurice, and a daughter Eva, married to Thomas de Harpetre.

Which Maurice assumed the name of de Gant from his mother, on account of her great inheritance. In 17 John, taking part with the rebellious barons, his lands were seized, and given to Philip de Albini, whereupon he addressed himself to the king, to make his peace. And 11 H. 3. having fortified his castle of Beverstan without licence, he went again to the king to excuse himself for so doing, and obtained a confirmation thereof. Having no issue, he gave to the king his lordships of Weston, Beverstan, and Albricton, and died 14 H. 3. The bulk of his inheritance came to the issue of Eva, his sister, whose son Robert, some time after, assumed the surname of Gournay, and, 15 H. 3. had livery of the manor of Paulet, and other lands in Somersetshire, and of all his lands in Gloucestershire, excepting Beverstan, Weston, Radewic, Oure, and Albricton; which however, he not long after obtained of the king.

Which Robert Gournay, son and heir of the said Eva de Berkeley, whose barony consisted of no less than twenty-two knights-fees, died seized of Beverstan 53 H. 3. and was succeeded in this estate by his son Anselm, whose son John Gournay dying seized of it 19 E. 1. left his only daughter and heir Elizabeth, married to John ap Adam, who both joined in a fine, and settled this manor, and the advowson of the church, and the manors of King's-Weston, and Pirton in Churchdown, on the joint heirs of their bodies, the remainder on the heirs of Elizabeth, 25 E. 1. Which John and Elizabeth purchased a charter of free-warren in Beverstan, and a weekly market on Monday, and a fair to begin on the eve of the assumption of our Lady, and to continue for three days.

Thomas ap Adam, son of John, sold this manor and castle, and the manor of Over, to Thomas lord Berkeley 4 E. 3. who died seized thereof 35 E. 3. and Catherine his widow died also seized of it 9 R. 2.

Sir John La Warr, in right of Elizabeth his wife, widow of Thomas de Berkeley, was seized thereof 22 R. 2.

Sir John Berkeley was possessed of this manor, and of Beverston-castle, and of the advowson of the church, 6 H. 6. and Maurice Berkeley of Beverston, was also seized of the castle and manor 38 H. 6. Sir William Berkeley died seized of the manor 5 E. 6. and the next year livery was granted to sir John Berkeley his son, who died seized of it 20 Eliz. and the same year livery was granted to sir John Berkeley, his son and heir, who alienated this manor to sir John Pointz; but it soon went out of that name, for sir John sold this manor, and that of Hill, to Henry Fleetwood, esq; who was lord of them in the year 1608.

In a few years afterwards, this manor was purchased by sir Michael Hicks, from whom it descended to his heir sir Henry Hicks, whose son Michael Hicks, esq; died seized thereof in the year 1764; and Michael Hicks, an infant son of Howe Hicks, of Witcombe, in this county, esq; is the present lord of the manor. His arms and pedigree are inserted under Witcombe.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Dursley, worth about 240*l.* a year. The abbey of Gloucester was formerly patron; but the presentation is now in the crown, and Mr. Selwyn is the present incumbent. The chapel of Kingscot is annexed to this church.

One hundred and eight acres of arable in Beverstone, thirty-two in Kingscot, and thirty-five acres of inclosure, in both parishes, belong to the glebe.

^a Rot. fin. 17 Johan.

^b Rot. fin. 16 H. 3. m. 3.

^c Dugd. Bar.

The church is small, dedicated to St. Mary, with an aisle on the south side, and a cross aisle on the north, belonging to the lord of the manor, and a strong tower, with pinnacles, at the west end.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Against the wall, in the chancel, is the following inscription.

A° 1604. Ætat. 69. Epicedium Katherinæ Pury.
 Quæ defuncta jacet saxo tumulata sub illo
 Bis Cathara, haud ficto nomine, dicta fuit.
 Nomen utrumque sonat mundam, puram, piamq;
 Et vere, nomen quod referebat, erat.
 Nam puram puro debebat pectore vitam;
 Pura fuit mundo, nunc mage pura Deo.

There are memorials for Richard Hall, rector of this parish, who died June 30, 1638; for another Richard Hall, rector, who died in 1684; and for Andrew Needham, also rector of Beverstone, who died in 1710.

First fruits, £	30	0	0	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	3	0	0	Pentecostals, 0	0	8
Procurations,	0	6	8

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	80	1	0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, —	18	0	0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, —	86	16	0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	64	4	0

At the beginning of this century there were 34 houses and about 164 inhabitants, whereof three were freeholders, in this parish; yearly births 5, burials 4. Atkyns. But upon examination, I find, that in a series of ten years, ending with 1768, there were entered in the parish register 57 baptisms, and 44 burials; and the exact number of inhabitants is 144, which is nearly in the proportion of 33 to 1 of the annual burials: Whence one may be induced to think the place unhealthy, notwithstanding it lies in an open part of the country; but I am informed that it is really otherwise, and that the late dilapidation of cottages hath driven many of the younger people out of the parish, to which alone the decrease of inhabitants ought to be attributed.

B I B U R Y.

THIS is a parish of considerable extent, in the cotswold part of the country, six miles south from Northleach, seven north-eastward from Cirencester, and nineteen eastward from Gloucester. The tithing of Winson is in the hundred of Bradley, but all the rest of the parish lies in the hundred of Britwellbarrow.

The name of this place, antiently written Becheberie, and Begeberie, seems to have been given it on account of the situation of the village upon the river; for bece or beke signifies a stream or river, and beue a flat piece of ground. The latter part of the name, if referred to the place where the church stands, agrees well enough with the situation; but some of the houses stand on the side of an eminence. Here the river Coln rises in so copious a manner as to drive a mill at a small distance from the head of the spring.

The turnpike-road from Cirencester to Oxford leads through this place, and where it crossed the river, the water was broad and deep, and being near the spring, so remarkably cold, as frequently to injure cattle, which, heated with travelling, passed through it; wherefore a bridge was erected by subscription a few years ago, to obviate those inconveniencies.

This place gave name to the hundred of Becheberie, now swallowed up in that of Britwellbarrow. The parish hath lately been inclosed, and great part of those lands which lay in downs are now converted to tillage.

Estcourt Creswell, esq; hath a large estate and a good house here, of which his generosity hath furnished the annexed beautiful copper-plate.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In the Domesday account of the lands belonging to the church of Worcester, it is expressed after the following manner:

‘The same church held Becheberie in Becheberie hundred. There are twenty-one hides. In demean are four plow-tillages, and nineteen villeins and two bordars with eleven plow-tillages. There are three radchenifers having four hides and four plow-tillages, and a priest having three hides, and, with his, four plow-tillages. There are eleven servi and ancilla, and two mills of 17s. [rent,] and ten acres of meadow. Durand holds three hides and one yard-land in Bernesleis of the bishop, as a manor dependent on this manor; and Eudo holds seven yard-lands there for a manor.

‘In these are five plow-tillages in demean, and twelve villeins with six plow-tillages. There are twelve servi. The whole manor, in the time of king Edward, was worth, and now also is worth 18l.

‘The same church holds Aicote, and Ailric holds it of her. It lies in Begeberie. There is one hide. In demean are two plow-tillages, and two villeins and four bordars with two plow-tillages. There are two servi, and eight acres of meadow, and a mill of 64d. It was worth 20s. now 30s. Domesday-book, p. 70.

The latter is supposed to be the manor afterwards given to the priory of Osney. But the bishop of Worcester was seized of a manor called the manor of Bibury, with court-leet and free warren, 15 E. 1. which privileges were allowed to him in a writ of Quo warranto brought against him the same year. In a M.S. taxation of the temporalties of the see of Worcester, in the time of Edward the First, which I found in the Cotton library, [Tiberius, C. F. 76.] are the following particulars particulars

BIBURY.

To ^{the} Court Creswell Esq. Member of Parliament
This Plate is Inscribed by his for Cirencester, in the County of Gloucester: most Obliged humble Servant J. Rudder.

T. Bonnor delin. & sculp.
1771.

Published in the City of London July 1771 by T. Bonnor
Barrington Park, Sandiwell Park, Berkeley Castle, Highnam Court, New Mills, Rousham Park and This Print Price of Sheet and Paper 6d.
Printed by and sold by T. Bonnor N^o 56 Maiden Lane Covent Garden London and to be had at Mr. P. Poy's College Green Gloucester particulars : Item apud Bibur' de redivu affis. 4l. et caruc. terræ, et valet caruc. 30s. et 1 columbarium quod valet 7s. et 1 molendinum aquaticum quod valet marc. dim. et de placitis et perquisitis 30s. Summa 2l. 4s. A survey having been made of this manor, 6 H. 8. it was then valued at 10l. 14s. a year.

The see of Worcester continued in possession of this manor 'till it was alienated therefrom, 3 E. 6. when it was granted to John Dudley earl of Warwick, afterwards duke of Northumberland, which is the reason that one part of Bibury is now, for distinction sake, called Bibury Northumberland.

It appears, by the evidences belonging to this estate, that John Harrington was soon after possessed of this manor, which he alienated to sir William Sherrington, who sold it, by virtue of the king's licence, dated June 23, 6 E. 6. to William earl of Pembroke, in perpetuum. The earl procures a licence from the crown, dated nine days after the former, and alienates it to Hugh Westwood. But, after the attainder of the duke of Northumberland, different people coming into favour, and the queen reversing many things done by king Edward, this manor was granted to John Walters and Thomas Carpenter, 1 Mariæ. However, William Westwood, esq; was lord of it in the year 1608.

Sir Thomas Sackville bought Bibury of Hugh Westwood, (who was probably son of the above mentioned William) and built the mansion-house, according to the date over the porch, in the year 1623. He married Barbara, daughter of sir John Jungerford, of Down Amney, by whom he had two sons, John and Richard, and two daughters. John Sackville succeeded his father, but dying unmarried, this estate came to his brother Richard, who had two sons, John and Henry. John succeeded his father, but having no issue, left his estate to Henry. Which Henry left issue, by his first and second marriage, two daughters heiresses, Elizabeth and Catherine, the latter of whom died unmarried; but Elizabeth, the elder, was wedded to Edmond Warneford, esq; by whom he had an only child Anne Warneford, married to Thomas Estcourt Cresswell, of Pinkney in the county of Wilts, esq; and by him had issue only one son, Estcourt Cresswell, esq; who, in the year 1668, was chosen one of the representatives in parliament for the borough of Cirencester, and is the present lord of the manor of Bibury. His arms may be seen at the foot of the plate of the feat.

The other manor of Bibury, with the rectory and advowson, formerly belonged to the priory of Osney, wherefore it was called Bibury Osney, and was granted to the chapter of Oxford 34 H. 8.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Bibury, which contains 59 families, and 307 inhabitants, and is divided into two tithings, Bibury Osney, and Bibury Northumberland, as is already observed.

2. Ablington, containing 22 families and 91 inhabitants. The reverend Mr. Charles Coxwell has a feat and a good estate here. He is descended from an antient family formerly residing in Cirencester, who having large possessions in the town, occasioned a certain street to be called by their family name. His arms are, Argent, a bend wavy between six cocks gules.

Ralph de Willington and Olimpias his wife purchased a moiety of the manor of Ablington, 9 Joh. John de Willington had a charter of free-warren in Ablington and other manors, 3 E. 2. and died seized hereof 12 E. 3. Sir Ralph de Willington died seized of this manor 22 E. 3. and livery thereof was granted to his son Henry the next year; whose son sir John de Willington had seizin of it 2 R. 2. He had a son Ralph, whose wife Joan survived him, and was afterwards married to Thomas Wett, whom also she survived, and held the manor of Ablington 6 H. 4. The last Ralph Willington had two sons, Ralph and John, who died without issue, and a daughter Joan, married to John Wrath, by whom she had a son John Wrath, who dying, without issue, seized of this manor, 13 H. 4. left his two sisters co-heiresses, of whom, Elizabeth was married to sir William Poulton, and Isabel was the widow of William Beaumont.

Sir William Poulton and Elizabeth his wife levied a fine of the sixth part of the manor of Ablington, to the use of themselves in special taille; the remainder to John, the son of sir William, in taille general; the remainder to the right heirs of Isabel, widow of William Beaumont. They dying without issue, the estate came to Isabel Beaumont, who had issue John and Isabel. John died without issue, whereby his sister became seized, who dying unmarried 2 H. 6. the estate descended to her next kinsman and heir sir Thomas Beaumont, who died seized 29 H. 6. and was succeeded by his son sir William Beaumont, in some records styled William Beaumont, esq; who died 32 H. 6. and was succeeded by Philip Beaumont his brother, who died 13 E. 4.

Hugh Beaumont and Elizabeth his wife, and John Basset and Elizabeth his wife, levied a fine of this manor to Richard bishop of Durham and divers great persons, among whom was sir Giles d'Aubeny, 16 H. 7. Giles lord d'Aubeny died seized thereof 6 H. 8. and livery of it was granted the same year to Henry lord d'Aubeny his son. This manor was afterwards granted to Edward duke of Somerset, and, after his attainder, it was granted to James Basset, 4 Mariæ, and again confirmed to Arthur Basset, 7 Eliz. The succession to this manor is the same with Frampton Cotterell, Sainthurst, Westonbirt, and Poulton in Awre.

Lands in this place, which had been formerly given for finding lamps in the church of Bibury, were granted to sir William Rider, 7 Jac.

3. Arlington, which consists of 55 families and 255 inhabitants. This manor is expressly mentioned mentioned in Domesday-book, which gives the following particulars :

‘ Chenvichelle, one of king Edward’s thanes, held Alvredintune. There were five hides, and four plow-tillages in demean, and twelve villeins and one bordar with six plow-tillages, and sixteen servi and ancillæ, and two mills of 20s. [rent.] A wood one mile long, and half a mile broad. Of these two manors [i. e. Cedeorde and Alvredintune] the steward paid what he pleased in the time of king Edward. They now pay 40*l.* of white money, of which 20 in ora. Earl Roger held them. Domesday-book, p. 69.

Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford, held Alurington 1 E. 2. Alice, widow of John de Pembrige, held it 7 E. 3. in which year Roger Norman levied a fine, and settled this manor on himself for life, the remainder on Roger his son in taille. Roger Norman had a charter of free-warren in Alurington 19 E. 3. and died seized thereof 23 E. 3. leaving Giles his cousin and heir, who was seized of Alurington, near Cirencester, 36 E. 3. but William Clareshull was seized of this manor the following year; Edward earl of Stafford held it 4 H. 4. and Richard de Beauchamp and Isabel his wife were seized hereof 2 H. 5. The manor afterwards belonged to the priory of Osney, and was granted to John Barrington, 1 E. 6. pursuant to the will of king H. 8.

4. Winton, where are 24 families and 127 inhabitants. This tithing lies in Bradley hundred, about three miles from the church, and has a chapel of ease dedicated to St. Michael, with a yard consecrated for sepulture in the year 1738. Mr. Cresswell is patron. The manor belongs to Dr. Doiley. Mr. Howse has a good estate here.

Note. Aldefworth, Barnsley, and Winton appear at the court-leet of the lord of the manor of Bibury. The other lords hold courts-baron.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, worth about 400*l.* a year. John Pagan, bishop of Worcester, appropriated the tithes of Bibury to the monastery of Osney, near Oxford, in the year 1130, which monastery hath presented to this church. Mr. Cresswell is patron and impropiator. The reverend Mr. Somerville, nephew of the late lord Somerville, is the present incumbent. He bears the same arms with his lordship, viz. Azure, three mullets Or, accompanied with seven crosses crozlets fitchy sable, three in chief, one in fess, two in flank, and the last in base.

The vicarage-house, which is a very good one, was built by Dr. Vannam, the vicar, great grandfather to the present incumbent, about the beginning of this century.

At the inclosing of the common fields, about the year 1769, the parish was exonerated from tithe, and the impropiator and minister had lands allotted to them in lieu thereof.

This church is a peculiar, with jurisdiction over those of Aldefworth, Barnsley, and the chapel of Winton. What the rights of this peculiar were, had been a subject of dispute ever since the foundation of the see of Gloucester, but it was agreed, between Dr. Benson, late bishop of Gloucester, and Mrs. Warneford, then lady of the manor, to lay all evidence relating to it before the dean of the arches, and to enter into reciprocal engagements to abide by his award; which award was made Mar. 26, 1741. But the agreement became void at the death of that prelate; and the matters in controversy, respecting the peculiar, are in the same state as before. The lord of the manor doth not allow, to the bishop of the diocese, a right of visitation; he appoints his own official and chancellor, who hath the probat. of wills, and the grant of licences for marriage, to those within the limits of the peculiar.

Peculiars took their rise from the constitutions of Lanfranc archbishop of Canterbury, in the 11th century, who exempted all the parish priests of those places where he was the lord or patron, in any diocese, from the jurisdiction of the bishop.

The church is large and handsome, consisting of a nave and two aisles, with a tower at the west end, in which are six musical bells. It is dedicated to St. Mary. The chancel belongs to the impropiator.

There was a colossal figure of St. Christopher painted against the wall of this church, in pursuance of an opinion that prevailed in the ages of ignorance and superstition, that whosoever had seen the image of that saint, should not die of sudden or accidental death; whence, says the author of the French Historical Dictionary, ‘he is represented of a prodigious size, carrying the infant Jesus upon his shoulders, and placed at the gates of cathedrals, and at the entrance of churches, that every body may see him the more easily.’ Accordingly this figure was opposite to the entrance at the south door of the church; but it hath lately been covered with white-wash, and nothing remains to be seen but the two following lines, incorrectly written in antient characters, under the figure.

Xp̄ofori sc̄i speciem quicunque tuctur,
Illo nanque die nullo langore gravetur.

Which may be thus englished :

*Saint Christopher’s fair figure who shall view,
Faintness nor feebleness that day shall cure.*

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the north aisle, against the pillar behind the pulpit, is this inscription :

^d This monastery was first founded at Oxford, for secular canons, by Robert d’Oily, but translated to Osney in the year 1129, and the canons then became regulars of the order of St. Augustine. It was dedicated to the virgin Mary, and was valued at the dissolution, at 775*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* yearly. Upon the erection of the bishoprick of Oxford, by king H. 8. the see was placed at Osney, but soon after, in 1546, it was removed to Christ Church.

SACRÆ MEMORIÆ VIRI VERE REVERENDI BENJAMINI WYNNINGTON, ART. MAG. HUIUS ECCLESIÆ VICARIJ, QUI TAM HANC MORTALEM IN ÆTERNAM COMMUTAVIT
L. 28, 1673.

Proh Dolor ! invidiæ Mortis jacet ille Triumphvs,
Qui vivvs nullo victvs ab hoste fvit.
Ecce Minister erat Christi perdoctvs, amatus,
Ecclesiæ veræ Gloria, Fama, Decvs.
Vt Dixit Vixit,
Et Moriendo Vivit.
Nec non officio fama decvq; lvo.

Mr. Wynnington was a very laborious minister, of whom it is said, that after he had preached an hour by the glass, he would turn it, assuring the congregation, that he meant to continue in his sermon only one hour longer. And it is added, that during the second hour of the sermon, Mr. Sackville, then lord of the manor, usually retired from church to smoke his pipe, but always returned in time to receive the benediction.

There is an elegant pyramidal monument of Siena marble, against the north wall of the chancel, with these arms in a lozenge, Party per fess embattled, argent and sable, six crosses patee counter-benged, for Warneford. On an escutcheon of pretence, Quarterly, 1st and 4th Or, 2d and 3d Gules, over all a bend vair, for Sackville. A small white marble table bears the following inscription :

Near this place lieth interred the body of Elizabeth Warneford, relict of Edmond Warneford, esq; She was eldest daughter of Henry Sackville, esq; late of this place. She departed this life the 15th of May, 1756, to the inexpressible grief of her family and acquaintance, aged 67. She was a person of distinguished piety and virtue, and most exemplary in her life and conversation.

Pf. xxxiv. v. 19. Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of all.

Opposite to the above, there is a small but elegant monument, of the same kind of marble, with the arms of Sackville, and this inscription :

Near this place lieth interred the body of Katherine Sackville, youngest daughter of Henry Sackville, esq; late of this place, who departed this life Sept. 13, 1760, aged 68. She was a person of a truly religious and good life, which was distinguished by a constant performance of the offices of friendship, piety, and charity.

Against a pillar in the church are two small marble monuments, whereon are the arms of Coxwell, and the following inscriptions :

Underneath lieth the body of John Coxwell, esq; late of Ablington in this parish, who died greatly lamented, Aug. 13, 1754, aged 56 years. He left behind him a widow (who willed this to be erected) and seven children. He was a loving husband, a tender father, a kind master, and a bountiful friend to the poor. Prov. x. 7. The memory of the just is blessed.

Near this place lieth the body of Mrs. Mary Coxwell, relict of John Coxwell, esq; of Ablington. She died March 15, 1707, aged 59. Her conscientious and exemplary discharge of all social and religious duties, made her no less deservedly esteemed in her time, than regretted at her death, by all her relations and acquaintance.

In the body of the church is a memorial, upon a flat stone, for Thomas Baker, A.M. late vicar of this parish, and one of his majesty's justices of the peace for this county, who died Nov. 8, 1755. His arms, Azure, a fess Or, charged with three cinquefoils gules, between as many swans heads erased the second, gorged with ducal coronets of the first.

Upon flat stones, in the chancel, are the following memorials :

John Vannam, D. D. vicar of Bibury, died July the 13th, 1721, aged 84.

Elizth. Hickes, daughter of Dr. Vannam, and wife of Rob^t. Hickes, esq; of Comb in y^e county of Gloucester, died July y^e 30th, 1720, aged 44.

George Vannam, M. A. Rector of Buscot, Berks, died Nov. y^e 27th, 1716, aged 37.

Benefactions.

There is a charitable institution here, called Jesus Almshouse, founded by Hugh Westwood, for a master and three brethren. The master receives eighteen-pence a week, and the brethren sixteen-pence each ; and they have besides a load of wood yearly, and a coat, with a plate of silver, whereon are engraven the arms and initial letters of the name of the founder. There are governors appointed to this charity, of which the present lord of the manor, the minister, and church-wardens are of the number.

John Smyther, of Arlington, gave 10*l.* the interest of which to be bestowed upon four poor widows of this parish.—The first mention of the distribution of this charity is in the year 1682.

Mr. William Forder, of Amney Crucis, by his will dated Mar. 30, 35 C. 2. gave 5*l.* to the parish church of Bibury, to remain as a stock for ever.

— Tawny, (probably of this parish) in 1685, bequeathed, after the expiration of one life, 50*l.* as a stock for the use of the poor.

Mrs. Katherine Sackville, by her will, left 100*l.* for the use of the poor ; the interest of it to be distributed annually, at the discretion of the minister and church-wardens.

Bibury.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	48	12	0
		Poll-tax — — — 1694, —	23	1	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694, —	46	4	0
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	34	13	0

Ablington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	48	11	10
		Poll-tax — — — 1694, —	9	0	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694, —	34	1	0
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	25	10	9

Arlington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	48	11	10
		Poll-tax — — — 1694, —	15	3	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694, —	41	5	5
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	30	12	6

Winson.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	39	1	2
		Poll-tax — — — 1694, —	6	12	0
		Land-tax — — — 1694, —	20	17	6
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	23	11	8

At the beginning of this century, according to Sir Robert Atkyns, there were 100 houses and about 500 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 16 were freeholders ; yearly births 17, burials 13.

But

But it appears by the parish register, that in a series of ten years, from 1714 to 1723 inclusive, there were 145 baptisms and 110 burials; and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, 194 baptisms and 156 burials; and there are, at present, 160 families and 780 inhabitants. So that population hath very much encreased in this century; and the number of living inhabitants is, to the average of annual burials, exactly as 50 to 1, which shews the place to be very healthy.

BICKNOR (ENGLISH)

LIES in the hundred of St. Briavel, in the Forest division of the county, three miles distant north from Colford, five eastward from Monmouth, and twenty-two westward from Gloucester.

It is situated upon the bank of the river Wye, whence it was called Bicanofre, from Bec, a river, and Oppe, which signifies upon. It is distinguished, as above, from another parish on the opposite side of the same river, called Welch Bicknor, because all on the other side was formerly reputed to be in Wales.

This village, like most others in the forest of Dean, produceth coal and iron ore. It consists of rich meadow and pasture ground, with very little arable. A small rill, called Eastpitch-brook, rises in the parish, and empties itself into the Wye.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

This manor, soon after the Conquest, was held by William the son of Norman, for in Domesday-book it is thus exprest:

‘The same William [i. e. son of Norman] holds ‘Bicanofre in Westberie hundred. Morganan ‘held it in the time of king Edward. There is ‘half a hide, and in demean half a plow-tillage, ‘with six bordars. It was worth 5*s.* and is now ‘worth 10*s.* Domesday-book, p. 74.

One of the bailiwicks of the forest was denominated from this place, and William Aminell held it 8 and 20 H. 3.

William de Musgros was seized of the manor of Bicknor 15 E. 1. and Cicely de Musgros held the same, as appears by the records, in the 15th and 29th years of the same reign.

Richard Talbot, of Goderick-castle in Herefordshire, in right of Elizabeth his wife, one of the sisters and heirs of John Comin of Badenaugh, of the royal blood of Scotland, was seized of the manor and advowson of Bicknor, and levied a fine thereof to the use of himself in talle, 12 E. 3.

This manor, soon after, came into the family of Ferrers, of whom, John lord Ferrers de Chartley, in right of Elizabeth his wife, the widow of Fulk le Strange, and daughter of Ralph de Stafford, was seized of it, and died 41 E. 3. Which Elizabeth was afterwards married to Reginald lord Cobham, and died seized of this manor 49 E. 3. Robert lord Ferrers of Chartley, son of sir John, succeeded his father in this estate, and marrying Margaret, daughter of Edward lord Spencer, died seized of Bicknor English, 1 H. 5. leaving Edmond lord Ferrers of Chartley their son and heir, who died seized of Tainton and of this manor, with the office of woodwardship in the forest of Dean, 14 H. 6. William lord Ferrers, son of Edmond, had livery of the manor presently after his father's death, and dying 28 H. 6. left an only daughter Anne, married to Walter d'Evereux, esq; who afterwards, in her right, became lord Ferrers of Chartley. Elizabeth the widow of William lord Ferrers levied a fine of the manor of Bicknor, to Thomas archbishop of Canterbury, and to many other great men, 32 H. 6. By this account it appears, that the manor of Bicknor continued in the name of Ferrers about one hundred and twenty years.

The manor soon after came to William Wal- lein, or Walwyn, proprietor of Abbenhall, who died seized thereof 11 E. 4.

Sir John Luterell had livery of the manor of Bicknor 1 Eliz. and the earl of Clanricard was seized of it in the year 1608. It afterwards came to Benedict Hall, of Highmeadow, esq; from whom it descended to lord viscount Gage, the present lord of the manor. For his lordship's arms, &c. see Newland.

Alexander Carent was seized of lands in Bicknor 5 E. 3. and John his son and heir held the same 6 R. 2.

Edward Tomkyns Machen, esq; has a good house and estate in this parish. He is descended of an antient family which has long resided in this county. Thomas Machen, his ancestor, was thrice mayor of the city of Gloucester, who died in 1614, and lies buried in the body of Gloucester cathedral, as mentioned p. 177.

The family of the Wyrals, which has been seated here several generations past, is of great antiquity. Matthew Wyral was high sheriff of this county in 1259. John Wyral, a descendant from him, died 33 E. 3. and left William Wyral his son and successor, who died also 38 E. 3. John Wyral, son of William, had a wife of the name of Maud, and died in the reign of Richard the Second; and John Wyral, son of the last John, died in the reign of Henry the Sixth, leaving Jenkyn Wyral his son, who married Margaret, daughter of — Machen, of St. Briavel's. He died 7 E. 4. and was buried in the church-yard of Newland, concerning whose epitaph there have been very frequent mistakes. John Wyral, son of Jenkyn, married the daughter of — Price, by whom he had a son William, who wedded Anne, daughter and heiress of John Ashurst. John Wyral, son of William, married Isabel, daughter and heiress of Robert Motton, and had a son William, whose son William Wyral married Maud.

Bisley.]

Maud, daughter of Thomas Baynham, of Clowerwall, and died in the reign of king Henry the Eighth. George Wyrral, son of the last William, married Bridget, daughter of George Wintour, of Churcham, and William his son married Catherine, daughter of Michael Chadwell, of Chipping-Norton in Oxfordshire. George Wyrral, son of William, married Mary, only daughter of Dennis Compton, and had a son William, who married Anne Kyrle. Jephtha Wyrral, son of William, married Martha, daughter of Thomas Pury, of Tainton, and George his son possessed a good house and estate in the parish of Bicknor, at the beginning of this century. The arms of this family are, Gules, a chevron Or, between three crosses crozlets argent, in chief a lion passant of the third.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the forest deanery, worth about 130*l.* a year. Mr. Jones is patron; Mr. Meredith the present incumbent.

The church is dedicated to the virgin Mary. It is a large one, with two side ailes, a low embattled tower at the west end, and a small chapel on each side of the chancel, one belonging to the family of Machen, the other to that of Wyrral, where they bury.

First Fruits, £.	13	6	8	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tithes, —	—	1	6	Pentecostals, 0	1	4
Procurements, -	0	9	8

Benefactions.

There are six or seven acres of land, and two acres of wood given to the use of the poor; who have also 5*s.* given them in bread annually, on Christmas-day.

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	87	12	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	28	7	0
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	146	4	0
	The same, at 3 s. — 1770, —	107	8	9

At the beginning of this century there were 60 houses and about 300 inhabitants, whereof 19 were freeholders; yearly births 12, burials 10. kyms. But the people are now encreased to near 60.

B I S L E Y.

THIS large parish lies in the hundred of Bisley, to which it gives name. The church is about three miles east from Stroud, nine westward from Cirencester, four north from Minchin-hampton, and ten southward from Gloucester.

Bisley has a weekly market on Thursdays, now little frequented, for the town is most unfavourably situated for a market, being of very difficult access, by reason of the deep bottoms which enclose it every way; but it has two yearly fairs, for cattle, &c. which are considerable, viz. one upon St. George's day, the other upon All-saints day, granted by king James the Second.

There are two small brooks which run through the parish into Stroud river. The greater part of the parish is high ground, consisting mostly of arable and woodland, with extensive wastes, on which are several populous villages, inhabited chiefly by poor people employ'd in the clothing manufacture. But it is probable that it was formerly much more woody than at present, and that its name is compounded of bois, a wood, and leag, a pasture. Leaving this etymology to stand or fall as reason and better judgments may determine, I proceed to give a short description of such places in this parish as more particularly deserve notice.

In the woodland part, on the northern border, lies a small sequestered glyn or valley, called Timbercomb-bottom, noted for its singular situation, being intirely separated from the rest of the world by thick surrounding woods, which make it not easily accessible, nor is it to be seen 'till you enter into it. It is an estate belonging to Mr. Smart.

Chalford-bottom is a deep and narrow valley, about a mile in length, lying partly in Minchin-hampton, but the greater part, being on the north side of the river which runs to Stroud, is in this parish. On the curious traveller's first approach, it presents at once a very striking and respectable appearance, consisting of a great number of well-built houses, equal to a little town, lying very contiguous, but not joined together. These are intermixt with rows of tenters, along the side of the hill, on which the cloth is stretched in the process of making. This variety of landscape is uncommonly pleasing, and so great and surprizing is the acclivity where some of the buildings stand, that in different approaches to the same house, you ascend to the lowest story, and descend to the highest. In this bottom are eight fulling-mills, and here, and in the villages above the hill, called the Linches, within the parish, great numbers of people, employed in the different branches of the woollen manufacture, reside. But the trade has lately been very much on the decline.

Chalford is likewise noted for the petrifying quality of a remarkably clear spring of water, issuing, by several apertures, out of the north side of the hill next to Minchin-hampton. Its effects are seen on various substances lying in its course, such as moss, and small pieces of wood; but they are particularly observable on the axis and other parts of a mill-wheel, on which the water is continually dropping, so that in the course of a year, it forms incrustations nearly half an inch thick, not much unlike pieces of manna. Falling into cavities, it forms haladites, and large petrified masses in various uncommon shapes, pieces of which are occasionally taken out and reserved as curiosities.

The inhabitants of Chalford and its vicinities are estimated at near two thousand, who are above two miles distant from the parish church; wherefore fore a neat chapel was erected there some years ago, for their accommodation, in which they had sermons on Sundays, and the officiating minister was supported by subscription. But for a year or two past, the contributions have failed, either from the lessened abilities of the inhabitants, thro' the decline of trade, or from some other cause, and there has been no regular service since.

Sir Robert Atkyns asserts, but I know not upon what authority, that the first clothing-mill in these parts was erected in Todgmore, or Todesmore-bottom, in this parish; and that the famous Roger Bacon, commonly called friar Bacon, (an eminent mathematician and philosopher for the age he lived in, and thence reputed a conjurer by the vulgar) was born there; and that he was educated at St. Mary's chapel in Chalford, now St. Mary's mill. This is a house belonging to Mr. Thomas-Fry Clark, in which is a room said to have been friar Bacon's study. But Dr. Cave and other biographers make Ilchester in Somersetshire to be the place of that great man's nativity. He died in 1284.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is thus expressed:

' Earl Hugh holds Biselege in Biseleie hundred, and Robert holds it of him. There are eight hides. In demean are four plow-tillages, and twenty villeins, and twenty-eight bordars with twenty plow-tillages. There are six servi, and four ancilla. There are two priests, and eight radchenisters having ten plow-tillages, and twenty-three other men paying [a rent of] 44*s.* and two sextaries of honey. There are five mills of 16*s.* value, and a wood of 20*s.* and eleven burgages in Gloucester yielding 66*d.* It was worth 24*l.* and is now worth 20*l.* D. B. p. 73.

It appears that this manor was afterwards in the crown 'till the time of king Edward the First, when it came, by marriage, to the Mortimers, a great and noble family, descended from Roger de Mortimer, who was general to William duke of Normandy, and, twelve years before the conquest of England, obtained a glorious victory for him against Odo, brother to the French king.

Ralph de Mortimer (probably the son of Roger) was one of the Conqueror's chief commanders in his expedition against England, and afterwards subdued and took prisoner Edrick earl of Shrewsbury, (who, in the marches of Wales, stood out against the Conqueror,) and was rewarded with his vast estate.

His son and heir Hugh was a great enemy to king Henry the Second, and incited Roger earl of Hereford to fortify his castle of Gloucester, and other his strong holds, as he had his own, against the king; but the earl of Hereford returning to his duty, Mortimer's three castles were at the same time besieged, and he forced to yield. His other turbulent actions shew him to have been of a proud and haughty spirit. He died 31 H. 2.

Roger his son and heir, who performed considerable exploits, especially against the Welsh, had for his second wife, Isabel, sister and heir to Hugh de Ferrers, upon whose death, 6 Joh. Roger gave 300 marks, and a horse for the great saddle, whereupon he had livery of the lordships of Leachlade and Lagebery in Gloucestershire, part of the inheritance of his said wife, who founded a nunnery at Leachlade, and was buried there. This Roger died 17 Joh.

Hugh Mortimer, his son by his first wife, succeeded him, who being firm to the king's interest against his rebellious barons, attended the king with all his armed power at Cirencester, according to summons, the year before his father's death, 16 Joh. and was well rewarded by that king. He married Annora, the daughter of William de Braose, by whom he had lands in Cherleton and Chiriton, and died without issue 11 H. 3.

Ralph Mortimer, half brother to Hugh, and son of the last Roger by his second wife, succeeded, and paying 100*l.* for relief, had livery of all his lands in Gloucestershire and elsewhere, excepting Leachlade. He was a great warrior, and built several castles upon his lands next Wales, and was so much in favour with the Welch, that prince Llewelin gave him his daughter Gladuse Duy in marriage, with large possessions. He died 30 H. 3.

Roger, his son and heir, had livery of all his lands (his mother's jointure excepted) upon paying 2000 marks, 31 H. 3. For some time he suffered greatly in his estate, by firmly adhering to king Henry the Third, against his rebellious barons; and was afterwards the chief occasion of their total defeat at the battle of Evesham, which victory was much owing to the forces raised by him, after he had been the sole occasion of delivering prince Edward, taken prisoner at the battle of Lewes. At this battle of Evesham, he commanded the third part of the prince's army, as the prince himself and the duke of Gloucester did the other two; whereby, assaulting the rebels on each side, they gained a glorious victory, recovering the captive king; for all which faithful services, this great earl was well rewarded. He married Maud, daughter and coheir of William de Braose, and, after other considerable services, died 10 E. 1.

Edmond, son of the last Roger, with other barons of the marches, encountered and slew in battle, Leoline prince of Wales, 10 E. 1. He married Margaret, a Spanish lady, kinswoman to queen Elianor, with whom he had great estates bestowed on him, among which was the manor of Bisley, and two parts of the advowson of the church, whereof he died seized 31 E. 1.

Roger Mortimer was son and heir of Edmond upon whose departing without leave from the king's army in Scotland, 34 E. 1. the sheriffs of Gloucestershire, &c. were commanded to seize his lands, but they were restored the next year. In 18 E. 2. he was imprisoned for his rebellious practices, and his lands given to the Spencers: &c.

Bisley.]

Escaped into France, and returned and dethroned King Edward the Second, and obtains not his own only, but much of the Spencers estate, among which were the castle and manor of Hawley, with the chases of Malvern and Corfe, in the counties of Worcester and Gloucester. He had a grant of the messuage, 10 librats of land, and rents in Bisley, which lately belonged to Hugh le Dispencer, 1 E. 3. and obtained for Jeffery his third son, the manors of Leachlade and Sodington; but his wicked practices and insolent pride brought him to the gallows, 4 E. 3.

Edmond his eldest son (not earl of March) married Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew lord Badlesmere, and died the year after his father, 1 E. 3. leaving Roger his son, then three years of age, heir to the remains of his estate, who obtained reversal of his grandfather's sentence, 26 E. 3. and so recovered the title of earl of March, and the whole estate; most of which had been given

William de Montacute earl of Salisbury. Elizabeth Badlesmere, afterwards married to Henry Spencer, dying 33 E. 3. he had livery of her lands, (being her heir) and died himself, seized of Wyselege and Winston, 34 E. 3.

Edmond Mortimer earl of March, &c. was his son and heir, by Philippa, daughter to William earl of Montacute. He married Philippa, daughter to Lionel duke of Clarence, (whence the Mortimers had just title afterwards to the crown.) He did great services, especially in Ireland, where he was deputy, and where he died 5 R. 2. This Edmond was also heir, by his wife, to the third part of the earldom of Gloucester; for his wife was the daughter of Elizabeth, heiress to William de Burgh, who was heir to John de Burgh earl of Ulster, who had married the third sister and coheir of Gilbert de Clare.

