New-Orleans, May 11.

ONE DAY LATER FROM FRANCE.

The Havre packet ship Charlemagne, Captain Pearce, has arrived and brings us a Havre paper one day later than those brought by the Manhattan. It contains the following important intelligence communicated by a Paris correspondent, under date of 5th April, in relation to TURKEY & EGYPT.

We have received by an extraordinary conveyance, arrived at the highest importance from Alexandria of the 16th of March. This news arrived at ... brig La Cygne, forwarded with the greatest ... The following are the particulars of ...

The Pacha of Egypt Mahomet Ali ... accept the propositions made by France on the subject of the war between Egypt and Turkey.

Admiral Roussin having despatched an express to Alexandria, to make known to our Consul General the terms of the truce which had been agreed on at Constantinople, to arrest the march of Ibrahim and to remove every pretext for the interference of Russia. M. de Mevaut, the French Consul General demanded and immediately obtained a conference with Mahomet Ali. The Pacha, who had also received dispatches from Ibrahim, received our Consul coolly, and flatly refused to transmit to his son instructions on the march to Constantinople. It appears that he was indignant at the part assigned him in the propositions of the powers, and particularly when he learned that conditions were made for him without previously consulting him. The Consul immediately ...ed of the bold La Cygne to carry ...

It will be seen that this news is of the highest importance. It ... ...ntly clear the obstacles of Russia ... Porte. It ... ...ground for the embarrassment in which ... Admiral ... Constantinople ... himself, and renders the intervention ... certain. The following is a ... ...from Odessa, of the 15th March, which does not give, it ... in the East a more favorable aspect.

"A vessel arrived from Constantinople in sixty-four hours has brought accounts that the Russian fleet was still tranquilly at anchor in the Bosphorus. Meantime, government has freighted a great number of merchant vessels, which are destined to take on board and carry to Constantinople the Russian detachment of troops which is advancing by forced marches to this quarter, in case events in Turkey, should render such a matter necessary. The departure of these troops will infallibly take place, if Ibrahim again advances further, particularly as the French Ambassador guaranteed peace on condition that the Russian fleet should depart, and this condition, which was a sine qua non, not having been complied with, France will not consider herself bound."

We learn that the Charlemagne has brought as was expected the would, the draft drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury on the French Government and protested.

London, April 3d.

Considering our relations with the Ottoman Porte, we conceive (and in this we are supported by the general feeling here,) that our government cannot be too sufficiently alive to the passing events in the Mediterranean. The voracious and ambitious Russian Eagle, now hovers over the Turkish Empire with a gloating desire to pounce upon it with her talons, at the first fitting moment for her descent. When we contemplate what may be the result of the proposed ...sions in our Oriental empire, we cannot press upon the public attention the important necessity of preserving to ourselves the integral power of an overland communication with India. From information we have received, we have every reason to believe that the ... and English Consuls struck their flag at Smyrna immediately on the occupation of that place by Ibrahim Pacha. By the tenor of the accounts from Vienna, it has been supposed that some great political movement is anticipated, since they bring a decline in the funds of one per cent.

HOLLAND.

It has also been reported that a strong opposition has been arisen for the final settlement of the King's quarrel by the Dutch Government, and also that our prince of diplomatists, Lord Palmerston, has somewhat altered in the ...tenance of his views. The line taken ascribed as a promise, cannot be the implement in our books; but it may; also it would be given to the influence of the final passing of the Irish Disturbances bill, and the postponement of the Budget. The latter, being put off until after the sealing day, has had the effect of giving the transactions of this Account an additional impetus, since they will have no reference to the influence of the supposed terms of the forthcoming Budget. Consols have, in consequence, advanced from 87 3-4 to 87 1-4 for money and ...ount. New 3 1-2 per cent. ... are 94 7-8. Bank Stock, 201.

...ort.—An arrival at Boston from Smyrna ... the latter city to the 8th March. ... and the surrounding country had been in a very unsettled state in consequence of the advance of the Egyptian ... and the uncertainty what would be the course ... European powers with regard to the contest. On the ... Feb. an Egyptian officer from the Pacha's army ... ...from Smyrna, entered the town, escorted by a small escort, and took possession in the name of Ibrahim Pacha. The governor was ordered to ... ...other was immediately appointed to act in the ... Viceroy of Egypt. This change was made without ... ...disturbance among the populace, the inhabitants being well disposed towards the Egyptian authority.