Roger Mortimer was his son and heir, born 1 E. 3. one of whose godfathers was Thomas Norton abbat of Gloucester. He was made lieutenant of Ireland 5 R. 2. and was declared, in parliament, heir apparent to the crown, in the sixth year of that reign. He married Elianor, daughter to Thomas Holland earl of Kent, and was married to king Richard the Second; and was slain in Ireland 22 R. 2. dying seized of the manor of Bisley, and of two parts of the church.

Edmond was his son and heir, then six years of age, and the last earl of March of this family. He was taken prisoner by Owen Glendourdwyn prince of Wales, and afterwards married his daughter. His second wife was Anne, daughter to Edmond earl of Stafford; but he died without issue 3 H. 6. seized of the manors of Bisley, Barnfield, Leachlade, Miserden, Charleton, Winston, Ampsfield, and Over-Siddington.

Richard duke of York was son and heir of Philippa, who was sister and heir of Edmond Mortimer the last earl of March, and succeeded him in the manor of Bisley, and in the rest of his great estates. He was slain in the battle of Wakefield, attempting to recover his right to the crown of England. And the manor and hundred of Bisley were granted to his widow, Cicely dutchess of York, for her life, 38 H. 6. which was confirmed to her 1 E. 4. and she died 10 H. 7. By this account it appears, that the manor of Bisley had continued in the name of the Mortimers 180 years, and then, by descent from their heir female, was united to the crown.

Edward the Fourth, king of England, was son and heir of Richard duke of York, whereby the manor of Bisley came to the crown.

Richard the Third grants the manors of Bisley, Tunly, and Swagefwick to sir William Nottingham, all which were held of the honour of Hereford.

The manor of Bisley soon after reverted to the crown, and, with the advowson of the vicarage, was granted to sir Miles Mildmay, 3 E. 6.

The manor was again in the crown in the year 1608, and was granted, by king James the First, to the marquis of Rockingham, who granted it over to Thomas Master, D. D. and master of the Temple; whose heir sold it to sir Robert Atkyns of Saperton, from whom it was purchased by Thomas Stephens, esq; whose son John Stephens, of Upper Lypiat, esq; is the present lord of the manor. His arms are, Per chevron, azure and argent, two falcons display'd Or.

Peter Corbete was seized of two parts of the hundred of Biselegh; Theobald de Verdune held a fourth part, and Richard de Biselegh held the other fourth part, 15 E. 1. The hundred of Bisley was granted to sir Thomas Seimour 1 E. 6. who was afterwards attainted of treason, and sir Miles Mildmay became proprietor of it; and then it was granted to Robert Davis, 2 Eliz. and was again conveyed to Thomas Perry, in the ninth year of the same reign. It became afterwards the property of sir Robert Atkyns of Saperton, and is one of the seven hundreds now in dispute between the earl of Bathurst and Mr. Chamberlayne. See Cirencester.

Humphry de Bohun, earl of Essex and Hereford, purchased lands in Bisley of John de Walerond, the son of John, 39 H. 3.

William Mansfield (perhaps the same with William Mansell, mentioned in the records relating to Lypiat) held one vineyard, sixteen acres of land, [or six acres of land, as sir Robert Atkyns, whom I have followed in this particular, has it in another place, p. 32.] and three acres of wood in Bisley, 18 E. 2.—From this record that learned historian hath undertaken to prove the improbability of there having ever been any vineyards in Gloucestershire, otherwise than apple-orchards. But I have already given my sentiments on this matter, which the reader may see in the note p. 25, where that gentleman's argument is quoted at large.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

There are nine tithings in this parish, viz.

1. Bisley,

1. Bisley, of which already, with two constables.
2. Avenage, where is nothing remarkable.

3. Bidfield. Owen de Roderick was seized of Bidfield in the reign of king Edward the Third, but being attainted for rebellion, Bidfield was granted to Mary Herney, widow of William Herney, 47 E. 3. This manor afterwards belonged to Thomas Butler and Maud his wife; but upon their surrender, it was granted to John Baker for life, 5 E. 4. and was again granted to Thomas Gilbert, for his life, in the twelfth year, and again to Edward Pye, for his life, in the sixteenth year of that reign. Bidfield in Bisley, and many other estates, were granted to Thomas Hennage and the lord Willoughby, in consideration of lands in other places, 2 E. 6. Sir Anthony Grey had livery of this manor 4 Eliz. and Bidfield-farm, in the tenure of sir Anthony Kingstone, was granted to Arthur lord Grey 9 Eliz. Bidfield now belongs to John Stephens, of Upper Lypiat, esq;

4. Buffage.

5. Chalford. Thomas Mull and William Mull were seized of Chalford 2 E. 4.

6. Ockeridge. George Rawleigh, esq; died seized of lands in Okerinch and Avenash 37 H. 8. and Simon Raleigh, his son, had livery thereof the same year. Lands in Okerinch in Bisleigh, which had belonged to the abbey of Cirencester, were granted to Thomas Stroud, Walter Earl, and James Paget 36 H. 8.

7. Steanbridge, of which there is nothing observable.

8. Troham, or Trougham, generally called Druffham. This place is mentioned in Domesday-book, where it is said,

'The same earl [Hugh] held there [i. e. in Bifelege] one hide at Troham. Levenod held it of king Edward, and could go where he pleased. This land was taxed. There were four bordars with one plow-tillage, and four acres of meadow. It was worth 20s. The same earl held half a hide there, which Roger de Laci challenged to belong to Egesurde, as the county witnesseth. It is worth 10s. and paid tax.' Dom. B. p. 73.

William Compton died seized of the manor of Trougham 38 H. 8. livery of which was granted to Walter Compton, his son, the same year. Mr. Smart has a good house and estate in this tithing, which hath been long enjoyed by his ancestors; and Mr. Turner has also a good house and estate here.

This place is remarkable for quarries of good tile, from which the vale country is supply'd at five shillings a thousand, or twenty-five shillings the waggon-load. Should the navigation to Stroud take place, it is probable this article may be of considerable consequence.

9. Tunley and Daneway. These places consist chiefly of woodland, with some tillage and pasture ground, in deep hollows, and little glyns of difficult access. It has been supposed that the Danes harboured themselves in the latter of these places, when this country was so terribly infested with them; and so it became distinguished with their name, from its being a chief place of their resort. John Clifford held one messuage and one plow-tillage in Daneway 20 R. 2. Mr. Hancock has a good old house, and a good estate at Daneway. His ancestors, from about the reign of queen Elizabeth, have carefully transmitted to him the fashionable household furniture of their times, and an intire suit of man's apparel, not the worse for wear, which he prudently preserves as real curiosities, and many people resort to see them.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Stonehouse, worth 150*l.* a year, of which the lord Chancellor is patron, and Mr. Phillips the present incumbent.

The tithes of this parish, and of Stroud (for the parish of Stroud was formerly annexed to this church) were divided into three portions, whereof two were appropriated to two prebends of Westbury-college in this county; the other, which was the first in order, was appropriated to the prebend of the college of Stoke, near Clare in Suffolk. The rectory of these three prebends, as also a wood called Hawkley-wood, in Bisley, which also belonged to the prebend of Stoke, were granted to Lawrence Baskervil and William Blake, scrivener, 3 Jac. These tithes are vested in the earl of Coventry, and are worth about 400*l.* a year.

The tithe of all tithe-corn and hay belonging to the impropriation, and all the tithes of lamb and wool, and oblations, offerings, and all priory tithes were appointed to the vicar, by an antient endowment made by Reginald bishop of Worcester, in the year 1360; besides which, the full tithes of the glebe-land of the impropriation belong to the vicar.

There was formerly a chantry in this church, the revenue whereof was granted to Walter Compton 2 E. 6. but the chantry-house in Bisley, and lands which had belonged to the chantry of St. Mary in Westbury, were granted to Francis Maurice and Francis Philips, in trust for Anthony Cope and others, 10 Jac.

The church is large and lofty, consisting of the nave and two aisles, with a high spire at the west end, and six bells in the tower. The church hath lately been new seated in a neat manner, and makes a good appearance. It is dedicated to All Saints, and is said to have been built by one of the Mortimers.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the south aisle is the figure in stone of a knight-templer, well preserved, reported by tradition to have been the founder of the church.

Near the nave of the church, upon brass, fixed on a grey marble flat stone, is engraved the figure of a woman, and on the right and left below, a representation of six sons and six daughters, with this inscription in old black characters.

Pray for the soule of Kateryn Sewell late the Wyf of Thomas Sewell, whiche Kateryn decessed the viii day of Ianuary, the viii day of the moeth of Maye, the viii day of the moeth of June, the viii day of the moeth of July, the viii day of the moeth of August, the viii day of the moeth of September, the viii day of the moeth of October, the viii day of the moeth of November, the viii day of the moeth of December, on whose soule Ihu haue mercy amen. This family lived at Ferrie's-Court, near Upper Lypiatt.

Against the east wall of the chancel is a monument, with an inscription for Thomas Freame, of Lypiatt, esq; who died in 1659, and his arms, viz. 1. Azure, a cross stony gules, between eight ears of ripe wheat, stalked and pendent, proper. 2. A fess between three birds. And opposite to it is a handsome monument, and memorial in Latin, for William Freame his son, with his effigy, holding a book in his hand. He died in 1696.

Against the south wall of the chancel are several monuments for the Jaynes, of this parish, with these arms, viz. 1. Gules, a chief vair, argent and azure, impaling 2. On a chevron, between three eagles heads erased Or, three trefoils sable.

Against the south wall, is a marble monument, with the arms of Stephens, as before, and this inscription :

Underneath this Monument are deposited the Remains of Thomas Stephens, Esq; Barrister at Law, Steward of the Sheriff's Court, and Deputy Town-Clerk of the City of Bristol, younger son of Thomas Stephens of Over Lupiatt, Esq; who in several Parliaments served as Knight of the Shire for this County, and as Lord of the Manor. His great Candour and Benevolence highly intitled him to the Esteem of all that knew him, and he was not only an Ornament to his Profession, but also to the worthy and antient Family from whence he descended. He died greatly lamented the 7th Day of December in the Year 1745, aged 46 Years.

In the nave of the church, a monument for John Mills, gent. who died in 1718, and Esther his wife who died in 1701, with these arms, Argent, two saltires in pale sable.

A memorial for Scholastica Sevill, wife of William Sevill of Chalford; with these arms, viz. Argent, upon a bend sable, three eagles display'd Or.

Against the south wall of the nave, very high, is erected a handsome monument of white marble, with the family arms, Argent, a chevron between three pheons heads sable; and upon the table it is thus written :

In the North Isle of this Church, near the Remains of a much-beloved Wife, Father and Mother, lie those of Thomas Smart, Esq; of Grays in this Parish; who having, with Integrity, the most endearing Goodnature and Cheerfulness, discharged the Offices of this Life, exchanged it for Immortality on the 25th of December, in the Year of our Lord 1746, and in the 42nd Year of his Age.

There also lie the Bodies of his Sons William and Thomas, the former died in his Infancy, the latter on the 25th of April, 1742, aged 44.

This Monument, with the highest Sense of Affection, Gratitude and Duty, was erected to their Memory, by their surviving Son and Brother Richard Smart, Esq;

The above-mentioned Thomas Smart, Esq; had Issue likewise another Son, of the Name of Richard, elder Brother to the said William, Thomas and Richard, who died very young, and lies buried at Duntisborne Rouse.

At fruits, £ 19 10 5 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
At church, — 1 19 0 Pentecostals, 0 2 0
At curations, 1 0 0

Benefactions.

There is an estate leased out by feoffees upon lives, at the rent of 38l. a year, clear of all taxes; thus disposed of, 2l. is paid to the parish clerk, 10l. to a school-master, for teaching sixteen boys; the remainder of the income is apply'd to the use of the church; and, upon the removal of a life, the fine is applied to the same use. The donor of this charity is not known.

Mr. John Taylor, in 1732, left an estate which lets at 25l. a year, of which the school-master receives 8l. for teaching eight boys, and the remainder is applied to the clothing of them.

Mr. Thomas Butler, clothier, in 1688, gave 1l. 10s. a year for a sermon, and for bread to the poor.

Mr. Walter Ridler, clothier, in 1697, gave 300l.

Mrs. Jane Ridler, in 1714, gave 300l.

Mrs. Mary Ridler, in 1715, gave the interest of 100l. provided the parish should apply the produce of the two foregoing donations to the teaching of children to read.

Mr. Samuel Allen gave a house and orchard at King's-Stanley, and a ground at Calway, let at 4l. 6s. a year, to clothe five poor widows.

Mr. Thomas Rogers, Blackwell-hall factor, in 1723, gave 25l.

Charles Coxe, esq; of Lower Lypiatt, in 1729, gave 10l.

Thomas Radcliffe, of Gloucester, esq; in 1732, gave 9l.

The reverend Mr. Richard Butler, vicar of Arlingham, gave 20s. a year in bread, and 10s. for a sermon on Easter-munday.

Mrs. Mary Baston gave 80l. afterwards laid out in land of the yearly value of 3l. 4s. for the use of the poor.

Taxes.

The Royal Aid	in	1692,	£.	170	16	0
Poll-tax	—	—	—	1694,	87	9 0
Land-tax	—	—	—	1694,	201	19 0
The same,	at	3s.	—	1770,	150	11 6

The register of this parish commences as early as 1547, 2 E. 6. and has been well kept from that time to the present. In particular, it was regularly kept from 1640 to 1660, during the civil war and interregnum, by Mr. Britton the minister, an uncommon instance in those days. The medium of burials for the years 1548 and 1549 was 18 yearly, and of christnings 37, (more than double the burials) which shews the parish to have been very healthy in those days; and the number of deaths shews that it was not very thinly inhabited; as supposing 1 in 55 to die yearly, which, considering the healthiness of the place, seems not an undue proportion, there would be near 1000 inhabitants. At that time, there is reason to suppose, they had some little of the clothing manufacture in the parish.

For ten years, from 1701 to 1710 inclusively, the average of burials is 58, of christnings 85. From 1761 to 1765 inclusively, the medium of burials burials is 81, of christnings 127; and during the subsequent five years, which are given distinct, as the inhabitants were more unhealthy from an epidemic fever prevailing, the burials are 116, the christnings 121, and the medium of burials for the whole ten years is 99, of christnings 124.

Hence it may be observed, that the inhabitants have gradually increased to the present time, and the burials have also increased more than the baptisms; which latter circumstance may be attributed to various causes, as the accession of people from other parts, to a growing manufacture, as it has been 'till within a few years; the poor people's incommodious way of life in close and crowded habitations; but especially the general intemperance of manufacturing people, their wants, necessities, and reduced manner of living when past their labour, as few of them make any provision for sickness or old age; and a hard season, with the want of accommodations they formerly enjoyed, carries many of them off.

In the register, many ages are recorded from 70 to 80, several betwixt 80 and 90, a few above 90, but none of 100 for many years past, tho' it is a very healthy air.

There is an Independent meeting-house near Chalford, and another belonging to a small society of Baptists, in the same neighbourhood, at each of which some persons are occasionally buried; but it is apprehended, not ten yearly at both. In calculating the number of inhabitants in the parish, which cannot be exactly ascertained, these must be taken into the account: And allowing one in forty-five to die yearly, which is probably near the truth, they are 4905.

B I T T O N

IS a parish of very large extent, in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead. The church is about six miles east from the city of Bristol, seven west from Bath, and thirty-eight south-westward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the east by a corner of Somersetshire, from which it is separated by the brook Swinford; on the west by St. George's, on the north by Abston and Siston, and on the south by the river Avon, which parts it from Keynsham in Somersetshire.

The river Boyd runs through and gives name to the parish, which hath been variously written in different ages, as Betune in Domesday-book, Button in other ancient records, and latterly Bitton, as it stands at the head of this account, all which are supposed to be contractions of, or corrupt modes of writing, Boyd-town, i. e. the town upon the river Boyd.

Langley and Swineshead were antiently two distinct hundreds, of which the latter has been thought to take its name from the brook Swinford; but I apprehend that to be a mistake. For since in Domesday-book the name is written Sinebored, and Suinbeve, which I understand to signify Sine's or Suin's house, from the Saxon þore a house, (whence our word bovel) it is probable that the hundred was denominated from the house of one Sine, or Swain, (for that record is not very accurate in orthography) who, in the Saxon times, might be the chief person of the hundred; and residing near the place where the road crossed the water, by parity of reasoning, the passage was also called Sine's-ford, or Swinford, after his name, which, in time, was applied to the whole river.

The parish, or the greater part of it, lies in that tract of ground formerly called the forest of Kingwood, which was disafforested, according to some accounts, in the reign of king Henry the Third. It is beautifully varied with easy elevations, and some bolder rising grounds, which form a very agreeable landscape, as seen from several points of view. The soil is rich and fertile, consisting chiefly of loam, intermixt with different proportions of sand, and in some parts a little clay. The greater part is meadow and pasture, with some arable, both in common field and inclosures.

Great quantities of coal are dug in this parish, out of pits which are fifty yards deep, and some of them more. Here is also plenty of iron-ore, and rich cinders of the same metal, for smelting of which a furnace hath lately been erected, where they use coke instead of charcoal. The serpentine-stone, and many petrifications of the bivalve kind, are not uncommon in the fields and quarries. But upon the strictest inquiry, I cannot find that the soil produceth any rare vegetable. There is, however, a spring of purging mineral water near Comb-brook, which passing over a bed of iron-ore, carries with it some of the finer particles, and deposits them in its course. The water of Gold-well, in the turnpike-road from Bath to Bristol, is reckoned very fine and pure. There is a pump erected, and a can chained to it, for the use of travellers, to drink as they go along.

Several manufactures are carried on here, which deserve particular notice. The brass-mills are large works for making utensils and thin plates of that metal. There are also machines for rolling and splitting of iron, for grinding of logwood, &c. and a pin-manufacture, though yet in its infancy, furnishes employment for a considerable number of hands.

At Upton in this parish, a large stone coffin was lately found by people at plow in the field, containing a very perfect skeleton; but there were no coins, warlike instrument, nor other thing tending to discover whose bones they were. And human bones have been found several times, just within the surface of the ground, in a meadow called Siddenham, where a skirmish happened in the duke of Monmouth's rebellion.

The antiquities of this parish consist of old foundations of buildings, found in the tithings of Hanham, and the remains of camps and fortifications.

fortifications, which have not without reason been attributed to the Romans; for Tacitus informs us, that in the emperor Claudius's time, P. Ostorius, prætor of Britain, subdued the Iceni and the Cangi, and planted several garrisons upon or near the Antona, generally supposed to be the Avon; which seems to have been the boundary of the country of the Cangi in these parts. As a confirmation of this opinion, we find their name still remaining in the composition of the names of several places in the north of Wiltshire and Somersetshire, as Cannington, Cannings, Wincaunton, sometimes called Cangton, and to mention but one instance more, Keynsham or Kaynsham, directly opposite to Hanham, on the other side of the river.

These remains of antiquity induced the late Doctor Gale, in his Commentary upon Antoninus's Itinerary, to suppose that Hanham is really the place of the Roman station Abone therein mentioned, and that it ought to have been placed after the Trajectus, whereas it stands before it, in the fourteenth Iter; for then would the distance be six computed miles from Abone to Aqua Solis, or Bath, as set down by Antoninus, from the preceding station to that city. Thus, by transposing the order of the stations, the distances in the Itinerary come near the truth; but preserving the order, there must be some mistake in the distances. The late Mr. Haynes of Wick, upon principles similar to the foregoing, fixed upon a spot in the parish of Abston for the site of the Roman station in question.

These conjectures are ingenious, but not altogether satisfactory to those who know that the distances in the Itinerary are erroneous in other instances. In the thirteenth Iter it is set down, from Durocornovium, or Cirencester, to Spina, sixteen miles; whereas, if we are not mistaken as to the situation of those stations, which I believe universally allowed, the real distance between them is more than double. If therefore there is great a mistake in our copies of the Itinerary, respecting the distance in the last mentioned instance, why may not that be the case also as to Abone and the Trajectus? and then we shall have reason to think they are placed in their natural order, as I shall endeavour to shew when the subject is resumed under Lidney.

Having briefly touched on the antiquities and natural history of the place, I shall just mention a particular custom which formerly prevailed, and not, even now, wholly laid aside. There are three meadows which are common after the hay the first crop is taken off. The proprietors of these estates break those meadows in the following manner: One of them turns into the first a white plow, another into the second a black boar, and the remaining proprietor puts a black stone-horse into the third meadow; after which, those who have a right of common drive in their stock immediately. What could give rise to this custom is a matter of speculation; but I conjecture, that the same reason that obliged the parson of many parishes to keep a bull for the use of his parishioners, might also oblige the abbat of Keynsham, to whom the meadows formerly belonged, to provide a male of each of the beforementioned species for the use of the parish where the meadows lie; and the obligation continued in force on the possessors, after the dissolution of monasteries.

Barr's-Court in this parish, taken notice of by Mr. Camden and other topographers, as a fine feat in the forest of Kingswood, is now mostly taken down, and the remainder gone much to ruin.

I come now to treat

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Bitton is part of the antient demesnes of the crown. In Domesday-book it is thus recorded:

' There were thirty-six hides at farm in Betune, in Suinheve hundred, with its two members Wapelei and Wintreborne, in the time of king Edward. In demean were five plow-tillages, and forty-one villeins and twenty-nine bordars with forty-five plow-tillages. There are eighteen servi, with one mill.

' In the time of king Edward this manor paid a farm of one night, and it does the same now.' Domesday-book, p. 67.

The paying a night's farm was finding a night's entertainment for the court in those reigns, agreeable to the explanation of that expression, p. 80.

' Dons [one of the king's thanes] holds Betone of the king, and he held it in the time of king Edward. There are two hides, one of which paid tax, the other belonged to the church. In demean are two plow-tillages, and five villeins, and two bordars with five plow-tillages. There are four servi, and ten acres of meadow. It was worth 6*l.* and is now worth 3*l.*' Dom. B. p. 80.

There are records of the following dates, which shew who were the successive proprietors of this manor, viz. Adam d'Amavil was seized of the manor of Button by the grant of king H. 2. and his son Robert d'Amavil died seized of it, with a right to markets, 11 H. 3. A son of that Robert married Petronella de Vinon, who surviving her husband, was seized of this manor 45 H. 3. and married Richard de la Moor, who purchased a charter in Button in the 53d year of that reign. Adam d'Amavil, son of Petronella, died seized of this manor 15 E. 1. and leaving no issue, his two sisters became his heirs, the one being married to Richard de la Moor, son of the former, who, in her right, was seized of the manor of Eldeland in Bitton; Amabel, the other sister, was married to David le Blount, the son of David, who, in her right, was seized of the manor of Button, by the surrender of Petronella de Vinon, 15 E. 1. which David and Amabel were also seized thereof, 21 and 32 E. 1.

David le Blount, their son, died seized of the manor 17 E. 2. and was succeeded by his son Richard,

Richard, who held it in the twentieth year of that reign; and dying without issue, the manor of Button was possessed by his brother Edmond, who married one Agnes, and died seized thereof 36 E. 3: Edmond Blount, their elder son, and Margaret his wife, held this manor, and one messuage and half a yard-land in Button, 4 R. 2. William Blount was seized thereof 22 R. 2. and Isabel his daughter and heiress held the same 4 H. 4. and dying unmarried, the manor came to her next kinsman Robert Blount, who was seized of it 9 H. 4. and he and his tenants had a right to heath, wood, and coal in Kingswood chase.

John Blount, son of Robert, married one Willona, and died seized of Button, Oldland, West-Hanham, Swinford, and Beach 26 H. 6. and Wentlin his widow (perhaps the same with Willona) being endowed with Button, died seized thereof 32 H. 6. Edmond Blount, esq; son of John, died also seized of this manor 8 E. 4. as did his son Simon, 16 E. 4.

Margaret, the daughter and heiress of Simon Blount, was married to sir John Barr, who, in her right, was seized of the manors of Button, Oldland, East-Hannam, West-Hannam, and Upton 22 E. 4. and left Joan, his only daughter and heiress, married to sir Thomas Newton, who, in her right, became seized of the aforesaid manors, and of Barr's-Court, which took its name from sir John Barr.

The family of the Newtons is derived from Howel ap Grono, lord of Newton in Rouse. Cradock ap Howel ap Grono, was son of Howel ap Grono. Sir William Cradock, son of Cradock ap Howel, married Jane, daughter of sir Mathew Wogan, and lies buried at Newton. William Cradock, son of sir William, married Catherine, daughter and heiress of sir William de la Meer, of Rickston. John Cradock, son of William, married Joan, daughter of sir John Elider, by whom he had a son Robert, who married Margery, daughter of Nicholas Sherborn. John Cradock, son of Robert, married Nest, daughter of sir Peter Ruffel, and had a son John, who married Margaret, daughter of Howel Meythe, of Castle-Ordin, and Fountain-gate. Sir Richard Cradock, son of the last John, was Chief Justice of England: He married Emma, daughter and coheiress of sir Thomas Perret, of Islington, and dwelled or was born (says Leland) at Tre-newith, [i. e. New Town] in Powisland, and so was called [Newton] after that place.

Sir John Newton, his son, married Isabel, daughter and heiress of sir John Chedder. Sir Thomas Newton was brother to sir John, and son of sir Richard the Chief Justice: He married Joan, daughter and heiress of sir John Barr, by whom Barr's-Court, and the manor of Bitton, and other manors came into the family of Newton, 22 E. 4. as before related.

Thomas Newton, son of sir Thomas, married Margaret, daughter of sir Edmond George, of Wraxwell in Somersetshire; and had a son sir John Newton, who married Margery, daughter of sir Anthony Pointz. Sir Henry Newton, son of sir John, married Katherine, daughter of sir Thomas Paston, and had a son sir Theodore Newton, who married Penelope, daughter of sir John Rodney, of Rodney-Stoke in Somersetshire. He was lord of the manor of Bitton in the year 1608. His son sir John Newton, baronet, married Grace, daughter of — Stone, and dying without issue, lies buried in the cathedral of Bristol. He was the last of the Newtons of Barr's-Court, and gave this estate to sir John Newton of Lincolnshire, on whom he entailed the baronetage. Barr's-Court, and a very large estate in the parish of Bitton, is now the property of Michael Newton, of Lincolnshire, esq.

An estate, by the name of the manor of Bitton, was granted to Robert Fitz-Harding, afterwards lord of Berkeley, by king Henry the Second; and various records shew that the Berkeley family was afterwards seized of such manor. Maurice lord Berkeley died seized of the manor of Bitton 15 H. 8. and Thomas lord Berkeley, his brother and heir, had livery granted to him the 16th, and died seized thereof 24 H. 8. Thomas his son died seized of this manor 26 H. 8. and was succeeded by his son Henry lord Berkeley, an infant, who had livery granted to him 3 Mariae.

The records shew that William Pigot held lands in Button 14 H. 3. Sir John Tracy and others were seized of lands in Button and Upton 37 E. 3. The abbey of Keynsham held lands and rents in Button, West-Hanham, Upton, and Oldland, which were purchased in the name of John Becket and others, in trust for the abbey, 10 R. 2.

Highfield is now the chief house in the parish, and, together with a good estate, is the property of Doctor Drummond.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

There are four tithings in this parish, viz.

1. Bitton, of which already.

2. Hanham, a place whose name vouches for its antiquity, for ben, in the British language, signifies antient. The late learned doctor Gale interprets it, either as a contraction of Avonham, a ham or mansion at Abone, or else considers it as a small variation from Henham, an antient ham or station. I have taken notice, at the beginning of this account, of what is most observable in this tithing, wherefore little more need be said of it. But with respect to the manor, it stands, in Domesday-book, among the lands of Ernulf de Hefding, recorded as follows, viz.

' The same Hernulf holds Hanun in Sines
' hoves hundred, and Humbaldus holds it of ' him. Edric held it. There is half a hide. In ' demean are two plow-tillages, with eight
' bordars

bordars, and four servi. It is worth, and was worth 40*s.* Domesday-book, p. 77.

John de Button held Hannam 7 E. 2. and William de la Green held West Hannam of the honour of Gloucester 4 E. 3. Robert Grinder, esq; was seized of the manor of Hannam, with woods in the forest of Kingswood belonging to the said manor, 22 H. 6. and Joan his widow held the same 24 H. 6. William Join and his wife levied a fine of lands in West Hannam, Down Hannam, and Oldland to Andrew Windfor 12 H. 7.

Handclif-wood in West Hannam, which belonged to the abbey of Keynsham, was granted to Thomas Bridges, esq; 6 E. 6.

The manor of Hannam-Abbats, which belonged to the abbey of Keynsham, was granted to Rowland Hayward 2 Mariae; but the lands belonging to Handclif-wood, which were formerly in the possession of the said abbey, were granted to John Fernham 19 Eliz.

The manor-house in Hannam, called the Grange, belonged to the priory of Farley in Wiltshire, and was granted to Roger Langsford and Christopher Martin 17 Eliz. This is now the estate of Charles Bragge, esq.

Henry Creswicke, esq; has a good house and a good estate here, called Hanham-Abbats, because it antiently belonged to the abbat of Keynsham. It was formerly the seat of the Bassets. His ancestors held a court here. His arms are thus blazoned in the last heralds visitation of the county, viz. a lion rampant within a bordure sable besanty.

Mr. Kedgwin Webley of London, a descendant of the Webleys of the Mead, in the parish of Widdenham, purchased a very handsome, pleasant seat, and a large estate in this tithing, formerly belonging to Thomas Trye, esq; which is now in the possession of Mrs. Frances Parry, widow of David Parry, of Noyadd in the county of Cardigan, esq; and only child of Mr. Webley.

There were formerly two machines in this tithing, for raising water for the use of the city of Bristol, taken notice of in some books, but they were removed in the year 1720.

There is a chapel of ease at Hanham, close to Mr. Creswicke's house, where divine service is performed every Sunday, and it has a right of sepulture; but Hanham is not reputed a separate parish, as mentioned by sir Robert Atkyns.

3. Oldland is another large tithing, distinctly mentioned in Domesday-book, after this manner:

The bishop of Excestre holds Aldclande in Sineshovedes hundred. Aluui held it. He was one of earl Harold's [free] men, and could go wherever he pleased. There are two hides, one of which pays tax, the other does not. In demesne are two plow-tillages, and one villein, and six bordars with one plow-tillage. There are two servi, and ten acres of meadow. It was then worth 4*l.* and is now worth 20*s.* D. B. p. 70.

It is probable, that after the death of the bishop, the manor was in the crown, and that it was granted, with Button, by king Henry the Second, to Adam d'Amavil. It passed, by the marriage of one of the coheiresses of the d'Amavils, to Richard de la More, who died seized of Eldeland, which he held by the service of half a knight's fee 20 E. 1. and was succeeded by his son Thomas de la More, who had 20*l.* a year in land, and was made a knight by king Edward the First. He lived in the court of king Edward the Second, and wrote a history of the life and death of that king, which is now extant. Stephen de la More held Oldland in Button 2 E. 3. and Walter de la More possessed the manors of Oldland and Upton, and a hundred acres of Kingswood forest, 14 E. 3. and John de la More, his son, was seized of the manor of Oldland in the 23d year of the same reign.

Cicely, the widow of Nicholas de Berkeley, was seized of Oldland, 16 R. 2. Sir John Denrose held the manor of Oldland, and forty acres of arable and pasture there, within the manor of Button, of Roger Mermion 20 R. 2. and John Denrose was seized of the manor of Oldland, and of a tenement there called Mermions, 7 H. 5. John Chesbrook and Joan his wife levied a fine of one moiety of the manor of Oldland in Bitton, and of the hundred, to the use of Thomas Wikes, 2 H. 6. Thomas Wikes, son of Thomas, died seized of the manor of Oldland 13 E. 4. which afterwards descended to Richard Wikes, who died 5 Mariae, and livery thereof was granted to his cousin and heir Robert Wikes the same year.

Weston's-court was so called after the name of some persons of eminence, who were the proprietors of it. Nicholas de Weston was heretofore seized of it, and John Weston was also seized of Weston's-court in Oldland in the reign of king Henry the Sixth. It is now the estate of Mrs. Blake.

There is also a chapel of ease at Oldland, where they bury. The benefactions to Hanham, Oldland, and Bitton stand together at the end of this account.

4. Upton, or Upton-Cheney. The parsonage of Upton belonged to the prebend of the church of Sarum 10 R. 2.

Beach and Swinford are also hamlets in this parish.

Barr's-court, Hanham, Oldland, Upton-Cheney, and Beach are within the jurisdiction of the honour of Gloucester.

The manerial rights of this parish are in dispute between several claimants.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth about 200*l.* a year. The prebendary of Bitton in Salisbury cathedral, in right of his prebend, is patron; Mr. Charles Elwes is the present incumbent.

The impropriation belongs to the same prebend, and is in lease to Thomas-Edwards Freeman, of Batsford, esq.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is lofty and in good repair, and has a very handsome embattled tower at the west end, with Gothick ornaments and pinnacles, and six bells in it. There is a large chantry-chapel on the north side, adjoining to the church, built by sir John Barr, which is now the burying-place of the Newton family.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a small monument against the north wall of the chancel, with this inscription :

MEMORIÆ SACRVM IOH: SEYMOR MILITIS COMIT: GLOVCE:

Qui non minus Illustri animi dotibus excelluit, quam præ-illustri et nobili ortu claruit. Mortem obiit nouembris 17^{mo}. Anno Epoche Christianæ 1663.

Si moueat virtus Lachrymas, defuncta, Viator,
Siftas, officij sic memoratq; tui.
Se pietas fato præbet Crucianda superbo.
At quamuis Jaceat non quasi vita, tamen
In te certabant Virtus et nobilis ortus
Quis prior: Heu! fato cessit utrumq; tuo.
Dum vigeat Phœbi Laurus, dum viuida virtus,
Vives, non norunt hæc monumenta mori.
Tu bene vixisti, uita an felicior esles
An obitu, fieri Questio jure potest.
Sic uixit Patriæ lumen, sic occidit, eheu!
Fallimur, in Cœlo jam noua stella micat.
Vivito ut inclusus vixit modo nobilis Heros,
Certa licet fuerit ut Amica venit.

Age peripatetice Dum intuearis Cineres defuncti mort... en
facel... breui fortassis tuæ.

On the stone are these arms: Gules, two wings conjoined in fesse Or.

Against the wall of the chapel is a white marble monument, and this inscription :

Here lieth the Body of Sir JOHN NEWTON, Bar^t. thrice Burgeſs of Parliament. A most loving Husband, careful Father, & faithful Friend. Pious, Iust, Prudent, Charitable, Valiant, & belov'd of all. He was born Ivne y^e 9th A. D. 1626, being the Son of THOMAS NEWTON of Gunwarby in the County of Lincoln, Esq; and died May 31st A. D. 1699. He married Mary the daughter of S^r IERVASE EYER of Ramton in the County of Nottingham K^t. They liv'd happily all their Time together w^{ch} was 55 Years, by whom he had Issue four Sons & thirteen Daughters. This Monument was erected at the Charge of his youngest Son Gervas Newton, Esq.

Over the table are these arms, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent, on a chevron azure three garbs Or. The arms of Ulster in a canton, for Newton. 2d and 3d, Sable, two thigh-bones in saltire argent.

Under the table, Per pale, 1st. Newton as before. 2d Argent, on a chevron sable three quatrefoils Or. for Eyer.

Near the above, a small marble monument, with this inscription :

ELIZABETH STRINGER obiit tricesimo primo die Iulij Anno Dom. 1694.

SEQVIMVR
QVAMVIS NON PASSIVS ÆQVIS.

Upon a scutcheon, Per pale, 1st. Per chevron sable and Or, three eagles display'd counterchanged. 2d. Sable, two thigh-bones in saltire argent.

There are several memorials in the church for the families of Creswicke, Weare, Parker, Jones, &c. but there is nothing in them deserving particular notice.

There were two antient statues of stone lying at length, but for whom they were designed is unknown. Atkyns. They are now taken away.

First Fruits, £. 18 14 10 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
Tenths, — -- 1 17 6 Pentecostals, 0 0 2
Procurations, - 0 6 8

Benefactions.

To Bitton. Mr. Freeman has given, for four sermons every year, 40s. for ever; and 10s. a year to the poor.—Mr. Seed has given 40s. Mr. Shewring of Bristol 1l. 6s. 4d. Mr. Gully of Bristol 9s. Mrs. Badcock 7s. and Mr. Davis 2s. all to the poor, annually for ever.

To Oldland. Mr. Arthur Farmer of Bristol gave 6l. a year for a sermon on every first Sunday in the month.—Mr. Robert Kitchen 10s. a year for a sermon on Good Friday, and 10s. to the poor for ever.—Mrs. Elizabeth Warn gave 40s. for four sermons, and 40s. to the poor, annually for ever.—Mr. Thomas Woodward gave 20s. to the poor, as often as any rate shall be made at Oldland for their relief.

At Hanbam. Mrs. Parry gives annually, to fifteen poor widows, 5s. each, on St. Thomas' day which was left by one of the Tryes.

Bitton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 180 12
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 46 17
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 202 3
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 151 11

Hanbam.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 89 6
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 21 11
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 77 6
		The same — — 1770, —

Oldland.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 89 6
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 27 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 116 15
		The same at 3s. -- 1770, — 87 12

At the beginning of this century, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 320 houses and about 1150 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 100 were freeholders; yearly births 56, burials 56. But it appears by the parish register, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709, there were 633 baptisms and 432 burials; and in a like series from 1760 to 1769, 1116 baptisms, and 632 burials; and the inhabitants having been exactly numbered in the year 1767, were found to be 4600. There are religious sectaries who have distant burying places, and are supposed to bury about 9 or 10 every year, and taking these into account, the average number of annual burials will be 109.8; so that about 1 in 42 dies every year, which shews it to be a healthy situation, and that the inhabitants have more than doubled their number within the last seventy years.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is lofty and in good repair, and has a very handsome embattled tower at the west end, with Gothick ornaments and pinnacles, and six bells in it. There is a large chantry-chapel on the north side, adjoining to the church, built by sir John Barr, which is now the burying-place of the Newton family.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a small monument against the north wall of the chancel, with this inscription :

MEMORIÆ SACRVM IOH: SEYMOR MILITIS COMIT: GLOVCE:

Qui non minus Illustri animi dotibus excelluit, quam præ-illustri et nobili ortu claruit. Mortem obiit nouembris 17^{mo}. Anno Epoche Christianæ 1663.

Si moueat virtus Lachrymas, defuncta, Viator,
Siftas, officij sic memoratq; tui.
Se pietas fato præbet Crucianda superbo.
At quamuis Jaceat non quasi vita, tamen
In te certabant Virtus et nobilis ortus
Quis prior: Heu! fato cessit utrumq; tuo.
Dum vigeat Phœbi Laurus, dum viuida virtus,
Vives, non norunt hæc monumenta mori.
Tu bene vixisti, uita an felicior esles
An obitu, fieri Questio jure potest.
Sic uixit Patriæ lumen, sic occidit, eheu!
Fallimur, in Cœlo jam noua stella micat.
Vivito ut inclusus vixit modo nobilis Heros,
Certa licet fuerit ut Amica venit.

Age peripatetice Dum intuearis Cineres defuncti mort... en
facel... breui fortassis tuæ.

On the stone are these arms: Gules, two wings conjoined in fesse Or.

Against the wall of the chapel is a white marble monument, and this inscription :

Here lieth the Body of Sir JOHN NEWTON, Bar^t. thrice Burgeſs of Parliament. A most loving Husband, careful Father, & faithful Friend. Pious, Iust, Prudent, Charitable, Valiant, & belov'd of all. He was born Ivne y^e 9th A. D. 1626, being the Son of THOMAS NEWTON of Gunwarby in the County of Lincoln, Esq; and died May 31st A. D. 1699. He married Mary the daughter of S^r IERVASE EYER of Ramton in the County of Nottingham K^t. They liv'd happily all their Time together w^{ch} was 55 Years, by whom he had Issue four Sons & thirteen Daughters. This Monument was erected at the Charge of his youngest Son Gervas Newton, Esq.

Over the table are these arms, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent, on a chevron azure three garbs Or. The arms of Ulster in a canton, for Newton. 2d and 3d, Sable, two thigh-bones in saltire argent.

Under the table, Per pale, 1st. Newton as before. 2d Argent, on a chevron sable three quatrefoils Or. for Eyer.

Near the above, a small marble monument, with this inscription :

ELIZABETH STRINGER obiit tricesimo primo die Iulij Anno Dom. 1694.

SEQVIMVR
QVAMVIS NON PASSIVS ÆQVIS.

Upon a scutcheon, Per pale, 1st. Per chevron sable and Or, three eagles display'd counterchanged. 2d. Sable, two thigh-bones in saltire argent.

There are several memorials in the church for the families of Creswicke, Weare, Parker, Jones, &c. but there is nothing in them deserving particular notice.

There were two antient statues of stone lying at length, but for whom they were designed is unknown. Atkyns. They are now taken away.

First Fruits, £. 18 14 10 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
Tenths, — -- 1 17 6 Pentecostals, 0 0 2
Procurations, - 0 6 8

Benefactions.

To Bitton. Mr. Freeman has given, for four sermons every year, 40s. for ever; and 10s. a year to the poor.—Mr. Seed has given 40s. Mr. Shewring of Bristol 1l. 6s. 4d. Mr. Gully of Bristol 9s. Mrs. Badcock 7s. and Mr. Davis 2s. all to the poor, annually for ever.

To Oldland. Mr. Arthur Farmer of Bristol gave 6l. a year for a sermon on every first Sunday in the month.—Mr. Robert Kitchen 10s. a year for a sermon on Good Friday, and 10s. to the poor for ever.—Mrs. Elizabeth Warn gave 40s. for four sermons, and 40s. to the poor, annually for ever.—Mr. Thomas Woodward gave 20s. to the poor, as often as any rate shall be made at Oldland for their relief.

At Hanbam. Mrs. Parry gives annually, to fifteen poor widows, 5s. each, on St. Thomas' day which was left by one of the Tryes.

Bitton.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 180 12
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 46 17
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 202 3
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, — 151 11

Hanbam.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 89 6
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 21 11
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 77 6
		The same — — 1770, —

Oldland.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 89 6
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 27 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 116 15
		The same at 3s. -- 1770, — 87 12

At the beginning of this century, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 320 houses and about 1150 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 100 were freeholders; yearly births 56, burials 56. But it appears by the parish register, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709, there were 633 baptisms and 432 burials; and in a like series from 1760 to 1769, 1116 baptisms, and 632 burials; and the inhabitants having been exactly numbered in the year 1767, were found to be 4600. There are religious sectaries who have distant burying places, and are supposed to bury about 9 or 10 every year, and taking these into account, the average number of annual burials will be 109.8; so that about 1 in 42 dies every year, which shews it to be a healthy situation, and that the inhabitants have more than doubled their number within the last seventy years.

Robert Atkyns's estimate of the inhabitants was greatly too low, as will appear by multiplying the average number of annual burials in the first years, i. e. 43.2 by 42, which will give 1814 for the number of inhabitants at that time.

B L A I S D O N.

THIS is a small parish in the hundred of Westbury, in the forest division, three miles distant east from Mitchel-Dean, four north from Ewnham, and eight westward from Gloucester. Before the Norman conquest, our kings had granted several parcels of land, part of the forest, by the names of Denes, i. e. woody places; which afterwards received some addition, as Mitchel-dene, Little-Dene, Rure-Dene, and lastly Blethes-dene, or Bleches-Dene, which was the antient name of this place, having one of the first proprietors of it for the pre-nomen, to distinguish it from the rest. The parish consists mostly of pasture and woodlands. A small rill, called atwood-brook, runs through it to Westbury, and empties itself into the Severn. This was not erected into a parish in the time of king Edward the First, for in the ninth year of that reign, the sheriff, in his return of all the villis of Gloucestershire, mentions Longhope cum Hamto de Bletchesden; whence it appears that it was then appendant to Longhope.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Domesday-book makes no distinct mention of this place; but there are records of the following dates which shew who were the proprietors of it: William de Musgrose was seized of Bletchesden H. 3. as was Ralph de Abbenhall 29 E. 1. Fry le Marechal held Blechesden, and the advowson of the church, 32 E. 3. and in the 46th year of the same reign, this manor was held of Humphry de Bohun earl of Hereford and Essex, and of Joan his wife.

This manor was afterwards called Blaisdon, and was granted to the abbey of Flaxley, and upon the dissolution of that abbey, it was granted to Anthony Kingston 36 H. 8. William Kingston and Mr. Ayleway were lords of it the year 1608. Mr. Wade was lord of the manor at the beginning of the present century, and it still continues in the same family. The arms of Wade are, Azure, a cross moline between four shells Or.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the Forest deanery, worth 50*l.* a year. Mr. Hayle and Mrs. Wade are patrons, and present alternately. The church hath a low tower at the west end, with battlements.

First fruits, £.	5	7	4	Proc. & Syn. £.	0	6	6
Tenths,	—	0	10	8	Pentecostals,	0	1	6

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	49	4	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	12	0	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	51	10	4
		The same, at 3 s. - 1770, —	38	9	10

At the beginning of this century there were 40 houses and about 180 inhabitants in this parish, yearly births 5, burials 4. But the number of inhabitants is now decreased to 137.

B L E D I N G T O N.

THIS parish lies in the upper division of the hundred of Slaughter, four miles south-eastward from Stow, five west from Chipping-Norton in Oxfordshire, and twenty-nine eastward from Gloucester. It is bounded on the eastward by the river Evenlode, which divides it from Oxfordshire. The soil is generally good, consisting of meadow, pasture, and arable.

The common-fields have lately been inclosed by virtue of an act of parliament, which directs that the Far-heath and the cow-commons do remain uninclosed, to be enjoyed, in a commonable manner, by the proprietors of lands there, in proportion to their rights and properties therein, except the dean and chapter of Oxford, who are excluded. By this act also, a portion of furze or heath-ground, not exceeding six acres, in the Home-heath, is vested in the church-wardens and overseers of the poor, in trust for raising furze for the benefit of the poor parishioners.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In the Domesday account of lands belonging to the abbey-church of Winchcomb, it is thus expressed: 'The same church [of St. Mary de Winchelcumbe] holds Bladinton [in Salemones hundred.] There are seven hides. In demean are two plow-tillages, and eight villeins, and four bordars with five plow-tillages, and eight servi and two ancille. There is a mill of 5*s.* [rent,] and thirty acres of meadow. It was worth 4*l.* and is now worth 3*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 71.

The abbey procured this manor to be discharged from the hundred-court 8 H. 3. and purchased a charter of free-warren in Bladinton, and divers other manors, in the 35th year of that reign, which privilege was allowed to the abbey in a writ of Quo warranto 15 E. 1.

The abbey of Winchcomb assigned the manor of Bladinton to the church of St. Ebrulph at Utica in Normandy, 12 E. 2. and afterwards, upon the seizure of foreign monasteries, it was granted to the church of Evesham; and upon the dissolution of that abbey, it was granted to sir Thomas Leigh 7 E. 6. from whom it descended down to the present time in like manner with Addlestrop, and is now now the property of the heir of James Leigh, esq; lately deceased.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Stow. It is an impropriation belonging to Christ-church in Oxford. Lands in Bledington, with the rectory and advowson of the vicarage, which belonged to the abbey of Winchcomb, were granted to the chapter of Oxford 38 H. 8. The dean and chapter of Oxford are patrons, and Mr. Henry Brown is the present incumbent. The impropriation pays to the curate 20*l.* a year, and the act for inclosing directs the commissioners to lay out lands of the value of 4*l.* a year, as an augmentation of the vicarage; but before this time it had been augmented with two donations of 200*l.* each, and queen Anne's bounty, with which an estate was purchased in Werndydyr in Radnorshire.

The impropriation is worth about 200*l.* a year, and is in lease to Ambrose Reddall, esq; of Stonehouse in this county.

The Upper Oar and the Lower Oar, and some other lands adjoining, were tithe-free before the inclosing act, by virtue of which the dean and chapter had one seventh of such lands as were subject to tithe allowed them in lieu thereof.

There was a charge of 20*s.* a year on Bledington, to find necessaries for masts at Winchcomb-abbey, which was confirmed by the pope, by the archbishop, and by the bishop of Worcester.

The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. It hath an aisle on the south side, and a tower at the west end.

First fruits, l.	6	13	4	Synodals, l.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	0	13	4	Pentecostals, 0	0	10
Procurations, 0	6	8

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	115	6	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	23	7	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	62	14	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	49	16	3

At the beginning of this century there were 53 houses and about 260 inhabitants in this parish; yearly births 8, burials 6. Atkyns. There are now only 251 inhabitants.

B O D I N G T O N.

THE hamlets of Bodington and Barrow in this parish, lie in the lower division of the hundred of Tewkesbury; but Heydon and Withybridge are in the lower division of the hundred of Westminster. The parish is situated in the vale part of the county, about five miles southward from Tewkesbury, four westward from Cheltenham, and six north-eastward from Gloucester. The turnpike-road between the two last mentioned places is carried through it. The river from Cheltenham also runs through it, and empties itself into the Severn near the Ham passage.

It is probable, that in very early ages, here was a house of such consequence as to give denomination to the place, for Bodington (from the British word bod a mansion) signifies a capital house or mansion in the town upon the water, agreeable to a former explanation of the several parts of its name. Leland says, There is at Bodington a fine manor place and a park. The park is now a farm and the manor house is occupied by the farmer.

There is a little sugar-loaf hill in the hamlet of Barrow, which, from its resemblance to a tumulus, gave name to the hamlet. From the top of the hill, in a clear day, is a distinct view of thirty parish churches, a circumstance arising from the situation of the hill in the middle of a large extent of flat country. However improbable this may seem, it is nevertheless strictly true, as I am assured by a gentleman of veracity living in the parish.

At Barrow, and at Moredon in the hamlet of Heydon, are several springs of saline purgative water, brackish and disagreeable to the taste, which have been often used with a medicinal view by the country people.

The parish consists of rich meadow and pasture land, with about one hundred and twenty acres of coppice wood; and there is a common lot-meadow, of about a hundred acres, called Bodington-moor. Bodington is within the jurisdiction of the court of the honour of Gloucester.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

‘Three hides in Botintone belong to this manor. [Tedekeberie.] Girard holds them, and he hath there two plow-tillages, and four vills with three plow-tillages; and there are three servi, and a mill of 8*s.* [rent] and eight acres of meadow. [This estate] is worth 40*s.* was worth 40*s.*’ Domesday-book, p. 68.

But it appears, by the same record, that there were two hides at Botingtune, part of the land belonging to the church of St. Peter at Westminster, and in the hundred of Derhest, which Wluui, one of the king's thanes, held in the time of king Edward the Confessor, but which Girard held at the time of the survey, after the Conquest. These particulars stand under the head Terra Petri Westmon. p. 72.

This manor was granted to Robert Musgraves 38 H. 3. and was held of the earl of Gloucester and Hertford, as of the honour of Gloucester, for one knight's fee, 47 H. 3. and 8 E. 2. John Bures held it 24 E. 3. and the next year John Holloway was seized of it.

Robert lord Ferrers of Chartley died seized of Bodington 1 H. 5. and left Edmond lord Ferrers his son and heir, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Edward lord Spencer, who died seized thereof 14 H. 6.

The Beauchamps were soon after proprietors of this manor, for Richard lord Beauchamp ized of Bodington 18 H. 7. and left three daughters his heiresses; Elizabeth, married to Robert Willoughby, lord Brook, whereby a third part of the manor descended to Edward lord Willoughby, their son and heir, who left two daughters, Anne and Blanch, of whom the latter was married to Francis Dawtry, who had livery of a moiety of the third part of the manor 25 H. 8. Anne, the second daughter and heiress of Richard lord Beauchamp, was married to Richard Liggon: Margaret, the third and youngest daughter, was married to — Reed, who left their third part to Richard Reed their son and heir, 4 H. 8. whose son, John Reed, had livery of the scite of the manor 9 Eliz.

Livery of the manor of Bodington, Barrow and Heydon, was granted to Oliver St. John 15 Eliz. and it was afterwards purchased by lord Craven, who sold it to Mr. Lock. Matthew Lock, esq; was the proprietor of it at the beginning of this century, and Mrs. Lock is the present lady of the honor, and holds a court-baron here.

As to other estates in Bodington, the records shew, that Hugh Mustel held one messuage and eighty acres of land in Botinton 19 E. 2. And Hugh Mustel and Elizabeth his wife levied a fine of lands in Bodington to the use of themselves in tail, the remainder to Philip Boteler, the son of Thomas le Boteler, 7 E. 3. and they levied another fine of lands in Bodington to the use of themselves in tail, the remainder to Thomas, the son of sir Thomas le Boteler, in tail, the remainder to Alan le Boteler, brother of Thomas, 7 E. 3.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Bodington and Barrow, to which there is one tithingman. Barrow is westward from the church.

2. Heydon and Withy-bridge, eastward from the church. These lie in the lower part of Westminster hundred, and have one tithingman. The manor of Heydon antiently belonged to the abbey of Westminster. John Browning was seized of the manor of Heydon, under the abbat, 3 H. 5. This manor was part of the possessions of the same church in its several vicissitudes. Thus it was granted afresh to the church of Westminster 11 H. 8. was restored to the abbey of Westminster Mariae; and again returned to the church of Westminster 2 Eliz. John Partridge, esq; held it under that church in the year 1608. It is now the estate of the right honourable William Dowdeswell, esq; as lessee under the dean and chapter.

Butler's-Court, in Withy-bridge, is a reputed honor, belonging to lord Craven, who has a very considerable estate in Heydon and Withy-bridge. Hugh Mustel held forty-eight acres of land in Heydon 19 E. 2. William de Rodbearg held two messuages and two plow-tillages in Lye and Heydon 3 R. 2. William Nottingham, and Elizabeth his wife, levied a fine of lands in Heydon to the use of themselves in tail 20 H. 6. and sir William Nottingham, their son, was seized thereof 1. R. 3.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is within the peculiar of Deerhurst, and is annexed to Staverton. It is an impropriation, without any endowment to the curate. Some lands, and the tithes of Barrow, belonged to the monastery of Thornton in Lincolnshire, founded in the year 1139, for black canons, by William earl of Almebarle; which lands and tithes were granted to John Fernham 19 Eliz.

The rectory of Bodington belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury, and was granted to Francis Philips and Richard Moor, in trust for Richard Bourk, earl of Clanricard, 6 Jac.

The impropriation belonged to Mr. Brown, from whom it passed to Mr. Wells, who sold it to Mr. Thomas Arkell the present proprietor, and patron of the living. The reverend Mr. John Kipling is the incumbent.

The advowson of the vicarage, and chapel of Bodington and Staverton were granted to Thomas Gatwick and Anselm Lamb 5 Mariae.

The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is small, with a low tower at the west end. The church-yard was consecrated in the year 1469, with the consent of the abbat of Tewkesbury.

Pentecostals, — £. 0 0 7 ob.

Benefaction.

Three acres and a half in Dead-furlong and Stapleton-field are given to the church and poor.

Bodington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	64	4	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	8	2	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	28	11	0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	22	12	3

Heydon and Withy-Bridge.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	79	13	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	11	16	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	61	12	0
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	46	10	1

There were, at the beginning of this century, 40 houses and about 180 inhabitants, whereof 4 were freeholders, in this parish; yearly births 6, burials 5. Atkyns. In ten years, from 1700 to 1709 both inclusive, there are entered 65 baptisms and 49 burials; and in eight years, from 1760 to 1767 inclusive, there are 46 baptisms and 25 burials; and the number of inhabitants is 95; so that population is on the decline.

B O U R T O N on the H I L L.

ONE part of this parish lies in the upper division of the hundred of Tewkesbury, the other in the upper division of the hundred of Westminster, and consequently the parish is under the authority of two constables. It is five miles distant northward from Stow, five south from Campden, and thirty north-east from Gloucester. It is about five miles long and one broad.

The houses are situated on the side of a hill facing the east, whence there is a fine prospect over Morton-in-marsh, to the borders of Oxfordshire. This situation gave rise to the name of the village, for Bourton is a contraction of Bourgtown, from the Anglo-Saxon Beorn, which signifies a hill, a fort, or castle. The lands are mostly arable and sheep lays. There are two springs in this parish, one running eastward into the Thames, the other, by a contrary course, into the Severn. The turnpike-road from Worcester to London passes through the village.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

There are two distinct manors. Domesday-book shews that eight hides in Bortune belonged to the church of St. Peter at Westminster, as part of the manor of Derhest. Wluui (a radchenister, or free man) held two hides at Bortune in the time of king Edward, which Girard held at the time of the survey, in the Conqueror's reign. See p. 72.

Robert Fitz-Hamon sacrilegiously took this manor from the abbey of Westminster, in the reign of William the Second, and it was unjustly detained 'till the reign of Henry the Second, when Lawrence the twenty-fifth abbat of Westminster recovered it by a suit at law.

The abbat of Westminster was seized of the manor of Bourton 15 E. 1. After the dissolution of the abbey, and the erection of the see of Westminster, the manor was granted to the chapter of that church 34 H. 8. The monastery being restored to its former estate by queen Mary, this manor was regranted to the abbey and convent of Westminster in the fourth year of her reign. Another revolution taking place soon after, it was confirmed to the chapter of Westminster 2 Eliz. The manor is held by lease under the church of Westminster, by William Bateson, esq; who is lord thereof, and has a good seat and large estate in this parish. He married Susannah, youngest daughter of Edmund Pytts, late of Kyre in the county of Worcester, esq; deceased, sometime one of the representatives of that county in parliament. His arms are, Argent, three bat's wings erected sable, 2 and 1. On a chief gules, a lion passant gardant of the first.

His ancestor was eminent for his loyalty in the time of the great civil wars, and was sequester'd, and compounded for 700*l.* and his grandfather was high sheriff of Gloucestershire in the year 1710.

The other manor lies in Tewkesbury hundred. Walter de Burgton was seized of Burgton 15 E. 3. Joan the widow of John de Winchester was seized of this manor 36 E. 3. and John Rouse and others were also seized of it in the 49th year of the same reign. Gilbert de Stonour, son of Robert de Stonour, held Bourton 3 H. 5. Thomas lord Wentworth married Margaret, daughter and heir of Anne Fortescue, and with her had the manor of Bourton, and lands in Condicot, of which he died seized 5 E. 6. and livery of the estate was granted the same year to Thomas lord Wentworth his son.

The manor passed from the Wentworths to sir Nicholas Overbury. He married Mary daughter of Giles Palmer, of Ilmington in Warwickshire, by whom he had sir Thomas Overbury who was born in this parish. He was one of the judges of the marches of Wales, and was poisoned in the tower in the year 1613, by the malicious contrivance of the countess of Somerset, of whose murder she and her husband were afterwards convicted. Sir Thomas left this estate to his nephew sir Thomas Overbury, who published the trial of Joan Perry and her two sons, John and Richard for the supposed murder of Mr. William Harrison in the year 1676, who afterwards appeared. Of this strange affair there is a further account under Campden. This last sir Thomas died at Adminton in the parish of Queinton, and lies buried in that church.

Alexander Popham, esq; purchased this manor of the trustees of sir Thomas Overbury in the year 1680, after whose death it came to Edward Popham, his son and heir; soon after which it passed out of that name, and is now the property of William Bateson, esq; .

Of the other estates the records shew, that Samuel de Bourton was seized of lands in Bourton 2 H. 3. and John Rouse and others were seized of lands in Bourton 49 E. 3. Edward de Stonour or Stonour, held lands in Burgton 5 R. 2.

— Head, of the county of Berks, esq; has a very handsome modern built house, with pleasant gardens, in this parish, in right of his wife daughter and sole heiress of Dr. Harward.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Campden, worth about 300*l.* a year. Thomas Kemble, esq; is patron, Mr. Matthew Bloxam is present incumbent. Morton-in-marsh is annexed to it.

Tithes of the parish of Bourton on the Hill belonged to the abbey of Tewkesbury 'till the dissolution of that abbey, and were afterwards granted to William Duncan and Thomas Escourt 2 E. 6. A considerable part of the tithes of Morton-in-marsh is appropriated, and belongs to Mr. Bateson.

This parish and Morton-in-marsh were formerly within the peculiar of Blockley in Worcestershire, and mortuaries are still paid to the vicar of that church, with whom the tithes of Bourton compounded for the liberty of burial in the year 1542.

The church is large, with two ailes, and a tower at the west end. It is dedicated to St. Lawrence.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the south aisle, on a blue marble table, is a memorial :

Near this Place is interred the Body of Brilliana, Wife of Alexander Popham, of this Parish, Esq; Also that of her third daughter Letitia Popham. B. P. died Sept. 12, 1688; L. P. died Oct. 11, 1738. — Over, in a lozenge, Argent, on a fess gules, two flags heads caboshed Or. for Popham.

On a white marble monument,

In Memory of Kemp Harward, Doctor in physick, who died Dec. 15, 1743, aged 66 years; and of Altham Harward, who died Feb. 20, 1733, aged 20 years. This Monument is erected to the Memory of Lucy Harward, as the last and only remaining Testimony of her Duty and Regard to her Father, and affectionate Remembrance of her Brother. — The arms on it are, Checky, Or and Argent, on a bend gules two eagles display'd argent.

A white marble monument, thus inscribed :

In Memory of Robert Devereux Bateson, Esq; Son of William Bateson, Esq; of this parish. He married Anne, second Daughter of Allen Cliffe, of Mathon in the County of Worcester, Esq; whom he left Issue two Sons, William and Robert, and one daughter Anne. He died the 23d Day of October, 1736, in the 45th Year of his Age. This Monument was erected to his Memory by his equally loving and beloved Wife, Anne Bateson. — On it are these arms, 1st and 4th, Bateson, as before; and 3d, Argent, a fess gules, charged with a crescent of the field. chief three roundlets, the colour not distinguishable, for Cliffe.

St Fruits, £.	14	0	0	Synodals, £.	0	1	0
Months, —	—	1	8	Pentecostals, 0	0	0	6
Decorations, -	0	6	8

The Part in Westminster Hundred.

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	84	10	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	17	14	8
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	52	12	0
	The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	39	9	0

The Part in Tewkesbury Hundred.

{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	25	8	0
	Poll-tax — — 1694, —	8	14	0
	Land-tax — — 1694, —	18	8	0
	The same at 3s. -- 1770, —	13	16	0

It is said there were 60 houses in this parish at the beginning of the present century, and 250 inhabitants, whereof 11 were freeholders; yearly rents 8, burials 6. Atkyns. But the true state of the population is as follows. In ten years, from 1700 to 1709 both inclusive, are registered 67 baptisms and 50 burials; and, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, 67 baptisms and 58 burials, and there are 269 inhabitants. Hence it may be observed, that about one in forty-six dies every year, which shews the healthiness of the air; yet the inhabitants have increased very slowly, which must be attributed to frequent emigrations.

BOURTON on the WATER.

THIS parish lies in the lower division of the hundred of Slaughter, four miles distant north-westward from Stow, eight north-west from Stowford in Oxfordshire, six north-eastward from Stowthleach, and twenty-four eastward, inclining to the north, from Gloucester.

This village is situate about a quarter of a mile south-east from the Roman foss, in a fertile vale, surrounded by hills at a pleasing distance, and is watered by a river which rises a little above it, and, as it enters the village, forms itself into an elegant serpentine canal about thirty feet wide, flowing, with an agreeable rapidity, about the depth of fourteen or fifteen inches. Many of the houses are ranged into a street, tho' somewhat irregularly, on each side of this natural canal, the banks of which being well gravelled, and very rarely overflow'd, afford a delightful walk. The river is remarkable for fine trout, eel, and crayfish. In the centre of the place is a handsome freestone bridge of three arches, built in 1756, beside which there are several wood bridges for foot passengers, at such distances as to render the communication perfectly commodious. There is a good raised road carried through the place; but it is to be regretted, that some of the best houses are not arranged in the street, which would have made a great addition to the agreeable appearance of this handsome village.

Nature has been lavish with her favours to this place, and with a little more of the assistance of her younger sister, Art, it might vie in beauty and elegance with any Dutch village. Many topographers have made no mention of it, and none have done it justice; for tho' it has not a market, here are shops for the supply of goods, and the more necessary kinds of trades are carried on as in a market town; and there is reason to believe, that it has been much larger and more populous than at present, for there are many foundations still visible, which are undoubtedly the ruins of houses, as may be concluded from the ashes of wood and coal that are found about them.

Adjoining to the village, and within the parish, is a large quadrangular Roman camp, inclosing about sixty acres, now divided into twenty fields. The vestiges of it are most perfect to the north-east, where, at a gap in the rampart, a court-leet is held twice a year, for the liberty of Salemanesbury, the antient name of a hundred now included in that of Slaughter. After calling over the jury, they adjourn to some other place to finish the business.

There can be no doubt of the camp being Roman, as many of the coins of that nation have been, and still are, frequently found about it; and a gold signet was lately found, weighing near an ounce. The ring-part is so very small, that it could not be intended for the finger. The impression on the signet is a Roman soldier sitting upon a tripod, with a spear in his left hand, holding a victory in the right, and the Roman eagle standing at his feet. Round part of the camp, a paved aqueduct was discovered not long since, by people who were sinking a well; and human bones have been often taken up in digging the foundations for walls.

Petrifications of various kinds of shell-fish are very commonly found in the quarries on Bourton-hill.

hill. The most remarkable among them is of a spiral form, with the contortions separate and distinct, in the manner of a cork-screw. It weighs above a pound; but I know not what name to call it by.

It is uncertain what was the name of this place in the time of the Romans, but questionless it received its present appellation from our Saxon ancestors, on account of the camp or fortification, which they called Beoꝛg, as I have observed elsewhere, and so came the name Burgtone, as it is written in some antient grants.

Three considerable brooks meet in this parish, one from Guiting, another from Slaughter, and a third from Swell. These are joined below by a brook from Sherbourn, and run in one course to Windrush, from whence the river is called the Windrush, and running to Burford and Witney, empties itself into the Thames.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Amongst the particulars of the estates belonging to the abbey church of St. Mary of Evesham, recorded in Domesday-book, it is express'd after this manner:

'The same church holds Bortune, in Salemones hundred. There are ten hides. In demean are six plow-tillages, and sixteen villeins, and eight bordars, and two free men with seven plow-tillages. There is a priest with half a plow-tillage. It was worth 8*l.* but is now worth 12*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 72.

The abbey of Evesham purchased a charter of free-warren in this place 35 H. 3.

At the dissolution of abbies this manor came to the crown, and was granted to Edmond lord Chandos 4 Eliz. who died seized thereof 15 Eliz. and livery was granted the same year to Giles lord Chandos, his son. He died in the 44th year of that reign, and was succeeded by Grey lord Chandos, his son, who was seized of this manor in the year 1608, and sold it to sir Thomas Edmonds, treasurer of the household, and privy counsellor to king Charles the First. He left Isabella, his daughter and coheirefs, married to Henry lord de la Ware, who, in her right, was seized of this manor. John lord de la Ware, grandson to Henry, sold it to Charles Trinder, esq; from whom it passed to Mr. Boddingham, and from him to Mr. Church, then to Mr. Partridge, and lastly to Samuel Ingram, esq; who is the present lord of the manor. For his arms see Coln St. Aldwin's.

Sir Robert Atkyns mentions, that Walter de Burgton, John Rouse, Edward de Stoure, (or Stonor) and others, were at different times seized of Burgton; but this is rather to be understood of one of the manors in the preceding parish, and not of this, which the abbey of Evesham continued to possess till that house was dissolved.

Six acres of meadow in Bourton on the Water, lately belonging to the abbey of Evesham, were granted to sir Philip Hobbey 37 H. 8.

There is a very handsome modern house, built by William Moore, esq; who married Miss Collet, daughter of Mr. Collet, late of this place, by whom he had a good estate in the parish; but he died about the year 1771, without issue, and his widow, Mrs. Moore, is the present proprietor.

H A M L E T. Nethercot is a hamlet in this parish. It was held of the honour of Wallingford by Edmond earl of Cornwall 28 E. 1. It was afterwards the estate of the abbey of Evesham, and was granted to William Lloyd and Thomas Parker, in trust for others, 10 Jac. and is now the property of Mr. Palmer of Bourton.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Stow worth about 500*l.* a year. The advowson of the rectory of this church belonged to the priory of Kirkham in Yorkshire, founded by Walter Eipe for monks of the order of St. Austin, in the year 1122. At the dissolution of religious houses it was vested in the crown, by which it was granted to sir Christopher Hatton 21 Eliz.

The reverend Mr. Richard Vernon was the late patron and incumbent. He was survived by his sister Mrs. Dorothy Vernon, who dying unmarried in the year 1764, bequeathed the advowson of the church to the warden and fellows of All Souls college in Oxford, for ever; who are to prefer persons qualified according to the directions of her will. The reverend Mr. William Vernon is the present incumbent.

The parishes of Clapton and Lower Slaughter are annexed to this church; but they are now reputed separate parishes, and have their distinct officers and rates to taxes.

The rector hath only the third part of the tithes of corn and hay in Bourton and Clapton, but he hath the whole of all other tithes in those places and the whole tithes of corn and hay in Slaughter.

Thirty acres of meadow, and eighty-five arable belong to the glebe. The parsonage-house is large and well built.

Anthony Palmer, author of a book intitled the Gospel New Creature, was rector of this church in the time of the great civil wars. He was of strong Calvinistical principles, and firmly adhered to the interest of the parliament during the troubles.

The church hath an aisle on the south side. It is a very antient building, as appears more particularly from the form of the tower, which stands between the chancel and the body of the church, and has a roof like a dwelling house, with parapet walls instead of battlements. The aisle was lately rebuilt in the modern taste, when a stone coffin was discovered, without any inscription. In the tower are six bells, with a clock and chimes. The church, tower, and chancel are 120 feet long, and 21 feet broad. The aisle is 25 feet broad. It is called Clapton-aisle, because the inhabitants of that place once sat there.

There was a chantry in this church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, whereof Nicholas Saunders was the last incumbent, and retired with a pension of 3l. 6s. 8d. Willis.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome pyramidal monument of marble against the north wall of the chancel, with this inscription :

In Hoc Cancellò contumulantur Reliquiæ Revdi viri GEORGII VERNON, A. M. Hujusce Paroch: nec non de SARSDEN in Com. Ox. Rectoris vere pij. Et ELISABETHÆ Viduæ plurimum Mœrentis Non longo tamen intervallo sejunctæ. Ille enim Obijt 17 Dec. 1720, Æt. 83. Illa 1^o. Aprilis, 1724, Æt. 80. Propè jacent duo Filij THOMAS Infans decessit Sep. 10, 1670. RICHARDUS LL. B. hujus Paroch: post Patrem Rector, Indigentia tacite munificus Obijt Feb: 18, 1752, Æt. 78. Hoc in carissimorum Memoriam DOROTHEA VERNON P. P.

At top are these arms, Party per pale, 1. Or, on a fess vert three garbs of the field, for Vernon. 2. Argent, a chevron sable charged with three mascles of the first, between as many pellets each charged with a martlet of the field.

On the table of a freestone monument, against the south wall of the church,

IN MEMORY OF ANTHONY COLLETT, Gent. who lies att the Entrance of y^e seat. His Charity and Zeal for Religion survives in a Donation of Ten Pounds yearly, for Instruction of twelve poor Boys in the Principles of the Church of England, who Deceas'd in 1719.—At top are these arms, Sable, on a chevron, between three hinds argent, as many pellets Or.

Table with 4 columns: Item, £, s, d. Rows: St fruits, £. 27 2 8; Synodals, £. 0 2 0; Months, — 2 14 3; Pentecostals, 0 1 1; Decorations, 0 6 8.

Benefaction.

Mr. Anthony Collett gave 10l. a year to publish a school for teaching twelve poor boys to read, write, and say the catechism.

Table with 4 columns: Item, £, s, d. Rows: The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 138 0 8; Poll-tax — — 1694, — 50 12 8; Land-tax — — 1694, — 112 0 4; The same, at 3s. 1770, — 87 19 6.

At the beginning of this century, it is said, there were 70 houses and about 350 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 35 were freeholders; annual marriages 11, burials 8. Atkins. But it is very difficult to give the true state of their population; some of the people of Clapton and Slaughter were here, and are entered in the parish register. Besides, here is a large congregation of dissenters, some of whom bury at the church, and are registered, others at the meeting-house, and are not registered. It appears, however, that from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were registered baptisms and 93 burials; and that from 1710 to 1769, there were 194 baptisms and 98 burials; and there are about 500 inhabitants. A great disproportion between the baptisms and burials shews a defect in the register. The inhabitants have increased during this century.

BOXWELL and LEIGHTERTON.

THIS is a small parish, about four miles long from east to west, and two broad from north to south. It lies in the hundred of Grumbaldsash, six miles west from Tetbury, four east of Wotton-under-edge, and twenty south from Gloucester. The soil is adapted to tillage and the feeding of sheep, which are secure from the bane, or rot, in every part of the parish, and may amount in number, communibus annis, to between two and three thousand.

The village of Boxwell, where the church and houses are, lies at the top of a little glyn or dale, about half a mile from the turnpike-road from Gloucester to Bath; and seen from several points of view, appears extremely rural and picturesque. It is watered by a rill which rises in the parish, and runs through it; and is covered, at an agreeable distance, by a hanging wood on one side of it; a situation particularly eligible in the summer season, and the surrounding hills secure it from the bleak and cold winds of the winter.

Leland informs us that there was antiently a nunnery in this place, which seems to be extremely well adapted by nature to the peaceful habitation of the religious in early ages; but that house was destroyed by the Danes.

Boxwelle was the manner of writing the name, as it stands upon record seven hundred years ago. It is supposed to have been so called from a plentiful spring rising out of a rocky hill, in a small free warren, covered with about sixteen acres of box-wood, the most considerable of that kind in England, except Boxhill in Surry. Upon this supposition, the box-trees must have grown here a long time, and this remarkable wood still continues in a flourishing state.

Several medicinal and poisonous plants grow in this warren, as the deadly nightshade, hemlock, henbane, wild thyme, dwarf elder, marjoram, and some others. A considerable number of petrifications, commonly, but erroneously, supposed to be of the cockle fish, to which indeed it has some resemblance, are found in the hill; and with them the serpentine or snake stones. The latter are so called from their likeness to a serpent closely coiled up, with the tail part in the middle; not that they really had their origin from that species of reptile, which is not only unlikely, but impossible; for in that case, the head would sometimes be found perfect in the stone, which never happens; and yet that part is full as likely to be turned into stone as the body. But the truth is, there are no petrifications of the fleshy parts of land animals, nor of fish, that I ever heard of, except the testaceous kinds. And these stones are generally, if not always accompanied accompanied in the beds where they lie, with petrifications of shell fish; wherefore it is most likely that these are marine substances, and a species of shell fish also.

There is a large tumulus at Leighterton called Well-barrow, which was opened by Mr. Matthew Huntley, great grandfather of the present Mr. Huntley of Boxwell, in which he found three vaults arched over like ovens, and at the entrance of each, an earthen urn, wherein were many ashes and men's bones imperfectly burnt and broken; but the skulls and thigh-bones were whole.

The rill I have mentioned is considered as one of the heads of the Berkeley Avon. It produces small trout and crayfish at Boxwell. About half a mile from its source it joins another little brook from Lasborough, and uniting their waters with a stream from Kiltot, take their course to Stone and Berkeley, and empty themselves into the Severn.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

'The church of St. Peter of Gloucester holds Boxwelle in Grimboldestowes hundred. There are five hides. In demean are two plow-tillages, and twelve villeins, and one radchenister, having twelve plow-tillages. There are eight servi, and a mill of 5*s.* [rent.] It was worth 70*s.* but is now worth 100*s.*' Domesday-book, p. 71.

The abbey of Gloucester held the manor of Boxwell 17 E. 3. The manor and advowson of the parish and church, with the estates at Boxwell, have been many generations in the family of the Huntleys, before the dissolution of the abbey, partly in fee, and partly by lease under that church. John Huntley, of Standish, esq; granted to his son Henry Huntley, upon his marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of William Throckmorton, esq; all his lands, messuages, and rights in the manor of Boxwell, 34 H. 8. He then recites a grant of lands and rights in the said manor, and other places, from the abbat and convent of St. Peter's at Gloucester, dated 24 H. 8. to the said John Huntley for 90 years, subject to a yearly payment of 40*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* which lease he also settles upon his son Henry. So that the manor seems to have been a joint property between them and the abbey, 'till the dissolution.

A moiety of lands in Boxwell, Laterton, and Wast in Hawkesbury, which antiently belonged to the abbey of Gloucester, was granted by the crown to Arthur Swayne and William Bennett 41 Eliz. who sold it to sir Walter Raleigh in 1601; but reverting to the crown upon his attainder, it was granted to Peter Vanlore and William Blake 3 Jac. who sold it to George Huntley in 1612, as appears by evidences in the possession of the reverend Mr. Richard Huntley, who is the present lord of this manor, and resides at Boxwell, where he has a good house and pleasant gardens. His arms are, Argent, on a chevron between three stags heads erased sable, as many bugle horns stringed of the first.