...new government met with no obstacles in the exercise ... authority until the 5th March, when couriers arrived ... Constantinople, bringing intelligence that the new ... Sultan at that court had declared it to be the ... alliance to join with Russia in support of the ... ...ty. In consequence of this information, the ... those powers refused to acknowledge the new ... Smyrna, and were making preparations to ... the flag staffs, when the governor thought proper ... his post to the former officer under the sultan. ... ...governor was thrown into prison, until he should ... the money taken from the treasury during his absence, which amount to end the Egyptian authority. ... ...ntly encamped near Smyrna, but when he ... ...acquainted with the determination of the commissioners, he will probably desist from any further attempt ... ...designs against Smyrna and Constantinople in ...

It was the general opinion that the presence of ... ...would be more needed at Smyrna, than at any other ... in the Mediterranean.

The departure of John A. Audubon, esq. the celebrated naturalist, on an expedition to Labrador by Boston, Maine, Newfoundland, &c. has been announced. He had already, with indefatigable zeal, visited every state and territory of our immense country, in pursuit of his favorite objects of science. He now goes to complete to his present plan of inquiry and toil in those more Northern regions where alone some of our birds develope their peculiar characteristics.—We wish him a degree of success and prolongation of vigor equal to his great merits; indeed, for the past at least, success is fully assured. His work on Ornithology is a lasting monument of genius and zeal, of which Cuvier, the first of natural philosophers, did not say too much when he declared that it "surpasses all others in magnificence."

Evidence was recently afforded in Boston and New York that Americans are not insensible to the value and splendor of Mr. Audubon's labors—the more to be encouraged as they are those of a native countryman. Adequate patronage will not be wanting, we presume, when they shall be more widely known. The ornithologist has been absorbed by his science and the perfection of his drawings, in such wise that he could not look after subscribers to his work; yet between fifty and sixty subscribers have been obtained in the United States; in Boston 18; New York 11; Philadelphia 4; Baltimore 3; Savannah 7; Louisville 2; New Orleans 3; the Legislatures of Massachusetts, Maryland, N. York, South Carolina, and the congress library, each a copy.

We hope and anticipate that similar liberality and patriotism will be shown by every legislature in the Union, and by all our learned societies. The Academy of Natural Science, of Philadelphia, and the American Philosophical Society, have set the good example to kindred institutions. A contribution to Mr. Audubon, equal at least to that of Boston or New York, would seem due from Philadelphia. The subscription price may be considered as large, but how rich, ornamental, instructive, and entertaining is the work; and how much preferable to the merely personal gewgaws or transitory gratifications, upon which greater sums are so frequently expended! There are few minds of any refinement or elevation, to which an act that rewards genius and diffuses science, would not yield higher and more durable pleasure than ordinary luxury.

We learn that Mr Audubon will return to the United States next autumn, and make a short sojourn before his embarkation for Europe. Either in nine years, it is supposed, will yet be necessary for the consummation of his grand design. His constitution appears to be still vigorous; his zeal is unabated; his powers of observation and graphic delineation have suffered no decay; we may, therefore, expect that he will realize all his own laudable hopes and projects; and in so doing, confer new obligations on the votaries of natural history, and reflect additional honor on this country.—Phil. New Gazette.

In Boston, Mr. Charles Kemble is picking up an article he likes "passing well—we mean the dollars. He tried first a small card, namely, himself, but the Bostonians were not to be humbugged, so he led out the trump card of the ...—the fascinating Fanny Kemble. This made a general sweep—all Boston is mad—Mr. Webster has forgot politics—Mr Everett has returned to poetry and sentiment—the fashionables are giving Miss Fanny parties by the half ...—the city is turned upside down—the whole country, for miles round, is crazy—and the pretty witches of Salem are kicking their horses and breaking their broomsticks in striving to Boston to see the young lady. She is eulogised by the critics—praised by the ladies—admired by the gentlemen, and the very boys run round the streets selling her ... at a shilling apiece and make money by it much faster than ever they did with the head of Henry Clay.

New Bedford Gazette.

THE LATE JOHN O'KEEFE, Esq.

From the Hampshire Advertiser.