John Huntley of Standish, who lived in the reign of king Henry the Eighth, was son of John Huntley, of Rid in Gloucestershire, or of Hadnock in Monmouthshire, and married Alice, daughter of Edward Langley, by whom he had Henry Huntley of Boxwell. Henry, who was brother to George Huntley of Frocester, married Elizabeth, daughter of William Throckmorton; and surviving her, had to his second wife, Anne, daughter of John Rufford. George Huntley was his son and heir, who married Constance, daughter and coheirefs of Edward Ferris, by whom he had John Huntley, who married Frances, daughter of sir John Conway; but he had a second wife whose name was Vaughan. John Huntley was son and heir of the last John, whose son Matthew Huntley succeeded him in the manor of Boxwell, who was also succeeded by Richard Huntley, father of the reverend Mr. Richard Huntley, the present lord of the manor, as already mentioned.

Mrs. Woodward has a very good house here. She is sister to Mr. Huntley. Beside this and the manor-house, there are only six others in Boxwell, and no freeholder but the lord of the manor.

H A M L E T. Leighterton is something more than a measured mile south-east from Boxwell. There are 25 houses and 120 inhabitants. Leighterton was held of Humphry de Bohun earl of Hereford and Essex, and of Joan his wife, 46 E. 3. and Robert Stanshaw, esq; was seized of the manor of Leighterton 12 E. 4. The reverend Mr. Richard Huntley is the present proprietor of it. This hamlet is rated in payments with Boxwell. It lies high, and in a dry summer the inhabitants are much distressed for water.

Here is a small chapel, with an embattled tower at the west end, the patronage of which is vested in Mr. Huntley.

Mr. Stephens, who married Mr. Huntley's eldest sister, has a good house in this hamlet, where he resides.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Hawkesbury, worth about 140*l.* a year. The reverend Mr. Richard Huntley is patron and incumbent. The advowson of the rectory of Boxwell belonged to the priory of Walsingham in Norfolk, founded by Jeffrey de Faverches, black canons, in the reign of king William the conqueror. This advowson was granted, after the dissolution, to William Grew and Anthony Forster 6 Eliz. The abbey of Gloucester presented to this church in the year 1541.

About twenty acres in each common belong to the glebe.

The church is small, with a low spire in the middle, and a narrow aisle on the north side. Several of the family of the Huntleys lie buried under flat stones in the chancel; but there is a remarkable inscription.

First fruits, £.	23	4	8	Synodals, £.	0	1	8
Tithes,	—	2	6	Pentecostals, 0	0	0	4
Procurements,	0	5	0

Benefaction.

Three acres of land in the north field are given toward the repairing of Leighterton chapel.

The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	73	6	8
Poll-tax — — 1694, —	24	7	0
Land-tax — — 1694, —	63	10	6
The same, at 3s. - 1770, —	49	10	9

There were 26 houses and about 104 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 5 were freeholders, at the beginning of this century; yearly births 2, burials 2. Atkyns. In a series of eight years, from 1761 to 1767 inclusive, there were registered at Boxwell 31 baptisms and 6 burials; at Leighterton 31 baptisms and 19 burials; in all 42 baptisms and 25 burials; and there are 175 inhabitants. Here we see a considerable increase in the number of inhabitants, of whom only 1 dies in about 54 every year, which shews the place to be very healthy. This is further confirmed by the following observation: Mr. Wykes Huntley died in the year 1726, who was the third incumbent that had not sung mass there.

St. BRIAVEL'S.

THIS parish lies in the forest division of the county, in the hundred of St. Briavel's, to which it gives name, about seven miles north from Hereford, and twenty-three west from Gloucester. It is of a middle size, about fourteen miles in compass, and bounded for three miles on the west by the river Wye, which divides it from Monmouthshire. To the account already given of this river, it should be added, that there is great plenty of eels taken in it, by means of hair sieves, every year, which some writers have supposed to be peculiar to the rivers of Somersetshire.

It was antiently called Brulais, and reputed to be part of the parish of Newland; but I cannot so much as guess at the meaning of the name, or what gave occasion to it.

The soil is much inclined to clay, and the parish is on very high ground, yet 'tis plentifully supplied with wells and springs of water. Three considerable brooks, Marksbrook, Woodward's-brook, and Aylemore-brook rise here, of which the first runs into the Wye, the others empty themselves into the Severn.

From the church to Bickswear is a steep ascent, almost covered with large blocks of limestone, of a grey colour, close grain, and shining like the rocks of St. Vincent in Clifton. About a third part of their bulk rises above the surface of the ground, which may be said to be studded with them, as they stand singly, and make a very odd appearance.

There is a stone set on end in a piece of ground called Closetuft, ten feet high above the surface, six feet broad, and five thick. It is probably a monumental stone of the antient Britons, but this is mere conjecture, as there is no inscription or other thing whatever to direct the judgment concerning it. But the most considerable remains of antiquity in these parts, are those of the castle of St. Briavel's, taken notice of by Mr. Camden, and other writers of English antiquities. The castle is environed on every side by the lands of this parish, but as it is extraparochial, and particularly connected with the forest of Dean, it was thought proper to consider it under that head, p. 31. Where also I have endeavoured to give a succinct account of the mine-law court, the court for trying all personal actions arising within the hundred, &c. which have their peculiar rights and jurisdictions.

The parish joins to the forest of Dean, in which the inhabitants have a right of common of pasture and common of estovers; and they have also common of wood and of pasture in Hudnolls, confirmed to them by an act of parliament 20 C. 2.

They have a custom of distributing yearly upon Whitsunday, after divine service, pieces of bread and cheese to the congregation at church, to defray the expence of which, every householder in the parish pays a penny to the churchwardens; and this is said to be for the liberty of cutting and taking the wood in Hudnolls. The tradition is, that the privilege was obtained of some earl of Hereford, then lord of the forest of Dean, at the instance of his lady, upon the same hard terms that lady Godiva obtained the privileges for the citizens of Coventry.

Brockwear, upon the river Wye, lies partly in this parish, and partly in that of Hewelsfield. The tide flows up to this place, and hither the corn, and other products of the country lying upon that river (which is navigable to Glasbury in Radnorshire) are brought down in barges, and put on board larger vessels of about sixty tons burthen, and carried down the Severn, to Bristol and other markets.

The great road from Ross in Herefordshire, through Colford to Aust passage over the Severn, and so to Bristol, leads through this village.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

There is no mention of this place in Domesday-book; but the following account is extracted from other records.

Jeffrey Wither held the town of St. Briavel's, with twelve acres of land, and a bailiwick in the forest of Dean, 20 Joh. which had been held by his ancestors.

William de Lesebroke held St. Briavel's in the forest of Dean 45 H. 3. and Walter Wither was seized of it in the 54th year of the same reign.

The

The manors of Newland and St. Briavel's were found to be in the crown by an inquisition 4 E. 1. and paid 33*l.* a year.

There was a grant of fairs and markets in this town 2 E. 2. and Hugh le Dispencer the younger had a grant of the manor of St. Briavel's, with fairs and markets, 12 E. 2. William de Staure held St. Briavel's 17 E. 2. Robert de Aure held St. Briavel's 19 E. 2.

King Henry the Fourth settled St. Briavel's castle, and the town, on John duke of Bedford, his third son, in the first year of his reign, who died seized thereof 14 H. 6. Henry de Aure was seized of St. Briavel's 3 H. 4.

Richard Nevil earl of Warwick, and Anne his wife, were seized of the castle and manor of St. Briavel's, and levied a fine of them to the use of themselves in taille, the remainder to the right heirs of Richard Beauchamp, late earl of Warwick, 6 E. 4. And the same countess afterwards levied a fine of the manor and castle to the use of king Henry the Seventh, in the third year of his reign.

This manor was in the crown in the year 1608, but the earl of Berkeley is the present lord thereof. It was formerly holden by Henry the first duke of Beaufort, whose dutchess dowager parted with it to the Berkeley family.

The Hatheways were antiently possessors of lands in St. Briavel's, and have given their name to a manor within this parish. Ralph Hatheway died seized of lands in St. Briavel's, and in Horeston in the forest of Dean, 10 E. 2. and William Hatheway his son had livery of those lands granted to him the same year. Thomas Hatheway, son of William, died seized of one messuage and forty acres of land in St. Briavel's 5 R. 2.

John Tiptot earl of Worcester was seized of Hatheway's tenement in St. Briavel's 9, 10, and 38 H. 6. The manor of Hatheway's afterwards came to the Baynhams. John Berne levied a fine of lands in St. Briavel's, and of a fishery in the Severn, to sir Alexander Baynham and others 10 H. 7. Thomas Baynham, son of Christopher, had livery of the manor of Hatheway's 20 Eliz. This antient manor, together with a good estate in this parish, is now the property of Charles Wyndham, of Clowerwall, esq.

The abbey of Grace de Dieu^a in Monmouthshire had two plow-tillages and common of pasture in St. Briavel's, Hermitor, and Penyardwood, 11 H. 3. The tenants of this manor were admitted to their estates by the constable of the castle 'till that time, when it was ordered, that they should not be admitted for the future, 'till they had compounded for their fines with the king. William Warren died seized of this estate 14 Eliz. It is a manor and grange, called Stow Grange, of which Mr. Kedgwin Hoskins, of Clowerwall, is the present proprietor.

William de Staure held one messuage and twelve acres of land, with the castle of St. Briavel's 2 E. 2. Sir John de Wysham, and Joan his wife, levied a fine of lands in St. Briavel's and Newland to the use of themselves in taille, the remainder to John de Bures, son of Andrew de Bures, 20 E. 2. William Warren held lands in St. Briavel's 38 E. 2. John Stephens was seized of ten acres, and of 12*l.* rent in St. Briavel's, and of a bailiwick in the forest of Dean, 9 R. 2. William Warren was seized of lands in St. Briavel's, and of a bailiwick in the forest of Dean 7 H. 5. William Baker and his wife levied a fine of lands in St. Briavel's to the use of Thomas Baker 12 H. 7.

There were other lands in St. Briavel's and Redmore's Grove, which belonged to the prior of Lanthony, and were granted to Arthur Porter 32 H. 8.

Bickswear is an antient feat in this parish, upon the banks of the river Wye. The bishop of Landaff was seized of Bickswear 13 E. 2. The abbey of Tintern^b in Monmouthshire was seized of Bickswear 19 E. 2. This is the estate of major James Rooke, son of the late James Rooke, esq. who had it in right of Joan his wife, the only daughter of Tracy Catchmay, esq. He was son to major general Rooke, of a Kentish family, and married, to his first wife, the countess dowager of Derwentwater, and mother of the unfortunate earl of Derwentwater. The Catchmays, residing for many years in this place, have been of great reputation in this county.

Aylesmore house and estate is the joint property of Mr. Proffer, in right of his wife Frances, and of Miss Elianora Bond, the two daughters and coheiresses of Mr. Richard Bond.

The reverend Mr. James Davies has a good house and estate here and in other places.

Mr. William Gough has a good house and estate at Willsbury in this parish, and in Hewelsfield and Woollaston. He is of an antient family, of British extraction, long resident in this part of the country. Their ancestor, sir Matthew Gough, of Goche, served, with great reputation, in the wars of France, and was slain upon London-bridge by the Kentish rebels, 28 H. 6. William Gough his descendant, died seized of a capital messuage in Woollaston 5 E. 6. His son William married — daughter of Mr. Madocke of Wibden, by whom he had George Goughe. He married Mary, one of the three daughters and coheiresses of William Warren of St. Briavel's, and with her he had a manor and capital messuage in Hewelsfield. He had issue by Mary his wife, two sons, William who succeeded him in Hewelsfield; and Warren Gough, who settled at Willsbury. Warren Gough was one of the verderors of the forest of Dean 10 C. He married Dorothy, the daughter of Mr. Barrow of Bream, by whom he had two sons, Richard and James. Richard married Joice, the daughter of George Kingstone of Flaxley, and had one son William, who married, first, Anne, only child of sir John Douglas, who fell at the battle of Worcester, 1651; his second wife was Mary, one of the daughters of sir Nicholas Brockmorton. By his first wife he had a son Charles Gough, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Smart of Woollaston, upon the issue of which marriage he settled his estate at Willsbury; and William Gough, the eldest son of Charles by the said Elizabeth, is the present possessor of Willsbury. In the year 1717, he married Catherine, the only daughter, and at length heiress of Christopher Portrey, esq; the grandson, and heir of his mother, to Morgan Aubrey, of Yniskedwin, in the county of Brecknock, esq; where James Gough, esq; the eldest surviving son, and heir apparent of the said William Gough, now resides, and has taken the name of Aubrey, which is that of his mother's ancestors. The arms of Gough are, Azure, three boars heads couped argent.

^a This was a Cistercian priory, founded by John de Monemuth in the year 1233, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and valued, at the dissolution, at 19*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

^b This abbey was founded by Walter de Clare in 1134, by monks of the Cistercian order, and was valued, at the dissolution, at 256*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

Thomas Foley, of Stoke in Herefordshire, esq; sometime member of parliament for Droitwich, had a good estate in this parish.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the Forest deanery, annexed to Lidney. It is an impropriation belonging to the dean and chapter of Hereford. The vicarial tithes are in lease to Mr. James of Sully, and are worth about 60*l.* a year. There is no vicarage house nor glebe, except the church-yard. The church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. It is built in the form of a cross, with a low tower in the middle.

There was a chantry in this church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, whereof Richard Fletcher was the last incumbent, and retired with a pension of 4*l.*

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome monument in the chancel, upon which the figure of a man and woman in a cumbent posture, and upon a compartment under them are the figures of two children. Two corinthian pillars support a pediment, upon which the figures of Faith, Hope, and Charity are relieved; and upon a shield are the arms of Warren, viz. Chequy Or and azure. There is no inscription, but the monument was erected to the memory of William Warren and Anna Catchmay, his wife, from whom the family of Jones of Sully is descended, by Margaret, one of the daughters of that William Warren. He was buried in the church-yard 14 Eliz. by the will of his will.

Warren Gough, grandson of the above William Warren, was buried in the same grave in 1636, and a handsome tomb, with the arms of Gough, was erected over him.

Several of the families of Whittington, Bond, and Byrkin are buried in the church; and several of the Catchmays, and of the James's of Sully, or Soilwell, lie in the chancel.

Proc. & Syn. £. 0 6 4 Pentecost. £. 0 1 4

Benefactions.

Sir William Whittington gave 3*l.* yearly to put out an apprentice, 3*l.* a year to the poor, 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for four quarterly sermons, and 20*s.* a year for adorning the church, for ever.

John Gunning, esq; gave 5*l.* a year, Mr. William Hoskins 20*s.* a year, and Mr. John Broban 40*s.* a year, all for the use of the poor.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 159 10 8
		Poll-tax — — 1694, — 32 4 0
		Land-tax — — 1694, — 239 6 8
		The same, at 3 s. — 1770, — 181 10 10

At the beginning of this century there were 80 houses and about 400 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 20 were freeholders; yearly births 14, burials 12. Atkyns. In a series of eight years, from 1760 to 1767 inclusive, there are entered in the parish register 90 baptisms and 85 burials. The houses and cottages are 122, and the present number of inhabitants 766; by which it appears that one in 72 dies every year; a proof of the uncommon healthiness of the place, and longevity of the inhabitants. In the year 1767, five persons died, whose ages put together amounted to 450 years. Thomas Evans and Sarah his wife were two of those persons, who were born in the parish, and having lived in it, in the married state, upwards of 77 years, died within nine days of each other. They have often declared that neither of them was ever blooded, nor had taken physic.

B R I M P S F I E L D.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Rapsgate, about six miles south from Cheltenham, five north-east from Bisley, and seven south-east from Gloucester.

It is situate on the brow of that ridge of hills which runs through the county, whence there is a most beautiful and extensive prospect over the vale and the forest, with the lofty mountains in Monmouthshire on one hand, and the blue hills of Malvern in Worcestershire on the other, to terminate the view.

Brimpsfield is a corruption of Brimesfeld as it is written in the antient records. It is compounded of bryme, famous, and feld, the open country.

Here was formerly a castle, with four towers, of considerable strength. There is no certain account account in history when or by whom it was built; but as the building of castles was the prevailing taste about the reign of king Stephen, its original may be dated as high as that time at least. It was demolished in the barons wars, and there is nothing to be seen of it, except some traces of the foundation.

Here was also an antient monastery, of the value of 78 l. 19 s. 4 d. but being a cell to the abbey of St. Stephen de Fonteney in Normandy, as an alien priory, it was dissolved by act of parliament 2 H. 5. and the lands belonging to it were granted to the college of Windsor, by king Edward the Fourth. Appendix, N^o. 29. The priory is supposed to have been an elegant building, as there were windows of polished marble dug up where it stood, about the beginning of this century.

In the reign of king Edward the Third, the duke of Clarence was lord of the manor. He purchased a charter for a weekly market on Tuesday, and a yearly fair on the eve of the feast of Corpus Christi, both of which have been long since discontinued. The market and fairs were held upon a part of the town called Haywick; and the men of that place being killed, it was afterwards, upon that occasion, called Manless-town, which is the name of a hamlet in the parish at this time.

The head of the Stroud river rises here, and the turnpike-road from Gloucester to Cirencester, which is the Irminstreet of the Romans, extends along the side of the parish, and divides it from Cowley.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Under the title of lands belonging to Osbern Gifard, in Domesday-book, it is expressed after this manner :

‘ The same Osbern holds Brimesfelde in Respi-
‘ get hundred. There are nine hides taxed. Duns
‘ held it of earl Harold. There are three plow-
‘ tillages in demean, and sixteen villeins, and six ‘ bordars, and a priest, with twelve plow-tillages.
‘ There are eight servi, and four ancillæ, and two ‘ mills of 64 d. [rent.] In Gloucester are five ‘ burgages of 2 s. It is worth and was worth
‘ 12 l. Domesday-book, p. 77.

This Osbern Gifard, or Giffard, was descended from count Giffard, a great nobleman of Normandy. William earl of Arques, uncle to the Conqueror, attempted to gain the dukedom of Normandy to himself, during the duke's minority; but count Giffard, who was general for the young duke, fought him, and obtained a complete victory. Osbern attended the Conqueror in the invasion of England, and for his services was rewarded with this and three other manors in Gloucestershire.

Elias Giffard, son of Osbern, gave lands and woods in Bockholt, in this parish, to the abbey of Gloucester, about the year 1100. Elias his son was a monk in Gloucester abbey, and gave to that church the manor of Croneham, the church of St. Mary at Bitton, the church of St. George at Orcheston, and the chapel of St. Andrew at Winterborn. Elias, grandson to the last Elias, died 2 R. 1. and was succeeded by Thomas Giffard, and after him another Elias Giffard, who took part with the rebellious barons against king John, who seized his lands in the 18th year of his reign, and granted them to Bartholomew Peeche. But they were restored to Giffard again, in the beginning of the reign of king Henry the Third, and he died in the 33d year of that reign.

John his son and heir succeeded him. He was made governor of St. Briavel's castle, and warden of the forest of Dean, 47 H. 3. He married Maud Longespee, widow of William Longespee, son of William earl of Salisbury, and daughter and heir to Walter de Clifford, and carried her to his castle of Brimpsfield. She makes complaint to the king, and afterwards desists from her complaint, but paid a fine of 300 marks for marrying without licence. He purchased a charter of free-warren in the manors of Badgworth, Stonehouse, Rockhampton, Stoke-Giffard, and Tetbury, and in divers manors in other counties, 9 E. 1. He founded Gloucester-hall in Oxford 11 E. 1. for twelve monks chosen out of the abbey of Gloucester; but afterwards, other monasteries of the order of St. Benedict contributing to the enlargement of the buildings, with the consent of the founder and of the abbat of Gloucester, partook of the benefit of that foundation. He died at Bitton 27 E. 1. and was buried at Malmesbury, having been summoned as a baron to parliament from the 23d year of that reign to his death.

He was succeeded by his son John Giffard, called John the Rich, who took part with the barons against the Spencers, and therefore king Edward the Second, in his march from Cirencester to Worcester, sent soldiers to demolish his castle at Brimpsfield. He was afterwards taken prisoner at the battle of Burroughbridge, and sent to Gloucester to be executed as a traitor.

Upon his attainder, the castle and manor of Brimpsfield were granted to Hugh le Despenser the elder, with remainder to Hugh the younger 15 E. 2. but the scene of affairs changing, all the lands, lately belonging to John Giffard, were granted to John Maltravers 1 E. 3. as a reward for murdering the late king. He procured a confirmation of the manor from John de Calveley, the heir of the Giffards, who levied a fine, and acknowledged the right of John Maltravers 4 E. 3. He was soon after convicted of high misdemeanour, and his estate seized.

The custody of the castle and manor of Brimpsfield was granted for life to Maurice Berkeley, second son of Maurice lord Berkeley, 14 E. 3. upon whose death, 22 E. 3. the king granted the manor and castle to his third son Lionel de Antwerp, duke of Clarence, to whom sir John Maltravers levied a fine thereof 26 E. 3.

Edmund de Mortimer, earl of March and Ulster, married Philippa, daughter and heir of Lionel duke of Clarence, whereby he was intituled to the manor of Brimpsfield, which, from this time, acknowledged the same proprietors as that of Bisley, (to which the reader is referred) 'till they both came to the crown, by the death of Cicely dutchess of York, 10 H. 7. Brimpsfield was then settled by king Henry the Eighth, on queen Catherine. In the first year of king Edward the Sixth, this manor and park, and lands called Hafel-banger, (probably from the British ben-gaer, i.e. an old wall fortification,) were granted to sir John Bridges, afterwards lord Chandos, who died seized thereof by Mariæ. Livery of the manor and park of Brimpsfield was granted the same year to his son Almond lord Chandos, who died seized thereof by Eliz. and was succeeded in honour and this estate by Giles lord Chandos his son and heir. He died seized thereof 36 Eliz. and left two daughters heiresses; Elizabeth, married to sir John Kenida; and Catherine, married to Francis lord Ruffel of hornhagh.

From these the manor was transferred to Miles Sandys, of Latimers in Buckinghamshire, fifth son of William Sandys, and younger brother of Edwin Sandys archbishop of York. He was seized of this manor in the year 1608, and was high sheriff of Gloucestershire in the year 1625. He died seized of the manor of Brimpsfield 17 Car. Sir Edwin Sandys, his second son, (his elder brother, George, dying without issue) succeeded to his estate. William was the eldest son of sir Edwin, and for his prodigality was called Golden Sandys. He died without issue, but sold this manor to his uncle, sir William Sandys of Miserden. Miles Sandys, son of William of Miserden, succeeded to this estate, and was high sheriff of the county 30 C. 2. From him it went to William Sandys, of Miserden, esq; son of Miles, who sold it, and it is now the property of lord Edgecumbe, who holds a court-leet here. The mansion house is gone to ruin, and the park turned into a farm. His lordship's arms are, On a bend ermines, cotoised Or, three boars heads couped argent. CREST. On a wreath Or and Argent, a boar passant argent, about the neck, a chaplet oak-leaves vert, fruited proper. SUPPORTERS. On the dexter side, a greyhound argent, guttée de poix, collar'd with a chain gules. MOTTO. AU PLAYSIRE ART DE DIEU.

H A M L E T S. 1. Caudle-green is a hamlet in this parish, eastward of the church.

2. Manlefs-town, already mentioned, is the name of another hamlet, if a place may be so called which has no house in it.

3. Birdlip, so much of it as lies on the south side of the road, is in this parish, the rest in Cowley.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Stonehouse, worth about 80*l.* a year. Lord Edgecumbe is patron, the reverend Dr. White the present incumbent.

There are thirty acres of arable, and seven of pasture belonging to the glebe.

The church is small, with a low tower in the middle.

First fruits, £.	9	11	11	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths,	—	0	19	1	Pentecostals,	0	0	7
Procurations,	0	6	8

Benefaction.

The interest of 20*l.* given by several benefactors, is distributed annually at Easter, among the second poor of this parish.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	96	9	4
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	13	19	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	90	17	0
		The same at 3 s. -- 1770, —	50	12	0

At the beginning of this century there were 52 houses and 200 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 10 were freeholders; yearly births 7, burials 7. Atkyns. Since that time population has increased. The average of annual births is 8, of burials 5; the present number of houses 63, of inhabitants 283; so that, in this healthy situation, about one in fifty-six dies annually.

B R O A D W E L L.

THIS parish lies in the upper division of the hundred of Slaughter, about two miles distant northward from Stow-on-the-Wold, eight south from Campden, and twenty-six north-eastward from Gloucester.

The name is derived from the large spring which rises in this place near the manor-house, and runs into the Evenlode, and so into the Thames.

The lands are chiefly arable, with a little pasture.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is recorded after this manner: 'The same church [St. Mary of Evesham] holds Bradewelle in Salemones hundred. There are ten hides. There are six plow-tillages in demesne; and thirteen servi, and twenty-five vills, and eight bordars, and one free-man, and a priest, having between them all twelve plow-tillages. In Glouuecester there are four burgages, and in Wincelcombe one, paying 27*d.* The whole was worth 8*l.* but is now worth 12*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 72.

In sir Robert Atkyns's abstract from Domesday-book, Bradewelle is said to have been held by the Pedigree of this family in the possession of William Baynton, esq.

church

church of St. Mary of Wincelcumbe, in the reign of king William the Conqueror. But that was a mistake, which, I apprehend, he was led into by an imperfect copy of that record; for I have myself seen a copy thereof, in which the head or title XII. Terra S. Marie de Evesham, and the accounts of Malgeresberie, Tedestrop, and Bortune were omitted; whereby the manors of Bradewelle, Svelle, Willersfei, Westune, Stoch, and Hedecote, which all belonged to the last mentioned abbey, seemed to be the property of that of Wincelcumbe, whose estates are placed immediately before those of the church of Evesham in order. And I am the rather induced to account for the mistake in this manner, because the learned historian has fallen into the same error with respect to the five other manors above mentioned also. This matter will be clearly understood by inspecting the printed copy of Domesday at p. 71 and 72.

The abbey of Evesham purchased a charter of free-warren in Bradwell, and divers other manors, 35 H. 3.

The master of the knights-templars was seized of court-leet, waifs, and felons goods in Bradwell, by the grant of king Henry the Third, which privileges were allowed, in a writ of Quo warranto, 15 E. 1. Thomas de Beauchamp earl of Warwick, and others, held Bradwell 24 E. 3. William de Clinton earl of Huntingdon died seized of the manor of Bradwell 28 E. 3. But notwithstanding I find these records applied to this parish by sir Robert Atkyns, there is reason to believe that they should be referred to some other of the name of Bradwell; for this manor continued in the possession of the abbey of Evesham 'till the dissolution of that house.

It is probable that Richard Andrews had a grant of this manor, and the advowson of the church, from the crown, soon after the dissolution; for he and Ursula his wife levied a fine of Bradwell, and of the advowson of the church, to the use of Thomas Baskerville and Anne his wife 6 E. 6.

— Ligon died seized of this manor 9 Eliz. and livery of it was granted the same year to Richard Ligon his son and heir.

Eliator Talbot, widow, was possessed of it in the year 1608, soon after which it was purchased by Mr. Hodges. Danvers Hodges, esq; was lord of it at the beginning of this century; and Henry Danvers Doughty Hodges, esq; is the present proprietor of it, and has a handsome seat here, built on the scite of the old house, by Dr. Chamberlayne, late dean of Bristol, who married a daughter of the late Mr. Hodges. His arms are, Argent, three crescents sable. In a canton a coronet

The meadow called Burybradnam in Broadwell, belonged to the abbey of Evesham, and was granted to sir Philip Hobbey 37 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the deanery of Stow. Adlestrop is annexed to it, and both together are worth about 350*l.* a year. The advowson, and great part of the tithes antiently belonged to the abbey of Evesham. The abbat and convent presented to this church in 1402. They granted all their tithes, except of their demans, whilst in their own hands, to the incumbent, in the year 1450, reserving in all 6*l.* yearly; which rent is now paid out of the rectory to the patron. The heir of the late James Leigh, esq; is patron; the reverend Mr. Leigh the present incumbent.

The church hath an aisle on the south side, and a tower at the west end. There is a chapel in the aisle, belonging to Mr. Hodges, where several of that name lie buried, and there is an antient monument erected to their memory. There is another handsome monument in the aisle, in memory of Herbert Weston, esq; who died in 1633.

First Fruits, £.	23	11	8	Synodals, £.	0	1	6
Tenths, —	—	2	7	2	Pentecostals, 0	0	6
Procurations, -	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Three little houses, a piece of meadow ground, and some land in the field are given for repairing the church.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	116	14	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	15	8	8
		Land-tax — - 1694, —	87	1	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	67	2	0

At the beginning of this century there were 30 houses and about 126 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 15 were freeholders; yearly births 5, burials 4. Atkyns. But the inhabitants are nearly doubled since that time, being in number 245.

BROCKWORTH.

THIS parish is situate in the vale part of the county, in the upper division of the hundred of Dudston and King's-barton; six miles distant south from Cheltenham, five north from Painewick, and four east from Gloucester. It lies on the antient Roman way called the Irminstrete, some traces of which may still be discovered here about, where the sand and stone of the old road being cut through by the long use of carriages appear, in the banks on the sides of it, distinctly from the natural soil.

Cooper's-hill, in this parish, is taken notice of by sir Robert Atkyns, as being the place of residence of John Theyer, a learned antiquary, and a firm loyalist to king Charles the First. He had the advantage of the library of the priory of Lanthony near Gloucester, which his grandfather who had married the sister of Richard Hart, the last prior, had procured into the family. Theyer died in the year 1673, and left eight hundred manuscripts, which were purchased by king Charles the Second for the library at St. James's

In the antient record the name of this place is written Brocowardinge, which signifies Broco's Mace, from the Anglo-Saxon popð, or peopð, already explained under Aldefsworth.

The parish is small, consisting of rich arable and pasture ground. A brook runs through it in its course to the Severn, by Sandhurst.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is thus written :

Hugo Lafne holds Brocowardinge in Dudestan hundred of the king. There are five hides. Turchil held it of king Edward. In demean are two plow-tillages, and eight villeins, and six bordars, and a priest, and two free men, and a steward, who have between them all fifteen plow-tillages. There are four servi, and a mill of 2 s. [rent;] a wood one mile long, and half a mile broad. It was worth 6 l. now [only] 100 s. Domesday-book, p. 77.

The greatest part of this parish was in the possession of the Chandos's before the reign of king John; which king, in his charter of confirmation to the priory of Lanthony, recites the particulars given to the canons of that house, among which are the following: The church of Brockwordin given by Robert de Chandos, with half a hide of land and a house on the west side of the church-ard; and the land called Norbroc in Brockwordyn, and two new-plowed grounds which Richard de Brockwordyn gave unto them; and half a yard-land which was Aldred's; and whatever was given by Roger de Chandos the younger to Brockwordyn, and the lands in Brockwordyn which the canons had in exchange for Kynecestre. Appendix, N°. 19.

The priory of Lanthony had free warren in Brockworth 15 & 21 E. 1. and enjoyed this manor till that house was dissolved. After the dissolution, the manor and appurtenances, together with the tithes of the demean, were granted to John Gyes, esq; in exchange for Aspley in Bedfordshire, and for Widdington in Bedfordshire 32 H. 8. and have continued in that family ever since, so that sir William Gyse, baronet, is the present lord of this manor, and has a large estate in the parish; for an account of whose family and arms, see Rendcombe.

The abbey of Gloucester was seized of another manor in this parish. John Deffeld, the abbat, purchased of sir Lawrence de Chandos fifty-five acres of arable land, and several houses in Brockworth, and forty acres of inclosure, and all his land in Bockholt, containing 300 acres, 44 H. 3. which particulars were afterwards conveyed to Arnald de Hamme, who was the next succeeding abbat. See p. 134.

Walter of Gloucester and Hawise his wife held the manor of Brockworth of the abbey of Gloucester at half a knight's-fee, and the manor of Trugge, 5 E. 2. Esq. sub anno. Henry Brockworth was seized of Brockworth, supposed as tenant to the abbey of Gloucester, 22 E. 3. The abbey of Gloucester was seized of it 49 E. 3. At the dissolution of that abbey, the bishoprick of Gloucester was erected, and endowed with the manor of Droiscourt in this parish, which belonged to St. Peter's abbey.

Henry le Drogue was seized of one yard-land in Brockworth, and was attainted of felony 28 E. 1.

HAMLETS. 1. Cooper's-bill, of which already.

2. Elbrug. Walter of Gloucester held the manor of Elbrugg 5 E. 2. Sir Robert de la Mere and Maud his wife were seized of this manor 5 R. 2. Leonard Pool, esq; of Saperton, died seized of the manor of Elbridge 30 H. 8. and livery thereof was granted the same year to his son Giles.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Winchcombe, worth about 20 l. a year. The rectory belonged to the priory of Lanthony, and was granted to Robert earl of Leicester, in exchange for other lands, 16 Eliz. Sir William Gyse is patron and impropiator.

The church is dedicated to St. George. It has a low tower between the body of the church and the chancel.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome marble monument in the chancel for sir Christopher Gyse, baronet, erected by his son sir John Gyse. He died in the year 1670, having been a great promoter of the recovery of the hundred of Dudston and King's-barton from the city of Gloucester to the county at large. Dudston and King's-barton were formerly two distinct hundreds in the county of Gloucester, but had been made part of the In-county, and appurtenant to the city of Gloucester.

First fruits, £ 6 17 0 Synodals, £. 0 2 0
Tenths, — 0 13 8ob. Pentecostals, 0 11 0ob.
Procurations, 0 6 8

Taxes. { The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 106 5 4
Poll-tax — — 1694, — 14 5 0
Land-tax — — 1694, — 111 16 0
The same, at 3s. - 1770, — 83 17 0

About the year 1710 there were 50 houses and about 200 inhabitants, whereof 10 were freeholders; yearly births 8, burials 6. Atkyns. But in a series of ten years from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, there were 84 baptisms and 60 burials; and the present number of inhabitants is 253; so that they bury one in forty-two every year.

B R O M S B O R O W,

LIES in the hundred of Botloe, in the forest division of the county, four miles distant south from Ledbury in Herefordshire, five north from Newent, and twelve northward from Gloucester. One part of it extends to the top of Malvern-hill; and the Glinch, a small brook, runs from hence into into the river Leden. The whole parish is sandy ground.

Lambard was mistaken in the geography of this place, who represents it as standing upon the river Severn, from which, in reality, it is distant eight or ten miles, being nearer the Wye than the Severn. He calls it a town which Etbelsteda, sister of Edward, and daughter of Etbred king of Mercia builded 913. It is famous amonges bystorians for a victorie that Adelstan had there over Anlaf king of Irland, which gatheringe an army of Scottes and Danes, came against Attbelstane with 615 shippes, whom Adelstane metinge at this place, overthrew, so that he reigned ever after peacebly. Of this victorie the Saxons made a Pamphlet or Ryme, which begynneth, Adelstean cyning, &c. Lambard's Eng. and Wales, p. 26.

The name seems to be composed of Bryme, A. S. famous, and beþg, a town, or beopg, a castle, hill, or fortification.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Domesday-book gives the following account of this manor :

'The same Radulfus [de Toden] holds Brunmeberge in Botelau hundred. There are five hides. Earl Herald held it. In demean is one plow-tillage, and eleven villeins, and eight bordars, with fourteen plow-tillages. There is one servus. A wood two miles long and one broad. It was worth 8l. now 100s.' Domesday-book, p. 76.

The manor of Bromsborough was granted to Roger de Toni 6 Joh. John de Penrys was seized of Bromsborow 15 E. 1. William de Whitefeld had free warren in Bromesborow 14 E. 2. Thomas de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, was seized of the manor of Bromberghe 2 H. 4.

This manor afterwards belonged to the Bromwicks, descended from Wido de Bromwick, who resided at a place of that name in Warwickshire, 15 H. 2. and Henry de Castle-Bromwick was grandson to Wido. A younger branch of this family settled here in the reign of king Richard the Second, and sir John Bromwich and Catherine his wife levied a fine of the manor and advowson of Bromsborough, to the use of themselves in special taile, 10 R. 2. and that family continued here 'till the seventeenth century.

This manor afterwards came to the Yates. Walter Yate, esq; was lord of it at the beginning of this century. He died without issue male, whereby John Yate, of Arlingham, esq; his nephew, became possessed of this estate, and died unmarried.

Robert Dobyns, esq; on the death of the above John, assumed the name and arms of Yate, and took all the estates of Walter Yate, in pursuance of his will. He was high-sheriff of this county in 1765, but died before the expiration of that year; leaving two sons and four daughters, by his wife Elizabeth, the daughter of Richard Gorges, of Eye, in the county of Hereford, esq. Robert-Gorges-Dobyns Yate, esq; eldest son of Robert Dobyns, is the present lord of this manor, and proprietor of the estates of the said Walter Yate. He hath a very handsome, new-built seat, called Bromsborough Place, and a good estate in this parish. His arms are, Quarterly, 1. Azure, a fess Or, in chief two mullets of the second, for Yate. 2. Azure, a chevron between three annulets Or, for Dobyns. 3. Gules, a chevron between ten crosses pattée, six above and four below, argent, for Berkeley. 4. Gules, a stag's head caboshed Or, for

QUO VIRTUS VOCAT.

John Hawkeslow and his wife levied a fine of lands in Bromsborough, to the use of John Machin and his wife, 13 H. 7. Mrs. Nanfan, widow of John Nanfan, esq; has a good house called Brownsend, and a good estate in this parish. The Grove-house and estate is the property of Mr. William Brooke.

H A M L E T. Woodend is a small hamlet in this parish, consisting of two houses.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the forest deanery, worth 140l. a year. Robert-Gorges-Dobyns Yate, esq; is patron; the reverend Mr. Hayward the present incumbent.

The glebe consists of about sixty acres.

The church hath a small tower at the west end; it is dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Monument and Inscription.

There is an inscription in the chancel for Ricinus Yate, esq; a branch of the Arlingham family, who married Catherine, daughter of Thomas Wall, of Lintridge, esq. He died in 1690. Beneath is this apostrophe :

Nunc Amice spectator, et quantillum contra Mortem valeant ista mortalia, Opes, Robur, Ingenium, serio nec fero mediter.

First Fruits, £.	7	15	0	Synodals, £.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	—	0	15	6	Pentecostals, 0	1	4
Procurations, -	0	7	6

Benefactions.

Two cottages, a garden, and five acres of arable land in one piece, one acre called Church-meadow, another called Gooseacre, a piece of arable in Brookman's-field, another piece in a field called Mugles, another piece at Woodend-street, and another piece intermixt with Mr. Yate's land, are given for the use of the church.

Mrs. Catherine Yate gave 40l. a year, and Walter Yate, esq; gave 30l. a year, to the poor of this parish.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	74	8	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	23	11	0
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	82	8	4
		The same, at 3s. — 1770, —	61	16	3

At the beginning of this century there were 80 houses and about 80 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 7 were freeholders; yearly births 3, burials 2. Atkyns. In the year 1770 there were 138 inhabitants.

BROCKRUP, or BROCKTHORP.

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Dudston and King's-barton, six miles distant north from Stroud, three west from Painswick, and four south-east from Gloucester. It is a small parish, consisting almost intirely of pasture land.

Dopp, ðnep, or ðnop, in the Anglo-Saxon, signifies a street, or village. This place, as I conjecture, was the property of some person, in the Saxon times, whose name it bears; and it might be either Bros, Broc, or Bruc, as it is differently written in the records; but I know no authority for writing it, as I have seen it, Brookrup.

I find nothing of singular note here; but Corbet relates a circumstance that happened to the parliament's troops at this place, which I shall next mention.

Two thousand men of the king's forces, after the siege of Gloucester, marching from Tewkesbury to Painswick, the governor Massie sallied out of Gloucester with two hundred musketers, and a hundred horse, and marched to the top of Brockthorp-hill, there to expect the enemy, whom he found divided into three bodies, and himself born down by the multitude; for whilst two parties faced him, the third stole down a hollow lane, and had almost surrounded him unawares, by the negligence of the scouts; so that our whole body was brought into great danger, driven by a sudden and confused retreat, and the governor himself left deeply engaged: Yet most of our men got off, being preserved by the gallantry of a few resolved men, that stood in the breach; and of them captain George Massie striving to retard the pursuit, grappled with three together, hand to hand, received a very sore wound in the head, and was happily rescued by a serjeant of the company. Of ours, two lieutenants and sixteen private soldiers were taken prisoners; the rest in disorder ran down a steep, through a rough and narrow lane, and recovered a house at the foot of the hill, where a party was left to make good the retreat, and the enemy durst not pursue; by which means all the bottom was preserved from spoil.' Military Government of Gloucester.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

This estate stands under the title Terra Regis, Domesday-book, where it is said,

'In Brostrop Aluric held three virgates of land. He had here two plow-tillages and one villein, three bordars and four servi. These five estates [Hersefel, Athelai, Sanher, Hersecome, and Brostrop] earl Herald took away after the death of king Edward; and Roger de Lurei put them to farm for 46*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*' Dom. Book, p. 67.

Adeline, the widow of Roger de Ivori, gave this manor to the abbey of Gloucester 1103, and king Stephen confirmed it by his grant, wherein she is called Adeline de Ibreo, occasioned by translating the name Ivori into Latin. She was daughter of Hugh de Grantmaifnil.

Elias Giffard and Ala his wife, and their son Elias, granted to the monks of Gloucester, by deed, which they laid upon the altar, all their land in Bruckrup, estimated at half a hide, and half a yard-land, free from all customs, except dane-gelt due to the king, 21 H. 1.

Roger the First, and Hugh his heir, gave to the church of St. Peter at Gloucester eight acres of land near to Brockrup-court, whilst Hameline was abbat; which grant was confirmed by Gilbert de Myners, about the end of the reign of king Stephen.

The abbey of Gloucester was seized of the manor of Brockrup 17 E. 3. which was held of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, and of Joan his wife, 46 E. 3. and continued in possession of it 'till that house was dissolved. After the dissolution of the abbey, the manor of Brockrup was granted to the bishoprick of Gloucester 33 H. 8. and was confirmed to it 6 E. 6. to which it now belongs.

Roger le Rus was seized of three yard-lands in Bruckrup, which belonged to the Bertune of Gloucester, 22 E. 1. There were lands and a portion of tithes in this parish, which belonged to the priory of Lanthony. The lands were granted to Richard Andrews and Nicholas Temple, in trust for others, 35 H. 8. The tithes were granted to sir William Ryder 17 Jac.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage in the deanery of Gloucester, worth about 55*l.* a year. The dean and chapter of Gloucester are patrons; the reverend Mr. John Newton incumbent. This living has been augmented with queen Anne's bounty, and a legacy bequeathed by one Mr. Hodges.

The impropriation belongs to the dean and chapter of Gloucester, worth about 50*l.* a year. It pays 1*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year to the vicar, and sixteen throw of wheat, sixteen throw of beans, and thirteen bushels and a half of pease. In the taxation of ecclesiastical preferments, 19 E. 1. 'tis said, Eccles. de Brockthorp 2 marc.

The church is dedicated to St. Swithin. It is small, with a little, low, embattled tower at the west end.

First fruits, l.	7	17	6	Synodals, l.	0	2	0
Tenths, —	0	15	9	Pentecostals	0	0	40 b.
Procurations,	0	0	0

Benefaction.

Forty shillings a year are allotted to this parish out of the charity of Mr. Cox of Sandhurst.

Tax.	{ The Royal Aid in 1692, l.	93	12	0
	{ Poll-tax — 1694, —	6	4	0
	{ Land-tax — 1694, —	103	4	0
	{ The same at 3 s. 1770, —	77	18	0

In the year 1562, there were 16 householders in this parish.—At the beginning of this century there there were 40 houses and 200 inhabitants, whereof 5 were freeholders; yearly births 5, burials 4. Atkyns. But there are now only 107 inhabitants, so that population declines.

BUCKLAND.

THIS parish lies in the lower division of the hundred of Kiftsgate, five miles distant west from Campden, six south from Evesham, and twenty-three eastward from Gloucester.

The church and houses are situate on an easy acclivity, at the foot of the great ridge of hills which parts the vale from the cotswold country, with an aspect towards the west. The parish consists of good arable, pasture, and wood-lands.

The village obtained its name from the tenure of the land by a deed in writing, which was antiently called Bocland: So other land, which was not held by writing, was called Folcland, as having no other evidence than the testimony of the folk or people. See p. 65.

Kynred, king of the Mercians, gave the manor of Bocland to the monastery of Gloucester, when Edburg was abbat. Domesday-book gives the following particulars:

'The same church [St. Peter of Glowec.] holds Bocheland in Wideles hundred. There are ten hides. In demean are three plow-tillages, and twenty-two villeins, and six bordars, with twelve plow-tillages. There are eight servi, and ten acres of meadow. It was worth 3*l.* but is now worth 9*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 71.

The abbey of Gloucester held this manor 17 E. 3. and continued possessed of it 'till the dissolution. It was then granted to sir Richard Gresham, lord mayor of London, in exchange for lands in Yorkshire, 38 H. 8. Sir John Thynne married, to his first wife, Christian, daughter of sir Richard Gresham,^d and sister and heir to sir Thomas Gresham, who founded and endowed Gresham-college, and built the Royal Exchange in London; with whom he had the manor of Buckland, which has ever since continued in that family. Livery of this manor was granted to John Thynne, son of sir John, 22 Eliz. James Thynne, esq; was lord of it, and left it to his nephew Thomas Thynne, esq; son of Henry. Lord viscount Weymouth is the present lord of this manor, and has a seat near the church, and a large estate in this parish. His lordship's arms, &c. are given under Bagendon.

HAMLET. Laverton, a tithing in this parish, lies about a mile from the church. It has always acknowledged the same proprietor as Buckland. There was a chapel in this hamlet, which is now converted into a poor-house.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Campden, worth 150*l.* a year. The abbat and convent of Gloucester were patrons, and presented to it in the year 1515. Lord Weymouth is patron, the reverend Mr. John Martin incumbent.

The tithes of Buckland and Laverton belonged to the abbey of Winchcombe, and were granted to sir Thomas Seymour 1 E. 6. The rector hath one part of the corn-tithes, and lord Weymouth the other part. The demesns pay no tithes. Mr. James Thynne, in the year 1704, gave a piece of land in the field, called Hallier's quarter, containing forty-one lands, to the rector and his successors, and discharged the same from tithe, in compensation for the loss which the rectory might sustain, by reason of his having inclosed some tillage-lands, which paid tithe to the rector, and converted them to pasture.

The church, which hath an aile on the north side, is covered with lead. It has a handsome embattled tower at the west end, with six bells, a clock, and a set of chimes in it. In the east window of the chancel are three compartments of painted glass. The subject seems to be a representation of a manor-court. The abbat of Gloucester, who was lord of the manor, is distinguished by his mitre, and attended by several religious persons in monkish habits; and the steward is known by his purse hanging at his girdle. In the south window are the arms of the abbey, Azure, a sword in pale, pointing downwards, pomeled and hilted Or, between two keys in saltire of the second.

The parsonage house is a good one, built about the beginning of the sixteenth century. The hall is large and lofty. There are two pannels of painted glass in one window, well preserved. In a shield is a tun or cask, with a graft or branch of an apple-tree issuing out of it, designed as a rebus for the name, as it is written below in antient characters, Willm Grafton, rector, who probably built the house. There are also the same arms with those in the window of the church, and several labels inscribed In noie Ihu, i. e. In nomine Jesu.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome marble monument against the south wall of the chancel, with this inscription:

Here lyeth the body of JAMES THYNNE, Esq; Son of Sir HENRY FREDERICK THYNNE, Bar. and MARY Daughter of the Lord Keeper COVENTRYE. A Man of Exemplary Vertue and Charity, beloved and valued by his Equals, blest and pray'd for by the Poor. After some Legacies to his Relations, his whole large Personal Estate he bequeathed to poor uses, and his Lands to his Nephew THOMAS THYNNE, who erected this Monument in gratitude to his Memory. He dyed March 15th 1708-9, Aged 66.

Over the table are these arms, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Barry of ten pieces Or and sable. 2d and 3d, Argent, a lion rampant gules.

^d Sir Robert Atkyns's accounts of this intermarriage, under Buckland and Kempford, are inconsistent. I have followed

On a raised tomb, in the church-yard, is this inscription :

Coll. BERNARD GRANVILLE Son to Bernard Granville, Esq; and Grandson to Sir Bevill Granville who was killed in Lanfdown Fight, lyes here interred. He departed the fifty third year of his Age, on the eighth of December, 1723. There is a scutcheon on the tomb, Party per pale, 1. Three clarions. Obliterated. — The tomb was inclosed with rails, but now tomb and all are fallen to decay.

First fruits	£.29	6	8	Synodals	£.	0	2	0
Tenths	—	2	18	8	Pentecostals	0	1	10b.
Procurations	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Mr. James Thynne erected and endowed a free school at Laverton in this parish, for reading, writing, and arithmetick. The master is appointed by the feoffees. He receives 20*l.* a year, and has a house, which is kept in repair for him. This school, with that at Campden of this gentleman's foundation, is supported by an estate at Staunton in this county, vested in feoffees, and now lets at 100*l.* a year.

Mr. Maltby, formerly rector of this parish, who died in the year 1630, gave 200*l.* to the use of the poor.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£.	167	16	0
		Poll-tax — 1692,	—	31	15	0
		Land-tax — 1694,	—	160	4	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770,	—	112	14	60b.

At the beginning of this century there were 100 houses and 250 inhabitants in this parish, whereof three were freeholders; yearly births 7, burials 6. Atkyns. But it appears by the parish register, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were 71 baptisms and 9 burials; and in a like series, from 1760 to 1769, there were 100 baptisms and 57 burials; and there are now about 316 inhabitants. So that population is increasing in this parish, where the proportion of the inhabitants to the average annual burials, is as 55 to 1.

BULLY.

THIS parish lies in the forest division of the county, within the hundred of the dutchy Lancaster, seven miles distant eastward from Mitchel-Dean, seven southward from Newent, and westward from Gloucester. It is a very small parish, consisting of good pasture and arable land.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

Walter Balistarius holds of the king Bulelege Westberie hundred. There are four hides taxed. Tovi held it of king Edward. In dean are two plow-tillages, and four villeins and six bordars with four plow-tillages. There are four servi, and ten acres of meadow. In Glowec. the burgage paid 18*d.* It was worth 60*s.* and now worth 40*s.* Domesday-book, p. 77.

It does not appear who was the immediate successor to the above Walter; but Juliana, Annabel, Joan, and Lucy de Musgrofe levied a fine of lands in Bully and Ludescot, to the use of Walter de Musgrofe, 43 H. 3. William de Musgrofe was seized of Bullelegh 49 H. 3. John de Mone-muthe was seized thereof 9 E. 1. Roger de Mortimer, earl of March, held the manor of Bully 34 E. 3.

John Elliford held Bully by the fourth part of a knight's-fee, of Roger de Mortimer, 22 R. 2. Isabella, his widow, survived him, and was married to Richard de la Moor, whom she likewise survived, and died seized of the manor of Bully 9 H. 5. John Elliford was seized thereof 3 H. 6. John Milborn, esq; and Elizabeth his wife, were seized of the manor of Bully 15 H. 6.

Mr. Morgan, Mr. Burges, and Mr. Webb were joint lords of this manor when sir Robert Atkyns compiled his account of it. Nicholas Hyett, esq; is the present lord of it. See his arms under Hunt's-court in Badgworth.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is considered as a chapel to Churcham, in the deanery of the forest. The dean and chapter of Gloucester are impropiators. The small tithes are worth about 5*l.* a year.

The church is a plain building.

Pentecostals,	—	£.	0	0	2	0b.
Land-tax, at 3 s. 1770,	£.	37	2	3

At the beginning of this century there were 20 houses and about 85 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 4 were freeholders; yearly births 3, burials 3. Atkyns. But there are at present only 51 inhabitants.

C A M.

THIS parish lies in the vale, in the hundred of Berkeley, one mile north from Dursley, five east from Berkeley, and fourteen south-westward from Gloucester. Some part of the turnpike-road from Dursley to Berkeley runs through it.

Here are no antiquities whatever. The soil is various; in the lower part of the parish it is rich, and produces some excellent cyder, and as good corn and cheese as any in the famous hundred of Berkeley.

The river, which runs through the village, rises at Owlpen or Ewlpn, and passing by Dursley, where it is considerably augmented by the water of that place, takes its course through this parish, and Slimbridge, and empties itself into the Severn at Frampton-pill. It feeds no kind of fish except eels, on account of the great quantity of dye-stuff thrown into it. The course of it is crooked, like an arch or bow, wherefore it was called the Cam, which, in the British language, signifies crooked; and the village took its name from the river.

The poor are employ'd in the clothing business, by masters at Dursley and Uley; but about thirty years ago, there were three or four considerable clothiers residing in this parish, who are since dead, or have declined business.

Great numbers of petrifications of the bivalve kind are found at Newnham-quarry, in the road from hence to Berkeley.

Stinchcombe antiently belonged to this parish.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

At the time of the Conquest, this was a member, or Berewick, of the great lordship of Berkeley, of which, the whole account from Domesday-book is inserted among the particulars of that place and lordship. There were then, it is said, 'in Camma' six hides, and eleven other hides.' p. 271.

Other records, of the following dates, shew the successive lords of this manor.

John Berkeley, and Maurice his son, were seized of the manor of Cam, with free warren, 36 H. 3. and Maurice Berkeley died seized of it 9 E. 1.

Ralph de Cam was seized thereof 16 E. 1. But as it was common, in early times, to call a part by the name of the whole, it is most likely that this was only a manor within the manor of Cam; for Thomas de Berkeley was seized of Cam 15 E. 2. & 18 E. 3. and Thomas lord Berkeley held it 35 E. 3. Maurice, son of Thomas lord Berkeley, was seized thereof 42 E. 3. Thomas Berkeley held the same 6 R. 2. as did Catherine his wife, in the 9th year of that reign. Sir Thomas de Berkeley, and Margaret his wife, were seized of the manor of Cam 5 H. 5. Sir John Berkeley held the same 6 H. 6. and Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, in right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas lord Berkeley, died seized of Cam 17 H. 6. Sir Maurice Berkeley of Beverstone was seized of this manor 38 & 39 H. 6. & 14 E. 4.

During the time of the last mentioned dates, and for a long time afterwards, there were great commotions and law-suits about the lordship of Berkeley, as already related, wherefore the records, during part of that dispute, are imperfect as to this manor, and some others belonging to the Berkeley family.

William lord Berkeley, created earl-marshal and earl of Nottingham, and Anne his wife, levied a fine of this manor to the use of king Henry the Seventh and his heirs male, 3 H. 7. whose heirs male ending at the death of king Edward the Sixth, livery of Cam was granted to Henry lord Berkeley 1 Mar. and the present earl of Berkeley is the lord of this manor.

Edmund Basset held one messuage, sixty acres of land, and three acres of meadow in Cam 4 E. 2. John Serjeant was seized of lands in Cam 30 E. 3. William Warner levied a fine of lands in Cam, to the use of William Harding, 18 H. 7.

Uptborp, Albmead's, and Hockerhill are places in Upper-Cam; Til's-down, Clinger, and Bower's-lye are in Lower-Cam.

Lorrenge-farm was given, by Thomas lord Berkeley, in the reign of king Henry the Third, to the priory of Leonard-Stanley, of which the abbat of Gloucester had the patronage; and the monks of that abbey procured it to be considered as belonging to the parish of Stanley; and it has been ever since, and still is, assessed to the relief of the poor of that parish, whereas the land-tax of the farm goes in aid of the parish of Cam.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Dursley. Roger lord Berkeley gave this church, with its appurtenances, to the priory of Stanley St. Leonard, in the year 1146, and gave the patronage of that priory to the abbey of St. Peter at Gloucester.

After the dissolution of the abbey of Gloucester, the rectory and advowson of the vicarage, and the chapel, were granted to the bishop of Gloucester and his successors, 33 H. 8. and confirmed 6 E. 6. So that the bishop of Gloucester is patron and impropiator. The bishop pays to the vicar, out of the impropriation, 60*l.* a year in money, which was so settled in the year 1660. The glebe and house are worth about 10*l.* a year. The impropriation is in lease to Mr. Matthew Estcourt.

The church, dedicated to St. George, consists of the nave, and an aisle on each side. It has a large, high, embattled tower, with five bells, at the west end. The statue of St. George, carved in wood, stood in the porch of the church, and was taken from thence by a clothier, and carried, in his waggon, to Colebrook, in the road to London, which gave name to the George-inn in that place. Atkins.

The church is called Beatæ Mariæ de Cam, in some old deeds in the reigns of Henry the Fourth, and Henry the Fifth.

First fruits	£ 6 13 4	Synodals	£. 0 2 0
Tenths	— 0 13 4	Pentecostals	0 0 7 ^{ad}
Procurations	0 6 8

There is a meeting-house of protestant dissenters at this place, endowed with 20*l.* a year.

Benefactions.

There are several small tenements, and little parcels of land, given to the poor. The church house, and a ground called the Almshouse-hay and some other small tenements, are given to the use of the church.

Mr. Throgmorton Trotman, a native of this place, and merchant in London, in the year 1661, gave 30*l.* a year, to be paid by the company of haberdashers in London, for the use of the poor.

Mr. Christopher Woodward, of Bristol, grants a rent-charge of 20*s.* a year on lands in Henbury half for a sermon on new-year's day, and half to the poor.

Mr. Richard Hicks of Cam, by his will, in 1710, gave 120*l.* for the use of the poor, with which, and the interest thereof, making together 200*l.* two closes, in the parish of Berkeley, have been purchased, worth 10*l.* a year.

Mr. Edward Trotman, and his sisters Elianor and Margaret, by their deed in 1727, gave 10*l.* a year for ever; 6*l.* whereof for six poor widows, and the remaining 4*l.* to be distributed in bread to the poor.

Mrs. Frances Hopton of Cam, in the year 1737, left an estate of 50*l.* a year, to found a free-school, for the educating and clothing of ten boys and ten girls of this parish, 'till they are fourteen years old. There is a house for the master and mistress.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 277	6	0
		Poll-tax — — 1694, —	42	9
		Land-tax — — 1694, —	246	15
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	231	6

At the beginning of this century, there were 150 houses and about 800 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 30 were freeholders; yearly births 18, burials 16. Atkyns. The average of baptisms entered in the parish register for seven years, is now 23, of burials 21; and by a survey of the inhabitants in the year 1767, they were found to be 1070. There are some baptised at the meeting-house, but few buried there; so that the proportion of the inhabitants to the annual burials, is nearly as 50 to 1; which shews it to be a very healthy place, considering the situation of it in the vale.

C A M P D E N

LIES in the lower part of the hundred of Kiftgate, about twenty miles distant east from Tewkesbury, ten north from Stow, and twenty-eight north-eastward from Gloucester; seated in a pleasant, fertile bottom, surrounded with hills and hanging woods. A small brook runs from hence into the Stour, and so into the Avon, a mile below Stratford.

It is sometimes called Chipping-Campden, to distinguish it from Broad Campden, a hamlet in the same parish. The prænomen denotes it to be a market-town, from the Saxon Cyppan, to traffick. For the other part of the name, Lamp, in the same language, signifies a fight, or battle; and den, a woody place in a valley. Agreeably to this etymology, there is a tradition, that a great battle was fought in the hamlet of Barrington, between the Mercians and West-Saxons; and there is a ridge in that place still called Battle-bridge. The camp of the Mercians is said to have been at Wiltsey, adjoining to this parish, and that of the Saxons upon Meen-hill, about three miles off. See Mickleton.

The town of Campden, as John Castor asserts, is also famous in antiquity for being the place of congress of all the kings of the Saxon heptarchy, who met here in the year 689, to consult of making war and peace with the Britons. It might, at that time, be a place of considerable note. At present, it consists of one long street, with a market-house in the middle, built by sir Baptist Hicks, viscount Campden, whose arms are on the north side of it. The market is held on Wednesday.

The town is an antient borough and corporation, but sends no members to parliament. The burgeses obtained their present charter 3 Jac. by which they are made a body corporate and politic, and have a common seal. The corporation consists of fourteen capital burgeses, (out of whom two bailiffs are chosen annually, on the Wednesday before Michaelmas,) and twelve inferior burgeses. They elect a steward, who is to be a person learned in the law, and is amovable at pleasure.

There is a court of record, every fourth Friday in the year, before the bailiffs and steward of the borough, or his deputy, where they hold pleas of trespass, of debt, contract, fraud, on the case, and all personal actions arising within the borough, its liberties and precincts, not exceeding the value of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* And they have two serjeants, with silver maces, to execute processes.

The corporation has power of making laws respecting the borough, and of inflicting penalties by fine and amercement. The capital burgeses fill up vacancies in the common council out of the burgeses.

There are four annual fairs, i. e. on St. Andrew's day, Ash-wednesday, St. George's day, and St. James's day. The profits of the two former belong to the corporation; of the two latter to the lord of the manor.—See the charter of incorporation, Appendix, No. 27.

Mr. Robert Dover, who lived in the reign of king James the First, became a very popular man in this country, by his hospitality and generosity. He instituted an annual meeting for the practice of all sorts of manly exercises, and distributed prizes to such as excelled in them. These exercises and their patron are the subject of a small collection of verses, intituled Annalia Dubrensis, written by the best poets of that age. And there is still a meeting of young people upon Dover's-hill, about a mile from Campden, every Thursday in Whitfun-week. See p. 24.

Sir Baptist Hicks, the first viscount Campden, built a noble house near the church, the outside of which cost 29,000*l.* and in the lanthorn, on the top of the house, he ordered lights to be set up in dark nights for the benefit of travellers. This house was, without any great reason, burnt down by the king's party in the great civil war, lest it should be made a garrison by the parliament.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book it is expressed after this manner:
 'The same earl [Hugh] holds Campedene in
 'Witelai hundred. Earl Harold held it. There
 'are fifteen hides taxed. In demean are six plow-
 'tillages,

'tillages, and fifty villeins, and eight bordars, with 'twenty-one plow-tillages. There are twelve
'servi, and two mills of 6*s.* 2*d.* and two ancillæ.
'It was worth 30*l.* now only 20*l.*' D. B. p. 73.

The records of the following dates shew the descent of the manor. Guinar Briton was seized of all Campden 1 Joh. The archbishop of Canterbury was seized of Campden 6 Joh. Sir Ralph de Somery, a great baron, whose daughter Joan was married to Thomas lord Berkeley, died seized of Campden 1 H. 3. Roger, earl of Chester and Lincoln, was seized of Campden, with markets and fairs, 2 H. 3.

One Serlo died seized of the manor of Campden, and Agatha the wife of Henry —, and Juliana the wife of William de Stratton, were his sisters and coheiresses. They and their husbands assign the manor of Campden to Anne the widow of Serlo, who had then married Hugh de Stratton, 4 H. 3.

Roger de Somery held Campden and Segleigh, and had a grant of free warren and markets 31 H. 3. & 1 E. 1. But a charter was granted to Hugh de Grundenel, and other burgessees of Campden, 35 H. 3. and there was another grant, the same year, to these burgessees, to be exempted from tolls in markets and fairs.

Ralph Cromwell and partners held Campden 1 E. 1. John Strangeways was seized thereof 4 E. 1. John de Ludloe, and Isabel his wife, held a moiety of the manor of Campden; and lady Mabel de Sudely held a fourth part of the said manor, and Ralph, son of Ralph de Cromwell, held the other fourth part, by the grant of John le Strange, 15 E. 1. John de Ludloe held Campden 23 E. 1.

Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford, was lord of Campden, and had the advowson of the chapel of St. Catherine, of which he died seized 24 E. 1. and Joan his widow held it 35 E. 1. It was held of the earldom of Chester, as the eighth part of a knight's fee. Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, son of the forementioned Gilbert, died seized of Campden, and of the advowson of the church, 8 E. 2.

The manor of Campden, with the advowson of the chapel, were held of Hugh de Audley earl of Gloucester, and Margaret his wife, 21 E. 3. William de Ludloe was seized of a moiety of the manor of Campden 23 E. 3. Richard de Stafford was seized of Campden, and had a grant of a fair therein 34 E. 3. Thomas de Ludloe held the manor of Campden, with the advowson of the chapel of St. Catherine, 50 E. 3. Sir Richard Stafford died seized of a moiety of the manor of Campden, and the advowson of the church, 4 R. 2. Thomas de Ludloe, of Campden, held Campden 16 R. 2. Maud, the widow of sir Richard Stafford, was seized of the manor of Campden 1 H. 4.

William Grevile, of Campden, was seized of Campden 3 H. 4. Edmund Ludloe held Campden 11 H. 4. Edward Stafford, bishop of Exeter, was seized thereof 7 H. 5. Thomas Stafford, esq. was seized of a moiety of the manor of Campden, with the advowson of the chapel, 4 H. 6.

Margaret, the widow of sir Baldwin Strange, was seized of Ludloe's, within the manor of Campden, 10 H. 6. by which it appears, that the estate held by the Ludloes, called Campden in some of the above records, was a part of the manor, or a manor within the manor of Campden. William Molyneux, esq. was seized of the manor of Chipping Campden 6 E. 4. Sir John Burgh held a manor of the name of Campden 11 E. 4. and John Molyneux, esq. held Chipping Campden 13 E. 4.

The manor of Campden, and the advowson of the chapel of St. Catherine, descended to Cicely, the wife of — Fitzherbert: Her second husband was John Jollyn, who, with his wife, levied a fine of them to the use of Thomas Molineux and others 8 H. 7. Eustace Fitzherbert was Cicely's son and heir, who died seized thereof 9 H. 8.

Sir John Russel died seized of the manor of Chipping Campden 4 Mar. and was succeeded by sir Thomas Russel, his son and heir. This manor afterwards came to the crown, and was granted, by queen Elizabeth, to sir Thomas Smith, whose ancestor was an alderman of Worcester. Anthony Smith, esq. was lord of this manor in the year 1608.

It was purchased, soon after, by sir Baptist Hicks, who was created viscount Campden 4 C. 1.

Edward lord Noel having married Juliana, eldest daughter and coheir of Baptist viscount Campden, obtained a grant of that honour to himself and his heirs male, on failure of male issue of the said viscount Campden, at whose death he succeeded to the title, and to the manor of Campden. Mary, the other daughter, was married, first, to sir Charles Morison, of Caishobery in Hertfordshire, and afterwards to sir John Couper, of Winburn in Dorsetshire. This Edward viscount Campden was active in the royal cause, at the breaking out of the civil war, and dying at Oxford, 1643, was carried to Campden, and lies buried there, under a sumptuous monument erected over him by his lady. He left issue, by the above lady, two sons, Baptist and Henry; and two daughters, Elizabeth, married to sir Erasmus de la Fountain, and Penelope, to John viscount Chaworth.

Baptist viscount Campden succeeded his father in title and estate. He raised and maintained, at his own cost, a troop of horse, and a company of foot, for the service of king Charles the First, and paid, to the sequestrators, 9,000*l.* composition for his estate, besides 150*l.* a year, settled on the ministers of the times. He married first, Anne Fielding, second daughter to William earl of Denbigh, by whom he had three children, who died in their infancy; secondly, Anne daughter of sir Robert Lovet, widow of Edward earl of Bath, by whom he had one son still-born. His third wife was Hester, one of the four daughters and coheiresses of Thomas lord Wotton, by whom he had two sons, Edward and Henry; and four daughters, Mary, afterwards countess of Northampton; Juliana, wife of William lord Allington; Hester, who died an infant; and Elizabeth, married to Charles earl of Berkeley. His fourth wife was Elizabeth Bertie, eldest daughter of Montague earl of Lindsey, by whom he had six sons, Lindsey, Baptist, John, James, and two still-born; and three daughters, Catherine, married to John earl of Rutland; Bridget, and Martha-Penelope. His lordship dying in 1682, was buried at Exton in Rutlandshire.

Edward Noel, who was advanced to the degree of a baron, by the title of lord Noel of Titchfield, in his father's life-time, 33 C. 2. succeeded his father at his death, and was created earl of Gainsborough the same year. He married lady Elizabeth, eldest daughter and coheir of Thomas-Wriothesley, earl of Northampton, by whom he had issue Wriothesley-Baptist, his successor, and four daughters; lady Frances, married to Simon lord Digby; lady Jane, married to William lord Digby, brother and heir to the said Simon lord Digby; lady Elizabeth, married to Richard Norton, esq; and lady Juliana, who died unmarried.

Wriothesley-Baptist, second earl of Gainsborough, married Catherine, eldest daughter of Fulke Grevile, fifth lord Brooke, and departing this life in 1690, left issue only two daughters; lady Elizabeth, married to Henry Bentinck, first duke of Portland; and lady Rachael, wedded to Henry Somers, second duke of Beaufort. — On his lordship's failing of issue male, the honours, and this estate, descended to Baptist Noel, son of Baptist, second son of Baptist viscount Campden, by his fourth wife, Elizabeth, daughter of the earl of Lindsey.

Which Baptist, third earl of Gainsborough, having married lady Dorothy Manners, second daughter of John, first duke of Rutland, died of the small pox in 1714, leaving issue three sons, Baptist, his successor; John, and James who died unmarried; and three daughters, lady Catherine; lady Susannah, married to Anthony earl of Shaftesbury; and lady Mary, who died young.

Baptist, the eldest son, succeeded as fourth earl of Gainsborough. He married Miss Elizabeth Chapman, by whom he had issue three sons, Baptist, his successor; Henry, now earl of Gainsborough; and Charles, who died young; and nine daughters, lady Elizabeth; lady Jane, married to Gerrard-Anne Edwards, of Welham in Leicestershire, esq; lady Juliana, wedded to George Edwards, lord Carbery; lady Penelope, who died young; lady Anne; lady Lucy, married to Horatio Mann, esq; lady Mary; lady Susannah; and lady Sophia. His lordship died March 21, 1750-51, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

Baptist, fifth earl of Gainsborough, who being on his travels, died a bachelor at Geneva, in 1759; upon which, his only surviving brother,

Henry, born in 1743, became the sixth earl of Gainsborough, and is the present lord of the manor of Campden.

His lordship's titles are Earl of Gainsborough, Viscount Campden of Campden, Baron Noel of Ridlington, Baron Hicks of Ilmington, Baron Noel of Titchfield, and Baronet. ARMS. Or, fretty gules; a canton ermine. CREST. On a wreath, a buck at graze argent, attired Or. SUPPORTERS. Two bulls argent, armed, maned, and ungued sable. MOTTO. TOUT BIEN OU RIEN.

Mr. William Harrison, steward to this family, was supposed to be murdered in 1676, and three persons were executed for the murder; but he returned to Campden about two years afterwards, and sir Thomas Overbury published an account of that mysterious affair.

H A M L E T S. 1. Barrington, in which the church stands. Henry Stapleton, gentleman, was seized of a virgate of land, a barn, and a close

* The following is the substance of sir Thomas Overbury's account.

Mr. William Harrison went from Campden to Charringworth, about three miles off, to receive his lady's rents, and not returning at his usual time, his wife sent their servant, John Perry, to see for him; and neither of them returning that night, Mr. Harrison's son went in search of them, and found Perry, who said his master was not at Charringworth. Soon after they were informed that a hat, band, and comb had been found by a poor woman leasing in the field, which proved to be Mr. Harrison's; and as the band was bloody, and the hat cut, he was supposed to be murdered. Search was made for the body, but in vain. Suspicion arising against Perry, he was examined by a magistrate, and tho' nothing appeared against him, was kept in custody several days. It was said, however, that he told some persons at a tinker had killed his master; and others, that a gentleman's servant had done it. And being taken before the magistrate again, he affirmed that his mother and brother had robbed his master and killed him, and that it was a matter previously agreed upon between him and them, relating a great variety of probable circumstances concerning the murder, such as where they had thrown the body, &c.

Joan and Richard Perry, the mother and brother, were apprehended and examined, who both denied the charge; but John persisted that he had spoke the truth; however, the body could not be found any where.

It is remarkable, that returning from the justice's, Richard Perry, who walked a good distance behind John, pulling a handkerchief out of his pocket, dropped a piece of inkle, with a Reeve-knot at one end. This being shewed to John, he declared it was the string his brother strangled his master with.

At the next Lent assizes, they were tried upon an indictment for the supposed murder, and pleaded not guilty; but they were all convicted upon John's confession before the magistrate, and a few days after, were brought to the place of execution on Broadway-hill, in sight of Campden. The mother and Richard were first executed, professing their innocence, and beseeching John to declare what he knew. But he, with a dogged, sullen carriage, told the people he was not obliged to confess to them; yet immediately before his death, said, he knew nothing of his master's death, nor what became of him; but they were all executed, and John was hanged in chains.

Execution thus done upon those unhappy wretches, it must strike the reader with horror and amazement to be informed that the same Mr. Harrison returned to Campden, about two years afterwards, alive and well, and gave an account of his having been taken away, by three persons on horseback, as he was returning from Charringworth: They travelled by night 'till they came to Deal, where he was put on board a ship, and after being at sea about six weeks, he, and others in the same condition, were landed in the Turkish dominions, and disposed of to different persons. It was his lot to be chosen by an old physician, who died in something more than a year afterwards. From thence he escaped by a ship that was bound to Portugal, and so returned to England, where he was received by his wife and family as one risen from the dead.

formerly belonging to the chantry of St. Catherine, situate in Byrrington in the parish of Campden, which Thomas Smythe purchased of him, and died seized thereof 41 Eliz. as appears by the escheator's inquisition in that year.

2. Westington and Comb. Henry de Faunton was seized of the manor of Westington 7 E. 2. Robert Cotel was seized of the manor of Combe, and Alice, his wife, surviving him, had the third part of this manor assigned to her in dower, 9 E. 3. Adam de Hermington held the manor of Comb near Campden, 16 E. 3. Combe-grange, alias Combe, in the parish of Campden, formerly belonging to the abbey of Bordeley, was granted, by the crown, to Thomas Smyth and Katherine his wife, to be held by the service of one fortieth part of a knight's fee, 7 E. 6.

3. Broad Campden. Here was formerly a chapel, which was afterwards turned into a barn. Sir Christopher Savage died seized of the manors of Broad Campden, Buryngton, and Westington 4 H. 8. and livery of these manors was granted to Christopher Savage, his son, 12 H. 8. Thomas Boner^f purchased a moiety of the manor of Campden, and of divers other lands in Campden, Buryngton, and Westington, of Christopher Savage 37 H. 8. and sold the same to Thomas Smyth. A messuage in Broad Campden, formerly belonging to the abbey of Tewkesbury, was granted to James Gunter and William Lewis 37 H. 8. James Gunter, and Anne his wife, levied a fine of the manor of Broad Campden, to the use of sir Roger Cholmondeley, lord chief-baron of the court of exchequer, 1 E. 6. and Roger Cholmondeley levied a fine of the same, to William Walthorn, 5 Marie. Three yard-lands,^f and two closes, and divers other lands in Broad Campden, late belonging to the chantry of St. Trinity in the church of Campden, were granted, by king Edward the Sixth, to Henry Stapleton, 3 E. 6. which he sold to Thomas Smyth the same year.

Of the other estates in this parish the records give the following account. Henry de Erdington held lands in Barew and Campden by the eighth part of a knight's fee, 5 E. 1. and Ralph de Cromwell held lands in Barew and Campden, in right of his wife, by the service of a fourth part of a knight's fee, 5 E. 1.

Sir Edward Berstead levied a fine of the third part of lands in Campden, Westington, Muckleton, Pebworth, and Olington, to the use of Lewis Grevil 4 H. 4. William Milner, and Margaret his wife, levied a fine of lands in Campden, to the use of John Marshal 5 E. 4. Sir William Compton died seized of thirty messuages and seventy acres in Campden 20 H. 8.

A mill, and lands in Campden, which belonged to the nunnery of "Cockhill" in Worcestershire, were granted to Nicholas Fortescue and Catherine Fortescue, and to the heirs male of Nicholas, 34 H. 8.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Campden, worth about 300*l.* a year, in the patronage of the earl of Gainsborough. Mr. Weston is the present incumbent.

The abbat of Chester was seized of the advowson of the church of Campden 15 E. 1.

The rectory of Campden belonged formerly to the nunnery of St. Warburg in Chester, which saint was daughter of Wolpher, king of Mercia. It was granted to the chapter of Chester 33 H. 8. And the church and rectory were granted to Lawrence Baskervil and William Blake 3 Jac.

The impropriation formerly belonged to the abbey of Welbeck, and is now vested in the earl of Gainsborough.

Sir Baptift Hicks purchased the impropriation of Winfrith in Dorsetshire, worth, at that time, about 100*l.* a year, which was afterwards annexed to the vicarage of Campden, by Edward lord Noel.

The church is large and beautiful. The nave is sixty feet high, with an aisle on each side, and a very handsome tower, thirty-five yards high, besides the battlements and twelve pinnacles. The church and side aisles are fifty-seven feet broad, and the length of the whole building is one hundred and thirty feet. There are also two handsome chapels and a spacious chancel, in the least window of which are the arms of sir Baptift Hicks, curiously painted, six feet in height. There is a peal of eight bells, and a set of chimes in the tower. The church is dedicated to St. James.

The church is supposed to have been built about the beginning of the reign of king Richard the Second. There is a grey marble flat stone in the church for Mr. William Grevil, who died in 1401, 2 H. 4. on which he and his wife are represented on a brass plate, standing in two niches, embellished with pinnacles, which correspond exactly with the fine Gothic carved work over the great door, and belfry window, at the west side of the tower. From this circumstance some persons have supposed that he built the tower; and the legend in the window, over the door of the north aisle, to pray for the souls, &c. and the many mullets, part of his arms, dispersed over the windows, shew him to have contributed, at least, towards the building or repairing of that aisle. The floor of the nave was formerly adorned with very curious plated marble flat stones; but they are now covered with large pews to sit in.