Died, last Monday evening, at his residence, Bedford Cottage, near Southampton, John O'Keefe, the dramatic author. In October, 1826, Mr. O'Keefe published the "Recollections of his Life," in two volumes, which auto-biographical work closes with these words—"Thanks be to God. God bless the king, and may he live long and happy." It pleased the almighty, however, that the grateful author should survive his benevolent sovereign, whose unexpected death gave him heartfelt sorrow, having seen him an infant in his royal mother's arms—and now, both the powerful monarch and the humble subject are no more!—From that period of Mr. O'Keefe's life there is little to add. In the autumn of 1829, his health appeared declining; and ever having had a strong predilection for Devonshire, he removed ... ward for the purpose of reaching by easy stages Sidmouth, or the neighborhood of Exeter, but on arriving at Southampton it became apparent that a journey of 30 miles was a sufficient trial of his strength: here he took up his abode, and remained until the day of his death, living in peaceful and happy seclusion. Many who have seen him in his walks may have expressed surprise that carriage exercise was not preferred, but on the attempt being made, it was found to fatigue and injure him; the former on the contrary (by being freed of the presence of a third person, and the difficulties of getting in and out of any vehicle,) gratified and refreshed him; with a companion to rest upon as long as he pleased, and sometimes an animated conversation between his person and the sun, he enjoyed at once the change of air, alternate repose and exertion, the songs of the wild birds, and much other amusement. When the weather did not permit long walks, he enjoyed his strip of gravel in the garden behind his cottage, with an arm chair placed at the upper end under a bower shaded from the sun by climbing plants; he here amused himself by the song of the robin, that of his own canaries, ... by reading the daily news papers, magazines, and other publications, and during the last thirteen years the whole of sir Walter Scott's novels read to him, with the exception of four or five of the latter. The character of Dalgetty, in "The Legend of Montrose," he was particularly struck with, as well drawn, where when confined by the disguised marquis of Argyle, Dalgetty starts forward and arrests him in the name of king James. He also started from his seat, and walking about with strong emotion, exclaimed:—"A master stroke! capital; there the master mind came out!" On the mention of his own Cousship, in The Agreeable Surprise, which occurs twice in the "Tales of the Landlord," he smiled silently, and was gratified; but when mention of his name in "St. Ronan's Well" he looked exceedingly black and displeased—the words are—"Tom Shakespeare of Drury Lane!"—"Ha," he said, "the top and the bottom of the ladder, he might have shoved me a few sticks higher." The reader remarked him of a similar remark of Mr. Steele's in the "Guardian," where the expression occurs of "from Homer to Dryden," in which the latter poet was certainly not meant to be depreciated; it availed nothing, the first impression had been made with black wax, and could not be concealed by veil.

He, however, as usual, soon regained his cheerfulness, saying—"Sir Walter ought to have remembered (if he saw them) my lines written in the "battle of Barrosa," (in the Morning Herald,) he had not written a Waverly at that time; he had reached the top-round of excellency in poetry and novel writing; but never like Stratford Willy and I, as we have been so often classed together—never has sir Walter stood the ordeal of box, pit and gallery—never, as I have, standing unknown in the side boxes, heard the exclamation, amidst the din of shouts and uproar, of "Huzza George in his glory! Edwin and Cooke"—(this occurred in the year 1782) but go on;" and with deep interest he listened to "St. Ronan's Well." His remark was—"Upon critical things relief—there is too much Indian ink dashed in, it requires a cheerful happy young female character—that would have set off the other parts. The same observation he made on the "Pirate," which however, he pronounced admirable; but the "Abbot" and "Red Gauntlet" were his favorites. "The Monastery" was condemned without mercy, and "Ivanhoe" considered the prime rose of the Caledonian nosegay.

Commercial.

LIVERPOOL, April 3.

The arrivals have been heavy this week, and though there is not much doing, prices of all descriptions remain firm, holders offering what they have freely at the existing prices.

NEW YORK MARKET, May 14, 1 P. M.

Western flour is still higher to-day—common brands are firm at $6¼, Southern, on the counter, is hardly as well as it was, the particular demand which existed on Saturday having been supplied. Richmond country is held at $5 50. The bakers buy Howard street for use at $6.—No change in grain.—In the Cotton market there has been considerable business, generally on the terms of holders. In Coffee there is less movement this week: Seal Skins sold high to day by auction; large Wigs brought the extraordinary price of $114. The Tea sale (Howard's cargo,) is going on well at about previous rates: Most of the Skin Teas were not advertised. Exchange on England is getting a little better—Journ. Com.