There was formerly a great deal of curious painted glass, of which only a few fragments remain.

There were four chantries in this church, i. e. 1. Stratford's, or St. Catherine's first chantry, ^f Escheator's inquisition, 42 Eliz.

^g This nunnery was founded by Isabel countess of Warwick, in the year 1260; and valued, at the dissolution, at 34*l.* 15*s.* 11*d.* yearly.

whereof whereof Daniel Tibot was the last incumbent, and had a pension, in 1553, of 5*l*. 2. St. Catherine's second chantry, of which Christopher Baxter, the last incumbent, received a pension of 5*l*. 3. A chantry called God's Service, dedicated to the holy Trinity, whereof Thomas Mortiboys, the last incumbent, received a pension of 5*l*. 4. St. Mary's, alias Bernard's chantry, of which Robert Joy was the last incumbent, and received a pension of 5*l*.

Divers lands in Campden, formerly belonging to the holy Trinity chantry, and St. Mary's, were granted to sir William Ryder and others 7 Jac.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

On a marble gravestone, nine feet long and five broad, are the effigies, in brass, of Mr. Grevel and his wife, five feet four inches in length, and the following inscription, on a fillet of brass, round the margin of the stone :

Hic jacet Wilelmus Grevel de Campedene quondam Civis London & flos Mcator lanar. tocius Anglie qui obiit pmo die mense Octobris An dm Millmo CCCC^o. pmo. Hic jacet Matrona vxor predicti Wilelmi que obiit Decimo die mensis Septembris Anno dni Millmo CCC^o. LXXX. VI^o. Quor. arabs ppicietur Deus Amen.

On the north side of the chancel, within the communion rails, is a curious stone monument for Thomas Smith, esq; with the effigies of himself, his two wives, and thirteen children, very finely carved, and on it this inscription :

HIC IACET SEPULTVS, VIR VERVS CHRISTIANVS, THOMAS SMITH ARMIGER. QVONDAM MANERII DE CAMPDEN DOMINVS. A PVERITIA SVA AVLICVS. QVI SVO TEMPORE FVIT. E CONSILIIS REGIS, MARCHE WALLIE, BLIQ VICECOMES COMITATVS GLOCESTRIE, AC IVSTITIARIVS PAULI EIVSDEM COMITATVS, VSQ; AD EXTREMVM ÆTATIS, QVI HABVIT DVAS VXORES, PRIMAM ELIZABETHAM FILIAM ETHEREDEM EVSTATII FITZHARBERT ARMIGERI; SECVDAM KATHERINAM FILIAM GEORGII THROKMARTON MILITIS. CVM FILIIS ET FILIAVVS VT HIC PATET; QVI OBIIT DIE AN^o. DOM. 1593.

On the north side of the north chapel is a large altar monument for Mr. Robert Lilly, (uncle to the famous William Lilly, the astrologer) and at the east end, on a blue stone tablet fixed in the wall, is the following inscription, now scarce legible :

Mag^{ter} Robertus Lillius Sonante tubâ resurget ultima. Vir Summe pius probus ac facundus; Quem peperit Leicestrensis, nutruit Alma Mater Cantabrigia, fidelem demum Pastorem sensit grex hic miscellus. Undiquaque dum vixit felix, nisi quod Calculi dolores acutissimi Autumnû vitæ fecerant valetudinam, et (impedito ultra XX^o. dies toto) prorsus afflictissimum; Quotandem, exantlatis XX^o. annoru hic loci laboribus, Tribus, octimæ spei, libertis, tunc se sentiens Superstitem, duas dulcissimas quas præmiserat, filias celo Sequutus est: Naturæ concessit XXI^o. die octobris 1636, et ætatis Sux 54^o.

Exilem hoc perpetui amoris monumentum, Amantissima pater ac inestissima conjux Honora Lilly lugens posuit.

Against the north wall of the chapel is a neat monument, thus inscribed :

Lece Spectator & luge. Hoc enim sub lapide in pulverem piculatum, vi summo ingenio & pietate Gulielmus Bartholomew A. M. e Coll: Trin: Cantabr: Primus annorum & Ministerij, Facundo Vicecomiti Campden, clarissimo Heron, feliciter dicavit: cum archibus, Brookianis e factis fuit. Mox in hujus Ecclesie vicarium hinc centuriatus, viginti quatuor per annos, negotio animarum incubuit, omnium cum amore, laude, admiratione. Quator eximus, Malleus fectoriarum Orthodoxæ religionis

Ecclesie Anglicanæ, partium Carolinarum (peffimis licet temporibus) intrepidus assertor: Moriens, Eodem in tumulto, quo Susannam filiolum olim condiderat, mortalitatis suæ exuvias voluit recondi. Obijt Illa Sept. 3^o. An^o. Dom: 1642. Ætatis Sux 3. Obijt Ille Octo: 11^o. An^o. Dom: 1660. Ætatis Sux 56^o.

Sanctis exilium mundus, sua patria cœlum:
Qui moritur Christo, non perit, ille redit.

Upon a flat blue stone are the arms of Hicks, and this inscription :

H. S. E.
Dnūs Henricus Hyckes,
Collegij SS: Trinitatis apud Oxonientes Alumnus,
Gradu Magistri in Artibus ibidem insignitus, Ecclesie Parochialis { de Stretton Rector, de Campden Vicarius.
Utriusq; per annos tantum non quinquaginta
Pastor fidelis;
Ecclesie Anglicanæ verè Apostolicæ
Filius Orthodoxus,
Et contra omnes Adversarios,
Tam Pseudo Catholicos quam nuperos Novatores,
Intrepidus Vindex.
Hic etiam reconditæ sunt Reliquiæ
Maræ,
Dni Gulielmi Bartholomew,
Hujus Ecclesie olim Vicarii,
Et exploratæ in Regem fidelitatis Viri,
Filie,
Et predicti Henrici Conjugis.
Diem Supremum obiit { Illa Dec. 23^o. A. D. 1701. Ætat. 62.
Ille Ian. 17^o. A. D. 1708. Ætat. 78.

In the middle of the south chapel stands a most magnificent monument of black and white marble, with the effigies of sir Baptist Hicks and his lady lying upon it: The top of it is supported by twelve columns of Egyptian marble, and on the north side is the following inscription, in gold capitals :

TO THE MEMORIE OF HER DEARE, & DECEASED HUSBAND BAPTIST LORD HICKS, VISCOUNT CAMPDEN. BORNE OF A WORTHY FAMILY IN THE CITE OF LONDON; WHO BY THE BLESSING OF GOD ON HIS INGENIOUS ENDEAVORS, AROSE TO AN AMPLE ESTATE, & TO THE FORESAID DEGREES OF HONOUR: AND OUT OF THOSE BLESSINGS, DISPOSED TO CHARITABLE USES, IN HIS LIFETIME, A LARGE PORTION, TO THE VALUE OF 10000*l*. WHO LIVED RELIGIOUSLY, VERTUOUSLY & GENEROUSLY, TO THE AGE OF 78 YEARES: AND DIED OCTO: 18: 1629.

ELIZABETH VISCONTESSE CAMPDEN,
HIS DEARE CONSORT, BORNE OF THE FAMILY OF THE MAYS, LIVED HIS WIFE IN ALL PEACE & CONTENTMENT, THE SPACE OF 45. YEARES, LEAVING ISSUE BY HER SAID LORD & HUSBAND TWO DAUGHTERS, JULIANA MARRIED TO EDWARD LORD NOEL, NOW VISCOUNT CAMPDEN, AND MARY MARRIED TO ST. CHARLES MORISON Knt. AND BARONE IT, HATH PIOUSLY AND CAREFULLY CAUSED THIS MONUMENT TO BE ERECTED AS A TESTIMONIE OF THEIR MUTUALL LOVE, WHERE BOTH THEIR BODIES MAY REST TOGETHER, IN EXPECTATION OF A JOYFULL RESURRECTION.

On the south side it is thus inscribed :

AD FERRAM CAMPDENICAM.
CAMPDENA FOELIX, POSSIDES LARGAS OPES CORPVS PATRONI, QVÆ RECONDIS OPTIMI, DOMINVM POTENTEM PRÆDII, ET QVI ADDIDIT ISTIS HONORVM FLOSCVLOS TERRIS NOVOS. DOMINO SEPVLCHRAM PREBEAS; ILLE ÆDIBVS DECORAVIT AMPLIS, HORTVLS NITIDIS AGRVM TVVM, NEC ÆDEM NEGLIGI EST PASSVS DEI, SED INDIGENTES FORTE SVSINIVIT PIA. VIVO VOLVPTAS, MORTVO FAC SIS QVIES. HIC ET PVDICAM, QVÆ SOCIA VITÆ FVIT, TENES MATRONAM. CORPVS HOC GEMINVM FOVE RESVLTANDVM, ET CONTEGAS ALMO SINV.

On a beautiful marble monument, fixed in the wall, at the east end of the north chapel, a half length figure, of admirable workmanship, and under it this inscription :

The Most Exquisite Model of Nature's best Workmanship,
Yc. Richest Magazin of all Divine and Moral Vertues, PENELOPE NOEL.

Having added to the Nobilitie of her Birth a brighter Shyne of true Noblenesse y^e Exemplarie sweetnesse of her Conversation, her Contempt of earthly vanities, And her Zealous affection towards Heaven, after 72 Yeares Devotions commended her Virgin Soule into the hands of its true Bydgoome JESUS CHRIST, CHRIST, May 17. A°. 1633. Over whose pretious Dust here reserved her sad Parents, Edward L^d. Noel Visc. Campden, And the Lady Iulian his Wife dropt their Teares, and Erected this Marble to the Deare Memorie of their unvaluable losse.

Superata tellus Sidera donat.

On the south side of the same chapel stands a very stately monument of black and white marble, with the effigies of lord and lady Noel, larger than life, standing in a niche, in their shrouds; and upon two folding doors, on each side of them, are the following inscriptions:

This Monument is Erected to preserve The Memory and Pourtrait of the Right Honorable Sir Edward Noel Vicount Campden, Baron Noel of Ridlington, and Hicks of Ilmington: A Lord of Heroik high parts & Prefence; He was Knight Banneret in the Wars of Ireland being Young: And then Created Baronet Anno 1611. He was afterwards made Baron of Ridlington. The other Titles came unto him By Right of Dame Iuliana his Wife, Who stands Collaterall to him in this Monument: A Lady of Extraordinary great Endowments both of Virtue, and Fortune. This Goodly Lord Died at Oxford at the beginning of the late Fatal Civil Wars, whither he went to Serve & Assist his Souverain Prince Charles the First: And so was Exalted to the Kingdome of Glory 8°. Martij. 1642.

The Lady Iuliana Eldest Daughter, and Coheire (of that Mirror of his time) Sr. Baptist Hicks Vicount Campden, She was Married To that Noble Lord Who is here Engraven by her, By whom She had Baptist Lord Vicount Campden now living (Who is Blessed with a Numerous & Gallant Issue) Henry her second Son Died a Prisoner For his Loyalty to his Prince. Her Eldest Daughter Elizabeth was Married To John Vicount Chaworth. Mary her Second Daughter To the very Noble Knight Sr. Erasmus De la Fontaine. Penelope Her Youngest Daughter Died a Maid. This Excellent Lady for the Pious, and Unparallell'd affections She retained to the Memory of her Deceased Lord Caused this Stately Monument To be Erected in her life time in September, Anno Dom. 1664. (h)

First fruits	£. 20	6	8	Synodals	£. 0	2	0
Tenths	—	2	0	Pentecostals	0	1	10
Procurations	0	6	8

Benefactions.

Mr. John Fereby, alias Verby, founded a grammar-school in this town, in the year 1487, and endowed it with a moiety of the manor of Lynham in Oxfordshire, and with a large close called Fines-close; but by the ill management of the feoffees, this estate was sold, and another at Barton-on-the-Heath, in Warwickshire, was purchased with the money, which was settled, by a decree in chancery, 1627, in a certain number of feoffees, for the maintenance of a school-master and usher, and now lets at 80*l.* a year, of which the master has 40*l.* the usher 20*l.* The effigy of the founder is set up in the school.

James Thynne, esq; of Buckland, gave 1000*l.* for the founding of a charity-school for thirty girls, to be cloathed every year whilst they continue in the school; and appointed 10*l.* a year to the mistress. This charity is supported by an estate at Staunton, near Campden.

George Townsend, esq; gave 4*l.* a year, to teach a certain number of poor children to read.

Sir Baptist Hicks, in the year 1612, founded an almshouse for six poor men and six women, and endowed it with 3*s.* 4*d.* weekly to each person, with a black gown, a hat, and a ton of coals yearly; each person having two handsome rooms and a garden. He likewise gave, by his last will, 500*l.* for a stock to set the poor at work.

Mr. William Freeman, of London, in 1642, gave 2*s.* a week, for ever, to be given in bread to the poor.

Mr. Robert Tainton, of London, gave 50*l.* Mr. William Blakely, in 1672, gave 50*l.* and Edward lord Noel, in 1674, gave 40*l.* the interest of which several sums is directed to be distributed weekly in bread to the poor for ever.

Mr. John Ballard, a physician of Weston-Subedge, in the year 1678, gave 100*l.* to the use of the poor.

Mr. Endymion Canning, of Brook in Rutlandshire, who died in 1683, by his will gave 100*l.* the interest of which to be distributed weekly in bread to the poor of Campden and Barrington for ever; and another 100*l.* to be added to the town-stock, and to be disposed of by the feoffees of the charities in this town, and their successors, for ever.

Mr. William Yate, in 1690, gave one dozen of bread weekly to the poor.

There have been other benefactions of a less permanent nature. Sir Baptist Hicks gave a pulpit-cloth and cushion, of gold tissue; a brass falcon; two communion cups, and two salvers, double gilt; and one of the bells in the tower, which cost 66*l.* He expended 200*l.* on the roof of the chancel, repaired the south chapel, built a wall round the church-yard, at the expence of 150*l.* and built the market-house, which cost 90*l.* in the year 1624. Mr. William Blakely, in 1665, gave the third bell; and Mr. Thomas Ballard, in 1682, gave the chimes. James Thynne, esq; gave the gallery for the children of his school to sit in. And John Savage, esq; in 1734, gave 100*l.* to erect an altar-piece, and 10*l.* to be given to the poor in bread.

^h In a manuscript lent me by a friend, wherein are many particulars relating to the church of Campden, I find the following very pertinent reflections.

'I have often lamented,' says the writer, 'the sacrilegious spoil and destruction of the venerable monuments of our great and good ancestors, by men in power and office; men, sometimes, of liberal education, who know, or at least ought to know, that there is a respect due to the dead; that the memory of the righteous ought to be had in everlasting remembrance; and that even the heathens themselves have looked upon the violation of the monuments of the dead with the utmost detestation and abhorrence. And yet, alas! neither greatness of birth, true patriotism, valour, munificence, nor other qualifications and indowments whatever, have been sufficient to protect the monuments of our ancellors from violence. By my interest, a fine old monument in Campden church was preserved, which would have fallen a sacrifice to the lucre of an iron grate that once passed it, the sale of which would have put a few pounds in a spoiler's pocket. I remember several old monuments for persons of merit, which have been demolished, and laid aside as rubbish to make room for new ones, for persons who very little deserve a memorial. Among the monuments of antiquity now remaining, none decline so fast as the old stones with brass plates. The plates fall a prey to petty church robbers, whose behaviour is countenanced by the bad example of great ones, or neglected by their superiors; so that in another century, unless greater care be taken, but very few of those monuments will be remaining.'—These reflections are applicable to other churches besides Campden.

Chipping Campden.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	44	12	0
		Poll-tax — 1694, —	86	0	0
		Land-tax — 1694, —	71	0	0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, —	56	5	0

Broad Campden.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	75	18	0
		Poll-tax — 1694, —	20	17	0
		Land-tax — 1694, —	50	8	2
		The same at 3s. 1770, —	43	16	10b.

Barrington.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	68	2	0
		Poll-tax — 1694, —	16	4	0
		Land-tax — 1694, —	61	8	0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, —	49	1	0

Westington and Comb.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	80	6	0
		Poll-tax — 1694, —	12	10	0
		Land-tax — 1694, —	64	0	0
		The same, at 3s. 1770, —	48	7	6

At the beginning of this century there were 391 houses and about 1618 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 61 were freeholders; yearly births 48, burials 45. Atkyns. In a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, the average number of annual baptisms entered in the parish register, was of burials . And, from 1760 to 1769, the average of baptisms was , and of burials , including the dissenters. And the whole number of inhabitants is about . So that the proportion between the living and the annual burials is nearly as 45 to 1; which shews the place to be healthy.

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~*

C E R N E Y, (N O R T H.)

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Rapsgate, in the cotswold country, four miles north from Cirencester, seven south-west from North-leach, and fourteen eastward from Gloucester.

It is situate upon the river Churn, whence it took its name, for Cern-ey signifies the Churn-water. This parish consists mostly of arable land, with some meadow and pasture. Cirencester races are run upon Cerney-down, which is esteemed a very fine two mile course, as well for running as for the spectators.

There is a camp in Cerney-field, of considerable extent; and about seventy years ago, there was an urn of blue glass dug up in Calmsden-field, in this parish, full of burnt bones and ashes.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

'Saint Oswald [of Glouucc.] held in Cernei, in Respigete hundred, one manor of four hides, in the time of king Edward. The same faint holds it still, and has two plow-tillages in demean, and six villeins, and two bordars, with five plowtillages. There is one servus, and a mill of 7s. [rent] and two acres of meadow. It was then worth 100s. and is now worth 4l.' Domesday-book, p. 70.

'Gislebert [the son of Tuold] holds Cernei in Respiget hundred. There are seven hides. Elaf and his brother, two thanes, held it for two manors, and could go where they pleased. In demean are four plow-tillages, and seven villeins, and six bordars, with five plow-tillages. There are six servi, and a mill of 8s. [rent] and six acres of meadow; a wood two quarters [of a mile] long, and one broad. Four knights belonging to Gislebert, with their men, have seven plow-tillages, and a mill of 8s. [rent] The whole, in the time of king Edward, was worth 14l. and is now worth 12l.' Ibidem, p. 76.

The above Gislebert took part with Robert Curtoise against king William the Second, wherefore his estates in England were seized. He was also lord of Rendcombe, which manor was granted to Robert Fitz-Hamon, and went, with Mabel his daughter, to Robert Mellent, and so descended to the several earls of Gloucester down to the Staffords, who were lords of the manors of Rendcombe and Cerney; wherefore I conjecture, that upon Gislebert's defection, this manor was granted, with Rendcombe, to Robert Fitz-Hamon, and descended together, till the attainder of Humphry earl of Stafford, after he was killed in the battle of Northampton, 38 H. 6. But the records are imperfect, as to Cerney, for a great part of the above time.

Hugh earl of Stafford held lands in Cerney, with the advowson of the church, at the time of his death, at Rhodes, in his return from a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, which happened 9 R. 2. as appears by an inquisition of the following year. Thomas earl of Stafford died seized of them 16 R. 2. Edward earl of Stafford was seized of the manor of North Cerney, and of the advowson of the church, 4 H. 4.

Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was seized of the manors of North Cerney and Woodmancot, when he was attainted and executed, 14 H. 8. whereby they came to the crown, and the advowson of the church, and the manor of Woodmancot were granted to sir Richard Cornwall, and his heirs male, the same year.

The manor of North Cerney was granted to Henry lord Stafford 2 Mar. He died in 1558, and livery of the manors of North Cerney and Woodmancot was granted to Edward lord Stafford, his son and heir, 13 Eliz.

John Partridge, esq; was seized of North Cerney in the year 1608. Three persons, Mr. Combs, and two gentlemen of the name of Oatridge, were afterwards joint owners of it, who sold it to the earl of Bathurst, the present lord of the manor.

Robert de Mara purchased lands in North Cerney, of Jordan his brother, 1 Joh. Henry the son of Gerald, purchased, by exchange, lands in Cerney, of William de Alneto, 11 Joh. John Dunfen was seized of lands in this place 30 H. 3. John Westby, and Margaret his wife, levied a fine of lands in North Cerney, Calmsden, and Woodmancot, to the use of William Tracy and others, 19 H. 7.

Thomas Tyndale, esq; has a good house and a good estate in this parish, which he purchased of the late Mr. Pickering Rich. His arms are, Argent, a fess gules, between three garbs sable.

H A M L E T S. 1. Woodmancot, about two miles north-westward from the church. William de Marre, of Ryndecumbe, released to the convent of Lacok, for seventeen pounds sterling, all his rights in the manor of Wodemancote, except the view of frankpledge of the earl of Gloucester, to be made twice a year at Rindcumbe. Constantia de Lega gave to God and the blessed Mary, all the manor of Wudemancote, to make an abbey at Lacok, and afterwards, in the reign of king Henry the Third, acknowledged, before the king's justices, that two carucates of land, with their appurtenances in Wodemancote, were the right of the convent of Lacok.

The foregoing is taken from Stevens's Supplement to the Monasticon, (Appendix, N^o. 448.) where are many other particulars of lands in Wodemancote, said to be granted to the monastery of Lacok; but as the county is not mentioned, and as there are many places of that name in other parts, besides three in Gloucestershire, it cannot be ascertained to which of those places the lands belonged.

Thomas the son of Otto, and Beatrix his wife, were seized of the manor of Woodmancot 2 E. 1. Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford, was seized of the manors of Woodmancot and Calmsden, with court-leet, 15 E. 1. Warine the son of Warine was seized of the manor of Woodmancot 16 E. 3. John Blount held Woodmancot and Calmsden, in North Cerney, 22 H. 6. and Wentlyn, his widow, was seized thereof 32 H. 6.

2. Calmsden, which was held by the earl of Gloucester and John Blount, as above mentioned. Alice Burley held a third part of the manor of Calmondensden in dower, and John Burley, her son, and Isabel, his wife, levied a fine of the other two parts, to the use of themselves, 4 H. 4. Richard, the son of Roger de Calmsden, gave divers lands to the knights templers, which afterwards came to the knights hospitallers of Jerusalem. Constantia de Lega, widow, gave to the nuns of Lacok 25 s. yearly rent in Calmundensden, which the knights hospitallers used to pay her. Stevens, as above. Mabilia, Robert, and William de Mara gave to the knights hospitallers all their demesns in Calmsden. After the dissolution of religious foundations, such of the above lands as belonged to the knights hospitallers of Jerusalem, were granted to Thomas lord Scimour; after whose attainder they reverted to the crown, and were again granted to Catherine Buckler, widow, and to Richard Buckler and Catherine his wife, 7 E. 6.

There was a manor in Calmsden which belonged to the archbishop of York 14 E. 3. and was granted to sir Thomas Chamberlain 6 E. 6. But the tithes of the archbishop's demesns belonged to the monastery of St. Oswald in Gloucester, and were granted to the chapter of Bristol 34 H. 8. Sir William Gyse claims the manors of Woodmancot and Calmsden.

There was formerly a chapel in each of these hamlets, but they have been long since demolished.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory, in the deanery of Cirencester, worth 300*l.* a year. Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester and Hertford, was seized of the advowson of Cerney 8 E. 2. The advowson was in dispute between the late sir John Gyse, and the executors of the late Charles Coxe, esq; which ended in an agreement to convey both their rights to University-college, Oxford. The reverend Thomas C. Coxe is the present incumbent, and one of the representatives of the clergy in the house of convocation.

Ninety-six acres of arable, and between twenty and thirty of pasture, belong to the glebe.

The church is handsomely pewed, and hath two cross ailes and a low tower. There was a statue of a priest in his robes, in a niche in the south wall of the chancel, supposed to be for the founder of the church, but it is now taken away.

There is a piece of ground given to adorn the church, which lets for 22*s.* a year.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

On the table of a handsome monument, in the south aile, is this inscription:

Here lyeth y^e Body of Tho: Rich, Esq; one of y^e M^{rs} of y^e High Court of Chauncery, who married Anne one of y^e daught^{rs} & Coheires of Tho: Bourchiere of Barnsley Esq^{re}: by whom he had Ten Sonnes, Tho: Will: Edw: Sam: Jo: Robt: Ewiface Hen: Antho: & Cha: & Five daught^{rs}: Bridget, who married Jo: How, Baronet, Susan who married Edw: Bathurst Bart Mary who married Giles Dowle, Gent. & Anne & Anne who died younge. Who departed y^e life the 27th of Octo. 1647. At top are these arms, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Per pale, gules, a cross bottonny fitchy, between four fleurs de lis Or, for Rich: 2d and 3d, Bourchier, as before under Barnsley.

On another monument, in the same aile, is a memorial for Thomas Rich, gent. who died in 1704-5, and Susannah his wife, daughter of Edward Nott, of Bradon, with their arms, 1st, Rich, as before, impaling, Azure, on a bend between three leopards heads caboshed Or, as many martlets gules, for Nott.

First fruits l.. 21 10 50*b.* Synodals l.. 0 2 0
Tenths — 2 3 00*b.* Pentecostals 0 1 0
Procurations 0 6 8

Taxes: { The Royal Aid in 1692, l.. 91 13
Poll-tax — 1694, — 13 1
Land-tax — 1694, — 59 1
The same, at 3*s.* 1770, — 6 1

There were 42 houses and about 190 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 16 were freeholders; yearly births 6, burials 5. Atkyns. Examining the parish register, I find, that in a series of ten years, from 1700 to 1709 inclusive, there were 58 baptisms and 43 burials; and in the same number of years, from 1760 to 1769, both inclusive, there were 99 baptisms and 82 burials. And the number of inhabitants is 384, something more than 46 to 1 of the average of the annual burials.

CERNEY, (SOUTH.)

THIS parish lies in the hundred of Crowthorn and Minety, four miles south from Cirencester, four north-westward from Cricklade in Wiltshire, and twenty-one south-eastward from Gloucester. The river Churn runs through it, and empties itself into the Thames at Cricklade. The parish consists chiefly of meadow and pasture, with some rich arable. The meadows are greatly improved by turning the river water over them in the winter season, which invigorates the soil, and insures a plentiful crop every year, without manure; which I mention, because the method is not generally used, nor even heard of in many parts of the kingdom.

The name is explained under the preceding parish, and more largely under Cirencester.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

In Domesday-book are the following particulars:

'Walter [the son of Roger] holds Cernei in Gerfdones hundred. There are fourteen hides, and one yard-land. Archbishop Stigand held it. In demean are two plow-tillages, and twenty-five villeins, and a priest, and nine bordars, with ten plow-tillages. There are four servi, and a hundred acres of meadow, and there were three mills of 30s. [rent.] It was worth 16*l.* and is now worth 12*l.*'

'This manor was claimed by the church of St. Mary of Abendone, but all the county testified that Stigand the archbishop held it ten years when king Edward was living. Earl William gave this manor to Roger the sheriff, father of Walter.' Domesday-book, p. 77.

'Radulf [de Todeni] holds Omenie and Cerney in Gerfdones hundred, and Roger holds them of him. There are four hides. Four thanes held them for four manors, and they could go where they would. In demean are ten plow-tillages, and one villein, and nineteen bordars. There are twenty-one servi, and a mill of 5s. and thirty acres of meadow. It was worth 10*l.* and is now worth 6*l.*' Domesday-book, p. 76.

There are, at present, three manors in this parish, whereof the largest belonged to the barons of St. Amand. Guy de St. Amand was possessed of estates in South Cerney, Wick, and Cirencester, which came to William St. Amand, and were purchased of him by Almarick de St. Amand, governor of St. Briavel's castle, and warden of the forest of Dean. Ralph de St. Amand, son of Almarick, married Asceline, one of the heiresses of Robert d'Aubeny, baron of Caynho in Bedfordshire, and dying 30 H. 3. was succeeded by his son Almarick de St. Amand, who died seized of South Cerney 14 E. 1. Guy, his son and heir, left no issue, but Lucia, his wife, surviving him, was endowed with a third part of the manor of South Cerney.

Almarick de St. Amand, brother of Guy, was the next heir, and was summoned as a baron to parliament 28 E. 1. but he dying without issue, was succeeded by John de St. Amand, his brother, who was educated in the civil law. He was also summoned as a baron to parliament 2 E. 2. and died seized of South Cerney and Cerney Wick 20 E. 2. Almarick de St. Amand was son and heir to John. He and his wife Joan levied a fine of the manor of South Cerney to the use of themselves and the heirs of their bodies, the remainder to the right heirs of Almarick, 4 E. 3. He was constituted justice of Ireland 31 E. 3. and was made knight of the Bath in 1400. He died 4 H. 4. leaving two daughters, Elianor, by Ida his first wife, and Ida, by Elianor his second wife.

Elianor, his eldest daughter, was married to Gerhard Braybrook. They left three daughters, whereof Elizabeth, the eldest, was married to William Beauchamp, son of Walter Beauchamp of Powyk, and grandson to John lord Beauchamp. He was created lord St. Amand, and summoned to parliament 27 H. 6. and died 35 H. 6. But it does not appear that he was possess'd of this manor; for Richard de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, died seized of South Cerney 17 H. 6.

The above Richard de Beauchamp had three daughters, of whom Elizabeth, the youngest, was married to George Nevile, lord Latimer. Richard lord Latimer, grandson and heir of George, died seized of the manor of South Cerney and Cerney Wike 22 H. 8. and livery thereof was granted the same year to John lord Latimer, his son, who died 34 H. 8. He left a son John, who had livery granted to him the next year. He married lady Lucy, daughter to Henry earl of Worcester, and died 20 Eliz. leaving four daughters coheiresses, who had livery granted to them the same year. Lucy, the third daughter, was married to sir William Cornwallis, who, in her right, was seized of this manor in the year 1608. Thus it appears that the chief manor of South Cerney and Cerney Wike continued, by descent, in the same family above four hundred years.

Afterwards it came to sir Nevil Pool, who sold it to sir Edward Atkyns, from whom it descended to sir Robert Atkyns; and he settled it on his son sir Robert Atkyns, who sold away the greatest part to divers freeholders, and the remaining part was vested in Mr. John Jones.

Richard

Richard Jones, esq; was his son, whose trustees sold it in chancery to Henry Cook, Edward Dewe, and John Jones, in survivorship. Dewe dying, Cook and Jones conveyed their rights to their respective sons, and William Cook, son of Henry, purchased of Richard Jones, son of John, his share of the manor. He died, and left it by will to his mother, Amy Cook, who is the present proprietor, and holds court-leet, but there are no copyholders belonging to the manor.

The priory of Lanthony near Gloucester was seized of another manor in this parish, and had court-leet and waifs 15 E. 1. Upon the dissolution of religions foundations, this manor was granted to William earl of Southampton and his heirs male 31 H. 8. The same manor, and the tithes of the demans, were granted to William Fitz-Williams and Arthur Hilton 7 E. 6. who conveyed it to George Carlton the following year; and he sold it, in 1556, to Francis Wye. Another Francis Wye gave it to his niece Isabel, wife of William Gower, esq; in 1653; whose son John Gower sold it to John Jones, esq; in 1677: His grandson John Jones, esq; is the present lord of this manor, who has a good house and large estate in this parish, and in other parts of the county. His arms are, Ermine, a chevron humetty sable. The above manor is free from tithes.

The third manor was granted by the crown to the dean and chapter of Bristol, and is now in lease to Thomas Bush, esq; who has a good house and good estate here, and in other parts. He holds a court-baron, but no court-leet. His arms are, Argent, a horse rampant sable, in chief three crosses pattee gules.

Of the other estates the records shew, that Philip de Ferlege gave all his lands in Cerne to the priory of Bradenstoke. Dugd. Bar. Lands in Cerney Wike belonged to the priory of Ferley in Wiltshire, and were granted to Alexander Staples and John Lovel 16 Eliz.

Halstone-bridge is half in Cerney and half in Chelworth in the parish of Cricklade, and each parish supports its respective part. Halstone-farm is wholly in Chelworth.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Cirencester, worth 130*l.* a year. Walter, the sheriff of Gloucester, son of earl Roger, gave the church of Cerney, with the tithes thereof, to the monks of St. Peter's at Gloucester, in the reign of king Henry the First. The bishop of Worcester appropriated this church to the abbey of Gloucester, and settled the allowance to the vicar, in the year 1327. After the dissolution of religious foundations, the rectory and advowson of the vicarage were granted to the bishop of Gloucester, by the charter of foundation of that see. The bishop of Gloucester is patron and impropiator; and the reverend Mr. Anselm Jones the present incumbent. The impropiators, ever since the reign of king Charles the Second, have augmented the living with 11*l.* a year.

The chapel of Halstone, formerly called Cerney Milonis, was annexed to this church. Atkyns.

The church consists of the nave and one aisle, with a handsome spire steeple, and five bells, at the west end. It is dedicated to All Saints. No monument of note.

Here was a custom, which prevailed 'till lately, of strewing coarse hay and rushes over the floor of the church, which is called Juncare; and the lands which were subject to provide those materials, now pay a certain sum of money annually, in lieu thereof.

First fruits	£. 6 16 8	Synodals	£. 0 2 0
Tenths	— 0 13 8	Pentecostals	0 1 6
Procurations	0 6 8

Benefaction.

— Cutts gave a yard-land and five acres, being together about thirty acres, and six small tenements, all worth 28*l.* a year, to the use of the church, the poor, and the repair of the highways. There is no account when the donation was made; but it must have been several ages since, if tradition may be credited, that a very antient flat stone in the church-yard, with half-length figures of a man and woman, is for the donor and his wife.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 219 15 9
		Poll-tax — — 1694,	— 42 16 0
		Land-tax — — 1694,	— 176 0 0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770,	— 124 17 9

At the beginning of this century there were 120 houses and about 500 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 60 were freeholders; yearly births 15, burials 14. Atkyns. But by the entries in the parish register, it appears, that in ten years, from 1731 to 1740, both inclusive, there were 188 baptisms and 105 burials; and in the same number of years, beginning at 1760, there were 215 baptisms and 161 burials. The present number of houses is 247, and of inhabitants 806; so that population is considerably increased, and about 1 in 50 dies every year.

C H A R F I E L D.

THIS is a small parish in the upper division of the hundred of Grumbaldfash, six miles distant north from Chipping-Sodbury, three miles west from Wotton-under-edge, and twenty-three south-west from Gloucester.

It is very difficult to fix the etymology of the name, if sir Robert Atkyns was not right in his conjecture, that it was so called from being the field where Cerdic or Cirdic obtained a victory over the Britons.

Tafarn-bath,

' are two hides free and quit [from tax.] In
' demean is one plow-tillage, and four villeins,
' and two bordars, with four plow-tillages. There ' are six servi, and a mill of 20*d.* [rent] and two ' acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth
' 20*s.*' Domesday-book, p. 71.

The abbat of Winchcombe purchased a charter of free warren in Charleton 35 H. 3. which privilege was allowed him in a writ of Quo warranto, 15 E. 1. And the church of Winchcombe continued in possession of this manor 'till the dissolution of that house.

After the dissolution, it was granted by the crown to Henry Tracy of Toddington, 7 E. 6. soon after which, it was purchased by John Carter, esq; whose descendant Estcourt Carter, esq; son of Cornelius, a younger son of John Carter, son of another John, who was the son of the first purchaser, is the present lord of the manor, and has a good estate here and in Oxfordshire. His arms are blazoned under Aston Blank.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Winchcombe. It is an impropriation, subject to the payment of 10*l.* a year to the curate. There is no settled incumbent; but divine service is performed once a fortnight, by some neighbouring clergyman. Mr. Aylworth left 800*l.* to purchase land for the augmentation of Charlton Abbats, Cold Salperton, Sevenhampton, and Compton Abdale, out of which the curate of this church receives about five guineas a year. There was an attempt to procure the queen's bounty, but the income being now improved to upwards of 10*l.* a year, the trustees would not allow it.

The tithes of this parish belonged to the abbey of Winchcombe, and were granted to sir Thomas Seymour 1 E. 6. after whose attainder, they were again granted by the crown to John Hussey and John Haward 20 Eliz. The impropriation is now the property of Edward Carter, esq. The demans of the manor are tithe free.

The church is small and very ruinous. The inhabitants bury at Winchcombe, except those who bury in the church.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	53	10	0
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, —	8	11	0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, —	34	16	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	24	9	10 ob.

At the beginning of this century there were 13 houses and about 60 inhabitants, whereof 3 were freeholders. Atkyns. There are now 12 houses and 63 inhabitants.

CHARLTON KING'S

LIES in the hundred of Cheltenham, one mile distant eastward from the town of that name, seven south from Winchcombe, and eleven east from Gloucester.

Charlton is explained under the preceding parish, from which this is properly distinguished by the additional name of King's, because at the Norman conquest it was part of the demans of the crown.

This parish consists of rich pasture and arable, with some woodland. It is watered by three brooks which unite here, and drive several corn-mills; and is very advantagiously situated under the Lechampton hills, which secure it from the easterly winds.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

As this was a member of the great manor of Cheltenham, at the time of the conquest, it was included in the general account of that manor in Domesday-book. In the subsequent records, we find a manor described by the name of Ashley, alias Charlton King's, as tho' those two names were really and strictly proper to the same place, whereas the manor of Ashley doth not comprehend the whole of Charlton, but is a manor holden of, and lying within the manor of Cheltenham; and Charlton, and Bafford in Charlton, are parcels of the same manor of Cheltenham, distinct from, and far more extensive than Ashley.

Charles prince of Wales, afterwards king Charles the First, was lord of the manor of Charlton. James-Lenox Dutton, esq; is the present lord of this manor.

Walter de Esheley took his name from the manor of Asheley in this parish, and was seized of part of Charlton 30 H. 3. Petronella Marechal held the manor of King's Charlton 54 H. 3. but this is to be understood of Ashley only, which was given her in free marriage by Walter de Esheley.

This manor belonged afterwards, for many descents, to the family of the Grevils, who enjoyed several estates in the parish of Cheltenham, and other parts of Gloucestershire. Thomas Rawlins and his wife levied a fine of lands in Charlton, Gineton, Presbury, and Cheltenham, to William Grevil and William Baynham, 9 H. 7. Francis Grevil levied a fine of Charlton King's, alias Ashley, 3 E. 6. Giles Grevil and Arthur Parker were owners of this manor in the year 1608.

The manor of Ashley, alias Charlton King's, came afterwards to Mr. Edward Mitchel. It is now the property of William Prinn, esq; who has a good house and a good estate in this parish. His arms are, Or, a fess engrailed between three shells azure,

Mr. Whithorn has also a good house and good estate in this parish.

Of the other estates the records shew, that Richard Forster levied a fine of a moiety of lands in Charlton and Ham, to John Walsh and others, 12 H. 7.

HAMLET. Ham is a hamlet in this parish, about half a mile from the church. Richard Grevil levied a fine of the manor of Ham, and of lands lands in Charlton King's, 3 E. 6. Ralph and Richard Goderick levied a fine of lands in Ham and Norfield, to Robert Bidle 3 E. 6.

An act of parliament was passed 1 C. 1. intituled, An Act for the settling and confirming copyhold estates, and customs of the tenants in base tenure, of the manor of Cheltenham, com. Glouc. and of the manor of Ashley, otherwise Charlton King's, in the said county, being holden of the said manor of Cheltenham, according to an agreement thereof made between the King's Most Excellent Majesty, being then Prince of Wales, Duke of York, and Earl of Chester, lord of the said manor of Cheltenham, and Giles Grevile, esq; lord of the said manor of Ashley, and the said copyholders of the said several manors: The substance of which act is given under Cheltenham.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Winchombe. It was antiently a chapel to the church of Cheltenham, of which the rectory, formerly belonging to the abbey of Cirencester, was granted by the crown to sir William Rider 7 Jac. It is an impropriation belonging to the earl of Essex. The curate is nominated by Jesus college Oxford, and approved by the heir of sir Baptist Hicks, exactly in the same manner, and under the same limitations prescribed for Cheltenham. He receives 35*l.* a year out of the impropriation. Mr. Bedwell is the present incumbent. Here is no house for the minister.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a flat building, with an aisle on the south side. It has a handsome square embattled tower with pinnacles, and six bells in it, standing in the middle, and there are two chapels on the north and south sides of the tower, making together the form of a cross.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a neat pyramidal marble monument in the north chapel, with this inscription.

HEREUNDER lye the Remains of Mrs. ELIZABETH PRINN, late the Wife of William Prinn, Esq; and eldest Daughter of Thomas Ridler, late of Edgworth, in the County of Gloucester, Esq; who departed this Life March 5th, 1771, aged 71 Years. ALSO of Mrs. ELIZABETH HUNT, Daughter of the above named William Prinn, and Elizabeth Prinn, who was Married to Dodington Hunt, of the Inner Temple, London, Esq; and departed this Life August 10th, 1772, aged 24 Years and Six Months. — At bottom are these arms, Or, a fess guuled between three escallops azure, for Prinn.

In the chancel there is the following inscription upon an oval brass plate :

SAMUEL COOPER of this Parish, Gent. died the 13th of May, 1733, who by Will gave to the Trustees under mentioned, and their Successors his Trustees for ever, the Rents of his grounds in the same Parish, called Cutham Butts, and Battle Down; for buying Books, and teaching six poor Children of this Parish to read two years, at the End of which Time six others, to be chosen by the said Trustees, with the Privy of the Church-wardens. The Overplus to provide Fuel, and cloath six aged infirm poor Persons not receiving Alms of the Parish. Trustees, Robert Gale, senr. Edm^d. Welsh, Edw^d. Gale, Gent. — At bottom, on a scutcheon, Vert, a tortoise palewise proper.

Against the north wall of the chancel is a memorial for several of the family of Brereton, and these arms, Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent, two bars sable. 2d and 3d, Sable, a bend argent, charged with three lozenges of the field.

There is an inscription upon a stone in the church for Winifrid, wife of James Ingram, and at top are her arms, A cross lozenge between four roses. The colours not expressed.

There is a tomb in the church-yard, with a memorial for Mrs. Margaret Rich, daughter of Ed. Rich, of Dowdeswell, esq; buried Sept. 2, 1692. And the arms of Rich, (as under North Cerney) impaling, A chevron charged with three stags heads caboshed, between as many lozenges. No colours expressed.

Pentecostals 9*d.* cb.

Benefactions.

There are lands of the value of 12*l.* a year given for the repair of the church, and for the relief of the poor. Mr. Alexander Packer gave 100*l.* to the poor. And small donations from several persons amount to 70*l.* which is made a stock for the use of the poor.

For Mr. Cooper's donation for teaching poor children of this parish to read, and for buying fuel for poor families, see Inscriptions.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 189 14 0
		Poll-tax — 1694, — 46 5 0
		Land-tax — 1694, — 208 9 3 cb
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 156 8 5

According to sir Robert Atkyns, when he compiled his History, there were 102 houses in this parish, and about 550 inhabitants, whereof 60 were freeholders; yearly births 16, burials 15. But it appears by the parish register, that in ten years from 1700, there were 125 baptisms and 153 burials, but in four of those years there was a great mortality in the parish, which carried off 88 persons, being about 40 more than died in four common years. In ten years, from 1760, there were 147 baptisms, and 107 burials; so that the annual average of burials is 10.7, and the number of inhabitants is about 458. From the state of the parish register, it seems that sir Robert Atkyns's estimate of the inhabitants was too high; and from a comparison of the baptisms in those distant periods, it may be concluded, that population is rather increasing here.

C H E D W O R T H.

THIS parish lies in the coteswold country, in the hundred of Rapsgate, four miles south-west from Northleach, seven northward from Cirencester, and about sixteen eastward from Gloucester.

LED signifies the brow or descent of a place, and popd a village, which is exactly descriptive of the present situation of the houses in this parish, most of which stand on the declivity of two hills, facing each each other, with the river Coln running between them, in its course to Coln Deans, Coln Rogers, Coln Aldwins, and Fairford, a little below which it empties itself into the Thames.

This place gives the title of baron to the Right Honourable Henry-Frederick How, third lord Chedworth, whose father, John How, was created baron of Chedworth in the county of Gloucester, by letters patent, dated May 12, 1741.

John Chedworth, bishop of Lincoln in the year 1471, is supposed to have been a native of this place.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

What is advanced by some writers, that Burgred king of Mercia, about the year 854, gave fifteen hides in Cbedanwyrð on the hills to the monastery of Gloucester, whilst Gaffe was abbes thereof, seems to be a mistake: For Eva, the last abbess of that monastery, died in 768; and afterwards, in the wars between king Egbert and the Mercians, the nuns abandoned the monastery, which became desolate, and so continued 'till the year 821. Beornulph king of Mercia then repaired it, and bestowed part of its former possessions for the maintenance of secular priests, whom he had placed there. And king Burgred, in the year 862, confirmed to them the lands which had been given them. See p. 131.

This manor stands under the title Terra Regis, in Domesday-book, and, at the time of the Norman conquest, was part of the demesns of the crown.

Wward held Cedeorde in Respiet hundred. There were fifteen hides including the wood, the plain, and the meadow; and seven plow-tillages in demean, in the time of king Edward; and sixteen villeins, and three bordars, with six plow-tillages, and three mills of 14s. 2d. and the toll of the salt which came to the [king's] hall. The sheriff added eight villeins and three bordars, having four plow-tillages.

Of these two manors [Cedeorde and Alvredintvne] the stewards paid what they pleased in the time of king Edward. They now pay 40l. of white money, of which twenty is in ora. Earl Roger held it. Domesday-book, p. 69.

Earl Roger was stiled Roger de Bellemont, and was earl of Mellent. He settled this manor on Henry de Newburg, a younger son, who was afterwards created earl of Warwick by king William the Second, and died seized of Chedworth 23 H. 1. He was succeeded by his son Roger earl of Warwick, who married Gundred, daughter of earl Warren, and died 18 Steph.

William earl of Warwick, son and heir of Roger, dying 30 H. 2. without issue, was succeeded in title and estate by Walerond his brother, who married Margaret, daughter of Humphry de Bohun, earl of Hereford. His second wife was Alice, daughter of John de Hercourt; which Alice, upon the death of her husband 6 Joh. had Chedworth assigned to her in dower.

Henry earl of Warwick, son of Walerond, died seized of the manor of Chedworth 13 H. 3.

Thomas earl of Warwick, his son, married Ela, second daughter of William Long Espee, earl of Salisbury, natural son to king Henry the Second, by Fair Rosamond, and died without issue 26 H. 3. Ela, his widow, was seized of the third part of the manor of Chedworth in dower 36 H. 3.

John de Pleffets, or Placetis, married Margery, sister and heir to Thomas earl of Warwick. He was in great favour with king Henry the Third, who made the match, and obliged the lady to settle her whole estate on him for life, altho' she should have no children by him. He held two parts of the manor of Chedworth in right of his wife, 27 H. 3. and afterwards had the title of earl of Warwick; but she having no issue, the manor descended to the Beauchamps. For Walerond, the before mentioned earl of Warwick, besides his son Henry, had a daughter Alice, or Elisia, married to William Manduit de Hanslope, the king's chamberlain. They had issue William and Isabel. William Manduit, in right of his mother, upon failure of the former line, was created earl of Warwick; but he died 52 H. 3. without issue, whereby his sister Isabel became his heirs. She was married to William Beauchamp.

William de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, son of the last William, by his wife Isabel Manduit, died seized of the whole manor of Chedworth 52 H. 3. of which the third part had been resigned to him by Ela, the widow of Thomas earl of Warwick.

At this time the manor began to be divided, for Patrick de Chaworth, the fourth of that name, marrying Maud, daughter of the above William Beauchamp, had with her the third part of it, of which he died seized 11 E. 1. And Henry earl of Lancaster marrying Maud de Chaworth, his daughter and heir, was seized, in her right, of the third part of the manor of Chedworth 1 E. 3. which descending to Henry duke of Lancaster, was given, with the manor of Kempford, and other lands, to Newark hospital at Leicester, which he had founded.

But William de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, son of the before mentioned William, died seized of the residue of the manor of Chedworth 26 E. 1. and was succeeded by Guy earl of Warwick, his son and heir, who was twenty-six years old at his father's death. Guy was seized of the manor of Chedworth, which he held of the king in capite, by one knight's fee, and had in demean 200 acres of arable land, worth 2d. an acre, and not more, because it was hill country land; eight acres of meadow, worth 1s. 6d. an acre; and 200 acres of wood, the underwood of which was worth 30s. and not more, because it was common. This abstract from the escheator's inquisition serves to shew the value of land at that time. He died 9 E. 2. and left Thomas earl of Warwick his son and heir, then only two years old; who married Catherine, daughter of Roger lord Mortimer, and died of the plague at Calais, seized of Chedworth.

Chedworth, 43 E. 3. He was succeeded by Thomas de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, his surviving son and heir. He had taken up arms against king Richard the Second, and was attainted, and his estates forfeited, whereupon this manor was granted to John Montacute, earl of Salisbury; who afterwards endeavouring to restore the same king, and being taken prisoner at Cirencester, and there beheaded by the townsmen, 1 H. 4. this estate was restored to Thomas de Beauchamp, who died seized of Chedworth 2 H. 4.

Richard de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, succeeded Thomas his father, and married Isabel, the only surviving heiress of the Dispencers, who were heirs to the Clares earls of Gloucester, and died seized of Chedworth 17 H. 6. Henry his son was created duke of Warwick, and died seized of this manor 23 H. 6. He left Anne, his only daughter and heiress, an infant, who dying soon after, the inheritance came to Anne, sister to Henry duke of Warwick; but the manor was assigned to Cicely dutchess of Warwick, his widow, in dower, 25 H. 6. This last Anne married Richard Nevil, earl of Salisbury, who, in her right, was also earl of Warwick, and was often called the Make-King, from his great power and influence, in the reign of king Henry the Sixth. He was slain in Barnet field, fighting against king Edward the Fourth. Anne, his widow, had two daughters by him, coheiresses to her vast estate; and because she had taken part in the designs of her late husband, her estate was taken from her by an act of parliament 14 E. 4. and was settled on her two daughters, of whom Isabel, the elder, was married to George duke of Clarence, brother to the king; and Anne, her sister, was married to Richard, duke of Gloucester, afterwards king Richard the Third.

George duke of Clarence, in right of Isabel his wife, died seized of the manor of Chedworth 18 E. 4. and left Edward Plantagenet, the last heir male of that line, his son and heir; who by court contrivances, was attainted and beheaded, 15 H. 7. King Henry the Seventh pretending the injustice of divesting Anne dutchess of Warwick of her large inheritance, procured another act of parliament, in the beginning of his reign, to reinstate her, and then artfully prevailed with her to settle that great inheritance on him and his heirs, to the disinherison of the issue of her own daughters, after this manor had been in the same family, by lineal descent, nearly five hundred years. The manor of Chedworth continued in the crown till it was granted to John Dudley, earl of Warwick, afterwards duke of Northumberland, 1 E. 6. He being attainted 1 Mar. the manor reverted to the crown, and was granted to sir Edward Unton. Sir John Tracy was lord of the manor of Chedworth in the year 1608.

This manor went afterwards to sir Richard Row, of Compton; from whom it descended to John How, esq; of Stowell, sometime one of the knights of the shire for the county of Wilts, who in 1741, was created baron of Chedworth; and lord Chedworth, who resides at Stowell, in this county, is the present lord of the manor.

The other part of the manor of Chedworth, which had been given by Henry duke of Lancaster to the hospital at Leicester, continued in the possession of that hospital 'till the general dissolution of religious foundations. These lands were called Dean-lands, because the dean and chapter of Leicester were intrusted with them for the use of the hospital, and were granted to John earl of Warwick 2 E. 6. upon whose attainder they were again granted to Erskin earl of Marr, 1 Jac.

John Atwood was seized of a tenement in Chedworth called Woodland, 3 H. 4. And Thomas Mines levied a fine of lands in Chedworth to Simon Hercourt and others 23 H. 7.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the deanery of Cirencester, worth about 70*l.* a year. It is in the gift of Queen's college, Oxford. The reverend Mr. Rawys is the present incumbent. The advowson was given by William Fitz-Osborn, earl of Hereford, soon after the conquest, to the abbey of Lyra in Normandy. Afterwards William de Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, granted the advowson to the abbey of Evesham 2 E. 1. And the advowson and impropriation both belonged to the priory of Bethlehem at Sheen in Surry, who presented in the year 1489. The impropriation was given by Hugh Westwood, esq; towards the maintenance of a free grammar-school at North-leach. The impropriation pays 16*s.* 2*d.* a year to the crown.

The vicar hath a third part of all tithes, twelve acres of pasture in eight closes, two yard-lands and a half of arable land, 150 sheep-pastures, and three half acres of land on a hill, where was a chapel dedicated to St. John. The chapel has been long since demolished, and there are ash-trees growing on the spot, which bear the name of St. John's Ashes, and are to be seen at a great distance.

The vicarage-house is a very good one, built by the present incumbent.

The church hath a low tower, with five bells, at the west end.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In antient characters, against one of the buttresses of the church, is this inscription:

Hic jacet in tumba Ricard Sely & Uxis sue qui obiit
12 die mensis Maij An dm 1461 cu aie ppetiet d.

In the chancel:

GALFRIDVS WALLI, A.M. hujus Ecclesie circiter Annos
LXI Vicarius, Obijt Maij 25, Anno Dom. MDCCXLIII.
Ætat. LXXXVIII.

First fruits	£. 7	8	4	Synodals	£. 0	2	0
Tenths	—	0	14	10	Pentecostals	0	1	10
Procurations	0	6	8

4 Q

Bene-

Benefactions.

Lands were given for the repair of the church, and for the relief of the poor, in the reign of king Richard the Second. In the year 1691, they were leased out for ninety nine years, in two parcels, one at 30*s.* the other at 24*s.* a year. The lands are now worth 10*l.* a year. There are also six cottages given to the same uses.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £.	92	15	2
		Poll-tax ——— 1694, —	28	19	0
		Land-tax ——— 1694, —	54	4	0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, —	57	3	0

At the beginning of this century, according to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 150 houses, and about 500 inhabitants in this parish, whereof almost 40 were freeholders; yearly births 13, burials 11. But it appears by the register, that in ten years, from 1700, there were 153 baptisms, and 110 burials; and in the same number of years, from 1760, the baptisms were 234, and the burials 168. There are now 181 families, and 787 inhabitants. And the proportion of the living to the average number of persons buried annually, is nearly as 47 to 1.

The following particulars came to hand not 'till after the former part of this account was printed, which prevented their being inserted in the usual place.—About the year 1760, a person sinking a ditch, discovered a Roman bath, at Listercomb-bottom in this parish. It was supported by pillars of brick, round and square alternately, of about nine or ten inches diameter, and the floor was also of brick. All the bricks were mark'd AR VIRI in Roman capitals, about two inches long, which I read, A ROMANIS VIRIBVS. There was a spring, and a cistern to receive the water; and many other things in the bath, which the person destroy'd, and could give but little account of. He used most of the bricks in building an oven, but the late doctor Shaw had a perfect one, which is preserved amongst his curiosities. This place lies about two miles on the north-west side of the Roman Foss, and very probably there was a summer station of that people at Chedworth. On the hill, a little above the bath, is a large tumulus, which had a huge, rough stone set upright on the top of it, supposed to be raised by the Britons or Saxons. Not long since, some of the farmers removed the stone with a double team of oxen, and so exposed great quantities of human bones lying near the top of the barrow.

C H E L T E N H A M

IS a market-town within the hundred of its own name. It lies ten miles east from Gloucester, fifteen north from Cirencester, nine south from Tewkesbury, and a hundred west from London; from all which places there are turnpike roads leading to this town. The market is on Thursday.

Chylt, or Cylt, in the Anglo-Saxon language, signifies clay. Some, however, have supposed Chilt to be the proper name of the brook that rises at Dowdeswell, and runs by this town, which they think took denomination from it; but I know not upon what grounds that supposition is founded. In short, little can be said with certainty of the derivation of the name of this place; but according to the first acceptation of the word Cylt, it signifies a village or town of clay; perhaps so called from the buildings being first made of earth or clay, before our Saxon ancestors had learnt the art of brick-making; for it is pretty generally allowed, that after the Romans left Britain, that art and many others were lost. But the Saxons had opportunities of improvement during the reign of king Alfred, who sent for builders and artificers of almost every kind, from countries where they were more skilful.

The town consists of one handsome street, near a mile long. The buildings are chiefly of brick. It is situated on the border of a fine fertile vale, about two miles from Cleeve, Presbury, and Leckhampton hills, which join the Cotswolds, and forming a kind of semi-circle, defend the town from those cold blasts which proceed from the eastern quarter.

As the parish is large, the soils are various: On the east is a very loose, white sand, westward a strong clay, southward a fine rich loam, and in other parts a mixture of loam and sand. The air is healthy, and the water not so hard, nor so fully charged with calcareous earth, as Dr. Lucas has represented it; for the inhabitants, and all who visit them, use it for every common purpose, notwithstanding they might have the brook water with little trouble.

Here is no manufacture carried on, but the women and children of the poorer sort spin woollen yarn, for the clothiers about Stroud.

On an easy ascent, about half a mile southward of the church, in a loamy soil, rises the Cheltenham Spaw, which first drew the public attention about the year 1740. What led to the discovery of its virtues, was an observation made by several persons, that flocks of pigeons resorted to the spring, to eat a white salt, casually made from the water by the heat of the sun. And it had also been observed, that in hard, frosty weather, when other springs were frozen, this water continued fluid. Upon trial, it was found to be cathartic. It then rose in a flow, obscure spring, and ran upon the surface of a pasture ground. Mr. Mason became the proprietor of it, by purchasing the field in the year 1718, and first made a well, and erected a shed over it. In the year 1738, Mr. Henry Skillicorne purchased the premises, built a dome over the well, and erected a large handsome room for the convenience of company. About this time, Dr. Short, who was then searching after all the mineral waters in the kingdom, visited this place, and made experiments on the water, which are published in his Essay towards an experimental History of Mineral Waters. Many other eminent physicians have also, at various times, examined and recommended it, which established its reputation, and brought it into use.

The late ingenious Dr. Lucas found it pretty clear, colorless, but not the most perfectly bright. It had hardly any remarkable smell, and tasted saline, bitterish, and slightly vitriolic. It may be rather ranked among the disagreeable, than the agreeable to the palate. Essay on Waters, Part 2.

Dr. Ruty concludes, not only from his experiments made with this water, but also from the experience of those who have used it, that it gives a keen appetite, is successful in the gravel, effectual in scorbutic humours, and will cure old scorbutic ulcers, even in the legs, tho' of twenty years standing; is a remedy in erysipelas, strumous inflammations of the eyes, and those tormenting pains of the hips and lumber muscles which proceed from a lodgment of hot scorbutic salts; and that it is, at least, of equal efficacy with the Alford waters, in bilious cholics, and other disorders of the primæ viæ.

Dr. Short gives it the preference to all waters of the same kind yet discovered in England, and indeed, excepting Stoke water, it carries the greatest proportion of salt in the same volume.

I shall conclude my account of it, in the words of Dr. Lucas, taken from his Essay already quoted. In obstinate obstructions and scurvies, in cold phlegmatic constitutions, those [waters] impregnated with iron must be, as experience shews them, the most effectual. Of these it is very remarkable, that purging with them is rarely, if ever, attended with any degree of dejection: for while the salts dissolved in the waters purge, the mineral spirit, charged with iron, warms and invigorates the whole frame. In these the peasants commit extraordinary excess, without feeling any sensible ill effect. I have seen old men drink Cheltenham water by the quart, without number or rule. Upon enquiring their intention and method, they have answered, they had drank them on such days and holidays for upwards of thirty years. They said they had no disorders; but they reckoned it wholesome to clean their bodies, and they had no rule, but to drink 'till the water passed clean through them. Yet I have not been able to discover any ill effects from this strange practice.

Pleasant gravel walks lead from the town to the spaw, where, between rows of elms, that give a most delightful shade, is a walk more spacious than the rest, upwards of two hundred yards long, and twenty foot broad. At convenient distances from the town, are many agreeable airings upon the hills, which afford extensive views of the vale below.

Here are assemblies and public breakfastings, as at other places of like resort. The season is from May to October, but there is most company in the months of June, July, August, and part of September.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book this manor stands under the title Terra Regis, where it is thus recorded:

' King Edward held Chintenharn. There were eight hides and a half. Reinbald holds one hide and a half which belongs to the church.^a There were three plow-tillages in demean; and twenty villeins, and ten bordars, and seven servi, with eighteen plow-tillages. The priests [have] two plow-tillages. There are two mills of 11 s. and 8 d. King William's steward added to this manor two bordars, and four villeins, and three mills, of which two are the king's, the third is the steward's; and there is one plow-tillage more. In the time of king Edward it paid 9 l. and 5 s. and three thousand loaves for the dogs. It now pays 20 l. and 20 cows, and 20 hogs, and 16 s. instead of the bread.' D. B. p. 67.

The town of Cheltenham belonged to Henry de Bohun earl of Hereford 1 John. who exchanged it with that king for other lands; and king Henry the Third granted the manor and hundred to William Long Espee, earl of Salisbury, in the third year of his reign; who died possessed thereof, and was succeeded by his son William earl of Salisbury, who had his estates seized for going out of the kingdom without the king's license.

This manor was granted in dower to queen Elianor, daughter of the earl of Provence, 27 H. 3. and according to the records, the bishop of Hereford was seized of it in the thirty-first year of the same reign.

The abbey of Fischamp in Normandy purchased the manors of Cheltham and Sclaugtre, and the hundreds of Cheltham and Salemanesberie, with free warren, by exchange of lands in Winchelsea and Rye in Suffex, 36 H. 3. and their right to those and other great privileges which they enjoyed therein, was allowed 15 E. 1. And they obtained the king's license to sell those manors and hundreds the 18th year of the same reign.

John Limel died seized of this manor 2 E. 2. which I apprehend he held by lease only. It afterwards belonged to the priory of Montburg in Normandy; but the lands of alien monasteries being vested in the crown, by act of parliament, 2 H. 5. the manor and hundred of Cheltenham were granted to the nunnery of Syon in Middlesex; and for the further confirmation of the title, Maud, the abbess of that house, levied a fine thereof 22 H. 6. and they had another confirmation 1 E. 4. In the fourth year of the same reign, sir Maurice Berkeley of Beverstone held the same, as it is supposed, by lease from the abbess of Syon; for that nunnery was possessed of the manor of Cheltenham at the time of its dissolution, when it came to the crown. Charles prince of Wales, afterwards king Charles the First, was lord of it.

^a Reinbald was dean of the collegiate church of Cirencester.

James-Lenox Dutton, esq; is the present proprietor of this manor, which came into the Dutton family by grant from the crown.

There was a court of pleas, called the three weeks court, held by the steward of the manor, for the recovery of debts of any amount; but this court hath been long disused. By an act of parliament 1 C. 1. it is enacted, that the descent of the customary lands shall be from thenceforth in fee simple, according to the rules of common law; saving only, that if any copyholder of the said manor, shall dye without issue male, having daughters, the eldest daughter shall inherit solely, as the eldest son ought to do by the course of the common law; and that if any of the said customary lands or tenements ought, according to the course of the common law, to descend to any sisters, aunts, or female cousins, in every such case, the eldest sister, aunt, or female cousin, shall inherit the same lands and tenements solely and alone.

Of the other estates, the records shew that John Cheltenham died seized of lands in Cheltenham near Arle, 33 E. 3.

The abbey of Cirencester were owners of a mill and other lands in Cheltenham when that house was dissolved, which particulars were granted to Peter Osborn 3 Eliz. and were probably those mentioned in Domesday-book to be held by Reimbald, or the two plow-tillages which occur afterwards in the abstract quoted from that record.

Here are five fairs held on the following days, i. e. on the second Thursday in April.—Holy Thursday.—St. James's day O. S.—Second Thursday in September.—Third Thursday in December.

HAMLETS. There are five hamlets in this parish, besides the town, viz. 1. Arle.—2. Alston.—3. Westal.—4. Naunton.—5. Sandford; of which in their order.

1. Arle lies about a mile from the town, down an easy descent. On the south side of the road leading from Cheltenham to this place, on the left hand, is a spring of purging water, rising perpendicularly in the middle of a ditch, filled up with sludge and weeds, where the common water ouzes, and runs into and mixes with it, wherefore no just estimate can be made of the quantity of its fixt parts. However, according to Dr. Short, it contains nitre and alkaline earth. The salt is full as bitter and purging as that of the last. [i. e. the Hyde water. See Presbury.] This water is neither so clear, pleasant, nor brisk as the other, because of its mixture with the ditch-water. Its salt is also much different, being not calcarious, but the same with Astroepe, both in colour and crystals.

Arle-court antiently belonged to a family that took their name from this place; and from them this estate came to the Grevils, by the marriage of Robert Grevil, brother of judge Grevil, with the daughter and coheirefs of John Arles. One of the female heirs of the Grevils carried it by marriage into the family of Liggon; and in like manner it came to sir Fleetwood Dormer, by the marriage of one of the Liggons. Judge Dormer was the proprietor of this estate some time since the beginning of this century, who was succeeded therein by Mrs. Catherine Dormer, lately deceased. The honourable Mr. John Yorke, (brother to the late earl of Hardwick) who married the only daughter of Reginald Lyggon, of Maddersfield in Worcestershire, esq; is the present proprietor. There is a tithingman to this hamlet.

2. Alston, of which there is nothing observable, except that it hath a tithingman distinct from the other hamlets.

3. Westal. Thomas Phillips was seized of Arle-Westal, Cheltenham-Arle, and Hardhurst 6 E. 4.

4. Naunton, from Nant, which in the British language signifies a valley, and sometimes a brook. Francis Grevil levied a fine of lands in Naunton and Cheltenham, to the use of Thomas Barret and John Willis, 3 E. 6. Sir Henry Capel and Anne his wife levied a fine of lands in Naunton and Alston, to John Ilk and Richard Horwood, 3 Mar.

5. Sandford, so called from the sandy soil, and the ford or passage over the brook. Thomas Dingley and Philippa his wife were seized of the manor of Sandford, and of lands in Cheltenham. George Barret married their only daughter Elizabeth, who jointly sued out livery of those lands 9 H. 8. One tithingman serves for Westal, Naunton, and Sandford.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is in the deanery of Winchcombe. It is an impropriation formerly belonging to the nunnery of Syon, but immediately before the dissolution of monasteries, it belonged to the abbey of Cirencester, and was granted to sir William Rider 7 Jac. A portion of the tithes belonged to the nunnery of Usk in Monmouthshire, which tithes were granted to John Fernham 22 Eliz. The impropriation is now the property of the earl of Essex. Jesus College in Oxford recommends three of its own fellows to the heir of sir Baptist Hicks, ancestor of the present earl of Gainsborough, who chuses one, to be the parson, and presents him to the bishop. The minister is only a stipendiary, receiving 35*l.* a year of the impropriator.

The college derive their title from sir Baptist Hicks, and by agreement between them, the incumbent must not continue longer than six years. The minister has surplice fees. Here is no parsonage house.

The church is built in the form of a cross. It has a high spire in the middle, with a ring of eight musical bells, and a set of chimes. There is an aisle on each side of the church. The gallery at the west end was built by Mrs. Anne Norwood, in the year 1628; the other was erected by the subscription of the inhabitants.

Here is a lecture sermon, by subscription, in the afternoon.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is a handsome marble cenotaph in the chancel, with this inscription:

In Memory of BAPTIST SMART, M. D. late of this Place, who after a long and painful Illness, departed this Life at the Hot-Wells, Bristol, Decem^r. 20th 1772, in the 63^d Year of his Age, and lies interred at Clifton. — At bottom are his arms, Argent, a chevron between three pheons heads sable. On a scutcheon of pretence, Quarterly, Ermine and azure, a rosi Or.

In the chapel at the east end of the north aisle, on the table of a freestone monument,

Hic juxta sita est
CATHARINA
Fleetwoodi Dormer Equitis Aurati Sponsa,
Johannis Lygon de Arle-Court Armigeri,
Ex Elizabethâ Uxore Filia,
Utriusq; Parentis Hæres unica,
Cujus Familia in Agro Wigornienfi
Per trecentos et amplius annos
Floruit, et adhuc læliciter floret:
A tanto licet Genere oriunda, Nobiliq; nupta,
Stirpem, tamen et Conjugem,
Utrosq; antea illustres,
Morum Sanctitate Illustriores reddidit;
Maritum si non Patrem, Hæredem scripsit;
Hæc illum moriens amplo Patrimonio,
Ille hanc amissam, hoc Monumento decoravit.
Decessit Feb. 3.
Anno { Ætatis 72.
 { Domini 1678.

Johannes Lygon supradictus obiit 1644. Filius unicus Ricardi Lygon de Maddersfield Arm: ex secundis nuptijs cum Margaretâ filia Joh: Talbott Militis, ex Stirpe Comitum Salopiæ, Affinis suam fuit Baronibus de Berkeley Castro, alijsq; Proceribus, per Vxores suas Hæredibus quorum Insignia supernè pinguntur.

On the upper part of the monument are these arms, Per pale, Azure, 10 billets Or, 4, 3, 2, 1; on a chief of the second a demy rampant sable, for Dormer. 2. Argent, two lions passant guardant in pale gules. The arms alluded to in the inscription are fifteen quarterings, of the families of Lyggon, Bracey, Madersfield, Harefleet, Decors, Gifford, Beauchamp, Abbot, Uffleet, Arnival, Lustot, Verdon, Grevile, Arle, and Southicy.

There is a memorial upon a flat stone for William Grevil, one of the judges of the common pleas, who died in the year 1512.

Procurements £. 0 6 8 Synodals £. 0 2 0
Benefecostals 0 1 3ob.

Benefactions.

In the year 1574, Mr. Richard Pates, of Gloucester, founded a school and an hospital here. He endowed the school with 16*l.* a year for the master, and 4*l.* for the usher. The master has a house to live in. Mr. Pates gave the lands to support these charities to Corpus Christi college in Oxford, who nominate the master and usher, and the bishop of the diocese approves. From the school, an exhibitioner goes to Pembroke college, for eight years, with 10*l.* per Ann. given by Mr. Townsend. To the hospital, Mr. Pates's heirs nominate three men and three women, with a stipend of 12*d.* each weekly, 4*d.* quarterly; and 16*s.* yearly for a coat for each of the men, and a gown for each of the women. They have also 2*d.* weekly each, from another donor.

Mr. Townsend hath founded another school, and endowed it with 4*l.* a year to the master, and hath left 5*l.* a year for apprenticing out lads of this parish.

Lady Caple hath also founded a school, with a salary of 8*l.* a year to the master.

Thomas George, in the year 1620, gave by his will 3*s.* 4*d.* a year to the poor, and the same sum to the minister for a sermon, the payment of which is charged on lands now belonging to Mr. Robert Cox.

John Wallwyn, by his will in 1627, gave 2*l.* 10*s.* a year for ever to the poor of this town, charged on the manor of Swindon.

In 1667, divers charities assigned for the benefit of the poor, and for putting out apprentices, were laid out in the purchase of lands called the poors grounds, at that time worth 8*l.* 5*s.* a year; but they are now let at the improved rent of 18*l.* per annum.

In the year 1704, the reverend William Stansby, vicar of Badgworth, left an estate at Badgworth, which lets at 14*l.* a year, for apprenticing boys, of which that parish is to have 5*l.* Churchdown 3*l.* and Cheltenham the overplus.

The following are donations of a less permanent nature. In the year 1603, Lodovick Packer, gent. gave the third bell. — In 1721, lord viscount Gage gave a fire-engine, and the same year sir John Dutton, baronet, gave another. — 1738, Edmund Smith, surgeon, gave a large, handsome brass sconce for the church. — 1741, Norborne Berkeley, esq; gave a crimson velvet pulpit-cloth and cushion.

Cheltenham.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 145 13 0
	Poll-tax — 1694, — 130 19 0
	Land-tax — 1694, — 226 7 0
	The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 171 0 9

Arle.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 78 12 0
	Poll-tax — 1694, — 17 6 0
	Land-tax — 1694, — 77 4 4
	The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 57 18 3

According to an account published in the year 1712, there were 321 houses in this parish, and about 1500 inhabitants, whereof 200 were freeholders; the yearly births 48, burials 44; which appear to be the true numbers for the baptisms and burials upon the parish register, on an average of ten years beginning at 1703. And in a like series of years, from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, the births were 455, and the burials 368, or 45 baptisms and 37 burials, nearly, upon an average every year; and the inhabitants are about 1433. Hence it appears that population decreases, and that one in about 39 dies every year.

C H E R I N G T O N.

THIS parish is situated in the country adjoining to the Cotswolds, and lies in the hundred of Longtree, about three miles distant north from Tetbury, three south-eastward from Minchin-Hampton, and sixteen southward from Gloucester.

Sir Robert Atkyns asserts that the name is derived from Kinning, that is King's town; but there is not, in my opinion, the least shadow of probability on his side. In Domesday-book it is written Cerintone, where the C had undoubtedly a hard sound. And as Leppe in the Anglo-Saxon language signifies bent or crooked, and ing a meadow, or place of water; some persons have thought that the name implies a town upon a crooked stream of water; for here is a small brook which runs in a winding course from hence to Avening, and Stroud, where it joins another river, a little below the town. It is by means of this water, that the present undertakers of the Stroud navigation purpose to join their canal with the Thames at Cricklade, if they should succeed to their wishes, in the first step to Stroud.

In the great civil war, so fatal to many families of eminence and distinction, John lord Stuart, second brother to the duke of Richmond, sir John Smith, the colonels Sandys, Scot, and Manning, all eminent persons on the part of the king, were slain on the downs in this parish, in an engagement which happened between lord Hopton and sir William Waller, when the parliament's forces, under the latter, obtained the victory on the 29th of March, 1644.

Petrifications of the bivalve kind, as of the oyster, and muscle, are often found in the fields and stone-quarries, in this parish and its neighbourhood.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

This was one of the eighty-eight manors bestowed upon Miles Crispin, by the conqueror, for his assistance in the expedition against England.

'Milo [Crispin] holds Cerintone in Langetreu hundred, and Goisfrid holds it of him. Haminc held it of king Edward. There are two hides taxed. In demean are three plow-tillages, and three villeins, and eight bordars with three plow-tillages and a half. There are twelve servi, and a mill of 30d. [rent] and four acres of meadow. It is worth and was worth 4l.' D. B. p. 78.

This Miles Crispin married Maud, daughter and heir to Robert D'Oiley, and died 7 H. 1. without issue. The manor was afterwards held by the priory of Lanthony, of Edward earl of Cornwall, as of the honour of Wallingford 15 & 28 E. 1.

But Peter de la More, or de la Mere, was seized of this manor 20 E. 1. and Robert de la More was also seized of it 2 E. 2. About this time sir Robert Atkyns supposed that the Balacotes and the Mortimers held this manor; but their estate lay in Charlton in Tetbury, which he had mistaken for Cherington.

Beatrix le Boteler was seized of the manor of Cherington 32 E. 3. Elianor le Boteler held the same 46 E. 3.

It came again into the possession of the De la Mores, for sir Robert de la More and Maud his wife were seized of this manor 5 R. 2. and Maud surviving him, was seized thereof 6 H. 4.

Sir Walter Beauchamp was seized of the manor and church of Cherington 9 H. 6. and sir William Beauchamp of St. Amand, a baron, died seized of the same 35 H. 6.

This manor passed afterwards to the Baintons. Sir Edward Bainton was seized thereof in right of Isabel his wife. She surviving him, was married to John Stump, and died seized of the manor 10 Eliz. and livery was granted the same year to Henry Baynton her son and heir. It passed from this family into that of the name of Stephens.

Thomas Stephens, esq; was lord of this manor in the year 1608. Edward Stephens, esq; was lord of it when sir Robert Atkyns compiled his History. It went afterwards to sir John Turner, baronet; who sold it to — Smith, esq; of London, who is the present lord of the manor of Cherington, and has a very good estate in the parish.

This manor is holden of the honour of Ewelme. The seat of Ewelme, lying a small distance from Benson in Oxfordshire, was built by William de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, whose grandson, John earl of Lincoln, being engaged in a conspiracy against king Henry the Seventh, his estate was confiscated; and king Henry the Eighth, with the addition of some neighbouring manors, made an honour of it; and among these manors was Wallingford, which had a long time belonged to the dukes of Cornwall, of whom, it has been observed, the manor of Cherington was holden.

Lands in Cherington belonged to the rich nunnery of Benedictines at Godstow, in Oxfordshire, and were granted to John Smyth and Richard Duffield 6 Eliz.

H A M L E T. 1. Westrip is a small hamlet in this parish.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a rectory in the deanery of Stonehouse, worth about 130l. a year. Mr. Smith is patron, the reverend Samuel Lyford M. A. the present incumbent.

There were 61 acres in the west field, and 5 acres in the east field, belonging to the glebe before the inclosing, at which time the rector had 330 acres of land allotted to him in lieu of tithes.

The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and has a cross aisle on the south side, belonging to the lord of the manor, and a low embattled tower at the west end.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

In the chancel are the following memorials :

M. S.

Viri Reverendi D. Josephi Trapp, A. M. Ædis Christi Oxon. olim Alumni, & hujus Ecclesiæ per Annos 37 Rectoris Vigilantissimi. Cujus (licet obscuro in loco positus fuerit) dignæ sunt Virtutes quæ posteris traduntur. Eximia erga Deum Pietas; In Uxorem Liberosq; Affectus propensissimus; Munificentia in Pauperes, pœne quam par fuit, effusior; In Amicos Fides & Obsequium; In Universos Benevolentia. Ingenio fuit vividus & perspicax; Eruditione non mediocriter instructus; Summè humilis interim & modestus. In Congressibus comis, humanus, facilis; Scismaticis omne genus insensus; Disciplinæ Fideiq; Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Tenax. Hoc tamen vitio vertimus Viro cætera laudatissimo, (Ignoscendum illud quidem sed Doctis & Pius heu! nimium solenne) Quod Animarum solummodo sanitati negligaverit, de sano Corpore parum sollicitus. Obijt Sept. 23^d, Anno Dom. 1698, Ætat. suæ 61.

Manx, Theophili Quintin, Viri Reverendi Ecclesiæ Bristolienfis Præbendarii, Tockenhamensis vero in agro Wilton, Rectoris, Filie natu minimæ,

Quæ fuit

Vultu a Natura ad Modestiam composito,

Ingenio facili sed reconditori,

[emplar.

Virtutum omnium, præsertim Christianarum, eximium et Ornamentum et Ex-Temporis frugi, in Nummis erogandis perquam liberalis;

In Verbis solummodo parca.

In S. Scripturis veratissima,

In Precibus Publicis privatiq; dubium frequentior an flagrantior.

Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Fidem & Disciplinam semper coluit.

Vita illibata, sancta, vere virginea.

Mortem deniq; ex confluentibus (ut solet) minacem, terribissimam, gravem, Patientia tulit, Spe amplexa, et Immortalitati decessit, Ætatis suæ 34, Natu Christi 1695.

First fruits	£ 13 0 0	Synodals	£. 0 2 0
Tenths	— 1 6 0	Pentecostals	0 0 6
Procurations	0 6 8

Benefactions.

The church-house, with six acres of land in each field, twenty sheep-pastures, and two beast-pastures, were given to repair the church. And one Mr. Cox gave 5*l.* to the poor.

Taxes.	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 49 14 0
	Poll-tax — — 1694,	— 3 17 0
	Land-tax — — 1694,	— 50 12 0
	The same, at 3 s. 1770,	— 37 19 3

According to sir Robert Atkyns, there were 30 houses and about 120 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 6 were freeholders; yearly births 5, burials 4. But it appears by the parish register, that in ten years, from the year 1700, there were 7 baptisms, and 33 burials; and that in the same number of years, beginning with 1760, there were registered 51 baptisms, of whom 30 were males, and 54 burials. At this time the exact number of householders is 78, and of inhabitants 58. But during the latter period, there were two years of great mortality in the parish, which carried off 17 more than the greatest number of burials in any other two years during that period; and making a deduction on that account, the average number of annual burials will be 3.7; which is in proportion to the whole number of inhabitants nearly as 1 to 43.

CHURCH-DOWN

is a parish in the hundred of King's-barton, situated in the vale part of the county, six miles distant west from Cheltenham, nine south from Tewkesbury, and four east from Gloucester.

The church stands at the top of a steep sugar-loaf hill, whence there is a very extensive prospect over the vale, particularly up as high as Worcester. There is a silly tradition in this part of the country, that the church was begun to be built on a more convenient and accessible spot of ground, but that the materials used in the day, were constantly taken away at night, and carried to the top of the hill; which was considered as a supernatural intimation that the church should be built there. The parish takes its name from the situation of the church upon the hill or down. It is vulgarly called Clofen, and few of the common people know the proper name of it.

The soil is rich, and the parish consists chiefly of pasture, but with a good portion of arable. A small brook runs from hence, and empties itself into the Severn at Sainthurst.

John Harmar, the famous Greek professor in Oxford, was born in this parish. He died in 1670.

Of the Manor and other Estates.

In Domesday-book, this manor stands under the title Terra Thome Archiepi, the estate of Archbishop Thomas; and it is thus recorded:

'Stigand the archbishop [of Canterbury] held 'Circesdune. There were fifteen hides and a half, 'and two plow-tillages in demean, and eighteen 'villeins, and five bordars, and seven radechenifers 'with thirty plow-tillages. There was a wood 'half a mile long, and three quarters broad. It 'was then worth 13*l.* [i. e. when Stigand held the 'manor;] and is now worth 12*l.* Afterwards follow the particulars of Hochilicote and Nortune, and then it is said 'Archbishop Thomas now holds 'these three manors.' Domesday-book, p. 69.

Thomas was archbishop of York; he was found by inquisition to be seized of this manor 7 Joh. And a Quo warranto was brought against him, as against almost every other proprietor of lands, 15 E. 1. to set forth the privileges of this manor.

The temporalties of the archbishop of York were extended 14 E. 3. amongst which was the manor of Church-Down; but it was afterwards restored, and continued in the archbishoprick till it was granted to sir Thomas Chamberlain 6 E. 6. and hath ever since continued in that family. Sir John Chamberlain was lord of this manor in 1608; Edmund Chamberlain, esq; died seized of it in the year 1774, and the reverend Mr. John Chamberlain, is the present lord of the manor. For his arms, &c. see Mauerbury.

The principal estate in Church-Down, late belonging to Henry Window, esq; is now the property of Mr. Richard Rogers, of Gloucester.

John de Oldney, and Agnes his wife, levied a fine of lands in Church-Down, Nokey, and Hucklecot, to the use of themselves in taille, 3 E. 3.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

1. Church-Down, of which already.
2. Hucklecot,

2. Hucklecot, antiently written Hochilicote, and Uchelgoed. The name is compounded of two British words Uchel, lofty, and coed a wood. Here was a large wood at the time of the conquest; and not only in this place, but in several of the neighbouring villages there was a great deal of woodland, as the very names of Bernewood, or Barnwood, Wotton [i. e. wood-town] and Sainthurst, import.—This is a distinct tithing from Church-Down, and maintains its own poor.

It was also a distinct manor at the time of the general survey, tho' under the same proprietor with Church-Down.

The same Stigand held Hochilicote. There were four hides, and in demean two plow-tillages, and eleven villeins, and five bordars with eleven plow-tillages. There is a mill of 32d. [rent,] and a wood one mile long, and half a mile broad. It was then, and is now, worth 4l. Domesday-book p. 69.

When this record was made, the manor was held by Thomas archbishop of York, and continued in the fee of York, till it was granted to fir Thomas Chamberlain 6 E. 6. It has descended in the same manner, and ever had, and still continues to have, the same proprietor with Church-Down.

The abbey of Evesham had an estate in Hudlecot and Bartram, which has been called a manor, and was granted to Philip Hobby, esq; 34 H. 8. and passed afterwards to — Hanks, from whom it descended to Robert Hanks, who had livery thereof 1 Eliz.

The priory of St. Oswald in Gloucester had other lands in Hucklecot, called the New House, which were granted to John Fernham and John Doddington 17 Eliz.

Sir William Strachan, baronet, has a good house here, which he holds by lease of Samuel Hayward, esq. Sir William married one of the daughters and coheiresses of — Popham, of the Lodge, near Tewkesbury, esq.

The reverend Mr. Rogers, of Gloucester, to whose family I am greatly indebted for some papers relating to that city, has a good house and estate here. His arms are Argent, a chevron sable, between three bucks courant Or.

3. Pirton or Parton, and Elmbridge. This is a hamlet, but not a distinct tithing. There is another hamlet of the name of Pirton, in the parish of Lidney, which has occasioned some confusion and mistake in the accounts which fir Robert Atkyns gives of them. He has applied the same records to both places. Thus he says, John de Badeham and Elizabeth, his wife, levied a fine of the manor of Periton to John de Knowil, to the use of themselves, and the heirs of their bodies, the remainder to the heirs of Elizabeth 25 E. 1. In the same year, another fine was levied by John Ap Adam and Elizabeth, his wife, to the use of themselves, in tale special. And further on, Maurice, son of Thomas de Berkeley, beld Piriton 42 E. 3. Upon which I observe, that John de Badeham and John Ap Adam, is the same identical person; for Badeham is a corruption of Ap Adam, and therefore the supposed two fines are one and the same, levied by the same person. And I am of opinion that Pirton, the property of Ap Adam, and afterwards of Maurice Berkeley, lay not in this parish, but in Lidney, where the Gournays, Ap Adams, and Berkeleys, (all descendants from Fitz-Harding, the great ancestor of the Berkeley family) had other very considerable possessions, about the times of the dates above-mentioned.

But to return to Pirton in Church-Down. This manor belonged to the priory of St. Oswald in Gloucester, and was probably given to it in very early times. Upon the dissolution of that house, it was granted to fir John Jennings 37 H. 8. who had obtained the grant of the site of the priory before he was knighted. From him it descended to — Jennings, son of fir John, who dying without issue 5 Mar. it descended to John Wighte, or Wright, in right of Agnes his wife, who was daughter and heiress to Joan the wife of Robert Kemp, which Joan was daughter of the last mentioned — Jennings, son of fir John Jennings. John Wighte and Agnes, his wife, had livery of this manor the same year. And Richard Wighte their son, died seized of the manor of Perton, alias Parton, as I find it written in the Escheator's inquisition, 43 Eliz. and devised it in trust, to be sold, to raise portions for his children. Lord Craven is the present lord of this manor. This is not a distinct tithing. William Singleton, esq; has a good estate at Parton.

4. Brickhampton. This is a reputed manor. The prior of Gloucester was seized of Trithampton 19 E. 1. which I mention, not as being certain that this manor is the Trithampton of the record, but because I find it thus express'd by fir Robert Atkyns. John Sage granted 100 solidatas of land in Brickhampton, to the abbey of Hayles, 6 E. 2.

This manor belonged to fir Robert Atkyns of Saperton, at the beginning of this century; and is now the joint property of the reverend Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Hoard.

5. Noke. John de Oldney and Agnes, his wife, levied a fine of lands in Nokey 3 E. 3. John de Wisham was seized of Noketon 6 E. 3. This is now the estate of Samuel Hayward, esq;

Of the Church, &c.

This church is an impropriation in the deanery of Gloucester. It was a chapel to St. Catherine's alias St. Oswald's, in Gloucester 19 E. 1 & 2 H. 7. The rectories, with the advowson of the vicarage of Church-Den and Hucklecot, belonged to the priory of St. Oswald's at Gloucester, and were granted to the dean and chapter of Bristol 34 H. 8. who are the patrons and impropriators. The lessee of the impropriation pays the curate year year. The reverend Mr. Evans is the present incumbent. The living has been augmented with queen Anne's bounty, added to a donation of 200*l.* given by Mrs. Ursula Taylor, which makes it now worth about 50*l.* a year.

The church consists of the nave and an aisle on the south side, with a tower and five bells at the west end.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

Here are no very remarkable monuments. Against the south wall of the chancel is this inscription.

Here lyes Sir Robert Austen, Bar^t. of Hall Place, near Dartford in Kent, of an antient Family. He was honest and generous. He died September the 20th, 1743, in the 43^d year of his age. His arms are on a scutcheon, Or, a chevron gules, between three lions paws erased and erected sable. The arms of Ulster.

On a tomb in the church-yard, is the following inscription, with four lines out of Horace. Ode 3. lib. II.

Hoc Sepulchro in diem resurrectionis reconditur corpus Dni Johis Brown sen. hujus Paroch. qui ex hac vita migravit 21^o. Feb. Anno Dni 1689, Ætatis suæ 72^o.

Omnes eodem cogimur, omnium
Versatur urna; ferius, ocyus
Sors exitura, & nos in æternum
Exilium impositura cymbæ.

On another side of the tomb:

Hic etiam acquiescunt corpora Catharinæ, Annæ, & Henrici, ætatorum dni Iohis Brown, sen. & Catharinæ uxoris ejus. Catharina humata erat Martii 28^o; Anna, Junii 20^o; Henricus, Julii 15^o; tres eodem Anno, 1683.

There is a memorial upon two flat stones under the south wall of the church, for Henry Windowe, Esq; who died in 1745-6, aged 63; and for Sarah his wife, who died in 1759, aged 60.—Mr. Windowe's arms are engraven on the stone, i. e. azure, a fess raguly between three lions paws erased and erected Or.

Pentecostals 6*d.*

Benefactions.

Mr. Cox of Sandhurst gave 50*l.* a year to the poor of several parishes, of which those of this parish, not receiving alms, have 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

—Blount, gentlewoman, gave five acres of pasture ground, inclosed in Hatherly meadow, for such poor labourers and widows of this parish receive no alms. Richard Holford, gent. gave our almshouses, with three acres and a half of arable land, and one acre of pasture, for the use of four poor widows of this parish. William Mansby, gent. gave 3*l.* a year for apprenticing out poor boys. And Jeremiah Mitchell, gent. gave 5*s.* a year to provide bread and wine for nine monthly sacraments.

Henry Windowe, esq; late of this parish, gave an estate in Badgworth, now let for 100*l.* a year, for the endowment of two charity-schools; the one for instructing all poor boys and girls of this parish, and of Badgworth, upwards of six years of age, in reading and writing, under the master; the other for instructing younger boys to read, and girls to read, knit, &c. under a mistress. And he gave two houses in this parish, for the master and mistress to live in.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692, £. 321 5 4
		Poll-tax — 1694, — 18 15 0
		Land-tax — 1694, — 279 16 0
		The same, at 3 s. 1770, — 69 8 3

According to fir Robert Atkyns, there were 100 houses and about 400 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 20 were freeholders; yearly births 10, burials 8. But it appears by the parish register, that the average of annual burials, in ten years from 1700, was 7, of baptisms 13.1. And in the like number of years, from 1760, the average of baptisms was 16.8, of burials 13.2. The present number of householders is exactly 131, of inhabitants 630. These numbers shew that the place is remarkably healthy for a vale-situation, as only one in 47.8, upon an average, dies every year; and that population increases very considerably.

C H U R C H A M

LIES in the forest division, in the hundred of Westbury, eight miles east from Mitchel-Dean, seven north-east from Newnham, and five north-westward from Gloucester. There are three hamlets belonging to it, which lie in a different hundred.

Hamme was the antient name of it, as we find it written in Domesday-book. But there was another Hamme mentioned in the same record, which lay contiguous to the first. The vicinity of two places of the same name occasioned confusion, wherefore it was requisite to distinguish them. The parish church lay in the Hamme of which I am now treating, and was therefore called Churcham. The other Hamme lay higher up, on the banks of the Severn, wherefore it obtained the name of Highbnam. This distinction had taken place 9 E. 1. for in that year, the sheriff returned Chircham to be a vill in the hundred of Westbury, but Highnam was one of the vills in the hundred of Dudston.

Of the Manors and other Estates.

Wolphin, or Ulfine le Rue, or Lehue, was consul or governor of Gloucester in the fifth year of the reign of king Canute. He was also lord of the two manors of Hamme. At the instigation of Wolstan bishop of Worcester, king Canute turned out the secular priests from the abbey of Gloucester, and placed monks of the order of St. Benedict in their stead; but this le Rue was so averse to the monks, that he slew seven of them, not far from the town, in the year 1033, or, according to another account, in 1048. The pope afterwards obliged him to atone for his offence, by giving those manors for the maintenance of seven monks in St. Peter's abbey. I shall now treat of them distinctly. Domesday-book gives the following account of Churcham:

'The same church [of St. Peter of Glowec'.] holds Hamme and Mortune, in Westberies hundred. There are five hides in wood and in plain. In demean are two plow-tillages, and seven villeins, and two bordars, with six plow-tillages. [There is] a wood one mile long and one broad. The church had venison in three parks there, in the time of king Edward, and so she hath in the time of king William. It was worth 20 sol. and is now worth 40 sol.' Domesday-book, p. 71.

The sheriff returned, that the abbey of Gloucester was seized of this manor 9 E. 1. and free warren therein was allowed to the abbat in a writ of Quo Warranto 15 E. 1. The same abbey had a grant of eighty acres and sixty perches of land in Churcham 6 E. 3. to make a park there.

This manor continued in the abbey 'till the dissolution of religious foundations. The manor of Churcham, with the rectory, and advowson of the vicarage, as also a wood in Churcham, called Byrdewood, containing by estimation one hundred acres, were granted to the dean and chapter of Gloucester 33 H. 8. Charles Barrow, esq; one of the representatives of the city of Gloucester, and James Money, esq; are lessees of the manor, under the dean and chapter. For Mr. Barrow's arms, see Minsterworth.

Of the other estates the records shew, that Edward Barrow died seized of lands in Churcham 12 Eliz. and James, his son and heir, had livery of them the same year.

TITHINGS and HAMLETS.

There are three hamlets in this parish, Highbam, Linton, and Over, which lie in the hundred of Dudston and King's-Barton, and together make one tithing, and maintain their poor jointly, but distinctly from Churcham. They were antiently within the hundred of Tolangbrige, which is now comprised in Dudston and King's-Barton.

1. Highbam is two miles distant from Gloucester. Of this manor it is thus recorded:

'The church [of St. Peter of Glowec'.] holds Hamme in Tolangebriges hundred. There are seven hides. In demean are three plow-tillages, and twenty-two villeins, and four bordars, with seven plow-tillages. There are eight servi, and thirty acres of meadow, and wood sufficient for the manor. It was worth 40 sol. but is now worth 4 l.' Domesday-book, p. 71.

In the lease of this manor, granted by the abbat of Gloucester 7 H. 8. part of the mansion-house is reserved for the abbat and his men, if the plague or pestilence should be in Gloucester or Over.

This estate continued in the possession of the abbey of Gloucester 'till that house was dissolved, wherefore all the demean lands are tithe free. The manors of Highbam and Over, and divers messuages and lands, with the tithes thereof, lying in Churcham, all formerly belonging to the abbey of Gloucester, were granted to John Arnold of Monmouthshire, esq; 33 H. 8. at whose death, livery of the manor of Highnam was granted to his son, sir Nicholas Arnold, 37 H. 8. He married Margaret, daughter of sir William Dennys of Dyrham, and was succeeded by Rowland Arnold, his son, who married Mary, daughter of John Brydges, lord Chandois, and left an only daughter and heiress, wedded to Thomas Lucy, son of sir Thomas Lucy, of Charlcot in Warwickshire.

Thomas Lucy likewise left an only daughter, married to sir William Cook, descended from the family of the Cooks of Giddy-hall in Essex. By this marriage, sir William Cook had the manor of Highnam, of which he died seized in 1618. Sir Robert Cook was son and heir of sir William. He married Dorothy daughter of sir Miles Fleetwood, of Aldwincle in Northamptonshire. William Cook, son of sir Robert, succeeded him, and married Anne, daughter of Dennis Rowls, of Devonshire. He was high sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1663, and served in several parliaments for the city of Gloucester. Dennis Cook, esq; eldest son of William, married Mary, sister of the lord Scudamore of Herefordshire; but dying before his father without issue, his brother Edward Cook, esq; succeeded to the estate. He married Mary, daughter of Roger Newborough, of Somersetshire. William Cook, esq; was his son and heir, but dying unmarried, his brother Dennis succeeded to this estate; and he dying without male issue, the estate devolved to his two sisters, agreeably to their father's will. The elder was married to Reynon Jones, of Nafs, in this county, esq; and the younger to Henry Guise, of the city of Gloucester, esq; whose son John Guise, esq; is the present possessor. He has a beautiful seat at Highnam with large gardens, fish-ponds, and a very extensive park. It commands a prospect of the city of Gloucester, and of the vale. The public is indebted to his generosity for the park annexed. Mr. Guise's arms are, Gules, seven lozenges vair, 3, 3, 1, on a canton Or, a mullet six points pierced sable. A crescent for distinction.

The lord of the manor of Highnam claims a very singular right, of turning two horses into mowing grass of a large meadow near the city of Gloucester, called Wollam, from St. George's day 'till the whole is cut down.

2. Linton, but antiently Lilton, and Linton. The tithes of this place, and the parsonage of Aldefworth, formerly belonging to the abbey of Gloucester, were granted to the bishoprick of Gloucester 33 H. 8.

3. Over. This hamlet lies on the banks of the Severn, opposite to the city of Gloucester, which it has a communication by bridges over several branches of that river. Over-bridge is the lowest on the Severn, and is maintained at the public expence of the county.

In sir Robert Atkyns's account of Over Almondsbury, is the following particular, which

Engraved by J. Bennett

Highnam Court the Seat of John Gause Esq.

Bazington Park, Sandwell Park, Berkeley Castle, Bibury, New Hills, Round Oak Park, and the Print perceptible and Compendious ... Printed by T. Bowne N^o. 45. Strand London ...

Engraved by J. Bennett

Highnam Court the Seat of John Gause Esq.

Bazington Park, Sandwell Park, Berkeley Castle, Bibury, New Hills, Round Oak Park, and the Print perceptible and Compendious ... Printed by T. Bown N^o 41, Strand London ...

seems to belong to this place. In the year 804 Ethelrick, son of king Ethelmund, at the request of a synod held at Gloucester, wherein he was present, granted thirty messuages in Overe to the church of St. Peter in Gloucester, and confirmed the grant of his father, in the time when the canons secular resided there. But there seems to be a mistake in the date of this account, for it does not appear that the secular canons were then settled at Gloucester. Lands lying in Over, which formerly belonged to the abbey of Gloucester, were granted to Edward duke of Somersset 1 E. 6.

Mr. Guise holds court leet and court baron for Highnam, Linton, and Over.

Of the Church, &c.

The church is a vicarage, in the Forest deanery, worth about 80*l.* a year. The dean and chapter of Gloucester are patrons and impropiators; the reverend Mr. Edward Sparkes the present incumbent. The chapel of Bully is annexed to it.

The church consists of the nave only, with a square steeple at the west end. It is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a chapel at Highnam, built by the family of the Cooks, some of whom are buried there, without any memorial. Their arms are, Or, a chevron chequy gules and azure, between three cinquefoils of the last.

Monuments and Inscriptions.

There is an inscription in the church, in memory of John Arnold, esq; and Elizabeth his wife. He died in 1546. Another inscription for Edward Oldisworth, esq; and of Tacy his wife, daughter of Arthur Porter, esq. and granddaughter of John Arnold, esq. Mr. Oldisworth died in 1570. In the chancel is an inscription for John Brown, esq; alderman of Gloucester, and lessee of this manor, who died in 1639. And another inscription for Mr. John Harris, son of John Harris, an alderman of Gloucester, and lessee of this manor. He died in 1680.

First fruits	£. 20 5 0	Synodals	£. 0 7 8
Tiths	— 2 0 6	Pentecostals	0 2 0
Procurations and

Benefactions.

There are four houses and five acres of land settled for the benefit of four poor women. Mr. Cox has given an annuity of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to the poor. Mr. Blount has also given five acres to the use of the poor.

Churcham.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 115	8	0
Poll-tax		— 1694,	— 14	9	0
Land-tax		— 1694,	— 127	2	0
The same, at 3 s. 1770,		— 95	3	0

Highnam, Linton, and Over.

Taxes.	{	The Royal Aid in 1692,	£. 144	1	4
Poll-tax		— 1694,	— 32	0	0
Land-tax		— 1694,	— 168	14	0
The same, at 3 s. 1770,		— 126	9	0

There were 77 houses and about 340 inhabitants in this parish, whereof 18 were freeholders, yearly births 15, burials 13, according to sir Robert Atkyns, when he compiled his account of it. But having examined the parish register, it appears, that in ten years, from 1700 to 1709, both inclusive, there were 118 baptisms and 76 burials; so that the average about that time was very short of sir Robert's numbers. In the same number of years, from 1760 to 1769, both inclusive, there were registered 143 baptisms, and 78 burials, which somewhat exceed those in the former period; and the inhabitants are at present about 309. From the great disproportion between the baptisms and burials, I judge, that many of the natives who are baptised here, settle elsewhere. This indeed might be expected from the situation of the parish so near to the city of Gloucester. Besides it lies near the river Severn, the great navigation upon which takes all persons concerned in it from home, and is a great means of changing their settlements.

C I R E N C E S T E R.

1. Of the Situation, Name, Extent, Antiquities, &c.

CIRENCESTER is a market and borough town, situate in Lat. 51° 13' 30" Long. 90 miles west from London. It is thirty-six miles distant eastward from Bristol, and thirty-three from Bath; thirty-four westward from Oxford, seventeen south-east from Gloucester, and seven north-west from Cricklade in Wiltshire.

The parish, consisting of a due proportion of meadow and pasture, arable and woodland, is about four miles and a half long, and two and a half broad.

The town is situated on the borders of the Cotswold country, in the south-east part of the county, where three great Roman roads meet, the Foss, the Irminstreet, and the Ikenild-way. It stands on the river Ceri, or Cori, or *Corin*¹, which we now call the Churn, and takes its name from that river²; for the Britons called it *Caer-Ceri*³, and *Caer-Cori*⁴; in whose language caer, which in its genuine sense should be translated a wall, or fortress, came at length, when used in the compo-

¹ Dr. Howell's History of the World, Part 4, p. 171.— Coryn in the British language signifies the top, and is very properly applied to this river, because it is the highest source of the Thames.

² Eorum vero [i. e. Dobunorum] prima civitas fuit Corinium, Corino fluvio vicino sic appellata. Britannicè dicta est Cairi, vel rectius Cori. Saxonice autem Churnestres: deinde et Cirencester: at nunc, ablata media vocabuli parte, Chester. Hic ingens vis numismatum imaginibus Cæsarum, lege Britannis imposita, signatorum reperitur. Paucis ab hinc annis ibidem erant inter mentiorum rudera tabule Ro. literis interceptæ. Icelandi Itin. v. 9, p. 32, sub verbo Dobuni.

³ Aller de Reb. Gell. Ælfrædi, p. 35, Ed. Wile.

⁴ Lambard's Description of England.

sition of the names of places, to signify a walled or fortified town.

The Roman name of this place was framed from the British; Ptolomy calls it Corinium, Antoninus Duro-Cornovium, probably from dur, the British word for water. The latter name seems to be most expressive, yet both signify the town upon the water or river Corin.

The Anglo-Saxons, either from the British, or from the Roman name, called the town Lopneceartre, Lupineceartre^p, Lynenceartre; upon which I shall once more observe, that ceartre is nothing more than a translation of the British word caer into the Saxon language. The name of the town, as it is now written, stands at the head of this account, but the present common appellation is Cifeter.

On a near approach to the town, there is a gentle descent every way, except from the south. The air is so remarkably pure and salubrious, that a physician, who settled here about forty years since, after staying a time sufficient, as he thought, to make trial of his success, pronounced it impossible for one of his profession to subsist on the practice the town and its neighbourhood afforded. The water is sufficiently pure and pleasant, rising in a fine gravel, about fourteen or fifteen feet below the surface, and almost every house has a pump.

The town consists of eleven streets, besides lanes and alleys. Dyer-street, but more antiently Chipping-street, so called because the market is held in it, is that by which you enter the town from London and Oxford. From the round stone at the bottom of it to the other extremity, at the crossing of the four principal streets, it measures 549 yards.—Cricklade-street is so called because it leads to the antient town whose name it bears. From a stone which marks the limits of the borough on that side, at the bottom of the street, to the other extremity, it measures 360 yards.—Castle-street, which name was given it from its leading to the antient castle, is that by which you enter the town from Bristol and Bath, and is 274 yards long.—Gosditch-street, leading from the middle of the town northward to the first bridge towards Gloucester, is in length 180 yards.—Dollar-street, or in old writings, Le Fosse, commencing at the first bridge, and extending to the second, on the same road, is 190 yards long.—St. Lawrence-street, or Gloucester-street, was so called because the church of St. Lawrence stood in it, and because it leads to Gloucester. This street is 427 yards long.—Cecily-street, or Cecily-hill, took its name from the church of St. Cecilia standing in it. From Groomstole-bridge, where this street begins, to the end of it, leading to Minchin-hampton, it is 190 yards.—Black-jack-street, which leads from Groomstole-bridge, and seems like a continuation of the last mentioned street, is in length 300 yards.—Silver-street, making the communication between Black-jack-street and Castle-street, is in length only 75 yards.—Thomas-street had its appellation from an hospital standing in it, dedicated to the saint of that name, and, extending from Groomstole-bridge to the bottom of Dollar-street, is 227 yards long.—Coxwell-street was so called from the name of a person of considerable property who lived in it; but the more antient name is Abbat-street, which was given it because it led to the abbey. This street is 221 yards long.—Shoe-lane, (so called from the shoe-makers settling there) the Butter-row, and the Butcher-row, lie parallel to each other on the west side of the corn-market, whence the two latter lead to the high-crofs, and are 33 yards long.— Besides these, there are Sheep-street-lane, on the south-west side of the town; Spital-gate-lane, corruptly called Spiringate-lane, on the north side of it; Leaufe-lane on the south-east, and the Law-ditch-lane on the west side of it.

Coming into the town from Gloucester, a great part of the street is a hollow way, in some places five feet deep, where a portion of the Churn water runs, and empties itself into one of the arms of that river at the second bridge. There is a tradition that the river antiently ran through the middle of the town, which is strengthened by a passage in Leland, who says, Be lykebod yn times past Guttes were made that Partes of Churne Streame might cum thorow the Cyte, and so to returne to theyre great Bottom. Itin. v. 5, p. 61. And not many years since, as the workmen were digging a vault under the street, near where the four principal streets meet, at about the depth of six feet under the surface, they found stones set up edge-ways, like those commonly placed in a water-course, for people to step on. This circumstance, I think, puts the matter out of doubt, that antiently the water ran through the town by the high crofs, and so down Cricklade-street, and at length joined the main river at Watermore.

There is a great deal of travelling through this place from the northern to the western parts of England, and from Bath and Bristol to London, through Oxford and Abingdon. Two stage-coaches pass thro' it to London, and a third in its course between Bath and Oxford; which, with a great number of heavy carriages that keep their regular stages, open a communication between this place and Monmouthshire, South Wales, Hereford, Gloucester, Worcester, Warwick, Coventry, Leicester, Nottingham, the West, and many other places; a circumstance so favourable to trade, that, next to Gloucester, this is esteemed the principal market-town in the county.

It has two weekly markets, on Monday and Friday. The first, for grain and all sorts of commodities, is very much frequented; the other is chiefly for wool, butchers-meat, and poultry. The wool-market was once very considerable, till the dealers in that article began to travel the country, and buy their wool at the farm-houses, which at length had this effect, that instead of thirty or forty waggon-loads, which used to be brought hither every market-day, there has been, for some time, scarcely any sent to market; and the Boothall, where the wool was usually deposited, is now taken down.

Frequent oppositions in the borough, in choosing their representatives in parliament, have made the poor inhabitants more licentious, and less industrious, than they formerly were. These circumstances are unfavourable to manufactures, and generally prevent them from rising to any degree of eminence. The cloathing business flourished here, according to Leland, in the reign of king Henry the Eighth; but at present little is done in that manufacture.

The heavy edge-tools of this place are in great reputation, especially those knives which carriers use in shaving leather, and which find a market all over Europe and America. Wool-combing is on the decline. Carpet-making hath been lately introduced; and there are a few cheneys, harra-teens, and light stuffs manufactured. But stocking frame-knitting, which was set on foot about forty years since, lies at the last gasp, under many disadvantages, and is only kept from expiring by the cordial influence of a very large estate, which was charitably intended to promote some considerable manufacture here. The principal business is woolstapling and yarn-making, for which the town is well situated, near the cloathing country.

This is called an antient city, and, according to the opinion of some persons, of so high antiquity as to have been built by the Britons, before the Roman invasion. But that the Britons had then any cities or towns, in the sense we now understand those terms, is a notion very contrary to the testimony of antient authors, of the greatest credit as to that matter. Cæsar indeed, in his book De Bello Gallico, speaks of their towns, but he tells us what they were; Oppidum autem Britanni vocant, quum silvas impeditas vallo atque fossa munitur: The Britons call that a town, when they have surrounded and fenced about their thickest woods with a bank and a ditch. And Xiphilin speaking of the Meatae, or inhabitants of the now most northern counties of England, asserts, that they had neither walls nor cities; what passed under the name of cities in Britain, being, according to Strabo, no other than groves. These authorities will stand their ground against the fond conceits and loose conjectures of later writers; and upon this ground I shall venture to say that Cirencester was built by the Romans. The precise time of its foundation I do not pretend to ascertain, but I apprehend it might be very soon after they had established themselves in Britain. Three great roads meeting at this place, rendered it the most desirable situation for a town that can be conceived, and no doubt that circumstance induced them to make choice of it.

Being the metropolis of the large province of the Dobuni, it was called Corinium Dobunorum, and became a very eminent station for the Roman armies. Antoninus places it at the distance of fourteen miles from Glevum, or Gloucester, in the thirteenth Iter from Isca, now Caerleon in Monmouthshire, to Calleva, which Dr. Gale will have to be Henly, the Calleva Atrebatum, or chief city of the Atrebatii, whilst others give that honour to Wallingford in Berkshire.

According to Brompton, and several other antient writers, this city lay in the province of Wiccia. The antient city wall was more than two miles in circumference. It was intire in the reign of king Henry the Fourth, but must have been razed soon after. Leland traced it quite round in king Henry the Eighth's time, but even then there were but few vestiges of it remaining;

. Sic omnia fatis

In pejus ruere, ac retro sublapsa referri. Virg.

He tells us, that 'A man may yet, walking on the bank of Churne, evidently perceyve the cumulative pace of foundation of towers sumtyme standing in the waul. And nere to the place wher the right goodly clothing mylle was set up a late by the abbate, was broken down the ruine of an old tower, toward making of the mylle waulles, in the which place was fownd a quadrate stone fawllen down afore, but broken in aliquot frustra, wherein was a Romain inscription, of the which, one scantly letterd that saw yt, told me, that he might perceyve PONT. MAX. Among divers numismata fownd frequently there, Dioclesian's be most fairest; but I cannot adfirme the inscription to have bene dedicate onto hym. In the middes of the old town, in a medow, was found a flore de tessellis versicoloribus, and by the town nostris temporibus was fownd a broken shank bone of a horse, the mouth closed with a pegge; the which taken owt, a shepard found yt fillid nummis argenteis. In the south-south-west side of the waul be lykelyhod hath bene a castel, or sum other great building, the hilles and diches yet remayne. The place is now a warden for conys, and therein hath be fownd mennes bones insolitæ magnitudinis, also to sepulchres ex scæto lapide. In one was a round vessel of leade covered, and in it ashes and peaces of bones.' Leland's Itin. v. 5, p. 65.

Dr. Stukeley visited this place in the year 1723, and fancied that he could even then trace the old city wall quite round the town. But antiquities give way to modern improvements, and all that remains of it, at present, lies on the east and south-east sides, about half a mile in length, covered with earth and rubbish fourteen or fifteen feet high. A small part being uncovered in 1774, it was found to be eight feet thick, built with hewn stone, strongly cemented with lime and gravel.

A little within the old city wall, is a pretty large tract of ground called the Leaufes, now converted to garden-ground and corn-fields, where, for many ages past, have been found antient carvings, inscriptions, and tessellated pavements, with great abundance of Roman coins, rings, and intaglio's, which have been long since lost or dispersed. From these circumstances, together with the name, Dr. Stukeley, with good reason, supposed the Leauses to have been the Roman Prætorium, for Ilys, in the British language, signifies a court.

Several authors have barely mentioned these antiquities, but they have not transmitted down to us a catalogue of the coins, nor given us so many particulars as the subject deserved: I shall, however, collect from them what has been written, and then subjoin my own particular observations.

Leland has left us no more than what is quoted in the preceding page.

Sir Robert Atkyns follows next in order. 'Here,' says that gentleman, in his account of Cirencester, 'are often dug up, in old foundations, a great many and great variety of ancient Roman coins. There was accidentally discovered, in a meadow near the town, an ancient building under ground. It was 50 foot long and 40 broad, and about 4 foot high; supported by 100 brick pillars; inlaid very curiously with tesseraick work, with stones of divers colours, little bigger than dice: It is supposed to have been a bathing-place of the Romans.' This is all sir Robert says, from whose account the reader will not very readily understand what part was so curiously inlaid; whether the pillars, the whole building, or (as it is most likely) the pavement only.

Then comes Doctor Stukeley, who has not complimented the good people of Cirencester on account of their taste for works of antiquity. 'Large quantities of carved stones,' says he 'are carried off yearly in carts [meaning from the Leauses] to mend the highways, besides what are useful in building. A fine mosaic pavement was dug up here in September 1723, with many coins. I bought a little head, which had been broken off from a basso-relievo, and seems by the tiara, of a very odd shape, like fortification-work, to have been the genius of a city, or some of the Dea Matres which are in the old inscriptions, such like in Gruter, p. 92. The gardener told me he had lately found a little brass image, I suppose one of the Lares; but upon a diligent scrutiny, his children had played it away. Mr. Richard Bishop, owner of the garden, on a hillock near his house, dug up a vault sixteen feet long, and twelve broad, supported with square pillars of Roman brick, three feet and a half high, and on it a strong floor of terras. There are now several more vaults near it, on which grow cherry-trees, like the hanging gardens of Babylon. I suppose these the foundations of a temple, for in the same place they found several stones of the shafts of pillars, six feet long, and bases of stone near as big in compass as his summer house adjoining, as he expressed himself; these, with cornices very handsomely moulded, and carved with medallions and the like ornaments, were converted into swines-troughs. Some of the stones of the bases were fastened together with cramps of iron, so that they were forced to employ horses to draw them asunder, and they now lie before the door of his house as a pavement. Capitals of these pillars were likewise found, and a crooked cramp of iron, ten or twelve feet long, which probably was for the architraves of a circular portico. A mosaic pavement near it, and intire, is now the floor of his privy vault.

'Sometimes,' continues the doctor, 'they dig up little stones as big as a shilling, with stamps on them. I conjecture they are counterfeit dies to cast money in. We saw a monumental inscription' [see the margin] 'upon a stone of Mr. Isaac Tibbot's, in Castle-street, in very large letters, four inches long'. It was found at a place half a mile west of the town, upon the north side of the Foss-road, called the Querns, from the quarries of stone thereabouts. Five such stones lay flat-wise upon two walls, in a row, end to end, and underneath were the corpses of that family, as we may suppose. He keeps Julia Casta's skull in his summer-house, but people have stole all her teeth out for amulets against the ague. Another of the stones serves for a table in his garden; 'tis handsomely squared, five feet long, and three and a half broad, without any inscription. Another is laid for a bridge over a channel near the cross in Castle-street. There were but two of them which had inscriptions; the other inscription perished, being unluckily exposed to the wet in a frosty season, probably of the husband. Several urns have been found thereabouts, being a common burying-place. I suppose them buried here after Christianity.' Stukeley's Itineraria Curiosa.

When we compare these accounts together, it seems probable that the antient building mentioned by sir Robert Atkyns (and which seems to be the same that, according to a manuscript which I have seen, was opened in 1683) was in part dug up and destroyed by the gardener, in Dr. Stukeley's time. What remained of it being afterwards covered over with earth, was again opened in 1780. The opening was made about sixteen yards from a wick-elm, growing in the S. W. wall of the garden. About three feet and a half below the surface, the workmen came to a very smooth floor of terras, which they found to extend about twelve

* This stone is fixed in Mr. Bush's garden-wall, in Cirencester.

